- Breed specific legislation is something I DO NOT support (I (or my friends or family) do not have any pit bull breed dogs)
- First, this screams of BSL, which has its roots in racism. Second, if people can't afford their pets, the pets will be abandoned. Let's educate people about being good responsible owners
- Harsher penalties for those who mistreat animals and bans for those who do not provide adequate care for animals. A city registry of owners who have been found to mistreat animals
- What in the actual [removed] is wrong with this city
- None
- THERE SHOULD NOT BE ANY BREED SPECIFIC LEGISLATION.
- Mandatory Subsidized handling training for owners of nuisance dogs

- Problem is not a breed! People who own dogs are the problem. Stiffer penalties for irresponsible dog owners would help, up to prohibiting dog ownership of any breed. German Shepard or Rotties can be equally dangerous.
- Obedience training for all dogs reported for any incidents related to harm of other people, pets or property. AND assement of ownership and care of the pets under review. THE PROBLEM IS NOT THE DOG OR BREED, THE PROBLEM IS THE OWNER. A DOG SHOULD NOT BE MISTREATED, EUTHANIZED OR NEGLECTED FOR LACK OF OWNERSHIP. THE OWNER IS 100% RESPONSIBLE FOR THE PET AND THERFORE NEEDS TO TAKE ACTION TO PREVENT INCIDENTS. THE MORE THE CITY AND OTHER INSITUTIONS PLACE BLAME ON BREEDS AND TYPES OF DOGS THE MORE THESE BREEDS ARE HARMED AND THE STIGMA IS ENFORCED. PET OWNERSHIP NEEDS TO BE TAKEN SERIOUSLY AND MORE NEEDS TO BE DONE TO PREVENT OR RESTRICT OWNERSHIP WHEN THE OWNER HAS NO PLANS OR MEANS TO CARE FOR ANIMALS. APPLICATIONS OF ALL TYPES OF PETS SHOULD BE INPLEMENTED SO OWNERS ARE AWARE OF THE NEEDS OF EACH PET. PREVENTION OVER INTERVENTION
- Pit bulls are NOT to be singled out. My AmStaff was attacked by an English Bulldog; he didn't even defend himself! He ended up with stitches in 3 bites and a hole in his head, but he never bit back. He has been trained by a responsible pet owner and is more docile than most small dogs! Singling out Pitbulls is a ridiculous step backwards! Single out nuisance dogs who have bitten and injured others. Not by breed, but by behaviour.
- BSL does not work!!! Please don't go backwards. bsl unfairly targets pet responsible pet owners.. The current bylaw needs to be enforced more, its not pitbulls that are the problem, its the [removed] owners.
- If one breed is required to do so All breed MUST be required to do so as well. Your basically being a racist towards pit bulls.
- No mandatory muzzles for pitbulls or any other dog bread. It is the OWNERS responsibility to properly train and care for their pet. If the owner decides to muzzle their dog that's their business. The city, state, government cannot mandate which breeds are deemed a nuisance.
- Chihuahuas should be addressed as nuisance dogs: I have been bitten multiple times as well as both of my dogs. Friends and family have also been bitten on the street and at dog parks. There should also be higher fines for off leash dogs that are in an area that is not off leash.
- Do not target a specific breed. Any large dog has strength. Limit to actual nusiance dogs.
- All dogs require training including small breeds. Pit bulls are not more dangerous
- There are no bad dogs, only bad owners. Shame on your for intending to bully a dog breed.
- Dogs declared a "nuisance" for behaviour such as noise or roaming at large should not be punished. There behaviours are preventable by the OWNER. As such, the owner should be "punished". Keeping "nuisance dogs" and "pit bull type" dogs restricted from exercise (e.g., off leash parks) will cause a larger problem within those specific animals due to lack of exercise. Furthermore, I DO NOT support bread specific bans or laws. We should be looking towards fining humans who do not care for or train animals, no matter the breed.

- Provide actions and consequences for the dog owners not the dogs. NO pitbull specific policies as these are discriminatory and not evidence based. Make the consequences of any incidents mandatory training as this is the only positive and productive intervention that can happen. Seizing a dog or limiting it to inside a household will only increase anxiety and cause more issues, therefore being counterproductive. Disallow weight limitations for condo buildings, it is always the small dogs that bark and are a nuisance not the large ones.
- I would obly recommend if the dog is known for aggression to be muzzled away from home just because its a bully breed does not mean its aggressive i do not own a bully but it all comes down to training working g in the pet field ive seen way worst behaved dogs i the shop some of the best behaved and friendliest dogs I've me over the past 20 years have been "pit bulls"
- None of the above how about better pet ownership responsibility and direction..... any dog can be violent not just this breed and I of MANY and not one has ever had an issue and all have responsible owners and are over 10 years old so these suggestions are Ludacris
- I'm a veterinarian. We don't need to ban Pitt bulls, we need to increase education and training for people. Make stronger legislation for dog breeding, require training with fear free science based training. No dominance or fear based training. Legislate dog trainers, legislate breeders. Humans are responsible for the mental welfare of their animals.
- None
- It is wrong to single out 'pit bull' breeds
- LEAVE THE DOGS ALONE FFS!
- I do not recommend or prefer any of the above options!! While I do not own any block headed or pitbull type dogs, I am 100% against any addition pertaining to Breed Specific Legislation.
- Training required for OWNERS of pit bull type dogs. The dogs are fine. It's the owners.
- Why don't we have obedience training required for all dogs and dog owners
- Owners need to be liable not dogs. Dogs act the way they do because of their owners not breed.
- it is the owner, not the dog who requires training in obedience, following rules and responsibility. Any breed of dog can be a nuisance, train the owner, fine the owner and your problems with dogs will almost disappear. do not allow your children to charge the dog any dog). Stop fear mongering, dogs are not the problem people are. what ? since your at home with nothing to do but look for problems that you can complain about, get out and get a job. Use your brains for more than whining about a problem that does not exist!
- I have been bitten by poodles with owners who are irresponsible.. I have never had an issue with a pitbull or rottie. OWNERS are the problems not the dogs. I think manadatory training should be required for pet owners period. Little dogs are the biggest aggressors in my opinion and the people who own them and don't train them should be fined when they bite.
- German Sheppard's more dangerous
- None of the above. These options only address the wrong end of the leash. Judge the dog, not the breed
- [removed] I have been bitten 3 times in my life. Guess what! All 3 times, was from a small, pocket sized dog.[removed] Disgusting. All of you.

- No increase in fines. Leave specific breeds out of this.
- All dogs are equal. It's bad owners that create these behaviour in dogs. Treat all dogs equal in fines and lables
- Owners must be strong enough/large enough to hold their dog back if it tries to pull the leash, my dog was attacked on leash because the woman walking her dog wasn't strong enough and the dog pulled her to the ground to charge after my dog
- More regulation needs to be in place for dog owners as a whole. Not for a specific breed . Any behavioural problems start with the owner. If there are so many issues with pit bulls then I suggest more regulation on WHO can own them. Do not Punish everyone for select peoples mistakes and bad behaviour.
- I would like all of these dogs banned from the city of calgary
- Don't target pitbulls. why are you targeting Pitbulls?? Laws should be case by case. Don't discriminate against a breed for no reason. I
- I do NOT believe we have the right to target Pitbulls. These animals are not born vicious they are trained to be. We should instead be clamping down on the owners. Refuse them the right to an animal in future
- Pit bulls are nice dogs. It's the breeder, like any dog.
- Nuisance requires a very clear definition, which should only include biting and only when not provoked by the behaviour of another animal or human
- Any medium to large dog has the capability to cause harm. Yes the "pitbull" has a more strong physique, although any dog is a product of their human counter part. I think the human should be responsible, know their dog and actually be fined if their dog is deemed a nuisance.
- None of the above
- I don't think this should be breed specific, should be any dog that bites or considered a nuisance
- All people over 6' have to wear handcuffs in public because they are bigger and could cause more damage than average size people
- None of the above
- Any dog that is aggressive should be facing these consequences such as having to go to training. NOT just because they are pitbulls.
- Make breeding pit bulls illegal. Mainly the people who get them do NOT KNOW HOW TO TRAIN THEM. They end up in the shelters and causing problems. It's not the dogs, it's the people who breed them for the cash and hand them off to anybody. Or put stricter rules on adopting/buying one.
- We need better training programs. The fault is in the owner and lack of training, not the animal.
- Owner assessment and training prior to owning a dog (any breed) to reduce negative impact/influence on the dog.
- This is ridiculous, pit bulls are not more dangerous than any other large breed. If you are going to muzzle them, there are other breeds with stronger bites than pit bulls and the Whole concept of this is absolutely RIDICULOUS
- Actual consequences for crappy owners. Require all people adopting or purchasing a dog to go through ownership standards testing, if necessary do a home visit. Anyone can buy any dog and treat it like garbage and that is how “nuisance” dogs even occur. No dog is inherently bad, owners make them that way.

- I strongly object to the singling out of Pit Bulls. Simply designating dangerous dogs not nuisance dogs as requiring a muzzle.
- Not all bully breeds are dangerous. It is all in how you train/raise them. They should not be categorized separately like this. ANY dog breed can be aggressive.
- Every specie of dog should have these laws not just pitbulls.
- None of these. This is awful and discriminatory to dogs. Congrats on being absolutely dense and not looking at science.
- Breed specific programs especially when targeting out bulls is discriminatory and if we were speaking about humans would definitely be racist.
- I have a Pitbull and she’s extremely well behaved and trained, I think they should stop being pursued the way they are and bad dog owners should have there dogs removed from them.
- I would support the city of calgary if they stopped trying to mess with every day people and their animals
- an all out ban on pit bulls - Their owners are just as bad as the breed is! As an emergency physician i have seen multiple attacks by pit bulls. I have never seen one from a golden retriever or lab by comparison.
- Dogs that have a history of aggressive behaviour should face higher fines. The bylaws should not be focused on pit bulls who aren’t known for biting but are “stronger” there are much larger breeds with much more strength.
- Breed does not determine temperament. Dogs should not be punished because of irresponsible owners.
- I do not support breed specific laws/bylaws, owners of any nuisance dogs (even the little dogs!) should be educated on and go through mandatory training with their dog. Pitbull owners are usually one of the most responsible dog owners I have met.
- It isn’t the dog it’s the owner! Give the owner obedience and training and Spey and neutering!
- ANYTHING other than breed-specific bylaws.
- No dog should be permitted off leash. Higher fines for dogs offleash in areas where it is not legal. Mandatory canine behavioural courses in order for an person to obtain a dog (which must then be microchipped, spayed/neutered and the owner registered) as they do in other countries. Have different Class levels for different breeds, in the same way as driver's licenses, where more "dangerous" breeds require a higher class (just like a person needs a higher class of license to drive semi-trucks). Also ALL dogs should be required to complete obedience. Offleash parks should have an admittance test which requires the owner to demonstrate a recall with the dog at a distance of 500 meters or more and we examined with dog aggression. A small fee for these tests would be used to offset the cost of hiring a dog behaviorist for this. The person would then get an access card that allows them to enter offleash parks in the province. Make the fee low tho and yearly, so that people are less likely to try taking their dog offleash in other, illegal places. Hold the HUMAN responsible NOT the breed.

- Leave pit bulls alone, are you kidding me with this ridiculous bylaw. Treat all breeds equal and start looking at the owners and the animals living arrangements!
- Higher fines for nuisance dogs at large. Also fines for dogs who are brought to vet clinics and then picked up by the city (right now if they come to the city/humane society as a stray brought to a vet clinic, the owner is not fined, which means that there are lots of repeat offender stray dogs whose owners face no fines for picking up their pets, so have no incentive to correct this)
- I strongly disagree with any form of breed specific legislation as it is not backed up by science or anecdotal evidence and is just fear mongering
- Leave pitbulls out of this. All dogs have the ability to be aggressive especially small breeds- I have been bitten by small dogs
- I only agree with the above checked if the word "NUISANCE" is changed to "Dangerous".
- Dogs that are a bite risk (severe or not) required to be muzzled in public and banned from off leash parks. Not lumping together bites with barking and being at large, which are largely based on owner behavior and not indicative of risk. Likewise not based on breed which is not a risk factor in any published study.
- Should not be limited to pit bulls. ANY dog exhibiting aggressive behaviour, or capable of killing or maiming a small child needs to be on leash and muzzled in any public location. If more than one dog is being walked, all dogs must be on leash (for control). $10,000 fine for owners who fail to properly control their large dogs in public.
- The problem is not the dog, not the breed, the problem is always the human. Poor breeding/training results in poor temperaments. Targeting a breed/breed type is ridiculous. Discriminating how an "incident" involving a dog is handled based on its breed is exactly that: discrimination. The same rules should apply to all breeds. The level of enforcement should be based on the offense not the breed. Does it make sense to euthanize a pit bull that bit a human, yet let the border collie -that ALSO bit a human- go unscathed?
- mandatory obedience training when ANY dog is purchased or adopted. That way all dogs are trained and will be well behaved which will decrease or possibly eliminate incidents.
- Owners are responsible for all dog behaviour. Owners to pay for animal behaviour assessment by Humane Society animal behaviourists and an assembly of their own skills as a dog owner
- I would not support any of this
- The [removed] is the worst person and should [be fired immediately]. [removed] and leave people alone. Less restrictions on people create more positive people.
- Do not allow discrimination and punishment for innocent dogs. Breed specific legislation and bylaws are wrong. Pitbulls are gentle family members. The hate and discrimination has to stop.
- Dogs of any kind are subject to nuisance bylaws. If and when a dog exhibits dangerous behaviours that are confirmed, then they are subject to the increased restrictions above. There is no relation between nuisance animals and breeds
- There is zero need to single out pit bulls, nuisance dogs should be singled out not a certain breed
- Clarify that bullmastiff, cane corso, danes, etc are not pit bull type dogs. No restrictions on responsible ownership.

- The City's job is not to decide which breed is 'good' it is to protect the public. A bad dog/cat/child/person has legislation to deal with it. Do not be racist/breedist. A jerk is a jerk.
- Pit bulls are not dangerous, in any breed. This is a useless law that will protect no one, maybe try banning chihuahuas, as they actually are a naturally aggressive breed.
- How about instead of going after the bully breed you go after the owner. If the pitbull is a problem likely it's due to the owner not being responsible. I have owned two Pitbulls and made sure they were obedience trained. And actually the training was more for me than the dog. I am a responsible dog owner and it's not fair to my dog who is socialized and trained to Be grouped in with irresponsible owners.
- Don't pick on pit bulls them selves. But owners need to be educated.
- You cannot base pitbulls on appearance. Any square faced dog can look like a bully breed. Purebred labradors can appear as pitbulls to different people. 'Pitbull' being classified as a face shape or appearance is unlawful and unethical.
- specifying pit bulls are dangerous is deeply offensive and doesn't point to the real problem, ensuring owners provide proper care to dogs
- There should be no breed specific legislation. It should all apply to all breeds of dogs. BSL is ignorant and shows Calgary does not do their research before creating bylaws.
- You should not have pit bull and nuisance dog in the same statement as they are not the same. You are making a mistake by discriminating a against one particular breed or type of dog. You do not define dangerous behaviour. I hope you are not suggesting dangerous behaviour is the same as nuisance behaviour.
- It's the owners who train the dogs who should be fined, don't hurt the dog if the owner is terrible at training.
- Pit bulls aren't the problem, it's the owners of any dog breed
- Obedience training required for new dog owners that includes information about dog behaviour
- Leave them alone!
- I believe charge the owner of the animal, it's not the dogs fault when they are trained incorrectly or abused to the point where they have to defend them selves. We should focus on charging the human owner not treat the dog as a criminal when it's the human training them to be that way.
- The idea that there needs to be fines based on breed, whether they have been in any violent altercation with other animals is completely ridiculous. Breed has nothing to do with a dogs temperament, it is solely the owner having a lack of control, which should be then fined. I would that no one would support this idea of breed discrimination because I'm disappointed that this was even included in an official survey.
- Penalize irresponsible owners, not the dogs themselves!!!
- Not having breed specific by laws and focusing on the behavior not the breed. As a staffy owner aka the "nanny dog" I am so ashamed to be seeing these suggestions in a city I was born and raised in.
- Higher fines for owners who fail to properly train and manage their animals. This is not a breed issue. This is an lack of responsibility on the owners part.

- All of this is wrong. Stop perpetuating the breed as a problem when the owner. None of this is needed.
- I don't agree with any of the above measures. First of all, it lacks scientific basis to assume pit bulls are more aggressive. I have seen more aggressive Chihuahua than any other larger breed. Secondly, the definition of nuisance is very subjective. I don't think it's fair to penalize the dog and the owner based on such a subjective opinion.
- No breed specific laws!!!
- I support absolutely NONE OF THE ABOVE
- Small dogs of many breeds cause more problems than I have personally had with any pit bull or large dog. German Shepherds can be if not more aggressive than pit bulls yet they're not accounted in this list. The very fact that pit bulls and nuisance dogs are lumped in the same category is an absolute shame. Fully support the actions against nuisance dogs, not a complete BREED of dog.
- None. Breed specific legislation has no place in Calgary or anywhere in Alberta.
- None!! Breed specific specifications are outdated and problematic.
- Dog breed specific legislation is archaic and doesn't solve the issue. Encouraging spay and neuter is much more effective in curbing aggression in all breeds. I would have an option to lower fines and even cheaper licences for spay/neutered dogs.
<https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC2387261/>
- No breed restrictions. Be adult and treat all breeds the same.. if they violate the municipal code bite, aggression etc. then have a code that allows enforcement.nuisance etc
- Licensing of an animal should come with a course. Exercise could solve many issues, but people don't take pet ownership seriously enough
- Placing restrictions on animal rights will do nothing to solve the problem. Instead, I propose not allowing people who own dogs for the purpose of fighting, training to be aggressive, etc. To not be allowed to own animals
- At most make them wear muzzles. They are a perfectly beautiful friendly breed. Stop feeding the bad narrative. German shepherds hurt more kids than any other breed. If you wanna ban pitbull looking dogs, ban every shepherd dog. This is unjust.
- Training should be a requirement of dog ownership. A minimum level of training should be required prior to registering an animal. In addition, breed specific legislation is not acceptable. More stringent legislation to ensure responsible pet ownership and animal welfare is the correct course.
- Owner education on responsible dog ownership. There's no such thing as a bad dog. It comes down to the humans that train the dogs.
- Question for the city of Calgary, some varieties of the Labrador Breed have square heads and look similar to pit bulls, is it your intention to deem a Service Dog a Dangerous Dog? Because that is what your uneducated suggestions are implying? Would the shortsightedness of some people really open the City of Calgary to a class action lawsuit launched by owners of Service Dogs?
- I think there should be obedience training for ALL owners, but if it can only be done for nuisance dogs I think there should be the opportunity to review the behaviour of the dog and it's owner after participating in an obedience class. If dogs are dangerous it is because the owner does not know how to control/manage them, and perhaps that owner should not be owning a dog.

- The pet owner should be fined and if multiple occurrences happen mandatory obedience training should be forced upon the owner. This applies to all types of dogs. Aggressive/mean behavior is taught and not specific to one breed.
- Ensure that the obedience training is NOT AVERSIVE. No trainers who use choke, prong or shock collars
- PLEASE DONT INTRODUCE BSL LEGISLATION. YOU PUNISH "GOOD" OWNERS WHILE "BAD" OWNERS CONTINUE TO PRODUCE NUISANCE DOGS. BSL is lazy legislating!! Address the real problem- bad owners!!
- A nuisance dog should be any breed and the rules should apply fairly to any dog that is a nuisance. Pit bulls shouldn't be targeted unless a specific dog/pit bull has been deemed a nuisance based on past behaviours of that dog
- I believe this to be breed specific criticism and do not condone any form of punishment for a pit bull because it is a pit bull. However, a dog, any dog, that is prone to aggression and has in the past been written up by peace officer or other agency, should have higher fines on the next infringement
- There cannot be more than one nuisance dog in a household; an owner of a nuisance dog who does not comply with bylaws or court orders cannot possess more animals
- There shouldn't be breed specific fines. Any owner of an animal that is a nuisance should be held responsible for their dogs action. Nuisance shouldn't include vocal dogs within reason, and if an owner does allow their dog to be vocal for an extended period of time or passed the standard noise violation bylaws should be held accountable, but I do not believe the animal should be classified as a nuisance, instead the owner should be fined for neglect.
- Breed specific legislation is discriminatory and predatory on the anatomy of a dog, not their personality. There is lots of evidence that pitbull-type dogs do not produce more bites, and there is false information regarding how powerful their bite is compared to other, especially larger, dogs. Breed specific legislation is a terrible idea and needs to be reconsidered.
- The problem is NOT the dog. The problem is the owners. You need to be training the individuals buying dogs, adopting dogs from shelters, and breeding dogs. People are the problem!! Not the dogs! You can have a small Yorkie that can be just as vicious as a "pit bull" "bully breeds" . Require training for the PEOPLE before they buy/adopt a dog. It's that simple.
- You cannot make a bylaw based on the breed of a dog. All dog breeds can be aggressive and cause significant injury. Husky's for instance have strong pack mentality and can be aggressive in groups.
- This should not be breed specific, an entire breed should not be targeted, especially if they just appear to look like that breed
- Repeat offenders need to be jailed and restricted from having a dog again for however many years.
- There should NOT be breed specific bylaws. Insurance and muzzle for a nuisance dog in public doesnt make sense... when you've defined a nuisance dog to include noise. Just because they bark, doesnt mean they're violent. If muzzles are required, city needs to do their part in educating owners, as there are different types of muzzles for different uses.

- Obedience training required for all dogs and dog breeds.
- Have responsible owners of pets. Bad dogs come from bad humans
- Breed specific bylaws are wholly inappropriate and should not be considered by the city.
- This is stupid. It's not just "pitbulls"
- Terms for nuisance need clearer definition. There is a big difference between a dog that barks when left alone or strangers passing by than a dog that has severely bit/ attacked someone or another animal.
- These options are ridiculous. Yes precautions should be taken if a dog of any breed is aggressive or a nuisance however not all pit bulls are aggressive or a nuisance so to separate doesn't make sense.
- No bylaws or regulations for specific breeds. Im extremely disappointed that my home city is even considering idiotic measures like some of the ones listed above.
- People should be required to train their dogs not to bite, no matter the breed
- How dare you select out a breed like that. The OWNER of the dog makes the dog. The BREED does not. Thos pretty much sounds like somebody saying, "all races BUT white can live here". Pit bulls and the other "nuisance" breed you listed here are less likely to harm or kill anyone. I have one of these "breeds" and to be honest she is scared of the toaster. She will love you to death before she would harm. Unless slapping you in the face with its paw because of being excited to greet me home". This is disgusting and makes me ashamed to be albertan.
- Measure should only be taken or rules set for dogs who are declared a nuisance or show aggressive behaviour. No measure should ever be breed specific
- You need to clarify "nuisance" and "dangerous" behaviour. I'm not sure why non-residents and non-tax payers are able to voice opinions. PLEASE DON'T MAKE THE SAME MISTAKE AS ONTARIO POLITICIANS IN THEIR IGNORANCE. They are now back-peddling.
- The people are the problem not the dogs. Mandatory obedience training for ALL dog owners
- Treat them like normal dogs. It is not the dogs fault but the owners
- None!!! This is disgusting. It is about terrible owners not the dog.
- The owners of the dogs are the concern, not the breed of the dog. My dog and I frequent city pathways and dog parks. Any nuisance dog we have encountered has NOT been a pit bull (as defined by this survey). Any pit bull we have encountered has been gentle, calm, and very well behaved. My dog is a French Bull Dog mix. He can become a nuisance very easily when tired, overwhelmed, or stressed. I learned how to notice the signs and how to address them from obedience classes. Owners who do not know their dog, who put their dog in situations of stress, and who do not know how to control their dog are at fault, regardless of the dog's breed. Please do not punish the dog for the inadequacies of the human.
- In my opinion, singling out pitbulls is a naive approach to city dog bylaws. I do not support any laws or bylaws specifically targeting pitbull or pitbull looking breeds.
- Absolutely against any restrictions based on breed or breed type. Responsibility for well behaved dogs in public places and dog parks especially should be shared, a small dog may not be able to cause as much damage as a large dog but are not held to the same behaviour expectations and therefore cause or escalate confrontations with other dogs

- I think you discrimination against pit bulls is disgusting. If a dog has behavioural issues then the owner should be retrained
- Please quit blaming the dog!!! Make it one offence and the HUMAN can never own another dog! This is outrageous! It is always the owner.
- It is not pitbulls. Defining a dogs temperament by its breed is like defining a human on it skin colour. It is how they are raised, it is not the dogs fault but the owners.
- I believe that you are singling out a specific breed for no just cause! Not okay with any of the above as I have bully breeds. Very unfair and unjust!!
- Making specific rules just for pitbulls is extremely ignorant and unwarranted, any dog that attacks may have specific limitations but you are a part of the problem if you are giving innocent dogs specific by laws.
- PIT BULLS ARE NOT "STRONGER" THEN OTHER LARGE SIZED BREEDS JUST BECAUSE THEY ARE "PIT BULLS" THE FACT YOU WANT TO DISCRIMINATE AGAINST A SPECIFIC BREED IS BS, ITS DISGUSTING! ONLY ONE PIT BULL PER HOUSE? NO! IF A PERSON CANNOT HANDLE AND CARE FOR MORE THAN ONE PITBULL, THEY SHOULD NOT HAVE MORE THAN ONE DOG OF ANY BREED. THIS IS ABSOLUTELY ABSURD TO SINGLE OUT ANY BREED! SOME BAD PEOPLE GET PIT BULLS BECAUSE THEY CAN MAKE THEM "LOOK MEAN" MAYBE REQUIRE BETTER BACKGROUND CHECKS WHEN GETTING A DOG, BETTER RULES WHEN IT COMES TO BREEDING ANY ANIMAL, BUT PIT BULLS ARE NOT THE [removed] PROBLEM.
- Don't enact breed specific bans. Punish people who don't train their pets well and hurt people or other pets, not dogs for being alive.
- I don't think this should be just for pit bulls. Pit bulls are not bad unless they've been raised by bad owners.
- No change. This is filled with assumptions and a pit bull or block head dog is no different from any others scientifically. The issue lays in the way they are raised.
- BREED SPECIFIC LAWS ARE NOT THE ANSWER! FINE THE OWNERS AND BAN PROBLEM OWNERS FROM HAVING PETS
- These are all absolutely ludicrous - STOP TARGETING PITBULLS
- Fine the bad owners. BSL not the answer
- Please don't discriminate against "bully breeds" just because of a POTENTIAL to cause a more severe bite. That's nonsense! Statistically, small dogs bite more. Is that okay because they're small? No. But no one's going to fine those owners, so why should pit-bull owners be singled out? How about fine the owner WHEN an incident happens.
- You cannot be breed specific about dogs being aggressive. Don't pick on the pit bulls. My labs have been bitten in an off leash park by chihuahua's twice. It's a good thing my dogs are well trained or the little dogs would have been dead with one bite!

- I would love to choose some of the other options but i dint believe they will be used fairly. A dog should be muzzled on the OWNERS CHOICE. If they know their dog is dog aggressive it is not their fault but they will put a muzzle on their dog if its needed. It is not fair for a well behaved dog to be muzzled. Muzzles are for saftey purposes but only if the dog is dog aggressive. This is a highly unfair and biased law. Discrimination against a breed of a dog is not ok. First it was dobermans then shepards now pitbulls. Why? That is completely unfair.
- increased fines and such for any dog that is a problem. If you can't keep you dog under control, you should be fined. Also maybe you shouldn't have one. But this signalling out of certain species is bullshit. I know people with pitbulls and/or these so called nuisance dogs and they are the nicest, friendliest dogs.
- Nuisance dog owners should be able to prove training and compliance to lift restrictions. The pit bull bans are poorly developed knee jerk that should not be in effect because of a dogs appearance.
- No different rules for pit bulls! It's not fair to penalize good dogs and their owners.
- Targeting these breeds is unnecessary. It's like being racist but with dogs.
- Ability to ban a person from further ownership if their dog is involved in dangerous behaviour (ie biting)
- As a certified trainer, former animal control officer and person certified in canine communication I do not support breed bans, or breed specific legislation. Penalties should be only for dogs with repeat offences. Many humans are detached from canine behavior, so many complaints are unjustified and in my personal experience a lot of 'bites' reported are often provoked by untrained smaller breeds, but blamed on pitbull type breeds. I'm unsure of why you are considering breed specific bans, however the information floating around that they are a more dangerous breed, or that they have a stronger bite is absolutely a myth. I specialized in fear and aggression throughout my career and I can assure you that dog behavior primarily relies on the consistency and education of the owners. If you are looking to reduce risk of bites there are two solutions, you could put laws in place that make dog training mandatory for ALL dog owners or you could do this only for dogs who have been deemed dangerous on an individual basis and require obedience training.
- Pitbull ban requested. "Incidents" occurring in parks seem to often involve pitbulls in my experience. The experience of surgeons is that pitbulls cause severe injuries.
- Nothing breed-specific. There's no evidence to support this.
- Education on responsible dog ownership that is not breed specific but behavior specific
- The second time a dog is involved in any incidence of agression, the owner has a mandatory court appearance to address the problem. Third time, euthanize. How will you prevent someone transferring ownership to attempt to hide a nuisance dog? Mandatory chip for all dogs. Nuisance should include a dog 'rushing' at passerbys even from inside the yard.
- Obedience training required for all dogs licensed in the City of Calgary
- This should be based on the incident and not overall breeds. It is about being a responsible owner, not the dogs fault, the fault of poor ownership.

- “Pit bulls” or any specific breed of dog should not be declared a nuisance. Only individual dogs on a case by case basis should be evaluated. Do not shame specific breeds based on misinformation and bad owners.
- I don't support breed-specific legislation. In addition, the definition of "a dog that has an appearance and physical characteristics that are substantially similar to those of dogs referred to in any of clauses" is overbroad and vague. Target irresponsible dog owners, not specific breeds.
- Pit bulls aren't the problem. Owners are. If the dog is a repeat offender it's obviously been treated poorly. I think singling out a breed is ridiculous. If ANY larger breed bites you with the intent to do damage, it's not going to make a difference whether it's a pit bull or not. Let's start being openly racist towards people too, while we're at it.
- Obedience training for all dogs, not just pit bulls
- The penalties and restrictions need to be on an individual dog/owner, not breed specific. Any dog can be a danger or a joy depending on their training and socialization.
- I don't feel a nuisance dog should have to be muzzled in public for being noisy or running away. If they have been involved in potentially harmful behaviour (e.g., serious nipping at a person, unprovoked aggression...), then it would make sense to require a muzzle for those dogs.
- The determination of nuisance must be case by case and not breed based also educating the public
- All dog owners should have basic obedience training.
- Nuisance dogs are nuisance dogs, please do not single out any certain breeds.
- Like many social issues these days, you are punishing the victim (the dog) when you do this. Every decade has had a dog to be afraid of (german shepards, doberman pinschers, pitbulls) please improve education for dog owners, and go after bad owners, not innocent dogs. If a dog cannot function in society it needs help (training, re-homing) not punitive measures
- I think that dogs should be looked at as a whole not just to one breed. It's still not pleasant nor funny when a chihuahua charges you either.
- Muzzling and required training for any dog non-specific to breeds that has a history of aggression to humans or other animals.
- Pitbulls should not be singled out. You run much higher chances of letting other problem dogs and cats slip under the radar if the focus is on one breed. It's important to educate and implicate bylaws for Owners who aren't properly caring for or training their animals to avoid accidents rather than just punishing the dogs after the incidents.
- No breed-specific legislature!!!
- Just fine nuisance dog owners ! You can't be breed specific that is ridiculous
- as your own question states "It is important to note that while pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents than other dog breeds, the reason they are listed here is because a pitbull's strength allows the potential for a more severe bite." This is not true and incorrect data. Check the statistics for dog bites from smaller breeds....
- Bully breeds are not the problem. It's always always always the owner who cannot handle the dog and some nuisance dogs are chihuahuas.

- Breed specific legislation?!? I believe the people writing this need to educate themselves on proper statistics. It was proven not to work in Toronto. Educating PET GUARDIANS is the answer. "Pit Bulls" (which is a derogatory term) are often mistreated. Statistically a dachshund is more likely to bite.
- do not ever use breed specific language. Punish the bad owners not the dogs. Pit Bulls are no more dangerous or a nuisance than any other breed but they do attract a specific type of owner who needs to be dealt with.
- The rationale for discriminating against "pit bulls" is insufficient. Any dog can be vicious and inflict significant damage. Bylaw should focus on behaviour, not breed.
- What makes a dog a "nuisance"? Also ANY dog can be dangerous. Not just a pit bull.
- pit balls should not be discriminated against
- Why are you singling out pit bulls? That's [removed] any dog can be aggressive.
- You are insane to include the last clause regarding any dog that has the appearance. This is highly subjective. My Newf has a square head and could suddenly be labeled for no good reason. Deal with bad owners !!
- Border Collies, they can bite you multiple times before you realize you have been bitten once
- I am against the specific targeting of pit bulls. You clearly stated that you know they are not involved in more bite cases and yet are still going forward with this. My dog has been attacked twice in a dog back and both times by a husky. Not a pit bull. Also, what do all these rules matter when bylaw is usually nowhere to be found nor do they ever respond in a timely manner.
- I refuse to answer as breeds shouldn't be brought into consideration. "bad" dogs come from bad owners, breed has nothing to do with this
- Train owners. Nothing an owned animal does is on the animal, it is on the owner. Stop euthanizing and punishing the dog. Start punishing the owner and find responsible owners to care for problem animals. DO NOT PUT THEM DOWN!
- have a registry for said breeds and monitor for any infractions on owner/family, but allow normal dog behaviors until such time harsher punishfor THAT SPECIFIC FAMILY
- Y'all are racist against pit bulls. Just sayin
- I disagree with the breed specific bylaw, it should be ANY ANIMAL, not specific. This should say Animal or any dog. Disagree with this entire section. problem dog behaviors are reflective of the owners. Also BSL doesn't work, it's more expensive and difficult to enforce, evidence-based alternatives exist and effective in places around the world.
- Dog owners should be punished not the dogs
- Do not punish a breed, punish the owner. No breed is bad or violent. It is learned and the onus is on the owner
- If someone else dog bites another dog/ another individual they should give their insurance to that individual, it's not the dogs fault it's the owners training which is at fault
- Breed bans are stupid. This whole thing reeks of nanny state.
- Irresponsible dog owners should have to be provided training on to handle their dog if proven to be a nuisance. It is not the breeds fault. It is irresponsible owners. And fines should be issued to ongoings who provoke dogs who's orders are clearly trying to train and do the right thing. Please stop breed bullying it's 2020. It's owners not breed of dog. Or even the dogs fault.

- we shouldn't be singling out pit bulls. all dogs should be created equal. there are many dog breeds that have strong bites.
- Please don't target pit bulls! Pit bulls can be extremely gentle dogs and caring owners/families shouldn't be punished for their responsibility in looking after this misjudged breed. There are already reduced adoption rates of pit bulls, and a targeted bylaw would create more unreasonable fear.
- "Nuisance dogs" is far too vague for me to check any of these boxes. I also firmly believe that pitbull breeds should not be treated any differently than other breeds.
- Ensure that anyone takin an animal to the vet for any reason, has a city license. If they do not, they get reported and fined. They cannot receive vet treatment without being a registered dog or cat. (Emergency services exception).
- Do not automatically assume that pit bulls and pit bull breeds are nuisances. Dogs who are involved in an incident should also not be considered nuisances, but the owners should definitely be fined and/or charged.
- Potential owners should be screened more carefully before they are able to adopt or take on a dog or any form of pets. There should also be checks on animal owners no different than if the family adopted a child or had a baby there should be checks on how they are cared fur./treated
- It is completely outrageous that the city is choosing to pinpoint one breed of dogs when it is the owners that are the issue. My dog has been attacked at the dog park twice this year NOT by a pitbull but by a husky type dog. Stop stereotyping dogs for no reason!!
- Take the pit bull bylaws out of this survey, it is absolutely ridiculous.
- BSL does not work! Stop classifying all pitbulls into a dangerous category based on how they look
- If you spend any time in dog parks you will know that the breed is not the issue it's the owner. Small dogs can be untrained and dangerous. It's the owner not the breed.
- You should not be discriminating against one specific breed and get to know the facts. A Doberman has a stronger bite then that of a pitbull. In order for a dog to learn how to be a model citizen it needs to be spcialized you take that away and you will be creating an even bigger problem for yourselves.
- Pitbulls need to be banned in Calgary. Obviously current owners would be allowed to keep their dogs in this scenario but no further breeding or adoptions of pitbulls should be permitted. Pitbulls are predominantly owned by two types of people : aggressive or naive individuals. The aggressive people own them for their intimidating manner and the naive population think they can save these dogs despite no provision of appropriate training or common sense. Pitbulls are unpredictable and can do way too much damage. Other provinces banned them a long time ago. It's time Alberta takes the risk serious and keep theses dogs out of the wrong hands.
- None of the above should apply
- This is ridoculous...i work with dogs and have for years and the fact that you guys are using the term "pit-bulls" as the only way to describe agression or bad behaviour is disapointing. Ive had WAY MORE bad encounters with small dogs (chihuahuas, westies, daschunds, yorkies ect) and yet none of these breeds were mentioned... just because a large dog can do more damage doesnt mean

EVERY large dog (bully breed) should have to be punished. Small dogs can cause serious problems and behavioural issues when they attack or demonstrate aggressive behaviours. Im so upset about the word usage the city has chosen.

- I strongly oppose breed specific legislation
- Any dog must be muzzled in public if involved a bite incident!
- I feel all dog owners should be educated on dog behavior and good dog ownership.
- Ban Pit bulls
- Punish the owner not the breed. Obedience training for all dogs. Assessment of the home and the dog should taken away found unsuitable.
- Measures put in place to reduce the frequency and severity of dog bites should NOT be breed specific. Rottweilers, German Shepherds, and Dobermans can also cause significant injuries, for example.
- The suggested approaches above show a lack of knowledge by the council proposing them.
- Pit bull type dogs are NOT more dangerous, I think that people that own dogs that have agression issues should be at fault and you deciding a certain breed is bad is just going to create more problems. I think that if a dog is deemed dangerous and the owner isn't being responsible the dog should be attempted to be rehomed before any action such as euthanization is involved. Breed bans do not solve agression.
- There needs to be education put in place for pitbulls if they are going to be singled out. Putting them down or restricting their life to confinement is not pleasant for anyone. There are misconceptions with the breed and there needs to be a valued effort to creating public awareness. Other breeds such as golden retrievers have attacked ppl at 13% while pitbulls remain at 8%. Please do not restrict or restrain or put "financial" measures in place for owners as that has no impact on the dog directly. In this day and age. "racism" against pitbulls needs to be changed.
- One dog breed should not be punished. As stated above "It is important to note that while pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents than other dog breeds" It is not fair to single out a dog breed or dogs that "look" like a certain breed.
- DO NOT, I repeat, DO NOT make any breed specific bylaws. A nuisance dog can be any breed and any nuisance dog who bites or is aggressive should be trained accordingly. We should not discriminate by breed and not ban specific breeds, EVER
- Do not diacriminate against a specific breed
- None that's what dog parks are for
- Ban "pit bulls." <https://www.aaha.org/publications/newstat/articles/2019-06/new-study-identifies-most-damaging-dog-bites-by-breed/>
- "I don't support breed bans because they don't work," said Bill Bruce, the former director of animal services for the city of Calgary, whose animal-control program is considered among the most effective in North America. "We have to get to the root of the problem, and that is that people must maintain control of their animals."
- Mandatory training for owners of nuicance dogs or review of pet ownership for nuicance pet owners

- The owners also must be evaluated as they are often the cause of the nuisance dog because of the way the animal is treated. Dogs don't just become a nuisance, it is a learned behaviour! Muzzling is not the answer, any type of dog can be a nuisance and shame on people for singling out the pit bulls! Any type of dog can bite and cause harm/ injury to someone.
- Children should be under the supervision of parents at all times in off-leash dog parks. No dog should be declared a nuisance without the city proving, by way of a behaviouralist consultation, that the dog poses any danger when not provoked. No mandates should be given based on the term "pit bull" nor the incorrect "definition" of "pit bull" given above.
- I highly agree with training dogs. Every owner should be. It is absolutely ridiculous to set apart pitbulls because they have the strength to make a severe bite. There are so many breeds that do. As well as a lot of bites from small breeds that are far more common than from pitbulls. Ignorance shouldn't be spread.
- This should not be held to a specific breed. Just as there are poorly behaved humans, there are poorly behaved dogs. Responsibility must be on owners and educating the public on the importance of quickly dealing with problem dogs and ensuring pets are licensed. Unfortunately all too often breeds are "profiled" and a well behaved dog gets caught up in that. It is bias and unfair. Too many in the public are not educated or aware of how to treat/train animals. Awareness and responsible ownership are what's needed, not targeting.
- Pitbulls should not suffer just because the owner isn't incapable of training a dog . Owners of pitbulls should be REQUIRED to attend special training to own a pitbull
- Do not label dog breeds
- Something that is proved to be effective and non discriminatory. Who will be declaring a dog a nuisance. THIS IS DISCRIMINATION!
- Leave "pit bulls" out of it!
- No breed discrimination
- Any owner of a nuisance dog should have to go through training on how to handle that dog. Really ALL dog owners should have to provide proof that they have gone through training for their dog regardless of the breed.
- This is an attack on a breed and all other "like" breed. No one should support this insane bylaw proposal.
- Pitbulls innocent until guilty like all other breeds
- it's not the dog's its the bad owners give them higher fines
- None of the options listed. They should NOT be singled out
- WHY are pitbulls being singled out? Training should be required for all dog owners. I am very disappointed in city council's approach to pitbulls. I thought Calgary city councilors were smarter than this.
- It is shameful to single out pitbulls or any other breed based on their "strength". Dogs are what their owners make them, so why go after the innocent animals that can't defend themselves. This is a new low for City of Calgary, and the city council will not get any support regarding this matter.

- Aiming so many of these questions at pit bulls because they have the potential to bite is not an excuse. Dogs that are cared for and trained are fine, you don't need a breed ban or these extreme measures. It's not the dog or the dog breed, it's the owners. Limiting owners that take good care of their pit bulls to only 1 of them will only lead to higher rates of the dogs being left in shelters because of the perpetuated stereotype that they're inherently dangerous (that this question does not help whatsoever). Be better. Think better. Look at Ontario and the pit bull breed ban - dog bites are on the rise and there haven't been any new pit bulls allowed for 15 years. It doesn't work, and it won't help get you a better by-law. Any dog owner found to be negligent, encouraging their dog to be violent, or training them to fight, etc. should be the target. The dog can be trained to behave well and should be given a second chance in a loving home.
- These are literally the worst ideas I have ever heard. Please do not go through with this. You're going to have so many people upset with you. We're already planning protests.
- There should be absolutely no additional regulations on pit-bull type dogs. The idea that pit-bulls are the problem is ridiculous, and you should do research before proposing this type of legislation. Pet owners should be held responsible for the actions of their pets equally regardless of breed. The argument that pit-bulls can do more damage is also absurd, the larger the dog the more damage they can do.
- Dogs are a product of their environment, breed does NOT determine aggressive behaviours! Deem children a nuisance and require them to not leave the property or require additional child insurance as children cause more damage than any dog.
- Should not single out one breed, I do not support the law against pitbulls and mixed breeds to have a law against them. Good looking out and watch half the city move
- Fine the owners. They are the problem not the breed.
- Owners must attend obedience training as part of adoption and fostering as ALL dogs follow owners or handlers direction. It is NOT the dog nor its breed. I am 100% against breed discrimination. I am also 100% for both Calgary's police, City of Calgary Authorities and shelters, pounds, etc. to have EVERY employee and volunteer to take dog classes as people in all positions come with their own luggage and bias and every dog suffers as a result of poor or non-existent personnel and authorities who may not even like dogs.
- Rules that are NOT breed specific. Pitbulls are often less naturally aggressive. Let's have responsible owners and training for people to understand. Bites are often provoked (not all the time, but often), the person provoking is let off while the dog is often rehomed or euthanized, how does instigator get off free? Obedience training for all breeds would be a good start.
- training for owners of dogs declared a nuisance
- The responsibility of issues with dogs should be on the owner NOT breed specific.
- There needs to be a limit of the number of Dogs allowed in one residence.
- Bully Breeds need to be included. Not just pit bulls. Any breed of dog can be aggressive.
- The fact that you single out "bull terriers" by name and nature is offensive and unwarranted. I may not be a personal fan of the breed, but I would never single out. Again, this is all about wording and actions. What you have listed here is antagonistic in nature. I am sure that you would never list a toy poodle, that constantly nips at people as a nuisance due to its size, but they can be just as dangerous. Choose your words VERY carefully and ensure that you elaborate on any details that will be called to task. Such as MOST of this list.

- I think this section of the bylaw is ridiculous. Many pit bull owners have well behaved dogs and you are punishing everyone for the issues with a few. I DO NOT SUPPORT ANY OF THESE CHANGES!
- Proper training for all owners of all breeds of dogs. I don't believe like you said in your question "while pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents than other dog breeds", there needs to be better training as owners who adopt and take care of animals. It's not the breeds fault. It is however the on the owners to train all breeds properly.
- Do not make breed specific legislation. All breeds of dogs can be dangerous. Please stop this "pit bull" term. And use dog only. You are creating a horrible influence/ culture for the public to fear PitBull/ block head dogs. You are doing a horrible thing. It's 2020, grow up. BSL has been proven not to be effective.
- Behaviour training for dogs (any breed!) found to be a 'nuisance'. This will help get the owners to take responsibility for their dogs actions...as it is not the dogs fault.
- You can't single out 'pit bull' breeds that would be like singling out people based on their colour because of stigmas that are associated with their colour and in this case their breed
- make PEOPLE take a course in proper handling of a dog. It's the owner, not the dog that's the problem.
- Singling out one breed (bsl) is discriminatory if you feel it's necessary to legislate obedience training it should be done for all dogs pit bulls and bully breeds are not unique to disobedience if you are mandating obedience training it needs to be done for all breeds regardless of size ferocity there are many dog owners that have dogs that do not listen and are a nuisance but fly under the radar because they are small or deemed a friendly breed
- Any other dog can bite responsible pit bull owners should not be punished
- "Nuisance" requires firm definition and not left to subjective judgement of a by-law officer. Owners of dogs declared a nuisance must attend dog-ownership/handling class.
- Owner education is key. Breed specific legislation is unnecessary.
- All bylaw should be non breed specific. I have sheltered two pit bulls that are now reactive due to bites from a miniature chow and a Pyrenees ...both were on leash at the time whereas the others were not. I believe that all dogs should be leashed at ALL TIMES unless they are in a designated off leash park.
- Breed specific legislation is not appropriate. A nuisance dog is a nuisance dog....require the owners to commit to training. Pit bulls are not the issue here.
- Breed specific legislation is ineffective.
- Your definition of nuisance is too broad. Barking or roaming should not have any bearing on muzzling in parks etc. If the dog has bitten before then yes. Pit bulls should not be singled out from other breeds.
- nothing breed specific. Regardless if a chihuahua bites or a shepherd bites, a nuisance dog is a nuisance dog. DO NOT pass this on to breeds, breed lookalikes just because of their title. ²

- These are all ridiculous and very biased towards pit bull type breeds. It's the owners that make dogs aggressive.
- No separate treatment based on dog breed
- Don't fine for animals that don't know better fine idiot owners for poor training. Dogs are not inherently bad based on breed. This is the same as profiling which is also unacceptable.
- The whole pitbull thing is [removed] RIDICULOUS. A DOG IS BAD BECAUSE OF OWNERS. NOT BECAUSE OF BREED.
- None of the above! They may have "the strength" as stated but you should be looking at dogs in general! Not singling out specific breeding
- None of the above!
- I would agree that nuisance dogs have higher requirements depending on the definition of nuisance. If a nuisance dog is defined by its breed then no, however if a dog is defined by past experiences then yes.
- Don't you [removed] dare single out one breed over another!!! A nuisance dog is just as likely to be a chihuahua as a "pit bull". Shame on you City of Calgary!!!
- It is horribly wrong for the City of Calgary to condone for breed specific targeting. We're better than this. You should put muzzles on Shitzus. They are extremely nervous and pose a threat.
- Please ban pitbulls! They are bred to attack and they are dangerous!
- Mandatory education for owners of dogs with severe biting offenses
- NOTHING - ALL DOGS ARE EQUAL - PUNISH BAD OWNERS
- Stop being [removed] about pitbull type breeds and do some [removed] research would be a [removed] suggestion you idiots. Ban small happy dogs. Ban labradors and retrievers. Ban chihuahuas. Ban dachshunds. Ban German Shepherds. Etc. Dogs that are ACTUALLY a problem. Which are not pitbulls. If you did any research. Like I suggested.
- Owners should be required to take some kind of course on training their dogs. There are no bad dogs only bad owners
- Calgary has put out a survey of proposed bylaws. They designate basically any breed that has a chunky head or a stalky build be deemed a 'pit bull', and goes on to list multiple bylaws that would penalize owners and pets alike if a dog falls under these physical descriptions. The discrimination and uneducated biases present in these proposals makes my blood boil with sadness, frustration and anger. Their attempted "we aren't making judgment because of how they look, definitely not propagating fear of a breed due to that breed being exploited, abused and subsequently misrepresented in the media in the past" asterisk basically translates to: 'were not saying pit bull type dogs are more likely to bite, we know they're not, they just have a strong jaw which would be damaging if they did bite, so that's why they should be discriminated against'. That's literally the same thing as, "theoretically someone with darker skin would be less easy to see in darkness, so they'd be better at robbing and participating in crime at night. Not that they would do that, it's just easier for them. So they should be required to wear head lamps and hi-vis at night, and be fined if they're out too late. Oh and they just straight up aren't allowed near any homes or businesses that could be robbed." Despicable. I have a pit bull. She is sweet, gentle, intelligent and caring. She is obsessed with meeting new people and dogs and loves for play time with every person, animal or toy. My wife and I also have a newborn, and I challenge anyone to see my posts of how our pit bull Minnow interacts with my daughter Primrose and tell me her breed is intrinsically aggressive. Any dog has the potential for damage, the potential for aggression. The important variable is love, attention, and training. Not the strength of their jaw. Maybe you still have your doubts about the breed, if so I really would love to chat and tell you more about my experience as an owner, or maybe offer insight into a negative experience you may have had with a bully breed; I love discussion, and before we even looked for a pit bull my wife and I did heaps of extensive research on the breed. I'd love to do my best to answer any questions you may have. Hopefully you agree with me, and hopefully you will help bring awareness to this ongoing issue. Please take this survey and share your thoughts with the City of Calgary. My heart is breaking for the pit owners in Calgary, I cannot fathom the sense of fear and anger they must be feeling while faced with this heartless threat to the happiness and wellbeing of them and their pets. These pets are family members, people's rocks to lean on, paws to hold, eyes that look at them only with love, through life's challenges, a persistent pandemic, maybe mental health, who knows. This cannot stand.

- training should be universal and not discriminatory, if you want to impose higher fines or mandatory training, do it across the board. many breeds are more aggressive and less trainable than pit bulls.
- Higher punishment for animal abusers. There's no difference in animal breeds and blaming a dog for being strong is like blaming a child for being strong. If a strong child hurts another child. We blame the parent- not the child.
- Shame on you for proposing a breed specific ban on bully breeds! This approach has not ever worked in the past in other cities who have implemented this type of bylaw. Stop blaming the dogs for bad ownership. Furthermore, the first question in your questionnaire should have been: do you support a BSL or not and why. Your questionnaire is biased and completely inappropriate for those who do not support this proposal.,
- Pit bulls are the most gentle dogs when they are raised by the right people the stigma on Pitbulls needs to end. The pitbulls you see biting people are trained to attack people
- [removed] dogs are on owners not breeds
- To quote above: " *It is important to note that while pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents than other dog breeds, the reason they are listed here is because a pitbull's strength allows the potential for a more severe bite." A pit bull's bite (measured via "Pound-force per Square Inch" or PSI) is weaker than a German Shepherd, a Doberman, a Chow-Chow, and is only slightly stronger than a Labrador. You are making laws and rules based on misinformation and are spreading false facts and fear. Please stop. I am not a pit bull owner, my dog is 150lbs and could probably take out a pit bull if he wanted to - however; with proper training he doesn't, even when attacked. So think twice, any rules and regulations you place against a specific breed is a horrible thing to do. Change the rules for all breeds and enforce good and responsible ownership. i have been bitten more and attacked by small dogs like a chihuahua, a bichon, and a spaniel because the humans seem to think because they are small, they are not able to cause harm. Which is a bigger issue. Please note this is not a satisfactory excuse to discriminate against the pit bull/terrier breed. Dogs OF ANY BREED declared a nuisance must be muzzled in public, including off-leash parks. Obedience training required for ALL BREEDS/DOGS. ANY BREED OF DOG that is declared a nuisance cannot be in off-leash parks. Higher fines for DOGS OF ANY BREED, involved in bylaw offences.

- None of the above. This is discrimination over outdated ideas. How about a bylaw that ALL dogs require training? How about all or none for every policy mentioned. All dogs wear muzzles in dog parks?
- None
- Obedience training should be required for all dogs and dog owners!
- I will not support and breed specific legislation. It makes absolutely no sense to single out a specific type of dog. Particularly when you consider “e” in your description of a pit bull type. A dog with pit bull characteristics could be anything from a Labrador retriever to a Boston terrier mix. Basically any dog with short hair and a broad muzzle can be labeled as a pit bull! I am a certified professional dog trainer and on the Behaviour team at an animal shelter. I have met a large amount of dogs with behavioral issues that could put them in to the above description of a “nuisance dog” and they have been a complete range of breeds. Long haired, short haired, large and small.
- Training for owners and offer money for that when people can’t afford it.
- It is absolutely disgusting that you all at city council are trying to push this through. Even this questionnaire is extremely rigged. Pitbull type dogs are not the problem. They are no more dangerous than other dogs. Any proper research would not only confirm this but also show that BSL has never lowered dog bites or attacks. I do not agree with this possible motion to pass. I will not ever muzzle my bully dog. Shame on you.
- The breed of dog does not guarantee it’s behaviour nor does it guarantee its tendency for aggression. It is a biased and discriminatory belief. Educating dog owners AND non dog owners on dog approachability and behaviour is what is needed.
- Any dog no matter the breed if shows aggression and involved in offenses should the owner take proper precautions. Doesn’t matter the breed. Not all pitbulls are bad
- Singling out pit bulls is the same as racism. Think about it.
- I cannot believe that this city is actually think of BSL!!! this is outrageous, jerman Shephards, chihuahuas, any dog is raised by a bad owner can be a bad dog!!! Why people keep picking on and blaming pitbulls, these dogs are so mistreated abused, abandoned and made to fight for their lives when all they want is to be loved. I Totally disagree with BSL!!!!
- Please look into small dogs who have a higher bite ratio then pitbulls, this is basically racism just with dogs. Pitbulls don’t bite if trained yet if your tiny yappy little mutt bites me it’s considered cute. I’d rather have small dogs needing to be muzzled in public I’ve been attacked and they scare me. Quit saying pitbulls are bad. I will never support anything that bans pitbulls.
- Absolutely do not single individual breeds out like some of these proposed measures.
- No BSL. Higher fines for any and all dogs involved in bylaw offences.
- Many of these “pit-bull-looking” dogs are not the problem. Traumatized dogs and improper owners are what creates aggressive dogs. Not breed. Specific breeds and owners of these dogs should not be penalized if they are well-behaved dogs.

- Don't put muzzle on dogs that's an [removed_ move how about if someone put a muzzle on you
- Crack down on the people who train them to be mean it is not the dogs fault pit bulls are loving sweet dogs. STOP Discriminating
- Start a bad owner and bad breeder registry and eveh ban people from owning animals after multiple offenxes.
- Implement a mandatory training class for anyone looking to rescue a dog from some type of shelter. Aggressive behaviour is NOT breed specific. It is due to lack of training and bad ownership, not bad dogs.
- This is a 100% attack on the bully breeds!!!... there are many other "nuisance" dog breeds out there that are far more aggressive. Perhaps the city of Calgary needs to educate themselves on the bully breed and even go met some!
- Seperating out "pit bulls" like this is feeding into stereo-typing of these loving and amazing dogs. Don't let BAD OWNERS ruin it for the people that actually love and care for their pets.
- Why not focus on boosting the economy, rather than discrimination or bias towards a breed of dog. It's the [removed] owners NOT THE BREED! Idiots!
- NONE
- Enforce this with all breeds. Small dogs seem to be the worst and it's put off onto pitbull owners who actively try to work with their dogs. Chihuahuas are actually the devil. Muzzle them too if you insist on implementation of an archaic bylaw.
- No discriminatory treatment for pit bulls and other block headed dogs. Also, a means for pet owners to protect themselves from neighbours/ citizens who file frequent complaints that are libellous or fabricated.
- Obedience trading for any dogs who were bread for fighting and guarding. (Rottweiler, Doberman, Huskies, German Shepard, Great Pyrenees etc). This should not just be towards pit bulls. There is some data that there is actually more attacks by huskies than pit bulls. It should not be about breeds it should be about the capability of the owner. Little dogs can bite too...
- Fines for off leash dogs in non designated off leash areas
- I think it's terrible that you are breed- shaming pit bulls. Some of the most gentle dogs I know are pitties and some of the nastiest are smallest dogs like chihuahuas and poodles. ANY BREED that is a nuisance should be dealt with in an appropriate manner. Shame on you Calgary.
- Higher fines for any dog owners of any type of breed that are involved in bylaw offences
- none of the above, i dont know which of your donors its pushing for this nonsense but it warrants an inquiry
- do not focus on a dog breed. Jack Russell terriers can be just as dangerous as a "pitbull" it is not the breed. It is the dog. 10 years ago Toronto made that decision. Now they are looking at reversing it.
- Why are pit bulls being singled out when other dogs, such as German Shepherds and other dogs can be just as much a bite hazard and a dangerous dog. I think this bylaw regarding pitbulls is outdated and needs to be rethought..

- I have found that small dogs like chihuahuas are much more aggressive than bigger breeds like pitbulls. Putting a muzzle on a dog will further hinder their development and socialization. The problem lies with how individuals train their dogs. Not the breed.
- Owners should be responsible for their dogs. Please do not be breed specific and punish a lot of good dogs and good, responsible dog owners. Many mixed breed dogs can have a pit bull like appearance. Are you going to eliminate all large dogs? History has taught us this not an effective measure and you will in effect be ordering genocide of a particular species. Is this who we've become? KILLERS?
- I would wholeheartedly support a requirement that any and all dogs in the city should receive some basic minimum of obedience/socialization training before they may be allowed off-leash in public or unfenced private areas within the city. Obedience training strengthens communication and the cooperative bond between the pet and owner and calms dog behaviour. A well trained dog is usually happier, calmer, less aggressive, more manageable, and safer. I believe broad support and compliance could be encouraged by discounted or waived licence fees and/or city support for discounted fees for training from obedience schools that might benefit from increased enrolment. Canine obedience training is a net good. For the pet. For the owner. For the community. I DO NOT support breed specific restrictions or the stigmatization of any breed to satisfy a misinformed or fearful perception, however widespread or popular. The City of Calgary animal by-laws have served as a constructive example of science-and-common-sense based balance with specific regard to its policies addressing aggressive dog behaviours as well as its recognition that Pit Bull-type dogs - while powerful - are not more likely to be aggressive than other breeds. Calgary has been recognized and cited as a leader in this regard. Please don't screw that up, now.
- Pit bulls are not a nuisance, the people who train them badly are. Instead, focus on regulating breeders and ensuring that those that purchase the dogs are responsible owners.
- the ability to remove the nuisance status with proof of training and demonstrated obedience test.
- A dogs behaviour is not the dogs fault. It is a reflection of the owner and upbringing. An "aggressive" dog stems from most likely an aggressive owner therefor they should be at fault, not the dog. If a dog reacts the home should be evaluated and controlled and the dog should be given the benefit of the doubt. Wearing a muzzle and being restricted will mean less exercise for a dog, less affection and less interactions which all lead to an un healthy and unsocialized dog. I understand when a dog reacts it's easy to blame the dog but I hop we can give these beautiful dogs a chance and educate owners on dog behaviour. Change all of these questions to "poorly behaved child" and this wouldn't be a survey.
- Pitbulls are no different from any other breed. If someone is bit by one, it's not because of the breed, it's because of the owners irresponsibility from training their dog as a gaurd dog. They are no worse than chihuauas. Ive heard more stories about people and pets being attscked by small dogs more so than pitbulls. People are only afraid of them because the stories they hear or choose to believe about the breed. They are nanny dogs!! They are good dogs. Don't make people give up their fur babies because someone is afraid of their appearance.

- Fund a foster care program for dogs. Identify the owners conflicts — do not put down animals because the owners are lacking structure.
- Pitbulls are not worse than any other power breed and small dogs can do even worse damage such as to nerves and small bones.
- It is unfair and not reasonable to put all “pit bulls” under the same bylaws as nuisance dogs. The breeds in general are not the problem, it’s the owners (lack of training, or inappropriate training) that needs to be addressed. Any dog of any breed can be a nuisance. There are many large breeds that can do the same damage as a “pit bull breed”. Boxers, Rottweilers, shepherds, malamutes, etc. Deal with the owners, not the well trained family pets.
- Fine the owner for irresponsible training of said dog it’s not the dogs fault.
- Dogs should be controlled by owners but no discrimination should be allowed from people who don’t know your dog
- Particular breeds are not the problem. Owners are the problem. There needs to be better owner education/screening. One should need a certification or license to own a pet, much like being able to drive a car.
- Your definition of "pitbull" is extremely vague, and there have been no studies showing their bite strength to be any different or stronger than any other breed. Your 4th definition allows for visual breed discrimination of any dog that could be simply a combination of any number of breeds that end up looking a certain way. I really feel that there should be conditions of dog ownership that require verification of training prior to issuing a license, with higher fees until said education is complete, as opposed to simply targeting dogs for the way they look.
- I do not support breed specific bylaws or higher fines for certain breeds.
- Why are Pit bulls being targeted when there are more aggressive and more uncontrollable dogs out there.
- Anyone who wants to have a "specific breed" considered "Bully-breed" should be mandated to take training through a reputable trainer/behaviourist.
- There are way more well behaved pit bulls at dog parks than small dog breeds because people don’t think they have to train small dogs. All of the bites I have seen have been from small dogs. Also, can you please create a rule that children under the age of 5 are not allowed to run around off leash parks? This is so dangerous and there are a lot of places little kids can play whereas less places for dogs to be off leash.
- Obedience training to be required for all nuisance dogs. If pit bulls are not to be allowed in off leash parks then their own bully breed specific off leash park. Calgary community standard if anything should be able to have the right to issue mandatory evaluation by a CERTIFIED animal behaviourist for dogs exhibiting dangerous behaviours and if deemed so by said behaviourist obedience classes.
- I don't think we should be looking at pitbulls as a whole it's not the dog it's the owner how they are trained. Maybe when people are buying bully breeds we should be making sure they are going to good homes.
- Further training for bylaw officers and how to adequately deal with dogs without creating high stress environment for the animal and owners

- Any dog can be dangerous, deal with Dangerous Dog label rather than BSL too much emphasis being placed on a specific breed. Deal with poor owners that don't train and their dog has become Dangerous no matter what the Breed.
- Small dogs held accountable too. The small breeds are more aggressive, only ever been bitten by a small dog. And the small dogs bark constantly.
- No differentiation in legislation based on dog breed. It's ignorant and just plain asinine.
- This is [removed] sorry my rude language but pit bulls have been criminalized to the point where people think they need separate rules. There is absolutely nothing wrong with this breed.
- NO BYLAWS BASED ON BREED OR APPEARANCE. It is ludicrous and unfair. Breed is not the problem, responsible ownership is!
- NONE! Its a dog, get over your self. The only thing you need is tougher laws, jail time and fines for owners! God created all creatures for a reason who are we to deiced which breed lives and dies! You want kids to learn to accepted all people but hate a certain breed, do you hear how dumb that sounds
- None of these suggestions is fair. Responsible owner ship should be encouraged and supported.
- When the city or agencies within the city adopt out a pitbull, a 'set up for success package' should be provided to owners. This would entail how to positive reinforce pitbulls (all dogs). People with assault criminal backgrounds should not have a pitbull. They need to go into good homes where they're safe and not abused. Pitbulls are targetted by the public for being bad. Pitbulls should not be targetted. I've had more issues with border collies and German Shepard attacking my dog. I've never seen bad behavior by a pitbull at a dog park (we go everyday) and the owners are usually very responsible.
- pitbulls do not have a stronger bite than other dogs, and no breed should be targetted because of its breed.
- Ban these types of dogs and their arrogant owners.
- ban them
- While I understand the reasoning behind "pit bulls", this should include ALL dogs, the little ones too.
- Screening for those who are looking to purchase a pit or nuisance breed. Breeds aren't the problem. It's people who are. This is shameful city of Calgary. An embarrassment that you've bought into the propaganda associated with stereotyping breeds
- This is not the minority report, you can't punish people and their dogs for things that haven't happened yet. And you can't make the punishment more severe because of a breed of dog. Chihuahua's are fairly aggressive, but just because they're too small to cause serious damage doesn't mean the owner should be able to get away with poor training.
- There are just as many problems with tiny dogs being a nuisance as there are large dogs. By discriminating again a breed, you are singling them out and their owners when there are plenty of small dogs who have cause just as much damage,
- If you're going to implement rules like this on pit bulls, please consider chihuahuas and toy poodles as well. This is ignorant.
- Singling our a breed is not fair. More focus on bad or neglectful owners, not the animal or breed itself.

- Mandatory training for OWNERS, requiring a special license or certification to own, that must be periodically updated with testing (commands, recall, socialization, etc.). Restrict the owners; NOT the breed! Allow for "nuisance" dogs to appeal their status after proof of training and improved behaviours where applicable.
- Breed specific legislation is garbage. Do not regulate Pitbull types any differently than other breeds.
- How about ALL dogs in "Nuisance" category. This is called Responsible PET OWNERSHIP bylaw...stop segregating breeds...it's all the owner's responsibility.
- No fines, mandated classes to help the owner and pet improve their life together
- No laws based on breed types.
- That you rethink this approach as pit bulls are no stronger than Shepard's
- All dogs can be a "nuisance" if not trained to behave properly. And not only "pit bulls" are dangerous. STOP discriminating dogs and people. What is wrong with the world. You people are sick!
- I think the clause about dogs resembling the look of pit bulls should be removed. This is NOT fair to the responsible pet owners who specifically chose NOT to have a pitbull.
- Whatever bylaw is passed needs to address all dogs and should not in any way single out a specific breed or specific look
- Specific dog behaviour and breed knowledge training for all bylaw officers, city officials and staff, LEOs, city and non-city representatives, tribunal staff and officers. Proposing this type of new or updated bylaw clearly demonstrates a deep ignorance of canine behaviour and trying to paint certain breeds because of their structure and/or stereotypes reflects PETA and its like misguided and ill intended agenda.
- Would depend on why the dog is declared a nuisance. If declared a nuisance for noise violation does not make sense for this dog to be muzzled in public.
- Rather than punishing the dog, punish the human. Now I understand that is what a fine has the goal of doing. I agree yes if a dog acts out fine the owner responsible but don't only look into a specific breed BSL is wrong and is literally dog racism. A dog's behaviour reflects its owner, rather than making obedience classes mandatory for dogs why not make owners who seem to not be able to control or train their pets attend training courses.
- ALL dogs should be required to take obedience training (stop being racist to dogs)
- There is absolutely no need to have breed specific laws. Pit bulls are abundant in this day and age. They are not bad dogs. I have a pit myself and I will not have my right to own more than one stripped from me! I believe there are broken and very dangerous dogs out there! Of all breeds though! And those dogs should be either trained or unfortunately put down. But quit bullying my breed :(
- More rules on Pit Bulls. They are dangerous, I have been attacked in Dover by a roaming pitbull. One would tear my friendly black lab up in minutes.
- there should be mandatory proper training for ALL dogs. Owners need to know and research before the ability to have a dog.
- Obedience training mandatory for all dogs. Regardless of breed.
- Owners are the problem, I know of 2 labs that are vicious so you shouldn't stereotype!

- There should be absolutely no support for breed-specific legislation, instead EVIDENCE BASED methods should be used.
- NO Pit Bull Only legislation at all. That is unfair to the breed, the owner and the community. This type of legislation has been protested harshly in other countries and will only cause more harm than good. The breed itself is not responsible for uneducated dog owners. As stated Bully breeds are NOT top of the list for dog bites. This kind of attention to the breed is responsible NOT for accurate education but instilling fear where it does not need to be. Making the public afraid of one of the breed that was historically referred to as the Nanny Dog for its amazing protection and companionship of children, is absurd. Mark my words, this will only cause massive protest and negative attention to the city in an already crazy time. Please think again about this and the repercussions. Educating Bully owners should be first and foremost. The owners of poorly behaved bully breeds need help... not the dogs. Any legislation singling them out would be extremely devastating to the owners and negative for the City. Barbi Procinski
- Absolutely ridiculous of Calgary to even consider bylaws such as these for pit bulls in the first place.
- None of these options. Nuisance breeds are nonsense, any breed regardless of size or physical appearance can be dangerous. Labelling dogs with a specific physical appearance is dangerous, prejudicial, and creates a false sense of security.
- Do not be breed biased. The laws should apply to all breeds equally.
- It's not the breed, it's the owner. don't punish a dog who hasn't been properly cared for by the owner.
- I have no other, just wanted a space to say BSL is a terrible idea and I'm embarrassed that we are considering it. Give your head a shake [removed]!
- Case by case basis. As small dogs cause many bites especially with children. No discrimination against pit bulls. Also I think there should be time slots available for nuisance dogs to be in an off leash park like after 8pm or before 8am to avoid contact with children and many other dogs. Definitely should NOT order a bad dog to stay at home as their behaviour would worsen and that is torture.
- Making this about anything that looks like a pit bull is quite literally, stupid. I have been bitten by dogs before, none of them pit bulls. Either make these suggestions for ALL dogs or none.
- ALL DOGS should be held to the standard of if being aggressive or a nuisance should be charged. This isn't a breed issue this is an owner issue.
- This is ridiculous. My sisters dog has the look of one of these dogs but is a full Labrador. Yes I get pit bulls have a stronger bite. But if it were people you'd never be specifying this completely. Deal with the real issue. The owners. Give your heads a shake. Ive had more Small dogs bite me than bigger dogs. Deal with the actual problem.
- No pit bulls in YYC
- [removed]
- I don't support a special treatment of pit bulls. I think we should instead concentrate on things such as protecting animals against cruelty and educating the public on proper dog training, the importance of exercise, etc.
- Nuisance dogs and owners must attend mandatory dog and owner training with a certified trainer.

- When a dog bites, it must be muzzled in public.
- Pitbulls should not be scapegoated. This is very wrong
- Breed specific regulations are ridiculous.
- Higher fines for repeat biting dogs regardless of breed
- We have had more incidents with small breeds such as Chihuahua and Pomeranians than any pit bull or bully breeds! STOP singling out the bully breeds!!!! The bylaws should stay all breeds, and or dog that becomes a nuisance.
- Pitbulls and other dog breeds are not the issue. It is educating both dog and owner how to properly curb this behavior and keep others safe. Legislating against these dogs is ridiculous. I've met many pitties and like breeds, they are some of the kindest and gentlest dogs I've met.
- Calgary has received praise in many articles on how it handled these topics, from seeing that the statistics do not support what Toronto/Ontario has tried to do with bully breeds. There has been no improvement in dog bites/attacks from even completely banning some breeds. There has to be more education and training for both owners and all dog breeds
- ANY dog that bites once should be muzzled period. Pit bulls should not be discriminated against or targeted in this way, absolutely unfair to make these statements based on a dogs appearance. It should be any dog that bites no matter what the breed.
- It should be a case by case basis. It's the owners fault if the dog is not trained no matter what breed it is. Not all pit bulls are mean. Some are scared and friendly and do not need to be muzzled. Dalmatians are the most aggressive breed and same with chihuahuas and corgies.
- All owners should have to go through training before owning ANY dog. Pit bulls or bully breeds are not the problem. Irresponsible dog owners are.
- why are you suddenly picking on pitbulls and xbreeds. Plenty of other breeds are responsible for bites and fights. Please do not pass this bill. It makes no sense at all . Case by case is the best way to go rather than a blanket ban on PITBULLS.
- Dogs are not the problem. Bad owners are.
- I think any breed specific legislature targeting pit bulls is extremely unfair and inappropriate given that you have STATED they're not more involved in biting incidents than other dogs. I am not a pitbull owner but this is extremely problematic thinking and I'm disappointed that such a thing would even be considered.
- Case by case. I do not own a pit myself but many are great dogs and shouldn't be judged by the way they look. Othrr breeds bite as well so case by case things should be judged.
- Not breed specific. People can make any dog mean
- Putting more information out there on how to identify, handle and protect yourself if a dog decides to attack. With all Davis not just specifically one breed..the pitbull bylaws are dog racism 100%
- Required training for misbehaved dogs
- Use the money made through fines to fund educational programs regarding nuisance dogs, such as: pop up info stands for WHY a dog might be a nuisance dog (Ie. Anxiety, past abuse, poor training techniques, etc.) Putting pressure on the owners of "bully breeds" to get rid of, or hide, their bully breeds is abusive. It will not increase the quality of life for these dogs or owners, and does not guarantee a safe space. Bully breeds are not the problem. The people are the problem. EDUCATE!

- Don't ban and blame a specific breed of dog, pit bulls are not the problem it's bad owners, requiring all pit bulls to wear muzzles off of private property is the stupidest by law ever. Abolish this bylaw and stop blaming a specific breed of dogs.
- I do not support breed specific legislation. I would rather see education and training services offered
- There are no bad dogs, only bad owners. Pit bulls are not the issue. Passing a bylaw stating that pitbulls cannot go to the dog park is outrageous and discriminatory.
- Pit bulls as a breed are less dangerous than German Shephard, Husky, Great Dane, and other large size breeds. these bylaws are discriminatory to a species of dog. Poor ownership should be the main outlook for these programs rather than blanketing all owners with insignificant measures.
- You can not discriminate against "pit bull" breeds, it's is unconstitutional, immoral and wrong! Any dog is only as good as it's owner and this is disgusting that it's even suggested!
- ANY dog that has a confirmed history of unprovoked serious attacks/biting should be muzzled in public including off leash parks; NOT all nuisance dogs; NOT all pit bulls. We should not single out any particular breed or those with only minor offences
- Requiring obedience training/muzzles/not allowing in parks based on the owner and not the breed of dog because that's what actually matters.
- Didn't we all just stand up for racism? It's inappropriate to judge someone by how they look. How is it appropriate to judge a dog for how they look? They didn't choose to look that way either. Be racist against these little ones who can't stand up for themselves or hold riots. Calgary is being ridiculous. All the more reason for people not to license their dogs now.
- DO NOT BE BREED SPECIFIC IN YOUR BYLAWS. This is a dangerous precedent and can actually result in legal challenges to your bylaw. Determine the characteristics that qualify as a "nuisance dog" without naming specific breeds.
- Stop judging dogs by there breads.
- Absolutely do not support Breed Specific Legislation. Responsibility is on the owner not the breed. Ie neighbour's shitzu is not trained and aggressive. I would welcome a neighbour with a trained pit bull over an aggressive small breed.
- Only because there is no other place to specify this. I am ADAMANTLY against breed specific restrictions. There are so many loving bully breed dogs that don't deserve this form of breed discrimination. Increase fines for bad/irresponsible owners. Don't punish good dogs and responsible owners for the actions of others. Fines, standards, and punishments should be the same for all breeds. You can do better.
- It is absolutely stupid to single out a specific breed. Pit bulls are not more aggressive than other breeds, and singling them out is only perpetuating the stereotypes of these kinds of dogs. A dog should be looked at for the content of its character, not for specific physicalities - just like people. Do not punish pit bulls for behaviour they have not exhibited.

- There is no scientific based study showing pit bulls are more dangerous. please do not breed discriminate. A dog that has been at large or is declared a nuisance for barking is not prevented by wearing a muzzle, I don't understand your logic.
- I work in a store partnered with a rescue, and have sustained more serious injuries from chihuahuas than "dogs that look like pitbulls". Stop profiling dogs based on how they look. It is not their fault that people in the past made them SEEM like a "dangerous breed". There is NOTHING inherently more dangerous about a dog that you THINK looks more dangerous. Bringing in a "nuisance" dog classification will only encourage people to make false accusations and reports against dogs, or people, that they do not like. This legislation will only deter responsible pet ownership, and will just encourage those few fearful and uneducated individuals to spread their fear and nonsense. Do not do this.
- Pit bulls are excellent dogs. Please stop discriminating against the breed. Its ultimately the owner who requires the training to teach a dog properly. Theres no such thing as a bad dog
- Stop picking on specific breeds!!It is the OWNERS responsibility to train any BREED!! OWNERS need to be legally charged and not allowed to own any animal IF they fail to train animals and care for them!! Not just Pitbull breeds! This really makes me furious as I have been attacked and chased by SMALL dogs!! PLEASE stop blaming breeds as it is the OWNERS responsibility to teach, care, and provide for THEIR dog!! Dogs are NOT born aggressive!! HUMANS are the issue 100%!!!
- This is just stupid
- Any dog can bite! I think the city is barking at the wrong end of the leash!! How about training schools for people before they adopt a dog!! Apply to when they think of having children too!!
- None of these laws are acceptable. Ruling a dog is "vicious" because of the breed is pure crap. These dogs you are listing are literally dubbed "nanny dogs" cause they are so gentle and such happy dogs. The dogs aren't the problem if THAT ONE DOG THAT HAPPENS TO BE A PITBULL bites someone. It's 100% the owners negligence and the owners poor training. Don't ruin my chance of owning good Pitbull because someone else is stupid.
- Stop villainizing pittbulls this is ridiculous...higher fines for off leash dogs in an leash area without discriminating against a certain breed.
- Dont blame the breed blame the owner.
- Nothing, if these types of dogs are not more involved in dog bites than other dogs than there should be no reason to punish those who have a good dog, whether it's a pit bull or not. All dogs should be treated equally, especially if they have not done anything wrong. Everydog has a possibility of biting.
- Enforce measures taken based on offence for all breeds, not just those declared a nuisance. The root of the problem starts with pet owner, not genetics of the dog. I understand the strength of the bite piece, however a blanket approach to an entire breed is unfair. I would be in favor of providing education/supports to educate the public on healthy dog handling and ownership.
- I believe that pit bulls should not be categorized as a "nuisance" pet while chihuahua's, border collies, beagles, and other common household dogs score LOWER on a temperament test. Pit-bulls should not be demonized as they're very loving dogs. Also, regarding muzzles, many pit-bull cross breeds find comfort for anxiety through licking, a muzzle would prohibit them from releasing their own problems.

- I do not support breed-specific legislation. ALL dogs regardless of breed should be properly trained and handled (by owners and passersby), but they are animals and things can happen in unpredictable situations. It's usually the peoples' fault (handler and/or passersby) for putting the dog in that situation.
- The specification of pit bulls here is completely ludicrous. Bully breeds already have a stigma against them. Why are they being outed here with an asterisk stating that it's not because they bite more compared to other dogs. This is promoting the idea that Pitt bulls and bully types are a danger to society. Theses dogs don't deserve this.
- Dogs are usually a nuisance due to the owner's behaviour and attitude. Training classes are the best answer.
- Treat all dogs evenly if a small dog bites the owner gets a fine, why only punish large breed owners
- a Pitbulls bite is only 235 PSI. There are 7 dogs with stronger bites. The bite has nothing to do with it. Its the owners. Go after the owners, make them responsible with higher fines for ALL dogs that have been involved in attacks on people and other animals. Be more stringent on repeat owners, up to removing pets and not allowing them to have any more. We have to stop assuming breeds are the problem, its all the owners fault 100% of the time. Even small dog owners need to be held responsible. Pleaae don't make this about the bully breed, they are as wonderful as other dogs.
- There should not be a carve out for pitbulls. You say the reason they are listed is because the bit strength is greater, but you also include dogs that look like pitbulls. This reasoning does not make sense then. How will you determine what dogs looks enough like a pitbull to be captured under this section? Too vague and will cause interpretation issues. Also, the owner is the problem, not the type of dog. German Shepards are involved in more bit incidents than pitbulls.
- No breed specific legislation. ANY Dog can bite or be a nuisance. Any large dog can do the same damage as a pitbull and very few dog attacks not including pitbull go unreported. The media sensationalizes pitbulls and often report dog attacks as pitbulls (though many times have been a completely other breed ie husky, German shepherd). Fines for first offence and increasing fines for repeat offending animals regardless of breeds.
- Breed Bans don't work.
- Stop needless discrimination of dog breeds and penalizing responsible dog owners for the behavior of a small minority.
- Don't pick on pit bulls , we've witch hunted Doberman's , German Shepard, wolfhound, every few years we pick a new breed , make it about the individual dog , not the breed , pit bull lives matter , let's not just by the breed
- I think all licensing (any breed) should contain a requiem for obedience classes. It isn't the breed but rather the owner that sets up circumstances leading to issues. The city is being reactive rather than proactive. Any dog can bite and from someone who required medical treatment from a golden retriever bite, it was never the dog but the owners that caused the issue.
- Pretty sure rottis and mastiffs have strong bites too.. why discrimiate against pitbills

- Fines for humans who do not properly care for their dogs, force free training mandatory if, through the humans negligence, a dog is aggressive.
- Breeds are not the problem. Many dogs have bites stronger than pit bulls. Guilty until proven innocent should not be the path. How about you need a permit to own certain breeds. To get a permit you need to show you aren't a [removed] not capable of owning and training a dog.
- Responsible pet owner act. Extra training, and understanding of breeds is in order. Not a bylaw or extra fines needed for what you consider "nuisance" breeds. But better education and training.
- Off leash parks should not be along pathways
- This is asinine. Pit bulls have a bite strength 5psi above labs and BELOW GERMAN SHEPHERDS!!!! These bylaws strictly support breed specific legislation which has been proven time and again that it does not work! The focus needs to be on responsible dog ownership which includes obedience training for ALL BREEDS, ESPECIALLY CHIHUAHUAS AND SMALL DOGS THAT ARE SIGNIFICANTLY MORE PROBLEMATIC THAN PIT BULLS!!!! Infact, pit bulls were bred as "nanny dogs". Thats right, they are bred to protect CHILDREN!. Change your focus. Responsible pet ownership needs to be the priority, not BSL. Give your heads a shake.
- none of the above
- None of the above should be in place.
- All dogs should be required to have obedience training to be licensed
- Rather single out the animal, ie; Pit Bulls, how about replace that with the OWNER and leave the dogs alone. This breed specific legislation in nonsense.e
- I own a pit bull, he is the sweetest, most submissive dog, and I cannot imagine muzzling him in public for no reason other than his genetics. Putting him in a muzzle would give people the impression that he's aggressive when he isn't at all. Requiring certain breeds be muzzled is absolutely outrageous.
- NONE OF THE ABOVE
- There is a big difference between nuisance and aggressive. That needs clarity. A barking dog vs an aggressive dog are not the same.
- Pit bulls are fantastic dogs and should not be treated differently!
- The inclusion of "pit bull" type dogs into this review lacks principle and basis in objective reality. The potential for a more damaging bite exists for any dog above a certain weight, yet no wide sweeping regulation is proposed for large breed dogs. This demonstrates the hypocrisy of the proposed breed specific legislation. It is clearly driven by unprincipled fearmongering, and I expected better of our public officials than to fall prey to this.
- This is ridiculous Calgary. So ashamed to have to fill this out. Treat all the dogs the same, do not bully our breed.
- Pit bulls are some of the nicest dogs I've met. While I understand that pit bulls have the potential for a more severe bite, that would be like telling someone they can only own one sports car because they're of higher risk of being in an accident. The people that own them tend to know these things. Give them a break.
- Any dog can bite. It should have to be declared a nuisance before it gets extra rules.

- How about train the owners to not be so stupid!
- The criticism toward "Pitbull type" dogs is not with pure motives and intentions. If the ultimate goal is limiting animal bites and getting to the root problem of bite attacks, you would be horribly wrong to place a label on multiple bully breeds based on how they look and human interpretation on their strength, rather than actual aggression of each animal involved in bite attacks, which has the same if not greater potential for severe bites to occur due to aggression. Just as humans are given a fair trial in the courtrooms following a small crime or violent crimes, dogs need to be assessed fairly by professionals in dog behaviour, case by case, and given a fair "trial."
- These rules should apply to all other breeds of dogs that meet the same criteria for "dangerous" if a Lab or chihuahua bites someone it should have the same rules. ALSO. If possible, the city should look into making obedience training mandatory when adopting a dog, and having some form of certificate in person while in public, those who cannot provide this, pay the price.
- Don't you dare try and muzzle an entire breed of dog you morons
- Shame on you city of Calgary for being breed racist. All large breed dogs (or as you would say bully breeds) need is a good home and some additional behaviour training.
- Targeting a specific breed is irresponsible. Target in nuisance animals.
- Fines for owners, not the dogs. The dog is a reflection of what it is taught, so if it bites someone its because the owner has not properly trained it. And therefore is unfit to own the dog.
- Any "pit bull" related bylaws such as these suggested are BSL (breed specific legislation) and is basically dog racism. Just because a "pit bull" type dog is strong does NOT make it any more likely to bite and in fact, these breeds are some of the sweetest I've ever encountered. By your logic, any dog over 50 lbs could be considered a high risk for a severe due to their strength when, in fact, most dog bites are caused by smaller dogs that are never considered for such bylaws.
- Do not discriminate against breeds of dogs. It's just silly. It is not the dogs fault, it is the owner's. Responsible owners should not be penalized for the actions of the irresponsible. There are PLENTY of dogs that have the strength of a pitbull. It has nothing to do with strength and everything to do with proper socialization. Innocent pitbull puppies will have a much harder the socializing if subject to discriminatory penalties and laws. This reinforces the issue. In addition, it creates a bad image for what is an amazing breed of dog, and it's relatives.
- Any fines or consequences need be defined by the action or event and the severity of it. Not breed. We are all against racial profiling so why are we doing the same thing here with dog breed. Quit virtue signaling and solve real problems. Your statement says that pit bull type dogs are not involved in higher number of bite incidents so deal with every case on an individual basis. I also find it hard to select any boxes because although I agree with harsher penalties for nuisance dogs, however, you are already trying to declare pitbull "type" dogs as nuisance dogs so no matter what box I select it will still be applied to some irrational preconceived notion that has already been decided.
- In one paragraph you have 'pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents', proceed to write 'A list of measures that other municipalities have taken to reduce the frequency and severity of dog bites', and then follow with statements targeting pit bulls. This is a very biased survey and should NOT be focusing on a single breed or type of dog. Instead, some of the statements listed should be applied to all dogs. For example, all dogs should be required to have obedience training. All dogs should have high fines for breaking the bi-laws. Instead of pushing an anti-bully agenda, how about Calgary starts taking action against all irresponsible owners? The two biggest issues we have in our neighbourhood is a) off-leash dogs in non-designated areas, and b) dog poop not being picked up! It is not the bully types that are the problem.

- This is ridiculous that we are punishing people who love their dogs as much as they love their own kids. It's not the PITBULL that makes for a bad dog, but rather the owner that isn't spending the appropriate time training them. Trying to create a bylaw for this is outrageous! A small dog can cause severe injury too so this is the most ridiculous bylaw.
- I don't think these rules should apply to pit bulls in particular! There are many other breeds out there that have a stronger bite and are capable of delivering just as much or more damage than a pit bull! Owners definitely need to take full responsibility for their dogs from following rules and not only protecting their dog but other people and animals if their dog exhibits bad and/or dangerous behaviours!
- All dog owners required to attend training/handling/caring for a dog
- Pit bull ban
- I just want to specify while i support being strict with all dogs overall when required, focusing on pitbulls is extremely negative to the breed which by itself should be very calm, but bad ownership is usually to blame.
- Higher fines for offleash dogs of all types in non-offleash areas. Owners of reactive dogs can only do so much but when owners of friendly dogs allow their dogs to wander offleash and up towards the reactive dogs that are on-leash, it can easily send reactive dogs past threshold and into those aggressive behaviors. Do more to reduce the circumstances that lead to these events rather than just blanket punishing entire breeds. The majority of your suggested reforms are archaic and don't seem to be evidence based. They also seem to make no sense. Dogs that are barrier reactive and bark a lot indoors or behind fences can be labeled "nuisance" but that doesn't mean that they are leash reactive so having them in a muzzle on every walk makes no sense. There's a real lack of logic here.
- This is absolute trash. BSL is a joke and is such an outdated concept. I would hope Calgary would be better than this. I work in rescue and have been bitten by many dogs, none of which was ever a pit bull.
- Pit bulls do not pose harm... this is a racism attack on breeds. All dogs have potential to bite is provoked and instilling this law is insane.
- It's not a specific breed that is a problem! I was an owner of a Pit Bull for 14 years and she was a wonderful, kind loving dog so please don't pin point a particular breed. This wouldn't be acceptable for humans and should be the same for animals. Any dog that is exhibiting behavior problems need to be address!. Owners need to be required to address these behavior problems with a certified dog trainer. Most people cannot deal with these behaviors on their own so it should be a mandatory requirement. If they choose not to then the owner needs to be addressed and action taken for safety of all involved.

- The only time these dogs are vicious is when the owner doesn't train them properly. ANY dog can be vicious. Stop singling out "pitbull like dogs, its utterly incompetent and embarrassing .
- Adding you many restrictions to pitbulls means those dogs don't get as much of a chance at a normal happy life. With training and a proven track record I don't think it's fair to assume they're automatically dangerous.
- After a dog bites and/or is declared a nuisance dog, they (and their environment) should be assessed by a professional dog behaviorist to ensure that the cause isn't because the dog's isn't receiving proper care. This should include adequate physical and mental exercise, nutrition and a non abusive environment.
- Training is so important, animals need to stop being punished on behalf of people who do not have their best interest. Part of the fee when dealing with pet bylaw should go towards affordable training. This could also help boost business within the pet care industry.
- owner must prove they can physically control/restrain their pitbull/nuisance dog; 1 pitbull/nuisance dog per physically able adult in a household
- All dog owners should have a certificate of training if allowed to be in dog parks, or out in public.
- ALL DOGS -regardless of breed or size should be REQUIRED to take Obedience training before being licensed - look at Swiss laws regarding dogs
- Proper education and training is required for disobedient dogs and their owners, which includes All Breeds. To single out one over another, invites discrimination based on anecdotal evidence. Since "Pit Bulls" are not involved in more bites, the reference used of them being able to inflict more severe bites is asinine, and a baseless excuse, which will increase said discrimination. There are more cases of smaller breeds causing issues than larger ones, but we don't see any targeted discrimination towards them, because of a racial bias. This needs to stop!
- To even include pitpulls on as a "strong" bite is discrimination. If you're going to say this include all dogs husky, mastiff, German Shepard, Bernese mountain dog ect. This should be weight based if you're really going to push this outlandish statement. 2. Humans are usually the cause of bad dog behaviour. Whether it's previous abuse not related to the current owner, current neglect, lack of training ect. It all stems from humans. There should be more options about that help educate OR hold humans accountable in multiple ways for their dogs.
- A pet owner with a large breed should be required to obtain training and demonstrate that the dog is not a danger to the public. All large dogs, not just pit bulls, have the ability to seriously injure someone.
- pit bulls should not be treated as more dangerous than other breeds. Judge the dog, not the breed.
- NONE!
- Training for owners. Pitbulls (and pitbull types) aren't the problem; a lack of owner education is.
- Owners who own pit bull or the breed that looks similar know there dogs behaviour and should be allowed to know f there own dog should be muzzled only and only if that dog bites another dog or human and if that dog does not listen to commands then it should be muzzled. It's not the dog it's the human who owns the dog

- I think that it is completely WRONG to discriminate against pit bulls as their behaviour is completely based on how they are cared for and it is the humans that are the issues and not the dogs.
- this is sick how your targeting the bully breeds, i have a pitbull and have had more issues from bad owners aka bad owner bad dog whike you wanna punish the good owners thats bullshit, wanna limit problem breeds there are no bad dog just bad owners. [removed] this bylaw is [removed], the bully breeds score higher on temper test than labs. target the bad owners not breed [removed]
- should be against agressive dogs in general not just the bully breed
- None of the above. Looks like the decision is already predetermined from these options. Banning specific breeds is silly and good for nothing other than headlines
- None of the above
- City should mind their own business
- Breed specific legislation is racism for dogs. There are many pitbulls in the city who are friendly dogs. To stereotype entire breeds NOT based on their behaviour as individuals is wrong.
- No more than one 'nuisance' dog but NOT to include non-nuisance pit bulls
- Literally NONE of these garbage and biased ideas pertaining to dogs and their owners. It's not the breed, it's the human behind them. Sincerely; a proud owner of 3 darling Pit Bulls
- Please do not target a specific breed of dog, when looking at comprehensive statistics a specific breed is not more likely to bite or cause more severe injury. By targeting specific breeds it puts blame on the dogs rather than the owner. The above elements I have ticked off will put responsibility on owners of all dogs. Limiting a specific breed from interactions with other animals will only worsen any potential problems
- Why is the city just attacking pitbulls?? What about the small shit zu dogs that i have bitten by several times! Or the viscous German shepherd, or the 2 Labradors that have already bitten 2 kids!? This is not specific to a breed and it is not the breed that is the issue here!! It is the owners! Any dog no matter the breed should be properly trained! And if any dog of any breed is attacking or biting other people then it is not the dog or breeds fault, it is the fault of the owner!! So instead the city of Calgary should be looking at the OWNERS not the dog, and asking if they should be owning an animal or not? The owner should be fined then for ANY breed including shepherds, labs, shit zus and other dogs that are viscous! The owner is the problem not the dog.
- Pit bulls are not the problem. Owners are the problem. Do not subject pit bull breeds to any of these if you are not willing to subject other animals to it.
- Stop discriminating on breeds this is just as disgusting as racism
- None of the above
- All the of the above proposed measures related to "pit bulls" are discriminatory against a breed or breed type and do not address the requirement of responsible breed ownership. A dog and it's owner should not be banned from an off-leash dog park because it has a brindle coat (common in multiple bully-breeds) or its ears are set at a certain angle. You are discriminating against the responsible dog owner and their dog based on the animal's looks.

- Absolutely not! If regulations go up they should go up for all dogs, specifically singling out pit bulls is more blockheaded than they are. It's sentencing before the crime.
- Do not single out these rules to pit-bull breeds
- Breed specific legislation is not effective, all dog breeds have the potential to bring harm. Introducing breed specific legislation doesn't target the actual problem of poor animal care by their humans, solve the human issue. Offer innovative and supportive programs for people with dogs who need training.
- Mandatory training/retraining sessions and/or higher fines for dog owners that do not actively engage with / exercise proper control over their dogs (non-responsible pet owners). Ie the Pomeranian owner that thinks their dog is ok to jump on everyone else's because it is small.
- These are very clearly targeting one specific breed with intentionally broad language so other dogs can simply be rolled into this garbage on a whim. Punish the owners who refuse to address their pitbull behavior, including the ones who incentivize this bad behavior. A single offence can be a warning but multiple offenders are subject to investigation by authorities. Penalties for repeated problems include spaying or neutering the owner. Repeated severe infractions subject the owner to euthanasia. Let's tag and muzzle city council instead, they're very clearly a nuisance but they're still allowed to frequent the parks without a leash..
- Fines for animal abuse or neglect because that starts a lot of behaviour problems as well.
- It is absolutely ridiculous to base something like this off breed. It is ENTIRELY the responsibility of the OWNER to train their dog, regardless of breed. To single out pit bulls is absolutely ridiculous.
- This I NOT a breed issue this is a behaviour issue and you should not be singling out pit bull breeds in these bylaws
- Who is deciding what dogs fit in to these "breeds"? Most of these breeds are not actually breeds but rather BBM (bully breed mixes).
- I think pet owners should be fined higher amounts when a dog bites someone or another dog. They should require insurance if they cause injury to a person or other animal. I don't think this should be based off breed but by the actual dogs doing these behaviours.
- None of the above- the generic labelling of a dog as a nuisance-especially for something like 'noise' should not warrant muzzling in public spaces. In addition, the specific suggestion regarding pit bull breeds and their relations is extremely concerning. Not only is it more common for small dogs to be aggressive, but larger dogs than the standard pit bull can cause equal if not more damage during an incident. Each animal should be assessed on a case-by-case basis following an incident with no by-law targeting of any given breeds.
- Why would a dog who barks a lot or a dog that looks a certain way need a muzzle in public? Seems like a complete disconnect between problem and solution
- Pit bulls are not the only dog that has teeth and bites. This should be geared towards all aggressive dogs. Not just 1 breed.
- Leave it alone

- THIS SURVEY IS BIASED. Whoever wrote this needs to seriously reconsider their inherent bias. You state up front that you "want to understand what you would or would not support" yet you only list items asking what we would support. So many items in this list I DO NOT SUPPORT.
- There should be no breed specific legislation considered. If a dog proves to be a nuisance the owner should be penalized as such. If a dog is out of control, it's the owner's fault. I've been bit harder by so many other medium sized dogs, even my tiny shih tzu bites harder than my American Staffordshire Terrier EVER has. On that note, all of those other breeds have also bitten MORE frequently than my AST. Not to mention the dogs that weigh 100lbs+ can bite way harder, and can do more damage just by running into things or jumping up. It's completely up to the owner to control the dog's environment, and the OWNERS should receive 100% of the blame and very very hefty fines for any incidents caused.
- It is disappointing that pitbulls are singled out here. I would rather than dogs with a history of dangerous behaviors be ordered to seek additional training, but not breed specific.
- These bylaws should NOT be breed specific (re: against bully breeds) it is more important to hold owners responsible for training and handling their dogs regardless of the breed. At the dog park my experience has been that bully breed owners tend to be more responsible than other dog owners there.
- Education session for owners on how to manage their nuisance dog & curb behaviours. Provide them with a list of behaviourist/trainers
- Please don't push forward laws regarding pit bulls or bully breeds. Pit bulls are no more a danger than any other breed of dog.
- A specific breed should not be called out, the breed doesn't indicate behaviour
- Any dog, shouldn't discriminate against bully breeds
- NO MORE SINGLING OUT DOG BREEDS THAT ARE NO DIFFERENT THAN A SHEPPARD OR ROTTWEILER. Bigger so they bite harder is [removed].
- Obedience training should be provided by force free trainers
- This is all [removed]. Breed Specific Legislation is wrong. You can't judge a dog on their appearance, and punish owners for having a certain type of dog. My Pitty is sweet and gentle, and we both always act responsibly in public. I agree aggressive and nuisance dogs should have regulations, but that has nothing to do with breed, it's case by case basis, and largely due to poor ownership. It's 2020 time to evolve and not play into the stigma of dog racism. We're better than this
- I don't think that Pit Bulls should be banned from off leash dog parks, unless they have done something that would label them as a threat to other dogs or owners. To label all Pit Bulls as dangerous and ban them from these parks is too extreme. I think it would depend on the dog's behaviour.
- THE OWNERS SHOULD BE HELD RESPONSIBLE THERE PITBULLS AREN'T THE PROBLEM. BAD. OWNERS. ARE!
- We should NOT single out one specific breed, we should fine and register dogs based on ACTUAL behaviour. Singling out one breed is wrong, just like singling out a group of people based on the colour of their skin or physical appearance.

- This is all garbage. PITBULLS ARE NOT THE PROBLEM. I know MANY pit bulls and they are the sweetest animals. Educate yourselves, this is a huge step backwards and you should be shaking your heads.
- Stop making trouble where there is none. City hall over reach is ridiculous. All you guys want is higher fines to bring in more money so you can spend spend spend. You don't actually care about any of this or pet owners
- I do not agree with banning breeds or putting these kind of restrictions on certain breeds. The dam owners need way more education. People don't do the proper research before getting dogs. Not the dogs fault!!
- Fines for back yard breeding and no license, fines for no permits to operate dog rescues in residential areas, fines for administration of medication to dogs with out proper adequate education
- Dog training mandatory for all dogs and owners. This would improve the lives of all residence and pet owners. Make licensing free for dogs/owners that have reached advanced training level (3 sets of classes)
- NONE. BSL is a joke.
- Ban pit pulls and other aggressive breeds in Calgary.
- I am so appalled that the City of Calgary would even consider breed specific legislation. In a time where we protest love and respect for people of all backgrounds, race, gender, sexual orientation and mental health status, that we would discriminate against a certain breed of dog, is absolutely sickening. A "nuisance" dog should be one with a history of aggression in that specific animal. How can you even justify grouping an entire breed into that category? I do not support this at all and am so disappointed at the large step back that Calgary has taken. I am ashamed to be a Calgarian and that my city is even considering this discrimination.
- Stop targeting pitbull and pitbull looking dogs! Get an education!! Make all bylaws the same for ALL breeds!?
- This is a horrifically biased segment, and worse it includes no contrary options whatsoever. This just seems to ask how we should go about punishing pit bulls, or anything that looks like one, and their owners, as unfairly as possible. I find it hard to believe these options came from someone who knows anything about dogs or dog training.
- Don't let the small breads that attack other dogs and children out in public or off leash
- Law should be inclusive to all dogs and owners should have record of previous pet incidents.
- You cannot specify a kind of dog that's wrong as all dogs can be aggressive This is dog discrimination
- I think this should only be case specific as I know a lot of pit bull and bully breed dogs who are the kindest and gentlest animals ever and they not their owners should be punished or charged when they haven't done anything wrong
- ANY Dog that shows aggressive behavior should be demanded to go through training - NOT DOING THINGS LIKE THIS ^^. Aggressive behavior is the fault of the owner! Do better Calgary, Do wayyyyy better.

- I believe regardless of breed there should be more education put forth for animal owners. Not everyone understands the kind of dog their getting so I think focus should shift to those resources. If an owner decides to get a German shepherd, Great Pyrenees or even an Australian cattle dog they need to know their behaviours, just like someone getting a pit bull type of dog. Any of those other breeds without the proper understanding of what they were bred to do can be dangerous. Having worked at an animal shelter I've seen far more aggressive breeds that weren't of the bully variety; it's everybody's responsibility to understand the dog they are getting.
- There needs to be a program set in place to educate people on the stigma of Pitbulls. The majority of people hear pitbull and the first thing that comes to mind is that that it is a mean viscose dog. Even though you said it yourself, "pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents than other dog breeds". Also fines should be put into place for people who abuse pitbulls at dog parks based on their own ignorance because they look mean. I have witnessed someone kicking a pitbull in the head at an off leash dog park because they thought it was going to attack their dog even though this "Pitbull" was super friendly and was only walking up to their dog to say hello. The colored bandanna could help this issue.
- Responsible owners and there dogs should not be over regulated just because of breed.
- All dogs can be a problem if not trained by their owner and not just certain breeds. The main focus should be on owners not cleaning up after their dogs. By the way, I am not a dog owner. Just fed up with all the dog crap left everywhere.
- The dogs aren't usually the problem. Yes they are larger and have more power to bite but it all comes down to training. Maybe offering more affordable or mandatory dog training through the licensing program. Also some direction for the public in general of how to approach dogs would be a good idea. Many people assume dogs are fine but don't know the background, so the dog may react as a trauma response.
- Can only be one nuisance dog in household
- The problem with dogs always starts with their owners. Stop trying to regulate breeds and crack down on breeders as well as bad owners.
- Pitbulls and their owners should jot be discriminated against. The biggest problem with dogs is their owners, often times small dogs can be more vicious than larger breeds.
- Please do not single out pit bulls. There are no bad dogs, just bad owners.
- Don't punish the dogs. Punish the owners. If the owners of these "nuisance" dogs cannot properly treat them the way they are suppose to be treated, which is provide them with a loving home and train them to be gentle and not aggressive, then the owner should not have them
- This whole form is a hate speech against pitbulls. Perhaps fix the form to reflect the answers I chose more. Seriously?
- I've never personally met a pitbull that was violent or bit anyone. I've seen horrible and I'll equipped owners.worse, owners that promote this behaviour. Dog training must be mandatory and proof required. Of not, the owners should he banned from owning animals. These are animals and the react to the environment they are provided.

- Each dog must be regarded as an individual and assessed on its specific behaviors... This comes straight from our own Calgary Humane Society. Please do not use your personal bias to force pit bull owners to mistreat their dogs. By muzzling and treating Pit bulls differently we are doing nothing to help the animals. Please leave your personal bias out of this and instead look at scientific facts/studies which show that Pit bulls are no worse/different from other dogs.
- What about German Shepard's and other large breeds. Why are pitbull singled out. There are many breeds that can cause damage.
- There should be no breed specific legislation in Calgary. This is racism, breedism. It is shameful this is even being suggested.
- This is limited to breed specific there are more dog bites and attacks by other dogs especially little dogs then pitbulls it is by far unfair to responsible pet owners and discrimination to owners whom are responsible maybe you should use your resources to convict bad pet owners, breeders and abusers instead of responsible owners of all pets.
- Quit singling out pit bull breeds. The times I've been bitten by a dog it's been fluffy Little white dogs Any dog can become a nuisance or a biter. Poor training and poor ownership (people with bad attitudes) are more to blame for bites or attacks than a certain breed of dog.
- I think it is absolutely unjustified to restrict a breed based loosely on looks alone. It is not fair to the owners nor the dogs. I would say that it would be fair to put restrictions on ANY dog that has a bite history. But several breeds should not pay the price for this based on their looks rather than temperament.
- No [removed] laws against pit bulls they don't do anything it's the owners don't punish them
- I do not support singling out PitBulls. I have seen far more aggressive dogs that are not pit bull. If these were humans it would be called racism over a certain culture. My experience with pitbulls has always been positive, not so much with German Shepard's or rot willets. Also I have been bit several times by chiwawas They are nasty little dogs yet not listed. Stop singling out pit bull. For us on the owner and their behaviour.
- Higher fines for owners of dogs off-leash in leashed areas. Too many problems with aggressive behavior with unleashed dogs when they should be on leash.
- Just like step programs for driving under the influence there should be programs in line for people who don't train their dogs and end up biting/injuring a person or another animal... once any incident happens it should be mandatory for Humans to be put through training their animals if not agreed or doesn't finish the program they obviously aren't responsible pet owners and should have their dog taken away.
- I am sick of walking my dog in my neighborhood and having Purposely unleashed dogs run up. There needs to be large fines for this in non off leash areas. Also never once has this been a pit bull breed. All my negative experiences have been with other breeds.
- Breed specific legislation serves to only demonize specific breeds. No special designation should exist only for a breed. It should be case by case not broad sweeping action

- Canine good citizen test for ALL off leash dogs. If you state pit bulls are listed ONLY because of their bite strength, then ALL dogs as strong as them must be lumped into the same category. There are MANY more powerful breeds.
- Pit bulls should be outlawed to own in Calgary
- All dogs should be treated as equal offenders and no one breed should be isolated for offences because they are “stronger” a bite is a bite, a problem dog is a problem dog... period.
- As supportive as society is about race, sexuality, religion you cant base breed as a more aggressive/dangerous animal. This is a myth that a pitbull bite is stronger than "other" breeds. The facts do no support this. I have a pitbull and German pointer and believe me this is not the case.
- Any dog no matter the size, breed or bite power should be considered a nuisance IF they severely harm another human or animal on more than one occasion. There are multiple breeds with a very powerful bite and I do not believe pitbull breeds should be singled out.
- Obedience training required for all dogs, higher fines for any dog involved in bylaw offences
- The city is basically condoning racism amongst dogs with this terminology and ignorance. Watch your wording and stick to laws that relate to behaviour and not to breed or appearance. It's like putting someone on parole because they look intimidating.
- Pit bulls are beautiful animals and don't deserve this at all!
- Mandatory training for ALL dog owners.
- ALL nuisance dogs should be required to undergo further obedience training and care to correct the issue. If there have been multiple bites, only THEN is it fair to look at reducing the privilege of the owner including requiring them to muzzle the animal or pay for further insurance. REMOVE THE PIT BULL SPECIFICATION BECAUSE IT IS ABSOLUTE BULLSHIT CHIHUAHUAS AND POODLES ARE WORSE
- This kind of thinking is very sad to see the city looking at. Money would be better spend on training classes for all dog owners. Please explain why the city is not going after the breeds that are responsible for the higher number of dog bites. Train the owners as the dog is not responsible for it's learned behaviours. Have owner training requirements for all dogs not just one specific breed as that is just being short sighted. Let's step up to responsibility for all dog owners.
- All breeds have the potential to inflict damaging bites requiring medical attention even Chihuahuas. It is the humans who do not know how to handle them, that are the problem. I disagree with ALL of these measures, they are unfair.
- Higher fines for those who are walking their dogs without a leash in an ON leash area no matter how well behaved the dog is. Higher fines for those who leave the scene of an bite incident. Higher fines for animal abusers.
- All measures must also impact the owners of the dogs in question, not just the animal
- absolutely appalled at the use of pitbull. I do not agree with any of these.
- My mother who rescued a “pitbull” from california. The dog had no training and was a “stray” according to the pound. She is a large “pitbull” and the first “pitbull/large breed” dog to ever enter our family bubble. We have chihuahuas in our different households. The “pittie” allowed the chihuahuas to be the pack leaders, she cuddled them and always allowed them to do everything first. The “pittie” took treats immediately without any training more gentle than any dog we have encountered throughout our life with her front teeth. The pittie instantly took to the kids in the family and we trust her around any all children and dogs. This assumption that pitbulls are dangerous is OUTRAGEOUS!! I'm assuming that the city will receive similar stories or complaints however including hearing that it's the owner not the dog.. AND THAT IS EXACTLY TRUE.. so when it says in your options the pitbull must receive training .. no! The owner must receive training!! My mother looked into training and so many of them included dropping the dog off because it was working with the dog and not the human and the dog is fine so she gave up! When I was a teenager living in Surrey BC there was a guy (don't remember any of the info or names) who was bragging and showing pictures to a bunch of kids about him living on this acreage in ? Kelowna, Kamloops, Abbotsford, or Mission? My memory isn't great on that.. it was SOOO many pitbulls all tied up by their necks in these circles a certain distance apart and apparently he was hired by some scary people to feed them and take care of them they were used for dog fighting it was so sad and scary and I was so young and innocent and didn't know bad people and was afraid of "gangs" in BC so I walked away and never reported it (so sad) however THIS is the problem!! People using and training dogs like this to do this!!! Keywords.. using, treating, abusing, and training them!! It's also like to say as a small dog owner since moving to Alberta from BC my dog has been attacked multiple times therefore I don't bring them off leash anymore .. and they were almost ALWAYS attacked by German Shepherds!!!! I love all dogs, but I even personally know an amazing German Shepherd amazing with people amazing with babies and kids the dog is now 9 and they still have to put a muzzle on him or he will viciously try to attack any dog and he is a BIG BOY.. so why single out pitbulls who are amazing dogs!!? How absurd!!

- There is no research that supports pit bulls being dangerous. They are sweet-tempered family dogs, and as ANY large breed, can do damage if they become aggressive. It is RIDICULOUS to single these breeds out and that will only cause a sense of fear that will lead to more incidents. When dogs are required to have a muzzle, they are viewed as dangerous, and people get nervous around them. Dogs sense the nervousness and can become nervous themselves, which sometimes leads to them barking or growling. That would only create more problems. Education and training about responsible dog ownership (such as the importance of exercising and disciplining ANY dog) is a much smarter route to take. I would suggest, if you are you to make a bylaw based on anything, it would be on the dog's weight. Maybe passing a written test about a dog's needs should be required for anyone who would like to own a dog over 50 pounds.
- Muzzle stupid owners!!! Don't blame the breed for your stupidity
- This should not only apply to bully breeds but others as well. It should be the behaviour that the owner is responsible for in ANY BREED
- Breed Specific Legislation is biased, unfair and ineffective. Please handle bite incidents on a case by case basis and do not punish hundreds of innocent animals and responsible owners simply because they have a dog that looks like a pit bull. The facts do not support this type of action and have not proved effective when implemented elsewhere.

- Breed of the dog doesn't determine the character. Pit bull breeds are no more likely to harm someone or be aggressive than any other. BSL leaves "less intimidating" dogs free to do whatever! This has no place in Calgary!
- please please do not become breed specific , it should remain that any dog that deems to have bitten or attacked other dogs or people would be classified as a dangerous dog ,
- If considered a problem animal, education enforcement should be above all else the first and second line of defence - Dog training classes, volunteering at shelter, ect. Financial burden of such on the city
- This question is misleading. First you are talking about a nuisance dog (at large, barking) and then you are talking about a dog that bites. These are separate questions and should not be lumped together. Usually the problem is not with the dog, it is with the owner.
- Education and training for ppl with nuisance dogs, with a mandatory neuter or spay at the expense of owner.
- I do NOT agree with putting stronger penalties on pit bull breeds or ones that could look like pit bulls. A lot of other breeds also have very strong bites and can do damage for their size. NO breed should be singled out. If a dog is a nuisance or owners are negligent with ANY breed, that should be handled individually. BSL's do not solve or help anything.
- Requirements for fencing. I need my daughter to feel secure when walking home from school.
- My dog has been attacked SEVERAL times in off leash parks and just on the street. I want to see more fines for people walking off leash with their dogs in the city. NOT a pit bull specific rule. Every single time my dog has been attacked it has NOT been a bully breed at all. It's a lab or a Shepard.
- Hugggeeeee fines for dog bites; dog bite legislation
- Proof of obedience training and rabies vaccination for ALL dogs will to receive a discount on city dog license
- The prejudice against one breed type is uncalled for. All breeds are at risk of an attack if the owners have not trained their dogs properly. This type of ignorance only feeds into the prejudice more and is harmful to these animals which end up in shelters, abused or abandoned. Please do not discriminate against Bull type dogs. If any bylaws are implemented or changed they need to apply to ALL types of dogs.
- Leave pit bulls alone. They are not the problem the owners are
- Singling out pitbulls or any other breed of dog is ridiculous and not supported by science. I would strongly opposes and breed-specific bylaws. All it does is further demonize dog breeds.
- BSL is [removed] and you can get out of here with that noise.
- As is, we are not a police state. Back off
- These measures should not be breed specific. Some of these measures seem to target bully breeds. I've seen Rottweilers, shepherds and other breeds that were aggressive. Seems odd that "pit bull" is mentioned so much.
- This whole bylaw is shameful and discriminatory. Do not do any of this. Do it for all breeds who have bad owners and are aggressive. Not just "pitty type" breeds

- This SHOULD NOT be breed specific. Any dog could have the force to do harm with its bite. There are multiple other dogs that bite harder than pit bulls that are not listed. These bylaws should be applied to dogs causing problems. One bad apple doesn't make the whole breed bad. You should be ashamed of yourselves for making this breed specific.
- Huge no! All breeds treated the same.
- Training to know and control your pit bull like bread would be a good mandatory option. But a pit bull or similar can not be Label from the beginning as a dangerous breed. That is literally racism for dogs. Myself I have a 100 pound dog which was attacked by a smaller bread causing injuries and a big bill. Pit bulls or similar have power but it is everyones responsible to have their dog under control. From chihuahua to great dane.
- Bylaw offences should be declared only if a dog is proven to have indulged in dangerous behaviour. Dogs should NOT regardless of breed be presumed dangerous and/or be forced to wear a muzzle or be subjected to differentiated laws from other breeds.
- You're discriminating against a breed that has a rep for being aggressive, but is actually listed as more calm than a golden retriever. This is breed specific discrimination. There are no bad dogs, just bad owners, and by having laws in place for "pitbull" type dogs, you are part of the problem. This also shows that people who are scared of large dogs can file complaints against an owner and his pitbull because he can, because of the breed, and not necessarily an incident. Ive been attacked by more small dogs than big dogs. This is ridiculous that you would even consider bull breed legislation. It showcases your ignorance. If you are going to pass any of the above, it better include all breeds, as singling out one specific breed because of how they look, and not what their temperament is, is ridiculous.
- Irresponsible ownership, a lack of stimulation, and ignorance regarding animal behaviour and socialization contribute to dog bites and attacks. Instead of banning breeds, require 1) all dog owners to undergo an ownership programme before getting a dog 2) require greater oversight to rescue organisations and 3) all dogs must pass the Canine Good Companion test. Large dogs may have powerful bites but small dogs get away with a lot of aggressive behaviour too
- No BSL. Fines for owners of ANY breed deemed nuisance.
- Do not introduce breed specific legislation! Bully breeds are not the problem, the humans who train them are! All legislation regarding dogs should apply to ALL dogs and make the PEOPLE responsible for badly trained dogs be held accountable. Good dog parents should NOT have to be punished because they have a specific breed of dog. BSL is disgusting and should never be allowed!
- Pit Bulls are not within the the top 5 of any list for attacks on other dogs, humans, CHILDREN. Nor are they top 5 of any list for jaw or bite strength. STOP THE PREJUDICE AGAINST THIS BREED.
- Having breed specific rules is pathetic and fearMongering I thought the city of Calgary was better than that.
- Replace the word pitbull with bad owner. This isn't about the dog its about the people who own and train them.

- Stop dumping on pit bulls. Chihuahuas are more prone to biting and attacking than pitties. Stop blaming the DOG and start prosecuting unfit owners, and ensuring that there are programs in place to rehab any "nuisance" dogs, and give Animal Protection teams the ability to declare owners unfit. There are no bad dogs, there are only BAD OWNERS, and punishing ONE breed is discriminatory. I've never felt threatened by a pit bull, but I've 100% been bitten and threatened by other breeds, usually small ones. Owners who allow their dogs to be off leash in leashed areas need to be penalized more harshly. Just because THEY know their dog is "friendly" doesn't mean that ME and MY dog won't see a strange animal running at us, and react accordingly. If I'M being threatened, or seemingly in harm's way, my dog WILL protect me and react accordingly. That's not on me or my dog, that's on the other owners who have no regard for the shared spaces and lack of awareness of anyone or anything around them. Good pet owners who know their dogs are reactionary will, and do, take precautions to ensure they don't have any negative experiences, including putting a muzzle on their dog if required. STOP SINGLING OUT PIT BULLS, START SINGLING OUT CRAPPY OWNERS!!!!
- Stop signaling out on type of dog if you want to make this by law do it for all. Small dog are more aggressive and have high incident rates than big dogs.
- STOP with the [removed] breed-specific legislation!!! Deal with NUISANCE dogs because of their actions - not INNOCENT dogs because of the way they look!
- Stop blaming the breed! These are amazing dogs...this is racism at it's best. Any dog can bite. Grow up!
- Animals are reflections of the owner. The owner must be the one who needs rehabilitation and questioned. Dogs can be taken from environment and should be placed in proper home of rehabilitation.
- A dog is the owners responsibility and should pay equal fines despite the breed of the dog
- I do not agree with treating pit bulls/ pit bull look alike differently than other breeds when you yourselves have admitted that they do not have a higher incident rate. In addition, I do not condone the proposed changes that lump any dog that "looks like a pit bull" into the same category, as this is far too open to interpretation and abuse. It is inappropriate for the city to base its nuisance dog protocol on anything other than how an individual dog acts.
- Please DO NOT put in legislation specifically targeting pit bulls.
- There should be no breed-specific rules, rather there should be clear definitions of the term "nuisance" with a focus on observable, repetitive behaviours and there should be a requirement for owner-involved training to insure that the owners take responsibility for the behaviours of their pets
- Breed specific bylaws are not appropriate. The behaviour of the dog and, more importantly, the owner should be the focus of any bylaw changes. Penalizing pet owners based on breed, or limiting the activities of certain breeds, does not address the systemic issue of owner training and management of dog behaviour. It is unfair to the breed to be singled out, when other breeds may pose more risks to the public based on the lack of care or control exhibited by the owner.
- It is not valid that a pit bull's strength makes it more dangerous. There are many large breed dogs just as strong, or stronger.

- Breed specific legislation is PROVEN not to be effective.
- I have been a “pitbull type” dog owner for many years I feel your are unfairly labelling a type of dog. Any type of dog can bite and be considered a “nuisance” as a retired dog groomer I can say I have never been bitten by a pitbull but cannot say that of other breeds.
- [removed] Quit wasting my tax dollars on this and maybe fix some potholes instead!
- I think dogs should be given a chance. Broaden what defines them as a ‘nuisance’. They aren’t all bad apples.
- Ban pitbulls completely. They are a dangerous breed and every argument that says they are not are flawed. They have no right to be kept as pets, they are a danger to other pets and some humans, especially our most precious children.
- All people should be trained to own all kinds of dogs and should be screened before adopting a pet. People are the problem. Not the animals. Start there.
- you Can Not lump dogs that get out and run away to dogs that are deemed dangerous. Thats 2 very different issues. A breed like a Husky could be deemed a nuisance because they are known to escape and run away, but they could be deemed a nuisance and banned from a dog park, when a dog park is the best place to take them. BSL is a joke, and completely uneducated opinions. Tiny dogs can be more aggressive then blockheaded dogs, but people think its "funny". You have to look more in to each individual situation, and not pick on a breed specifically.
- YOU CANNOT DISCRIMINATE A BREED FOR THE FAULT OF POOR OWNERSHIP!!!!!!
- Nothing should be breed specific. A good dog is a good dog and a bad dog is a bad dog regardless of the dogs breed. There should never be segregation towards a specific breed.
- Pit bulls specifically are not the problem. Nuisance dogs are. There should be insurance, mandatory leashing and training for NUISANCE dogs. Not pit bulls specifically.
- Enough of the pit bull discrimination. I will support NO Bylaw based on bread alone.
- Holy [removed] people. Quit making it about pit bull breeds. Any dog can be aggressive and can bite. Small dogs are just as nasty.
- Any dog can be a nuisance dog. To specify all these bylaws are only applicable to pit bulls is absolutely asinine. I know more pit bulls that are trained, loving, and well behaved than ANY other dog breed.
- Outlawing of breed specific laws as they are useless and only create fear of specific breeds
- Any dog can be a nuisance, not just pitbulls! It also depends on who the owner is. There should be obedience training for owners as well.
- I find it interesting that other unpredictable and "strong" dogs such as dobermans are not listed specifically. I would also like to see nuisance dogs such as chihuahuas and other small breeds who are typically untrained, roaming and instigating encounters. Maybe more thought needs to be put into mandatory basic training for all pet owners, and size-specific off leash dog parks.
- Do not discriminate against any dog based on appearance.
- no Breed Specific Legislation, dangerous an nuisance dogs can be any breed, bylaw should apply to all dogs.

- Nothing that is breed specific as all breeds have the potential for being aggressive. Just implement laws in general. Yes a pit bull is strong, but for example a great Pyrenees is substantially larger and could cause way more damage with a harder bite, but they aren't mentioned? Just keep it to a dog thing, no breeds.
- if you're doing to force owners to muzzle their pitbulls then you should also force people to muzzle their mastiffs, German Shepards, Rottweilers, Cane Corsos, just to name a few. All the dogs I just listed have a much stronger bite force than a Pitbull. Please reevaluate your stance to be more in line with scientific facts instead of personal bias.
- To interview both parties if an incident happens. Sometimes little dogs instigate the behaviour and then it's the big dog that gets blamed.
- Breed Specific legislation does not result non fewing incidents or nuisance dogs. More emphasis should be put on owners to go through proper training courses... by reputable organizations that focuses on positive reinforcement training. Breed specific legislation will simply result in owners NOT registering dogs and not following other legislation, such as staying at the scene of an incident to exchange information.. People will still get certain breeds and good owners will be ostracized for registering and unfavourable owners will simply not.
- None of these. The city has no authority to decide what kind of dogs people get. Not ever single pit bull is dangerous.
- Would not masks any law specific to pit bulls as they are very sweet dog's and no more aggressive than any other breed.
- DO NOT SPECIFY RULES AGAINST SPECIFIC BREEDS
- How can you possibly single out pit bulls like this?? Research has showed time and time again that it is the owner, not the breed that poses a threat. Pit bulls used to be nanny dogs because they are so gentle!
- I have never been bitten by a Bitbull. I have been bitten by a German Shepard as well as many little dogs. Pitbulls are not the issue, owners are and putting one bread into a category is lazy and wrong.
- In an incident, a dog off leash should be fined regardless of what dog is stronger.
- All dogs can be aggressive not only one large breed ! All large breed should be looked at
- Courses for the owners!
- Problem dogs are the result of problem owners: THE OWNERS should go for training/be punished!!!
- Stricter laws for all dog owners regardless of breed
- There cannot be more than one nuisance dog per household. Stop breed bias and focus on irresponsible owners instead.
- Obedience training for humans please. Most of the time, dogs are products of their environment
- All breeds of dogs should be treated the same!! It's incredibly sad and uneducated to be trying to in force "breed specific" bylaws.
- Don't brand a specific breed. Dogs have individual personalities and should be evaluated on a case by case basis.
- None. Discrimination has no place on City operations.

- Item that states “There cannot be more than one nuisance dog or pit bull in a household” should be split into two items, you can’t group the two subjects.
- “Obedience training” and care giving assessment for all DOG OWNERS. It is not the breed that is dangerous, it’s how they are raised, trained, etc. Do not ban “dangerous” dog breeds from off leash areas. This would be devastating to the city of Calgary.
- Pit bulls are lovely dogs. Some have been trained incorrectly but that could be said of ANY dog breed. Don't punish a breed for a few bad owners. There are a lot of good dog owners out there. Don't cave into some silly trend and incorrect information about this breed.
- I really do not appreciate the focus on pitbull type dogs. This is completely subjective and discriminatory.
- Dogs declared a nuisance should be banned from off leash parks.
- Please do not discriminate against pit bulls. My small dog was attacked in a dog park and it was not by a pit bull. My dog was at the vet clinic for weeks having surgery and recovering. The vet bills were well over $2000. There are many large dog breeds that are capable of causing harm, not just pit bulls. You cannot judge a dog by its breed, only by it's owner.
- I think this should apply to nuisance animals and not be breed specific.
- When I selected the "declared a nuisance" option, I am assuming there is a tiered tribunal process for that. I am absolutely against any reactionary anti-reality idiocy like declaring all pit bulls a nuisance.
- This is absurd!! Its not the dogs that should suffer its the owners! If you aren't being a responsible PET owner then you shouldn't own and or you should be fined/charged with appropriate fines/charges for the situation. Bylaw/police should do an actual and full investigation to anything that has happened regarding PETS.
- no BSL should be contemplated.
- It should be the City’s duty not to spread misinformation and to make policy through fact and not ignorance. Bully breeds are specific breeds; you would not call a Samoyed a Husky. Why would obedience training not be required for all breeds? Why would owner training regarding dog body language and proper etiquette not be required for all owners? I have witnessed countless dogs that are not a bully breed, that are not controlled by their owner, do not heel and are allowed to lunge and growl at others on the path. People who do not walk their dogs on the right side to ensure humans pass each other, not the dogs. People who use retractable leads and let their dog roam ahead which ensures they have no control over their dog. Training should be required for all. Retractable leads should be banned from walks. And bully breeds should not be segregated. Before the City can place policy and educate others, it needs to educate itself.
- I would agree with the obedience training required for “nuisance” dogs as long as that didn’t lead onto meaning “pitbull” breeds
- Pitt bulls are not bad dogs if they are trained and the owner has control. Any dog will bite or maul anything or anybody. Let us choose what kind of dog we want and then make sure the are properly trained. And I would suggest higher consequences for the owner of any animal should be mandated to have training provided by the city so then you can control the owner and dog. Plus smaller off lease parks for smaller dogs so then they do not need to meet the big dogs. Mine has been bullied and bitten at the park and surprise not a pit bull.

- I do not support anything that singles one breed out as more dangerous than another. While I do not own a pitty breed, how dangerous ANY dog is comes down to irresponsible pet ownership. I've never met a pit bull just wasn't Just as loving and sweet natured as my two Labrador retrievers.
- Absolutely disgusted that the City of Calgary is categorizing dogs based on breed and appearance. ANY and ALL dogs should have the opportunity to live a normal life and if it becomes a "nuisance" then there should be community standards in place but under no circumstance should pit bulls be singled out. Seriously think about the type of standard you will be setting.
- Stop labeling dogs "bad" because how they look. Be no different than labeling a person for how they look!
- A "nuisance" means a designation given to a dog that has been involved in multiple minor offences (eg. being at large, noise, etc.) Is very different then an aggressive dog that bites or attacks other. However your classifying them all together here. So if some one gets a barking complaint for there dog that dog is not longer aloud at an off leash park ? That's ridiculous. A so called "nuisance" dog and an aggressive dog are completely different.
- I don't believe in singling out one bred. I worked as a groomers helper and the little dogs where the worst when it came to biting.
- This is BS. If you know dogs the worst for biting is a Cocker Spaniel. Need to crack down more on dog fights and bad breeders.
- Owner must undergo supervised dog training delivered through an approved professional when a dog has been declared a nuisance.
- Stop picking on the bully breeds. Start with the people not the breed. My pitbull has done nothing but has been attacked by family breeds. It's not the dog it's the owner. Make them responsible. Ban people from owning dogs if they cant take care or properly train their dog
- Responsible pet ownership, this is stupid!
- How disgraceful! Pit Bulls or "bully breeds" should not be subject to this legislation without reason. This is an outrage and this kind of discrimination is not ok. An owner of a dog who is deemed a nuisance, REGARDLESS OF THE BREED, should be held responsible. Do not punish an entire breed. I do not support breed specific legislation. Chihuahuas and smaller breeds show way more aggression than bully breeds, but because of their size this isn't an issue? This is not ok. All dog lives matter and should be allowed the same rights, regardless of their breed.[removed] This is a huge step backwards for Calgary and I am so disappointed.
- Higher fines for repeat nuisance dogs
- Absolutely none of the above, as they are all ridiculous and trying to attack one breeds when ALL breeds can be aggressive and attack.
- none of these are ok this is 100% discrimination.
- Disgusting to even consider a bylaw like this. This is a new form of power hungry. Look at the statistics. Pet owners are to blame for their dogs actions for ANY breed.
- Pit bulls should not be singled out. Focus on individual dogs not one specific type of dog

- What about persons such as myself that are currently in possession of 2 "block headed" dogs, both of which are "bully" breeds, and rescues? What happens to my well behaved, well controlled dogs if my neighbor decides that they are "acting in an aggressive manner"? What about the not bully breeds that are left to bark, unceasingly, for hours at a time but aren't considered a threatening breed because they are smaller than my two bully type dogs? Why not either make off leash areas all leashed or all muzzled instead of making it that a specific type of dog can't be there or defend itself when someone else's less than well behaved, poor recall dog comes at the muzzled dog in an aggressive manner? Not one of the things listed above is considered effective in the control of an "aggressive breed" of dogs, as it used to be Dobermans, and Rottweilers and Shepards, and now it's "bully breeds". Ontario has NOT had less bite incidences since their breed specific legislation went into effect, so at what point does this come across as an owner issue not a dog issue? And I will state as a fact, not a threat, that if someone in an enforcement role set foot on my property to remove my dogs from my possession, it would most assuredly not be the dogs that would be threatening or aggressive, it would be me, and I would face any legal consequences of my decision in a court room with a smile on my face, because I definitely will have thought through every possible outcome of my choices.
- I don't think you should be breed specific at all. I think it should be an across the board rule that if your dog bites there are consequences. The amount of times my dog has been attacked by a smaller dog is wild but because they are small owners are not required to do anything. These owners should have to take their dog to training as well or muzzle their dog. If a small dog bites another dog they are initiating a potentially deadly fight that the bigger dog will always be blamed for and it isn't equitable - Investigation of nuisance complaints must be thorough and accompanied with paperwork, after which a dog should need a specific marker to identify the designation, a specific collar tag colour, for example. Deeming a dog "nuisance" without just cause, a complaint from a community member based on a dog's appearance or breed, rather than legitimate aggressive or nuisance behaviour is not acceptable. Similarly, dismissing complaints because a dog doesn't fit a certain "profile" must be eliminated - a small dog who bites repeatedly but is allowed to continue the behaviour in public without the owner being forced to adhere to the same bylaws and fines outlined is unacceptable.
- Holding the owner and not the look/breed of dog accountable.
- I think this breed targeting is ridiculous. All breeds having well behaved and nuisance dogs. I believe any breed that has been declared a nuisance (and I'm assuming this means they have been caught doing something - biting or other) should have rules put in place. Saying a whole breed of animal can't go to the park or has to be muzzled is outrageous; it's discrimination.
- NONE! This is absolutely outrageous that bully breeds are STILL being targeted..in this day and age I can't believe Calgary would propose this. It is totally the OWNER of the dog and not the dog itself. Disgusting Calgary
- Pit bulls should not be discriminated even if they pack more strength, it's up to the owner to provide proper training and guidance to all of their pets

- None this is not acceptable and you are targeting a specific breed incorrectly. Basically dog racism!!!!
- Dogs should only be required to wear a muzzle in public or not allowed in dog parks if they are aggressive not just a nuisance
- This is [remo ved]and should not be allowed !!!
- None. Put a muzzle on yourself for suggesting such an absurd idea.
- NONE OF THEM, You don't think covid has some enough damage to the human mental state. And now you want to enforce some bogus law for what ?
- Pitbulls and like dogs aren't the problem, as is pointed out so clearly in bold. So why should they suffer over some power tripping city officials wanting to make a name for themselves. Leave the dogs alone, we can't ban one species or race just because you want to make them the poster-dog for "bad dogs". This is discrimination at it's finest, and in this day and age, discrimination should NOT be tolerated.
- Pit bulls are the problem. Irresponsible dog owners are
- The owners should be searched for their living state of where the dog is from and investigated on how the owners are as ANY DOG can bite a human if they have bad owners.
- Punishment should be for bad owners, not by breed. My shepherds have been instigated against far more often by small dogs that lack training. You're basically saying if a chihuahua starts a fight with a pit bull, the pit bull is at fault because it is bigger and stronger. You are giving power to the bully in that situation. I have literally been chased in residential areas by off leash Shih Tzu dogs biting at my dogs heels. If my dogs defended themselves I'm now the bad guy because I was following the rules and my dogs should have just let themselves get hurt? Long story short, breed bans are dumb. Training for bad owners is better regardless of dog breed or size.
- Leave the dog alone if not doing anything!
- This is ridiculous. I thought Calgary was better than this. Stop the hate against pit bulls.
- It is absolutely ridiculous that pitbull or bully breeds are considered "nuisances" the breed isn't the problem. I believe that and specific dog that is known to be aggressive or has bitten or attacked someone should wear a muzzle in public whether it be a chihuahua or a German Shepherd. Making an entire breed have to wear a muzzle in public or limiting the amount of a breed per household is pathetic when you have absolutely no idea how those dogs act.
- No law/bylaw should ever be breed specific. Any breed of dog is just as likely to be a nuisance as the next. My golden retriever will guard and protect my home, kids and myself just as fiercely if not more than a pit bull or any "blockheaded" dog.
- We as humans do not want to be judged by our looks so why would we do it for dogs!! Don't judge a book by its cover! All dogs are capable of being aggressive and have the potential to bite so when that happens depending on the situation and circumstances do what needs to be done! Why should innocent animals be punished for the behaviour of bad owners!!!'
- Why are you assuming only pitbulls are the problem? Look at the owner of the pitbull not the breed. Get a clue and what a stupid idea to muzzle a pit bull because they are pitbulls. Shame on you!

- Dog license and Microchip should be made mandatory for all the medium and large breed dogs (small dogs like chihuahua etc. bites are not life threatening) instead of bringing breed sepecific legislation.
- The ability to remove the “nuisance status” of a dog by going through mandatory food training programs. A breed of dog should not be automatically targeted just because it is stronger, that is an extremely unfair judgement especially because pit bulls are not correlated to more dog bites.
- DO NOT TAKE BREED, SIZE OF DOG, ETC. INTO CONSIDERATION. A BITE IS A BITE. AGGRESSION IS AGGRESSION - IT DOESNT MATTER IF IT IS A ROTTWEILER OR A CHIHUAHUA, IF A DOG BITES IT IS THE OWNERS WHO DID SOMETHING WRONG AND THEY SHOULD BE HELD ACCOUNTABLE.
- Dogs are just dogs , the problem is and always will be responsible owners regardless of breed . Banning or restricted breeds does not work . Need fair laws that apply to all breeds !
- What did pit bulls do to you? It’s not the breed, it’s the owner. By passing this bylaw you are tearing families apart and hurting innocent dogs just because they’re pit bulls. What about my friend with a senior pit bull cross who has arthritis in his hips? Is he a nuisance? Is he a danger to the public? Get out of here. This is insane. You can’t just assume that pit bulls will bite others. I’ve been attacked by a border collie who bit my leg so hard that fat came out, where’s the bylaws pertaining to them? What kind of backwards society do we live in?
- Pit bulls should not be treated any different than other dogs. German Shepard’s and other large breed dogs are just as “strong” and “dangerous” as pit bulls. There absolutely should not be a larger fine for Pitbull owners or separate insurance. That is extremely unfair. I do think they should be trained though, I think all large dogs should have to be trained. This is extremely unfair and I am very disappointed that Calgary sees pit bulls as such a big threat. Pit bulls are AMAZING dogs 9/10 of the time just like ALL dog breeds. This makes Calgary look very discriminatory.
- The stipulations against pit bull breeds is rather ridiculous. Nuisance dogs can be any breed and stems from bad owners. Don’t punish the breeds.
- None of these are necessary
- Breed-specific legislation is biased and I don’t agree with any restrictions regarding specific breeds ie. Pitbulls
- Mandatory training for ALL dog OWNERS. There are no bad dogs.
- It is not the dog. It is the owner that needs to control the dog. Fine the owner.
- There should be no restrictions on nuisance dogs of behavioural problems aren't present
- Investigation of owners to deem their ability and knowledge to be a responsible pet owner and the ability to remove dogs deemed to be in abusive or neglected environments. The owners are the problem!
- [removed] Clearly they don't know anything legitimate about any dog breed, let alone Pit Bulls (which isn't a breed, by the way. If you did any research, you'd know that.) Maybe start looking at higher fines, muzzling in public, prohibitions to dog parks to ANY DOG BREED that's considered a nuisance INCLUDING small dogs. Have higher fines, possibly jail time, for owners who have pets that do any sort of damage, whether its property or personal. Maybe if the City actually fined and charged properly, people would start listening.

- I think a dog that has had a history should be kept out of off leash. I DO NOT agree a dogs behaviour Can be based on their breed
- As a certified dog trainer I do not think pit bulls should not be discriminated against. They were originally bred to be nursery dogs to watch over children. Golden retrievers bite more than pit bulls. Breed discrimination has no place in this city!
- pit bull ban
- Pittbulls are not agresive! Please do not categorize the breed. Aggressive dogs are because of the owners and training, they can be any dog. Do not judge the Pittbull breed!
- Clumping pitbulls in with "nuisance" dogs is perpetuating the misunderstanding of the breed, and thus their continued abuse. I thought the city of Calgary was better than this, as quite frankly even the wording of your question and options are suggesting that pitbulls are inherently bad dogs. As you have provided literally no scientific evidence, this question is misleading and takes the blame off of BAD OWNERS who do not train or exercise their dogs.
- Pitbulls should not automatically be deemed a nuisance and be subject to this discrimination. This is an active breed that loves to socialize. They need walks and play time in the park. Owners of any dog deemed a nuisance, regardless of the breed, should be held accountable. I do not support BSL!
- Leave bully breeds alone.
- There should never be breed specific legislation. a toy size dog to a giant size dog can cause the same issues. its all about training and owners having proper control.
- Don't discriminate against the dog.
- Seems pretty biased. If one breed needs to be muzzled why not all.
- Requiring "pit bulls" to be muzzled doesn't help anyone. It has been shown that they don't actually have a stronger bite. They are not more dangerous. I will not be visiting Calgary if this bill passes. A lot of people will not support a city that is discriminatory on dog breeds. It's 2020, we need to stop stereotyping breeds. People want to feel welcome in a city and this does not make Calgary seem like an inclusive and welcoming City.
- Obedience/social training required for all dogs.
- No breed specific legislation. Higher fines and consequences for any repeal offender.
- Don't single out pit bulls, single out the owners who train them to be this way and fine them! Restate the options to say owners who have trained their dogs or lack of caring for their dogs will fine dining and prohibited from off leash parks.
- Dogs that have been in a situation and proven in said situation can be muzzled and/or restricted after it has been proven to be nuisance and not before. Not 1 specific breed
- To single out one breed is absurd. Deal with the owners with ANY dog that shows aggression. All dogs have the ability to cause sever damage with a bite, not just pit bulls.
- None of the above.
- From my experience the dogs that cause the most problems are owners of dogs under 25lbs (No specific breed although Jack Russell terriers have been the worst I've seen by far). They dont train

there dogs at all then there little cute dogs goes out and attacks other dogs. It gets hurt from the bigger dog defending its self. Mandatory human license for dogs, the people need to take dog training classes before they are ever allowed to buy a dog. Second make breeding permits and inspections programs.

- Pit Bulls not to be accepted on City of Calgary Area
- Bully breeds should not be deemed a nuisance unless they have an offence, on a one by one basis, the same as every other breed. These animals are not the problem and shouldn't be punished. Only owners of bully's who are deemed a nuisance should be held responsible. The same as owners of every other breed.
- Nothing of the above should be put in place for pitbulls. You can't single out one breed
- All dog owners should have to follow the same guidelines regardless of the breed of their dog. It is often small dog breeds that cause big problems because their owners think it's ok to allow them off leash even when they display negative behaviour because they are small. If a small dog off leash comes after my large dog who is on a leash, my dog should not be punished for protecting itself just because he can do more damage. Singling out specific breeds is ridiculous.
- This is the owners fault that the dog is this way. There are no "dogs declared a nuisance" unless the owners have done a poor job training. An alternative would be if a dog has acted poorly (due to its owner) then the owner should be responsible for any of the damage and they should be offered training. If they are required to pay for training on their own accord they will most likely give the dog away or make it stray due to not being able to afford it which will only increase the problem.
- Please don't be "that city." Dogs are what you raise them to be, and if you're a crappy pet owner, you'll have a crappy dog, whether it's a chihuahua, a great dane, or anything in between.
- There are no bad dogs just bad owners why us the dog suffering because its owned by an idiot. Imprison the owner after fines.
- Neutral Breed Legislation has a better chance of actually curbing aggression issues. Breed Specific Legislation is based on misleading information and lack of education. There are false statements in this survey about the subject and has no place in our city. Any by law should be breed neutral and apply evenly across all citizens and their pets. Perhaps a reduced licensing fee for those how have taken obedience training with their dog (regardless of breed) through reputable training facilities would curb much of the issues and concerns. Please do not go the breed specific route I looked up other municipalities to see if there is evidence it works and found that the opposite seemed to be true there was no curbing in aggressive dog behaviour. It would be a waste of resources and money. Education and addressing actual offenders is a better route
- Punish the owners not the dogs.
- This is extremely prejudicial towards pit bulls. It's not the breed it's the OWNER!!! Out of all the dogs that have snapped at me none have been the pit bulls I have encountered. These measures would allow Calgary Community Standards to seize pit bulls with impunity. These are totally biased towards one particular breed type. Which is utter BS.
- None. Penalizing a breed is no acceptable. Do the research and realize other breeds actually cause more bodily harm than any others listed here.

- Don't single out one breed. Punish the owners and not the dogs. not
- Do some research! Why is this so bias? Pitbull's are not the only dog with "Strong bites". Why you excluding German Sheppard, Doberman, Rottweiler, Chow Chow, and Labs. All these should have more training, more liability and be muzzles too. This is racist towards one breed type and might looks like a "pitbull" type. Why is this survey open to anyone outside of Calgary to fill out? Shame on you, Calgary!
- Pit bulls should not be deemed nuisance dogs because of their breed. The same rules should apply for all breeds. I am so disappointed and sickened that the city of Calgary is even considering such discrimination.
- The suggestions involving "nuisance" dogs are excellent however I see absolutely no need to be singling our dogs deemed as "Pitbull". Yes they are strong, however there are certainly a large number of large dog breeds that have equally strong capabilities and potential for bit as pitbulls. I don't believe it does the community any good when breeds are singled out. There are bad apples in all breeds. However singling our nuisance/dangerous dogs specifically, regardless of the breed, would make me feel safer in the community.
- Actual enforcement against little dogs that bite. My dogs and daughter have been bitten to the point of blood three times in city parks due to little dogs. A Jack Russell of leash took a chunk out of my leashed Rhodesian's neck. The owner just laughed, as my dog bled. My daughter's thumb got bit blood running down her hand owner of Basset hound just picks up dog and walks away. My daughter bit through her jeans down the street blood down her leg by a wiener dog. My old Shepard cross on a leash gets attacked by two Boston terriers wounds to his ears and side. Once again owner just walks away saying good thing you have a big dog. Bylaw did nothing in any of these cases. In their defense I was too busy dealing with the aftermath of my injured child/dog and going to the doctors/ vet to follow the offender to their home. But when calls went into bylaw I was just almost laughed at because "it's just a little dog" hello the physical scars are still there the mental scars are still there. You need to take small dog attacks seriously and stop ignoring them!!!
- This is not a well worded question. Nuisance or aggressive? Running at large or barking but not causing any injury or threats should not be lumped with dogs that do. No matter the breed they should be treated the same, deal with the behaviour and not the breed.
- If your going to change the by laws for one specific breed doesn't that in a sense sound "racist " the bully breed is an amazing dog and a loyal companion I am more worried about my child being bit by a small breed dog chihuahua or something like that then any large breed
- These fines and restrictions should apply to ALL dogs!!!
- I don't support any of this
- None of the above should include a specific breed. Higher fines for any owner of ANY dog with risky behaviour and mandatory training within a three month period with a temporary ban until dog has been tested for poor temperment and/orrisky behaviour.
- I am not a dog owner but pit bulls are the nicest dog. If they are aggressive there should be high fines for the owner and possible abuse charges because pit bull are not mean dogs unless abused

- Dogs regardless of breed that have a history of biting, should be addressed. Singling out a specific breed will not fix the problem. A “potentially” dangerous breed of dog is not a dangerous dog until it has committed a dangerous act. Fines, legal action and punishment should be based on the incident.
- I do not support breed specific legislation, targeted toward pit bulls, or dogs who have a similar appearance. To me, making the assumption that all pit bulls are dangerous and need to be regulated, is very similar to assuming that all people of colour must be criminals. As you have stated, "pit bulls are not involved in more bit incidents than other dog breeds". It is unfair to responsible pet owners, with lovely animals, to enforce breed specific legislation.
- Place more fines and restrictions upon specific owners of any problem dogs. DO NOT unfairly target a whole breed.
- Nuisance dog label be applicable for all dog breeds, including toy breeds who are more likely to bite/attack than pit bull breeds. Toy breeds aggression is severely overlooked and rarely dealt with due to their small nature.
- Nuisance dogs, YES. Bully Breeds, NO. As a dog park DAILY frequenter, these are not the dogs that are typically the issues. The majority of Bully owners take extra care to maintain proper control and training of their animals BECAUSE of the prejudice that already surrounds them. The dogs that attack my dog on the regular? Poodles, Golden Retriever, small dogs and the worst?? GERMAN SHEPHERD. So your whole BSL is BS frankly
- How about the owner?? It's never the dog it's the [removed] owner that's responsible for allowing or creating a mean dog! If aware then I would take my own precautions to make sure my dog was safe and so were others while I was out. I don't believe any dogs should be off leash regardless of size or breed! Chihuahuas are worse than pit bulls!! Sad you are going after a breed! Kinda like attacking one RACE!!! It's WRONG The owners are responsible for their dog.. just like we assume that about our kids too
- Higher fines for owners who fail to control their dogs, regardless of breed or type of incident. This can include removal of the animal to be trained appropriately.
- Proper training should be required. Many of these other suggestions are draconian.
- ANY dog with aggression or bite history should be a nuisance dog, bully breeds should NOT be grouped into this category. Owners of nuisance dogs should be responsible because it is 100% the owner's fault, not breed specific. I am so ashamed to be Calgarian right now. Do NOT bring in breed specific legislation.
- How about stop blaming the breed and start doing REAL research. You have a 98% chance of being bit by a small dog, then any Pitbull breed. Calgary needs to step up their game and get more knowledgeable because you CANNOT ban one breed based on nothing..
- Start looking at how aggressive and how much a nuisance chihuahuas have become, and also require there to be rules for children at high areas of dogs to not be running up to a strange dog expecting it to like children. Provide training sessions for people who just got their first dog and they want to teach them how to socialize and train properly so there are no aggressive behaviours.

- Quit naming a breed. Is a shepherd/husky/Pomeranian/chihuahua/etc. Bites a person, then a muzzle should be required depending on severity of the case. Blaming a dog breed is as bad as blaming a race. All are capable of the EXACT same thing. FYI a Kangal has the strongest bite force at 743 PSI. An American Pitbull is only 235 PSI. Perhaps better research would have given you the proper information.
- Keep your dog home if it's not good in public. Common sense. Owners should take obedient classes to be aware when a dog is uncomfortable !
- Offer rehabilitation for dogs. Classes are good but need to be implemented at the right time. Banning the breed is a terrible idea though.
- None, because it is not the breed. It is the person. Can we start nuzzling and making certain people and behaviors prohibition in certain places? No? Then stop trying to make 1 breed the point of your issues. Statistically Golden Retrievers attack more children. Smaller dogs, such as chihuahuas, are far more aggressive, but smaller in stature. Stop trying to make breeds the problem. It is humans. If they cannot properly provide training to ANY BREED OF DOG, then they should not be allowed to have the dogs. It is NOT A BREED ISSUE BUT A HUMAN ISSUE. Stop being prejudice against breeds that really are only an issue when the owners are incompetent.
- Nothing. All owners and dogs should have the same guidelines. Stop stereotyping pitbulls as a vicious breed.
- Breed specific legislation is incredibly discriminatory. It stigmatizes dogs that as you have said in this note, do not bite at higher rates than other dogs. I would be extremely disappointed with Calgary if they were to choose to enact breed specific legislation.
- Please note the subjectivity in this assessment: "It is important to note that while pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents than other dog breeds, the reason they are listed here is because a pitbull's strength allows the potential for a more severe bite." There is no legitimate primary evidence in either animal behavioural science or statistical representation (as you've noted) that support this inherent bias. It is purely opinion and bias that highlights Breed Specific viewpoints, not evidential research. This discussion needs to be fact-based, not unfounded opinion-based. As a public body, highlighting a breed highlights fear and does not, ethically, portray the facts. Please remove references to Pit Bulls as there is no evidence and, therefore, no requirement to identify a specific breed.
- Pit bulls SHOULD be allowed to go to the dog park freely like any other dog and not be discriminated against. What about other breeds that can do large damage like Rottweilers and German shepherds. This is ridiculous and discriminatory.
- no breed specific legislation . It is not supported by evidence and this kind of discrimination is wrong . Any dog can have issues in the hands of the wrong owner. Charge neglectful owners dont discriminate against a breed.
- Specifying a single breed is ignorant.
- Focus less on breed and more on irresponsible owners! It's always the dog with the owners that are 20 feet away that are causing problems regardless of breed

- I do not support breed-specific legislation. It is problematic to treat a dog differently based on appearance and just creates more fear. I fully support further legislation for nuisance dogs though I would like to see categories or some type of grading system for “nuisance” a dog that is anxious and barks often at home is not the same as one that has bitten another dog at a dog park for example.
- I honestly can't even believe the options I just read. The City of Calgary should be ashamed of yourselves! Time for you to have a qualified professional handle animal bylaws rather than a paper pusher with a bias against a specific breed! Funny that you even mention that there is no evidence of this breed causing more bites..something seems fishy here. Any bylaws that change should reflect to ALL breeds! The city of Calgary ignorance is a nuisance to me, let's change that instead.
- No breed should be targeted over another breed. Pitbulls and their relatives are the most cuddly and loving dogs. I've seen more biting and terror dogs in other types of dogs. This is a case by case and it's usually the human behind the dog!
- NONE of these!!!
- Look at what happened in Montreal for this bylaw. And for extra support look into PIJAC Canada (Pet Industry Joint Advisory Council)
- Pit bull/ pit bull like breeds are no more of a problem then other dogs, demonizing them and fining their owners more will not solve the problems you are trying to solve.
- Leave the pit bulls alone. If a dog is a repeat offender then it should have to go, don't target a breed because the bite can be worse but they don't bite more than any other breed of dog
- I am so confused how your site states “ *It is important to note that while pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents than other dog breeds, the reason they are listed here is because a pitbull's strength allows the potential for a more severe bite.” this quote and you are basing this all of off of what exactly? What about German Shepard's, Doberman's, rotties? Why are the “pit bulls” being singled out. What's going to happen to service or therapy dogs that are considered “pit bulls”? This is a Disgusting display of incompetence and ignorance from whoever is proposing this. If you want to create a safer Calgary you need to focus on not the dogs but the humans. Make it mandatory for ALL dogs to go threw training why only one breed? It just doesn't make sense. I am a certified dog trainer and I don't run the classes to teach the dogs I run the classes to train the humans how to train their dogs, they just need guidance. You should be more worried that literally ANYONE can own a dog, have some sort of screening process or something so you can insure the welfare of the dog before they are even purchased. This would greatly reduce the amount of back yard breeders and reducing the amount of strays at the same time. I really hope there is some actual research and someone with more then half a brain like the person who wrote this garbage in charge of what happens.
- These dogs are not a nuisance. They are like any other dog. Irresponsible owners make for untrained dogs
- [removed] This is not a breed problem it is a owner problem
- <https://www.treehugger.com/the-truth-about-pit-bulls-myths-dispelled-4863833>
- Some of these i would agree more with if nuisance was redefined. I don't think that just because neighbors think a dog is noisy that it should be defined as a nuisance.

- What kind of people do you have sitting there specifically targeting pitbull? Mine's 10 years old and as never even barked at the neighbour! grow up as stick to ANY dog declared a nuisance! I've been bit 3 times at the dog park by a chihuahua, once a golden retriever.
- Instead of breed-specific bylaws, why not make the bylaws towards all dogs! I have personally been attacked and/or bitten by smaller dogs (chihuahua, dachshund, shi tzu, pug, Pomeranian, yorkie) more than I have been attacked and/or bitten by any type of pit bull! I have not once been bitten nor attacked by a large dog (eg: pit bull), but many times I've been attacked AND BITTEN by a small dog! So maybe put your bylaws on those smaller, extremely unpredictable little dogs & educate yourself further in regards to pit bulls and you will learn that the breed was known as the nanny breed (great with children) and also learn that all dogs just need full on training in order to be part of society! Instead of blaming the breed: blame the owners and fine the owners for not taking the time to properly train their dog; whether it's a chihuahua or a pit bull!
- It is not the type of dog that is the issue. It is the owner. I was able to train my tiny 3lbs dog to attack. If a dog has offences on behaviour then mandate a fine, additional insurance, enforced training classes
- Pitbulls are NOT the problem!! Deal with [removed] owners! Not a specific breed!!! Consult trainers and other animal enforcements before making stupid laws like this is indicating
- Separating dogs based on their breed is not okay. Promoting good dog ownership for all dog owners of any breed is an alternative to keep the peace and all dogs happy.
- This is [removed] to target one breed. Do your research on this subject. It's not the breed, it's the irresponsible owners, go after them but the law should be the same for ALL breeds. I've been a Rottweiler owner for 20 years, currently owning 3 including an intact male who is the most gentle, respectful dog ever. I'm so sick of this breed legislation created by people who have no clue about the breed in question. You must sleep with a light on to keep the boogy man away too.
- Education is key. Funds put aside for training and educational purposes. I really don't support singling out a dog breed
- The city needs to make blanket bylaws for ALL dogs that bite. There is no reason why a larger dog should face harsher punishment when there are SIGNIFICANTLY more aggressive smaller dogs. I believe that the correct route forward is to move forward with "nuisance" labels that apply to all dogs. A significant amount of dog bites (in other animals) occur in response to a bite, often by an untrained small dog. Please do not fall for the false narrative that people should be more wary of pitbull breeds. All owners should be EQUALLY responsible and equally culpable for their pets.
- Nothing that puts any bully breeds in a different category than other dogs
- Leave pit bulls alone. Have the same rules for all!!
- All dogs being treated equally. The only nuisance breed are humans!!
- Do not isolate one particular breed type - base fines on the actions of the dog.
- Pit bulls should NOT be singled out. It should be generic dog bylaws.
- This CANNOT be limited only to pitbulls.
- They are the best of dogs and so cuddly, they deserve the same animal rights as other types of dogs!

- This is [removed]. Pit bulls are amazing dogs. The sweetest temperament ever. I've had many breeds and pit bulls are THEE best with kids and other animals if socialized this is prejudice and [removed]
- Don't discriminate against one breed of k-9. That's just ignorant.
- Aggressive dogs should not be allowed off leash in the first place.
- additional insurance reqd for nuisance dogs and dogs who have previous incidents of vicious or aggressive behaviour, NOT defined by breed or by appearance. EVERY dog I have been bitten or attacked by in my life time has been non-pitbull/staffordshire bull terrier/etc types (been bitten by a collie, attacked by a black lab, chased by a basset hound and any small dog has vastly more attitude than typical pitties ever will in a lifetime). It is wrong to penalize a group of dogs because of appearance. Poor owners make bad dogs of any breed.
- I think it should be mandatory the nuisance dog owners be required to take training with the dog. Also please note that for my answers, I am including nuisance/pit bulls as one category; if someone wishes to own a dog, they need to be responsible for it's behaviour .
- None of these as it is not a breed issue
- None of the above!
- PLEASE for the love of God stop targeting pit bulls. They are not dangerous. I work with dogs everyday at work and I have never once been bitten by a pit bull or any bully breed. What you need to do is look at the owners, I have been bitten time and time again by small "purse dogs" that are not taught they are a dog. Instead just a fashion statement. People have coyote wolf crosses as pets and you don't think that isn't more of a threat than a domesticated dog? Why don't you target the wild animals people have as pets that are an actual threat to dogs/people vs going after pitbulls. Look into the UK bully ban and see how well that's working out for them. IT IS THE OWNER NOT THE DOG.
- Any breed can be a nuisance dog. Breed Specific Legislation has been proven not to work, next breed will be shepherds, Rottweilers the statistics just continue on. I thought Calgary was one of the cities that advocated for that.
- I absolutely do not support any sort of breed discrimination legislation and do not understand why the city would be singling out "pitbull" breeds.
- Dogs declared a nuisance must be muzzled in off leash parks, but not required while walking on leash.
- Some examples of dogs that have been deemed 'dangerous' in the course of history -German Shepherds, Rottis & doberman's. It's not necessarily the dog breed, it's the owners. Owners are not responsible and do not do their research before acquiring one of these 'stronger' dogs. If anything, it should be mandated that ALL dog owners from Chihuahua's to Mastiff's and beyond should be required to take obedience classes. Let's face it, Chihuahua's are assholes and can be just a vicious, people aren't scared of them because they are small. But believe me they can induce as much emotional trauma as a large dog, as well, they could inflict physical damage. It's not bad breed's it's bad owners. If this bylaw is passed, how does that affect someone who already owns 2 blockhead dogs??? Do they have to give up one of their family members?

- Making laws specific to pit bulls is idiotic and not very thought out. I'm ashamed that this has to be said.
- I think that obedience classes should be required for all "lock jaw" breeds.
- While I understand that pit bulls have strong jaws and lock jaws when they bite I believe all dogs behaviour has more to do with their training and their owner than the breed. I have met several pit bulls that are more friendly and outgoing than shitzus. My rescue dog has been lunged at while walking her on leash by wiener dogs, shitzus, chiuwawas.
- There should be no breed targeting/wording in the bylaws as it has been proven that breed does not affect bite potential. Cases should be reviewed individually based on dogs history.
- Do not pass BSL! It does not work!
- A dog of any breed can be vicious. Penalize the owner not the animal. The owner creates the problem, not the breed. I've owned nothing but "pit bulls" and never had a problem. They are by far the most loving breed of dog. Its the same principle of horrible children. The parents are responsible for their children.
- Breed Specific Legislation is NOT THE ANSWER. Deal with nuisance dogs case by case. Do not punish an entire breed!
- I support breed specific bans
- I strongly believe owners need to be more accountable for dogs period. The breed of the dog doesn't matter I know labs and collies that are very aggressive. Owners need to train their dogs and the city needs to blame Owners not dogs. A discrimination to a pit bull breed is stupid. There are bad owners and bad parents to children but everyone can get a dog.
- STOP BEING BREED RACIST. It's not the dog, it's the owner. Where are you recommending responsible pet ownership classes.
- all dogs can be reactive, lets not group pit bulls into the stigmatized group it already has been
- There is absolutely no evidence to support that pitbull type dogs have higher or even stronger bites than other breeds. Ultimately the focus should be cracking down on backyard breeding and ensuring when pets are adopted out only responsible pet owners can get their hands on them. This could stop a lot of animal abuse and also crappy dog owners who don't take the time to train. I raise service dogs for PADS and I can assure you I fully understand how much work it takes to have a well behaved dog. In order to do this I went through a rigorous screening process that ensures I'm a good home for these pups. Even with all the training not all of them make it. Just like not all pitbull looking dogs are bad. I've encountered so many that are big sweethearts. Historically they were trained to be service dogs as they are very trainable and loyal pups. They had to stop using them due to public perception. Bylaws like this make it so hard for the responsible dog owners who have put in the effort to raise a sweet animal that would have been overlooked by far too many people purely based on myths that are grounded in valid and reliable data. Please reconsider any silly bylaw that participated in BSL, it only does a disservice to our city!
- I do not own a pit bull breed but I find the discrimination disgusting and the thought that the city would force a family that might have 2 of these dogs to relinquish a family member absolutely horrifying!!! I know they are strong but my child had a nasty bite from a small dog and never a large dog. I have a neighbor with 4 of the so called nuisance dogs and they are all the biggest babies so you know where this law can be stuck!

- All owners of all dogs held accountable for their behaviour
- I don't agree with ANY of these statements, the city has absolutely NO EDUCATION on pit bulls and should do more research on them before you post stupid shit like this. It is the OWNERS FAULT, not the dogs.
- This is 'racism'. If they have no higher number of dog bites you are punishing them for their appearance in which they have no control over.
- It is unreasonable to categorically single out pit bulls and other dogs with similar appearance. If a dog is a nuisance, put the blame on the owner, not the breed. It's incredible that singling out breeds is even being considered. Surely you know better than this in 2020.
- No breed specific laws
- why are we signaling out pit bulls. We need tougher bylaws on the owners who allow there dogs to be aggressive.
- dog exhibiting dangerous behaviour should be taken by CCS and rehabilitated/trained and not given back to the owner. The owner is the cause of the behaviour.
- Leave the pitbulls alone
- I don't believe that singling out one breed is responsible or fair to those breeds and their owners. It is ownership and how they are raised that determines how a dog behaves. I have had small dogs (chihuahuas, terriers) act way more aggressively towards me than large breeds such as pitbulls or German Shepard.
- [removed] Sure, if someone is injured, take the dog from them and enroll it in some obedience rehab. Fine or charge the owner with negligence, but this goes for any breed. Stop targeting our staffing. Dogs don't get to choose their owners and how they are raised but they should have rights too!hey
- Mandated/ controlled education for owners that wish to adopt a statistically aggressive/potentially dangerous breed of dog prior to adoption with continuing education requirements.
- Don't ban or interfere. If someone breaks an existing law then fine and or prosecute
- Provide obedience training for dogs that are an actual threat, not a perceived one. This should be subsidized and the responsibility to pay should not be on the owner. If a reoccurring issue, aggressive dogs should have their homes assessed.
- Nothing further should be done at this time. Any breed can be a problem not just the breeds identified above.
- just ban them so many deaths and I jury by thes dogs.
- Don't bully a breed! There are aggressive dogs of every kind if they're improperly trained.
- There had been more bites from chihuahuas than pitbulls. The thing is that they don't do as much damage so it isn't reported. Also, in my experience, it is the owner being irresponsible and the dog nit being properly trained, not the breed specific. I say if a dog attacks a human, it be euthanized and the human gets jail time plus fined.
- Stop acting like the breeds are the problem and not the owners.

- No breed of dog should be singled out to require a standard of responsible pet ownership. All problem dogs are caused by irresponsible owners, be it lack of training or ignorance to how your dog is responding to a situation. There is a risk of bite with any animal that has teeth and it is completely irresponsible to pretend that all bite incidents are the same shows a clear level of ignorance on the part of the survey developer. While some bites are caused by a lack of training/ socialization many dog bites are because dogs have been put in situations that cause them to feel unsafe and the humans around them lack the education to read the situation. All dog owners should be educated so they can raise happy and healthy dogs. It is absolutely ignorant for the city of Calgary to single out any single breed or type of dog for heavy restrictions especially while admitting pitbulls do not bite often. Maintain the standards of the beautiful city of Calgary, do not invoke breed specific legislation. Education is the only way to combat fear.
- To say you can have only one pitbull is ludicrous.
- Owners of these so-called nuisance animals, should be held accountable and not the dog because of its breed. That's like saying all people of a certain race can't enter a store or public gathering cuz historically groups of them have been more involved in crimes than other races. Pull your head out of your ass, and make this for all breeds not just a specific breed. Small dogs are more likely to bite than big dogs yet when they do bite, owners are not told they have to put their little shit dog down. But a big dog owner will get that. This is sooooo unbelievably stupid. It's the owner not the breed!!!!!!
- Training for owners of dogs that are considered a nuisance. Wellness checks to ensure that nuisance dogs are being properly cared for. It's the owner that makes the dog.
- None of these. This has been proven again and again that it is a myth that these dogs are dangerous. It is discrimination. It is pathetic.
- Create more awareness about not petting strangers' dogs and dog behaviour and etiquette with others' dogs in general. People (owner and/or the one approaching the dog) are more often the problem.
- Do not make it breed specific, make the rules apply to the pets and owners that violate them.
- If you want to put a ban on a type of dog include little rat dogs. They are the ones that bite.
- Dogs considered a nuisance by who? Someone who walks by and doesn't like the look of my pit bulls? If you'd like to be discriminatory I'd start with German Shepherds or Chihuahuas some of the worst dogs I see out and about. Stop focusing on my breed due to poor education. They are some of the most sensitive, loving, happy breeds I know. If this is passed I and so many other pit parent parents will gladly move and boycott your city.
- Pit bulls are not the problem the owner is. Training classes only work if the owner continues to practice at home. These obedience trainings should come with a pass or fail. If failed the owner would need to repeat the course.
- Bad owners are bad owners. Remove the breed specific differentiation.
- Pitbulls are not the problem. I literally live with one he is the sweetest little dog you will ever meet in your life. His biggest threat is he will kiss you to death whereas I have a friend with a little ankle-biter dog and guess what, you can't walk into that house without getting bit. The problem is not the dog it is the owner and how it is trained. They're going to enforce anything it should be stricter guidelines.

for those who want to adopt a pet. Maybe background checks on people who want to own what you guys deem as "dangerous dogs" I can think of a longer list of humans who deserve to be muzzled rather than Pitbull breeds

- Take the pit bull [removed] out of this. You guys flame to be anti radish yet you're willing to single out an entire BREEDS because you think they're stronger. What about German shepherds? They're really strong? What about chihuahuas ? They're known to be aggressive and in your standard a "nuisance". Crack down on bad dog owners. Not the dogs themselves. But singling out a specific breed cuz you're scared of the way they look is EXTREMELY hypocritical
- It is more appropriate to identify animals that are dangerous by their behaviour not by their breed. All animals have the potential to bite and maul. There needs to be enforceable restrictions/conditions placed in the pet owner not the breed of the animal. Be specific, if the human is irresponsible with the care and development of their pet, they may not abide by any by-law put in place. These owners need to be restricted to behavioural modification classes and proof of improved behaviours. This idea of penalizing, stigmatizing, and punishing the animal without cause is barbaric. All animals have the potential to be trained and respected no matter their lineage. ALL aggressive animals should be managed, trained, rehabilitated where appropriate and the same goes for the owners.
- I don't think you can assigned nuisance to a dog simply by appearance. It is discrimination there should be a prior offence
- The owners of nuisance dogs should have to be trained for how to treat their animal or should be given a hefty fine like in the thousands. Its nit the dogs fault its the owners fault they train the dogs to be like that. They should be jailed for the way they treat their animal.
- Fines to the OWNERS with MANDATORY TRAINING for the owner regarding ANY AND ALL BREEDS, its not the animals fault it was improperly trained
- I support NONE of these
- Shame on you for declaring "pit bulls" problematic. Poor ownership is problematic NOT a particular breed. I am not a current dog owner but have owned a dog (West Highland Terrier) in the past. I have zero issues with pit bulls. To be honest they are one of my favourite. When walking city paths I am bc more likely to greeted by an aggressively behaving small breed than I ever am by a pit bull and there are many in my neighborhood. Problematic and nuisance dogs determined by behaviour and not merely by breed should be subject to increased fines etc but NOT simply based on breeds. Those that support breed specific law such as this are poorly educated on the matter. Shame on the city do Calgary for targeting breeds vs behaviours. Other cities with "pit bull" laws have not resolved their nuisance dog issues because it isn't about the breed it is about the OWNER.
- Obedience training required for dog owners if identified as owning a problem dog
- no additional restrictions for "pit bull type" dogs. BSL is not effective.
- not specifica to pitbulls...any dog who bites is apprehended....don't just single out one breed!
- you can't use Pit bulls. As a term. Dogs in general are a reflection of the owners. The owners are the problem. Have them assume responsibility. My bully loves us unconditionally and has never had a mean moment. With that said he would protect us with his life.

- STOP BSL! You're singling out breeds of dogs that you believe are the issue. You're forgetting a number of breeds in your list that have just as strong, if not a stronger bite. Stop singling out specific breeds and hold ALL dog owners to the same standards. This BSL bs is sickening and I'm disgusted you would even bring it to the table. Treat ALL dogs and owners fairly. Hold ALL owners accountable for the same actions and get your head out of your [removed]
- Look at each dog as a case by case. Breed doesn't define how dangerous or how strong they can bite. Neglectful owners should be penalized.
- this should not be breed or appearance specific, it should apply to any dog no matter, suze, shape, color or breed. Owners should be trained as well. It is never the dog, it is based on the owners training or lack there of.
- Breed specific bylaws are discrimination. These issues are owner and training problems.
- Don't single out pitbulls
- There should not be classified as a nuisance dog at all. A nuisance dog can be any breed.
- Don't apply these to specific breeds, apply to all breeds of dogs.
- This is the stupidest thing I have ever heard of. Breed specific legislation is not needed in Calgary and Pit Bull breeds are not the problem.
- These rules should apply to all breeds
- Depending on severity of behaviour/actions the right to euthanize dangerous dogs providing it is a committee decision. All of what I have chosen must apply to ANY breed.
- Fines for bad owners who do not control their dogs in public
- None of these. Dogs don't bite unless provoked - it doesn't matter what breed they are. People should respect dogs and realize that they also have personal space and if you invade that it make them feel in danger then they'll bite. That's your fault, not theirs. They don't understand any better.
- Small dogs require muzzles for biting
- Stop putting a specific breed on items. There are many other types than pit bulls that cause issues and saying this is going to cause a political storm.
- Any dog that displays violence can be rehabilitated in one way or another. Make it easier for support groups to start and continue to operate. Most of these work on a voluntary basis and as such should qualify for government assistance. This would be a cheaper option for the province as a tax break cost nothing and the private organizations assume the costs associated with the rescue.
- Pet owner should be responsible for their pet. Just because I own 2 "pit bull" type dogs that are well behaved doesn't mean that I should pay for the sins of many!
- None. Nuisance dogs are not breed specific.
- ANY dangerous dog should be muzzled while off private property. Let's not punish good dogs of certain breeds but rather restrict the problem dogs, regardless of breed.
- I would love to see more fines for people walking their dogs off leash in on lease areas!
- To ban a breed from a dog park is only going to cause troubles, people will find new places to make off leash!
- if you are going to require extra insurance for one breed you better do it for all or none!
- How about it's not the dog's fault the owner is an [removed]. Don't blame pitbulls

- I highly disagree with all of these
- Dogs declared as dangerous, not nuisance. Do NOT single out 'Pitt bulls'. The reason stated that these type of dogs have a stronger bite has been consistently disproven. German Shepherds and Rottweilers have a stronger bite. All dogs, regardless of breed or 'type' have the potential to be dangerous. Each case needs to be individually judged and not based on a 'type'.
- Breed specific legislation is costly and inefficient. Singling out pit bulls and pit bull type dogs hasn't worked in other jurisdictions. Calgary's pet bylaws have been championed for its success worldwide. Let's not mess that up please. I'm proud of our approach to pet ownership in Calgary.
- I do NOT believe that Calgary should be bringing in any type of BSL. BSL does NOT work and that has been proven. Why, would you allow appearance to be an option?! So will a pug have to be muzzled and the owner only be allowed one? Since they technically are bully breeds. This logic is completely scewed. All of these answers are biased - and blatantly against "pitbulls".
- Higher fines for bad owners who neglect or abuse dogs! There's no such thing as a bad dog just bad people
- Why are you singling out the dogs? ANY dog can be a problem if the OWNERS are irresponsible. Ensure that the owners are properly trained/vetted before purchasing and/or adopting.
- ("pit-bull") *It is pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents than other dog breeds, AND EVERY DOG THAT HAS A BIG HEAD.... allows the potential for a more severe bite. This is breedism. It won't happen in Calgary i promise.
- More penalties for negligent dog owners
- Other jurisdictions in Canada have been rescinding breed specific language in their animal control bylaws because they are proven not to work. Why is Calgary going backwards rather than forward?
- Breed specific legislation is biased and unfounded. Pit bull breeds are not always aggressive or vicious. Any legislation must apply to all breeds and must address the issues of concern, not target specific breeds.
- The type of nuisance must be stated (ie fought with other dogs) currently the definition, which includes being "at large" is too vague
- There should not be dog specific rules.
- Punish bad owners and not the dog.
- All of these options are stupid. I have had people put their hand through my fence and get bit by my dog, that doesn't make my dog aggressive, it says that the person was stupid and invaded my dog's territory. Or if a dog barks "too much" at home and gets the designation of a nuisance dog, how does wearing a muzzle at the dog park help the dogs anxiety... It only adds to it. Or if that dog is then not allowed in a dog park again how is that dog supposed to learn to be quiet around other people, it won't have the ability to expell its build up energy or be given a chance to just be a dog. I have also never seen a naturally aggressive pit bull... This is including all dogs in the category. First they don't have the strongest bit, there are other dog breeds with stronger bits, and second they are a breed that just wants to please their owners. If a pit bull is aggressive its been trained they way, that person should be prohibited from owning a dog, because they will train any dog to be aggressive. My definition of aggressive is that the dog attacks on command and it's the owner that is constantly telling the dog to attack, that is an owner problem, not a dog problem and not a pit bull problem. The pit bull will be very easy to untrain in that behaviour once taken from the aggressive owner. Put a muzzle on the owner and prevent them from owning any dogs. A dog very rarely will attack unprovoked, in the dogs mind there is a reason for the need to attack. In the cases where there is clearly no reason (no one provoked it, no medical reason, not a training issue etc.) then yes that is an aggressive dog and in that case the owners are probably going to be understanding of the dog being put down. But if a dog has puppies and she is separated from them she has every right to get back to her puppies in the way she thinks is appropriate. If a child is unsupervised with her and smells like her puppies then she will think that it is that child that has harmed them and will defend her family. This is not an aggressive dog... This is a dog being a good mother and owners not respecting her.

- Zero tolerance (ie mandated destruction) for dogs that bite people.
- If these generalizations were applied to humans, there would be an outcry of upset people. To generalize and discriminate against one breed is a terrible thing to do.
- Discrimination against one breed is wrong!
- why are you targeting pitbulls specifically. you need to change "pitbull" to ALL dogs in general. it's NOT the breed, it's the damn owner which what you should be putting more focus on. the owner. some people just shouldn't be dog owners.
- Any dog that has bitten another dog or person should go to obedience. Second offence should be muzzled. Rules should not be breed specific.
- All dogs at dog parks should be neutered. All pit bulls should be neutered.
- Pit bulls are not the problem. Dog ownership should be a privilege. Needs to be mandates in regards to port dog ownership. Maybe all dogs should go through certified obedience training.
- Definition of a nuisance dog needs to be amended. Equating a dog that barks (any small breed) to a dog that bites (any large breed) is inappropriate.
- None of these!!!!!! It's owner issues not the breed and to specifically single out the breed is ridiculous!!!!
- Its not the breed its the owner racism against one breed is ridiculous
- It's not the pitbull that is the issues, 99% of the time it is the owner. Owners should have to go through training and obtain a certificate of responsible pet ownership before being able to acquire a pit bull or other dog deemed a nuisance. A fee of some substance should be paid for this course. Owners who really want a specific type of dog will pay a decent monetary sum to own the breed of dog they want.
- How about HIGHER FINES FOR ALL DOG OWNERS INVOLVED IN OFFENCES. STOP BREED SHAMING CALGARY, RASCISM DOESNT LOOK GREAT ON YOU. LEAVE PITBULLS AND RESPONSIBLE OWNERS ALONE!!!!
- Dogs declared a nuisance should be required to do more training.
- I agree with Breed Neutral Legislation, that pertains to specific incidents not pertaining to one specific breed. Responsible pet ownership above all.

- Small untrained dogs do more biting than any other dog go after bad dogs not breeds, what about sheppards , rotweilers, dobermins,dalmations, the list goes on why single out pitbulls, what an awful shame
- Owners of dogs declared a nuisance, owners of dogs involved in a ticketed incident, and owners of pit bulls and other larger breeds must complete an accredited responsible dog ownership training program. Dog owner licensing.
- How about make these laws for kids? Less who are a nuisance? Leave pet owners alone if you are not going to worry about shitty parenting.
- I strongly disagree with anything that targets a specific breed ie pit bulls and other bully breeds.
- I don't think you should signal out one breed. As small dogs bite too. All dogs should have obedience.
- Why is this being asked for breed specific. Educate yourselves before having such uneducated surveys
- Publish actual bite numbers by breed, require DNA testing of all dogs that bite to ensure accurate statistics.
- It's the owners fault not the dogs fault poor dog owner ship leads to poor dog behaviour
- Are you kidding me BSL???? I'll never spend any money or come to Calgary every again is BSL passes and I will be strongly boycotting anything and everything to do with Calgary. This is insanity. Prejudice. Limit nuisance dogs only, pitbulls are lovely dogs when given proper care and training. I owned a recuse for 12 years and NEVER had any any issues. Please reconsider these draconian measures.....
- How about we deal with issues as they arise, and do not discriminate against ANY dog breeds. The COC should not be involved in BSL as this will cause more issues than good because it will always be one sided, no matter the situation. There will always be bias which involves the pitbull type dog being in the wrong when that simply will not be true or accurate.
- Dog owners required to take a course on how to care for their animal. It is not the breed but the human that causes the problems.
- Why change? Approximately 1000 reported dog bites in Calgary in 1985 and 260 in 2003. Calgary's dangerous dog legislation was implemented in response to the bite problem. The results speak for themselves – a 70% drop in the number of OVERALL dog bites. The measures Calgary has taken have shown results, and set a model and a precedent that should be implemented across Canada. <http://www.dpctz.com/CalgaryModelDefendingDogswebsite.pdf>
- Base fines on dog and owners actions not breed
- You can't go after one dog breed. It is the owners of the dog that breed the bad behaviour. Years ago it was German shepherds that were considered dangerous as they were associated as being aggressive police dogs, then it was rotweilers that were considered dangerous as people were using them as guard dogs. I personally find the smaller dogs to be more the nuisance dogs and at risk of biting. People also need to to take responsibility and not go up and pet someone else's dog without permission.

- Calgary has long held the opinion backed by statistics that higher fines don't work, nor do breed bans. Scientific evidence does not support these changes.
- Any dog that bites a child no matter the breed, size, color, shape, should have the owners fined and behaviour training course completed.
- mandatory training from specified training facilities for all dogs. Lower licensing fees when do this. If don't do mandatory training licensing fees are outrageous.
- Blaming a particular breed when it is stated they do not have a higher occurrence of incident than other breeds is a disgusting suggestion. Pit bulls are not the problem. Pet owners who are irresponsible are the problem. All pets have the potential to be a nuisance.
- It's discriminatory to focus on pit bulls, why not all dogs showing aggressive behaviour? The fact that you are singling out one particular breed is disturbing and borders on racism... what's your next step? Not allowing certain ethnic groups in parks too?
- This is wrong
- pet owners of nuisance animals need to go training on how to be a responsible pet owner.
- Training and education for owners of dogs - of ANY breed - who engaged in problem behaviours. Why are you targeting pit bull breeds when the data shows many other breeds show problem behaviours?
- Higher fees for owners wanting to keep dogs that are not spayed or neutered
- Ridiculous you'd target pit bulls! A bad dog is a bad dog regardless of size! Any rules for problem dogs should apply no matter the size. Target the owners of bad dogs with fines, seizures, mandatory training - regardless of the size of the dog!
- Nothing that singles out the pit bull breed EVER
- BSL has been proven INEFFECTIVE in municipalities across Canada. Focus on the DOG and not the breed.
- Nuisance dogs should be non breed specific!
- Higher fines for small dog owners who's small dog attacks my 'pit bull like' dog and forces me to get stitches for him and pay a vet bill. Don't be closed minded it's 2020, we're past this.
- Obedience training required for ALL dog breeds
- Large dogs (ie with strength to cause harm) should NOT be punished, OWNERS should be punished. Owning a large dog is a bigger responsibility and that needs to be enforced. On top of obedience training being required for a pet license, if there is a severe incident, they should be required to take further training. If more than 1 incident possibly a home visit as well (at cost to owner) to ensure a good environment for the pet. Lots of public education around this will deter people who can't handle the responsibility of owning a large animal.
- This should not be breed or type specific. Any dog fined with an offense of biting or dangerous predatory behavior should be muzzled in public. No limit to number of bully breed dogs in a responsible home. Dogs that learn to play with other dogs are less likely to bite a human.
- This proposed by-law is RIDICULOUS. It's 2020, Council, give your head a shake.
- Pit Bulls are NOT the breed responsible for the most fatalities in Canada. I am STUNNED that Calgary is swaying from its WORLD REKNOWNED BYLAW. Absolutely stunned. This cannot happen. It is absolutely NOT breed but the training (positive reinforcement) that should be emphasized for all dogs, especially large breeds, not just the breed you are targeting.

- How dare you discriminate against pit bull breeds. [removed] Just because they look different “scary” doesn’t mean they are. They are like every other dog, loveable, caring, playful, loyal etc. All dogs can bite I’d provoke or feel the need to protect themselves or their owners NOT just pit bull breeds! How about enlightening the public, the haters and those that have opinions without facts that pit bulls aren’t the problem, it’s them. The people who try to destroy things they don’t understand or are scared of. Change the stigma on a dog who people love to hate!
- Don't blame the breed of the dog.
- Do not discriminate against “pit bull” this is not ok
- To set specific rules for certain breeds is prejudice and ridiculous. It will not reduce bites or dangerous animals. The focus should be on the owner, not the breed.
- Education for owners. IT IS NOT THE FAULT OF THE DOGS. OWNERS MUST BE EDUCATED TO WORK WITH THEIR DOGS. I am a dog trainer and there are so many other ways to go about this. You will be destroying so many lives. What if you worked with dog trainers like myself to come up with a citizenship program, where all dog owners are required to attend classes and a seminar, for dogs that are labelled problematic, and this doesn’t just include pit bull types, they must reach the second level in the citizenship test in order to get their city license. Each year, there is an assessment by a qualified force free dog trainer and then go on a case by case basis. It must be a force free trainer as any other type will cause MORE behaviour issues and attacks. Please contact me if you require evidence on this. I am also willing to work for free to create this program with you. My advice to you Calgary... is be different, be the city that changes the standards for pit bulls. Yes, there are some bad apples, but that doesn’t just mean pitties. Pitties are actually incredibly cuddly and loving, they just need the right training. Please please be the change in standards. Invest in people, don’t punish. Don’t be like those dog trainers that punish dogs, you do, and you’ll be punishing the people of Calgary, and the relationship will be lost. Please reach out. [personal information removed]
- Anyone who thinks pitbull are more or less likely to bite than say a Chihuahua is a complete and utter idiot. Pit bulls are not a problem dog type. Give fines to the owners of ANY bad dog owners. Don't punish a breed for bad owners.
- My pitbull is SIGNIFICANTLY MORE CALM than any Pomeranian or Chihuahua I’ve ever seen. You’re stupid if you think they should ever be muzzled in public. It’s 2020 and I cannot fathom that this is still an issue. Good dogs come from good owners. The breed is irrelevant. Do some research before implementing these garbage laws.
- nuisance dog should be better defined here. What constitutes a "nuisance"? A dog that someone finds scary based on appearance? A dog that barks? What size dog that barks, because Pomeranians are small but irritating. Not overly dangerous.
- We have a pit bull and she is the nicest dog! Smaller dogs tend to be more aggressive actually but because they are “smaller” they get away with it! We took our pitbull for a walk and a lady with a small dog attached our dog on leash! Go figure! I 100% disagree with targeting bully breeds it is discrimination! I can see if ANY dog has been in multiple altercation being called a nuisance yes but not ones only based on breed when they have never offended. Not fair!

- BSL has been proven ineffective, bylaw offences should be evaluated equally regardless of breed, owners held responsible, do not punish pets and owners pre-emptively.
- If you are handling a dog that has bitten a human (most likely out of fear) it is likely this dog is suffering from a behaviour disorder. A behavioural disorder has a emotional which is a psychological or behavioural pattern outside of the norm for the species. There is often an emotional component. An obedience class is the last place these animals should be placed. Preventatively, if there is a mandate in place that dogs are required to obedience classes these should be approved positive, science based training classes, otherwise they will do more harm than good.
- It is rascism to bully a specific breed!!
- Re-offense by same owners should limit their ability to get dogs until they prove they have received basic dog training by a city approved trainer. The owner is responsible for handling of the dog.
- Pit bulls are not the problem. People are the problem. This is so disappointing City of Calgary.
- Punish bad owners rather than an entire breed. This is ridiculous
- There should not be breed specific legislation!
- Society is moving away from prejudice and discrimination and singling out one from another. It is astounding that Calgary is considering moving in the opposite direction in regards to pets.
- this is dog racism and any dog if not trained properly is an issue.
- Breed specific regulations are not based on science but rather emotion. Responsible pet ownership irregardless of breed and public education is key to preventing incidents involving dogs bites.
- You should not be judging a dog by its breed or looks. If anything you should be judging the people who have said such breed, to see if they are even capable to looking after said such breed!
- Evaluate the individual that owns these “nuisance” dogs. Most times it’s the owner that causes an animal to behave this way. Or owning a dog they cannot handle. Don’t blame the breed! I’ve seen more “nuisances” from little dogs than any large or bully breeds
- Hey [removed] how about you leave this alone. This is no different then saying only a certain race of people commit crimes or only a certain race of people commit terrorist attacks, just cause its an animal the discrimination os no different. Just keep blowing the cities budget on the stupid art you put up around the city that no one likes, you are useless. You just lost my bote at nexy election although you never had it. Look at the owners of the dogs. Maybe make it a bylaw that if you live in Forest Lawn you can't own a breed specific dog cause we all know nothing good comes out of Forest Lawn. Tbis survey is [removed] why not let people comment on ever question you ask, such as using a bandana system so kids know its okay to approach a dog. If a dog bites a kid cause it grabs its tail, that kids parents should be punished for not teaching their dumb kid to grab a dogs tail. Parents need to teach their kids to ask for permission. Just like how kids used to be taught before [removed].
- Stop with the BSL. It has failed in other jurisdictions why even contemplate it now?
- No speacil rules aka "discrimination" for breed specific dogs and their owners including pitbulls and other bully breeds.

- Literally every dog is different. Have measured in place to monitor and provide assistance to owners with previous offending dogs. Don't punish a breed or a look.
- Demonizing pit bull breeds is nonsense. Other large breeds are capable of as severe bites. Owners and the public need more education on the care and behaviour of these animals.
- You cannot discriminate against a dog because it looks a certain way. Way to be racist against animals.
- These questions directly targeting specific breeds (pit bulls) are offensive and naive. The city should be ashamed for putting forward such options!!! I am not even a dog owner but, I live next to a dog park and I have yet to see pit bull or similar looking breed look even remotely dangerous or misbehaving.
- Mandatory training classes for nuisance dogs. If owner can not control dog, rehoming.
- NO NO NO NO NO NO NO NO NO NO!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
- Obedience training for ALL dogs, not just pit bulls
- I don't feel you can make rules based on the breed of dog or what they look like? Any dog can bite if they want to, it's not just 1 breed. I don't know how many times this needs to be brought up about dogs and one breed being pinpointed when most of the time it's not that breed who attacks or bites. There are no bad dogs there are bad owners and that's where the problem lies, not in the dog. So the dogs should not be punished because they have horrible owners. Also you don't know what a dogs life have been like, maybe there is a reason they are the way they are, it's just like humans. You put something on your face that limits your movement and ability to drink after being active and see what it's like. I think pin pointing one breed or animals that have "the look" is not fair to the dogs or owners. If your gonna pinpoint aggressive dogs then pinpoint ALL aggressive dogs, not a breed that has a bad reputation because of assholes using them for the wrong reasons. It's 2020 people let's start being better.
- I think that the best way to go is to NOT label breeds or types of dogs. There should be no specific breeds mentioned at all and ALL dogs Will be treated equally. I have owned Staffordshire Bull Terriers all my life and have found that they are the most loving,attentive and trustworthy dogs especially with children. There has been absolutely no incidence in Canada that I know of involving a purebred Staffy Terrier hurting or biting anyone ever. Please re evaluate your proposal and do not use breed specific wording. A Nuisance dog is a nuisance and all dogs should be treated equally.
- Why pit bulls why not Shepard's and Dalmatians or every dog has potential to harm punish the deed not the breed
- Breed specific legislation should not be introduced. I do not support any bylaws specified to a particular breed.
- If pit bulls are being singled out like this then the government of Canada justice system should be muzzled and euthanized and fined for killing innocent people and stealing money from hard working people and calling it justice ! This is so [removed] ridiculous
- This is a joke and shouldn't even be considered.
- Stop picking on pitbulls
- Treat all breeds equally.

- German Shepard's have a stronger bite more pounds per square inch. Amend this to state that breed instead.
- Why the focus on pit bulls? Indigenous people are incarcerated at a higher rate than non indigenous people, should we ban them? All dogs should have training and all dogs can have problematic behaviour.
- I don't believe there should be a law specifically to one type of breed of dog , any dog can be potentially harmful if treated poorly.
- As someone who can has worked in an animal related field for a very long time, I can you tell you I'm 100% honest when I say that I am 10x more afraid of a chihuahua and Chihuahua mowers than I am of pit bulls or any bully breed dog
- This is a ridiculous bylaw. Isolating pit bulls is a fools errand. Montreal tried this and reversed it. Please don't discriminate on pit bulls. I love all dogs. I've only been bitten twice in my life and one was a German Shepherd and the other a mixed breed. Never a pit bull.
- Obedience training Manditory for all dog breeds
- Stop being a bully to a breed. The government has successfully started a race war between humans. Perhaps understanding that its the humans are at fault, not the breed of dog.
- Abstain from breed specific policies
- Just gonna say this pit bull vendetta is not going to go well. It's not the breed! I even say this after personally having to put my pitbull mix down recently for major aggressive behaviour that we worked to fix for two years but in his case he was too traumatized to become trustworthy. There ARE responsible owners with pitbull-like breeds. This is fear mongering to me and down right wrong to charge more fines based on breed type.
- [personal information removed] I teach many dogs to bite for various services but I also teach dogs not to bite. I have tons of insight on this subject and would love the opportunity to come speak to you's and give another perspective. I think there's some things being missed that are important to hear. [personal information removed]
- Don't don't discriminate against pitbulls. If a dog attacks a person or animal. The owner has failed the dog.
- I think this ban is petty and should be labels to all dogs not pinning out pitts like stated they aint number 1 in incident so why pick on them ..
- Any nuisance dog should be sent to obedience class. Many pit bulls are wonderful pets with responsible owners. A push should be made for what responsibilities are for responsible owners and obedience classes should be mandatory for any adopted animal... every decade has a dog breed that is feared ... it's not the dogs ... it's the owners ... educate and make training services available to them
- How about nothing for the pit bulls & something for the small dogs that bite my pitbull.
- Stop blaming the breed!!!! Start holding bad owners accountable. Any breed of dog can be a biter. All of the bylaws targeting Staffordshires and Pitbulls are wrong. ALL dog owners should be held accountable for their animals. ALL breeds are good until BAD PEOPLE get involved. Bad owners should be fined and punished, not the dogs.

- Limit how many people can have, instead of obedience training when getting the dog there should be a screening prior to getting the dog. Also breeders need to be responsible and accountable that the dogs go to suitable homes, and they should be limited to how many they can breed.
- No muzzle.
- The problem isn't the dog it's the owner. The city of Calgary is looking at this wrong. Maybe enforce mandatory training sessions to any animal owners who've had an incident where there's been an injury. Said owner could go through training to properly care for that particular dogs needs. It has nothing to do with a specific breed. Don't limit what good pet owners can do please.
- Owner education, just as teenagers have to do a course to babysit, owners of dogs should also have to pass a pet ownership course. Usually it is not the dog fault if they are a nuisance, but ill prepared/bad owners.
- If a dog is involved (any breed) in a bite they are banned for a year from dog parks and must wear a muzzled when in densely populated areas.
- Fines and or obedience training for all unruly or nuisance dogs with numerous incidents.
- I strongly believe that this should be taken action CASE BY CASE. Calgary, it is sad to see that this is happening to animal "breeds" it is all in the owner and how you RAISE your dog. Seems to me and also to a lot of people, that this is pretty much saying because you are a certain color or race, you have to be punished without committing a crime. THINK people that are alone by themselves, have no kids, only that dog that is with them every single day of their lives now you just decide to make a bylaw for a specific breed? This should NOT happen to any breed i have been bitten by a chihuahua so what? This is absolutely ridiculous and SAAAAAADD to see from my city. DO NOT generalize.
- Targeting pit bulls is wrong. Breed Neutral Laws is what science and common sense suggest. Also this survey has been shared in a hate group that targets pit bulls and their owners. They were encouraged to fill this out in order to manipulate the stakeholders. The medical studies from the USA are not only level 4 in evidence they are faulty junk science. The CDC Along with every veterinarian professional agency on Earth speaks against legislation targeting and discriminating breeds. Extra insurance on owners guarantees that pit bulls will be needlessly surrendered in shelters by owners who can't afford the unjust extra burden. Target the human end of the leash. Not the dog breed. Actual science along with the victims of other dog breeds show that any medium through large sized dog can and has inflicted just as much damage, if not more than pit bulls. Targeting breeds for any discriminatory policies I archaic and unjust.
- None of these
- No discrimination against pit bulls- if you're going to make a bylaw, keep it the same for every dog
- Leave the "pitbulls" alone and leave the rest like you said it..... Just because a "pitbull" has the jaw strength to cause harm, does NOT mean they WILL cause harm. If a pitbull is involved in an incident and earns a nuisance title... then by all means, they should follow the same rules as any other breed. Should a black man have to pay more insurance to walk the streets, or leave their sweaters, purses, hats etc.... at the counter when they shop? That answer is NO! Use some common sense.

This is PATHETIC!! Clearly NO ONE in this “bylaw office” has ever owned or been around a “pitbull” type dog before. It’s always sooo clear because they’re always saying crap like this!

- Background checking owners. 85% of dog owners that have a "nuisance" dog, are the main reason for this "nuisance". Check the owners and force them to take classes. They are the cause of the dog being a "nuisance".
- Don't discriminate against pit bulls or bully breeds. It's not the dogs that cause issue. It's [removed] ownership and neglect.
- that no household have more than one nuisance dog
- If any dog NON BREED SPECIFIC has ANY bite history or the owner had issues with keeping their dog home, that specific owner should be penalized. NOT an entire breed or a dog that may look like a bully breed ex, in Manitoba many German bred Labrador retrievers were sized because they also resembled the large blockhead short coat of a " pitbull" to the uneducated eye. You can't punish a dog for an irresponsible owner.
- How about higher fines for dogs that are not spayed/neutered and banning breeding of all dogs as shelters are often full.
- Just because they look aggressive does not mean they are. This is a ridiculous law. Maybe the yappy little dogs should be muzzled because I am definitely more worried about them biting vs. a bull breed.DO NOT SUPPORT THIS IDEA AT ALL!
- Fines for owner's of the dog that are deemed unfit allow the dog to be put into obedience classes/training for a chance at rehabilitation it is bad owners not bad dogs or bad breeds any dog can be a vicious dog if not trained in a respectful and responsible manner.
- You cannot ban a breed. You cannot label them all as bad and call pitbulls a nuisance. They are not. All types of dogs have the potential to be dangerous. If an dog shows they are dangerous then it should be dealt with case by case
- I do not support any breed specific legislation. It unfairly targets good animals just because of how they look. I have a mix breed dog who to some “looks intimidating”. I have seen many dog owners scoop up their small dogs when they see my dog, even though he has not even approached their dog. It is discrimination pure and simple. It is no different than racism but for dogs. Just as you can't tell if a person is good or bad by the colour of their skin, you can not tell if a dog is well behaved simply by their stature. And yes, even dogs that “look” scary need exercise and socialization, so it is important that they be able to go to dog parks as well. One solution I have seen, that could work well, is to have some area of dog parks that are fenced off and designed for small/timid dogs. This way people who are concerned about their dog interacting with larger or scary dogs, can have a safe place. If they don't want to use it they don't have to.
- Breed specific bylaws are unjust, these should be scrapped immediately. I also can not support the nuisance bylaws as offered as it seems too easy for escalating behaviors between neighborhood residents. I see a great start with it but a dog who barks at home and is declared a nuisance definitely should not be barred from a dog park where they can get away from the stress of being at home. But seriously stop creating breed specific bylaws.

- I agree that there should not be more than 1 nuisance dog in a house hold, however I DISAGREE that should extend to pit bulls without nuisance status. Also a household with a nuisance dog should not be allowed to have other dogs (even if the other dogs dont have nuisance status)
- No breed is worse than another all dog breeds should be treated equally and fairly.
- Please specify how many minor offences and of what nature. Dogs bark, if you have a nasty neighbour that reports you for your dog barking multiple times are you then saying that dog won't be allowed at a dog park? Makes no sense. For dogs with aggressive behaviour such as biting (NOT pit bulls) if it is first offence then mandatory obedience classes, second offence muzzle In public places, third offence confined to private property. Specific steps will identify the dogs the rules should apply to instead of arbitrarily targeting breeds. Small dogs are often more aggressive than larger dogs, bite strength does NOT correlate to behaviour and personality.
- None of these things. No new laws!!
- No new bylaws regarding pitbulls because they are good dogs who love and care for they family. My dogs have safe me at my lowest point and make me feel safe and loved. You can't take that love a way from a pitbull or they family because they are so much more than just a dog they are people world.
- The dog itself is not there is an offence or a bite, fine the owner and have the dog take obedience classes. Do not ban or put down the dog. The dog is not the problem.
- Come up with a better definition of "nuisance". Is it a dog that is aggressive? Or just a dog that has escaped or barked? A dog that has escaped doesn't need to be muzzled, but a dog that bites should be.
- Has responsible pitbull owners , we are so hurt by this survey. It is so BSL faced. All dogs deserve to be treated the exact same. BSL does not work and that has been proven time and time again . Our dog does not deserve this negative profiling the city of Calgary is doing right now. It's the owners responsibility not the dogs. It's not the breed it's how they are raised.
- Rehabilitation for dogs that are not properly trained, socialized, etc and have had minor OR major incounters with aggression. a dog should not be euthanized for an owners lack of ability or willingness to train their pets
- Pit bulls aren't always the problem. More dog bits happen from small dogs. This is a ridiculous.
- I think the better solution is interviewing all of the candidates who have previously never owned a "Pit bull" type. But also MORE information needs to be made public as to what the city of calgary will think a "pit bull" breed is as there are many dog breeds that are not bully breeds but have similar characteristics.
- Owners of dogs deemed a nuisances should be required to go to dog training classes. Don't blame a dog that's never been trained, owners need to take responsibility.
- There should be NO breed specific laws! Only dogs who have bitten/attacked/charged/etc should be a nuisance. ALL dog owners should be required to complete dog training!
- Zero of this [remove] is okay.

- As someone who has volunteered at an animal shelter, and has extensive experience with dogs, I will NEVER support discrimination against pitbulls (or any other dog breed). Pitbulls are sweet and loving like all other dogs. A dog is only dangerous if it is neglected and/or abused. A dog that receives proper care and exercise will never be a danger to anyone. You would be better off making it a law to muzzle humans who don't take care of their dogs than pit bulls. Truth be told it would be more prudent to have mandatory testing or checks for dog owners to ensure they are properly caring for their pets.
- Make citizens pass a minimal test when they get a license for their pet.
- None as you can't single out a certain breed
- The fact that the city of Calgary needs to single out 'pitbulls' is DISGUSTING, so now we are being 'racist' against dogs on the basis of their looks??? I'm appalled! I have seen small dogs at the dog park come up to my pitbull cross dog and bark and bite his feet, my dog does NOTHING but runs away and nothing is stated in the above 'choices' for small vicious dogs that make my dog's feel bleed and their owners just laugh it off because their dogs are 'little'? I am embarrassed that the city of Calgary feels the need to even ask these questions. Pitbull bites are worse than any other breed? have you ever been bit by a German Sheppard or a Husky or a Lab? Are you kidding me? You should be ashamed of yourselves for even allowing these RIDICULOUS choices to be available. Pitbulls must be muzzled in public because of the way they LOOK? so I can't walk my dog on my street or at the dog park without a muzzle? This is the most ridiculous thing I have ever read in my life!!! I thought Calgary was a great city to live in, but if these RULES come in place, I'm moving my family out, this is disgusting. If I choose to have more than one pitbull like dog, that is my own choice, this isn't a dictatorship that the city will or will not let me have animals in my house that I paid for and pay the damn taxes for!!!! Who thought of these ideas? Where are these pitbulls that are SO out of control in this city that are causing this conversation? I fought against this kind of treatment of these dogs in Montreal, and now it's here???? This [removed] better not pass, myself along with many many of my friends would be embarrassed for this city, especially on how many pitbulls type dogs are around the city and get rescued all the time. Whoever wrote this survey should go and educate themselves on how Pitbulls act and what type of dogs they are. And if you're going to make these RULES for pitbulls, then you better make the same ones for any type of little dog and medium dog and large dog. And there is no way that I would EVER agree to allowing someone to tell me how many 'type' of dogs I can have in my house. Unless you pay my mortgage and property taxes you can [removed] it. I am so angry and disgusted right now. Guess you just want more protests to be happening.
- I would be completely disgraced by Calgary bylaw to see breed-based discrimination laws against pitbulls and pitbull-resembling dogs.
- No breed specific legislation. Please increase fines for bad owners not "scary" breeds.
- Consider all dog bites equally. The psychological trauma of being bitten multiple times by a small breed can be significant. In addition all animal bites regardless of the size of the animal have potential for infection. Any dogs that bite are to have the situation reviewed and if determined to be a 'vicious' animal based on why it attacked.

- This is absolutely disgusting. The City of Calgary should be ashamed of themselves for explicitly targeting a breed of dog. A dog is a dog. Their bite strength is an excuse to push personal bias and propaganda that a single breed of dog or class of dogs who exhibit more muscle definition. Out of all the dogs I have ever interacted with, pit bulls have always been the most well behaved because they are naturally obedient and compassionate dogs. They have extensive sociability training and are command-oriented on strong reinforced leashes and restrained by harnesses because of the propagation of the belief that these dogs are more harmful than any other dog out there. This is disgusting prejudice. Absolutely disgusting. Do better Calgary and city officials. Do your research and look at the history of the breed, look at their natural temperament and what outcomes there are from dogs who have had the appropriate training and a nurturing household.
- It is wrongful to target specific breeds of dogs for behavioral problems. These problems ALWAYS lie within the training of ANY breed of dog weather it be a chihuahua or a Great Pyrenees.
- This is ridiculous to lay such stipulations on a specific breed. I do not support any “pit bull” specific measures.
- BSL legislation is not fair and should not be used. Every dog should be treated equal from Chihuahua to German shephard to pit bull. If dog is repeat offender its the owner that needs education on how to correct dogs behaviour
- Don’t discriminate these breed. This is pure ignorance
- Special courses or classes required before being able to own a bully breed, to prove the OWNER is capable of treating the dog in a proper manner. The focus should be on the owners, not on the breeds themselves.
- Breed specific is not the way to go we need to punish bad owners, no breed is worse then any other.
- don't judge bully breeds, all breeds have potential for danger
- Dont take away someone's right to have a good boy or girl as a companion
- You guys are a certain breed just because of their appearance . What's wrong with this city? Why would you even consider this. I'm very upset with even seeing this
- none of these this is horrible discrimination and completely unnecessary
- How about huge fines for owners who neglect and mistreat their pets which is why they become “nuisances” or “vicious”. Or restricting said owners from ever owning a pet again.
- I do not support targeting dogs based upon visual identification. Unless the owner has papers from a breeder, you cannot be sure.
- I think the focus should be on education not on specific breed unless a animal has acted specifically dangerous
- I want to note that breed specific laws are disgusting and do nothing to devrease bites etc
- DO NOT pick on one breed! All dogs are capable of behavior issues and being a "nuisance".
- ITS BAD OWNERS. NOT DOGS!!! There is absolutely nothing fair about using the term “pit bull” to describe nuisance dog. A German Shepard or Basset Hound can create the same amount of damage or injury AS ANY OTHER DOG. Absolutely DO NOT put more strain on our society by putting bylaws against ONE TYPE OF DOG. Shame in Calgarians for being so narrowminded.
- Ban pit bulls

- The notion of a "nuisance breed" is absurd, if anything, ALL dogs should require obedience training
- Pitbulls are weapons and if they cause injury, owner should be jailed.
- The "guardians" should be held accountable and the pets allowed a second chance via rehabilitation at the guardians expense. Do you kill humans when they attack other humans?
- Pitbulls, Rottweilers, and Bull Mastiffs are not pets, they are dangerous animals. A rottweiler killed my 14 year old cat on our front lawn a few years ago, and just a couple years ago a Bull Mastiff killed our neighbour's small leashed dog on the bikepath in front of our house while our neighbour's 8 year old daughter watched in horror. These animals are not 'pets', they are monsters and do not belong in any city. We don't allow wolves in the city, why do we allow these creatures?
- BSL is complete garbage, so disappointed in Calgary Bylaw for suggesting this!
- I am an oncology nurse at RGH and have many colleagues with pitbulls. If this law comes to pass in Calgary I won't hesitate to move and take my skills and my well behaved pitbull with me. Im very disappointed that you are making such a great breed of dog a scapegoat for bad people. My dog and I treat each other with great respect. I treat her well and she is obedient. Why are we being punished? Why should she wear a muzzle? Might I suggest a yearly test of both the dog and owner (ALL BREEDS) with a license to be worn by the dog like a city of Calgary tag. If either fails they must take training and retest. That will cut down on the bad owners of ALL BREEDS. Could be a little money maker for the city as well. Especially if you run the training school too because there are going to be a lot of dogs under 10 pounds that need training as well as their owners.
- I do not believe the breed is the problem. I disagree with stigmatizing pit bulls. The owners are the issue. Years ago dobermans were the scary dogs, then rottweilers. Punish the owner not the breed. I will vote against any of my reps that support a breed restriction.
- I am opposed any breed specific legislation. I feel it's wrong to discriminate based on breed instead of behaviour/character
- [removed] no breed soecifuc bullying chihuahuas can be just as bad!
- Less target on supposed "breed specific" issues, if you are to target or single out anything it should be an owner or person in care of the animal. No matter the breed or type of animal in question if it is neglected (be it in many forms from abandonment day in and day out to not given the time to learn, grow and socialize.), abused, or otherwise put upon by a human being it can become both angered and triggered big, small, dog, cat or otherwise. Targeting a specific animal is no different than discrimination against a person think if you were to be judged on your back ground, appearance, race or otherwise would you not immediately shut this down. This should be no different when it comes to the breeds singled out here. Many are loving members of families and households no different than the human beings whom care for them. If this road of discrimination continues toward them it could possibly lead to the worst where these animals are stripped from their families, cast off to horrible lives or put to death leaving heart ache and loss to the people who care for and love them. They are people's emotional and physical support and these are not roads to travel lightly when trying to enact this so called proposed agenda towards these breeds. Consider that and think strongly for a moment what that could do to so many animals and the people close to them who have spent time and effort to raise, train and teach them. And do not single out or bully the breed but rather take action on poor care and ownership and help to place and have reintegration for the said animals through classes, compassion and proper care.

- This should not be breed specific. The question practically states that all pitbulls are dangerous dogs. This should have nothing to do with a breed. Owners need to take responsibility and properly train their dogs. Pitbulls are not mean, people make them mean.
- We allow convicted criminals to live within our city limits. They are more risk. Don't let these criminals own dogs. No matter the breed. It's the training not the breed.
- Higher fines for owners of nuisance dogs. Many people who own nuisance dogs do not follow the rules and appear again and again with dogs with the same behaviour. Owners banned. Enforcement required.
- All dog owners could have a behavior screen (testing) done yearly by the Calgary Humane Society (at a cost to the pet owners) to prove they are properly socialized and well behaved to participate in public activities.
- This obsession with pit bulls is not relevant
- No pit bulls
- ALL dogs/owners should be required to attend minimal training/testing to confirm owners have control of their dogs and know their responsibilities for them.
- Breed Specific Legislation is archaic and uninformed! Working in the animal rescue community I find more issues with smaller dogs because people treat them like luggage... it's not the animal it's the people. People need to learn proper training..force free, positive reward based training.. we know better!
- Dogs with zero offences shouldn't have to face consequences of the majority group
- Fines for irresponsible dog owners
- A dog bite is a dog bite! Don't discriminate by breed. Calgary has had tremendous success in past without having breed legislation. Let's work on responsible pet ownership and not breed discrimination!
- First time dog owners of a large or nuisance breed should be screened for competence in owning a dog in general!
- Animals are enslaved. It's time to end the cycle of abuse & control humans exhibit.
- Pitbull type dogs do not have stronger jaw strength than other large breeds (Rottweilers, German Shepard's, Irish Wolfhounds etc). Breed specific legislation should not be based of false data and fear mongering.
- Breed specific requirements are not a solution. Education, training and responsible pet ownership is the key. Require certificates for dog training etc.
- This BSL is antiquated, ill informed and not based on any sort of fact. Pitfalls do not have more strength than other dogs and are not more likely to bite. This is disgusting and lowers my opinion of calgary as a whole. Shameful and ignorant. This type of reasoning shows the world racism is alive and well in Calgary.
- Please consider banning pitbulls, I have been chased by one and they are more likely to continue attacking once they start.

- Who/what declares a nuisance dog????? Just because you are afraid doesn't mean they are a BAD DOG. Owners need to be responsible!.
- Large fines for owners who don't control aggressive dogs in public
- Animals that have attacked children non provoked should be euthanized
- Nuisance owners who have owned more than one nuisance dog within the last 10 years should be publicly listed so if they move elsewhere or whatever it is known that they have owned nuisance dogs.
- None of the above
- You should have to have a license to breed dogs , there are so many back yard breeders that have no regard for temperament or health and breeders that purposely breed bad tempered huge dogs to use in dog fighting rings and to guard. Pitbull's are the target of a lot of bad ppl (drug dealers and so forth) crack down on breeders and the rest will get better
- What about German Shepard's, labs, golden retrievers, etc?
- Quit going after a specific breed. Either treat all dogs the same or don't bother. Sorry you had a bad time with pitbulls but they aren't the problem, sub par owners are.
- Human education for canines for dogs considered a nuisance.
- Ban pit bulls in City limits. Period.
- All animals should be included not breed specific.
- If nuisance animal has another strike it should be euthanized at owners expense
- Obedience training for ALL dogs. Not just one specific breed.
- Pitbulls should be ban in Calgary. I have seen people are not taking full responsibility for these kind of breeds. These breeds need behavioural training, but still they are capable of dangerous/fatal attacks. I have experienced it. In few provinces pitbulls are completely banned. Calgary should also consider this decision.
- Should be dealt with on a case by case basis. To paint entire breeds with the same brush is no better than stereotyping people based on race, religion or creed.
- This is ridiculous, it's a The owners responsibility to train an animal the right way, it doesn't matter the breed, many small dogs cause fights bc they are aggressive. It's up to the owner to properly train their pet
- No bad dogs; only bad owner
- Ban pit bulls.
- Higher fine for any breed of dog which causes harm to another dog or human including rehabilitation for the dog.
- none of the above? Pretty biased wisdom Assuming that everyone Agrees with the statement that this is the only set of breeds that are dangerous? Instead of looking at other municipalities, perhaps should've actually consulted canine behaviorists and veterinarians, which I know wasn't completed. Please get your facts straight
- Please consider fines for smaller breeds, most often I find smaller breeds attacking my 65lb mixed breed.

- All bylaw offenses involving dogs of any breed needs to be treated the same. It's not fair to discriminate just because it's a pit bull. That's no different than racism!
- Obedience training required for all dogs.
- Nothing should be done about pitbulls or other "nuisance breeds" there is no such thing as bad dogs just bad owners. Coming from a person who doesn't own a dog I feel heavily this is terribly and truly wrong
- This is terrible. You say it's not about pit bulls but it obviously is. Do more research this is not the way to go.
- I do not support this proposal
- No breed specific bylaws. owners are to blame not breeds.
- I do not support this at all! Why wasn't there more efforts to involve and alert the community sooner or in Phase 1
- Breed specific legislation should never be considered for Calgary: Deal with offending Dogs/Humans regardless of the breed, just as you are now.
- Pit bulls should not be directly affected in any way! They are a dog.... their owner should be held responsible For there dogs actions not the breed of dog itself!!!
- Pit bulls are not the problem. Owners who don't train their dogs are the problem. Don't punish pit bulls for people being unable to train them. I'm sick of this idea that pit bulls are the issue. Maybe the city should provide taxpayer funded training for first time dog owners.
- Nuisance dogs must attend additional training
- Stop bsl. Please do not become a city that ignorantly support breed specific legislation against pit bull breeds. Educate yourselves on the breed.
- Stiff fines for off-leash dogs outside of off-leash parks. Stiff fines for dog noise. I do not understand the coloured bandanas.
- This survey seems to be vectored against pitbull breeds. It is not the breed that is the problem, it is the owner. Shame on the City of Calgary for taking this approach.
- Higher fines and better enforcement for off-leash dogs in non-off-leash areas.
- Nothing! Focusing on pit bulls and other bully breeds is absolutely ludicrous. Why don't you round up and spay/neuter the owners or ALL BREEDS who bite or become a "nuisance." Society as we know it has come to an end if this is the [removed] we are debating.
- Pit Bull dogs are a danger, end of discussion. Being sorry after the fact is not acceptable.
- Every OWNER should be taking classes to learn how to treat animals. All animals reactions are DIRECT results of their owners. (Previous or current)
- Leave the pitbulls (bully breed of any kind) alone. Instead, make sure owners who adopt or purchase these beautiful animals are respectful and responsible enough to educate themselves on proper training and care for their animals. Its not the breed who is at fault it is their owner.
- Any dogs with history of dangerous behavior are not allowed in off leash parks or must be muzzled
- Ban pit bulls. Any dog can bite, but pit bites are severely damaging to humans and other animals.. Owners of pits are trying to compensate for feelings of self-inadequacy.
- I dont think pit-bull type dogs are the issue

- Any dog with a bite infraction be required to wear a muzzle when off the owner's property.
- Higher fines for dogs involved in bite offences, regardless of breed. (You cannot penalize one breed only!)
- Large breeds be licensed at a higher rate.
- Ban pit bull ownership
- Exeterme fines for falsely reporting pet nuisances.
- Owner to be part of obedience training. Education in schools/community for dog bite prevention. Owner's fined only if it can be proven that the dog was not provoked.
- Higher fines for any dog involved in bylaw offences, not just pit bulls.
- Dog owners should not be allowed to tether dogs in front of stores, restaurants, etc as this causes barking.
- Owners of these dogs should have to post signage on their property. I've walked on the sidewalk by small fences and had these type of dogs run at me. Terrifying!
- None of these should apply to only pitbulls, or need to apply to ALL dog owners, as studies have proven that potty breeds are less likely to be engaged in aggressive behaviour than many common house hold dogs - German shepherds, dalmatians, chow-chows, etc. This is only perpetuating myths about bully breeds and shows a lack of research on the part of the City of Calgary
- Dog behaviours are not purely at the fault of the dog, if a dog is vicious it is because their owner enables it. Stop blaming animals for behaviours they were not born with.
- DO NOT JUDGE A PIT BULL. According to an animal behaviour course, small dogs are the ones that are most likely jump to bites while larger dogs will follow the trend on the ladder of aggression. Maybe this ladder of aggression should be made know to the public. It is unfair for dogs to assume what we want, they cannot verbally communicate and the behaviours on the ladder of aggression is what they're showcasing to show that they're frustrated and anxious. Did you know that pit bulls were considered nanny dogs?! Why are you judging the dogs on the base of its breed (I could equate it to judging a person based on their ethnic group).
- There should only be restrictions to ANY kind of pet that has previously attacked or tried to attack someone or another pet. To suggest that all pit bulls or dogs alike should be alienated because of their breed is the same thing as racism.
- Responsible DOG ownership, not breed specific. Do not single out bully breeds.
- Quit picking on pitbulls, it is not the dogs fault it is the owners fault. Any dog will bite when a stupid kid is harrasing it, the parents should be fined as well. There is alot of other breeds that bit NOT just pitbulls.
- Drop the 'pit bulls' it's the owners that need to be held responsible NOT THE DOGS.
- The fact that you are only going on about pit bull shows there's an obvious bias. How about mastiffs they are just as strong as a pit bull. Caine corso, Rotti, German shepherd you even train these dogs to attack on your k9 force. Owners are the problem not the breed
- Why are just pit bulls mentioned, any large dog can leave severe injuries. This is just a stupid ploy to bring in breed specific legislation.
- Should not discriminate against a single breed of dog.

- $1M bond should be required for a Pit bull ... and jail sentence should be mandatory for owners who do not follow bylaws ..
- Breed-specific bans on pit bulls
- BSL is not effective. Well bred dogs, properly socialization and training, are not more prone for aggression on humans. I show Staffordshire Bull Terriers and I would never attend or spend money in Calgary again if BSL goes through. You hurt all of the ethical breeders and owners with BSL. Any legislation should be dependent on each individual dog. There is no breed 'pitbull', it's a dangerous umbrella term used against any muscular dog. You will lose all of the ethical owners of so called 'pitbull's breeds from ever showing in Calgary again. I hope you enjoy lost revenue potential because of lack of education and pandering to unfounded media fuelled public fear.
- Pit Bulls and dogs of this breed have never been nor shall they ever be singled out as a nuisance animal , the research shows they are no high on the incident reports of bites or aggressive behaviour , please research your facts before you single out this breed
- dogs who have actually attacked people/dogs shouldn't be allowed off leash at the park
- Owners of ALL BREEDS that DO NOT know how to TRAIN their Pets Appropriately ... should NOT be Allowed to Own Pets/ Fur Babies...Period. It's NOT the animal it's The OWNERS ! There are NO bad Pets ONLY bad PET owners Period..
- This is so stupid. If you do this for pit bulls you need to do it for German Shepard's, Rotties, and Dalmatians.
- legislation of pitbull or pitbull like breeds is not a solution, the entire breed bias is based on opinion. Pitbulls and pitbull like breeds bite is less severe than many other large breed dogs (German shepherd etc.). This has been studied quite extensively. Using real science helps.
- Extreme fines for people falsely reporting dogs as nuisance animals
- don't breed specify.
- Targeting specific breeds is completely insane. Breed specific bans are racist and biased. It has been shown that breed specific banning does not work and that the "blame" shifts to another breed. For example, in the 70's dobermans were targeted, 80's german shepherds were targeted, 90's rottweilers were targeted and now pitbull breeds are being targeted. Not to mention that there is no "pit bull breed" and the definition is subjective. On the temperament scale (gentleness) "pitbulls and bully breeds" score better than almost all other breeds other than labrador retrievers. As for the supposed bite strength stated above, a "pitbulls" bite strength is similar to other large breed dogs. If the goal is to muzzle aggressive dogs this needs to include all dog breeds regardless of bite strength as a small child could be seriously injured by a small dog like a Dachshund. not to mention that the most common dog bite is from a Dachshund or a Chihuahua.
- These bylaws targeting pitbulls and pitbull adjacent breeds are ridiculous. They are not inherently bad!! It is unfair to penalize responsible dog owners just because they own a certain kind of dog. If a dog is proven to be a nuisance due to multiple offenses, then I am all for higher fines and forced training. But to force training, limit numbers and ban any dog from a dog park because of ANY breed is wrong. Nature vs nurture guys... it's a proven scientific fact!

- None of these are worth supporting. The dogs not listed on this are 73% more likely to offend. Responsible dog owners are just that. Fines should be given to owners who display clear signs of incompetence & inability of controlling their own animal in a stressful or agitated situation. Dogs of any breed react fearfully, if agitated or not respected. The owner who cannot control the attacking animal causing the problem is who should receive penalty. Not an extremely well behaved misjudged breed of a dog.
- I don't agree with any of this. Pit Bulls are not ALL aggressive. They are painted with a brush. I don't think it's fair to only include larger dogs similar to pit bulls. It is not the dog that is the issue, it is the owner. The owner should have the choice to put a muzzle on their dog or not. They know their dog better than anyone and therefore should be the only one to make that choice. I think that it is a money grab and NOT FAIR to dogs who are big dogs, like Pit Bulls, who are sweet and are gentle. So no, I think it's stupid and a ridiculous bylaw.
- Pitbulls should not be singled out. They are far more loving to humans than many dogs and problem dogs are a result of the failure of the OWNER.
- As someone who works in the animal welfare industry, and involved in cruelty investigations, targeting a specific breed will not be an adequate solution to reducing incidents. However I do acknowledge that irresponsible pet owners tend to lean towards owning bully breeds, so I am in support of required obedience training as it will benefit the breed in the long run. (Well behaved dogs = less stigma). Let's not take a step back by creating BSL. If you want to hold them accountable because they can do more damage, then you need to incorporate ALL large breed dogs.
- No bylaws that affect pit bull breeds. It is about the owners that train the dog not the breed of the dog.
- Should definitely be more on the shoulders of the owners of all dogs to be in control of their animals. If they are not the animals should be re-homed
- It should be illegal to own a pit bull in Calgary city limits
- PIT BULLS ARE NO MORE DANGEROUS THAN ANY OTHER DOG. THIS PROPOSED BYLAW ON "PIT BULLS" IS SHAMEFUL. THE OWNER IS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE DOG'S BEHAVIOUR. THIS IS DISGRACEFUL.
- All large and medium sized dogs should be required to wear a muzzle at off leash parks.
- It is absolutely appalling that many of these options seem to discriminate against a certain breed of dogs. Dogs are as good as the owners and it is unacceptable that you would propose to impose restrictions and fines and expect muzzles on certain type of breed of dog and this absolutely should not be allowed. Pitbulls are the the problem, people and how they treat animals are.
- Higher fines with increased offences
- Many other breeds are much more of a "nuisance" and generalizing bully breed seems ignorant and uneducated.
- Force idiot owners to take classes on proper care and training of dogs!!!! There are NO BAD DOGS!!! Only bad owners!!!! Quit punishing the poor dog and make the owner get educated , quit breed discrimination!!!!!!!

- To isolate rules to discriminate against pitfalls is to fail to recognize that it is the owners not the breeds that should be held responsible
- Specific Breed Legislation is wrong on so many levels. You are condoning judging a book by it's cover. What a horrible horrible example to set especially in this day and age with all the race issues. In reality, this is just a race issue against dogs. When will people realize that it is NOT the dog's fault - it is the dog owner at fault. I am ashamed to know I live in a city that is so small thinking :(WITH REGARD TO NUMBER 8 BELOW - again, it comes down to people/parents being responsible!!! Children SHOULD BE TAUGHT TO ASK IF THEY CAN PET A DOG instead of just rushing over to pet a strange dog. Perhaps you have a better chance of educating people if there were a program IN SCHOOLS complete with visiting dogs - start by teaching the children (it's obvious that parents are not providing the necessary or correct information)
- Dogs should not be defined by their breed. If a dog acts up, NO MATTER THE BREED, then then owner should be held responsible. Pit bulls are not a nuisance animal, they like all animals need to be trained properly.
- All consequences should be case by case, and should not be exclusive to Pit Bulls.
- Ban private ownership pit bulls and all dogs that are bred as attack dogs. What political philosophy justifies the private ownership of a dog that can do this to a child:
<https://beta.cafemom.com/news/211726-pit-bulls-maul-arkansas-toddlers-face>. There are nearly 500 dog breeds in the world. Surely, there is sufficient choice to meet the "rights" of private citizens, without including dangerous dogs.
- Just ban pit bulls
- Breed specific bylaws don't take into account that any dog can turn into a nuisance dog if not raised properly and not kept well.
- IT IS NOT JUST PIT BULLS THIS SHOULD NOT BE ABOUT A SPECIFIC BREED THIS SHOULD BE ABOUT DANGEROUS OR NUISANCE DOGS AS AN INDIVIDUAL NOT AS A WHOLE. EACH DOG AND OWNER ARE DIFFERENT.
- No pit bulls in city limits
- Don't put the onus on the dogs. There are no "dangerous breeds" just bad dog owners. Regardless of breed, fines should be issued, dogs re-homed if need be. But the repercussions should reflect the nature of the offence - which is that the dogs are not inherently bad or problematic, but that there are a certain subset of people who take very poor care of those dogs.
- Only if they have bitten before intentionally and they are a bit aggressive they should have a muzzle on in public places. Pit bulls are not the only breed that this rule should be forced on.
- Am opposed to breed specific dog sanctions. Need to define 'nuisance' behaviour.
- It is not helpful to target specific breeds (or appearance of breed) for arbitrary measures such as required muzzels and only serves to increase fear in the general public. It would be more helpful to focus on public education of signals that dogs give as well as working to eliminate backyard breeders. Including study from u of c on dog bites <https://www.ucalgary.ca/news/anatomy-dog-bite-when-where-and-why-dogs-bite>

- My opinion? None of these are needed. Dogs are not a naturally a "nuisance." Bad/careless owners make for dangerous dogs. It IS NOT the dogs breed that causes it's nuisance. To enforce any of this would be INHUMANE. To be frank? Y'all are [removed]
- None of these restrictions make any sense. This is racism for dogs.
- These are all ridiculous. Its not the breed, its the owner and theor negligence
- assist in training. You think how you feel wesring a mask all day long now how does a dog feel wearing a muzzle?? We don't know as they can't tell us.
- Breed specific legislation has no scientific backing. Any laws involving pit bulls are unjust. There are no bad dogs just bad owners.
- I think there should be 3 strikes before a dog is declared a nuisance. Someone complaining about a dog barking shouldn't result in that dog being classified as nuisance. Or if that dog is at large once. If there were a 3 strikes, then obedience training, animal specific community service for the owner, or increased fines / insurance, I'd support that.
- If a dog is aggressive regardless of breed specific they should not be at a dog park
- Ban nuisance dogs from the city limits.
- None. There shouldn't be specific rules for pit bulls and not for other dogs
- Training for any human and dog...humans make bad dogs train them
- No breed specific regulations at all, and many if not all of those options above should apply to every breed of dog that is a nuisance. Any and all breed owners should face higher fines if more than one incident has occurred, all breeds should require insurance if an incident has occurred. I want to be safe from all breeds! I want all dog owners to feel the pressure of requiring safe behaviour of their dogs, all dog owners of every breed should face the same strict fines and insurance requirements to ensure my families safety.
- Shame on you, Calgary for even entering the bred banning conversation. This is ignorant and your question is leading to a path you obviously want to embark upon, which is breed specific bans. Sound questionnaire strategy provides open ended comments for the public to express their concerns, and not be coerced down a path that council has already intended to take. This is disgraceful irresponsible.
- restrictions on dog ownership for people who have a history of nuisance dogs in their household
- I volunteer at the Calgary Humane Society and I have to say that the pit bull breed is one of the sweetest breeds. I've NEVER felt uncomfortable around them. I've been attacked by "family breeds" such as labs. How can you justify discriminating against a breed of dog based on social media propoganda and fear of the unknown? How would you feel if we discriminated against a certain human race because we didn't feel comfortable around them?
- There is nothing wrong with pit bulls. There is a lot wrong with people. If you start these laws on pit bulls, I'd like to see similar laws for the homeless downtown that are a nuisance to me on a daily basis and pose far greater risk to everyone (including themselves). Give you heads a shake and realize that a soccer mum state is awful.

- Breed specific bylaws are completely uncalled for an unfair. Incidents should be reviewed on a case by case basis-PERIOD. ALL dogs have the potential to bite and or be a nuisance, not just one breed.
- There cannot be more than one dog in a household with a nuisance dog. There cannot be more than one nuisance dog in a household (why didn't you separate nuisance dog from out ull in this question like you did the others?!)
- Stop bothering about pitbulls... most of them are very docile loving dogs its the bad owners that should be fined not the dog!
- Would support banning pit bull breeds
- Ban pit bulls
- Ban pit bulls. There is no reason for people to own these dangerous, unpredictable, fighting dogs. They have no place in a city where we all must live so close together, increasing the risk of mutilating or fatal dog bites.
- Nothing, dogs are dogs and aren't perfect. No one issues fines for the loud, screaming, crying children and babies
- Pitbulls are no more dangerous than any other dog. If forcing anything make it necessary for al
- Not breed specific bylaw, owners training is the issue. Don't ban a breed. Ban an owner.
- Chihuahuas and similar dogs should have rules or limitations on them. Though they are small, they are naturally vicious and rarely trained. Obedience classes at a minimum should be required.
- [removed]
- Nothing should be breed specific. Deal with bad pet owners
- I do not support breed specific language - these types of laws have proven ineffective in other districts and they are discriminatory
- None of the above. Pit bulls are good dogs. Fine the owner - not seize the animal.
- How about creating some bylaws to make the people responsible for "nuisance" dogs accountable. Ultimately it is their responsibility to train their dog(s) and ensure safety when out in public. How about fines for people who are known to abuse their animals, or have complete disregard for the safety of other animals while they are around dogs they are responsible for. My dog was attacked by a pit bull who was known to be aggressive to small dogs. She was off lease and without a muzzle. I have absolutely nothing against pit bulls and I am against any bylaws saying pit bulls shouldn't be allowed in certain places etc but in this case it was the fault of the dogs human. He knew she was aggressive towards small dogs and he chose to walk her off leash in a public park without a muzzle. I'm sure she wasn't a "bad" dog but she almost killed mine. Nothing happened other than my dog spending a week in intensive care and almost dying. Let's put some things in place to hold these types of people accountable instead of putting all the blame on the animals who aren't being cared for properly.
- I do not support breed specific legislation. Dogs need to be evaluated on a case by case basis. How an animal looks is irrelevant.
- If a pit bull or dog that has been reported as being aggressive, owners must take dog to mandatory obedience training. If owner refuses, dog must be surrendered to a dog shelter.

- I disagree with all the above. I personally believe the owner should be fined. The dog acts as the owner has trained them. People really need to open their eyes and quit labelling Pitbulls as monsters. The only reason a dog bites is because they are either 1. Commanded by owner 2. Threatened/scared 3. Attacked 4. Neglected by the owner. As humans we would do the same. I say the owner is 110% responsible for their dog's behaviour and should be fined.
- I do not support breed specific legislation. Dogs need to be evaluated on a case by case basis. How an animal looks is irrelevant.
- I would support mandatory liability insurance for all dogs.
- The dog breed is not the problem. The problem is the owners and how they are trained. Instead look at fining owners who are not caring for their animals rather than punishing everyone with a pit bull even if they are extremely well behaved.
- It's unfortunate that "pit bulls" are so discriminated against. Any dog can bite, jump on you, show aggression. It's all based on the owner. People think it's "cute" when a pomeranian or chihuahua nips acts crazy. Aggression is aggression.
- ANY DOG, not just pitbulls, who appear to be aggressive or a "nuisance" should be included. You cannot insinuate that pitbulls and such are the only aggressive breed. This is misleading and damaging. ANY DOG has the potential to be trained badly by their owner and therefore hurt someone.
- The fact that you're targeting bullie breeds is absolutely appalling and discriminatory. We vehemently oppose it. They should NOT be treated any differently than other dog breeds. Shame on you!!!
- ban pit bulls
- ANY dog can be a nuisance. STOP PROFILING PITBULLS!! DEAL with irresponsible animal owners!! DONT TARGET THE BREED!!!!
- There should be a bylaw against leaving dogs out all night in city back yards. If dogs are out past 10 or 11, loud & barking, fines should be issued. These dogs are being neglected, so although they start out gentle, they're not getting attention & may sadly change their behaviour.
- Nuisance animals should be monitored, but breed specific limitations are not acceptable.
- Generally it's the owners to blame for the mistreatment of all dogs, big or small. They should be the ones to be fined.
- No matter the type of dog, it's about the owner. Higher consequences such as fines or suspensions from the dog park or recreation area should be imposed rather than outright banning/enforcing muzzle rules on a specific dog breed. It's idiotic to believe a breed is the problem and not the fact that many people do not take the proper time and preparation it takes to train a dog.
- This should not be breed specific but case specific.
- Ban pit bull ownership
- Mandatory training classes for humans who own or want to own. And a screening process for owners. The breed is not bad but people can be and then cause dogs to become difficult or dangerous.

- Laws should not be breed specific- all problem dogs involved in an incident should be treated the same!
- Help support owners of these breeds by offering training and support. Don't punish responsible pet owners just because their dog has physical qualities of a "pit bull". "Pit bulls" are NOT A BREED! I've seen more ferocious chihuahuas. Jesus what about other "ferocious" breeds like German shepherds etc? These poor dogs are being stigmatized unfairly when with a responsible owner are no more ferocious than a baby. Target shitty breeders and underground dog fighting rings, not day to day owners that love their dogs and train them correctly.
- I strongly believe this should not be breed specific. I do not own a pit bull, I own a different breed, and I see "nuisance" breeds of all types, NOT specific to pit bulls
- The CKC opposes fear-based breed-specific legislation (BSL) in favour of well-crafted dangerous dog legislation that is reasonable, enforceable and non-discriminatory. We believe that public awareness and education, stronger enforcement of existing bylaws and stiffer penalties for irresponsible owners are more effective at protecting the public.
- Ban all pit bulls in our city
- All dogs that bite must be put down and owners severely fined or jail term
- Much higher fines for any dog involved in an offense, with no warnings or first chances.
- Pitbulls are not the problem. Their owners are. Please do not discriminate on the breed, but penalize owners for poor management.
- There is NO breed known as a Pitbull. This is irresponsible and it makes you look terribly uneducated.
- BSL does not work and penalizes responsible dog Owners and well behaved dogs. Bias against breeds does nothing to prevent dog bites, etc.
- Ban pit bulls
- Fines for dogs pooping and peeing on private property
- Dogs that are simply a nuisance should not require owners being subjected to higher fines, more insurance. Only AGGRESSIVE dogs should be required to take obedience training and NOT limited to pit bulls because there is "potential" for a more severe bite. It isn't fair to discuss potential for things that could happen but rather things that do, and not breed specific. I have seen more aggressive small dog breeds than pit bulls.
- There cannot be more than One NUISANCE dog of any breed in a household (delete pit bull reference) Any breed of dog can be a 'nuisance' dog...and what categorizes a 'nuisance' dog???
- I support a Breed specific pit bull ban.
- For dog bites: people are more important. Apprehend the animal. And then when it is proven (by whatever process) kill the dog.
- Training would have to be positive reinforcement. A lot of behavior issues with "nuisance" dogs are due to the owners not training their animals properly.
- No law should have prejudice against pit bulls. Any dog can be aggressive
- DONT REGULATE PEOPLES DOGS BASED ON BREED.
- All dogs. Stop being breed specific

- All dogs must be on leash except on private property or off leash parks. All playgrounds and school yards signed no dogs..
- If you do this to one dog you better do it to all. Disgusting.
- Nothing. Any dog can be aggressive so don't stereotype
- educate human owners of nuisance dogs
- Obedience training required for ALL dog owners
- It should apply to any aggressive poorly trained dogs not just bully breeds
- The breed itself should NOT be a factor! It is up to the owner! All dogs are capable of biting. Education and offering training to the owner to make the dog better is a must.
- Ban dangerous dog breeds that have the potential to inflict serious injuries.
- It's the owners fault. Not the dog, picking one breed is discriminating and wrong on all accounts. Smaller breed dogs are more vicious and more likely to bite you and be loud.
- Nothing that specifies dogs by breed. Just nuisance designations. Stronger ability to forbid people with more than one complaint from owning any animals and fining those people.
- Other dangerous breeds like Rottweilers, mastiffs, and the Argentinian dogs also be included
- Higher fines for any dog, regardless of breed or size, for being aggressive or unfriendly in a dog park. It is ridiculous that this city would want to base laws on a breed rather than the responsibility of the owner. You're trying to base a law off of looks. This is no different than racial profiling which has been proven to NOT work (scientifically backed up). Instead of blaming the breed and forcing people to only own one or now, blame the owner. Make it do rescues and dogs that look like or are pit bulls have proper training from an actual dog behaviouralist. Make it so if someone gets one of these dogs they can only be purchased from reputable breeders or rescues and that they sign a contract to take the proper steps in the training. I know more vicious Pomeranians and chihuahuas than I do dogs with mix breed pit Bullard your basically making it so people don't own this dog and they get put down by rescues and shelters . That is the most irresponsible thing this city could do. Don't be Quebec: be better.
- I don't have a problem with pit bulls per se, it's more the owners that seem to be the problem. There are loads of lovely pit bulls out there with great owners, and both get a bad rap from idiots with strong, easily trainable, defensive dogs.
- Any restrictions selected (muzzling, insurance, obedience training, etc) should be applied to ALL owners/dog breeds, not any one specific breed or profiled group. Calgary's proposal on this matter is a knee-jerk approach that unfairly punishes owners of these larger breeds while disregarding breeds with higher documented attack/bite frequency.
- Stop labeling pitbulls!
- Owners must pass a test for acceptable breed training and dog care standards
- All dogs (particularly the small nippy yapping aggressive ones) should have to have mandatory professional training with owners present
- It isn't the breed, it's how they are trained. Any dog can be vicious and poorly behaved, it's all about training. People who have these breeds generally train their animals much better than people with other breeds.

- I do NOT support any breed being named specifically in future laws and by laws.
- There cannot be more than one nuisance dog per household regardless of breed or size.
- worst idea i have ever heard
- These claimed "nuisance" breeds are none that we have encountered any difficulty with in our 14 years as dog owners to our mastiff. In the last three years we have been mostly attending walks at the Sue Higgins dog park where I have watch a Shephard cross bite its female owner, a passerby dog, and that dog's owner. I have seen a Burmese dog attack a small dog (uninstigated); a Jack Russell Terrier jump up and bite a little girl's shorts, tearing a strip right out of them, because that little girl was running passed it with her own dog - the owner of the Jack Russell stated that the child "should not have been moving so quickly in the dog park". I have watched a Boarder Collie nip multiple dogs including the ankle of my own dog and each time the owner claimed it was "instinctive to the breed as it is a 'herding dog' and not something that could be trained out of it". These are only a handful of incidents I have personally seen and none have ever been with what this bylaw is calling nuisance dogs. Fines should be issued to owners of dogs for the faults of their lack of training, handling, managing and/or their dog's actions, not for the breed. Also, if an animal attacks (causing severe injury) the money from the fines billed should go towards the victim for medical fees.
- any aggressive dog should be considered a nuisance as soon as it bites anyone or anything, regardless of breed. Onus should be on the owner not the animal.
- All dog owners should be held responsible for their dogs regardless of the breed. This bylaw has no right to be particularly set to a specific breed. Owners train their dogs and thats where bad behaviour lies, not within breeds.
- Ban Pit Bulls form City of Caalgary.
- Ban pit bulls
- No fines no punishments for any pitbulls it is stupid and based on ignorance.
- All laws should be for all breeds. Absolutely do not agree with any sort of BSL Law
- this is a stupid idea
- Nuisance dogs and at-risk dogs are not the same. I think this needs to be broken down to more details required. A dog that jumps fences because he's a husky doesn't need to be muzzled at a dog park. They need management protocols in place like fencing being reinforced. A dog with a bite history where the dog was (without question) to be 100% at fault needs a muzzle and training involved. I've seen many dogs who have bitten and it has been a fear response when all other signs have been ignored., Yet the dog is still blamed which I find awful. Hire private contractors that are dog trainers that are certified in behavioural work and you will see a much different perspective on this issue.
- there should not be more bylaws for one specific type of dog
- Ban on dangerous breeds - ie pit bulls, Rottweilers, Doberman', etc
- I do not believe that there should be a breed specific bylaw put in place. This is showing discrimination for an owner who has purchased a "bully" breed. Dogs of every breed can be dangerous and a nuisance - it is the owner who is being irresponsible when issues arise.

- it not pitbulls its other dogs i have encountered, if one dog has to be muzzled then all should, they should have training for owners not the breed
- Complete ban for all pit bull type dogs and euthanize all dogs that bite a stranger or smaller strange domestic animal.
- I DO NOT agree with any breed specific by- laws or rules
- Ban the breed entirely
- Higher fines for dogs that pose problems, but avoid breed-specific regulations.
- Please ban all pitbulls in Calgary
- I don't think breed-specific bylaws will help, but encouraging owners to get training -for them and the dog- has the potential to help.
- There cannot be more then one nuisance dog in a household.
- Dog breed specific legislation is not going to solve the problem, some of the sweetest dogs I've met have been pit bulls. Shocked this is even a discussion here.
- Breed specific legislation has no place in Calgary.
- To single out dogs by the look is disgusting. I have an odd mixed breed that has not type of pitbull in his DNA but has the blockhead and would be treated unfairly by your proposal. It instills unnecessary fear in people . How unfair you are being because of your own ignorance to the pittty breeds.
- Breed-specific legislation does nothing except criminalize those breeds. Ultimately it comes down to owner responsibility on how the dog behaves and how well it's trained. Legislate poor dog ownership as poor dog ownership, instead of targeting a breed that just happens to be more in the public consciousness.
- Rottweilers and Shepards have a stronger bite force then pitbulls. Knowing the strong bias against pitbulls there is already i don't understand why a city survey would be aimed against them with such misleading information.
- Regardless of breed, any animal known to be aggressive or a nuisance should have required training.
- Pit bull ban
- I would suggest that the reasoning that pitbulls have greater bite strength be reviewed against the existence of larger dog breeds in general and consider whether such reasoning should apply to German Shepherds, for instance. <https://maxlawsc.com/dog-bite-statistics/#force>
- How would a dog be declared a nuisance? Are you talking about individually identified dogs? Or a breed?
- I think its unfair pitbulls of all are being only one labeled in this total unfair. Theres so many breeds were I am that are not pitbulls but under u labeling there nuisance .stop using pitbill
- Small dogs should be muzzled when out in public not pit bulls or lager/bully/ guard dog breads
- Leave Pitbulls alone. Don't target them as a dangerous breed.
- Dogs known for being aggressive must be under control and if needed muzzled. Aggressive dogs to other dogs must be muzzled at off leash parks. More education and training to help people handle ownership of dogs with aggression issues.

- Ban pit bulls. In general they are harder to stop when they attack and the owners are often irresponsible.
- The rules should apply to all dog breeds equally. Singling out pitbulls or "dogs that look like Pitbulls" does nothing to address the problematic dog OWNERS. Breed specific rules are highly ignorant.
- I disagree with proposed definition of these dogs because other breeds are often confused with Terriers i.e. Mastiff type dogs are nearly always extremely docile and enjoy a peaceful life. I am more concerned with bad owners who fail to socialize their dogs and transmit a negative image because they are the actual problem. I would like to see a crack down on dog thieves who steal and use dogs for fighting. Dog fighting is the base of bad behaviour and human cruelty. This practice must be stopped..
- NO BREED SPECIFIC LEGISLATION!!
- BSL is not the way to go. It's not the breed. It's the owner. Through and through. Say no to BSL!!!
- Punish the owners not the dog. There is no such thing as a bad dog only bad owners. Happy purse dogs cause trouble in off leash areas so keep stereo types out and stick to definable defendable provable wording
- how about training dog owners to properly train their own dogs. Most dog issues are related to mistreatment by the owners.
- How about any dog that bites or is considered a nuisance have the owner and dog be given training on how to better take care of your dog and teach your dog how to act. Not judge a book by its cover
- Breed specific legislation is pointless. Harsher penalties for dogs causing issues is fine, but any breed is capable of causing severe harm.
- Ban pit bull type dogs including bull mastiffs
- I do not feel that obedience training is necessary for "just" pitbulls or nuisance dogs the way you have it worded, obedience training should be a mandatory part of dog ownership
- It's the owners that are at fault for aggressive dogs. I don't agree with just targeting pit bulls. It should be the owners of any dog that needs extra training
- Pitbulls are not the problem, is usually the owners. Du not punish the breed for errors of ppl, many pitties are loving family members, there are no bad dogs, just bad owners that give them a bad reputation. Manage the bad owners
- I am concerned about WHO decides to declare an animal a nuisance animal. Would this be via a true expert?
- No specification for pit bull type dogs as dangerous or nuisance. ANY dog can be dangerous, not just certain breeds
- Dogs that bite and dogs that bark should not be in the same category.
- Designation of a nuisance dog should be able to be evaluated and appealed after dog AND owner attend obedience training.
- Shouldn't matter the breed of animal that attacks. The owner of the dog that is a nuisance should have a tougher punishment. Not the animals!!!
- [removed]

- BSL is a lazy solution.... instead of dealing with actual nuisances you are punishing responsible owners unjustly
- Pit bull ban
- My pitties are not nuisance dogs. How dare you?
- Breed specific legislation is wrong!!!! I have seen more aggression from smaller dogs like shit-shu type than most pit bulls
- None of the above. The American Pitbull Terrier is not anymore ferocious than a Labrador Retriever.
- You need a special license to get a pitbull. Education a course, extra insurance all needed in order to licence.
- [removed]
- No higher fine or extra measures for ONE SPECIFIC BREED. Same rules for all.
- All dog owners should be responsible for behaviour of their dogs. Fines should be imposed for all dog owners that do not take responsibility for their dogs. NOT ALL PITBULLS ARE DANGEROUS ARE A NUISANCE. It is the owners who are not responsible.
- Nuisance dogs not to be allowed off leash or in off leash areas
- Educating pet owners using the license fee so people do not feel buckled in by the city all dogs require their owners be trained. Dogs 99% of the time are a reflection of their owners abilities. The tribunal would have biases based on lack of education Dog owners with aggressive dogs must to measures to ensure public safety Banning ownership to those who use dogs under aggressive purposes with documented occupancies need to have those dogs apprehended if the owner has a violent recorded History Leave our insurance premiums alone liability is already in place for this reason
- total ban on pit bulls in the city
- All dogs and cats should be chipped and traced by the city
- I think that it is the owners responsibility to be accountable and know the limitations of their pet. Responsible owners should make the decision to prevent incidents from occurring (ie: muzzle on because they know their animals behaviour, not going to high volume dog parks with an aggressive animal, give other pet owners warning about their pet behaviour, etc). If they do not take the appropriate and accountable measures then they should be held accountable financially and pay a higher fine for the offence.
- this proposal is ridiculous, and by it's own admission, undefinable. if subjective "appears similar to pit bulls" terminology and it has been established that pitbulls are no more likely to bite than other dogs, then the proposal is unnecessary. Consider instead more tools to address dogs causing serious bites rather than a foolish breed based ban.
- Pet owners who have received a biting offence should not be allowed to own pets
- Breed specific laws don't work. Find ways to engage people in becoming better educated in taking care of their pets, regardless of breed. Maybe a discount on licenses when the owner can show the animal has gone to obedience classes.
- Higher fines for nuisance dogs regardless of breed - small dogs bite all the time but their aggression is not taken as seriously simply because they are smaller.

- Pit bulls are not the problem, horrible owners ARE THE PROBLEM!
- If you're going to label a dog you better put all breeds in and NOT discriminate for pit bulls!!! The fact you're even putting this in here for a suggestion will cause anyone that is ignorant to the breed to select it because of what they've heard. It's disturbing that you guys are also ignorant about them and playing follow the leader from "what other municipalities have done". Use your common sense and as your mom would have said, if they jump of a bridge are you going to as well. Be a leader and do not do that garbage! German shepherds and several other breeds are more likely to bite than a pit bull. DO NOT ruin a breed due to ignorance.
- Pit bulls are a hazard when the owner leave them alone in the backyard and the fence of the backyard is not scurried enough. I do fear for my children safety when they go to play outside and these dogs try to attach from behind the fence.
- Don't discriminate against a specific breed of dog. It's not pit bulls as a breed that are the issue.
- I would support banning the owning of a pit bull. It seems reasonable to me given the severity of the bites.
- Only dogs who have been aggressive historically should be forced to wear muzzles, and not allowed in off leash parks until they go through obedience training. Multiple in a household is not an issue.
- Ban all pit bull type dogs.
- A program for the owner that educates them on how to behave and treat their dog
- Punish the owner not the breed!
- Obedience required for all dogs and a program for school age children regarding safe animal interaction
- None of these
- We should instead leave Pitbulls alone. End the [removed] stigma and then muzzle the muppet that came up with these questions.
- Require the owner of the nuisance dog to take mandatory obedience training at the owners expense.
- Pit bulls should be banned
- Victim Vet assistance for anyone whose dog is attacked by nuance dog. Covered by City, added to license cost of dog that caused injury. Dogs must be micro chipped. Unable to license if outstanding payment to victim
- Ban on pitbulls
- Special separate licensing for the dangerous dog owners like with firearms. Training the dogs does not prevent attacks (I am pitbull ex owner)
- Breed specific legislation is garbage. There should be mandatory owner training and vetting required for anyone who has a nuisance dog.
- I do NOT support breed specific legislation. I do support behavior specific designations with clear and practical consequences.
- I strongly oppose any breed specific by-law, or additional insurance requirements. I've been exposed to thousands of dogs in the course of my 40 year hobby. Of those animals, the problematic ones are those whose owners cannot control them. i.e. the 2 St. Bernards that simultaneously attacked me walking my dog on leash in Calgary, the Belgian Teruvern that jumped me so hard in a Calgary off leash area that I almost fell over, the small "cute" dogs whose owners allow them to run up to my dogs, on leash, and harass us to the point where I am unable to walk without tripping over them, the mother with the Bernese Mountain Dog in the Calgary off leash park, who was leaping at my dog (in my arms) while she pushed her stroller and tried to cope with her toddlers, the man whose medium size dog was on a flexi lead at Nose Hill Park - he let it wrap itself around my legs as it tried to leap up at the dog I was holding, causing me bruises to my legs because it tightened quickly. It is the owners who have no mandatory training in animal control that cause others issues. I've seen many pitbulls walking nicely with responsible owners. Every Staffordshire that I've examined over the decades is a sweet clown; nothing in the breed's character is potentially problematic. Please do not adopt poorly thought out, high discriminatory by-laws passed in other jurisdictions, in the misguided attempt to protect Calgarians from injury. It is not the breed that is the problem; it is Calgary's lack of mandatory training for an owner to acquire a license. Switzerland requires every owner to complete an 8 week training course, before the owner can acquire a dog license. These courses teach the owners how to respect other owners, how to train their dog, why it is socially required to teach your dog to ignore others. The mentality in North America is that everyone has a "fur baby" that must be allowed to run out of control; otherwise that is cruel. Confusing dogs with children is not helpful; banning children of a specific race would be obviously discriminatory. Why assume that the dog is so? All dogs have the potential to bite; teach the owners how to manage their obligations and hold them accountability when they fail to do so. I've had owners yelling at me when I respectfully say no thank you to their insistence that their dog MUST socialize (be in my dog's face); and that even though my reasons relate to reducing the spread of disease and protecting my dog from harm, the offended owner claims I am depriving my dog of "playtime". These conversations are frustrating and demonstrate ignorance of both animal behaviour and personal responsibility. Calgary off leash parks are the most dangerous places to walk a dog, due to a) lack of owner training; b) attitudes of owner entitlement; and c) lack of enforcement. If by-law officers patrolled parks more frequently; they could observe dogs bothering other people while ignoring owners. Immediate education and action could be taken; instead, owners fail with impunity. A dog must nearly be killed before anyone takes it seriously. When my dogs and I were attacked by the St. Bernards, the by-law officer informed me "its a nice dog". Why? Because i the owner's home, the dog was well behaved. An hour earlier, on the street, 2 broke loose, one jumped on my back and the other tried to grab my 2 kg dog. I ended up at the Dr and my dog at the vet. This is not a pit bull issue; it's an owner issue. I travel all over the world interacting with dogs of every breed; no Staffordshire has ever been an issue. At those events, I've been threatened by a Labrador puppy, an Australian Shepherd tried to bite me, and a Rottweiler went for my thigh. At one time Rotes were the dreaded dog; now its Pitbulls. Please rethink this entire scenario to focus on owner education, owner fines and owner responsibility. I've lived in Calgary 20 years and each time I try to walk in the park, I am on edge - and not from Bully breeds - from owners who cannot control many types of dogs, including neurotic labradoodles with or without their prescribed "anti anxiety" drugs. It's a terrible feeling given the natural beauty Calgarians have strived to preserve by offering parks to citizens.

- It's not the dog it's the owner. Better education is needed for people. Your own information states that Pitbulls are not involved in more incidents than other breeds. This is just playing in to fear mongering, we can't let people cry wolf to dictate policy. Policy should be determined by fact and the facts do not support this.
- Person walking nuisance dogs in public must weigh more than total weight of the dogs, and must hold on to leash at all time.
- I strongly object to any breed specific wording.
- i am more afraid of a chihuahua than a pit bull , they are great dogs and should not be treated differently.
- Do not penalize pitbulls
- All dogs, regardless of the breed should be required to go through obedience training. The number of misbehaved dogs I see in public every day and owners who do not seem to care is staggering. Extremely disappointed that the city of Calgary has decided to single out 'pit bulls' as problem dogs. To say that the reason they are being singled out is because they have more strength I don't see how that is any different than literally ANY breed of dog weighing over 20lbs. A 'harmless' golden retriever could easily do just as much damage as a pit bull could if it wanted to. Falling in line with media propoganda, it used to be a point of pride for me that my city of Calgary didn't support BSL, shameful.
- Owners of a dog which attacks another dog or person should have their animal seized and should be prohibited from owning any dog. This should be regardless of species. Dog attacks are caused by irresponsible people who do not properly train their dogs.
- I'd support complete ban on pitbulls within the City. As for any dogs that declared to be nuisance, City should seize the dog and put it up for adoption to responsible pet owners. If an owner has more than 1 dog declared nuisance, they should be banned from owning dogs in the future.
- Put bulls are amazing dogs!!! I would be going after the [removed] who have the dogs and doing wrong by the breed before you do anything to the dog!!!! I grew up wth the breed and wouldn't ever own a small breed dog who are more known to attack then my pittys
- we need to protect the incapable pitbull owner from being attacked as well
- This is ridiculous. Pit bulls are sweet and loving dogs unless they are abused or owned by people who don't know how to train a dog. To separate them out from other dogs is nonsensical and outdated. They cannot bite harder than a German Shepherd or a Rottweiler. It is unfair to single them out and characterize them all as nuisance dogs that need to be muzzled and can't be off leash. It perpetuates unfair and unsubstantiated stereotypes. If you want to stop "nuisance dogs" maybe look at who owns them, who's breeding them and who they're selling them to. Fine them. Muzzle them. Make them pay higher insurance for irreparably harming the reputation of one breed of dog.
- Pit bull should be banned in Calgary
- Punish the owner, not the dog. Dog training should be required for all new dog owners and offered through the city at a discounted price. Any dog not trained properly is required to be surrendered to an animal shelter.
- Qwnership of Pit bulls should be banned

- Higher insurance and penalties should also be considered for other breeds which people choose due to their aggressive appearance and/or reputation (ex: rottweilers, akitas, wolf-mixes, dobermans, boxers, ect...) or any excessively large dog which could cause major damage to a person (ex: great danes))
- You guys are disgusting if you think perpetuating the idea that pitbulls are the only aggressive breed. It is the OWNER not the BREED. Every pit bull I've met is loving, you should really ban small dogs. They are the ones I constantly see biting other dogs and attacking large breeds. Shame on you Calgary.
- More enforcement at parks and playgrounds. People do not respect keeping dogs out of these areas, never mind keeping them on a leash!
- I do not believe that a dog should be allowed to run around free and bite people. If a dog is biting people, it should be destroyed.
- all breeds and mixes treated equal. no insurance, no muzzle etc unless that dog, no matter what breed, I'd proven dangerous. then a muzzle and insurance
- Strict liability regarding dog bites and unlimited liability for problem dog owners; ownership bans for problem owners
- Restrict/train dogs known to bite - I don't care if it is a harmless wanderer. Educate responsible ownership.
- Targeting Pit Bull or 'bully' breeds is ridiculous and discriminatory. Focus on nuisance dogs specifically, not a breed. ANY breed can be a nuisance dog if they are not trained or controlled.
- You should be ashamed of yourselves. You have zero evidence to back up a claim that these breeds are more of a risk. Pathetic.
- None breed bias is outdated and misguided
- Discrimination shouldn't be an option.
- Ban pit bulls. People's lives are not worth complete freedom of having a dangerous animal for a pet. There are a lot of dogs to choose from, you don't need a pit bull.
- How about obedience training for owners? In many cases, people may own a pet, however, have no idea how to responsibly care for it and keep it safe. Allowing it to run free at home being a prime example. Leaving it outside all day alone while at work is another.
- For obedience training, City of Calgary must provide AFFORDABLE pit bull training.
- This is a [removed] and illogical idea. How stupid can you be to hate on a specific breed of dog. Get your heads out of your [removed]
- I am an animal control officer in a small town in BC. I do not have extensive records for bites, however German Shepard's are by far a higher risk of bites than bully breeds. Perhaps all dogs over 30 pounds must be muzzled in dog parks to reduce the dog on dog attack percentages.
- ban breed specific laws . Hosers
- I DO NOT agree with anything that is stated above that has to do with pit bulls. It is not the breed that is the problem it's bad owners!! I have several friends who have very well behaved, trained and sweet/cuddly pit bulls who are better behaved than most dogs I've come across. We should not discriminate based on a breed. Do better Calgary, this is absolutely ridiculous that these are even being suggested!!

- Please do not focus on specific dog breeds but rather focus efforts on the ownership and owner responsibilities
- Fine the owner if their pet resorts to biting a person.
- Pit bull Ban
- In no way should there be blanket breed identification. This old school myth has been debunked for years and it's shocking and disappointing that the City of Calgary is entertaining adding a breed to the list that they themselves state: "It is important to note that while pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents than other dog breeds, the reason they are listed here is because a pitbull's strength allows the potential for a more severe bite." This is completely unacceptable. All references to measures pertaining to any specific breed - pitbulls in particular - should be removed from this survey.
- No breed specific legislation.
- DO NOT SINGLE OUT BREEDS. SUPPORT BYLAWS WITH FACT AND SCIENCE NOT IGNORANCE AND FEAR. have you also considered that not all bites are fault of dog? Some humans are assholes!
- Banning a specific breed of dogs is inappropriate and ridiculous. I have a pit mix and she is the most gentle dog I have ever owned. My German shepherd is much more excitable. Also, I'm pretty sure GSD's have the highest bite strength of any breed so the bit about pit bulls biting harder is likely at least partially false. I've mostly been bit or harassed by smaller breeds. Blame bad owners, not only the bad dogs. I can't believe this is even up for a survey/vote.
- no measures applying to a single breed such as a pit bull. Any dog not trained or abused can be dangerous and bite.
- Owners fined for walking dogs (any breed) with out a leash on outside of a off leash area.
- All dogs should go through some sort of obedience training
- Leave pitbulls alone, whatever bylaw comes out needs to be towards all breeds.
- How about you stop blaming the dog (or breed) and blame the [removed] owners. The pitties and staffy I know are just giant , drooling lapdogs. I don't know how many times you people need to be told it's not the breed. [removed]
- I wouldn't support any of it! Just because a dog is of a certain breed or looks like one, doesn't mean it's a nuisance or dangerous.
- None of these pitbulls are not to blame
- Specify "dangerous" behavior
- Bully dogs should NOT be singled out as bad dogs! Bad dogs are usually the owners fault, not a specific breeds fault.
- A nuisance dog needs to be proven as such; not assumed to be as a result of their breed.
- Ban pit bulls. They were bred to be violent and can explode in violence at any time. They are not safe and can't be safe. Ban them all.
- None of the above

- Pit Bulls must be banned. My wife was attacked and fines were levied however my wife was traumatized. No reason to keep nuisance/violent dogs.
- I do not support targeting a specific breed of a dog as aggressive, I believe any dog can be aggressive it depends on how they are raised. A dog is not born a nuisance.
- There are some good pit bulls and lots of terrible non pit bulls. Would like to see any aggressive dog face penalties and restrictions.
- Pit bulls should not be singled out. In many cases it is the owners fault if this breed is aggressive. It is not appropriate for the city to propagate the stereotype
- Fines for owners of any breed that bite
- Put bill bans have been tried in other jurisdictions and have been successfully challenged in court. If a Pitbull bylaw is enacted, the City will find itself in court and in all likelihood the bylaw will be declared illegal. The City should be focused on nuisance dogs.
- How about we hand out fines for people that discriminate against an entire breed of dog. According to this proposed bylaw it doesn't even matter if the breed is actually a pitbull, but any dog that RESEMBLES a pitbull: a dog that has an appearance and physical characteristics that are substantially similar to those of dogs referred to in any of clauses (a) to (d); ("pit-bull") Dog profiling and discrimination at its worst.
- Breed specific legislation is ineffective and unreasonable.
- No breed specific laws
- Dont discriminate. Hold all pet owners to the same standard.
- there should be none of these as an option
- Nuisance dog euthanized after 3rd aggressive incident.
- Obedience training for "nuisance" dog Owners.
- Training is required for all humans and their dogs. Any dog can be a biter, a barker, or a nuisance. Proper trading for both the human and the animal are essential.
- Only repeat offenders not breed specific
- people should have previous experience owning and taking care of dogs before taking on the care of a pit bull or otherwise rescue dog that has experienced trauma.
- Classification of "nuisance" seems too broad, since noise & at large are not issues that are dangerous to other people. If the dog is showing signs of aggression or has caused physical harm, than some of these measures would be warranted.
- Higher fines have to be handed out to owners, this a a shame that you are blaming one specific breed. A bite is a bite. A pit bull bite is not any worse then all big dog breeds. Why not account for all the small breed dogs that bite as well. It is never the dog, it is the owner. We must speak up for the ones that do not have a voice.
- No breed base bias. I am all for increasing penalties and restrictions on nuisance dogs, just not breed based.
- I would like to see pitbulls banned in the city. You read about them killing other animals or humans quite often, and I have personally come across aggressive pitbulls that make me feel unsafe for myself and my dog.

- Owners who have had nuisance dogs in the past must be held responsible for their new dogs.
- Remove the word pit bull from all of this. Honestly I have no clue how this made it to actually see the public. Outrageous.
- Incentivise good ownership habits, penalize owners rather than the dog.
- Dogs can be loud, but that doesn't mean they're a danger. Aside from that, why are certain types of dogs being discriminated against?! It is important to note that pit bull terriers were used as nanny dogs oftentimes in the past due to their nature. It's all dependent on how the owner trains them
- No muzzle bad training leads to bad dog.
- Ban ownership of pitbulls
- obedience training for the owner
- I do not support breed specific legislation
- Pit bulls are not any more dangerous than other large dogs.
- When a dog is declared a nuisance. The owner needs to get training and/or evaluated by a professional. Less so the dog itself.
- More severe restrictions could be applied to a nuisance dog. There may be circumstance where limited opportunities would prevent the possibility of reoffending. However, most dogs that cause injury to a human or another animal should be put down and the bylaw should be revised to provide owners a clear understanding of the consequences.
- Responsible OWNER training. There are NO BAD DOGS!!! There are BAD OWNERS!!!
- Ban pit bull type dogs entirely.
- Fines and training classes for owners who do not know how to properly care for their dog. Community engagement to educate the community, not slap fines and restrictions on any dog based on looks.
- Guardians of nuisance dogs should be required have education on how to properly (humane) train dogs.
- None of the above. Breed restrictions have proven ineffective and outdated
- Spend the money on finding these dogfighting rings and those owners, put the owners in jail not the dog these pups didn't come out of it mommy's soon wanting to fight they just want love respect and cuddles
- The punishment should walk on negligent owners, not the animal. A license should be issued to the individuals looking to purchase a "nuisance" breed, plain and simple. The dogs are incredibly intelligent, loving and loyal when trained properly. Banning them/muzzling them will only add to the rife.
- Eliminate pit bull ownership from Calgary. This is a dangerous breed that can hurt or maim small children and pets
- I support none of these and do not support breed-specific legislation. Owners should be held accountable as should their INDIVIDUAL dogs, not entire breeds.
- Owners of nuisance dogs should be required to take ownership and training classes.
- In my OPONION and it's just mine. I have seen other breeds be WAY more aggressive then the pitbull breed. Like chihuahuas!!!!

- Dangerous breed banning. If you want to own a dangerous dog, do it on a rural property, not in a city.
- None of these, it's stupid. Maybe look at the people who are going to get a pitbull, it's not the dog that's bad, it's the owner who trains. Use your head
- Mandatory training for the owner on how to properly care and train their dog. Regardless of breed.
- Ban pit-bulls
- No breed specific bylaws all dogs should be classified as the same.
- Higher fines and public muzzles for dogs who have attacked and/or aggressively bitten. (The general term nuisance doesn't work. If a dog is houdini and gets out a lot, muzzling them in public is of no use.)
- Reduce number of dogs a dog walker can have off leash at any given time.
- Pit bull ban
- There seems to be a lack of addressing the skills of the owner. A poorly trained dog with little guidance will likely become a nuisance. Perhaps if someone wants a dog that requires a higher level of training they should be required to be an experienced pet owner. You would give a 16 year old a Ferrari for their first car after getting their licence on a Honda civic test car, why would you let someone who has a history of crime or violence own a dog that can be influenced by that type of behavior. Might seem like a bit of a judgmental idea but you shouldn't punish a dog for learned behavior from their surroundings, its likely they could be retrained easier than a human could be.
- Owners of dogs that have been deemed a nuisance must also attend proper training in how to handle their dogs.
- Promote breed awareness
- Pitbulls should be banned, PERIOD.
- Breed specific legislation is wrong and unethical.
- Terrible ideas. This is what our taxes go towards?
- i dont think the problem is with the dog, it is with the owner, people should not have to pay more or be restricted due to having a specific dog
- Training should be mandatory for all dogs, regardless of breed
- None of the above. A "pitbull" does not even have the strongest bite force out of the dogs out there. Do research and site your sources to prove bsl that you are showing is invalid and not even remotely close to correct.
- It is not the breed, it is the lack of proper training & care. Pit bulls should not be singled out; any dog can be aggressive when humans provoke.
- 1 year re-assesment after mandatory obedience training for all dogs declared a nuisance. no specific breed legislation.
- Aggressive small dog breeds should never be allowed off leash
- None of these. These are all terrible. Pit bulls are not bad dogs—just misunderstood.
- Have the city of calgary pay for obedience training
- Discipline of dog owner for owners of nuisance dogs. Mandatory dog training classes for example (for the person first, then the dog)

- [Name removed] always talks about discrimination maybe he should heed his words and quit judging breeds. Or maybe the citizens should start judging him by the colour of his skin
- Absolutely no breed bias, it's like saying an ar15 is a more dangerous firearm because it looks different! Pit bulls DO NOT pose a higher risk to public safety!
- [removed]
- Any owner that adopts a 'nuisance' or fighting breed should have to take appropriate training for the human as well. Certification program preferred to confirm completion of training.
- No muzzles or bylaws against friendly dogs that are trained well
- Stop singling out certain breeds and their looks. Educate the owners and stop punishing the dog for his look. This is complete nonsense
- I do not support breed specific bans. I do however support a much stronger response to nuisance animals and those exhibiting dangerous behaviour (this can involve small dogs as well...)
- Drop the breed specific rules. In my experience the more aggressive and likely to bite dogs are small breeds that because their bites aren't as powerful get overlooked for biting and being aggressive.
- NO BYLAWS FOR SPECIFIC BREEDS. It's not about the animal, it's about the responsibility of the owner. Make owners responsible for behaviour, not dogs.
- Why has this survey been opened up to anyone, instead of specifically to Calgary tax-payers?
- [removed]
- consider straight-out bans on species determined by knowledgeable professionals to pose greater risk, & mandatory neutering of existing ones.
- Higher fines for all dog owners who break pet bylaws.
- Animals that bite causing the victim to go to emergency should be euthanized.
- I don't support any of these.
- Many people who own these kinds of animals are not going to be told anything. Therefore, there needs to be very stiff fines and some rigidity applied to these owners.
- Please punish the dog, not the breed. There are many large breeds of dogs that are NOT "pit bulls" that are more than capable of inflicting great damage or death to people or animals. I think fines should be MUCH greater for nuisance dogs, especially dogs that bite. First offense dog bites should have a hefty fine, 2nd offense should include jail time for the owner. Hold owners more responsible for their pets' actions.
- I DO NOT support breed specific bylaws
- Breed-specific restrictions that relate more to owners may need to apply. It is seldom that an "IT nerd" or an elderly individual or couple seek to own "pit bull" or related-breed animals. Similar to firearm ownership, more checks into owners should apply, as they are more responsible for animal behaviour than the animals themselves.
- How about you provide assistance and access to training programs for all dogs, instead of discriminating against a breed that is not predisposed to aggressive behaviour? It's the responsibility of the owner to keep their dog and other dogs safe, if the dog is a threat to others, the owner should be held accountable (not the dog).

- whats with the hate on pit bull? huskys are more dangerous - who is the nut job that hates on a breed?
- Define "dangerous behaviour". (Lunging, pulling, jumping, bite, growl) Define what nuisance would require additional insurance (barking? running at large? Licensing?) Contradictory statement. Dogs running at large are not allowed to go to the dog park? Using pitbull is stereotyping, many many MANY breeds can be a nuisance. Shame on you for using pitbull as an example, its the trainers of the dogs not the dogs.
- Nothing.
- People who unable to train their dogs properly should be banned from owning nuisance dogs or any dogs.
- Animal cruelty charges for owners found in repeat violation
- None of the above, these ideas are discriminatory and harmful to dogs.
- Calgary has the authority to require any dog the bites to attend training. There is little to no evidence breed specific legislation works and is not a deterrent but any aggressive or problem (barking, off leash etc) dog must be managed an responsible pet ownership enforced. Stricter barking enforcement us a must.
- Do not support breed specific legislation. Define what is "Dangerous Behaviour". What kind of nuisance would require additional insurance?
- pitbulls should NOT be muzzled when they are kind and sweet animals. We don't muzzle dogs meant for hunting and killing in the wild.
- Chihuahuas should be declared nuisance dogs.
- This is really about the uneducated owner. I'd like to see fines for the human involved and mandatory education. I know many Pitt I'll breed dogs who are amazing and lovely. I don't feel that it's fair to punish these dogs when people's terriers are usually the cause of dog fights in the parks I've been to!!!! I don't think we need breed specific legislation in Calgary
- I have been to many dog parks and never had a problem with pit bulls attacking my smaller dog. Other larger breeds have been mo be re of an issue. It is ridiculous to have Different rules for dogs only because they look a certain way.
- Obedience training required for dogs who are declared a nuisance and cannot return to off leash park until completed.
- The science does not support what you are saying about pitbulls. Your bylaw is based of off stereotypes and doesn't correlate with what the experts are saying. You need to educate yourselves before you discriminate out of misguided fear.
- Special Lincensing to breed them
- Charge the person and maybe require the owner has to attend a training course on how to handle their dog. Stop blaming the dog and blame the owners.
- BREEDS ARE NOT BAD. Any of these rules will result in unfair loving conditions based on breed, these dogs are not more of a danger. I have been attacked several times by small dogs but no one seems to care because they don't "look the part" of a violent dog. Instead, focus on making training accessible to every dog owner, and focus on making sure people with history of animal abuse do not get their hands on animals. Dogs are not to blame for the actions or inactions of their owners and should not be treated as bad dogs just because of their breed.

- This bylaw is ridiculous no dog that has never bitten or attacked should be muzzled
- NO, to all of the above.
- Train people to properly interact with dogs
- Pit bulls are not an issue. Owners are
- I do not own a pit bull, however feel this breed is being improperly targeted. Many of these suggestions might be better tailored to dogs in general not just a single breed
- No special rules for ANY DOGS.
- NONE.
- Breedism based policies are reductive, unsupported by scientific evidence, and harmful to the public. Animals are individuals, and their behaviour is largely based on environment and training, both of which are controlled by their human owners.
- Why pick on dogs that haven't done anything? Don't pick on pitbulls and crosses of the breed. Responsible ownership and training. Increase registration and fees for dog that have become aggressive. Make it mandatory to attend a training session approved by the city for any owner and dog that attacks or becomes aggressive with other dogs or people.
- The pit bulls aren't the problem, nuisance dogs are!
- The breed of animal does not dictate it's potential for danger. The owners must be held responsible regardless of breed. Targeting specific breeds will only cause delays and arguments when it comes to determine if an animal is of that breed or not.
- Ban pitbulls
- Pit bulls or "nuisance dogs" should be tested behaviourally before being allowed into off leash parks (as should any dog)
- I know many sweet and friendly pit bulls, this is ridiculous to enforce these rules based on breed and not based on the dog itself.
- Please do not ignorantly single out Pitbull breeds, do the research. All dog breeds have the same capacity for aggression if they are mistreated. The humans are the problem not the innocent animal in their care.
- Nuisance dogs must include all breeds, not just breed specific. Could be a shih Tzu or bichon frise.
- If a dog bites a person, the incident should be investigated. If the person was trespassing at the time of biting, the dog should not be reprimanded. Each incident should be investigated individually. It shouldn't matter what the breed of the dog is.
- Owner should be surveyed to see how treating animal after fine also.usually will be angry because of hassle and abuse the poor animal.
- Try fining the owners. Dogs do what they are taught or allowed to do. Fyi, Rottweilers have 100 psi bite than a pitbull.
- How about if ANY DOG (not just pit bulls!!!!!!!!!!) is vicious, there is a mandatory obedience training? Use the same concept as if a teenager committed a minor crime and use some restorative justice instead of negative reinforcement.

- Greater training and/or sanctions for dog owners when their dog bites or is out of control. It isn't the dogs fault, it is the owners
- None of the above
- Enforcement should be based on actual incidents, not breed.
- There needs to be more definition on the term nuisance. Who is determining whether the dog is a nuisance? In the case that a dog (not breed specific) has bitten someone, muzzle requirement in public or off leash areas should be a requirement.
- Pit bulls and nuisance dogs should be allowed in off-leash parks, if they are on a leash
- More support for pit bulls should be offered due to the erroneous treatment they receive.
- Nuisance dogs should also include ones that bark constantly. Rather than emphasis on pit bulls it should punish ALL dogs that bite regardless of breed. Owners should be held accountable and fined and also responsible for all medical/death costs inflicted on victim.
- Laws need to include all breeds big and small and not just focus on a particular breed. It's irresponsible owners that are the problem.
- Stop putting this on pit bulls. Pull your heads out of your [removed]. It is not the dog breed but the owner.
- This is absolutely abhorrent that you would create such a generalization about a breed of dog - It is so discriminatory!! It is inflammatory to label the "pit bulls" as the issue. The issue with aggressive dogs, more often than not, is the owners. Some people own "aggressive looking dogs" for the wrong reasons, but that is not the fault of the dogs. If a badly trained, aggressive, off-leash small dog charges at a leashes "pit bull" and that dog defends itself, would these bylaws not unfairly target the pit bull that was not the instigator?
- I do not understand that Mastiff, Kangal, Great Pyrenees, Labrador retrievers all have Similar or high bite force than Pitbull breeds. Yet these dogs are not on the list. I have been around Pitbull breeders and I was an owner of a Pitbull across Boxer and she was attacked in Regina and in Calgary by dogs that are much bigger and she never retaliated. Maybe the City should educate themselves on the FACT that Pitbulls and other dog breeds are not born aggressive and it is the owner who creates bad behaviour from their dogs. Maybe the fines shouldn't be directed towards Pitbull dog owners but owners that cannot put their dog through the correct training and should be taken away if that person cannot afford appropriate training. Every dog needs training some need more than others but don't be like Quebec and label Pitbulls as dangerous dogs when I have been attacked by other dog breeds more than any Pitbull Stanford shire terriers English or American bully breeds.
- Pit bulls and any breed looking like pit bulls shall be treated the same as any other breed of dog.
- Very concerned with this wording and singling our pit bull breeds
- Obedience training for any registered dog
- Leave the pit bulls alone
- None, it is not reasonable to pick one specific breed and punish them and their owners. These bylaws should NOT be allowed in Calgary.
- I don't agree with any of these. Maybe potential Pit bull owners need to have background checks before being allowed to rescue or purchase a Pit Bull.

- Breed bans have never proven useful. Ban the deed, not the breed! "Bully Type" is as bad as saying "Dark skinned". Most people officers included couldn't correctly identify bully breeds if tested.
- From working in a vet clinic we have to muzzle all chihuahuas and not pit bulls. Pit bulls are not the problem it's the irresponsible owners.
- NOTHING. Any dogs can be aggressive, it's the owners who own them. You should be ashamed of yourself for blaming "pitbulls". Maybe try jail time for the people who abuse animals.....
- While I agree that nuisance dogs can cause trouble (I work in an emergency department and have seen many dog bites), it is not the dog that needs to be punished, especially not a specific BREED of dog. It is the actions of irresponsible dog owners that needs to be addressed. In the case of "nuisance dogs", please enforce proper education and training for dog OWNERS.
- Pitbulls aren't the problem. Look into irresponsible owners. Smaller breeds of dogs are more likely to bite and instigate fights.
- All the things above but for "nuisance" dog owners. Leave the dogs alone.
- Breed specific legislation does not work and it punishes pets who are designated because of their breed not because of any bite or offense.
- How do you define nuisance?!
- STOP TRYING TO ISSUE BLS AGAINST "PITBULLS" - punish them deed not the breed
- Muzzles for irresponsible owners of nuisance dogs. Ie "nuisance people"
- Training for the humans who are owning any kind of dog. BSL is discriminatory and legislation should be based on the owners not the dog.
- You cannot just target one specific breed of dog.
- Do not penalize pit bulls or their owners.
- Every dog has the ability to be mean. The owners should be thoroughly investigated for animal abuse & if it's found, charged criminally.
- NO legislation specific to "pit bulls"
- No discrimination by breed or appearance.
- No need to single out pit bull, a bull dog or Shepard can have just as strong of a bite. Focus on behaviour of all breeds.
- Nothing needs to be changed
- These above restrictions and requirements should only be required if a dog is determined to be vicious.
- Required training and a fine for the owner who failed to train their dog. This could be any breed. It is the owners responsibility to learn about their dog breed and train them accordingly.
- Breed specific legislation is wrong.
- A dog that bites a human to the point of drawing blood should be euthanized.
- Instead of creating targeted legislation that is breed specific why not require all dog owners, regardless of breed, take a responsible pet owner course and prove their attendance to liscencr their dog. It is not about the dog it's about their owner and their ability to train and effectively care for the dog.

- Please reconsider BSL. This is a poor way of dealing with humans that don't deserve to have dogs. Don't punish every single dog of this breed or similar breed. You're being a racist for animals.
- Why are u limiting breeds it's not because of a bad breed it's because if a bad owner and if a lab bites me I would expect the law to protect me the same way. Also mutts come in many shapes and sizes you can't classify things based on the way they look, that's wrong, we are taught not to do that with people because assuming leads to issues. Get past the breed thing and focus on general responsible ownership
- NO breed specific legislation. It's the owner who is the problem not the dog!!!!
- [removed]
- any breeds small breeds are much more prone to biting and should be under any of these bylaws
- More regulations on rescues who try and adopt out pit bull breeds that's have previous issues.
- Specific breeds should NOT be singled out. Nuisance dogs should be well defined as any breed exhibiting aggressive or destructive behaviours without consideration of breed. A biting Yorkie Terrier could be categorized similarly despite the lack of jaw strength. It is the behaviour that is the issue.
- nothing breed specific! wake up!
- Let people live their lives with their choice of dog
- No breed specific litigation, please. The responsibility lies with the dog owner, and only problem dogs/owners should be fined and constricted, not an entire breed of dogs.
- None of the above. These are all ridiculous.
- Pit bulls do not have a stronger bite strength than all other dogs, this is false information
- This is awful. Statistically pit bulls are not involved in more dog bite incidents than any other dogs. Shameful that the city is considering this.
- [removed] Like hello? It's nothing to do with the breed and everything to do with the person. This is also so oppressive, are we moving towards a hostile government take over?
- Literally none of these. No special laws for owning a pit bull is ideal, because pit bulls are not a nuisance or aggressive breed.
- You guys are jerks leave pitties alone
- none of the above I've seen tiny little pomeranians that are worse than any if the dogs listed above. Its not the breed that is bad its the owner and how the individual dog is raised. You should be looking at harsher punishment for owners not specific animals.
- Stereotyping dogs just shouldn't happen. And pit bulls SHOULD NOT be individually singled out in ANY bylaw. Only dogs after multiple offences should face these consequences
- I do not have faith in what the city would determine to be a nuisanced animal. Need clear parameters. I do not own a pit bull but I think it is old history about how violent pit bulls are. Intelligence has moved beyond this paradigm. Pit bulls are often the most affectionate animals. Intelligence tells us it is the owners that are the problem. Focus on owners not the breed
- All dogs have the ability to bite and cause harm. As a Paramedic I have been to more Animal bites from Golden Retrievers than from Pitbulls. There needs to be more regulation on training. Maybe cheaper or free dog licenses if you attend and graduate from a certified Training program.

- It wouldn't be fair to isolate one breed especially when a lot of rescue foundations don't know and just put down pit bull terrier as default.
- In the 80s it was Dobermans, now barely a peep. Then it was German Shepards...now it is bully breeds and irresponsible owners of retrievers or small dogs can be total jerks with impunity. Please don't put the focus on bully breeds because it makes owners of terriers or chihuahuas know it doesn't apply to them. Don't give a free pass to people who think because it is not a bully breed, it doesn't matter.
- Owners of dogs that are a nuisance regardless of breed need to be disciplined, it is as much on the owner for poor training and control of their pet as it is the animal that may cause an incident
- Any dog can be aggressive. Why do this for the gentle giants and such. Maybe research these actual breeds rather than listening to such stereotypes smh. If anything provide more protections for the people that get their dogs provoked just because they are pitbulls. And if you wouldn't do it to a beagle, why a pitbull? Because someone said they were bad. It makes no sense. Listen to actual responsible pet owners rather than being blinded by uneducated Karens.
- Pit bulls should NOT be discriminated against. Lots of dogs have strong bite ability and I know many extremely well trained and harmless pit bulls who deserve to be at an off leash.
- Why are there not an option for none of the above. This line of questioning is discriminatory.
- You cannot tell someone which breeds they can or cannot own. Many pet owners are going to have issues with neighbors who are just looking for an excuse to have a dog removed out of spite. Good people are going to get hurt through this endeavour and good dogs are going to be destroyed "Murdered" because a couple people want to be angry over a breed that is less dangerous than a chihuahua!
- Breed specific legislation is inappropriate - I see many more bites and aggressive behaviour in other breeds
- All owners of all breeds should be held responsible, singling out specific dogs is both discriminatory and extremely unfair, any dog that has the potential to be a nuisance is not controlled properly
- Instead of banning dogs because people are scared. Open proper training and resources to help show humans not all dogs are bad or are scary.
- Breed specific laws are ineffective. Any type of dog can be dangerous, it has nothing to do with the breed and everything to do with the individual animal's training and owners.
- It is very wrong that breed specific laws are being proposed, pitbulls are not a danger nor should they be treated as one. Their bites do not cause more damage than another large breed dog and should not have extra laws because of their breed it should be determined by the past behaviour of the dog but by the breed.
- All dogs should need obedience training. Don't just pick on "nuisance dogs" and pit bulls. This is an atrocious survey and hasn't been thought through at all. P
- Don't judge the breed, judge the owner!!!! No dog is born bad, they are taught that behavior from a young age. I would rather see chihuahua's consider a "bully" breed.
- [removed] The reason that dogs are "nuisance" is because people treat them poorly, neglect them and put their own bad intentions on the dogs.

- Pit bulls should not be singled out all breeds have the potential to be a nuisance without proper training
- In this time of increases radical discrimination - why are we discriminating against a breed and those that look like them ? Education and training is all that is needed. This is becoming out of control Pet owners should be responsible for training their pets. - all pets - properly.
- Don't blame a breed, judge each incident on its own
- This line of questions is small minded and harmful to a gentle and friendly breed.
- None of the above
- Define how a dog is determined to be a "nuisance" v. "dangerous". A dog who is constantly barking and receives complaints is extremely different from an aggressive dog who bites. These terms should not be used interchangeably as they are on the questing above. Who determines if the dog is a nuisance vs dangerous? What are their qualifications as a complaint about barking does not require an owner to obtain additional insurance.
- NONE OF THE ABOVE
- I completely disagree with a breed specific rule. It is the human that is responsible for training and caring for the dog.
- Do not single out the bully breed!
- Train the human and the dog will follow. Do not specify breed when small dogs can be horrible biters and barkers.
- Training required or offered at the time of purchase for any animal.
- Stop focusing on a dogs look or breed and focus on individual dogs. If a border collie is aggressive it should need a muzzle. If a Pitbull is not aggressive (which 99% of them are NOT AGGRESSIVE) Then they shouldn't be muzzled! This is uneducated, and ignorant!
- You should not be prioritizing pit bulls as the main culprit for biting and nuisance behavior. There are many very well behaved, and well trained pit bulls. These questions should be related to nuisance behavior of all dog breeds. A chihuahua can be just as much of a problem in a dog park as a pit bull. Your stigma on pit bulls is honestly quite offensive. A dog's behavior is completely based on the owners ability to train their pet. If a pet is acting out or biting, the best measure that could be taken is seizure of the dog from the current owner.
- If nuisance dogs lose off-leash park privileges, perhaps there should be an option to restore those privileges based on ongoing good behaviour.
- I feel any dog that has had a nuisance label should have higher fines but to declare it only one type, ie: pit bull, pit bull type is narrow minded and not addressing the real problem of the owners.
- Nuisance dogs and pit bulls can't be off leash period.
- these should be for all dogs not specific dog breeds. owners need to responsible for their pets
- Is this even an issue here. It has been shown that these dogs are not a nuisance, the rather any dog to be a nuisance. This is usually because of the owner, not the breed. Get your head together Calgary. We're amending bylaws to move forward, not backward.
- Bad dogs have bad owners if the dog has been a nuisance then the owners need training
- Do not target pit bulls. That unfairly goes after responsible pet owners with well trained dogs.

- There shouldn't be so much prejudice against pit bulls simply due to their breed and "strength". Any dog can be a "nuisance" if improperly trained, as pit bulls can be wonderfully gentle. It's all down to the training (ie. responsibility of the owner, not the dog)
- Nothing. They don't deserve to be treated worse than any other dog. German Shepherds and Boston Terriers also have EXTREMELY strong jaws.
- Aggressive dogs or dogs who have bitten or attacked people cannot be off leash anywhere.
- I DO NOT support breed specific legislation. Yes, there are bad pit bulls. There are also bad Chihuahuas. There are very loving gentle pit bulls as well. Fines and especially banning of animal ownership are more effective. More funding for follow up of less serious complaints to avoid more serious situations.
- Because nuisance involves noise. . . le barking i was unable to consider your suggestions in relationship to dangerous or dogs that would bite.
- nothing. bad dogs aren't born, they're raised. therefore, there are no bad dogs. responsible pet owners won't bring an aggressive dog to the park. shame on you.
- It is unfair to pick on one breed or type of dog. All dogs have the propensity to bite if provoked and unless you mandate that all owners need muzzles and /or training then it is unfair.
- Calgary does some research and stops this!
- None of these. I am not a dog owner at this time & do not think these dogs should be policed in this way. These options are biased. I am interested in rehabilitation and proper homing for dogs that may be aggressive or bite. Using "nuisance" to include dogs that have been "at large" or bark is not in the interest of public safety or animal welfare, it is an overpolicing of dog owners and against the best interest of the welfare of these dogs.
- I disagree with singling out pit bulls and suggest you stick to nuisance dogs that can be any breed. Bad pet owners are responsible for bad pets if they don't intervene. Pit bulls have always gotten such a bad reputation however I know several responsible owners and their dogs are well behaved. I think this focus on pit bulls is unfair and needs to be reviewed.
- Wow, really?! BSL language, after many experts have weighed in on how I'll informed BSL is? Deed not breed.
- Please don't single out pit bulls. It is often poor training on the owner if a dog bites/is aggressive. Not the breed! The notion of pit bulls being singled out seems so archaic and not based on any education or research.
- None of the above, BSL solves no problems. It's completely untrue that pit bulls have a strong bite force. Creating these bylaws puts all blame on the breed of the dog and causes negative consequences for those owners who have worked hard to train with their dogs.
- Breed specific legislation is wasteful and dangerous.
- Obedience training for EVERY dog. Stop being prejudice [removed].
- I feel that increasing any fine due to a dog misbehaving will not encourage the owner to seek more training. Animals are misbehaving because THEIR OWNER did not supply adequate training to the pet and therefore set their pet up for failure. Responsible pet ownership should be encouraged including gaining more knowledge about their breed of dog and to correct the dog's behavior, being able to identify early warning signs of behaviors that will require attention and correction etc.; adequate training must be obtained for the owner and the pet. Any pet can bite, or be a nuisance as described above, no dog breed should ever be singled out because if not trained properly, any pet can be a danger to their surroundings. A pet should probably be removed from the household or household should be forced to obtain training if biting continues because said household appears to not be able to take care of their pet and supply the necessary attention, training and knowledge the pet requires. Owners neglect will cause animals to be dangerous.

- None of the above Don't blame the breed blame the owner
- Dont Discriminate against pit bulls, theyre one of the most LOVING breeds of dogs. Dont say they require special treatment if it's not being mandatory for ALL dogs as well.
- Do not specify a breed off dog! Charge people that taunt a dog or provoke a dog to bit. Not the dog or the dog owner.
- When dogs exhibit negative behavior, it's a reflection of their owners - NOT the breed. When all other options above have been exhausted, seizing the dogs should be the LAST option.
- Non of the above the breed has nothing to do with bits. It is the owner that should be fined. As the dog is just doing what it knows. Any dog can bit.
- There is no substantial research that shows that "pit bulls" (which is not a registered breed but rather a nickname) have any greater jaw/bite strength than that of a German shepherd, etc.
- I absolutely disagree with all of the above mentioned. Pit bulls are no more aggressive than any other breeds.
- Only one that is fair
- Higher fines for smaller aggressive dogs
- Bad dogs come with bad attitude owners that are the problem not the dog, we have a Rhodesian ridgeback in the neighbourhood that traumatizes other dogs its not just pit bulls stop marketing them as a problem.
- Training for owners!! It's not usually the dogs fault if they are aggressive it's the owners
- Pitbull breeds are not a problem. BSL in any way is narrow minded and punishes people/breeds before anything even potentially happens. If ANY dog is a nuisance then they should have to go to obedience training. I have had more aggression from small dogs infinitely more times than a big dog or "pitbull type" dog.
- this is [removed]. i experience more issues with chihuahuas than pitbulls. ALL dogs need to be adequately trained. blaming a dog for, in your own words, "the potential" for a more severe bite is unfair.
- This by law is over the top and punishing good dog owners with these types of breeds because of some bad apples. I think this bylaw is unnecessary and should be dropped.
- There's nothing wrong with pit bulls. Other bigger breeds have strong bites as well. No additional rules for pits, only for specific dogs who have been aggressive in the past.
- The banning of pit bull type breeds will not do anything to prevent animal aggression. Every single animal behaves differently according to how they're raised. As a child, I was severely attacked by a small Australian terrier that was off leash. The size of the dog has nothing to do with whether they bite or not. If pit bull breeds “deserve” to be muzzled, have to have insurance, and take training lessons, then so does every other dog. If a dog owner can’t have more than one pit bull, then no one should be allowed to have any two of the same dog breed. You cannot hold a dog accountable to an owners irresponsibility.

- You cannot single out one breed/type of dog. It's the owner of a dog that is the problem, not the dog itself.
- None, this a stupid idea and leading questioning to discriminate this breeds.
- Nothing. Leave them alone
- None of the above.
- Owner is the nuisance and requires education about dog management
- It all comes down to training and owner responsibility not about dog breed. Other dogs like German shepherds and rotties are dangerous too when not trained properly
- Obedience and Owner Training!!
- This is ridiculous. If pit bulls aren't involved in more bite incidents than other dog breeds this bylaw shouldn't be passed. Please focus your energy on helping pet owners be responsible (ie. Early dog warming system) and not generalizing that all pit bulls and similar breeds are "bad". This issue is more about the owners than it is about the dogs.
- Most of these are totally insulting and inappropriate, my small dog can do as much damage as a “pit bull”. stop demonizing the breed and have some options that hold the owner more responsible.
- Stop discrimination against the dogs and focus on bad owners!!!
- Breed specific by-laws are inappropriate. There are irresponsible animal owners, not irresponsible animals. Breed specific is discriminatory.
- Children, or owners not strong enough to control or restrain large dogs, should not be permitted to walk the large dogs in public if they cannot restrain them.
- Fine the owner, not the pet! It is the human’s fault, not the animal
- None of these, these are authoritarian and prejudiced, especially right after acknowledging pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents.
- NO breed specific bylaws.
- There should be no special rules for certain breeds who have shown no aggression.
- Why a specific breed? Did you know that Golden Retrievers are prone to attacking more-so than any other breed of dog? Or what about small dog breeds; they attack/bite often, just not severe enough to be news worthy. This bylaw is all bs.
- BSL does not work. I worry more about this small dogs loose/roaming than I do the large breeds. Please focus on educating owners for responsible pet ownership
- NO BREED SPECIFIC LEGISLATION
- Stop with the pitbull specific bullying.
- Focus on nuisance dogs not specific breeds
- Irresponsible owners is the problem not the dogs. Dog problems are not breed specific and it is not right to single out a specific breed over another.
- People who deliberately raise dogs to be aggressive should be BANNED form dog ownership.

- Pit bulls should not be singled out
- There is no scientific evidence that pit bull type dogs have stronger jaws. This is a myth. You also specifically state that they don't bite more often than others, so why penalize them?
- Absolutely no mention of breed ANYWHERE. All cases should be handed on a case by case basis based on ONLY the dogs incident/behaviour/history whether its a golden retriever, a cattle dog or a St Bernard. BREED IS NOT RELEVANT.
- There is no evidence that 'pitbulls' are any more dangerous than other breeds. Not to mention that including a generalized type of dog in this survey about nuisance dogs created an automatic bias that automatically skews any results. It doesn't give calgarians the opportunity to voice an opinion about breed specific legislation. I believe in education over legislation.
- Perhaps if obedience training become mandatory for certain dogs you should try to ensure obedience training is up to standards of actually training dogs. Not giving them treats and they'll learn to sit.
- Leave it as nuisance dogs, any dog has the potential to bite, leave "pitbull" breeds out of legislation, German Sheppards, Rottweiler, golden Retrievers, cane corso, mastiffs etc they all have the same potential to buy and injure.
- What about the small dogs? Why pick on pit bull type dogs? BSL doesn't work, it's not the dogs but the OWNERS that need to be trained and punished. This is such a stupid bylaw and I'm ashamed of my great city for even thinking this is ok!!!
- Owners should be fined if a dog regardless of the breed has bitten anyone. The breed should be discriminated against
- None of the above, they are family pets just like any other dog. Its the owners that are at fault, train them.
- Disagree with BSL. No different than profiling a certain group or faction of people by race. Very discriminatory!!
- Any dog can be a nuisance. Breed specific legislation does not work.
- Treat all dogs equally :)
- The onus needs to be placed on the humans who do not train/educate their dogs. There should be more emphasis on evidence based training methods for owners of all dog type. I take umbrage regarding "pit bull's strength leads to more severe bites" that is simply not true. There are many common breeds that have a stronger bite force than "pit bull" types.
- Pit bulls on their own are not nuisance dogs. Owners of any dog should be held liable for the behavior of any dog they own. Every dog owner should have training of some sort especially new dog owners. I don't own a pit bull but do not support discrimination based on the look of a dog but the actions of the dog and owners instead should be held responsible.
- You guys are right off your rockers. All dogs are a liability at the hands of a [removed]. People are a nuisance; not dogs. Maybe instead of trying to extinguish a breed, put better laws in place to protect them, that way they don't become violent. Make it harder to access a "nuisance" breed. Make people register their pets. Don't punish good pet owners for trying to give a dog a good life.

- Mandatory City provided dog education courses similar to AA style meetings often required in alcohol related offenses.
- Why are you treating pitbulls differently? Any breed can exhibit aggressive behavior. Chihuahuas are known to be quite aggressive towards people they don't know. The only difference is their size and their bites might not cause as much damage. Whatever law is passed should not be targeted towards pitbulls only and should apply to all dogs no matter the breed.
- These bylaws should ONLY apply to dogs who have bitten or been unnecessarily aggressive. Breed legislation is unfair and cruel.
- NO BREED SPECIFIC LANGUAGE
- None
- I don't think a breed of the dog is the issue it's the owner. My dog has never had issues with pit bulls at any park. However in general owners should not be letting their dog off leash if they know there is aggression. The fines should be higher for those people not based on a breed.
- None of the above. That is unacceptable
- Crazy y'all literally think one dog breed is a problem. None of the above, leave it how it's been. Idiots.
- [removed]
- None of the above. All dogs created equal and deserve equal treatment.
- Obedience training required for all licensed dogs in a Calgary.
- None of the above
- No one should have to pay heavier fees based on the breed of dog they choose. We need to hold the owners accountable for the actions of their pets. No dog should need to be labeled a nuisance just to please others.
- Ban pitt bulls
- These dogs should not be discriminated against. This is unfair. Do not amend the act if it's sole purpose is to degrade these sweet dogs
- Pitbulls are not the problem. Any dog can be a problem or nuisance this is not breed specific. Little dogs bite more then big ones and that is because those owners do not train their dogs properly, those owners think it's cute cause they are small. That behavior gets those little dogs in trouble and every one blames the big dog. Also your survey is skewed because there is no definition to what you refer to as nuisance plus the validity of the process depends on the judgment portion of this plan. Biased people judging a pitbull leaves those owners and frankly those dear sweet family members out to dry.
- Pit bull breeds shouldn't be targeted.
- These are all awful. Leave pit bulls alone
- Obedience training should be required for all breeds not just pit bulls. A golden retriever can be just as dangerous to bystanders if they don't have a recall, manners, or social cues in every situation.
- Leave Pitbulls alone you are being a bully.
- The owner is the problem - not the breed.

- I don't think we should ban pit bulls just because the owners didn't train it right and didn't treat the pit bull right.
- Make it fair with dog breeds.
- Breed specific legislation is wrong on so many levels. All dogs and owners need to be held responsible regardless of breed and should be held to the same standards. We're not allowed to create different legislations for different breeds of people, why dogs?
- None of these. [removed] for pit bulls.
- Dogs deemed a "nuisance" should have their home life investigated to ensure they are receiving adequate care, training and exercise. If not obedience classes should be recommended to retrain the owner as well as the dog.

- It is not the dog that is the problem. Owners need to learn how to properly train and take care of their pets. Owners need training. Dogs should not be punished or restricted. Many owners are responsible pet owners, those who are not need training. You should never take prejudice against how an animal looks.
- targeting pitbulls is wrong. Other breeds not specified have a more powerful bite, why are they not included??
- Should punish the owner, not the animal. Is there a reason why this engagement is suddenly anti Pitbull without a reasonable justification? It is almost comical how obtuse this engagement is. None of this was covered in the first engagement.
- This should not be breed specific at all.
- This is ridiculous, it's not the breed it's the dog!! All dogs are different!!
- Small breed with complaints must complete training for behavior and anxiety.
- There doesn't seem to be any real weight behind the idea of singling out "pit-bull" type or looking dogs. German Shepards, large retrievers, etc can all possess the jaw strength to severely bite. If any bylaws were to be introduced, they should not target a single type of dog.
- Stop going after certain breeds! Small dogs instigate a lot of fights and the big dogs or bully breeds get blamed and punished. Don't take dogs from their owners when something happens and treat them like savages. They have families that love them and the city is SAVAGE in how they treat the family!
- pit bulls are not inherently more violent or more dangerous than other dogs, they are just dogs that can be trained to be more violent (as can literally any other dog breed). creating laws against this specific breed is not only unfair to loveable animals that need homes and love as much as any other animals, its completely uneducated and driven by stereotypes and fear. do some actual research on pitbulls and the breeds and dont promote hurtful stereotypes on animals that havent done anything wrong.
- Obedience training required for all inner city dogs. Hold the owners accountable, not breeds.
- Why are you only saying pit bulls when breed has nothing to do with irresponsible dog owners. It's 2020 stop already
- I support none of these prejudice suggestions.
- Obedience training and a large fine for the owner of the offence dog/ owner.

- The so called pitbull breed was not originally what the media portrays them as now. Just cause some people trained their own different doesn't mean all are the same. I have two amstaff rescues and I wouldn't trade them for nothing. I've had many dogs of different breeds through out my life and other than a mastiff/dane/Sheppard cross the amstaff and their counter parts have been the most loyal and loving of them all. They were nanny dogs, they are decorated war dogs. IT'S NOT THE BREED, ITS THE PERSON TRAINING THEM. START TO PUNISH THE HUMANS THAT TRAIN AND GIVE THEM A BAD NAME
- All of these are ridiculous. Breed specific legislation is antiquated and unnecessary.
- NONE
- Pit bulls are one of the nicest breed of dogs out there. They are judged online because of their histories being FORCED in dog fights and are being portrayed as abusive. I trust my pit bull with my baby more than i trust my own sister. Not once has he done any wrong in his life. Don't judge a dog because of their history, NOT ALL DOGS ARE THEIR HISTORY. It's the bad people who have done this to this breed, but i'm just saying not all dogs are their owner. and i'm pretty sure if a dog was considered a nuisance why would the owner take them to a public area with other dogs? Ask yourself that question.
- Pit bulls and staffy type dogs should not be victimized as they are only one of several breeds that have predisposition for aggressive behaviour
- Every case needs to be treated individuals without prejudice
- Do not punish the breed because bad owners gravitate towards certain breeds. Punish the owner for being unable to train and control their dog, not an entire breed of dogs that are just doing what they learn from their owners.
- [removed]
- Nuisance dog owners must go to therapy & change their behaviour patterns that make them need & create an aggressive dog & have dogs taken away from them.
- It is wrong to single out the "pit bull" or variation thereof and declare it aggressive and unsafe.
- None of the above. Animal discrimination is wrong.
- No breed specific rules. The owner of a dog that bites no matter what breed will be fined
- Pit bulls are not the only breed with a jaw strength capable of providing a severe bite. German shepherds and other dogs are just as capable of the same damage.
- Background checks on people with pit bulls. Dogs are not the problem, they are trained to be a problem.
- Breed specific bylaws are proven to not be effective and are incorrect, unfair, and not justified. Don't bully my breed.
- A pit bull band would be appropriate
- A license and review for breeders of these breeds. It's important that they are being properly socialized and trained in a healthy environment from day 1.
- Ban the ownership of pit bull type breeds
- Discounts on dog registration for completion of obedience training
- Colour coded leashes that let people know the tempermant of a dog.

- Pitbulls are not the problem, the owners are ultimately the problem. A strong person wouldn't be fined or require insurance because they are stronger than the average person. Dogs shouldn't be banned from parks based on their breed. Larger dogs typically need more space and exercise, limiting the spaces they can run and play would just cause more issues.
- It is wrong to ban specific breeds or out pitfalls specifically. Fines should include all dogs no matter the type and size.
- Owners required to get training as part of any fine issued for a pet problem.
- Do not allow ownership of violent breeds
- Owners of any bully breed dogs, German shepherd, Rottweiler, husky, etc. should be required by law to complete a training course to ensure that they are prepared to properly handle the animal. At least one person per household, or perhaps any adult in the household. So many experts say that is not the breed but rather the way the breed is handled by a person, so fix the people.
- Ban or restriction on owning bully breeds/pit bulls.
- I strongly disagree with these laws against pit bulls. These are definitely strong dogs, however, they are not a fierce dog, unless they are raised that way by their owner. With that said, any dog can be fierce with a terrible owner. There are other dogs which are larger and stronger than pit bulls, which could do just as much damage.
- Mandatory screening of prospective owners who wish to acquire dogs with high bite strength. Prospective owners must show good character and commitment to enforce good behaviour.
- don't ban the breeds. stupidest thing i've ever heard calgary doing, and that is including the blue ring.
- Mandatory human education before owning and being responsible for a living creature. You must prove to the government you have the skills and education to drive a vehicle, to obtain a job, etc. Instead of putting breed specific legislation out there, why not impose mandatory education/licensing required to own a pet to prove the individual is capable of properly caring for an animal.
- Education for owners that are mistreating their dogs as it is the owner, not the dog itself that encourages the attacks.
- Owners of so-called nuisance dogs MUST be given stiff fines. These are not the dogs' fault!!
- Strength of the Pitbull is your reasoning? There are MANY stronger dogs with much stronger bite. This is identical to Racism. If you replaces 'Pitbull' with any nationality, there would be uproar!
- pitbulls are not aggressive. they are easily trained. this is simply spreading fear of a dog breed.
- Ban pit bulls and dogs declared a nuisance altogether
- Dogs should never be judged based on breed. This is outrageous that the city would be even be considering a pit-bull or pit mix designation. Every dog whether it is a family lab or tiny lap dog needs to be considered based on the character of that dog. I've had more issues with aggressive small dog while out in the dog parks. This pit-bull specific attack is in Calgary.
- No Pit bulls allowed in the city.
- Owners have to prove they are not total idiots. Seeing as how people that like those dogs are idiots they won't be able to get a pet
- NO. Just no. Invest in programs to teach dog owners.

- No breed specific legislation
- owners of nuisance dogs who have previously offended are issued more severe fines if an animal is a repeat offender or if another animal causes a disturbance. Furthermore any owner whos total offenses with one or more animals is convicted of 2 or more offenses shall be deemed an.unfit owner and will not be allowed to own any nuisance breeds
- This is absolutely insane.
- Nothing. Breed specific legislation has proved highly ineffective in other areas
- More emphasis NEEDS to be placed on training people. More resources need to be put into shutting down shady or uneducated breeders. You should be required to have a license to breed dogs. People who have never had a dog before should be required to attend training classes that focus on socializing dogs and dealing with situations like dog fights in a calm and reasonable manor. As someone who has had dogs my entire life and understands dog behaviour, there are many many people in this city that should not have dogs. They create more undesirable situations than the dogs do. People need to be trained and educated. If this is focused on, I'm sure dangerous or bad situations would be significantly reduced. First time dog owners should have to go to classes if they are planning on getting a challenging breed. Ever dog that is raised right and with structure can be a good dog.
- Potential jail time or community service of Owners of dogs who seriously injure a human.
- Punish the owner not the animal
- Ban pitbulls. there's hundreds of other dog breeds. There is no reason why anyone needs a pitbull.
- Leave pitbulls and pitbull style dogs alone. Go after ACTUAL problem dogs, like the little ones that yap and bark all day and nip at people.
- I would strongly support a ban on ownership of pit bulls and related dogs. There is no reason to own these dogs anymore than one should own an assault rifle for fun and home defense
- No one breed should be mentioned. All dogs are the way they are due to the owners. Mentioning pitbulls is offensive!!!!
- Be observed by a DVM and opinions on animal welfare based on findings from Veterinarian and the owner collectively.
- Should be all not just put bulls it's the owners fine them accordingly don't lump them all together
- You should all be ashamed of yourselves. There are no studies that prove pitbulls are more dangerous than other breeds. Maybe instead of punishing the dogs you bring awareness to people. Teach your kids to respect dogs, not to run up to them. Dont try and pet or tease dogs with food. If I ran up to someone and tried to hug or pet them, pretty sure they'd react the same way a dog would. [removed] And also, in the studies that have been done pitbulls have less force in their bite than many other breeds. If its not your dog you have no right to touch or pet. Educate YOURSELVES on how to deal with a scared dog that got out because I can guarantee you, that dog would only bite if it feels threatened. [removed]
- None of the above, there is no scientific evidence proving a pitbull is more aggressive or dangerous than any other breed. Get educated.

- Pit bulls should not be singled out as a dangerous breed. Owners of any dog breed should be held equal including small dogs, which have been shown to be more aggressive than any larger breed.
- Your survey is equating "nuisance" dogs with pitbulls which is going to create biased results. Pitbulls are not nuisance dogs and they are not inherently dangerous. Bad owners make dogs dangerous. Most dog bites happen in the home and there is no evidence to support breed specific legislation. Instead more education on responsible dog ownership and teaching children how to approach dogs would be helpful. Any dog can bite if not properly trained/socialized or if they are put in a situation where they have no other option. It's the responsibility of all owners to keep their own dogs safe as well by not allowing them to get into a situation where they have no other option.
- This isn't the dogs fault. It's the irresponsible owners
- No restriction
- Leave pit bulls alone
- Pit-bull dogs of any type are NOT pets. Pit-bulls unfortunately cannot select a responsible owner. In majority of cases they are adopted by very irresponsible owners only interested in sending a message to impose fear to people around them including children; unfortunately this fear sometimes is translated in attacks by the owner or by the pit-bull causing trauma to innocent people including children. I definitely do not feel safe around pit-bulls and their owners.
- Follow Ontario's lead. No large aggressive dogs allowed whatsoever in the province.
- There should NEVER be a breed specific bans. Breeds other than 'Pitbull' types have a higher bite percentages.
- This is ridiculous. A dog that barks must be muzzled? And why the hate on for pit bulls.? What about Rottweilers? Or pinschers?
- Compulsory training for bad dog owners. The UK and other areas have been through this and made the same mistakes. It is widely expected that bad dog owners are the issue.
- None of the above, this new law is not the solution why only Pitbulls? Its like you are saying we do not want Muslims because of their religion they are all terrorists!! Come one City of Calgary !!
- The City of Calgary must stop trying to prejudice citizens against bully breeds. It is unacceptable. Owners need to be responsible.
- Its the owners who create aggression. Same with EVERY other breed. Mistreat a dog and they get scared and act out. People need to stop blaming breeds for people's problems. You want a dog, be a reasonable, loving pet owner. You get hurt, leave the breed out of it and deal with the owner who is causing or trying to rehabilitate the aggression. Its a People problem not a breed problem.
- This is breed discrimination. It should not matter the breed. Any nuisance dog should be subject to the same rules. There should not be different rules for different breeds.
- Ban all pit bull breeds from our city.
- Enforcement
- If any dog no matter the breed bites or is a danger to others. The city should have the right to seize the animal and do an investigation into the home of the animal. Similar to if a child was taken by cps. The breed of the dog is not the issue it is the owner. Once the investigation is done there should be fines laid out to the owner based on the findings of the investigation. This means looking at what caused the attack and if there has been issues in the past and look at how the owner treats the dog. I can say from experience that most of the dogs I have had issues with at the dog parks are the ones that aren't socialized. I have seen many pit bull dogs and they are one of the most friendly ones at the park.

- You can not just single out pit bulls , dogs are all equal . You can have another breed of dogs other than pit bulls can be dangerous . Often it is the owners not the dogs ... your focus should be educating public about dog ownership .
- Institute bylaw banning ownership of pit bulls and other dangerous or aggressive breeds.
- higher fines for pit bulls and nuisance dogs involved in bylaw offences whos owner has not put them through obedience training.
- Owners need to be subject to financial penalties is their pet is involved in an attack on either human or animals that causes injury. Fine, jail terms, whatever, there is NO EXCUSE for animals to act in a way that is dangerous to humans, or to other peaceful animals.
- If the dog is a multiple offender with bites/attacks (not noise complaints or 'being at large') then being muzzled in parks and obedience training are fair but for ALL DOGS NOT JUST PITT BULLS ETC
- Complete ban on bit bulls.
- Declare pit bulls illegal within the city, they are not allowed to be owned.
- This needs to be considered from the perspective that if a small dog behaves aggressively and so does a pit bull, this ought to be treated in a similar manner no matter the ability to inflict injury as it has serious ramifications in a dog park setting and how other dogs might react. Obedience training for specifics that have been deemed a nuisance or dangerous are important and different from any breed specific rules.
- You really should look at more science behind pitbulls. To make a biased survey towards one type of dog is pretty sad and you need to do a lot more research. Any dog can bite so not sure wear your for your research from to only say pitbulls do. Either you got to much time on your hands with covid and are bored cause [removed] there are bigger issues out here .
- ideally a complete ban on pit bulls in the city
- Breed neutral, evidence-based legislation only.
- Ban pit bull
- Higher fines for noisy dog
- Ban pit bulls and nuisance animals.
- For the potentially aggressive large breeds, prior to access to dog parks/off leash areas, have pet parent(s) have dogs behaviour assessed accordingly.
- All dogs should have mandatory obedience training and proper socialization.
- Ban pit bull type dog breeds
- Pit bulls do not have a stronger bite. Please do your research.
- Additional insurance required for nuisance dogs. There cannot be more than one nuisance dog in a household.

- While it is understandable that people love their pets, the cases of attacks by Pit Bulls are higher than other breeds. That's empirical evidence. Period. The City of Calgary needs to step-up and protect its citizens.
- The breed should not matter when it comes to fines or bylaws the owner should be at fault and NOT The dog.
- No breed specific legislation!!
- NO BREED SPECIFIC LANGUAGE!!!
- Hold the owners of the dogs responsible, not the dog. These will not decrease anything. The main and biggest issue is irresponsibly owners getting dogs that they are unable to train and care for properly. All dogs can do what "pit bulls" and BSL is a terrible and widely proven ineffective method!
- NONE
- What are the studies that show pit bulls being worse than any other dog. Why should the fine be worse for one dog vs another
- Dangerous breed ban.
- All dog owner's should attend dog training when they get a dog. Need to reduce the possibilities of dog bites through education and ensure dogs are socialized. All dogs can bite. An owner should not have a dog if it has to be muzzled and/or cannot behave at an off leash park..
- This is a "leading" question. It implies a misinformed and outdated bias by the city of Calgary not based on facts. I am incredibly perturbed by these statements regarding bully breeds. It further reinforces the 'bad boy' stereotype that causes bad segments of our population to want to own and abuse these breeds. It continues the misinformed stereotype. I have had many bully breed dogs in my lifetime and some make ideal canine citizens others do not, but that has been my experience with all kinds of dog breeds from small to big. In any case, if I haven't made myself clear, this survey is none sense and a waste of my tax money, I am appalled by the ridiculous implications.
- You should be ashamed of yourselves for using the breed "Pitbull" it's never, I repeat, never, the dog or breeds it's the humans!! When will this organization figure this out. Couldn't be any dumber, and I will never support any breed specific rules period! You should be embarrassed by the way your trying to exclude a breed
- The fact that you're punishing the dogs and not the owners is disposable. I have had more problems with smaller dogs like chihuahuas than pitbulls. Actually punish bad dog owners instead of the dog breed itself.
- Ban all pit bull & attack breeds.
- [removed] The fact that the city is deflecting responsibility from the animal owner to the breed of dog is short sighted. This is Donald Trump style legislation and it's embarrassing to even believe a city I was once proud of for having a model animal services is aiming to demonize certain breeds based on their looks. This is disgusting and anyone supporting this new plan should be ashamed.
- Rehome nuisance dogs and charge fees to the owner that the animal was removed from
- Pit bulls should NOT be singled out just because of their breed. Any aggressive behaviours is mostly due to poor / irresponsible ownership
- It's the owners not the breed. Penalize the owner !!!!

- If the dog hasn't been trained properly, the owner should be held responsible. Not the dog.
- Fines for owners that fail to control and train their dog
- Ban dangerous breeds and jail time for owners of dangerous breeds who leave the scene. The city should be able to sue owners of dangerous dogs for damages as should the victim
- Treat ALL Breeds the same!!!! You wouldn't discriminate against groups of people..
- Not all pitbulls and similar dogs are dangerous and it does more harm fear mongering and stereotyping them all. Don't blame the dog hold the owner more accountable.
- None of these. It doesn't need to change. You even acknowledged that they are NOT involved in more attacks. This is just straight up discrimination
- City ban on all Pit Bull types.
- By administering BSL you are severely putting certain breeds' lives at risk. Judge not by their breed but by their actions. As you would to any human.
- PLEASE do not allow people to walk pit bulls or dangerous dogs on city sidewalks, close to where there are lots of people, and PLEASE make a bylaw that prevents these dogs from being on transit or in any enclosed space. It is very anxiety-inducing and worrying to see this, and owners need to be mindful of others who choose not to have pets, who are scared of such dogs or who have had traumatic experiences with them. PLEASE consider these measures so that those of us who choose not to have dogs, don't have to be around them without recourse. Thank you so very much!
- Higher fines for dogs involved in serious biting situations.
- Strongly disagree with prejudice towards pit bulls.
- None of these are supported by me
- No dog should be singled out as "nuisances". ALL DOGS CAN ATTACK, ALL DOGS CAN BE TRAINED. LEAVE THE DOG UP TO ITS OWNER.
- Nothing
- The definition of "pit bull" is absolutely ridiculous. Humans train dogs. Fine the human that can't take care of their animal, not the breed.
- I agree that larger dogs by nature can cause more damage than a small dog but do not support breed specific legislation; only legislation aimed at nuisance/aggressive dogs and irresponsible pet owners.
- It has nothing to do with pit bulls. It has everything to do with owners and training. It's asinine for the City to go over a specific breed. I repeat, it has nothing to do with the dog. EVERYTHING to do with the owner and training. If you disagree you don't understand how to train a dog. Research!
- Ownership of these types of dogs in the City should be prohibited.
- Ideally pitbulls should be banned and phased out altogether like they have done in Australia.
- If this was a general bylaw being applied to ALL breeds I would agree with quite a few
- Pitbulls should not be noted separately here, at all, ever. All dogs matter, all dogs are equal. Punish the delinquent owner.
- put down all dogs that attack at first offence
- Why is this question focussed on pit bulls? Any breed of dog can be termed a "nuisance", etc.

- None of the above
- I live across the street from people with drug/alcohol issues. Their pitbull bit someone on June 26, 2020. The owner was charged and refuses to pay the fine for the dangerous dog registration. It's a matter of time before this unsupervised dog gets out and attacks someone. It's a dangerous situation, and sadly, we can't do anything but wait. The owners aren't responsible and I doubt any amount of reasoning is going to change how they treat their animals. There is a second dog in the house, and, it's my understanding that this owner is considering getting another pit bull (puppy). If this happens we'll be calling Animal Services.
- Basic ownership Training requirements for owners of nuisance or pitbull dogs to be completed.
- The benefit of the doubt should be in place for the animals (regardless of breed), but the owners MUST have full responsibility to either prevent issues through training or socialization and failing that, severe fines, legal action, and internment or disposition of the animal
- Any dog or animal confirmed to have attacked and bitten a person to be euthanized
- Dog owner training. There are not bad dogs, there are bad owners!
- Obedience training required for ALL large dogs.
- People are worse than animals, but they do not get punished accordingly. Pitbull type is not the only breed that bites.
- Depends on many circumstances. I don't think it is fair to punish pitbulls for everything, other breeds usually are involved in dog bites not pitties. People should not be able to own large breeds if they have no experience with them.
- Mind you're own business, this law is racist
- Any dogs considered a nuisance must enroll in force-free obedience training
- Obedience training for pit bull owners.
- I disagree that we are calling out pitbulls at all. Tickets should be given and jail time if needed to abusive owners who are raising animals.
- Dogs declared a nuisance cannot be off leash in off leash parks. Adding off leash to the sentence - not banning them from any area. Instead, asking the owner to take proper control.
- It is all in how the owner trains their dog, not because of what type of dog it is. Make this a rule for chihauhaus too if your gonna do this.
- Dog behaviour is not based on the breed pit bulls can be amazing dogs it's upsetting that our city is assuming that pit bulls are all bad and is even considering enforcing rules only for pit bulls. I own a smaller dog and I have zero fear with him around pit bulls the behaviour of a dog is the owners responsibility and that goes for all breeds not just pit bulls.
- Assessment of household in which the dog lives - improper treatment from owners is frequently the cause of nuisance animals.
- Ban on breeding pit bulls. Mandatory spay/neuter and if there is to be a special license, each breeding dog must pass a temperament test where it must show friendly behavior toward small and large dogs.

- Owners seeking to own what the city refers to as 'nuisance dogs' should go through training and an interview to ensure they are properly informed on how to raise and train said dogs. It is not the breed but the owner.
- More accountability for problematic dog owners.
- Obedience training must be successfully completed/passed by both the animal/pet, as well as the trainer who is currently owner of the animal. If the animal is put up for adoption, the new owner(s) are subject to the same bylaw (ie: must also successfully complete training with the dog).
- no breed should be discriminated against and should all be treated equally whether they are big or small
- This is the beginning of whipping out an entire breed of dogs it is disgusting and I will not support a city that is killing animal. Any of these hurt pit bulls if you add insurance to pit bulls they have an even lower chance of being adopted as the price to have them goes up. It will be harder to find a place to live with a pit bull more so than it would be to have another type of dog because the city is discriminating against them. This is pure stupidity and lack of trying to understand the breed. I am assuming none of you that are making this bylaw have ever owned a pit bull because they are the most loving dogs. If you are going to single out a breed include all the big dogs then. Golden retrievers, Great Danes, German Shepard. If you are worried about the bite then these should be included. I will not stay for the discrimination of a breed of dog that has only been wronged by humans.
- BSL doesn't work. This is ridiculous. Not all pit bulls are dangerous. It's a stereotype. Smaller dogs bite more people than pit bulls.
- Loss of privilege to own a dog for repeat offenders (the owners can't take care of their dog properly and there is clear evidence of this, they should not be allowed to own one.
- Pet owners with nuisance animals to provide annual update for 3 years. Nuisance animals be required to be muzzled when outside the home, including owners yard.
- I DO NOT support breed specific legislation. Define further dangerous behaviour. Define bites based off the Ian Dunbar bite scale. Define what nuisance behaviours require additional insurance. This is vague, misguided and ignorant.
- a complete ban on owning a nuisance dog within city boundaries
- Please do not bring in breed specific legislation, I am a veterinary technician and know first hand that "pit bull" breeds are not the problem. It is the owner that is the problem in most cases.
- Dogs that are vicious should have muzzles on. Dogs shouldn't be judged by their breed.
- Punish the owner not the dog. A fine will do little to solve the problem and possible increase it by Lack of socializing etc. Instead of obedience training alone I would couple it with probation for the owner-to make sure the dog is getting proper socializing and trying and exercise ext.
- Take pit bulls off this list!!
- Higher fines for all dogs involved in offences so owners have reverence for bylaws.
- The term nuisance is too broad. Dogs that cause noise complaints should be allowed to go to off leash parks, dogs with a bite history should not be. These need to be more specific. There should be nothing regarding breeds in any bylaw.

- Honestly this question is looking at the wrong issue. It matters not the potential of the animal, but rather the how the animal was raised and treated. All animals regardless of size and bite force are capable of being a deadly weapon or the most loving family member. I wholeheartedly disagree with all of the options and instead propose handler training. animals reflect the actions of their owners, and their owners should be held accountable for their animals.
- Remove any breed specific fines.
- Euthanize immediately after first attack on animal or human. Heavily fine owner for "pit and run" (running away from scene after their pit mauled an animal or person)
- You said it yourselves- "important to note that while pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents than other dog breeds"... let's just focus on the vicious dogs, the dogs with no training and with bad owners. All medium to large size dogs have strength when instincts kick in and they are biting. THERE IS NO FACTUAL SCIENTIFIC PROOF THAT PIT BULLS ARE STRONGER THAN OTHER DOGS.
- Responsible pet ownership education required for owners of dogs that are declared a nuisance.
- Targeting the bully breeds or those that resemble a pit blu it totally archaic and ineffective. The bylaws need to focus on responsible ownership and education. All breeds need to be treated equitably and all owners need to be held to a standard of responsibility for their dogs.
- Your definition of nuisance dogs (etc.) is too encompassing. A dog that bites/attacks or the owner cannot control is different than a barking dog. Calgary by-laws already address barking dogs and wandering dogs. Dog owners with biting dogs or attacking dogs need their own category. Dogs bite for many reasons sometimes not their fault. Ignorant dog owners who have strong breeds because of the owners ego are an issue. Training for the owners, fines when they are at fault and removal is necessary only in extreme cases. Pitbulls are not all dangerous, it could be the genetics of the dog and/or the irresponsible owner. Many pitbulls are absolutely normal with no issues.
- Instead of implementing bylaws and fines that contribute to pet ownership being high-barrier, perhaps being progressive and partnering with Humane organizations to learn about providing resources and accessibility would be better. Stricter bylaws and fines further harm pet owners with a system that is already built on racism, classism and ableism. Obedience training for dogs declared a nuisance should be affordable and accessible. Secondly, introducing breed specific legislation, rules, and bylaws is discriminatory, inhumane, cruel and perpetuates false stigma and myths which will contribute to the increase in euthanasia and a gross loss of life. Just to get ahead of the "lock jaw" myths, Dr. I. Lehr Brisbin at the University of Georgia shows "that bully breeds don't show any mechanical or morphological differences in jaw structure when compared to other dogs -- nor do their jaws come equipped with locking capabilities." The claim that "a pitbull's strength allows the potential for a more severe bite" perpetuates the stigma of "pitbulls" being dangerous. I have "Pitbull" in air quotes, because this is a rather generalized term for dogs with muscular bodies and blocky heads, who are often, mixed breeds that rarely include the dogs you have outlined above. Fun fact, when a dog is mixed breed, you cannot begin to distinguish visual identification with behavioural traits. But more science on that later. Being concerned about the "severe bite" a pitbull type dog may inflict, begs the question why some other popular breeds did not make the list. Some popular dog breeds and their PSI are listed below (according to calculations based off an article published in the National Center of Biotechnical Information, National Institute of Health, Journal of Anatomy) Cane Corso: 700 psi Mastiff: 556 psi Dogo Argentino: 500 psi Akita: 400 psi Rottweiler 328 psi Siberian Husky 320 psi American Pitbull Terrier: 235 psi Labrador Retriever: 230 psi (only 5 less than an APBT) This was only a handful of more popular breeds that I knew are purchasable via breeder in Canada, but there is a long list of dogs that have higher bite force over pitbull type breeds. That being said, dog breeds do NOT indicate the likelihood of a bite. In fact, it is more likely the average Calgarian, and Canadian has a mixed breed dog vs a purebred. Viewing a dog as an individual versus their phenotypic traits is important because looks do not equal behaviour. Socialization, training, environmental factors all play a part in how a dog acts. Only about 50 out of around 20,000 genes determine physical appearance of a dog, so 99.75% of a dog's genome can be any mix of dog. Once a dog is less than 100% of a closed gene pool, their genetic variations are distinct from that breed. Science is cool and Calgary, being the progressive city it is, should continue to construct bylaws based on fact and science versus fear based media. The Animal Farm Foundation states that "the national trend is moving steadily away from breed-specific legislation (BSL) and toward breed neutral laws that hold all owners equally accountable for the humane care, custody, and control of their dogs." ASPCA writes "There is no evidence that breed-specific laws make communities safer for people or companion animals. Following a thorough study of human fatalities resulting from dog bites, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) decided to strongly oppose BSL. The CDC cited, among other problems, the inaccuracy of dog bite data and the difficulty in identifying dog breeds (especially true of mixed-breed dogs). Breed-specific laws are also costly and difficult to enforce." Some other prominent organizations that oppose Breed Specific Legislation include: Humane Society International, Best Friends Animal Society, American Veterinary Medical Association, American Kennel Club, American Bar Association, the White House & Obama Administration, British Veterinary Association, Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, National Animal Association, National Canine Research Council, United Kennel Club, US Department of Justice, Canadian Veterinary Association as well as many city specific SPCA and Humane Societies such as our very own, Calgary Humane Society. If the above organizations, which include those from science, medical, animal, law and political fields can agree that fear based, panic legislation is not the way to go, we should not be proposing oppressive bylaws into our city.

- Stop targeting pitbulls there are so many studies to show that BSL does not work! Why are you punishing a breed when you should be punishing bad owners. Don't go down this route Calgary, its disgusting and so disappointing
- fines for irresponsible owners REGARDLESS of breed. There is no correlation between bite/aggression incidents and specific breed. BSL does not work. Please educate yourself with FACTS on dog bite/aggression incidents and do not punish specific breeds. You are going backwards. Breed Specific Legislation is a creation of ignorance to facts and sensational reporting. I have been bitten several times by various dogs at the dog parks. The incidents were not reported as they were dealt with in a civilized manner between responsible pet owners. DO NOT punish a breed. Punish irresponsible owners.

- Not more than one nuisance dog per household (but not the same limit on pit bulls)
- Higher fines and enforcement for dogs off leash in required leashed areas
- I do not support any of these. There is an biased trend toward pit bull terriers and this entire section needs to be junked and re-written. I find it astonishing at this day and age that you feel it is ok to specifically call out 1 dog breed.
- More legal consequences for owners who do not have control over their dogs periods. Even if not declared a nuisance. All dogs are dangerous when not obedient and the owner does not have control. Obedience training should be required for every dog in order to get a license.
- Stop targeting a breed. It's the poor training by the owner that needs to be addressed. Instead of fines, mandate they get training.
- Make owner take those courses too.
- Make owner take those courses too.
- It is not the breed, but the owner. All dog owners should be required to do obedience training
- I think there should be a investigation as to the owners if there is a Incident. All pit bulls or pit bull breeds should not be getting a bad rap there r other breed of dogs that also bite .
- I have worked in shelters for years and am appalled that Calgary would turn to breed specific laws. Owners are at fault not the dogs
- If a dog is under review for being a nuisance the dog and owner should have the opportunity to defend themselves. If found to be a nuisance, there must be opportunities for the owner and dog to show they've taken steps to improve behaviour by taking obedience training and pass multiple tests showing their improved behaviour.
- The definition of nuisance (including barking, or being at large) makes some of the proposals non-sensical. Extra insurance for a do that barks or has a habit of escaping their yard doesn't make sense. I think dogs that have been found to have attacked other dogs should be banned from dog parks. Perhaps all dogs should be required to take at minimum a basic obedience class or alternatively all dog breeds that statistically have a higher bite incidence should be required to take basic obedience course within a few months of acquiring the dog. I think it is bad or lazy owners, more than the dog. Also rescues (such as EJ rescue that bring rescue dogs in that have a bite history should have to inform bylaw and that dog should require more intensive training or assessment to insure there is no risk to the public. Dogs with a history of biting should required additional insurance. Rescues should be required to provide fosters and adopters with all medical history and shelter history within 24 hours of receiving the dog, and also to obtain a Calgary vet check within 2 weeks of arriving in the city. Too many problem dogs have been brought up by irresponsible rescues like EJ that simply wipe out the dogs history and give no warning to the owners or fosters of any issues. There are good rescues that do in depth assessment and matching to educated responsible families or require new owners to attend In depth training. I think the problem is that irresponsible owners are attracted to breeds with an aggressive reputation, and those people take no care in properly socializing or monitoring or ensuring the dog is a good fit for the family. Any dog, especially larger dogs, who receive no training or socialization or attention can be dangerous. The focus has to be on making sure that the owners and dogs have a least a basic understanding of dog behaviour, needs, etc. I have met many well trained, well loved pit bulls, German shepherds, Rottweilers, etc. that are wonderful loving dogs. It's the people who buy a puppy because it's cute with no thought as to whether the breed fits their situation, without any training or knowledge of dog behaviour, and who tire of the dog and leave it alone, tied up without exercise or even a abuse the dog that creates the problem. There has to be a higher bar to get one of these dogs or any dog. It has to be a well thought out decision with a sincere intent to do the best for the dog.

- Let's not limit this to pit bulls, how about ALL dogs. They all bark and have the ability to bite. A Doberman, bull mastiff, a rottweiler all have the same bite strength!
- Ban pit bulls and all dangerous dogs from the city.
- Appropriate training for all in the house household whos involved with the dog
- You should not target specific breeds. It is not the dog but poor ownership that causes these issues. The dog should be removed from the home (if obvious the dog is not well trained) and placed in a non-kill shelter for a chance at a better life.
- I don't support breed specific laws. There's better ways to address dog issues then call out one breed
- There should not be a specific breed that is named by this ban. Chihuahuas are way more vicious than any blockheaded dog I've ever met. Make the laws against Chihuahuas, not pit bulls.
- Dogs with a history of biting should require to be muzzled, and require a qualified behavioural training. Pit bulls are no more of a threat than any other dog. I think people need to be better educated on protecting themselves in dog attack situations, many times their behaviour and reactions can make the situation worse.
- Higher fines for bad owners! The problem is NOT the breed but the humans that are not responsible!
- Restricted ownership for poor handling and training by owners.
- Seriously? Breed specific legislation? It's the owners that are a problem, NOT the dog. Stop with the ignorance.
- Small dogs Owners need to be held accountable too! I have had numerous small dogs lung at my child and large dog and my large dog should not be held accountable for defending their owners
- Options above indicate nuisance dogs, with proper training there are extremely few nuisance animals. Fines should be targeted to owner education, responsible pet ownership training and owner attended pet obedience training.
- This should NOT be breed specific. I am absolutely appalled this is even happening. Punish the owners, not the breed.
- Make the rules the same for all breeds. Small dogs can be more dangerous than big ones sometimes
- All dogs like all people should be treated the same racism is racism
- This list of potential rules strikes me in two ways - 1). Written by individuals who are either laughably misinformed on the breed, or are singling these dogs out for political gain, and 2) Does absolutely nothing to account for owner compatibility. Owners who acquire these dogs for the purposes of intimidation are the problem. They antagonize these dogs and mistreat them, and their behaviour follows suit. Pit bulls were known as "Nanny Dogs" for a reason, prior to individuals fear mongering their presence for optics. There should be more stress placed on proper ownership, such as background checks and owner interviews. These dogs reflect their owners and lifestyles. I know MANY individuals who own these dogs responsibly... and I can say with absolute guarantee that these are more loving, and better behaved dogs than any small or "less intimidating" dogs. Do not make the mistake of punishing a breed of animal for a handful of criminal owners who care not for their wellbeing or behaviour. If this were the case, owners of most small dogs should be charged for reckless dog behaviour and aggression.

- These breeds could be banned
- Why single out one breed. It's not the dogs fault it all lies with the owner. Every breed has aggressive dogs just like every city has aggressive people. I believe that any breed of animal that is involved in a violent encounter should be fined but not exclusively to just a certain breed.
- Do not target one breed. It's All breeds. Dogs are dogs
- Training for owners of nuisance pets. The problem is with the owner too, not just the dog.
- Please don't be breed specific .it hurts the bulky breeds and is not helpful . there are many "strong " dogs that can bite or becomr aggressive without provocation. BSL doesn't work .
- Reduce the number of off leash parks in Calgary
- Pit bulls are not the problem. Bad ownership is the problem, and any breed can be dangerous.
- I don not think that pit bull type dogs should be singled out in any bylaw! That is unfair and breed profiling is wrong!
- Do not include breed specific legislation
- Microchipped pit bulls
- Better enforcement of barking. Dogs bark incessantly and the owners should be held accountable. It is too hard to get bylaw to address at the moment. Neighbour lets their dog out in the middle of the night, it yaps..
- Stop with BSL. Please. It's an uneducated decision.
- A leash can not exceed 2 meters in length on any dog.
- Complete pit bull ban
- Specific breeds should NOT be penalized. Rather hold all dog owners responsible for poor training.
- All the same rules apply to all dogs. Again too easy to profile a certain breed of dog. Look at 20 to 30 pictures of dogs supplied by a vet. I bet you couldn't pick out the breed your looking to exterminate.
- Breed specific legislation is discriminatory and should not be a topic of discussion for calgary
- None
- Imprisonment for negligent owners that lead to severe injury of another person caused by their dog.
- Owner registry of poor animal owners. Prohibit them from owning pets. Create a list of breeds that have bitten humans an have been reported.
- Dogs that bite should be considered for euthanizm!
- All dogs should be treated equally, as bully breeds are not the dogs that tend to bite as much but any dog that bites should be deemed as a viscous dog and must be muzzled at all times when outside unless the bite was serious than the dog should be put down

- Make it about behaviour, not breed. It's as unreasonable as judging a race or nationality based on the bad behaviour of a few.
- Although small chihuahuas have attacked more dogs than any other breed and it teaches other breeds the aggressive traits. chihuahuas(and other small aggressive dogs must be included) must be included as they are the main perpetrators of aggression. Go to 17th Ave and 17th nw Calgary for evidence. I have personally been bite by a chihuahua.(cesar millan side that chihuahua are the most aggressive dogs as they don't get trained or disciplined properly his words not mine)
- I support animal bylaws that are NOT breed specific. Focud ghe bylaws on nuisance animals, and their ownets, not breeds. You wouldn't do that to people, there are rights laws against such things.
- If a dog causes a serious injury charge the owner as if they did it.
- This should be done dog to dog and not a specific breed . I have a pit bull that has never bitten or attacked another dog or human and should not be punished because of bad owners she is 4 years old and has never had a muzzle I think that is cruel to subject her to that!!! She would get depressed if she couldn't go to daycare or the dog park where again she has never had a problem !!!!
- If a dog is a nuisance or bites, make it mandatory for an owner to work with a veterinary behaviourist and trainer at the veterinarian's choice out of the client's cost
- The question of "There cannot be more than one pit bull or nuisance dog in a household" is a disgusting way of getting disingenuous support for pit bull legislation. Sure, the number of nuisance dogs should be limited, but breed-specific laws are a slap in the face to responsible pet owners everywhere.
- This is a horrible idea. All of the examples are just plain ridiculous.
- Mandatory dog owning licences. Can not own any type of animal without passing ownership test like a driving test.
- Dogs are innocent until proven guilty. Back off law abiding owners and their dogs that haven't hurt anyone.
- Treat pit bulls the same as any other dog. They are trained to be aggressive not bread into it. Yes they can cause more damage when they bite them some other dogs but they should still be treated the same. They are a lovely bread and no more measures should be put in place for just them. If a law, bylaw is made it should before all dogs.
- I do not think Pit bull specific legislation is required nor advisable, only dogs that have been found to be aggressive
- Where is the measures to deal with the person who may have caused the biting. People not teaching their children how to deal with unknown dogs
- I do not support any of these options laid out for a specific breed. This should be outlined for every dog/breed whatever you want to call it. It is disgusting to pin point and single out a breed based on your such identifying 'marks'. Any animal can exhibit what you are calling out on a type that isn't even a breed. Look at it this way a type of chuld exhibits certain behavioral 'issues' you going to single them out and punish them without all the facts?? All dogs should require the owner to do training. 'Bad dogs' only come from 'bad owners' or uneducated owners. You should educate your people more before suggesting this type by 'bylaw'. I strongly disagree with this BSL!

- I do not agree with breed specific laws. An animal's behaviour is dictated by its owner. All attempts to rehabilitate problem behaviour should be pursued before any direct consequences to the animal
- Ban the savage beasts. Anything that can snap my femur with its bite should be prohibited on CofC.
- Ive seen a lot of owners abuse their dogs..not just pit bulls. I feel if an owner crosses the line and someone gets hurt...they should be banned from having a pet
- I would like to see a requirement for a minimum of liability insurance for all dog an cats. Insurance companies are professional at assessing the risks and would set the premiums appropriately.
- Investigation into whether the victim dog had provoked the attack and possible dog training for the victim dog if it was not under the owners control.
- Breed specific legislation is crap. News flash dogs can bite. Every dog.
- Pitbull to be neutered or spayed within a year of ownership.
- Don't blame the dog, blame the owner
- Breed specific legislation is not helpful. Any dog can bite. Owners training and prevention is key.
- Fine OWNERS of ANY BREED for dogs attacks and other aggressive behaviour. This should not be a target approach towards a specific breed, the policy should focus on the owners.
- Unless owned or contracted to a licensed breeder, dogs must be neutered or spayed. Breeders must be licensed.
- Dogs are not the problem. It's problem people. Fine the owner, mussel the owner.
- No pit bulls
- This is a crazy bylaw, dogs are dogs nuisance can mean a dog barks and someone can complain and then the owners have to buy special insurance , I agree if a dog has bitten people or other animals while out in public then training is required for the owner and the dog, but to single out pitbulls because they have a strong bite then you need to include german shepards, chows, rottweillers , great danes, huskies, newfoundlanders, st Bernard etc pretty much every large breed dog. Most dog bites come from small dogs like terriers, Chihuahuas etc but they don't get reported because the dogs are small and do not look intimidating. This idea of the bylaw is ridiculous .the majority of dogs who cause problems at off leash parks are not bully breeds, the are some of the best behaved dogs at the parks because the owners train them , its the smaller dogs who run wild and jump on people and other dogs and cause aggression.
- Your pitbull specific questions are an embarrassment.
- Fines for not cleaning up after dogs in public and neighbourhood properties
- Mandatory spay/neuter for nuisance dogs, we do not need those dogs passing on those traits. And STOP allowing rescues to import pit bulls from the US! These are death row pits, the very worst of the breed that were ordered to be euthanized due to dangerous behaviour and/or bite incidents. Why on earth would we want them here?? It's like US residents should be kept safe from these dogs, but screw the Canadians, they can have these pits with aggressive histories!
- The owners are the problem never the breed of dog
- Breed specific legislation should not be considered. Dogs are dogs and all have the ability to be aggressive. "Pit Bulls" do not have the strongest bite as a "breed". Specifically pin point these types of dogs is does not silver the problem when there are other breeds that are trained for aggression. It is biased.

- NONE OF THE ABOVE! Fine the human not penalize the dog! I am a responsible pet owner & I am ashamed things come to this crudeness. Little dogs can cause worse damage. It is the human who is not trained well to own ANY breed. I have seen the results of both lg/ sm breeds. My other dog did not fall under any of these categories & yet could have been deemed as those above. By- law officials should be better trained & add a few willing volunteers in each city quadrant.
- Fines for not leashing dogs in community greenspaces and for owners who do not keep dogs close to them while walking and who allow dogs to jump on passerbys
- Ban pit bulls and the other above-listed breeds/types in Calgary city limits
- Rules or bylaws targeted towards pit bulls not being implemented.
- I find the idea of singling out pit bulls abhorrent; I live in a neighbourhood that I'm told has the highest per capita dog ownership in the city (Lake Bonavista). We have a few neighbours with pitbulls, and many neighbours with other types of dogs. I can tell you that I'm far more concerned about the small terriers and chihuahuas biting or attacking me or my dogs (border collies) than any of the pit bulls. I understand the fear of injury that is inherant in a large dog attack, but we should be dealing more aggressively with the owners of any dog that is a nuisance and not singling out just pit bulls. Doing so is simply an ignorant knee jerk reaction to unjustified fears.
- The dog behavior is on the owner. None of these suggestions address the underlying problem. Educated owners
- Pitbulls are not bad dogs, if you are looking at breed legislation (which doesn't work) then look at the actual breeds of dog bites.
- Pit bulls should be banned and nuisance dogs should be put down for repeated concerns.
- Ban pit bulls in city limits
- Ban pit bulls in the city
- I am opposed to any breed specific bylaws. It is the owners that are training dogs to be a nuisance. Some of the most loyal and loving dogs I know are pitbull or part pitbull and they would NOT hurt anyone!!
- Dog's who are trained poorly should have more restrictions, breed specific restrictions are unfair to well trained pit bulls.
- Ban on ownership and breeding of pit bulls. Full stop. Period.
- Education requirement for pit bull / nuisance dog owners. Whether this is a one-hour class or required reading material, I think pit bull owners and nuisance dog owners, should be subject to fine after a first offense (for more serious offenses - skip the 'educate first' component of enforcement.
- Quit trying to enact breed specific laws, you [removed].
- Responsible pet ownership starts with licensing. It ties an owner to their pet and makes holding them accountable for irresponsible ownership. Fines for unlicensed animals should be enforced
- We Do not support breed specific legislation
- Owners with dogs that exhibit problem behaviour, no matter the breed, should he given access to affordable training classes or dog behaviorist consults.

- Quite honestly, this bylaw is a disgrace. There are no bad dogs, merely bad dog owners. Banning or putting restrictions on specific breeds of dogs implies that a) these dogs are by nature more dangerous, an idea which is very easily disproven by science (including the idea of a "more dangerous bite" from pitbulls - this is factually FALSE and discussion with any animal behaviour expert would reveal this. PLEASE update your science); and b) that other dogs are less capable or likely of being aggressive. Fundamentally, it comes down to the owner, not the dog breed. Feel free to pass a bylaw that would increase fines for "nuisance" dogs or require owners to stay at the scene of biting incident, but do NOT reduce it to what is effectively a mini-ban on specific breeds. It is disgraceful and shows a blatant disregard for the science on the matter.
- More insurance seems an unlikely solution/ insurers will not offer more or even any coverage
- Outlaw the breeds like other provinces have. Let's not be stupid.
- I completely oppose any prejudice against any dog breed. I'm absolutely in favour of fines against irresponsible dog owners. Punish the person, not the dog. Pit bulls score better on temperament testing than most other dogs. Just because psychopaths mistreat them for entertainment is not their fault.
- I do not support any of the possibilities above. especially because this is becoming breed specific.
- many city dog control officers cant tell one breed of bull terrier from another never mind the public they need to get some education on the breeds they are trying to control
- I do not support breed specific legislation. Bully breeds are not more or less likely to hurt another animal or person than any other breed. It is sad that the city is proposing such a restrictive and uneducated stance on a breed that has been systematically and constantly ostracized for the way they look. It's 2020, not 1920 and Calgary can do better.
- All dogs should require obedience training of some sort.
- Don't single out pit bulls.
- I personally have had more bad experiences with rescue dogs that are poorly trained therefore unsafe. Some breeds for example are German shepherds or huskies or any mix along those or other large and dangerous breeds. I also do not believe it makes sense for a dog who is considered a nuisance needs to be automatically reprimanded, because what if it was a nuisance just for loud barking?
- I am strongly against singling out pit bulls. The issue is the owner not the dog. And once the dog has misbehaved training would need to be so strict most cannot do it. I witness a Argentinian Dogo and a St . Bernard fight in a dog park, the aggressor was the St . Bernard as the owner smacked it around after the fight stopped.
- Instant seizure of nuisance dogs
- Any dog that exhibits these behaviours. This is unfairly demonizing pit bulls.
- DONT BLAME PITBULLS FINE OWNERS FOR POOR TREATMENT OF PETS
- None of these. None at all. Not even a tiny little bit.
- Pit bulls shouldn't be singled out. This doesn't make Calgary inclusive or diverse. Bad owners should be punished
- Ban all pitbulls

- Do more work charging the owners of the dogs when issues occur. It is almost never the animals fault. It's due to their upbringing. We can't charge animals for owners behaviour. If an owner proves undeemable to posses pets. They should not be allowed to own them. However animals involved in incidents should be given support and the option to move into a new home where they will have correct training and upbringing. It doesn't apply to solely pitbulls
- Unless we are going to be full on racist towards people now, I think we can agree basically being racist to dogs should also stop. Just because they don't have voices of their own doesn't make it okay to single a breed out and say they are the cause of the problem. This questionnaire I find very disturbing. It's a scape goat if anything.
- I think it's unfair to single out the pit bull.
- This is a highly biased question against a type of dog.
- No changes, enforce what we have!
- It is not the dog it is the owner that requires more training.
- singling out pitbulls is racist.
- Enforce off leash in non off leashes areas
- I do not support BSL in any form. Only responsible owner laws.
- Pit bulls should be banned
- Although the pit bull community will band together to fill out many of these survey's I hope the real majority are listened to. I do not see it happening but a full ban on pit bull/crosses would be something I would support
- Pit Pitbulls are being unfairly isolated. There are many breeds that are bred/trained in numerous Protection oriented directions and even if not trained have high protective instincts and high prey levels. Up to the owner of any of these dogs to keep them under control at all times. Heavy fines/euthanization for first offence and forget about the niceties. None of these breeds should be running free in an off leash park unless muzzled.
- Obedience training should be required for all dogs.
- Each case should be looked at individually the little breeds in my area will bark, snap, and nip at me and my small dogs on walk. The big breeds never do; and yes we see lots of pit bulls out in our area
- Obedience training should be a requirement of dog ownership period, regardless of breed; with mandatory attendance by a primary owner.
- Don't single out pit bulls! It's about "nuisance" dogs in general and poor ownership.
- Keep owners accountable for problem animals. If a pet is vicious make the owner attend obedience classes until proven fit. If this fails and the animal is deemed vicious, the owner needs to take responsibility in keeping that animal away from all other animals and people. For both its safety and animals/beings around. Penalizing the pitbull breed isn't going to fix any problems when it comes to poor ownership and direction given by the supposed owner themselves. Be it a chihuahua, pitbull, lab, or miniature poodle. Extra high fines for reoccurring matters and failure to resolve the problematic issues, should see in the animal put to sleep if retrieval and rehabilitation of said pet isn't successful. Don't blame the breed, blame the human.

- I don't agree with breed specific bylaws. If a dog bites off the owners property or in self defence, no matter the breed it must have additional training, and if a threat and has multiple offences muzzled in public. I do not condone euthanizing an animal of any breed.
- No breed specific laws please!!! But I am in favor of these potential rules for nuisance dogs - regardless of breed.
- Must have training classes for ALL DOGS no just pit bulls, have higher fines and/or jail time for animal abusers and mistreatment. Don't restrict how many "pit bull" dogs can be put into a SAFE HOME.
- Leave pit bulls alone.. they are not the problem
- I am strongly opposed to breed specific legislation.
- No breed specific bans. I have had more issues with little dogs than pit bulls. This is disgusting
- The OWNER is the one that does not know anything about their pet, they get it because of the breed, no matter the breed. They ALL should be held accountable for the actions of their pet, no matter whether it is a CAT, or any other type of pet, it is so very, very sad the animal is held RESPONSIBLE for their OWNERS ACTIONS. It is sad that people have to put a tag on ANIAMALS, yet HUMANS as just a dangerous as any animal on this EARTH. Think about that. The animal just follows what the person in control DOES!!!!
- I do not believe that breed specific laws should exist. Pit bull type dogs are only dangerous when they are mistreated by a neglected owner. Any dog has the potential to bite and be dangerous if not properly cared for. The problem needs to be addressed by stopping back yard breeders.
- Keep treating the mentioned dogs the same as other dogs.
- TRAINING FOE THE OWNER - it's not usually the dogs that are a problem it's the owner and how they've either trained or not trained/socialized their dog
- Any law passed should include ALL dogs, no matter the breed or size. Even small dogs can be vicious
- Dogs that bite/attack (humans or other dogs/cats/wildlife) should be euthanized.
- Do not subject one breed aka pit bull style to these rules but hold all dog owners accountable
- Owner training mandatory, and paid for, by nuisance dog owners. Basically it's corrective action with a positive outcome for not training the dog. All dogs declared nuisance, not specific breeds.
- All dog breeds that have history of biting. Not pit bull specific.
- Pitbulls regardless of that may not be statically more prone to problems have a higher incidents of damage when involved in incidents. Therefore they are higher risk to the community. Also immigration of pitbulls should be stopped as this is a indicator of other communities simply shifting the problem to other communities such as Calgary. Wake up Calgary!
- Not only for pit bull breeds, all breeds must be included.
- Deal with problem owners that do not train their dogs not pick on breed specifics
- Dog owner should be jailed for 6 months if dog bite. This will enable dog owner become more responsible.
- As someone who has education and has been working in veterinary medicine for several years, there is no evidence that BSL is successful. I have done research and written papers on BSL in a non-biased approach, comparing cities who had, had not and were looking into BSL. Every city that had a BSL Act was not successful in preventing bites. The most successful resource is appropriate training for owners, teaching them and understanding that their dog CAN be a weapon. The majority of bites fall on the owner's inability to appropriately train or handle their dog, not the dog randomly attacking where a muzzle could have proven beneficial. Think hard about this, Calgary. BSL is not the solution.

- This is stupid and there shouldn't be a by law on how many pitbulls one can own, or making them wear a muzzle, not allowing them in dog parks and ect. They are animals too and deserve to be treated like every other dog. They are not a nuisance or bad breed.
- Ban pit bulls altogether
- Let's see all the stats as pit bulls are a flavour of the month. Like COVID-19
- Dogs bite as a defence mechanism, instead of judging the dog maybe take a look at how the owner is treating the dog or raising it as that may be the reason why the dog is always in defence mode.
- Absolutely no "pit bull" type specific laws are fair. You're basically feeding into the stigma that they're bad dogs/giving the wrong impression of the breed and it's appalling. Obedience training should be done for all dogs.
- Prohibit ownership of pit bulls, those can escape from home and cause a tragedy for
- Remove nuisance dogs with repeating offences from owners, rehabilitate and rehome/foster in homes that have been deemed appropriate.
- Mandatory pet owner training for nuisance dog owners. Dogs are not to blame, it's poor dog owners and lack of training, education for the owner that is typically the problem.
- BSL should not be enacted, good owners should not be penalized for bad ones
- ban pit bulls
- What's wrong with you guys .. pit bulls aren't the problem it's the owners .. don't be like Quebec
- Dogs with blood drawn bite history be required to wear a properly fitted muzzle in public. Bylaw officers patrolling pathways and public parks to educate owners on leash laws.
- BSL is [removed] and doesn't work and you know it just too lazy to actually hold owners accountable. Lazy and shameful
- enforce current by-laws. dogs are off leash along the bow and elbow river on a regular basis.
- Ban bully breeds. Not allow animal rescue orgs to bring bully breeds into the city. Especially those animals without a record of their history.
- These are dumb and very limited options. Don't discriminate against breeds. If your wanting to make training mandatory than make it mandatory for all dog owners. Patents should also teach their children not to chase or approach strange dogs. Any dog can bite. My 4 year old daughter know to ask before she pets any dog.
- Fine the people that teach there dogs to act that way a pitbull is only aggressive if thought that
- They have tried this in many other city several i have lived in . Get clue a bad owner is a bad owner even itsbits a pot bull or daxon i don't own a pit bull and I think its so ignorant it reminds me of the racist behaviour of the past. f the past
- Ban pit bulls

- There cannot be more than one nuisance dog in a household
- This is ridiculous. There should NOT be breed specific legislation. Banning, muzzling, and seizing bully breeds is not the answer. All dogs have the potential to be dangerous. It comes down to responsible owners - owners need to know how to properly train their dogs; ANY DOG. Harsher penalties for unleashed dogs. I had a small dog off leash approach my LEASHED dog. Running and nipping at my leashed dog. And guess what, I'm sure if something bad happened, my dog would have been blamed. RIDICULOUS!
- There cannot be more than one nuisance dog in a household
- The owners are the problem; not the dogs. Higher standards for dogs identified as stronger breeds should be implemented requiring owners attend and pass additional training requirements.
- Don't treat pit bulls any different than any other pet. Punish the owners of all breeds that are "nuisances" due to lack of training. Many breeds are known for aggression and if inadequate training can be dangerous singling one breed out is highly uneducated. Also people need to understand animal safety running up to or scaring any animal (dog, cat, horse, etc) is looking for trouble no different than when a person is scared they defend themselves.
- Obedience training should be required for all dogs, not just dogs that are declared a nuisance and pit bulls
- Stop breed shaming the pit bull cross it's disgraceful
- your questions and targeted attacks on breed are flipping racist... i have been bitten 4 times in my 41 years. not one time by a pit and i have been around them my whole life. German Shepard's and huskies bite way more people than any other dogs and fyi a Rottweiler has a way stronger bite than any pit bull.
- all dogs should have some sort of obedience training
- Fine irresponsible owners and not punish dogs..bad policy
- There are many other large breed dogs that can bite no different than a "pit bull." I think it is awful to make the laws breed specific. All dogs large or small have the potential for bites. Punish the owner not the breed.
- This questionnaire is biased and not descriptive, "Pitbulls cannot be in off-leash parks" but no clause that they can be if on leash (because at that point it is the responsibility of the off leash owner to control their dog, not myself to differ my walking path due to an off leash area with aggressive small dogs as is actually the statistics regarding the common aggressive dogs.
- Only if the dog has had a prior offence then the dog should have proper behavioural training
- I know a dog that has bitten 7 people and only one of those were reported. I think it imperative that all dog bites are reported. Each time this particular dog bites, the owners act as if it is the first time he has ever bit anyone.
- By banning a specific breed you will go nowhere!!! There is no issue with the pitbull there is an issue with the owner!!! Stop banning breeds when we should make the fines harsher for the owner!!!! It is not the dogs fault!!!!!!
- Proper training for pit bull type dog owners
- ban pit bulls

- what is with the leading questions I absolutely am against any law or bylaw breed specific and every case should hold the owners accountable regardless of breed. If the dog is a a problem repeatedly the owner should not be allowed dogs. Proven to not be effective are these bsl laws. Why is there no option to oppose these purposed changes to count the number opposed?
- none of the above... this is targeting breed specific. the nuisance isnt the dogs, but the owners. i have had more issues with little rat dogs like chihuahuas.. way more aggressive. actually bit 2x at dog park by these dogs. they also attacked my dogs. prompting my dogs desire to protect themselves and me.
- Obedience training for all dog owners!
- It's not that pit bulls are bad it's the OWNERS!!! They need to be held accountable make them go through a training course.
- The city of Calgary should have higher fines for any size dog that is claimed a nuisance
- Pitbull breeds and other nuisance dogs must be declared prohibited to be owned by any household in Calgary.
- Fines for people that provoke a dog to become aggressive towards them
- No breed specific bylaws
- PITBULLS ARE NOT DANGEROUS UNLESS TAUGHT TO BE. DO NOT PUNISH THE BREED, PUNISH THE OWNER.
- Stop being breed specific. This is not the dogs fault, the owner is 100% at fault and the dog shouldn't be penalized for this
- I believe that Pit Bulls are great dogs, except when there are bad owners.
- I believe that pit bulls are not the problem but bad owners are. There should be higher fines and punishments toward bad owners. You can't just single out a specific breed. To own a dog you should have to train them or take them to obedience classes. There needs to be better education on this topic. The human race is the problem. Not the animal.
- This should not be about the dog/s. It should be about the owners and how the particular dog/s are raised. Bully breeds are not "dangerous" they are amazing, smart, caring and loving animals. There should be things put in place for the [removed] owners
- Higher fines for corrupt government officials
- Ban pit bulls
- All dogs and dog owners should require obedience and proper care training
- Get a life!!!! Pit bull is not even a recognized breed! Shame on you
- I believe that the city of Calgary should simply enforce the bylaws it already has, as opposed to picking on a specific breed or type of dog. Alternatively, they should simply create bylaws (and enforce them) against bad dog OWNERS.
- Leave them alone
- All dogs no matter the breed MUST be treated equally
- Please don't introduce breed specific legislation. Pitbull is an umbrella term and even for the purpose of this survey is so broadly described it becomes hardly useful. Many breeds beyond those listed above would visibly look like pitbulls. Additionally, lumping pitbull type dogs in with nuisance dogs obscures the issue that owners whose dogs have displayed problematic tendencies have a higher obligation to prevent other issues. Additionally, clarifying pitbulls as dangerous would obscure the other proposed measures like the colour coded bandana warnings for children.

- Record checks or home visits for potential owners. As someone who has worked with dogs for 17 years it's the person not the breed. Owners need to be responsible for their animals actions. As someone who owns an American Staffordshire Terrier, it is a long term commitment to own a dog. I am responsible for training my dog, taking care of her and ensuring she is properly socialized
- Breed ban on pitbull type dogs.
- None of these. Have your people enforce present bylaws, know of two dogs that have attacked other dogs and people including biting but still allowed in neighborhood
- Nuisance is questionable, neighbours can complain of dog barking, doesn't mean the dog is dangerous. Compulsory obedience training and compulsory muzzle for dogs involved in a dog/human bite would be the best option. Pittbulls can be the sweetest animals when trained properly and should not be discriminated against based on breed. I am not a pittbull owner but have taken care of hundreds of dogs as a dog walker, sitter over the years including pitts, rottweilers and dobermans. Aggressive dogs and their owners should be heavily penalized and/or dog taken away on 2nd major incident.
- More enforcement! Dog are often off leash in my area, near the river and my kids and I have been charged at. I was terrified for my life less than a week ago just getting my mail because a large off leash dog was after me, and the owner saved my life in time.. I can't enforced the by-law. We need a lot more patrols. Rules do nothing if no one enforces them.
- my dogs an American Bully, it was attacked by a dog that wasnt even related to a Bully breed not long ago over a stupid ball. So to generalize the Bully breed as the problem is TOTAL [removed] !! Think you guys need to redo your homework before you categorize a certain breed as being the issue.
- Fines given to dog owners of dogs that have been involved in bites, have had complaints against them for "bad dog behaviour". With eventual seizure of animal to be placed in better home with appropriate training
- Everyone should do obedience training with their dogs. It's ridiculous to say pitbulls or specific breeds are the problem. It's the owners who are the problem.
- I did not select some of these because your definition of 'nuisance is too broad to impose sanctions against' . I would support some of these measures if they were applied specifically to biting dogs. Nuisance dogs can be a dog that barks or bolts from the house - the measures above don't make sense for these dogs. You need to be specific to aggressive behaviours and not poor manners.
- Stop. Just stop. You already can't wrap your heads around how to deal with cruelty to animals, or with bites from other breeds, so stop with this crap fake engagement and witch hunt related to "pit bulls."
- Nuisance dogs cannot be off leash in off-leash areas
- A city wide bad of all "pit-bull" type breeds. Substantial fine for owners found in possession of the dog.

- I think classes should be required for owners obtaining a dog from a rescue. Especially if they have behavioural concerns
- This survey has been hijacked by an America pitbull group called "Justice for bullies". What you are seeing in hundred of comments from people who live in the U.S.
- Why punish the dog when it is the owners mistake? I've been a part of the dog community my whole life, not once have I, or any other breeder, trainer, etc. Felt unsafe or attacked by something in this 'pitbull' category. On the other hand I have had small dogs and even labradors be more aggressive than pitbulls. It is never truly a dogs fault, it is how they were raised by the owner, or in many cases, the previous owner. With regards to 'their size they can have stronger bite' any larger dog, or small dog pushed far enough, has the capacity to bite hard. Do not punish a group based on 'they look dangerous' when every squareheaded dog I've had the pleasure of meeting is an absolute sweetheart. If one specific dog has had issues, sure deal with that one dog and its owner/family but do not collectively punish a group of breeds because of a handful of 'bad apples'. It isnt fair to the good dogs or owners.
- Strict fines for OWNERS who mistreat and/or improperly train their dogs. Dogs are NOT the problem, the owners of these so called "problem dogs" are. No specific breed should be banned or penalized against.
- Maximum of two nuisance offences with $1000+ fines on each. Then the dog is destroyed. Or, making pit bulls illegal completely.
- Ban Pit bulls
- Dont single out a breed! Its the owners who train any breed to be aggressive!
- Although I really dislike the pit bull breed and their propensity to be aggressive, given my years of learning more about PitBulls I feel the bad behaviour towards All other animals and children and adults falls solely on the owner/handler. There are 'Very few people' that know or understand boundaries and limitations and discipline and the need all mentioned applied to the owners to realize All dogs need all of the above mentioned. Scrutiny should definitely be applied to the owners of these types of strong aggressive breeds whether they're capable of the controls I mentioned, if not met then those people should NEVER OWN A PITBULL, etc.
- There should be a focus on the owner not only the dog.
- I do not support breed specific legislation. Define what is "dangerous behaviour". (Lunging, pulling, jumping, bite, growl) Define what nuisance would require additional insurance (barking? running at large? Licensing?) Contradictory statement. Dogs running at large are not allowed to go to the dog park?
- The city should require dog training for dogs that have biting incidents. Make the owners pay for it. Punish bad owners not bad dogs. Bad dogs are create by bad owners
- Make these changes for ALL dogs. Small dogs often cause larger react. As a small dog owner I know my dog can be antagonistic to larger dogs. But my dog rarely is seen as the problem. I'm very aware of my dog not all dog owners are.
- Why specifically identify pit bulls? How does the city know the strength of a bite of one breed of a dog than another? What about Rottweiler, Mastiffs etc... let's use appropriate judgement on any nuisance dog and not specifically target one breed over the other. It comes down to responsible pet guardianship

- This breed of dog is no different than an assault rifle, no one needs one therefore in the public interest no one should have one.
- dogs that have a past record of being dangerous need to be restricted but I do not believe that breed specific laws are the right approach. I would suggest criminal charges for owners that have a history of training dogs to be aggressive
- NONE of this. Although a breed can have tendencies, it's on the training of these breeds, and ANY breeds, that can bring out this type of aggressive behaviour. This is WRONG. If it were people, this would be racism. NOT okay to enforce this. HORRIBLE.
- This is not the time for the city to be going after people's dogs based on breed! Absolutely assisining! If a dog bites do something but until then stay out of it
- Breed specific is not appropriate. Problem dogs are the problem. Caused by owners. Not breed. This is just a form or racism in fogs not people.
- For high risk breeds, mandatory dog training and socialization requirements
- Define "dangerous behaviour". Barking, jumping etc are not "dangerous"
- Please stop differentiating between a dog and a "Pitbull", they are both dogs, no more or less likely to be aggressive. If implementing a new bylaw, it must apply to ALL dogs not just some that subjectively look a certain way.
- Please understand that it is not the dog that is violent but it's upbringing that causes them to be that way. Pit bulls were originally bred to be "nanny" dogs and assist with families whereas chihuahuas were bred to hunt. It is not fair to specify one particular breed.
- Remove "pit bulls" and other breed specific language from these statements. You're better than this, Calgary.
- the goverment should pay for an educational program for people to learn about dogs and breeds so they can best care for then and insure that biting is the least likely to happen.
- it's often the owners that are the problems, so obedience training must be taken by the owner/handler with the dog, not some other party
- Any dog not trained shouldn't be allowed in off leash dog parks.
- Pitbulls are not the problem. MORE FREE DOG TRAINING EDUCATION AVAILABLE FOR ALL PET OWNERS. BANNING A BREED DOES NOT STOP THE INCOMPETENCE OF PEOPLE OWNING DOGS AND NOT PROVIDING SOCIALIZATION OR TRAINING. MORE PEOPLE NEED TO BE TRAINED NOT DOGS
- I am NOT in favor of any breed specific legislation. I am in favor of responsible dog ownership.
- Please note: Muzzles are a terrible idea for any dog as they make the dog wearing it more fearful, aggressive, and likely to be attacked by other dogs. Muzzles are never an effective solution other than for short veterinary medicine procedures. Training and conflict avoidance (aka no longer taking your dog-aggressive dog to offleash parks) are much more effective alternatives.
- PIT BULLS ARE NOT MORE DANGEROUS THAN OTHER BREEDS OF DOG.

- Targeting pit bulls is stupid and dangerous. As a veterinarian, I am much more concerned when a chihuahua or other small breed dog with no training or manners, as they are exceptionally aggressive. These bites can cause a significant amount of damage but the aggression of these dogs is not taken seriously as they are small dogs. Any dog has the ability to be dangerous and hazardous to society. It's not breed specific, it's owner stupidity.
- I do not support restrictions on pit bulls - I do however support restrictions on owners who poorly raise or handle any breed of dog. Pets are a privilege not a right and the breed of dog shouldn't be the issue.
- Obedience training required for dogs involved in bites
- This should not single out one breed the pitbulls that I have seen walking in my area are calm and walking nicely with their person. Most dogs are family members and treated as such
- Pit bulls should not be singled out regardless of the strength of the bite, there's no evidence that pit bulls bite more often than any other breed
- I want protection against all dangerously dogs. All breed included. Bully's are not all aggressive.
- Clarifying point - the definition above says a 'nuisance' dog might be a dog that barks too much or gets away from an owner and is 'at large' how would preventing those dogs from going to the off leash or muzzling them in public address those concerns? A dog that has a history of a minor bite would benefit from a muzzle etc. But by your definition the dog might not be aggressive at all and you would then ban them from a park that might allow them to get their energy out and help them be less of a nuisance?
- I hugely object to pitbulls or dogs that look them lumped together. At off leash park there is a golden with a muzzle that the owner constantly lets try to attack dogs. More sanctions should be placed on the owners not the dog. Maybe jail time as fines are nothing
- There should be no breed classification. All dog owners should take responsibility for their own dogs. Statistically wise small bred dogs have bitten more children and adults than other breeds of dogs. There should be more awareness for dog training to all dog owners. It is shameful that the City of Calgary would even suggest such a bylaw against any specific breed.
- Pit bulls or nuisance dogs are trained to be aggressive and a nuisance. The dogs should not be the focus but the owners of the dogs. I think bylaws and laws need to be made for dog breeding and better screening for owning dogs.
- One strike and you're out - Those who have owned a nuisance dog or pitbull that has shown aggressive behavior or been involved in a biting incident should be banned from owning such dogs in the future.
- Don't pass BSL (breed-specific legislation). "Pitbull" isn't a real breed and most dog "identified" as one are pure mutts comprising multiples breeds than feature a wide head + muscular body (boxer, American bulldog, mastiff (various), and even "friendly" breeds like labs or hounds can all contribute to a "bully breed" appearance. My current dog is mostly hound and I've been asked multiple times if she's a "pitbull.") I've known many dog caretakers in my life and only one has even dealt with severe biting. The guilty dog? A golden retriever. I've had dogs throughout my life, including some bully mutts. The only dog that ever bit me? A toy poodle. BSL doesn't prevent dog bites, it only fuels stereotypes and punishes people with recuses. (Bully breeds are disproportionately represented in places like high-kill and high-intake shelters.) If you're experiencing a disproportionate amount of "bully breed" bites, then the issue isn't the dogs - it's humans who are training dogs for aggressive behavior. You need to address the people problem, not the dogs.

- It's not pit bulls, it's the owners. People that have had dogs that have had nuisance dog charges should not be allowed to licence or own dogs in the city of Calgary.
- Just ban the breed. The dog was bred to kill.
- If there is an incidence with any dog review what caused the attach was the dog being teased or abused. Noise should not make a dog a nuisance, pet owners have no rights when it comes to children teasing there dogs. Dogs bark people need to realize this is
- Obedience training mandetory for ALL dog owners, if ANY dog becomes a nuisance, regardless of breed, the owner must take the needed actions to limit interation with their dog until the problem is solved. ANY dog that causes harm to an individual will be seen as a public liability and the owners will be fined for damage caused and told to gain proper training and insurance or else have their dog seized. ALL breeds are seen as potential dangers and all dog owners are subject to laws
- Ban of pit bulls and those who's breed is associated with pit bulls. This rule and by-law exists in other areas and definitely needs to be done here!
- Don't be breedist. There needs to be more of a conversation created about choosing the right breed for the right household. Pit bulls are a perfectly normal breed, just like any other, but people need to be educated on how to handle them properly, same thing with small breeds like chihuahuas, or large breeds like St. Bernards.
- In most cases, it is the owner, not the dog who is a nuisance!
- All pet owners vetted properly to insure they are getting a pet for the right reasons and have zero priors of training them to be vicious and/or abuse them.
- Any dog can be dangerous not just pit bulls. Educate public on breeds right for them, why dogs might bite & how to avoid it. Many people lack ed. on dog breeds and responsible ownership. Educate the public.
- A dog is a dog. A bite can be just as severe from a small dog. Discrimination against bully breeds is uncalled for.
- New dog owners must undergo training with their dog to understand dog behaviour, bylaws, and how to avoid dangerous scenerios
- The definition of 'nuisance' is too broad to support unconditional support of some of these options. Exhibiting aggressive/biting behaviour is far different than having a roaming nature (being at large) or excessive barking..
- I'm not checking any of the boxes with the term 'pit bulls' in them. I don't even know why you included this - BSL doesn't work. Definitely stick with the 'nuisance' dog language.
- liability of insurance of pet - (all) needs to be a verification at time of licencing and renewal as per car licence.
- This is ridiculous, I had a chunk of my ear bit off by a Pomeranian, bent down to tie my shoe. Punish the deed, NOT the breed!!

- You cannot breed discriminate. That's almost like targeting a race in Calgary. If an individual dog is problematic, that's the problem. And their owner. If a dog's owner is problematic they too should face fines (all future dogs are declare nuisances, banning licensing in city limits, etc.)
- How about required training for people to own dogs. So that the owners know how to train and own dogs (IN GENERAL) properly. Stop targeting breeds when any type of dog can be poorly trained. It's the people, not the dogs.
- More verification and checking prior to anyone being allowed to adopt any pet. The problem was always and will always be the owner, not the dog, stop punishing a consequence of human doing and deal with the real problem of bad dog owners! Also, how about some bylaws against animal cruelty and abuse?
- If you're going to implement measures, it should not be for one breed.
- No more than one pitbull/cross per household.
- it is truly unfair to target pit bulls. Chihuahua was and other small dogs are more violent than a pit bull ! they cannot be trained. Any dog that misbehaves should the owner should be fully responsible and not the dog have more people at the dog parks that can actually handle by law licenses or chart tickets for the people that can't control their dog
- I don't think discrimination by breed (ie. pit bulls) is fair.
- Obedience training is required for all dogs, regardless of breed
- Pit bulls are very dangerous dogs they must be banned. It's very dangerous for the community. Many violent and aggressive attacks are reported to be a pit bull. Many of them aren't loyal dogs to their owners and many incidents was reported that they maul their owners to death.
- All breeds should require obedience training after adoption.
- I would be fine for any of these as long as they DO NOT specify any breed specifically. I don't care that a pit bulls bit may be more severe, a biter is a biter. I've had stitches from a chihuahua bite.
- If we're raising fines,make it universal, or at least target the breeds that are ACTUALLY AGGRESSIVE. Pitbulls and pit bull type dogs are not dangerous and this bylaw won't protect anyone. It will just cause a ton of unnecessary euthanasia
- Insurance is provided by homeowners so how can you enforce additional insurance and being in Insurance I am not aware of such additional coverage.
- There a lot of great dogs that are bully breeds and by doing this you are basically putting a death sentence on all these dogs. My bully mix is a registered therapy dog and goes to hospitals to visit people
- Calgary should be against BSL, it has been proven not to work
- Back off, putbulls are beautiful and only as bad as their owners.
- I am against breed specific legislation. We should hold individual owners responsible based on their dogs actions not a group of people just because they own a certain breed. I've worked with animals for 20 years and bully breeds are some of the best dogs to work with. Please hold individuals responsible for incidents and not a group. BSL has been proven to not work
- Please completely ban pit bull dogs from calgary
- How many people are in fact bitten by dogs overall? I find cats to be a bigger nuisance in this town.

- Focus on nuisance dogs rather than specific breeds such as pit bulls. There is a higher chance of issues occurring or offences when the dog has behavioural issues, not due to their specific breeds. I fear that typecasting pit bulls for this will allow issues to still occur with nuisance dogs of all breeds.
- None. This is a stupid idea.
- The focus should not be on pitbulls but owners who don't train or treat their dogs well. The dog isn't the problem - the owner is. Including not allowing certain people to have pets if they have a history of bad behavior.
- I do not agree with ANY of these measures - it should be up to an owner if their dog should be muzzled - not every dog of a certain breed should be discriminated against or penalized -
- [removed]
- None of these have been proven to be effective in any way. Pit bulls DO NOT have any more strength than other breeds. All of the possible measures hurt responsible owners of this specific breed and has the potential to increase the stray population within the city.
- So basically the city wants to be "racist" towards canine breeds? Any dog can snap without prior notice, why not treat all dogs equally. You've really outdone yourself this time Calgary, have some respect.
- Stop blaming breeds!!!!!!
- Nuisance dogs are a PRODUCT OF BAD OWNERS not breeds. The City needs to EDUCATE this. not perpetuate this idea that certain breeds are bad. Make mandatory for all dog owners to take responsible owner training before issuing pet licences.
- TRAIN ALL DOGS. TREAT ALL DOGS EQUALLY. INVEST IN LEARNING HOW TO INTERACT WITH DOGS FOR CHILDREN. MAKE OBEDIENCE CLASSES MORE ACCESSIBLE. Banning a certain breed is a useless waste of money. Every dog has the potential to bite. Train people how to interact with animals.
- None of the above
- Breed should not be a consideration, any dog big or small can be dangerous, it gives people with other breeds a false sense of reality that their dog could be dangerous as well.
- Ban of Pit Bull breeds in the City of Calgary
- I am VERY disappointed in City of Calgary use of language suggesting breed specific ideals onto under informed community members in regards to bully breed dogs. BSL is not hasn't been mentioned until this survey and it disappointing to see. It is all about owner education and accountability as well as by standers education around any dogs especially in an off leash type dog parks. Taking away a dogs ability to socialize due to appearance is not acceptable and detrimental to the dogs ability to be able socialize appropriately with humans and dogs alike. Bad owners make bad dogs. Being a certainly type of breed doesn't mean it will inherently be a bad dog. So In theory then if we applied this to humans: a man with a tall frame and large muscles has the ability to potentially inflict more severe harm in an incident but does that mean every man that looks like that should have his hands tied behind his back because he may be able to injury more severely than the highly trained less intimidating looking, shorter and less muscular man? ?

- ALL dog breeds (not just pitbull breed and look alike) should be determined on a case by case basis to prevent future harm coming from ANY breed.
- This is ridiculous. And you 'strength' caveat is absurd. What about GERMAN shepherds and Dobermna pincers and Bernese Mountain dogs? These are all very strong dogs. You are trying to justify an absurd biased stance based on ignorance - not fact.
- How about fines and training for bad dog owners instead of always targetting breeds of dogs that people who don't know dogs, never owned dogs find scary. In almost every case of bully breeds biting it is because of the incompetent owners. Maybe have an age limit for ownership of a Pitbull. The mandatory obedience training for the breeds that can be dangerous with bad owners is a good idea. Which for some reason only Pitbulls have been targetted. Why aren't German Shepard's, Rottweilers, Dobermans, king Corsos, Huskies, and many more breeds that attack people and other dogs on that list? I know so many friendly and loving pitbulls. That is because they have responsible and experienced owners. The issue isn't bad dogs, it is bad dog owners! And greedy city officials looking to make money where ever they can.
- You need to regulate breeders. Especially breeders of pitbulls. No more backyard breeders and sales on Kijiji!! The definition of pit bull including "appearance" is way too broad.definitions are problematic. Definition of "nuisance" is unclear. Does it include biting? Biting is very different than biting. Why would you muzzle a dog for barking or being at large?g?
- Educate yourself Calgary. Is a person over 6 feet tall supposed to pay more for a transit pass because they take up more space? That's what rules for dogs based on looks is like. Same rules for all people. Same rules for all dogs. No multi tier system. No discrimination based on look.
EDUCATION IS KEY
- We should be regulating dog owners. A dog is a reflection of the standard of it's owners. A sub par owner equals a sub par dog. We cannot penalize all the people who train their dogs, this includes myself. We have been through sets of obedience training and have had no issues with our large breed dogs. The only suggestion i would support is a bandana colouring for offleash parks for dogs who have been previously fined and tagged as an AGGRESSIVE nuisance. If they are flagged as an aggressive dog, They should not be allowed off-leash at the parks, and must wear a distinctly coloured bandana. What about all the other large or small breed dogs. i.e german shepherds, akita's. No dog should be punished unless they are flagged in the system and it is justified. and it should be case by case scenario for the outcomes.
- Behaviour and history specific, not based on what the dog looks like
- Pit bulls are not a breed. Any dog can be violent and bite regardless of breed or size. We must go after owners not specific types of dogs.
- Leave pitbulls alone. BSL is a rotten joke and is unacceptable in our city.
- breed-neutral laws - This is over the top and you need to talk to more rescues about what you are doing. Owners have the responsibility, but also some dogs came from bad owners and are being rehabilitated, why do you punish them the same for doing the best they can to now be responsible pet owners. it's not all black and white. There are a lot of people out there who don't understand dogs or respect their space and when they force the dog into a bad situation by threatening them or their owner why does the dog or owner get punished. There needs to be equal protections for the dogs and owners they can be victims too. What about higher fines for those who go out and put hotdogs with poison in the parks? There needs to be more public awareness - like don't ride your bike through an off leash fenced dog park or bring your small children in - the park is for the dogs not you. Yes there should be a standard warning system "voluntary dog early warning system" with colours to indicate to others if a dog needs space etc. this is long overdue but requires public education as well .

- Punish the deed not the breed! NO breed specific legislation please!!!
- Only target animals proven to possibly be aggressive to other animals/humans
- Its been proven that banning breeds does not work. Education and treating every dog no matter the breed equally when they are aggressive should be done. Muzzles for dogs that bite, 3 strike rule, and fines are all important for the dogs that are aggressive. Hate to say it any animal with a mouth can bite and you need to treat them all equally whether its a 10lb chihuahua (I know more people with sutures from these than any other breed) or a 100lb pitbull type
- Pitbulls should NOT be separated into their own category, rather a vicious or nuisance dog is exactly that a "dog" not breed specific. The amount of "dogs" that have lunged/barked violently at my behaved and LEASHED pitbull with NO behavioral correction to them is horrendous.
- I would support an outright ban of certain breeds including pit bulls inside city limits
- This surgery is very bias in its question by singling Pit Bulls. All dogs can bite and injure people or other animals. The key to this is education and strict rules around nuisance dogs . Calgary has always been know for it forward thinking animal services this is a step backwards. It has been proven time and time again breed bans do not work its education that does
- Pit bulls are not the problem so stop singling out a breed or what "looks like" a certain breed. The problem is the dogs owner and I guarantee there are more vicious little dogs.
- Dogs should be declared a nuisance based off of proved behaviour, not breed.
- As a child, I was twice bitten by a nuisance dog -- it roamed the neighbourhood, bit and knocked over a few people -- the city should have the authority to seize dogs like this -- I'm not sure what 'dangerous behaviour' meant in the first statement. I think a dog that bites may need more than confinement to the owner's property (does this protect a delivery person or a visitor?), so I wasn't sure about your statement 2. Statistics about dog attacks show that they are much more dangerous than any other type of dog, and their bites are much more serious -- dogs like pit bulls that have been bred for fighting are a product of their breeding, and are inherently dangerous. One of the reasons I don't own a dog is because I am afraid of encountering large, out of control, dogs on walks.
- Bring more education to pet owners, create more dog obedience classes and hold pet owners responsible for their dog's actions with fines, but do not seize dogs.
- Breed-specific legislation as it does not reduce the incidence or severity of dog bites, penalizes responsible pet owners and kills innocent dogs. A community approach to responsible pet ownership, one that focuses on the behavior of the dog and the owner, is the best way to protect public safety and promote animal welfare

- Only animals which have shown undue aggression should be affected. Any dog, including block head dogs, should NOT be prejudged.
- Ban certain breeds from city limits
- Do not discriminate against pitbulls
- Leave pitbulls alone. They, as animals, are not the problem!
- Pitbulls are not prone to attacks any more than any other breeds. Their jaw strength is not any greater than that of other dogs their size. There are at five to ten breeds with stronger jaws than a "pitbull", yet no mention of harsh regulations for them. The current bylaw system for dealing with problem dogs has been working just fine. This article even admits there is no particular problem with "pitbulls".
- Small dogs that express dominance and bite or nip people need to face same consequences.
- Stick with "dangerous" with clear definition of dangerous behaviour and do NOT make the shape of the dog a factor. Nuisance is too vague; there's a big difference between barking a lot and roaming, and muzzling doesn't help with either. Don't judge animals by appearance, but by the owner's behaviour. The HUMAN is responsible for an animal's behaviour. Not an animal's shape. I don't like the seizure idea, especially when combined with stupid "breed" specific ideas that have been proven time and time again to be unfair, unjust and not supported by science or evidence.
- THESE DOGS ARE JUST LIKE ANY OTHER DOG. EVERY BREED CAN BE AGGRESSIVE. THIS IS NOT FAIR TO SINGLE OUT THESE DOGS.
- I don't understand how in 2020 the city council thinks that the dog is to blame. Pit bulls are the most loving dogs when raised and loved by the right people. Stop blame the bread start blaming the owner. Also by restricting a dog's ability to burn off energy at dog parks by the use of a muzzle and a leash you the propriety of the law are increase its chance of being considered harmful because it can't run and play free. Shame on you Calgary city council for even proposing these laws.
- Do not discriminate against pitbull breed
- Rules should apply to ALL dogs regardless of breed, not senselessly targeting dogs based on physical appearnace that no one is qualified enough to positively identify without DNA sampling.
- [removed]
- Obedience training must come from a certified local source, like Clever Canines or Dogma.
- Choosing to own any breed a dog that has a historically significant risk of causing injury/death to other animals and persons, should come with criminal liability should that animal cause harm/injury. Just like firearm ownership, there is inherent risk to public safety that should be managed accordingly.
- Require testing and licencing for pet owners. Stop singling out innocent animals for the sins of humans.
- Discounted obedience training for all dogs declared a nuisance if they have incident AND owner training if a dog has any violence strikes against them.
- Any dog owner found guilty of by law violations must not be permitted to own any dog any more
- I do NOT believe this is a breed issue more than bad owners. Nuisance dogs are created by the human on the end of the leash. They are so many GOOD BULLY BREED DOGS. END BSL

- Don't discriminate by breed. A chihuahua can be vicious with the right owner. This is ridiculous and outrageous. Be better Calgary.
- Pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents than other dog breeds we shouldn't be isolating such a loving animal when there are so many other aggressive dogs in the city and their owners have little to no control over them. We shouldn't be labeling all pit bulls bad. Very disappointing.
- There can not be more than 1 nuisance dog in household.
- No measures should be breed specific. It is a handler issue not dog issue. Focus should be on the humans. Disappointed that this is even being asked. This is about optics not about making dog parks better. If it was about improving the city would not be so busy closing parks and label small pieces of grass a dog park that are not even large enough for 2 dogs to pass each other
- I do not believe that pit bulls of any shape or size are a problem, the problem is irresponsible pet owners. Any dog can be aggressive and calling out one breed is ridiculously unfair. Smaller breeds can be just as much of an issue.
- Ban Pit bulls completely.
- Automatically classifying a pitbull as a nuisance dog is complete backward thinking and I'm quite embarrassed to actually have to read through these statements. Educate yourselves on the breed please, and don't send us back 10 years with this type of thinking.
- Fine the owner for being a BAD OWNER!!! There are NO bad dogs or bad breeds!
- if ANY breed (not just pit bulls) are considered a "nuisance" and have proven it multiple times, then a consequence will follow
- Pit bulls are generally some of the nicest dogs out there and exceptionally friendly - a bigger problem is some people taking unneutered dogs to off leash parks.
- Stronger penalties against the owner of any dog that is aggressive to other animals/people
- Training required for owners of nuisance dogs
- I don't think it is fair to punish everyone with 'pit bull' type breeds. As a Staffordshire Bull Terrier owner none of my dogs are aggressive or would harm a human. I think an offense by offense punishment for the owner of the dog allowing the dog to committing any nuisance violation would thwart the behavior not a punishment for every breed type that has never been a problem.
- Need to investigate if a suspected dangerous dog before an event happens.. for instances dog behind a fence is super aggressive and reduces community life in the areas people are scared in case it gets out
- This comes down to education. Dog owners should require certified training and obedience training with their dogs (over 40 lbs, regardless of breed) to ensure proper and responsible ownership of their pet. Individuals who were convicted or prosecuted for animal abuse should be banned from pet ownership as an exception to policy. Anyone who fails obedience course with the dog should be denied ownership of the dog (over 40 lbs) for at least 1-2 years before they can attempt to adopt another large breed dog.
- None of these make any sense I have never had a bad encounter with any dog. All dog owners will do what they need if they have an aggressive dog in order for everyone's safety. We can't take away right of dogs who are doing no harm!!

- No matter the breed of dog, if it bites or harms a human, that dog should have to attend mandatory training for troubled dogs. Not to be put down just because they were provoked and did what was natural. Just as a human lashing out, we don't put down humans for lashing out of anger
- I don't own a bully breed, but placing more regulations on this breed is wrong. Some of the most docile and friendly dogs that I know are bully breeds. I think it is up to the owner to understand the level of difficulty of training that each breed requires. Maybe this step is included in the adoption process. Forcing well-trained, well-mannered dogs that happen to be bully breeds to wear a muzzle is not okay. I fear that this may only increase the public's fear and bad stigmas surrounding these breeds.
- No breed-specific bylaws!
- dogs that bite or have attacked, not allowed off leash
- I disagree with labelling breed specific in any of your future discussions ,
- No fines or authorization against pit bulls should be done unless the owner is the one that is the problem. It's not about pit bulls it's about the owner that raises them.
- I do not support breed specific bylaws. Responsibility is always on the owner.
- All of these options are absurd and demonstrate a lack of knowledge on proper pet ownership. The penalties should be on repeat and irresponsible pet owners not the animal.
- it has nothing to do with the breed its the owner. Jail the owner for all I care, DON'T blame the breed. Its like blaming a child that is neglected or abused and acting out because of it. I have had many "dangerous" breeds and have NEVER had any issues of any kind. Increase the human penalties only
- The "Nuisance" dog penalties (such as "Higher Fines," "Muzzled," and "Cannot be in Off-Leash Parks") SHOULD apply to dogs with a history of biting, but not necessarily barking. These "nuisance" offences should be separated for these questions, because one type of offense doesn't deserve the penalty of the other, i.e. barking vs. biting.
- I strongly resent the racial profiling of stocky dogs. Horrific prejudice
- Breed specific legislation is completely useless. Pitbulls are discriminated against purely because of bad press .. as you state above 'pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents than other dog breeds', and they are no stronger, or more capable of damage than any other large breed or mixture. I personally worked in a vets that dealt with dogs seized by the police; pitbull types were the most common, but they were also, by far, the nicest natured dogs seized; in fact I don't remember a single aggressive pitbull.
- Breed specific legislation is completely useless. Pitbulls are discriminated against purely because of bad press .. as you state above 'pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents than other dog breeds', and they are no stronger, or more capable of damage than any other large breed or mixture. I personally worked in a vets that dealt with dogs seized by the police; pitbull types were the most common, but they were also, by far, the nicest natured dogs seized; in fact I don't remember a single aggressive pitbull.
- None of these.

- Absolutely none of these should be applicable except the "Obidience training required for dogs that are declared a nuisance
- This is purely discrimination against a breed. Yes a pitbul breed has an etremely strong jaw, but so do many other breeds, ex police dogs, German Shepards. This is absolutely ridiculous. As the owner you are responsible for your animals, how they act and where you take them. Deal with cases as they happen. Muzzlling and banning a breed of dog is NOT going to stop dog attacks! Educating stupid humans on their animals is how we prevent it!
- I am shocked that "nuisance" is even being applied to describe a breed/breeds of dog. Saying that a breed should have these restrictions and potential additional costs of ownership applied to them because of a dogs potential bite force is like saying a sports car should not be allowed on Deerfoot, or that a individual who works out should pay higher liability insurance because they have greater "potential" to injure someone. As any person should know, it is not the breed, but the capability of the owner who raises and trains the dog appropriately. I have been victim of a dog bite and it was from a chihuahua of all breeds. The fact that pit bulls and similar breeds are being singled out is ridiculous. If you want to appropriately enact measures to ensure less bad behaviour in dogs, then single out the specific problem dog/owner, not an entire breed. I have yet to meet a pit bull, Rottweiler, Doberman etc that I felt unsafe around.
- [removed]
- Recourse/punishment for dog owners showing irresponsible dog ownership. I do not agree with identifying a breed as being a nuisance, even if the reason is something like increased strength. There are plenty of large dogs that can rival a pitbull's strength. Dog behaviour is largely a product of their owners. Small dogs can be a nuisance the same as large dogs.
- Dogs aren't the issue. The owners are. There is vicious chihuahua's. When a dog bites, measures should be taken, before this all dogs should be treated equal.
- Do NOT SINGLE OUT ONE BREED! Or any breed that looks like it. It is PROVEN that more often than not its small breed/ non bully type that are almost always aggressive.
- I do not support any breed-specific legislation. The problem is owners, not the breed.
- I think that the city of Calgary should educate themselves and others around the world on why a pit bull is just like any other dog. It's not in their DNA to be aggressive but rather the owner's fault on how they raise their dog. It is absolutely unfair in every way to label a breed of dog as "dangerous and aggressive" when you clearly haven't taken the time to fully educate yourselves on this beautiful breed on dog. If you are really saying that "It is important to note that while pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents than other dog breeds, the reason they are listed here is because a pitbull's strength allows the potential for a more severe bite." Then why doesn't the city of Calgary invest time and money to train pit bulls as police guard dogs if they are so strong? I suggest you watch the show Pit Bulls and Parolees, which does an amazing job at showing what pit bulls are really like. Please for the love of god do not label this beautiful breed of dog as aggressive or dangerous in any way. Take the time to talk to people in the city that own a pit bull and get to know that dog and you will understand why this breed is so loved and special.

- All dogs should require obedience training, not just one breed or nuisance dogs. Grew up with a Stafford shire bull terrier and I find these requirements horrendous.
- Owners should face more severe consequences, they should be liable for injuries, damages caused by their pet
- obedience training for both dog and owner who have been in a bite or attack incident at owners expense.
- Do not lump pit bulls and dogs declared a nuisance in the same question. If a dog has multiple offenses, I believe they should require different rules but pit bulls have NOTHING to do with it. All these answers are extreme. Should a nuisance dog be muzzled in an off leash? Yes, but not in all public places if they are on control on a leash. This is a terrible survey.
- No breed specific legislation!! Small dogs can be far more aggressive and bite others! Pit bulls are loving family pets. So ridiculous to even entertain these policies. And who declares a dog a nuisance? A disgruntled neighbor? Somebody whose dog instigated an altercation but throws blame? Far more information surrounding this is needed. But absolutely NO to BSL!
- None of these are proven to lower dog attacks. All these do is make people who own these dogs go through so much unnecessary trouble to enjoy their time with their dogs. It is not helpful. Or kind. Or realistic. Not all pit bulls are "nuisance" dogs. Most problems are found in the owner or breeder. If anyone were to be punished for a dogs actions it should be them first. These bylaws only farther the stigma and misinformation of pit bull or "nuisance" dogs. What even qualifies as a nuisance dog? Could a loud and aggressive chihuahua be considered one? They are often far more aggressive than any other dog breed I've seen. Or no? Because the can't cause the damage a pit bull would?
- Total city ban of pit bulls
- Ensure the dogs are dealt with in a fair and safe manner. Fitting the criteria for a "nuisance dog" should have multiple steps and investigation. Not to be taken lightly.
- Leave the pitbulls alone. theyre not all bad.
- These are so stupid it makes me sick. How ignorant to a specific breed. To suggest that a household should be limited to one pit bull per household is disgusting and controlling. Shame on anyone who had a say in these suggestions.
- obedience training/fines for owners of nuisance dogs
- I understand that there are discussions around the required muzzling of pit bulls. Although I do not own a pit bull, I strongly disagree with the targeting of certain breeds because of their damage potential. This could very easily arc over to many other breeds. It is the ultimate responsibility of the owner to take the necessary precautions if they know their animal is a 'nuisance'.
- Bite incidents are a human caused phenomenon not a breed. Calgary should continue to focus on RESPONSIBLE PET OWNERSHIP! There are far too many people who have dogs that shouldn't and/or have animals that they are not equipped to deal with the behaviour issues.
- Euthanize them if they bite. They are not 'dogs' they are different.
- None of these things because this is ridiculous. The link between a "pit bull" and a nuisance dog is not even justified by any evidence. Is the city suffering so much they just need to try find little holes to get more money? Shame on you. You can't judge anyone/any animal based on breed or physical appearance. I feel ashamed living in this city because this is even on the table.

- Certain breeds such as pit bulls should not be permitted in Calgary. Any animal that has bitten or attempted to bite a person or has attacked another dog should be put down. Animals should pose a threat to people.
- Pit bull type dogs should be banned. They are usually always the culprit when somebody is severely injured
- Don't be breed specific, a dog who bites people or other animals must be muzzled in public.
- Training required for the owner. To understand the breed, how the dog reacts in situations, environments and other dogs.
- If a dog is a nuisance dog and owner must do training
- Define what is "dangerous behaviour". (Lunging, pulling, jumping, bite, growl) Define what nuisance would require additional insurance (barking? running at large? Licensing?) Contradictory statement. Dogs running at large are not allowed to go to the dog park?
- Owners of a dog involved in a related offense should be fined and required to take part in a responsible owner training course. Bad owners raise problem dogs. No dog is inherently problematic.
- This is not about a specific breed. This should be about bad dog owners.
- All dog owners should be encouraged to participate in obedience training, when/if obtaining licensing.
- Nowhere have you specified higher fines for owners who purposely train their animals to be mean ie: guard dogs...plus I disagree with you and your stance on pit bulls...many dogs are as strong, or stronger....Rottweilers, German shepherds, Dobermans...etc.
- I am against breed specific legislation in every sense. There are no bad dogs, only bad owners. Targeting pit bulls is something any responsible dog owner would not support! Breed specific legislation is horrendous and I truly hope the city of Calgary does not make the same mistakes as Montreal. The breed of dog is not the problem (Golden Retrievers are statistically involved in more severe bites with children!) it is the owners who do not train their dogs that are the problem, OR people who mistreat or are not respectful with others' dogs that are the problem.
- Owners must undergo training prior to owning a nuisance breed
- If we know that the dangers behind the breeds lay partially on how they are bred, why wouldn't there be more surveillance on the breeders themselves? To be able to breed a pit bull type dog, you need a license to do so and make it harder to obtain that license. Once the license is obtained, continue to watch the breeder to ensure they are not breeding to create more dangerous dogs, but instead are trying to breed a nice quality dog.
- None of the above. Breed specific laws are redundant. It is the owners and not the breed. These dogs used to be nanny dogs for children. These dogs are being blamed for a few idiots that decided to make them fight.
- I would 100% support an eventual ban on pit bull-related breeds.

- Enforced training for owners whose dogs are declared a nuisance. No specific breeds specified though!!!
- No breed specific legislation! Bully breeds are not inherently harmful and it's wrong to burden their owners with the costs of training. My dog has been attacked at the dog park, but never by a pit bull.
- Take each problem case by case without discrimination in breed specific. Create more specific guidelines Such as disallowing dogs in public based on offence not breed. Also dog owners not able to control their dogs or showing signs of inability to be at off-leash Parks should be fined. There are too many irresponsible pet owners who are out there.
- I am against discrimination of any breed of dog
- Sad that you are targeting a specific breed - disgusted to see this part of your questioning - shame on you.
- Any dog can be trained to bite. The owners have to take responsibility. It isn't the dog fault.
- Do not use breed specific bylaws. This is inappropriate. Target irresponsible owners and breeders. Many 'pit bull' type dogs are lovely while other breeds such as German shepherds and border collies can also be aggressive. Again, placing a 'whole breed' label is inappropriate as it depends on training and their owners .
- Leave pitbulls and their owners alone.
- When a "nuisance dog" becomes a problem, this should be addressed at the owner level and not the dog. The owner should be heavily reprimanded for not being responsible enough to control their dog. The dog should be moved to care by someone who loves it enough to work with it on its behaviours. The owner should not be allowed to have dogs as they are unable to keep up with proper training and other measures. These other measures include giving space at the dog parks, not going to the dog parks if you know your dog is aggressive, etc.
- Breed specific laws are ridiculous! Focus must be nuisance animals.
- Some of the above points that would apply to nuisance dogs may be valid BUT not based on your definition in nuisance. A noisy dog or one that has been found at large does not imply they are dangerous and would need to be muzzled. Obedience training should be required for ALL dogs and dog owners. This would mitigate the need for many of the above options. Particularly there should be courses offered and required on off leash park etiquette for the owners.
- Government funded training classes for dogs and their owner who could benefit but cannot afford
- Pit bull ban in Calgary
- All breeds can be dangerous, no need to single out one. Some labradors have larger block heads.
- Legislation should punish owners on their dogs behavior not on the breed of their dog
- Suggest training for all breeds.
- None
- Higher fines for charges of failing to leash a dog off private property
- Euthanasia. Long ago I was attacked by a dog. I went to court to ensure the dog was removed from the city or euthanized. All dogs that attack humans or pets should be euthanized.
- while I am not a fan of Pit Bulls or bully type breeds, at the end of the day on my opinion it's the owner that makes the dog. Usually 8/10 people who own bully breed dogs are not exactly stand up citizens in our society. They buy these dogs for their own protection. like any dog, a bully breed socialized and trained properly from a young age and continuously given the opportunity to socialize and be in a positive environment has no reason not to be a loving gentle dog. My argument is some people just shouldn't have dogs whether it be a pit bull, golden retriever or mini poodle.. whatever if you don't have time to properly care for your dog but you have time for illegal acts where you need protection and you choose that from a dog, it's not the dog's fault, it's the City's fault for allowing that loser to be a dog owner.

- I think that all dog breeds if has a record of biting has to go through training and muzzled in public until they can go through the good citizen . Stricter bylaws with all dogs in public areas should be leashes unless there is a designated off leash area.
- Training for people who want to purchase dog that may show aggression based on the study involved dangerous breeds
- Obedience training for ALL dogs regardless of breed. It's not the dog who is a danger, it's the owner and how they have raised the dog
- Severe bites can occur in on leash areas as well. Higher fines for any dog found off-leash in an on-leash area. The average person has to feel safe from dogs while walking city streets.
- Dogs declared nuisance can go off leash only after dog had graduated from obedience training and is no longer reactive
- I would support nuisance dogs not being allowed in offleash parks if the nuisance behaviour is related to charging or biting people or other animals. If the nuisance behavior is barking, I don't think there should be a restriction. There needs to be more context around these questions. I do NOT support anything breed specific.
- Ban all pit bull type dogs.
- More education for owning this breed and knowing or recognising that this is a working breed and may not be suitable to some people's lifestyle-these breeds need to be exercised and taught how to interact with people and dogs and obviously monitored as you would any pet - if you ban a breed they will definitely become a must have accessory for certain members of society that don't make good life choices!!
- I would prefer an outright ban on pitbulls.
- Breeds other than those listed can be just as dangerous. It is easy to jump on the bandwagon by targeting specific breeds. The emphasis should be on responsible pet ownership. There are owners who do not control their pets and ignore leash requirements. That is the problem, not the pet.
- My wife was bitten by a dog and received a lot of stitches. The dog has chased a lot of people and threatened them. Bylaw has been called. I'm the dog still is around with no muzzle and in off leash. If this doesn't meet the status for "nuisance" then what does? Get some teeth in this bylaw.
- Treat all dogs the same. Penalize bad dog owners, not dog breeds
- Leave dogs alone. Lay off all the city staff that sucks up our tax money dealing with our dogs.
- I do not support any of those! No breed should be isolated from the rest.

- If you were to act as breed as a different race for dogs this is a very racist questionnaire these bylaws should I here to all breeds not just bull terrier breeds a lot of the times it's chihuahuas that attack other dogs.
- There should be a distinction about what kind of nuisance behaviour warrants the above discipline. If a dog is declared a nuisance because it barks, I don't think muzzling in off leash areas is necessary. If a dog is a nuisance for being involved in multiple fights, then muzzling makes sense.
- Owning pitbulls should be banned. It's an aggressive breed.
- Education and punitive measures based case by case instead of knee jerk political seeming moves to sate the publics concern after having been whipped i to a frenzy about 'pit bulls'. Educate about responsible dog ownership and address dogs who prove to be an issue instead of deciding before beginning that you'll scrutinize a selection of dogs without a history of issue. Bully breed owners should not be discriminated against.
- Education required for the owner
- I support a city wide ban of pit bull type dogs. I'm scared to take my dogs to the dog park because of these type of dogs.
- Save the pit bulls. Leave the potential arguments at the door and only enforce fines and/or training based on actions/reported bites with witnesses support on a case by case incident. It's not about the dog breed, it's completely up to the human's direction and guidance to establish a trusting and safe environment for our pups.
- Immediate euthanasia if dog mauls other animals or people
- It's time to hold higher standards of accountability with pet owners. Period.
- Just ban pitbulls. I have seen very many that are extremely good. The issue is the facts show a higher likelihood of attacks and more likely to end up in the hands of owners seeking aggressive dogs.
- Obedience training required for ALL dogs regardless of breed.
- BSL has not worked well in other punishes and responsible rescues who take the time to conduct temperament testing, require mandatory training for adoptable dogs and find suitable owners for the dog's energy and behavioural needs. BSL will also push some problem dogs onto other cities. Some of the focus needs to be on breeders who are causing overpopulation of strong dogs, without vetting owners. Or irresponsible rescues who do not take the time to know the dogs before adopting them out. If the only idea behind BSL for pit bulls exclusively, was the strong bite force, many other breeds would be facing BSL. Mandatory training for all strong dogs would be great if it was a affordable and feasible to implement, however, I'm not sure how easy that would be to regulate.
- severity of their bite“ just shows how uneducated you people are. First of all any medium/ large size dog has the tendency to bite and you cannot isolate ONE BREED because you “think” they bite harder. First of all you singling pot pit-bulls does not make any sense since in the first place pit bulls Do not have the strongest jaws, IF YOU DID YOUR RESEARCH YOU WOULD KNOW THAT! Second, IF YOU CANNOT TAKE THE TIME IN RESEARCHING THE PITBULL/ BULLY BREED you shouldn't be creating any of these bylaws. ANYONE in the city that stands behind this dumb ideology is a disgusting human being and a [removed]. maybe use your brain this time might give you more knowledge than taking ideas out of your [removed].

- None of the above
- keep the actual bylaw, no ban of breed since it has nothing to do with the look or the breed, it's the behaviour of the dog, don't discriminate, all dogs can bite and if it's a labrador that bite and kill it shouldn't be allowed or excused just because it's not a pitbull, the actual bylaw is a very known and followed bylaw, all cities in canada are adopting the same bylaw and it's working, your goal is a to have responsible pet owners, the more responsible someone is the lowest chances you have to be bite by a dog since they take every precaution to keep everyone and their animal safe
- I'm just going to take this opportunity to ask and suggest that you really consider other options, hopefully submitted by people more qualified than I am to make such suggestions. Many of these options feel more like punishments (with no 'crime', so to speak) than they do helpful/preventative. For instance, requiring people to pay higher insurance for a dog deemed a 'pit bull', even without having had an incident, makes next-to-no sense for me. Again, I don't believe I'm qualified enough to speak on the manner! But I ask that you please, please try to find alternatives. Thank you!
- Nothing. Banning dogs for breed is ignorant and asinine.
- Fines for aggressive animals period, the breed is irrelevant.
- The above applies to individual cases and NOT breed specific dogs
- This is a stupid thing to think of because no dogs are born to be bad! They are TAUGHT bad habits which is greatly directed by a HUMAN OWNER. Please use your common sense and some basic biology knowledge that this law is ridiculous and completely discriminating against pitbulls ALL BECAUSE of a few bad apples. There are many other dogs that can be considered dangerous and yet they are not attacked. Why? BECAUSE THEY ARE WELL TRAINED. Please City of Calgary. Don't be ridiculous and DISCRIMINATE AGAINST PITBULLS. Instead use this knowledge and BAN THE OWNERS FROM EVER OWNING A DOG AGAIN. Thats what you should do instead.
- None of the above.
- Animals should not be discriminated against based on their breed. Any dog can bite, and owners of other breeds should be under more scrutiny instead of it all being directed towards one "type" of dog.
- Please look at small dogs, i.e. Chihuahua for the title of nuisance dogs before going after the highest rated friendly dog, the Pit bull.
- It's the owner not the breed
- Do not descriminate. Bites are behavioral and many times due to lack of training. Such by laws if passed, should be across the board with ALL breeds and owners
- Fine parents of kids that continue to tease dogs disoite being repeatedly asked NOT to.
- Severe fines for people that refuse to vaccinate their dogs and these vaccines should be free or subsidized by the city.
- As an owner of dogs for almost 30 years, I can tell you it is not the breed or type of dog that is the issue. Dogs, much like people, have their own personalities, characteristics and temperments. Dogs, just like people are shaped by experiences and carry trauma. You can have a typical, friendly, behavior problem free dog who has been attacked by another dog and be left with an anxious and reactive dog. The problem is not the dog but rather owners and people in general. I do NOT support the targeting or singling out of any breed or type of dog. Owners need to realize having a dog takes effort, work, responsibility and time. Too many people think they have control of their dog when they don't. People forget dogs are still animals and have natural instincts. No one can ever have absolute and full control of an animal. Owners need to understand this and take responsibility. Every dog should be leashed out in public. That means no walking an unleashed dog in a neighborhood or an alley. I cannot tell you how many times I have been out walking my dog and been rushed by a dog who is loose in the front yard with the owner gardening, or getting things out of the car while the dog is running free back and forth from the car to the house, or people in a community playground (not off leash) with their dog charging at me on the sidewalk or escaping from backyards and bolting right at me and my dog. There need to be stricter rules and laws around this. It is not ok for people to do what they want while not having a leash or control of their dog to stop them from going after another person or dog. Off leash areas are just as bad for this. Because people stop paying attention, are too busy socializing and not paying attention. It's a disaster waiting to happen. If you are considering leash ing and muzzling for one breed, it should be applicable to all breeds. In my NW neighborhood, there are lots of bully/pitty types...all gentle giants. My issues have bee with other dogs. There should also be some education and information around parents teaching children not to approach or sneak up behind someone with a dog (whether walking or bike riding). The general public needs common sense when someone is going out of their way to avoid them. Be mindful and respectful. Don't yell at them, follow them, call out to the dog, continue to ride your bike in circles around a dog reacting and a person trying to manage them. It's people that are the problem. Owners and the public. There needs to be more training options besides the basics. For the stubborn, challenging, reactive, anxious and tougher behavioral issues. Almost any dog, with the right attention, commitment and responsibility by its owner will thrive. 30 years as a dog owner. I now have had my first reactive and anxious dog. He has taught me so much and I am so much more aware of things I never gave a second thought to before. Going on 10 years with him and I wouldn't change a thing. It's been very challenging and frustrating and disheartening at times. But I have learned to do well by him and for him because that is what he needed. Every dog owner should do the same.

- I've never been more ashamed of this city. This kind of ignorance is truly disgusting. I never wanted to leave Calgary but if this is the sort of pathetic fear mongering we're going to resort to I will be packing up and getting out.
- Higher fines for any dogs involved in bylaw offences. Training/Support for owners of any dog that has severe dog problems. Ex. Reduced cost at a City approved dog training facility.
- mandatory humane dog training for any dog determined to be a nuisance. See KPA CTP trainers or similar. The training must be for owner and dog, not someone else.
- [removed]

- I would only support bylaws that addressed dealing with nuisance or dangerous behaviors on a case by case basis. I do not support any bylaw that specifically targets a specific breed of dog because that deflects from the actual source of the matter.
- Why can I not select more answers? Only the two that show as selected were the the only ones that would select. I wanted to select many others. Is this a means to influence the survey? Maybe this is incompetence.
- Obedience training for all dogs
- I don't think that this should be applied to one specific breed! I've been around many pitbull breeds and have never been hurt, although licked on many occasions. I have sustained injury from other breeds, including Yorkies and Chihuahuas, some requiring medical assistance. It's not the breed that is vicious, any breeds can be aggressive as a result of irresponsible pet owners! Don't discriminate against a breed, it's not to the dogs or to the people who see them as a family member, and I'm hoping that you don't want to break up family!!
- If you are going to put theses in place it should be applied to all dogs.... a pit bull is not the only dog who is able to apply more force to enable a more severe bite. They are the same as any other dog similar to their size...
- Just because a dog is large it should not be muzzled. If not is dangerous it should be. Straight out. You should wear a muzzle for being breed specific. If anything the small dogs are more dangerous! Shame on you.
- Don't breed blame so many other breeds are real problem have all of these designated to all animals not just one breed
- Make the owners of nuisance, and I hate to say it, pitbulls should have to attend mandatory training. Not because pitbulls are especially vicious, it is because they are pretty goofy, can be high strung and need an expert trainer. Doesn't hurt for any dog owners to go through basic training with whatever dog(s) they have. You never know when FeeFee will over react in a strange situation.
- Breed does not determine violence. The options selected here reflect that. Additionally, owners with multiple offences of nuisance or bites should be prohibited for owning pets, clearly it isn't the dog that's the problem.
- none should be applied. I do not consider extra precaution if the breeds are not involved in higher incidents versus other breeds.
- A dig that barks isn't necessarily a nuisance. The dog could be barking to protect the owners property. Nuisance is too general of a term.
- I would never in my life be in favour of breed specific legislation. My 11 year old chihuahua is more of a barker than my neighbours 1 year old pitbull has ever been. It's not the breed, it's the owner and the training that went into it. My dog (11 year old chihuahua) knows all her basic commands and is a great walker, but again is not nearly as "polite" with strangers coming near her people and my neighbours pitbull or my further neighbours German shepherd, even.
- The problem is not the breed of dog the problem is the people that raised the dog in question
- What is the background to this? What are the incidents of dog bites? Has it increased/decreased/remained the same. I do not support "muzzling" or singling out breed specific finer or requirements. Who gets to declare a dog a nuisance? Is this another crazy goose chase by city hall to frivolously spend our tax dollars?

- This is mainly listing pit bulls, but there's plenty of breeds that can be vicious. Have you ever met a Chihuahua? They may be small but they can be vicious. If the dog has a history of biting and the owners cannot control the dog to keep it from being aggressive towards others then the owner should be fined and supervised to see how they're dealing and handling their animal. NO DOG SHOULD BE EUTHANIZED BECAUSE OF AN ATTACK!!! Get the dog checked medically and make sure there's no neurological problems. Also see how the dog does with someone else besides the owner. An animal like a person isn't born vicious or mean. It's sometimes the environment they're raised in.
- Find a way to stop people from demonizing specific dog breeds and if at all possible seize 'nuisance' dogs from those who are incapable of caring for these animals.
- This should not be "pit bull" specific.
- Full enforcement of any dog owner not taking proper care to manage any breed of dog acting aggressively
- There needs to be regulations for if a dog bites they have to get training help. No matter the breed. This should not apply to any dog who is taunted, teased, or threatened.
- None of the above.
- Breed specific legislation is NOT acceptable. It is NOT the dog's fault if there are behavioral issues. It is the OWNER'S responsibility for ANY dog to properly train and care for the dog. As for your example and statement that a "pit-bull" type dog has a strong bite? WRONG!!!! There are at least 5 other types of dogs with much stronger bite force. Do some research first before stating false facts. A Rottweiler can bite at almost 300 PSI more than any "pit-bull" just to name one. Punish the owner, NOT the dog. Approx 2% of "dangerous" dogs can not be rehabilitated. BSL is NOT the way to go. Start punishing the owners LARGE and give the courts the power to do something about them instead of a slap on the wrist.
- Lower licensing fees for pet owners who take their dogs to obedience training or socialization classes
- Please be cautious to avoid weaponizing bylaws. Some neighbours are unreasonable and will call bylaw over everything or fabricate the truth to get others in trouble.
- Designated off-leash parks for big dogs and ones for small dogs
- So many cities have tried and ended their BSL legislation because it didn't stop dog bites, in Toronto incidents actually went up. Why? Because all dogs are capable of biting and breed was not the root cause of biting. Besides it is very costly and last I checked we are in a recession further crippled by a pandemic. Don't use my tax money so wastefully please.
- All the listed bylaws above are totalitarian in nature and shouldn't be implemented.
- NONE OF THE ABOVE. These ideas are completely unfair to responsible owners, with well trained dogs with no behavioral issues. End the stigma rather than encourage it.
- OBEDIENCE TRAINING FOR ALL DOGS!!!! Pit bulls are no worse than any other breed.

- A dog's breed should have zero bearing on how the dog is treated. There are far more terrorizing little dogs than there are big dogs. The fact that the City of Calgary wants to implement a bylaw targeting a specific breed is ridiculous.
- The owner needs to go through a training session as well to understand the breed behaviour as well as obedience training.
- I would support bylaws that enforce/punish acts/behaviors of dogs/owners versus specific breeds.
- There is no reason to single out pit bull type dogs; owners of nuisance dogs, regardless of breed, should be penalized & subject to stricter measures that would both promote safety (ie muzzle off property, requirements around further training & passing a test if they want to use off leash etc).
- My concern is for pet owners such as myself that own a pure breed Labrador retriever that is red in color...people on several occasions have confused our loving gentle lab as part pitbull because of her unusual color. What happens to us then when she is reported as a pit bull breed? Do we have to keep showing her papers?
- As the owner of the dog, individuals could be financially liable for harm caused by their dog
- Owners have secure fences to protect public.
- You need to increase fines for humans/owners who are not responsible....has nothing to do with pitbulls....STOP creating stereotypes! The city needs to clamp down on puppy mills, dog breeding for profit and irresponsible owners, this includes all breeds. I live near a park and see way more small dog owners with small dogs chasing kids, other dogs who are on leash +even in designated off leash) who have bitten numerous times. All adoptions should require a responsible course and dog obedience. I see so many people in my neighborhood who shouldn't have dogs, who have no idea on responsible and loving care (I have seen people beating their dog, choking them when walking to get them to stay beside them, kids running and pulling on the dog leash like a windmill)...all of which I confronted them. City needs more enforcement to issue fines. Many people think off leash means free rein. Finally, this includes nose hill.... I see a lot of dogs (big and small) being allowed to actively chase wildlife as a method of "exercise". So instead of focussing on a fictitious breed issue.... focus on the real issue....[removed] owners!
- Having any dog is a responsibility. Anyone who wishes to obtain one should take courses/classes to obtain a license to own. Like a license to drive. Breed should not be a factor.
- Small dogs have vicious bites and should also need to be trained
- Breeding should require credentials and licensure, without which people can be fined for breeding and selling puppies of any kind. Eliminate hobby breeding and backyard breeding and make it a requirement that people who breed and sell dogs are licensed to do so.
- I am a pitbull owner, I find picking one breed is ridiculous there are many other dog breeds that might be aggressive, this should not be based on the dog breed but on the owners of all dogs, my dog goes to the dog park to play with her ball and stick know I will need to put a Muzzle on her, I won't be able to take her, so know there is no exercise for her Please take these points into consideration I don't think these bylaws are fair for their dogs
- There should be NO breed specific legislation period.

- What is considered "dangerous behaviour"? I am very concerned that increased measures would be abused. For example, if a dog has separation anxiety and cries when its owner leaves home, these measures could have that dog declared a nuisance, then seized. Will the dog then be put down? I see these measures being abused by squeaky wheel neighbours against pit bull owners by neighbours that don't like pit bulls.
- Leave the specific dog breeds out of it. Punish owners for repeat offences. Ban owners not breeds. I've experienced more issues with small dogs than large dogs in my years.
- No new bylaws should be passed as pitbulls or bully's are like any other dog and any dog can bite not only bulky breeds, therefore there should be no new bylaws passed and anyone that is dumb enough to pass a bylaw should be muzzled or deemed a nuisance human being
- Signage required on yards that have pitbulls or nuisance dogs indicating there is a dog on the property.
- No municipal measures should be breed specific. All issues should be dealt on an individual case basis and should have nothing to do with breeds. Just because a pit bull has a stronger jaw than another breed does not make them any more of a threat. Behaviour issues should be dealt with in regards to the owner and training, not breed.
- I think that only if a dog has been deemed a nuisance should it or the owner be fined or penalized, otherwise you're punishing for something that hasn't taken place. Innocent until proven otherwise.
- Make people learn dog body language and check in with behavior specialists periodically.
- No breed should be named as all dogs are capable of biting and causing physical and mental injury. All dog owners should pass a test to prove they have knowledge of the care (physical, feeding, health, grooming needs, time to care for and mental stimulation) a dog could require and the commitment they are taking on, the responsibility of said dog is on them. Training is a must for all dogs and humans alike.
- I don't believe one breed should ever be singled. I also think a talkative barking dog is much different a nuisance than an aggressive dog. I don't think dogs that have a lot to say should be denied the pleasure of a free run in the designated parks
- Breed specific legislation is ridiculous. The owners should be responsible for the behaviour of their dog. No matter the breed
- While a large responsibility rests on the owner for being aware of their pet's emotional 1) animals lack language and operate using different filters from humans; 2) animals can, as a result, be what humans term "unpredictable"; 3) humans should not approach or interact with strange animals; 4) even if the owner gives permission for interaction, it is the other party's responsibility to understand that they could still get their hand removed if they pet Fluffy the wrong way; and 5) even the "nicest pet who's always so patient with Baby" can suddenly decide it is Over This Shit. Unfortunately, no amount of policing or bylaws will replace the huge chunk of the human population who are, let's face it, just kinda dumb about this stuff. : (
- Take away ownership rights for owners that have multiple cases where their dog inflicted a bite or attack on a dog or human. All breeds. Punish the owner not the breed.
- None of these. Ever.

- Dont target specific breeds
- Stop discriminating against breeds and then asking what institutionalized racism is
- I don't support a breed specific bylaw.
- I don't agree with any of the following
- As stated above, pit bull breeds are not the only breeds that can potentially bite, chase or get into dog fights. All breeds can do these things. It is the owners responsibility to control their dog, and there should be no specific rules for pit bull breed owners.
- Nuisance dogs require seperate categories for barking vs at large type nuisances, if you want to go there at all. Otherwise, could see bylaw struck down in court in short order if vastly different categories of nuisance are lumped together inappropriately
- Fines for off leash dogs in city parks. Plus more officer enforcement.
- BREED SPECIFIC LEGISLATION IS DISCRIMINATORY, NOT GROUNDED IN DATA OR FACTS AND HAVE PROVEN ENTIRELY INEFFECTIVE IN EVERY JURISDICTION WHERE IT HAS BEEN ENACTED!!!!!!!!!!
- More on how the dog is declared or considered a nuisance needs to be provided
- No pit bull related restrictions. pit bulls are not the problem and do not have a higher bite force it's the owners who are the problem
- If the dog has multiple dangerous behaviour calls, then the dog can be seized by the city.
- All owners should be held to the highest extent of laws pertaining to nuisance dogs
- All of these are discriminatory towards our pitties! Breed specific laws are outdated so why are you going backwards? What about chihuahuas?
- No breed-specific regulations as it has been shown that they are not effective
- This is ridiculous. You're going to suggest people get higher insurance for a dog? Are you seriously ultimately suggesting the demise of an entire spieces of dog? As some wouldn't be able to afford that. Cause as we know Jason Kenny will just erase any and all caps on insurance and it'll be out rageous. The solution is properly training the animal, showing it respect and dignity. Treating it as you would a human. Use your brains. Muzzle at a off leash park? What is it a prison? Off leash is meant for all dogs. If you're not comfortable then go elsewhere. The City can create off leash parks for different sized animals. Stop playing with stereotypes of dogs.
- ban the breed
- None.
- Dogs that have been at large, noise voilations, are often neighbour issues. This is ridiculous to group these dogs in the same category as aggressive dogs.
- Temporary additional insurance for dogs labeled a nuisance. For a set period of time after completion of mandatory obedience and behavioural classes are completed.
- This sounds discriminatory think of pitbull as people of colour and your opinion will change
- Obedience training for owners so they can recognize they are the issue behind their dog's behaviour, not the dog itself. No dog should be punished because of their owners' bad behaviour.
- Ban the breed from the city altogether

- nothing needs to be in place for bully breeds specifically as this is no different than racism for humans
- There is no such thing as a "nuisance dog". Regardless of breed, any dog may bite. This could be from improper pet ownership or people not respecting the dog's space.
- The city cannot be targeting pit bulls specifically. The onus is on the owner to work with and train their dogs. Any incidents that happen with dogs is the owner's fault and responsibility not the dog.
- First time dog owners should have to take dogs to obedience training
- No Pitbull specific bylaws, just owner punishment
- Penalize the owner and force repeat offending owners to take proper dog care/raising courses.
- Higher fines and mandatory training courses for the OWNER of any dog, regardless of breed that is deemed a nuisance and any animal that has multiple offenses to be taken away from their owners and placed in rehabilitation programs. Any animal that is deemed dangerous to the public to be bared from public spaces
- How to be a responsible pet owner Training or classes , its the people make bad dogs NOT THE BREEDS!
- Dogs that dont have good neighbour certification are more $$$$
- Breed Specific Legislation is the animal version of racism.
- more rules/responsibilities on the owners. should not be breed specific. ensure information regarding animal behaviour is provided by animal behavioral specialists.
- Leave Pit Bulls alone.
- more investment into programs that help with breed specific qualities so we can help our loving pets be the best they can be rather than bad owners giving these breeds a bad reputation due to lack of education and training for the animal.
- fines for owners that are inept and don't know how to properly care for pets, especially for those that own a pit bull. it is the owners fault, not the innocent animal.
- DOGS ARE NOT BORN AGGRESSIVE , TERRIBLE OWNERS MAKE THEM THAT WAY
- Are we going to restrict people from having children? I think we have a much bigger problem besides dogs and targeting pitbulls. Are we going to muzzle children who bite other kids or put cement blocks on peoples hands who have been violent in the past?
- Stop vilifying Pit Bulls
- the questions are leading and show little concern for the animal. How about questions regarding fines for people who behave ignorantly by playing ball sports in the middle of off-leash parks, or run through packs of dogs and antagonize them? yes a pitbulls bite is worse, but i have never been bitten by one but i have been bitten on two occasions by poodles. Leave the breed out of it, there are cities now with a huge number of dumped and homeless pitbulls because of these discriminatory rules which create a negative perception, prop up anti-pitbull sentiment and really solves nothing.
- Various: Hold owners responsible for attacks by sentencing them with jail time.
- THIS IS ABSOLUTELY DISGUSTING. THE FACT THE CITY IS THIS IGNORANT. IT IS NOT THE ANIMAL. IT IS THE PEOPLE WHO OWN THEM. SHAME ON CALGARY, AND THE IGNORANT CITY COUNCIL. There should be proper screenings taking place to make sure the owner is capable of properly caring for an animal. Clearly that's not the case here. People should be punished. Not the dogs.

- Disapprove of any law trying to categorize a breed of dog into a specific behaviour type which results in restrictions.
- Dogs that bite should be put down
- Allow all dog breeds to be judged fairly, and with similar intent.
- ALL dogs not just specific breeds. Fine the chihuahua owners biting people
- Opposing any measures to restrict or punish dogs based solely on their breeds
- These are all terrible options. The fines should go toward irresponsible owners of any dog breeds, not just one specific type of dog due to misinformation and stigma
- Greater liability for the owner as a whole. I've watched small dogs antagonize large dogs but it is always the large dog held accountable. I am personally less concerned with being bit by a large dog and more about being bit by a small dog.
- fines for ANY dogs involved in bylaw offences. The difference is already in damages. If anything higher fines for intact animals over the age of 1 year
- Any nuisance or aggressive dog, regardless of breed, should be treated the same. It is time to make the owners accountable for their dog's bad behaviour rather than just lumping all dogs of a certain "type" together.
- opposing any measures to restrict or punish dogs based solely on their breeds
- I think singling out 'pitbull or similar dogs' is the wrong approach. There are many dogs of many breeds that can be dangerous. Mandatory training for ALL dog owners should be required. With additional training required to anyone with a nuisance dog.
- You state there are not a higher rate of bites by pit bulls, therefore all the suggestions that pit bull owners have more limitations is unreasonable. It should entirely be based on the behaviour presented by each dog, regardless of breed. Some pit bull owners train and have much better behaved dogs than other breeds, where owners don't even bother with training. Needs to be case by case, regardless of breed.
- Make dog training mandatory for every dog one specific breed of dog is not the issue. Make humans do the work to ave a good dog!
- Please don't single out pit bulls. Don't feed the hype.
- Nothing. Do not judge a dog because of appearance. Also, there bites are no more stronger than a German shepherd, Doberman or Rottweiler. Do your research!!
- THIS SHOULD BE FOR SMALL DOGS AS WELL. I Have been bit by several SMALL BREED DOGS and not any blockhead type/Bully breeds. Calgary needs to smarten up... it's not just pit bulls etc. This is only going to spread more hate towards big dogs.
- I oppose to any measures taken to punish or endanger the animal in question
- no breed specific legislation
- I believe those who have well trained dogs should be allowed to have them off leash provided they are well under control (i.e that the owner has the same amount of control on a leash as off a leash). I do not agree with breed specific legislation. Penalize irresponsible owners.

- The fact you're singling out bully breeds is ridiculous; no pit bull ban or muzzle law is necessary. It should include all large breeds if so, not just one dog breed.
- If a dog is declared a nuisance they must attend behavior training by a registered trainer.
- I disagree with these harsher penalties on pit bulls. It is the owners responsibility to train a dog and ensure they are suitable for off leash areas. I also disagree with targeting a certain breed as not all dogs in one breed display such characteristics.
- None you can go re-educate yourself for being like this.
- Higher fines for those not obeying the rules of off-leash parks
- Stop judging a whole breed off of some dogs actions
- Breed specific legislation is very misguided and detrimental to pit bulls. They are often targeted for dog fighting and other illegal crime. The fact that these questions exist is disgusting and not representative of our great city of Calgary.
- I will oppose specific measures that restrict or punish dogs based solely on thier breed. It is not the dog, it is the person handling it.
- Since there's no higher rates of attacks by pitbulls, it is a stupid and pointless exercise requiring their owners to pay more insurance/muzzle them in public etc. It is also important to distinguish between "nuisance" and "dangerous" - a dangerous dog being a dog which has bitten/attacked presents an imminent threat of attack to other dogs, humans or domestic animals/pets or livestock. Owners of dangerous dogs should be prohibited from owning subsequent dogs, if their dangerous dog attacks another person or dog/domestic animal. Owners of nuisance dogs should be obliged to undergo training in dog behaviour, not just obedience training for their dogs. Fundamentally, issues with dog behaviour stems from a lack of understanding on the part of owners, and/or unwillingness to take responsibility for the dog's behaviour. Deal with problem owners and we'll have less problem dogs, dangerous or nuisance.
- There should be no breed specific legislation. Treat all breeds equally, with higher fines for nuisance dogs involved in repeat bylaw offences.
- I don't have an other. Assume I uncheck if the people who get to decide if a dog is a nuisance are the same people that made this survey. Expecting additional insurance is OUTRAGEOUS and could lead to the death of a lot of animals that don't deserve it. For example, a person that rescues troubled dogs and has every understanding of how to control that animal but would then find it hard to rent a home or get insurance because of the increased rates. Absolutely absurd. I can't believe this is a consideration.
- When a dog is declared a "nuisance" or "dangerous", the owners must undergo extensive training on dog behaviours and personalities. City bylaw should never be the ones to determine whether or not a dog is a nuisance or dangerous as they always have their own agenda which is rarely ever true to the real situation. Punish the owners, not the animal.
- All restrictions should not be based on breed- Any issues with a dog is the fault of the owner for insufficient training 90% of the time- any dog seen as a "nusance" should be forced to take training- both owner and dog with a company pre-approved by the City such as Pest2Pet, and once deemed suitably trained can then be permitted back into off leash facilities. Fines should be modified- some are way to high and do not insensitive to fix the situation when the money the owner pays could be better used for training correctly.

- There is nothing wrong with the current system as a whole. City council go find something better to try and ruin. I know let's debate fluoride again... for the 5 time
- Fines should be to bad owners, and not breed specific.
- Dog owners need education on how to own a healthy, well exercised dog. Too many think the animal is fine cooped up and on poor food. Eventually, the animal gets angry and upset and that leads to uncontrolled or aggressive behavior.
- Dogs are not the problem. Pit bulls are gentle and loving until a bad human has them. Leave the dogs alone. Educate yourselves. There are many breeds which bite more than pit bulls.
- I believe the city has done very poor research on this topic. For example, the bite strength of a German shepherd is significantly worse than a pit bull and yet they are not listed as a dangerous breed. I have two non-bully breed dogs who have been attacked by a lab, a husky, and border collies, but never pit bulls.
- Pit bulls should not be discriminated against. Any dog can bite but it is the OWNER'S responsibility. If a dog has a previous record of violence, should be the only criteria in assigning harsher bylaws. Not breed!
- How about stop singling out pitbulls and bully breeds
- Breed Specific Legislation doesn't work and only punishes responsible dog owners and good dogs. Nobody calls on jack russell terriers or other dog breeds that bite at a higher consistency.
- I do not support breed discrimination, please stop calling out pitbulls if it's not an actual problem. "Nuisance" dog is just fine and covers all dogs that are high risk. Training, and then fines for irresponsible dog owners needs to be the focus here to limit incidents and hold owners accountable. The measures other municipalities have taken are not science based, they are fear based.
- All dog owners should be required to obtain basic obedience and recall training. No matter the size weight or breed
- It's not the pit bulls it's the owners if a person is too neglect to train there dog and is dangerous of course but to make everyone with a pitbull mandatory to wear muzzel is unacceptable and should not be of question learn to focus on real issues not a breed. PERIOD
- It's very disturbing that this bylaw proposal has singled out a large dog breed based on their appearance and bite POTENTIAL. There are many dog breeds with a severe bite potential and non were listed.
- No bylaw on specific breeds - unfair assumption
- Please do not use breed specific legislation. It has shown to be ineffective and discriminatory. Please try your best to not punish the dogs as much as possible. The biggest change needs to come from their guardians to be responsible with training and proper socialization.
- Mandatory training for dog owners
- Pit bulls should NOT be in the same category as nuisance dogs. Unless that particular dog was labeled a nuisance.
- Ban Pitbulls

- This is disappointing, because breed bans and restrictions don't make people safer. [personal information removed]
- Don't discriminate against pitbulls. Any dog can be aggressive if improperly trained. Every single dog should have to go through obedience training or pass a test to get licensed to be off-leash
- [removed]
- I don't believe it's the breed, take a look at the owners.
- Dispicable that breed specific regulations are being considered. ALL large breeds have the potential to cause greater damage if they bite. German Shepard's have stronger bite than pitbull for example. <https://www.mypetneedsthat.com/dog-breeds-with-strongest-bite/>. Do you research or consult with any reputable vet or trainer. Any poorly trained large breed is dangerous. If anything, you should consider the neutering rules instead. An uncut dog at a dog park poses far greater risk than any specific breed. Please do your research.
- Obedience training should be required for all breeds, not just pit bulls
- I disagree with all the above amendments. If anything, the other one I checked off would work , allowing the owner to think of alternatives for their dog, such as enlisting them in training or whatever THEY think is appropriate in improving their dogs behavior.
- Dogs should not be discriminated against based on their breed
- Absolutely none. To target an animal because of its physical characteristics is one step away from doing the same for people.
- It should be for all dogs that are known to bite just not pitbulls. For a fact pitbulls are the most loveable dog my grown children have 2 of them and they are very protective of me as im disabled i feel safe with her because she makes me feel safe when we are out.
- Strongly disagree with the pitbull classification and segregating them as a separate group. Seems to be a lot of judgement and room for interpretation especially after stating they are no more likely to bite than any other type of dog.
- i'm not a dog owner, but in general I do not support breed-specific bans or regulations. I feel like the questions above are loaded against pit bull types and going by the dogs I know that seems very unfair. I think the law should come down heavily on owners who do not train and control their dogs properly, but I've never felt threatened by a large dog - only by small crazy ones with a Napoleon complex.
- Highly reactive/dog aggressive dogs should not be allowed in off-leash parks. If your dog cannot safely be off-lead it should not be in an off-leash park.
- People who have had more than 2 incidences in which their dog has harmed another dog or human should be banned from owning a dog!
- NO breed-specific bylaws; this is not evidence-based and punishes good dog-owners for the behaviour of irresponsible dog-owners based on fear rather than statistics.
- I think there should be more support and inclusion from the city for the bully breed dogs to help take the fear and stigma away. I also think more training and responsible dog owner classes need to be provided at a more reasonable rate. Also have classes for people and children who do not have dog experience. To teach them what do in a bad situation or even how to approach a dog.

- ban pit bulls
- I agree if a dog (any dog) has been deemed a nuisance; there should be associated fines. I do not believe pitbulls should automatically be considered a "nuisance" due to their breed.
- Putting any of those restrictions because a dog barks excessively ("nuisance") is preposterous. Also, there is no evidence that pitbull type or dogs that look like pitbulls are stronger
- It is absolutely ridiculous for you guys to discriminate against breeds. It has nothing to do with the breeds and everything to do with the training and owners. I have met plenty of dangerous small dogs, discrimination is disgusting. I am ashamed of my home city for even thinking this is okay.
- Not come near the dog without permission this goes for any dog.
- None of them. Are you serious?
- STOP using pit bulls as an excuse for bad owner Behavior. Punish the owner not the "breed"
- Don't have him, greater benefit than cost
- Mandatory reporting if someone is directly affected by an at large dog in which the dog has bitten said person or their dog. Law enforcement is to fine the owner and owner and dog will need to go through mandatory training. This training process will need to be fully completed and signed off by trainer. If second offence occurs the dog will be seized and evaluated by law enforcement to see if dog exhibits any signs of not being able to be put back into society. If deemed unable to be safely intergrated back into society dog will be put down. Owner will not be allowed to own a dog for the duration of two years.
- Please be cautious about labeling specific breeds. "Nuisance" dogs can be any breed. The owner's behaviour and treatment of the dog should also be looked at seriously.
- These are all unfair and uneducated and perhaps even bigoted choices. These are animals we have choices to breed and keep in our homes as family members. The dogs are not the issue the dogs will never be the issue.
- The "pit bull" while it does have strong jaws, doesn't have nearly as powerful as a bite as Dobermans, Rottweilers, Kangals, German Shepherds, etc.... They're only used in fights because of their "mean" appearances.
- higher fines and required insurance for ANY animal deemed nuisance or possible danger to public. The dog is a product of the owner, and typically does what the owner has allowed them to do, part of obedience must be training of the owner
- Do NOT take someone's companion away, for anything shy of assault.
- Anyone who wants to own a pet should have to do some kind of socialization or obedience classes. This is prevention strategy... Dogs learn to be aggressive and I blame the owner for that.
- I do not agree with bylaws specifically targeting pit bulls. Dogs are only as aggressive as their owners and training and breeds do not matter in that case.
- The dogs aren't the problem. The bad owners are. You are just as likely to be bit by a chihuahua
- Any action should only be taken AFTER an offence and should not be breed specific. All dogs can cause harm, it is on the Owner of the animal to make sure they are trained to be in public. Dogs are animals and need to be domesticated properly, regardless of breed.

- Ban Huskies and Rottweillers which have a higher bite incident rate in Canada than “pittbull breeds” do. (Pittbull breeds aren’t a real thing by the way..)
- no more than one NUISANCE dog per household.
- PIT BULLS ARE NOT BAD DOGS. THERE ARE NO BAD DOGS ONLY BAD HUMANS. BREED HAS NOTHING TO DO WITH IT STOP TRYING TO MAKE IT SEEM LIKE ALL PIT BULL TYPE DOGS ARE BAD. IT’S THE OWNERS THAT ARE BAD.
- No specific breed of dog should be targeted. It is on the onwness of the owner to see their dog trained properly. Certain breeds do have certain specific needs but that is not for the city to police. The city should obviously take action if a dog is behaving in such a manor that makes it a danger to itself or others but the solution should be removing it from its environment rather than absent mindedly blaming its breed and being too lazy to fix the issues of an irresponsible owner. TLDR: Punish [removed] owners not dogs
- Instead of looking at it in a correctional response, why not look at a proactive approach, offer assistance in training for those needing it (all dogs), and don't penalize the dog for something the owner can do better on. (I have ideas)
- Fines for people who complain frivolously
- Council seems to want to make insurance companies richer. How would insurance stop a dog bite. I would need to see how many dog bites are reported in Calgary.
- Do not target pit bulls, it is not the breed. It is the lack 9f training by an owner which happens in every breed of dog. Banning these breeds of dogs are not going to resolve anything. Are you also going to ban breeds like the Akita, various Mastiffs, Boxers, Rottweilers, Dobermans, and German Shepherds? These are all large breeds that have a tremendous bite-force. Trying to ban or put extra legislation on pit bulls is poorly thought out and reflects badly on the city
- NO BREAD SPECIFIC LEGISLATION
- maybe take a bigger approach to all dog ownership you don't put kids in foster homes without vists and insurances maybe making big dog owners more accountable before the dog becomes a nuicensne is a better approach.. ya know instead of a reactionary approach
- Don’t focus on pitbulls! Just individual problem dogs regardless of breed.
- Higher fines for all nuisance dogs, not specific to Bull Terriers
- BSL has been proven to be ineffective. Targeting pitbulls is going to accomplish nothing other than hurting families who take care of their pitbulls properly and properly train them. Just like guns, the bad people who do bad things with pitbulls (ie. dog fighting) will still have them in their homes within Calgary and this will not change the issue of dog attacks.
- If a dog causes severe injury the owner and dog must be made to go to additional training and then have to provide proof of attendance.
- ANY breed that is a nuisance (I am against banning or treating pit bulls as the only aggressive breed. It is the OWNER'S FAULT, not the dog's fault for being vicious.
- This is just pure discrimination against certain breeds. Pit bulls shouldn't be targeted.
- Dogs can be seized if owners are deemed irresponsible or incompetent in training their animal. Animal put into rehabilitation and rehome.

- I do not support specific rules for pitbull types, issues are from owners and not dogs. I believe a committee of knowledgeable individuals should make decisions on things such as interim orders and when determining a dog is a 'nuisance'. Additional measures should be taken to limit individuals' ability to have a pet who have mistreated or shown issues in raising animals in effort to place more onus on the owners and less on the dog/pet. Dog bites can be provoked by humans and this needs to be considered more in determined when dogs are nuisances
- Mandatory dog behavioural education for bylaw officers and councillors
- Laws/fines only against pit bulls are discriminatory when multiple breeds have the strength for a severe bite and the ability to "lock" their jaw. Dangerous dogs are an output of poor training not breed.
- None of these. Any dog has the ability to be considered a nuisance NOT just pitbulls and block head breeds.
- Pit Bulls are not anymore dangerous than other large breed dogs. Their jaws are no more powerful and they are no more aggressive.
- PITBULLS ARE NOT THE DANGEROUS ONES. IT'S THE OWNER AND YOUR DISCRIMINATING
- License required to purchase a pit bull. Any person who wants a pit bull or guard dog breeds need to have gone through a training course to understand the breed and training that would be required prior to obtaining the animal s in the first place.
- Leave pit bulls out of this and deal with the real problem of little dogs like yorkies and chihuahuas.
- Rehabilitation programs for dogs like people, while animals are not considered legal persons, more fault into people needs to be investigated than the breed of animal
- I support stricter fines for ALL DOGS NO MATTER OF BREED OR SIZE. I would also like to see stricter rules regarding spay and neuter. Education for owners as an owner all responsibility should fall on their shoulders. I DO NOT SUPPORT BSL it doesn't work again I would like to see education put in place for ALL DOG OWNERS BIG OR SMALL.
- I don't believe it's just pit bulls that are the problem. It's any DOG who has an owner wholsn't willing to put in the time to train the animal Properly . It's the owner's responsibility to decide if the animals safe in public areas .If more pet owners were responsible this wouldn't be a up for debate. So Why should any dog be banned when the bottom line is irresponsible pet owners . Maybe make some rules where it's harder to have a pet ? I think the petOwners need to wake up, not ban the dogs !
- Train those who have authority at the Calgary Community Standards and bylaw officers and especially police how to work with dogs and how to understand dog behavior and body language. Innocent dogs get killed by police for simply barking and protecting their home with no intention of attack.
- Non breed specific rules are a must. Owner specific rules are preferred. Owner has a three strike rule of any dog they own in a year of incidences.
- This is absolutely ridiculous!!! I have been bitten by two dogs and it was labs both times! Pit bulls are amazing dogs and maybe the owners should be the ones getting muzzled!
- Why pick on pit bulls who aren't in the top ten for biting? Education is needed for the public

- I believe this law should only be enforced on dogs that have been declared a nuisance and not on a specific breed. Many dogs can be the cause of dog bites or attacks and although it states that pitbulls have the most mouth strength they should not be judged by the breed they are. All dogs deserve a chance to prove they are not a nuisance but if they are then the rules put in place would be fair. Would never want to assume an entire breed is a nuisance if they aren't all like that.
- Discriminating against pit bulls is ridiculous. Dog owners usually have knowledge of their dog and their dog's behavior. It should be UP TO THE DOG OWNER if ANY breed of dog requires a muzzle. Imposing these rules is only going to lead to more animals ending up in shelters and euthanized. Bad call.
- The problem starts with owners. REGARDLESS of the breed, all dog owners understand the need to engage with, adequately socialize and train their animal to mitigate risk of bites. How about a program (maybe in conjunction with businesses in the pet industry) which offers free (or nearly free) annual assessments or certifications indicating socialization and behavior of a dog is within certain acceptable parameters (obviously some sort of participation incentive would be needed). Responsible pet owners are in every income bracket, so wanting to be a responsible owner should never be finance-dependant. For those who struggle with their dogs behaviour, they should be offered FREE constructive advice/tips to help with behaviour concerns, so that the owner and dog can work to achieve success. A program which aims to prevent dog behaviour problems might allow the City and dog owners to have positive interactions and establish a cooperative relationship BEFORE anything has a chance to go wrong. As well, a program like this might have the potential to identify those person/pet relationships which are consistently struggling with poor dog behaviour despite efforts to succeed – perhaps allowing an observer to determine if the problem originates with the dog or the owner long before the dog ends up on record as a problem.
- off leash areas should be fenced and away from bike paths and footpaths.
- Restrict breeding of pitbulls. Have more expensive licenses for pit bulls/ bully breeds to deter. Education should be mandatory for nuisance dog's owners,
- Owners of dogs who are repeat offenders need to take obedience training. Apply these rulings to all dogs who are a nuisance and by the by, other large breeds of dogs (german sheppards for example) have an equal, if not stronger bite force than the generic grouping of "pit bulls" as described above so unless you apply these rules to all dog breeds this is pointless. I know way more small dogs that bite and are nuisances than large dog because 99.9%of the time large dog owners know they need to do basic training with their dogs and train them, small dog owners generally dont.
- You can not group block head breeds and only pick on them as nuisance dogs. As someone that works in the veterinary industry, I can speak first hand the bully breeds are some of the best out there. If they have to wear a muzzle, why don't other large dogs have to? German shepherds for instance, or any dog for that matter as they are all capable of biting. This is picking one breed based solely off of looks. It is right in your writing that they are not the ones biting the most. It's simply due to the muscles in their face, that every dog has and every dog, regardless of breed, is capable of using. This bylaw is extremely absurd and in now way will do anything except create a fear around a dog that already has an extremely unfair stigma attached to it.

- Bully breeds can't be singled out
- None of the above
- I do not agree with any of these answers. And this information is incorrect. There are several other breeds with much higher bite pressure psi than pitbulls
- I prefer preventative actions as a priority. An insurance claim would be nice after a dog attack but I'd prefer the attack didn't happen in the first place.
- Life long ban on animal ownership if the animal is not properly cared for. The animal should be reassessed and put into a better well suited home. The animal is never to blame, only the owner. Additionally - smaller dogs are more prone to bite then larger breeds. Chihuahuas bite more frequently then any other dog.
- To stereotype pit bulls is fairly ignorant. I do not own one but have had far far more issues with huskies and shepard breeds. Although, that is a result of the owners not taking responsibility and training their dogs. Dog owners should be held criminally responsible for their dogs actions.
- You're problem is your ignorance and discrimination due to your ignornance. Perhaps look at why these dogs are involved in attacks, are the owners repeat, what type of owners are causing attacks. Training owners and not just of "nuisance dogs" but the one of the anckel biters too. Muzzeling dogs because you think just the big dogs are scary is a really shit philosophy. (Could call Muzzeling Tramatic to the dog)
- Pit bulls should be fined only if and when they are harming anyone or anything
- This is unreasonable and is an revolving dog conversation depending on era.
- Dog training requirements should apply to all dogs. However, instead of operating as a requirement for all dog breeds, outside of pitbulls, dog training should act as a fine reduction mechanisms, whereas if your dog is involved in an incident and you receive a fine, the fine should be more if you have not participated in a dog training course. Required dog training courses for pitbull ownership should be offered through city endorsed business that have the opportunity to earn licensing, and these courses need to be offered on a set sliding scale from the city that reflects income. Breeds should not be inaccessible due to fees for anyone.
- Owners with history of owning nuisance dogs should be required to enroll future dogs in obedience/ training. Education over punishment.
- The first fine should be manditory training through one of the City of Calgary Shelters. Then fines for the 2nd offense.
- Putt bulls aren't the issue and you know that's [removed]. They have a better score on the temperament test then golden retrievers and German Shepard's. Owners make bad dogs don't you pin this on pittys. You are basically being dog racist
- Breed-specific legislation doesn't work, and it doesn't reduce the the frequency or severity of dog bites. I'm strongly opposed to any measures targeting pit bulls specifically
- Training required for proper handling of all animals
- Do a background check on individuals adopting or buying a pitbull. There is no dog that is born aggressive. It's the bad owners that teach dogs to be aggressive. There has been multiple studies that have found that pitbull types breeds are on the lower side of the aggressiveness spectrum.

Individuals that own pitbull breeds need to take the time to train the dog, therefore there should be incentive to take the dog in for training.

- Can dogs be declared a nuisance because of a spiteful neighbour complaining without proof?
- All for responsible pet ownership, but not breed specific legislation.
- Obedience training should be required for ALL dogs and should be a requirement of getting a license.
- Stop targeting pit type dogs you can't identify a dog based on phenotypical characteristics and generalize behaviour -- SCIENCE and FACTS
- This is offensive!!! BSL has NO place on this ballot! All dogs can bite! No matter the size or breed!!!
- Offer dog training information for new dog owners
- Charge the owner more it's not the dogs fault the owner should have a dog if not properly trained
- A fine should suffice most times, make people learn to train their dog properly (obedience) the breed has nothing to do with the dog it has everything to do with how it is trained
- I would support many more of the above measures if "pit bulls" weren't automatically deemed nuisance dogs. If the city is to continue to treat "pit bulls" as inherently dangerous dogs, then the city should also provide strong evidence backed by well conducted research that demonstrates the higher risk "pit bulls" supposedly pose to people or other animals.
- [removed]
- I disagree with BSL. Please do not discriminate against this breed. It is the owner that is responsible not the dog. Besides you are stereotyping. Many pit bulls are gentle and very loving. Also you are discriminating against all flat ,block faced dogs. This is very unfair. Calgary was proud to be one that did nit discriminate before. Don't let dogs and Calgarians by being ignorant. Please educate yourselves and made Calgary proud. Pls do not break our trust in you.
- [removed]
- Any dog showing aggression or "Alpha" characteristics MUST be muzzled when in a public area. As well anyone owning a such do must have a solid and sucure fence towith a sucure gate to contain sugc a dog. The owner must take responsibility for such a dog. Many times the owner is more to blame for bad behavior as the dog. Proper socialization classes as a puppy is imperative. The owner should be required to show proof that this has occurred.
- Singling out pitbulls is atrocious. I was brutally attacked by a German Shepherd and hospitalized for 3 days!
- These are not violent dogs do not discriminate. It's on pet owners not the breed
- Prohibition for owners from owning future animals if repeatedly found to have nuisance animals
- None of these.
- There is no need to be breed specific if you are doing what you need to with nuisance dogs you will catch the problems without creating extras for good dogs and good people.
- Remove pit bulls from being targeted ... this is ridiculous. I had a chihuahua that was more aggressive than any pit bull I've met.
- Any dog that causes harm (not specifically only "pit bulls"), should be required to have further dog training to improve behaviour

- ANY breed of dog that causes harm should be required to be on leash or wear Muzzle if necessary. Not just pitbulls!!!!
- Dogs must be given fair judgement before being declared “nuisance”; for example: inappropriately approaching a dog resulting in a bite is not the fault of the animal.
- At what point do you make the owner responsible? This is pathetic!! Mean and aggressive dogs are TAUGHT to be that way. You people are SAD!!!!.
- Singling out a specific breed of dog just because their bite is considered more harsh is not okay... if anything their should be extra licensing and legislation for breeders and no dogs should be held responsible for the behaviour, only the owners. Obedience training should be required for any dog that has the potential to react violently if not trained properly, it's not the dog, it's how the genetics are. That being said, their should be legislations and laws put in place for how type of dogs are allowed to be bred. If the father is very reactive, it is legally not allowed to be a stud and must be fixed. OF ANY BREED.
- Obedience training required for all dogs (any breed) in the household
- Breed specific legislation should be banned. Higher fines for owners and an actual fine be put in place for aggressive dogs.
- Pitbulls should not be allowed as a breed
- Just because a dog is a "pit bull" it shouldn't automatically be lumped in with nuisance animals. Judge each animal based on its behaviour.
- There should be more reprimands against the owner of a nuisance pet than anything. It's not the dog, it's the owner.
- Ban pit bulls in Calgary.
- Fines for people provoking any dog. Punishing bad owners.
- Back ground checks for ' Nuisance' breeds. It's the dog owner that create the behaviour.
- [removed] BSL does not protect people. Stop using this type of dangerous language when referring to an entire subset of dogs. Absolutely disgusting that the City of Calgary would sink this low when there is zero evidence that this is even an issue in our neighborhoods.
- I do NOT support breed-specificity, such as for pit bulls.
- Breed-specific bans and legislation is not based on scientific evidence and creates an unnecessary stigma towards certain breeds
- I think we can't be breed specific, smaller dogs actually tend to be the aggressors. Pit bulls or other larger breeds when observed tend to ignore until such time as they can't ignore anymore. What we require is not to select a specific breed or visible characteristics but instead to speak to the unacceptable behaviours and offenses. Responsible pet owners should take their dogs to obedience training if the dog is deemed to be aggressive with NO provocation, if an aggressive dog is observed on 2 seperate occasions as being aggressive (insert very specific language to describe aggressive behaviours), that dog, not breed, will need training, etc. Sorry, this is way too general and ambiguous and it's not reasonable to treat all dogs of a certain breed one way at the exclusion of other dogs/breeds.

- The city needs to engage several dog experts before initiating all these breed specific penalties. There are many breeds far more dangerous in body size and temperament than pit bulls. Pittie paranoia has caused a lot of harm around this wonderful breed many incidents are also blamed on them when, in fact, the offending dog was not a pit bull at all. And these incidents always manage to make the front page, whereas if a different breed attacks we never hear a thing about it.
- Proof of training required for licensing of any dog over 1 year of age. That could be obtained by a recognized dog training service or evaluation of home-based training by the Calgary Humane Society, Calgary Animal Services or Calgary Bylaw Services (the evaluating staff to be properly trained).
- Let's look at the humans that have these dogs....
- I do not like bsl, I believe you guys need to implement a law that protects dogs from lazy and negligent owners. It's not just pitbulls that are affected everything to chihuahuas are neglected and have behavioural issues that should be dealt with but aren't because they're small- it's not right.
- BSL has been shown to have NO effect anywhere else. Do not impose this bull on Calgarians. Fines and training for nuisance dogs of ANY breed.
- I honestly think more vetting for adopters needs to happen to reduce the likely-hood for nuisance dogs. No dog breed is inherently violent, nuisance actions are created through fear and abuse. As well, I think it is unfair to be punish good owners for taking in possible neglected dogs even if they are declared a "nuisance", changing years of a abuse takes time. It would be more beneficial to spend resources on these families who adopt previously neglected dogs with full intention to restore them to their best state.
- When city takes dog the owner is responsible for a daily maintenance fee. Obedience training required for owners of all/each dog they own. Each person that will handle the dog must take the training. All dog owners must have in place a mechanism to compensate any victim of physical trauma.
- A better order to give when a dog bites would be that the dog must be on leash at all times and have some sort of indicator on the dog collar saying not to pet/approach. Keeping a dog cooped up will not help the dog. Owners should be punished, not dogs
- Focus should not be on the type of dog but rather the owners. Should a person wish to adopt or purchase a dog, ANY dog, that PERSON must obtain a license to ensure proper ownership and care of their pet. 'Nuisance' Dogs are the fault of the owner not the dog. To restrict the dog even more for exhibiting these behaviors is not the answer. The city, under direction from animal behaviour experts should retain the right to provide or revoke pet ownership licenses.
- some pit bulls are simply not trained properly part of the reason so many other dogs have also had violent attacks and now just the one specific breed, stop perpetuating the stereotypical understand of a pit bull
- Ban all Pit Bulls from Calgary
- STOP blaming the breed, start doing something about the owners.
- Obedience training required for all dogs
- Bylaws should not be breed specific but apply to all breeds

- All dogs or no dogs, not breed specific
- I'm very disappointed to see these highly leading questions regarding one breed/breed type rather than focusing on behavior.
- I do not have a dog, but please stop targeting the Bully breeds. All the bullies I have met are very sweet and passive. I have met more aggressive small breeds, and albeit the bite would not do as much damage, it is still unfair to target one breed. There are no bad dogs, only bad owners.
- Higher fines for repeating offenders
- Many dog owners ignore no dogs in the park signs. Not only let them in the park but some let them run free even in the water spray parks. I would like to see a higher fine for this it puts children and others in risk. I want to go to a dog free park due to children having allergies.
- Applications for dog ownership must be mandatory. (Like you would with a rescue) too many people get a dog not understanding the commitment, time and energy it takes to make them socialized, well-behaved members of the public.
- Pit bulls are not problem dogs. This is crazy to just pick one breed. They don't bite as often as golden retrievers. If you muzzle one breed muzzle them all.
- MAKE THIS MANDATORY FOR ALL DOG OWNERS ! LETS GET AFTER [removed] DOG OWNERS!
- No more than one nuisance dog in a household.
- Allowing anymore to have as many and whatever kinda of dog they prefer. if incidents occur the owner should be fined and have to do training
- NONE OF THE ABOVE. Pitbulls do not deserve to have this hated and discrimination because of the name "pitbull" it is unfair and unnecessary to pass these bylaws !!!!!
- Heavier fines for ALL dog owners with ANY AGRESSIVE dog.
- no breed specific legislation
- It's not the Type of breed of dog it's the people who raise it you people are crazy trying to charge people more for a breed is insane
- Dogs are not the problem it is owners who do not have the skill sets to own a dog. There should be a required course before a person can own a dog paid for by them.
- Obedience training for ALL dogs regardless of breed if they are declared a nuisance.
- No breed of dog should not be discriminated
- I do not support breed-specific legislation. I would support better bylaw support (presence at off-leash parks perhaps?) because many dogs that are not well socialized are let loose in offleash parks, but they aren't pitbulls. They are small, nervous dogs. Breed-specific discrimination will only hurt animals who need care.
- Pitbulls should not be treated as repeat offenders due to their potential of more forceful bite. All dogs should start with the same record, wether it be a pitbull, Bernese mountain or a chihuahua. If said dog starts to obtain a "nuisance" record they should absolutely have to start implementing obedience training, house arrest after an incident and fines if necessary. To automatically force pitbull and mixed pitbull owners to start muzzling dogs in parks and requiring obedience training when some of these animals haven't even done anything wrong is terrible. If pitbull owners are forced to abide by these bylaws, I will gladly present the facts about other breeds of dogs, much larger, much more “friendly” as they seem, until they are not in my next petition towards the city’s animal bylaw. There are not bad dogs, just bad owners. For the love of all dogs, give them a chance before penalizing them.

- City of Calgary should have list of the features one dog needs to meet to be considered pit bull or mixt pit bull genes. Not all the Calgarians know the difference between pit bull and Cane Corso or Boxer. City of Calgary should include pamphlets with the notice for pet licence or have it available online as some Calgarians are not accustomed to different type of breeds.
- A lack of bias propaganda against a specific breed of dog. Pit bulls are no more of a threat than any other breed unless poorly trained. How about focus on the owner, NOT the dog?
- Criminal charges for repeat offender owners
- obedience training required for all dogs. Particularly large ones.
- Pitbulls should not be defined as dangerous animals in this bylaw. Any dog can be as dangerous as the human behind them.
- These rules should apply to all dog breeds not just "pitbull and pitbull like dogs"
- How about stick with the bylaws of dangerous dog designation for dogs that are PROVEN to be aggressive rather than an entire breed. Nuisance dogs sound like dogs that are getting out of their fence and wandering, not dogs that are aggressive toward people and dogs. If a dog is deemed dangerous, then they should have rules such as muzzles or no off leash parks. Breed specific legislation does not work and does not change the owners who are not responsible and reliable pet owners. Pit bulls are NOT inherently mean or dangerous. People need to take responsibility for their own dogs behaviour. Socialization and training are key with EVERY dog.
- Restrict people from owning dogs who are repeat offenders or mandatory training for all dogs who have been involved in incidents.
- Engage in legislation that looks at the responsibility of the owners, not the breed of the dog. Fines given out when dogs exhibit dangerous behavior regardless of breed.
- A Pit-bull has a bite force of around 235psi. There are many dogs with a more powerful bit. German Shepherd, Great Dane, Husky, Bull dog and the most powerful of all is a Kangil at 743 Psi.
- banning a breed of dog is not the answer!! Bas owners = bad dog. The owner is responsible for the actions of the dog. Require mandatory training with a specialist to assist in teaching the animal. Its like rehab for the dog and owner.
- People unwilling to properly train their dogs should be banned from owning or keeping animals for a minimum 5years with more than 1 offense/fine
- All dogs that bite or attack should be Fined first time, euthanized second offence. ALL dogs. Not just bully breeds.
- You can't pick one breed over another. All should be muzzled.
- set up for success packages provided by ALL humane societies and adoption agencies when a pitbull is adopted. Thorough behavioral assessments done for ALL dogs who are going through an adoption system (not just pitbulls). This should be the legal standard.

- Obedience training for all dogs, including participation for all adults and children caring for "nuisance dogs"
- I do not agree with breed specific rules. The issue is with owners not the dogs. And the assumption that a dog "looks like" a pit bull by someone that may not have any dog knowledge is unfair.
- All of these suggestions are absolutely disgusting and despicable. There is no such thing as "problem dogs" there's only problem humans. Maybe you should enforce bylaws that prevent incompetent people from owning animals. Period. This is 100% uneducated thinking and ridiculous. This is breed discrimination and is outrageously absurd. I cannot believe this is even being discussed. Give your heads a shake and educate yourselves. There are MANY other dog breeds out there that have way more "behavioural" issues than pitbulls. How about the little tiny yappy dogs that nip at people? Those are more dangerous in my opinion because small children and people think they are friendlier just because they are small, but they are 100 times more likely to bite someone. This bylaw is also helping to enforce the stupidity of people and that just because a dog is small, means they are not dangerous. OUTRAGEOUS. This is sickening.
- A test required for owners with repeat nuisance dogs so they must learn proper care and training. If they fail the test, the dog should be removed from the home. You need a licence to drive a car, perhaps it's needed for responsible pet ownership.
- This is a joke?!! If the city wants to bully pit bulls they should also bully chiwawas!
- Why are you considering breed-specific by-laws? The dogs are not the problem, the OWNERS are! After biting infractions OF ANY BREED, then investigation as to cause (people can cause the biting incidents, but yet the dog gets penalized) and retraining May be required.
- Dogs that have been seized must have owners prove that there is enough space for the animal at the owner's residence. There are so many dogs who are kept in homes because everyone wants a dog but cannot provide the necessary space/care. I think if a dog has been seized, the owner must provide proof of a suitable space for the animal just like child welfare does for children placed into homes.
- You have not given enough info on the definition of nuisance. Dogs that bark are safe in public, but dogs that bite are not.
- It is UNFAIR to single out bullies!! More terrier types, are more nuisance than are the bullies type!
- All people who own a dog should take obedience training with dog. All new owners should have to pass a safety exam on basic dog ownership.
- nuisance dogs are determined on a case by case basis and have nothing to do with breed and everything to do with behavior
- All of the above questions are ridiculous. I completely support laws regarding dangerous dogs. However, the breed specific approach has been a failure for public health and causes an undue burden on innocent dogs and families. Singling out a "breed" by appearance is not scientific and inherently problematic. Disappointing for a supposed educated society to put together this biased survey and not follow the science. It is like saying everyone with red hair is more likely to love chocolate. Calgary - you can do better. Look into creating fair rules around dangerous animals - based on behavior not simply appearance.

- Consultation with veterinary behaviourist or QUALIFIED trainer required after second offence
- It should be mandatory for all potential dog owners (not just pit bulls) to be sent to obedience class so they can be taught the skills required to own a dog, regardless of the breed. The owners need to be taught to raise a well-rounded, social, responsible dog. Some dog owners appear to have limited knowledge when it comes to the training skills required. The dogs cannot continue to be blamed when they have not been taught the basic skills necessary to be a responsible member of the community. This is discriminating against the pit bull breed due to their strength. Question 8, traffic light bandanas is discriminating against the breed.
- No Breed Specific Legislation. A breed of dog should not be discriminated against. Calgary's existing responsible pet ownership bylaw is world renowned, enacting any kind of breed specific legislation is moving backwards. Pet owners should be held accountable if their dog does something. Discriminating against one breed of dog does not solve the problem, especially when the breed mentioned is not responsible for more attacks and using the vague wording of "potential of more severe bite", more severe than what? There are other dog breeds with stronger jaws. No dog should suffer a worse quality of life because they are categorized by a breed, this means nothing against the individual dog, and how they were raised.
- It's wrong to single out a certain type or breed of dog. I am familiar with the breeds you listed. The American Staffordshire is a show dog breed. Owners make bad dogs in ANY BREED
- All dogs should have requirement to be obedience trained, not just large nuisance dogs or pit bulls, ALL dogs.
- Training required for ALL dogs. Maybe try not discriminating against breeds there are plenty of other breeds that have the same or more strength than a "pitbull"
- How ridiculous wanting to pan pitbulls. Stupidest thing I've ever heard.
- Breed specific legislation is discriminatory and fueled by ignorance
- It is the owner not the dogs fault. Let's concentrate on higher fines and muzzles for nuisance people who attack people and children
- Dog owners are the responsible party not the dogs
- Owners should be fined and dogs should have to go through obedience courses / rehab courses for the owner and dog. It's not bad or nuisance dogs it's bad owners!!!!
- most nuisance dogs are not pitbulls and should be treated accordingly with the same rules
- Remove pit bull from list as many other breeds are just as strong (or stronger) regarding their bite. Also highly unlikely that a pit bull instigates a fight. I've been bitten many times by a chihuahua, never by a pit-bull.
- Training programs required for all dog owners of nuisance Dogs. People need training and education if they get a new dog or breed specific training.
- No more free bite policies. Once a dog tastes blood it cannot be trained to stop biting again.
- Please ban pit bulls and have higher consequences for owners who have pit bulls off leash in parks, playgrounds, and streets.
- ANY DOGS THAT BITES ANOTHER DOG OR HUMAN SHOULD IMMEDIATELY BE PUT DOWN
- I do not agree with any of these

- [removed]
- The owner is required to take a course on how to be a better pet owner. Not only should the dog receive training but the owner should receive training on top of this
- Leave bully breeds alone
- No specific breed should be singled out. I have been attacked by a chihuahua and a spaniel but never a pit bull. There is a huge difference between a dangerous dog and a barking nuisance dog?
- I do NOT support breed specific restrictions. If a dog proves over multiple offences to be a problem then that specific dog and owner should be treated accordingly
- Singling out Pit Bulls is not the solution, any dog can be a bad dog, it all relies on the training and ownership.
- Parks and Recreation MUST address the issue of dogs in parks that are NOT dog parks. I regularly watch owners allow their dogs to use a park where families are having picnics and children are running and falling on grass that a dog has just used. It makes me want to throw up..
- I adamantly do not support breed specific bylaws
- How about some owner responsibility, it is not the dog that is the problem, it is 99% owner fault, education for owners who get a rescue dog no matter what breed, and fines for owners who train their dogs to be aggressive or they are abusive to their animals. Pit bulls are not the problem, it is the owner
- All of these measures are borderline insane, get your heads out of your [removed]
- Owners who have been involved in attacks should be assessed for home environment of animal (i.e., potential abuse).
- There cannot be more than one nuisance dog in a household. (This option was not given as a choice without including breed specific option.)
- These proposed rules about 'Pit Bull Type' dogs are not based on research. Any dog can cause injury, and your proposal saying pit bull type dogs can cause further injury is based on biased opinion, not science. And the arbitrary powers given to bylaw (this is coming from a law enforcement officer - not bylaw) the unilateral ability to take someone's dog based on their opinion of a 'look' of dog is awful and disgusting. This is a blatant abuse of power. And to allow people to only own one? What would you propose they do with the other(s)? Fill up shelters further? This idea is disgusting.
- Ability for Nuisance dogs to rehabilitate and have the nuisance tag removed
- Do not punish dogs who have done nothing wrong. If a dog/owner breaks a bylaw that is when these additional measures should be put in place.
- Your focus should be on "nuisance" dogs, NOT pit bull and pit bull type dogs. Similar legislation in multiple jurisdictions has proven ineffective! There are no more "bad" pitties than any other breed. It has become fashionable for municipalities/provinces to pass these unfair regulations, causing a great deal of concern and anguish for responsible pet owners. Enforcement of such bylaws is costly and ineffective. If anything, owners of "nuisance" dogs should be required to train/retrain their dogs, if they are to be returned to them. I know several veterinarians who are strongly opposed to BSL, and I am too. DON'T PAINT ALL "PIT BULL TYPE" DOGS WITH THE SAME BRUSH!! HUMANS HAVE GIVEN THEM THIS UNJUSTIFIED REPUTATION BY USING THEM FOR ENTERTAINMENT. It's time to stop blaming these poor dogs and deal with the actual issues of reckless owners.

- No breed specific rules are acceptable. City council should not be wasting time and taxpayer dollars on this.
- Take the breed out of the legislation and focus on dangerous dog of any breed.
- After a dog of any breed bites, they must then be muzzled in public, including off leash parks.
- For animals that are a 'nuisance' it could be due to separation anxiety or past trauma. These should be taken into account when dealing with them. As they are more emotional, they need more care and understanding.
- It seems that nuisance dogs are being conflated with dogs that have bitten or may bite. A dog may run at large a lot and/or may bark a lot but may never bite. Dogs that have bitten a human should maybe be put under the restrictions above, but once that line is crossed, the dog will probably bite a human again. At this point it should be euthanized.
- Breed specific legislation has been proven over and over to be ridiculous and inadequately enforceable. Judge the deed not the breed
- Ban pit bulls and nuisance dogs altogether.
- The dog's owner is responsible for a dog's behaviour. Owners should have training if required and children/ young people should be educated on basic signs to look out for in a dog, such as when they are nervous and when to leave a dog alone.
- Fines and possible criminal charges can be brought against an owner. Pet societies must determine root cause of behaviour and the dog is destroyed as a LAST resort.
- Pit bulls are dogs similar should be treated the same as every other dog breed. Shame on the city for trying to be racist against a specific dog breed.
- Regardless of the dog breed, owners be fined $1000 for first offence, $5000 for second offence. It is NOT an issue with the dog. It is an issue with the OWNER!!!
- Pit bulls should not be singled out. Only dogs that have history of offences and have been declared a nuisance.
- These options NEED to be done for ALL dogs, and fines towards the owner not just the animal. Trainers and owners of these Bully Breeds are only aggressive or can become aggressive when not trained properly. I do not believe pit bulls should be isolated any dog can bite or become aggressive.
- Pit bulls should not be declared nuisance dogs! I have seen more small dogs bite children in my local park than any other. Tiny yappy dogs are the problem. Not big loving pitbulls
- Of nuisance is noise I can't agree - people complain about everything. If a dog has bitten / attacked then not allowed in off leash I agree with.
- I think all dog breeds can be a nuisance NOT just PIT BULLS. If you know your dog is being a nuisance then they should be muzzled.
- Focus should be on the owners if offense is committed fine plus mandatory training course for owner
- I am very disturbed and disappointed by you using specifically pitbulls and presenting it forward for the public input. As you state clearly above there is no evidence, fact, or stats supporting pitbulls being higher offenders when it comes to biting. They are simply the media's focus right now, and this further perpetuates the stigma against this breed. All dogs are dangerous and can bite, with owners who are irresponsible, it doesn't have anything to do with specific breeds. REMOVE this!

- Fines for owners who have dogs off leash in areas requiring a leash
- None of this should be pit bull specific. There should also be mandatory pet/owner training after any offence.
- All dogs should have the same rules, DO NOT condemn one breed or type of dog. I know chihuahua's that are more dangerous than Pit Bulls. It's usually the owner, not the dog that is the problem
- pitbulls are not the problem. Any dog will be aggressive if trained that way.
- You cannot blame an animal for how they are breed or raised. Where is the accountability to the owner.
- I do NOT agree with breed specific by-laws and think that increased fines have a disproportionate affect on the poor.
- I hope you all collectively get your heads out of the "sand"
- Muzzles for pitbulls is ridiculous. Blame the owner not the breed.
- Additional breed specific regulations are not in the best interest of the city and should not be pursued
- BSL legislature is just wrong. My neighbors german shepard is aggressive and a nuisance. My pitbull is well balanced and a calm companion. Its not the breed it is the owner!!!
- None....
- Please do not make your bylaws breed specific. It is akin to racial profiling. Not all bully breeds are a manace. Please make it nuisance specifi to the dog and teach the owners to control their pets
- I do not support any bylaws or enforcement that singles out entire breeds
- ALL dogs. NOT breed specific
- NO BREED SPECIFIC BYLAWS. DOG LIVES MATTER
- Quit targeting and discriminating against bully breeds ya meat heads. It's the owners not the breed any dog can bite and do harm to someone.
- All these fines target and label "bully breeds" as if they were born that way. It's [removed]
- Two strike policy for nuisance dogs leading to them being put down.
- Punish the owner NOT the breed
- NOT BREED SPECIFIC. There are many other dogs that are stronger/worse than pit bulls. Fine the owner, don't fine the dog.
- why are you targeting pit bull breeds? Any breed can be dangerous! Maybe the city needs to teach that too the public!
- I support the above for all breeds. I do not believe BSL works and it has been shown in many cases to be a huge waste of time and resources. It makes me sad that our great city is even considering this.
- If you want to implement changes they should be across the board and non-discriminatory. I have been bit by both large and small dogs both drawing blood and neither of them in the 'pit-bull' category. If anything implement changes and follow up on people who are unfit animal owners. This does not address the problem Pet owners but instead targets a group of animals and likely owners who take responsibility for their pets.

- NO BYLAWS SHOULD BE REFERRED TO THE SPECIFICS OF BREED OF ANIMAL! IF THATS THE CASE WE SHOULD BE AFRAID OF OR FIRE EVERY POLICE OFFICER BECAUSE A FEW WERE CONVICTED OF POLICE BRUTALITY. A STANDARD OF PRECEDENT NEEDS TO BE SET THE SAME FOR PEOPLE AS YOU ARE TRYING WITH EVERYTHING ELSE
- I think that ALL dog owners should have to do obedience training with their newly adopted or purchased dog. Any breed can turn on someone and become a nuisance if not properly trained. The onus is on the human being. It is never the dogs fault!
- Ban all Pitbulls
- Certain breeds should not be treated differently because of the breed it should be behavior based only
- Separating pit bulls in this case is atrocious. Violent dogs should be trained properly and their owners looked at. Type of dog doesn't matter here one bit.
- I am concerned that breed-specific bylaws are being considered. In my experience with my own dog in off-leash parks, I have NEVER had an incident with a pit bull as defined above. Instead, I have had aggressive encounters from poodles, collie-mixes, shepherd-mixes... In other words, it is not a particular breed that is a problem. The problem is owners that are inattentive or completely unaware of the danger their off-leash and out-of-control dog poses. The focus must be on education of an individual dog's behaviour, not a particular breed. [personal information removed]
- Having a pet is responsibility of the owner. If the dog doesn't know how to behave in public areas they can stay at home. Owners shouldn't pay for more insurance only because its a pit bull. Any kind of dog could bite you, people should understand that pitbulls are great dogs and they are not evil the owner is the one how shows how the dog to behave.
- I really don't think it's the pitt bull breed , there are many more breeds with the same strength as a pitt bull . Its the owners responsibility to raise kind dogs, and if a dog is too over protective (its a natural instinct) the dog owner should take ownership of that behavior and take precautions like not going to off leash parks , have the dog wear a muzzle on leash and off leash in public .
- ° Ban "Backyard Breeders" & heavily fine those who breed irresponsibly. ° Bylaw should release annual reports on how many animal welfare complaints were attended to and what was done. °Regularly check on 'nuisance' dogs and their conditions - Accidents happen, but careless ownership should NOT be allowed.
- Ban Pit Bulls - They are not required to boost the ego of their owner. Get a dog that is more amenable to other dogs and to people other than their owners. Do not own a dog that can cause serious injury to people in your own household or to your neighbours or their pets.
- The owners should get proper training and muzzling. The dog is not the problem it is the owners. I DO NOT support the classification of "nuisance dogs". All dog owners should be required to goto training and obedience school. This should be free and provided by the city.
- Pit bulls are the not a problem breed and all of these rules you want to put in place are just wrong. Small dogs cause more problems then pit bulls

- Stricter penalties and restrictions on the owners of these dogs, as well as the breeders of these dogs. The dog is not to blame, rather, the owners for failure to be responsible pet owners.
- All dogs should be required to have completed basic obedience training (however free or reduced price sessions should be provided to low income owners so that there is not a restriction on owning dogs for socioeconomic reasons)
- Instead of going the breed specific route, why not increase the fines if the dog has a bite pressure of more than 200 psi, or require an additional license for dogs that have a bite above that psi
- I take offence to the pit bulls being classed as a nuisance dog. There are other breeds, Germany shepherd, Rottweiler, Chihuahua, Akita and many more. Maybe put more restrictions on the breeders and who they sell their puppies to.
- I believe breed specific legislation is unjust. The responsibility for the dog belongs to the owner.
- I think any incidents have specific details that can't be generalized.
- Pit bulls are loving pets and should not be treated differently. I have known many Australian shepherds who bite than I do pit bulls. I love Australian shepherds as well. Just because a larger child has more ability to hurt the younger ones doesn't mean we should treat them differently. Training for all dogs with issues makes sense. But the fear that people have towards pit bulls is what causes the stress for the poor dog. They are acting on energy we put out.
- Breed restrictions are an awful and often useless endeavor. Please deal with dog owners and not breeds or how a dog look.
- Stop singling out one breed of dog, there are many dogs in this size and strengthen category.
- Not only training for the dog but owners should also be licensed to own a pitbull after they pass mandatory training. Have off leash parks designate hours for nuisance/pitbulls.
- Owners should be required to go to classes to understand how to properly train and manage an animal and understand why they behave the way they do in difference circumstances
- It is important to note that "Pit Bull" type dogs DO NOT have the strongest bite. There are two other breeds that have a stronger PSI bite than bully breeds. I am at a loss as to why those breeds are not listed here? This is supposed to be about safety is it not? Please do your research, ignorance kills family pets!!! There have been more killings, maulings and attacks by Husky and Husky type dogs in Canada in the last 60 years than any other breed! Yet here we are again, fear mongering. Shame on you Calgary!
- I STRONGLY disagree with the assumptions being made about 'pitbulls' or 'similar looking' dogs (I hope you're not serious). These are awfully primitive concepts. Horses are 'strong' and have far more power to inflict serious damage -- are we going to ban them too? How about a German Shepard, these 100 lbs+ dogs aren't stronger than a 45 lbs. 'Pitbull'? The police use them for exactly that reason, but hey, lets just selectively turn the other cheek and let citizens own as many as they want (with no training required might I add). Talk about flawed logic. It's not the City's place, nor right to determine what type of dog a Calgarian owns.
- Penalizing pit bulls for being strong doesn't seem fair. You stated they aren't involved in more bites than other breeds. You don't penalize a world class boxer or fighter simply because they have the capability of inflicting harm. That's not just.

- None, you just target a specific kind of dogs, it's all dogs or no dogs. And small dogs bite more people than big dogs.
- Take pit bulls and nuisance dog out of the same question, you do well to separate them up until that point, many dogs are mixed and have pit bull in them to say you can't have 2 in the same house is ridiculous
- The term "nuisance dog" is too broad as anything can be considered nuisance by someone. Also, most people would never be able to pick a pit bull or pit bull like breed from a line-up of similar dogs. When people are afraid, all dogs look like pit bulls. Investigating so-called nuisance claims takes too much time as it is when often the claims have no real basis. Breed-specific by-laws have not been successful in any other country or city and have been or are in the process of being repealed. Dog bites also should be thoroughly investigated, i.e. did the bite occur as the dog was trying to protect its litter or owner, was it being teased, etc. In these cases it is the "victim" who was at fault, not the dog or the dog's owner. I certainly would like a dog to protect me and my property should an occasion rise. I used to breed Alaskan Malamutes and told new people that they were fine but not to hug/touch me unless I gave a permission and never had any problems with mine. In fact, had a male of mine severely injured by a Golden Retriever cross that came out of nowhere and attacked in a off-leash park when mine was in the process of being leashed as we were leaving.
- Breed specific rules help no one. Any breed can be a nuisance or a solid citizen. Language in bylaws must reflect that.
- This bylaw is bogus. You can't single out an entire "race" if you even want to call it that. What will be the definition of a "pitbull" type dog. Anything with a big head and sticky legs. Give your head a shake... As an owner of two dogs, having to muzzle them in public and an unfair cruelty that they should have to deal with and why, because there head is a little bigger, or there bodies are a little stockier. So because is the way they look, they are forced out of dog parks? Because of how they look! This is an insane bylaw that needs to be re-evaluated and thrown in the garbage. VERY disappointed in calgary and the lack of sympathy between dog owners and their dogs. A lot of us rely on our let's for comfort in tough times and this bylaw is going to create a lot of heart ache and emotions that could be avoided. GIVE YOUR HEAD A SHAKE CALGARY!
- training to the people with dogs that act out. it is not the dog it's the owner.
- it is the owner not the breed!
- Nuisance dogs must be spayed/neutered.
- please don't mandate by breed or appearance... so many dogs will be abandoned if people need additional insurance etc.
- Stop Backyard Breeders and Gives them a minimum $1000 dollar fine when caught!
- I fail to see how targeting one specific breed of dog (to which you definitely are) will help. I would say you should make training mandatory for all dog owners instead of singling one breed out.
- [removed]
- Stop with the Pitbull attack. Any dog can be vicious, it's how they are raised and also background of the dog. Have had many in my lifetime and non have ever attacked or bit. Don't ban or outlaw no dog. Heavier fines is all to the owner.

- Don't be discriminate against the breed.
- This is ridiculous. I read through the entire "what we heard report" and not once was pit bull mentioned. Then I read through the verbatim reports and the comments where pit bulls were mentioned were very uneducated and presumptive. You mention bite strength - but if you're going to single out dogs for size or "looks", then what about bull mastiffs? Or rottweilers? The dogs are not the problem. I don't understand why Calgary wants to go backwards on this - BSL has been shown not to work in many other municipalities, and Calgary has been considered the leader in responsible pet ownership. I'm all for giving Community Standards officers additional authority, and I feel like rather than punishing the dog because of how they look, maybe do a better job of controlling the availability of the dogs in the first place. Backyard breeders should be banned, selling of dogs through pet stores should be banned. Anyone wanting to adopt a breed who could potentially have aggression or dangerous tendencies should maybe go through additional screening. I say all of this as the victim of a dog bite, I was attacked by a family dog while playing fetch with a ball, a standard game, and there are none of the breeds listed above in this dog. I required eleven stitches just above my eyelid and came very close to losing an eye. But I don't judge every dog that looks like the one that attacked me, because every dog is different. I'm really disappointed that this is even being discussed by the City of Calgary.
- BSL is [removed], I have owned bully breeds and when properly trained and cared for, as with ANY domesticated pet, are just like any other dog. As for muzzled, they tend to cause fights because the dog in the muzzle can be targeted by other dogs (I've witnessed it firsthand many times). Dog bites, any breed, should be dealt with on a case by case basis and the owners need to be punished, not the animal. Hate breeds hate, and a loving structured home breeds great pet pets regardless of breed or species.
- Nothing should be breed specific. I believe there should be fines for dogs, case by case.
- Quit trying to dog discriminate
- Dogs (not just bully breeds) & owners should be held accountable. If you raise fines for pit bull breeds it should be for all dog breeds if you're that concerned
- I think its unfair your stereotyping pitbull like dogs. All the pitbulls I have come into contact with have been well mannered and well behaved. You don't stereotype people and then tell them that they will not be allowed in Calgary. People need to be educated and be held responsible for their dog. For instance we had a family dog who had an anxiety disorder. She never bit a person but because we new her issue we opted not to take her to dog parks or walks in public because we didnt know how she would react to situations.
- Obedience training for owners specifically. It's not the breed, rather the owner at fault.
- Fines for nuisance humans that own the dogs. Retarded how idiots think it's the dogs fault....breed does not define behaviour. Racist teach racist. Human or animal. Pitt bulls are not the issue. A chihuahua bite can cause just as much nerve damage, as well as a poodle. Get facts straight.
- Please do not consider any breed specific legislation. It has not proved effective elsewhere and causes so many more problems than it attempts to solve. Aggresive dog incidents should be taken seriously but it can be any breed of dog. Don't punish the innocent to try and fix the aggressors. Deal with these issues on a case basis vs biased legislation based on what a dog looks like.

- These regulations should not be breed specific. The correlation between dog behaviour is linked largely to that of the owner and the importance of training and socialization. If this is not done accordingly any dog can become a nuisance or violent regardless of breed.
- I support none of the measures suggested..
- To single out the breed is wrong, the owner is the one to be charged as they are responsible for training and socializing the dog, the breed you are targeting is wrong all dogs large and small have the same potential to do harm, you should be targeting the individual who is responsible for improper handling of the dog and find a way to enforce it not make the animal pay for human error
- No! Remove this breed specific bylaw! This should not even be considered!
- BSL is useless and drives good citizens out of your city
- should not be limited to pitbull type breeds. owners are responsible for dog. If you want the dog to be responsible for its actions why do people have the term Owner? Maybe the city needs to do more to provide dog placement laws and Sessions in regards to all breeds to make sure dog is suitable for placement like at the SPCA
- Instead dog training, I do believe the real problem is with irresponsible owners, maybe owners should be trained.
- More training for the owners of Pit Bulls. Owners are often the problem given how they interact with their dogs.
- ALL DOGS need to be on a leash in public even small breeds. Smaller breed dogs have been shown to be more aggressive than "pit bulls!"
- Get rid of them
- Mandatory training for all dog breeds
- BSL legislature is proven not to work. Bully breeds are no more vicious than any other breed.
- No prejudice against Pit bulls!
- I do not support any of these
- once a dog receives a fine even barking for any reason then the dog is declared a nuisance
- maybe instead of going after dogs whose only crime is being born a specific breed. go after the irresponsible owners. a dog bites for reasons other than being vicious. fear, defending themselves.
- This should be assessed on a case by case. Pit bulls are not a bad breed! It's disgusting that you are singling them out. Owners of all breeds should be held accountable for their pets behaviour but not specifically pit bulls or bully breeds. Please reconsider and re-evaluate a law that discriminates against an already struggling and misunderstood breed. Calgary is so much more forward thinking than this! We love going to the dog park and we can't imagine it being a place where not everyone is welcomed.
- dog training for all dog owners.
- Harsher fines for owners of dogs involved in bylaw offences. Higher cost of pet licence for owners of pit bulls.

- The fact that Calgary is considering BSL is disgusts me. I am ashamed to live in a city that is considering discrimination against an animal for their owners behaviors. Education and training are the only tools that work and should be the only solutions we are considering. I'm also disappointed there are no options above to cover vicious animals, which should really be our main concern. The options are misleading, as you only name nuisance dogs, not vicious.
- With regards to put bull type dogs, I'd cap it at 2 per household. I don't think 1 is a fair max. Idea is to stop irresponsible owners and dog fight rings, etc., not arbitrarily limit specific breed ownership.
- The word nuisance, before any type of questionnaire should be thoroughly explained. Trying to answer a questionnaire when you have not explained the definition of nuisance is misleading, at best. Any animal that bites or is considered a nuisance must attend extensive obedience and dog and people socialization classes. This must be proven to the courts. Once this has been proven to the courts, fines should be dismissed. If owners of pets do not attend classes with the dogs, seizing the dog should be considered. Any dog owner that does not follow the set out rules about training their dog after a dog bite should be prohibited from owning any other dog.
- You can't blame a specific breed. Its the owners that have not done the research and put in the time to traine a dog. Smaller dogs bite and attack just as much as a big one.
- Please dont discriminate against pitbulls
- Mandatory course in dog handling/training for owners of 'nuisance' dogs. Educate the PEOPLE. It's almost never a dog problem, it's almost always a person problem.
- I feel this is SO WRONG I find it funny how you only ever hear about the pit bull bites. I have heard about 10 dog bites in the last month and not one of them were pit bull related and not one of them were on the news. Why does the media only target one breed [removed]. You are all singling out one breed this isn't fair.
- Required obedience training should be subsidized as necessary, so that it doesn't become a threat to the health/wellness of dogs & owners who can't afford the additional cost.
- Rottweilers have a stronger bite force then any bully breed. Also fines and everything should be based on prior attacks from said dog and unwillingness to help the problem by the owners
- Not all pit bulls are nuisance dogs, some may have the right owner and be trained. However, for those that are, there should be consequences and we need to ensure the owners of these dogs are going to follow though. It's one thing to fine the owner if their dog is a nuisance, but that won't stop the dog from doing it again.
- Potential owners need to go through a screening process with breeders to ensure a good match as well as competence level.
- Behavioral remediation course and possibly a surrender program for extremely aggressive dogs that cannot pass additional training
- Obedience training required for all dogs
- Standardized fines for offences but increased fines for repeat offenders.
- I DO NOT SUPPORT BSL FOR ANY BREED. This is not the answer stricter fines for any dog that bites and owner education for ALL BREEDS no matter of size.

- I think it's absolutely ludicrous that the city would single out one breed of dog like this. Pit bulls are the absolute sweetest dogs. Very disappointed to see this.
- Why are pitbulls being signalled out here? All dog breeds can be dangerous and a nuisance depending on it's training.
- I do not agree with singling out a breed of dog. I know a number of people who have been bitten by smaller untrained dogs than I do pit bulls. You need to focus on owner training requirements not the breed of the dog.
- Why are pit bulls signaled out? That seems discriminatory. Lots of dogs bite.
- No breed-specific legislation. Hold owners accountable for the behaviour of dogs, regardless of breed. If a dog injures a person, charge the owner as though they had injured the person.
- This pit bull bylaw is ridiculous. Over and over breed specific laws have been shown to be non effective and increase fear in people. Anyone who has ever been around a pit bull knows most of them, like most dogs, are loving and sweet. I have more fear of small dogs biting than pit bulls. Do your research.
- I'm very strongly against breed specific laws, often it is not a breed that is the problem it is the specific dog and have seen problem/nuisance dogs of all breeds and sizes.
- Mandatory approved six sided containment for Pit Bulls, approved leashes and collars for Pit Bulls, age appropriate handling for Pit Bulls
- Stronger animal abuse/ neglect penalties
- I believe that proactive enforcement or education is key, otherwise we are reacting to events. I would like to see more monitoring in dog parks or on paths. In 10 years, I've never seen enforcement in Calgary proactively monitoring heavy pet traffic areas.
- Special licensing requirements for owners that has accountability and serious consequences for noncompliance. Perhaps something similar to a gun license??
- This should not be breed specific! What about German Shepard's if you want to talk about proven jaw strength in bites!
- This is ridiculous. Pit bulls or any of the dogs mentioned are not inherently more violent than any other dog. The owner is responsible for the violence of their dog.
- As a dog groomer I have seen misance dogs. None of them have been pit bulls and your choice to single them out disgusts me to say the least. Breed specific legislation is unfair and absolute crap. I used to take my dogs to dog parks, no more, because of irresponsible owners, not dogs. owners are the problem, not dogs.
- I do not support BSL bylaws. They target and single breeds due to their appearance, not the behaviour displaced. Edmonton removed their BSL in 2013. It seems Calgary is moving backward. Truly disappointing
- Dog breed should not be targeted to specific behaviors. Those behaviors happen in all dogs and require owner training. Provide a mandatory training for dogs that are licensed in Calgary.
- Do not think should specify pit bulls as aggressive
- Breed specific laws do not work and just hurt the owners and dogs that follow the rules.

- what the hell? My dogs are not a nuisance. I have 2 pitties actually and I am a responsible owner. I don't even take my pitties to dog parks because people are stupid.
- Any dog that had been in an incident should be labelled a nuisance dog and those owners should be held more responsible and have to take the appropriate actions to correct that dogs behaviour
- Pit bulls are NOT THE PROBLEM. Its the owners. EVERY dog should go to obedience training. Singling out one breed is not the answer. Ensuring owners are educated and well trained IS the answer...Dogs aren't innately bad, bad owners make dogs bad.
- Owners of dogs deemed a nuisance need to be required to complete a training course and provide proof of completing same. Inexpensive training could be provided through the city which could include local, credible trainers in communities across the city. If there is a concentration of nuisance dogs in a certain area, provide more opportunities for inexpensive training and target advertising in that area.
- Owner knowledge and training need to be key! Dogs follow their humans, humans need to understand the behaviours of animals and there should be a certification in dog knowledge and training to own a dog.
- Dogs that have a history of exhibiting dangerous behaviours should be muzzled, but not based on breed, just behaviour. Have been bitten by small dogs, but never big ones.
- Leave the animals alone. It is not their fault, only the irresponsible owners
- Maybe a report line for bites or other concerns.
- BSL has been proven wrong. Stop with the discrimination against pitbull and similar breeds. The "nuisance" dogs are what you should go after no matter the breed. Increase fines for dogs that become a nuisance. Its the owners fault and they should have to pay. Along with fines the owner should have to go to obedience classes and if that doesn't change then take their right to own a dog away.
- owners of nuisance dogs must take dog handling/training course.
- Pit bulls are not a problem. All dogs have problems so focus on ALL dogs that and that they ALL can bite. Do some research and be educated instead of ignorant.
- Pitbulls should be treated as any other breed in Calgary. They are by far one of the sweetest breeds out there and shouldn't be under the spotlight. They rank an 8 on the strength of their bite and even stated above. Do not bite more than any other breed.
- "Pit bulls" are not the problem. What year are we in here? People need to become educated!
- [removed]
- No bans, no muzzles. Fines for terrible dog owners and if dog owners are found to be overtly horrible with bans on them owning dogs again. The dogs are not the problem. The owners are. If a dog bites, and the owner has done nothing to tee es aun the dog, they don't deserve dogs.
- NO BSL, PUNISH OWNERS NOT BREEDS
- targeting a specific set of breeds based on phenotypical characteristics has been proven a failure the world over - Look to Australia [personal information removed]
- THERE ARE NO BAD DOGS ONLY OWNERS! DONT PUNISH THE BREED PUNISH THE HUMANS. LEAVE PITBULLS ALONE.

- both the homeowners and the dogs should be going to obedience training ... and the owners should be expected to show that they are worthy and responsible . higher fines for the owners irresponsibility . the dog is actually a victim in these situations. And on another note maybe bylaw officers should be educated better to distinguish between a nuisance dog and a dog that is a danger to the public. Because people will lie :)
- Pit bulls should not be targeted that is coive been bitten before but never by a pittty. mplete [removed].
- Fine people, discipline people, make pet owners responsible for their dogs actions.
- Any dog involved in a human bite incident to be muzzled in public. More bylaw officers and extending hours in catching owners, both- using non offleash areas ex. Neighbourhoods for cats, or schoolyards with dogs- & walking around with their dogs offleash (as well as higher fines per listed above- this has become a very huge problem in neighbourhoods *especially during non bylaw operation hours and I don't want to waste 911's time).
- Ban irresponsible dog owners form owning, breeding or selling an animal. Big fines if they dont comply.
- Provide training for all dog owners, all breeds. Blame the owners not the dogs. Let those breeds live a life in peace! Leave the bully breeds alone!
- You state yourself that pit bulls are not involved in more bites than any other type of dog, so why makes all the new by laws about them. There are many other dogs that can and do the wax act same damage as a pit bull and they aren't mentioned here at all. This whole plan is absolutely ridiculous.
- No more higher fined this isn't a concentration camp
- The options seem to specifically target pitbull type dogs where as there's no scientific evidence to say that any type of dog breed is the worst behaved. Deciding to pass laws on dogs that fall under a physical look that laymen could construe as pitbull whether it was or not is unfair and risking demonizing a breed that already has un fair reputation. There should be no passing of any breed specific laws as they have been proven to not work and simply damages undeserving dogs and families based on physical descriptions. Breed specific legislation is ghoulish. Pitbulls make great pets and are no worse or better than Goldens, labs and other breeds legislators never seem to pick on. All dogs require training and this law doesn't seem to address the likelihood for any dog to be problematic based on human ignorance and shotty dog ownership.
- Absolutely ridiculous ignorant to target any breed there are many breeds that are more powerful and capable of causing injury or harm to anyone.
- No breed specific policies.
- Don't be breed specific. If a dog is a problem it isn't limited to one breed.
- Dog behaviour is resultant of owner behaviour. For dogs declared a "nuisance," investigation of at-home rituals would be important. Having dog trainers/behaviourists recommend adjustments in owner behaviour would help many cases. Follow up to ensure owners are making necessary changes.
- This is so unfair and makes no sense at all stop bullying my bully

- Why are you singling out a specific breed? Lots of municipalities have implemented breed specific laws in the past and the results are pretty overwhelming in that they do not work. Only evidence based policies please!
- Higher fines for dog attacks where the victim is a minor
- Please stop dog fighting rings and apply fines to owners who are a nuisance and don't properly train and socialize their dogs or deal with the dogs issues
- I am extremely disappointed with the options above. Has anyone involved in this survey actually researched BSL and/or the term "pit bull"? I assumed the city of Calgary would have done some due diligence prior to developing the survey.
- Children shouldn't be taking grown pitbulls for walks without an adult. They are hard to control. We had a bite incident where the child lost control of her dog, and dog bit our aunt.
- There is no reason to limit a "pit bull" any more than any other dog, the dog is not the problem. Shepards are more likely to bite than pit bulls and also have a stronger bite for instance. Do your research, I did. There are many myths out there about pit bulls but really its the owners who are the problem. Some people should not be allowed to own dogs. I say punish the owner of the offending dog, not the dog unless the dog cannot be rehabilitated. Pit bulls are not nasty by nature , only our perception of them is. If you ban them or treat them any different than other breeds you will be wrong in your assumptions.
- Breed specific legislations are horrible. I am ashamed my city is even considering this. It's one thing to enforce these rule son dogs with past aggressive episodes. But breed does not mean the dog will be aggressive.
- Absolutely none of the above
- Leave pitbulls alone.
- I do not support BSL (breed specific legislation).
- If a dog, regardless of breed, has a history of violence their owners should be held accountable and requires to attend training and or be banned from off leash areas where they are not under control of their owners. Rules should not be breed specific. I find small dogs are let away with more because they are small but most the time they are the problem and less likely to be well trained. There needs to be ow through and regular checks of dogs that are determined to be a nuisance
- Give your head a shake, bully breads are not the issue. Irresponsible owners are!
- None you shouldn't label a dog because of their breed
- Not all put bulls are mean!! What about the other breeds? What about the ignorant owners who don't give a [removed]?
- specifically targeting the bred of nuisance dog is incorrect, the owner must be held accountable for their irresponsible actions or lack of training for their dog (of any breed). $250 fine for a nuisance dog is not a deterrent. $1,000.00 plus vet/medical costs would be a start. Why do people continue to speed, because the fine for continuing to speed is not significant enough to make them stop. Pit bulls can be a very gentle dog, we continually skirt responsibility and blame the animal. Shouldn't be the case. We are to blame for their behaviours, time to take the blame ourselves.

- These ideas are vague and unfair. You clearly state that pitbulls are not involved in more bite offences than other breeds, but have the power to do so. German Shepherds, Huskies, and Sled Dog mixes are often involved in serious bite incidents. By limiting pitbulls, you simply move bad owners onto other powerful breeds, such as Rottweilers, Cane Corso's, German Shepherds, etc. This ban accomplishes nothing. Requiring higher insurance, and obedience training for nuisance dogs is more than acceptable, unless involved in a serious incident.
- The pet parent is required to go to training. You need to fix the humans, the dogs are good.
- There should not be special regulations for different types of dogs. It is not the government place to infringe on someone right to own a pet based on breed.
- [removed]
- This should NOT be breed specific. We are in 2020 not 1920 ANY breed of dog can cause harm.
- Muzzles for people who think "pit bulls" are bad dogs.
- By "nuisance" I hope you mean nuisance dogs of ALL breeds, not just ones that "look like pitbulls". I also think that the City needs to ensure they are correctly categorizing a dog's breed based on quantifiable evidence (DNA testing) as opposed to what different people think looks like a pitbull breed. Finally, ALL dogs should be required to undergo puppy and obedience classes - there are plenty of obnoxious small dogs who start fights from their poor behaviour, but it's always the bigger and/or "aggressive" dog breeds that get blamed.
- My dog was attacked by a pyrenees that lives across the street. Absolutely nothing was done to the owners of that dog, and I am now having to put my sweet dog down because of this attack. Nothing was done. But you now want to go after pitbulls? So a pyrenees killing my dog would have only garnered your attention if it had been a pitbull?? I'm frankly disgusted with the bylaw office that I pay taxes towards.
- None of the above, have dogs go to specialist training who are certified in REACTIVE DOGS TRAINING.
- Ban pit bulls from Calgary
- I dont feel like pitbulls or their owners should face any harsher punishment than other breeds. I think all dog owners big and small have a responsibility to be able to control their dogs behaviour and make adjustments to what they allow their dog to do big or small depending on their behaviour.
- Quit singling out pit bull breeds ,,,, it's not the breed it the owners ,,, so you'd like to punish this particular breed because why ??? This the the most disgusting bylaw if it goes through ,, why not have all animals muzzled ? But you pick on one breed (there are other dogs that bite or attack but no mention of them it's like saying you can't buy a fast car because it might cause a bad accident because it can go fast ,,,, stop this [removed]
- The fact that the City of Calgary is even contemplating breed specific legislation shows me that this council is behind the times and only trying to distract from real issues. I'm disgusted!!
- They should be left alone their are other breeds who attack a heck of a lot more it's the owners who mistreat their dogs who should be fined and should never be able to own another pet again. It's not the dogs fault how it behaves it's how the owner treats it and trains it

- Tracking of irresponsible animal owners based on calls received by nuisance owners. Owners need to be held accountable for their animals. Nuisance dogs are often the result of negligent owners.
- the problem with pitbulls are the owners, they tend not to be the most responsible or well educated. Not sure what to suggest here but these owners need training never mind the dogs!
- Leave pitbulls alone. They're loving animals
- None of these should pertain directly to 'pit bulls' . All laws should be on a case by case basis by the dogs actions & behavior.
- Please don't use fines to correct behaviour. Positive reinforcement and training programs more likely to work. Be careful of extra tape/fines for "nuisance" dogs. A neighbour can complain repeatedly in order to force the classification and screw over the owner. Easily abused.
- Pit bull breeds should be banned in Calgary
- If there is going to be fines or rules, etc then it should be for all breeds not just pit bulls and those certain breeds. I have never been bit by my Pitbull nor has he ever bit anyone, but I have been bit several times by small dogs that have bit hard enough to draw blood.
- The owner is responsible for the dog. There are no bad dogs, there are bad owners. Statistically, German Shepard's and boarder collies have as many bite victims
- Breed specific legislation is outdated and creates issues in the lack of training and treatment of any dog. All dogs have the potential to be dangerous and tragically hurt persons.
- This bylaw is ridiculous. Dogs should not be classified according to breed. Many other breeds have a propensity for violence and bites. Moreover it is usually an irresponsible ownership issue, rather than breed
- Punish the owner not the breed. Large fines, jail time for bad owners. Do not condemn a breed based on fear.
- singling out Pitbulls is ridiculous, Its obvious that many people do not understand the breed. pitbulls are not born aggressive, they are trained to be that way. A rottweiler has a stronger bite, so why not single them out? Muzzle the bad owner stop blaming the breed. do your research, pitbulls are not the evil monsters that the media makes them out to be, in fact pitbulls are one of the most tolerant dogs, second only to the golden retriever. Stop discriminating and deal with the problem owners and aggressive animals appropriately regardless of breed. Give your head a shake!!
- The dogs are not the problem. The owners are the problems. There should be training or contracts for SOME owners. I don't have a pit but my friend has a cross and she is the sweetest dog ever. They are good responsible dog owners.
- No breed specific bylaws be passed
- Nuisance dogs should be listed as dogs who charge people, create a hostile environment with their behaviour, and/or create excessive noise. Chihuahuas, miniature terriers, and other small breeds come to mind. Also, for information purposes, mastiffs, kengals, and American Bulldogs all have stronger bite forces than pitbull-type breeds. If you're going to say in your information it's due to bite strength, it needs to be accurate and keep all breeds in mind.
- Ban pitbulls.

- It comes down to nurture of the dog not nature. A lab that's not raised/trained properly will be a bigger threat than a properly trained pit bull. The fines/restrictions should be on the owner of problem dogs not owners of a certain breed. And they should be implemented if that dog proves it's a nuisance.
- Owners must take Responsible pet ownership training for nuisance dogs
- Disallowing at this, or any future time, any breed specific legislation. Banning owners of dangerous dogs to own other dogs if the owner is found to be at fault.
- No BSL
- Dogs are not born aggressive or ill behaved. If a dog is most often it is the result of people. Owners should take courses on how to raise a puppy, strangers and kids should not approach other dogs. Don't stereotype different breeds of dogs.
- No it all dog owners are the same. Go after pit bulls or dogs that look similar is stupid. Yes the tougher breeds should be trained. Insurance is a rip off. You can make any dog mean. More education on how to train dogs properly.
- Have bylaw officers patrol off leash areas more frequently. There are plenty of aggressive dogs at off leash areas regularly, and i have yet to see bylaw at a dog park taking proactive steps to reduce aggressive or nuisance behavior.
- obedience training required for all. Smaller dogs are a problem too, but are rarely reported.
- Pit bulls are not inherently more dangerous than any other breed. Bad dog owners make for bad dogs. It is horrible that "pit bull" type breeds are being singled out as a potential issue or may be subject to stricter rules than other dogs. Higher fines should be implemented on owners with a history of aggressive dogs that they cannot control, regardless of breed.
- How about mandatory courses for people who want to have these dogs. It's not the animal it's the owner. Why punish the dogs when they can't control who buys them and their intentions. This is extremely frustrating for those who own "nuisance" breeds but have created a safe place, and train their dog appropriately.
- None of the above. Signaling out a breed is absolute nonsense. If the owner trains a dog to bite, its going to bite, hard. Get rid of this bylaw immediately. And no, I don't own a pitifully.
- ALL dog owners should be required to prove competent ownership.
- Obedience training with voucher for pet adoption. All dog breeds considered.
- All dogs and owners should be required to have obedience training. Dogs aren't the problem. Idiot owners are the problem.
- I would support obedience training for all dogs, but if you're going to solely focus on pitbulls, you're out to lunch. This breed-specific legislation is ineffective, a cash grab, and not addressing the root of the problem. As you've stated, pit bulls aren't disproportionately involved in bites, so if injuries are truly the problem you want to address, go for all dogs.
- BIG difference between noise/barking and dog running at large and dog that has bitten or is being deemed dangerous.
- I think this should include smaller breeds - they are still aggressive, bite and are noisy and should be considered a nuisance

- This is ridiculous, I find smaller dogs to be More dangerous and attack more. Do not blame a breed that's racist.
- I cannot believe that the City of Calgary is considering breed specific legislation - this is abhorrent. What about considering this for Mastiffs, Dobermans, German Shepards, Rottweilers and other large breed dogs. I have seen first hand the damage that a Labrador can do. What about the Chihuahuas that are so unpredictable? I've been bit by one and a Havenese - both drew blood. Or, what about the Boxer that charged at my dogs in an unprovoked attack that sent one of my dogs to the vet? Or Great Danes? They've been known to do some pretty substantial damage. The City REALLLY needs to rethink the direction they are taking in this racial motivated attack. Maybe you should look closer at the people - it's not the dogs but the owners. I am incredibly disappointed ... plus, you need to do your research ... pit bulls are not a real breed. In the end, it's all about irresponsible people that think they can and should own an animal ... not fair under any circumstances to the animal. Step back and think about this ... carefully.
- All breeds need same requirements. Possible a certificate program to allow animal in off leash or public area. A dog that gets loose is not a nuisance. Doesn't assume that they are badly behaved or aggressive. Make pet owner successful complete a behaviour program and receive a certificate upon its successful completion to be allowed in parks much like a licence allows a driver on roadways
- pit bulls and the other similar breeds you have listed is a complete disregard for the breed and should not be outlined explicitly as you have suggested. Bites have nothing to do with the breed and everything to do with the owner. With the current world issues going I would think that the City of Calgary would be wanting to adjust archaic views of dog breeds. Please consider removing the breed specific line items in your regulations and bylaws and instead address the true root of the problem which is uneducated and ill-suited dog owners.
- [removed]
- none of the above.
- Do not try to classify one breed or similar looking breeds into a single category. Make it an umbrella that applies to dogs of ALL sizes and every breed. Do not allow for discrimination and breed specific legislation in an attempt to take away a family pet that has possibly aided the pet owner in mental/emotional disability. Doing so will only worsen the emotional disability of the pet owner. There is no breed specifics on emotional support animals according to the fair housing act and under HUD. Legislation that targets a single breed or dogs who "look" like the breed in question have been proven ineffective.
- I don't think a household with a nuisance dog should be allowed to get any ADDITIONAL pets. Should not be any fine differences between breeds or targeting of any specific breed.
- Nothing!!!!!!!!!!!! Owners are the problem!! Breeders are the problem!! Singling out pitbulls is not the solution. Poodles have bad tempers and they aren't singled out!!!
- There is no such thing as a "nuisance" animal breed, there is only nuisance people that refuse to properly train their dogs. Pitbulls have a bite no stronger than any other dog their size. Furthermore, you explicitly state that they do not cause more bites than other breeds proving that there is absolutely no reason to further police pitbulls (other than your own ignorance of course).

- Aggressive dogs should not be allowed in dog parks unless muzzled. Regardless of breed, I don't care if it's a chihuahua or Great Dane if it's aggressive it should be muzzled.
- Being breed specific is dumb as pit bulls have weaker bites than some other common dogs. All fines and bylaws should be based on infractions. If a dog has bitten multiple people etc then action can be taken. Fine, forcing better training or education or have to give up dog.
- No no pits off leash around small kids/small adults and small dog
- Ban pit bulls. Insurance does not negate the trauma incurred to a child/adult when attacked by this breed
- I do not support breed targeting. This is an issue about irresponsible owners.
- [removed]
- Depending on the minor offence, need to define this. Having a dog that had offences for noise should in no way limit him from an off leash park. The dog needs exercise and is likely one of the problems leading to the poor behaviour.
- Without jail terms for few months, owner of dog never act seriously for leashed walked
- All pet to owners of dogs should be required to attend obedience training.
- None of the above
- I don't agree with any of the choices above.
- No laws should be based on breed.
- Stop looking at the breed and start looking at the owner.
- Full pit bull ban
- No specific breed bans or regulation until they have been determined to be dangerous. Special licensing for pitbull owners requirements to prove they have taken a course before they can purchase a pitbull.
- All dogs no matter the breed should be required to have obedience training.
- Mandatory education for the owner and behaviour classes for the dog mandatory to attend
- I think owners should be forced to take responsible dog owner course.
- This needs to be applied for all dogs.. I have met more spoiled misbehaving small dogs.. I don't believe one dog breed is the problem.. pitbull lives matter.. prejudice is never a solution
- Could you please not discriminate against "Pitbull" type dogs? Not all these dogs are bad. You are being discriminatory, [removed] so why is my Staffordshire bull terrier who has never bitten anyone, loves people and kids and been attacked 3 times by non pitbull breeds being proposed as dangerous? Why should he be forced to be muzzled in public, when a retriever or husky could do just as much damage to a human or dog but they are given the benefit of the Doubt and not have these ridiculous rules being suggested unless they are considered a nuisance? You wouldn't be racist and discriminate against humans, why do this to dogs?
- The second anyone thinks its a good idea to start singling out a breed because of looks and muzzling them or secluding them from dog parks is the second you will see problems escalate. Dogs are dogs no matter the breed its ALL the owner. The #1 cause of dog bites its LACK of socialization.

Dog parks are essential for the proper upbringing of any dog. Dogs need socialization, they need feel safe in any environment. They don't need to be singled out, muzzled and tortured for stuff that is not their fault. They need to be happy and free, they need to be dogs. Shame on you guys for even thinking of this. I will always own bully breeds and I will always be out with them showing folks how good these dogs are and educating those who think otherwise. NOTHING SHOULD BE DONE TO TAKE AWAY FROM GIVING THESE DOGS OR ANY DOGS A GOOD SOLID HAPPY LIFE. We need to educate owners, not punish the breed.

- These are all focused on bully breeds. Any bylaws need to be equal for any breed of dog. Shame on this board to even push this stigma.
- Instead of making fines "nuisance" and pit specific, make it the same for ALL dog owners
- Pitbull type breeds or pitbull looking breeds are not related to one specific breed. Pitbulls are not the only dog breed with the strength to create serious harm from biting as many breeds small to large have the same ability. Therefore it is harsh to associate these bylaws specifically for pitbull related breeds. Other municipalities and provinces have since had some of these pitbull related bylaws overturned due to the outpour of pet owners, animal professionals and non pet owners working to reverse this injustice for these breeds. Majority of dangerous dog behaviour comes from the pet owner and how that pet owner has trained their dog to behave and react in varying situations. If bylaws and adaptations are needed to be changed, dangerous dogs and their owners should receive mandatory behaviour modification classes, and be responsible for helping assist in ensuring the recovery of the other dog and owner that was put in harm's way. Dangerous dog behaviour should not be limited to dog to dog interaction and should also include dog to sole human interaction such as runners being chased down and trying to be bitten while running. Therefore, restricting and placing bans on one type of breed or look of dog is not going to decrease dangerous dog behaviours as owners will shift to other types of breeds and then where will the line be drawn. Insurance should also not be mandatory for pitbull type breeds nor should insurance fees be higher. Pet insurance rates are determined based on the number and amount of related cases submitted for that specific breed based on health and medical reasons. It is unjust to mandate that specific breeds have higher insurance rates than others.
- fines for people that abuse dogs or for owners that allow small dogs to harass larger dogs until the larger dog bites back to defend themselves.
- None, this is literally a disgrace
- I do not support any breed specific bylaws.
- Dogs are only dangerous when trained or taken care of by bad pet owners. Breed does not matter, by doing this you are leaving lots of dogs at shelters who deserve a great home.
- Educate and fine the human don't discriminate a dog because of terrible owners
- I will not support any of these as this is discrimination and breed bullying. These proposed conditions should also be applied to other breeds, such as chihuahuas, which are more vicious than pitbulls.

- All of this should be addressed on a case by case basis as it is the owners responsibility to take care of and manage the dog by understanding its needs no matter what breed. If a small dog bites it should have the same judgments against it and it's owner.
- I do not support breed-specific legislation. You also need to define "dangerous behaviour".
- NO BREED SPECIFIC LEGISLATION
- Obedience training required for ALL dogs (lesser cost fir licensing like with spay / neuter for instance)
- Breed specific legislation has proven to not work. Training is key, bsl an easy and lazy way out.
- Too many Calgary dog owners are using bin off leash parks for off leash --Aka baker park. I have children and myself as well as them have been jumped on and accosted by dogs.
- No to breed specific legislation
- Breed specific legislation is harmful and cruel please don't implement it
- You have singled out pit Bulls based on misinformation. They do not have a stronger bite, and breed specific legislation is ineffective and not based on science.
- This should be for all dogs period!! Take the words Pit Bull out of all these requirements and I'm game!
- This is an absolutely Ignorant statement in regards to pitbulls bite force. There are several other "large" breeds that WELL exceed the bite force of a pitbull. They rank in the middle for bite force at best. Do your research.
- None of the above
- Investigation of owners treatment and training of "nuisance" dogs regardless of breed
- Responsible ownership is training and proper care for any pet - not just breed specific. Responsible ownership.
- There should not be any breed specific bylaws.
- I don't support any of the above. They should not be singled out because of breed
- Nothing. BSL doesn't work and never will. More education for idiot people like the ones proposing this BS
- As a pit bull owner you are signaling my dog as dangerous. I have been bite a few times by small dogs, Will the owners also be required to have the same rules as my highly dangerous 7 year old pit bull that sleeps his days away?
- Obedience training required for every dog registered in Calgary
- None of the above
- All breeds should be treated the same. It's not the breed that's the issue, it's the owner/trainer.
- Total ban of "pit bull" dogs in the City of Calgary
- Owner responcibility for the actions of their animals. Pitbulls can be so lovley, an aggressive dog is a reflection of their (or previous) owner(s). Rescue dogs have the potential to be aggressive, that might not always be their fault, nature and nurture both contribute to an organism's debelopment.

- I believe that none of these should happen as it's not the dog it's the owner and someone like a small child is running towards the dog they should be taught not to run towards dogs they don't know without asking owners need to be trained on how to deal with a dog
- I do not agree with Breed Specific Legislation. I volunteer at a rescue and have had no issues with the pit bulls we rescue. Bad behavior is a result of the negligence / abuse by the owner and not related to the breed of the dog. is
- If this is for 'pit bulls' it should be for all breeds. Chihuahuas are crazier and meaner than pit bulls.
- I encourage the City of Calgary to conduct further research into the pit pull breed. The belief that this breed is more aggressive than others is archaic and has been debunked by myriad studies proving that a) a domestic dog's temperament, propensity for aggression and overall behavior have far more to do with their human ownership and environment than breed and b) pit bull breeds are infact ranked much lower in terms of innate aggression than are many other common breeds. There are no 'bad' breeds, just bad humans. If the City wishes to mitigate undesirable behavior, it would be prudent (not to mention much more humane and cost effective for tax payers) to address the issue of dog ownership and whether or not Calgary citizens are fit for the privilege and responsibility.
- I don't agree with labelling a specific dog breed as nuisance.
- Ban aggressive breeds
- None
- Pit bulls should be able to access dog parks without a muzzle.
- How about chihuahuas those little guys are more vicious than any pitbull i ever met!!! Leave the pitbulls alone!!!
- Higher fines for Chihuahuas and enforced training for dogs of this type.
- A certain type of person has a pit bull. It is glamorized on TV/online for being a fighting/guard dog. Usually unethical people own pit bulls.
- Minimum requirement of obedience training for all dog breeds
- Pitbulls aren't the problem, it's lax/uneducated owners.
- Bad owners, not bad dogs. Charge the source
- I don't think it's fair to declare a dog a nuisance or threat based on breed and subjective reporting by neighbours. There should have to be a clear and defined criteria and evidence for a neighbour to make a complaint to the city. The city does not do a thorough investigation following a complaint, the pet owner is sent a warning without a fair explanation or a chance for the owner to provide their perspective. This allows for unfair bullying from neighbours. Complaints should be investigated thoroughly and fined and dealt with appropriately.
- DOGS are not the issue. Owners are the issue. Having more support for ownership and having programs that train people, how to train dogs is a better idea. They don't have to be mandatory (though they should be, as this would cut down on accidental neglect and abuse) but they could be mandatory for any pitbull owners.
- Nuisance dogs of any breed are the responsibility of the owner. If a dog is declared a nuisance, the owner needs to be required to take responsible pet ownership training.

- dogs considered a nuisance is not limited to bully breeds. All breeds can be a nuisance or dangerous.
- Absolutely none of these. There is no such thing as a “nuisance dog” , only irresponsible owners. No dog should be required a muzzle unless necessary & there should be no rules stating how many dogs you are allowed in a household. These are an absolute joke.
- None of this [removed].. And to point out pit bulls, are you kidding?? Get over yourself! IF a dog(of ANY breed!) is to attack then look at both parties involved and maybe charge the owner direct and not punish the actual dog!! HUMANS CAUSE BAD BEHAVIOUR ON ANIMALS! NO ANIMAL IS BORN TO JUST FULLY ATTACK WITHOUT REASON. AND A DOG BEING BROUGHT INTO THE WORLD AROUND CIVILIZATION THEY ARE MOST DEFINITELY NOT FIRST THOUGHT TO ATTACK THAT IS BROUGHT ON BY BAD OWNERS!!
- Fine the owners for not training their dogs properly, don't take it out on the dog.
- The language used talking about pitbulls is inaccurate and offensive
- Pit bulls are loving dogs. They should not be singled out as you are here! It should be ALL Dogs Or NO Dogs for all rules. Not by breed.
- Ban the ownership of bully breeds.
- Leave pitbulls alone? This is a [removed], played out trope that frankly i'm sick off, ALL dogs have the potential to be trained horribly and bite or be aggressive. My friend was bit by a lab meanwhile every pitbull that i've ever come across is a giant baby who wouldn't hurt a fly. You want to actually make change? Charge the offending owners, charge the stupid child that wasn't taught manners and provoked the animal. They're a animal, who has been domesticated by humans. This is an absolute witch hunt against a breed of dogs not any more 'naturally aggressive' then any other breed. I'm pissed, this is absolute propaganda:
- Specifically targeting "Pit Bulls" as a major problem is not backed by a single statistic or any type of scientific study. If there is an issue then it needs to be demonstrated in the numbers and investigated using proper methodology. In singling out Pit Bulls this bylaw is pandering to people who have no specific knowledge of dogs, dog training, or what causes problematic dog behavior. Specifically targeting Pit Bulls will do nothing to rectify any issue presented here.
- None of the above. You're becoming to invasive. Nothing is wrong with our current bylaws.
- I do not support breed specific legislation.
- No additional fines for a certain breed. Treat all dogs the same as we do the same with races of people.
- this is absolutely disgusting, the fact that you are singling out a breed and tying a behavior to them while trying to say "its not this breed" is etremely hipocritical, also i know multiple people, myself included who have pitbulls why would we need to pay more for insurance, what about german sheaphards or huskys or dobermen, or multiple other big breeds, this is clearly singling out pitbulls and is extremely unfair
- Pit bulls are not the problem. Don't single them out as nuisance dogs. Other dogs bite more often then put bulls. <https://www.mdpi.com/2076-2615/9/6/324/htm>

- Please do research before singling out "pitbulls." There are many other dogs that have higher instances of biting, including German Sheperds and chihuahuas. Also there is no evidence that suggest implementing BSL into a municipality lowers the number of instances of bites.
- Obedience training needs to be done through a positive reinforcement trainer.
- Pitbulls should NOT be discrimated against! They are loving kind animals and are not dangerous unless taught to be by their owners, if they are aggressive please punish the owner not the dog! I DO NOT AGREE WITH ANY OF THESE MEASURES.
- All of the above does not make sense at all! A complete definition of "nuisance dog" must be part of the survey so calgarians know before answering these kind of questions. Putting restrictions or additional requirements of any type on a specific Dog breed, or their Owners, based on that the dog's bite is stronger is nonsense.
- It is really discouraging to see Calgary jump on the "pit bull bandwagon". Anyone who is familiar with this breed knows they are no more dangerous than any other dog. Bad pet owners create bad dogs, period. Doesn't matter what the breed is, if it is mistreated for long enough it is likely to become more aggressive and more likely to bite. I reiterate - this has NOTHING to do with a specific breed!! You need to toughen the laws for dogs that bite people or attack other dogs/cats. This is how you make the city safer, go after bad dog owners of any breed, if their dog become a danger it has to be put down. Period. Regardless of the breed. Go after bad dogs!! If a dog demonstrates vicious behaviour, it gets put down. To single out one breed as being worse than others is ridiculous and it's simply not accurate.
- introduction of wolves into city to deal with problem/ shoebox size dogs and coyotes, mostly coyotes
- pitbulls are NOT the problem. Bad owners are dont discriminate against one breed unless you require one human race to meet all the same requirements
- do not allow these types of dogs
- Pit bulls are not nuisance dogs, I have met smaller dog breeds that are more aggressive.
- I do not in any way support BSL in my province. In any city. For any reason. Your research is miguided and heavy handed towards pitbulls.
- Your idea that pitbulls are inherently trouble-making is ridiculous. There are many nuisance dogs, and most of them are not pitbulls. Basically your legislation, as written, is "if we think a dog looks like a bully breed, it has to be muzzled". That's nuts.
- Ban pit bulls in the city of Calgary
- Fine owners of aggressive dogs, including jail time if they are negligent.
- ALL dogs should require obedience training. City should offer free or subsidized courses.
- NONE You're sick and disturbed if you think pit bulls are the problem. Humans are the problem. Let's have some restrictions on those beasts. Humans need muzzles.
- That dogs of other breeds that are known to bite have to follow the same rules
- Nothing Pit-bull specific. It's a blanket 'solution' (as in it's not a solution) to an individual problem.
- Fines and punishment for owners allowing this behaviour.
- Definition of nuisance seems too board
- How about NOT introducing BSL against Pitbulls?

- Scientifically, pit bulls do not exhibit any more threat to people as any other breed. The 'potential for a more severe bite' has not been proven.
- For any of the measures I support I would only do so if there was real consistent evidence that a dog is exhibiting nuisance behaviours due to its owner not properly caring for/training them. If an incident (especially bites) occurs due to someone approaching the dog without consent from the owner then the blame should NOT be placed on the dog and its owner.
- More education for owners of dogs who have behavioral issues and follow up to ensure the dog is being taken care of properly (this goes for all breeds, no breed should be discriminated against)
- Bad owners are the issue, there is no bad dog. Training for people who don't know how to be good owners or don't know how to train their dogs. Unfortunately people don't often treat dogs fairly, this results in bad dogs (any breed). I think it is crazy you are calling out pit bulls in particular.
- I think it is very dangerous game to start attempting to crack down on brave specific incidents. Owners are the ones to blame, and they should be the ones who face the consequences. Owners should be forced to go in to dog training if they do not have a handle on their pet, regardless of the breed
- Pet ownership restrictions for owners demonstrating irresponsible pet ownership. (No irresponsible breeds, just irresponsible owners)
- Consider banning pitbulls
- I don't think Pitbulls are any different than any other dog. They are very loving dogs and it is disgusting that people are trying to segregate them.
- Limit the number of dog licences available per household in general
- Train the humans to train their animals. Pit bulls are not more likely to bite than any other dog. They are beautiful kind and loving dogs and they should not be prohibited.
- This absurd! You literally state that Pitbull's & Staffy's are statistically NOT the issue... Yet you discriminate Pittbull's & Staffy's based on their strength & because other municipalities are doing this.... Really?... Just because others adhere to these by-laws does NOT make it right!!! I've bred, raised, trained Great Danes, German Shepards, Labs, Retrievers, & now Pitbulls/Staffy's. Guess which ones are least aggressive, ultra loving, & most intelligent? Hence, why many enforcement agencies are training them. Not because of their strength, because of their ability to be trained, intelligence, & tracking abilities. This should say something. Also, I just want to point out, there are many other breeds (le-Dobermann, Rottweiler, Irish Wolfhound, Akita, German Shepard, etc.) capable of inflicting wounds as bad or worse! This is due to their size, strength, agility, etc. HOWEVER, dog breeds are NOT the issue!!! People are the issue!!! They are often not educated, no or minimal training, irresponsible, & lazy. Also, there is a STRONG STIGMA surrounding Bullies & more so Pitbull's & Staffy's because of people!!! They were & are still often abused, provided testosterone altering their aggression, taught to fight, owners cropping their ears/tails when there is no reason other than the mean look associated, spiked collars, choke chains, etc. There should be by-laws directed towards these types of people or they should be sterilized so they cannot breed! Once again, Bullies & Pitbulls/Staffy's are NOT the issue! I feel people that obtain any animal(s) should be thoroughly checked (le-Background, maybe credit, etc.), required (mandatory) training regulated via the city, & adhere to bylaws/standards/rules/etc. Since 2016, I have only seen 1 officer enforcing the by-laws & I walk my dogs twice a day, everyday in Calgary paths, parks, off-leash parks etc. Perhaps the city should kick themselves in the [removed]!!!... Another problem is, not consistent training, walks, not properly disciplining when constant barking, highly active, destructive, socializing, aggressive (Often scared or abusive history), etc. If people accept to have these troubled animals in their home, it is their responsibility to rectify these matters & it takes LOTS of effort/consistency!!! Animals have emotions & feel things as we do therefore, you have to consistently treat them like a part of the family!!! I was proud to be apart of Calgary because of the fact they did NOT have by-laws associated to Pitbulls & Staffy's like places in Ontario, etc.

- [removed] It is unreasonable and unresearched. Pitbulls do not pose anymore of a threat to society than a German Shepherd, Labrador Retriever, Great Pyrenees or any common family canine. You are following suit in other community's that believe forcing owners to follow ridiculous rules on their own pets. Yes there will be bad dogs but if you cared about the community you would not only place BSL on "pitbulls" (also pitbull is a blanket term for uneducated people) but also German Shepherds which are more aggressive and impulsive than pitbulls and breeds alike. Educate yourselves and your community of Calgary before you pull this propaganda saying they're all man eating beasts. They are not and should you put a BSL in place you will ruin a once wonderful city of Alberta.
- Are you guys literally insane? Pitbulls can be some of the sweetest most loving breeds, going after them so specifically is completely outrageous, dogs behave how they are trained, no breed is a bad breed, only bad owners.
- Would support a total ban on these dogs in city limits - I cannot see a single reason why nuisance dogs need to live in highly populated areas
- If you're planning in passing a bill for "nuisance dogs" it would make more sense to pass it for all dogs. Especially when statistics show that pit bulls aren't worse than any other breed.
- Absolutely none of them. No breed specific legislation.
- I do not condone BSL in any way. Please do your research as well. Pitbulls do NOT have a stronger bite than other breeds. This is false information and not very professional.
- Ban pit bulls
- How about all the people who walk their dogs off leash around the neighbourhoods, parking lots and non off leash parks. I have more problems with those dogs than any "pit bull"
- Why are Pit Bulls mentioned here by breed when you say they have not shown to be more aggressive than others. This is not a fair question and the wording is highly inappropriate
- Pit bulls should not be singled out as a breed. Nuisance or dangerous dogs come in all breeds as a result of poor ownership. Please remove pit bulls and edit this bylaw to reflect dangerous dogs in general. There should also be fines for owners who abuse animals causing dangerous behaviour.
- Pit bulls are not the problem
- Mandatory training for the OWNER on how to handle their dog
- Dogs should be trained to be licensed like in Germany <https://www.thelocal.de/20120321/41463>
- No BSL
- The owners are responsible for the dogs behaviour so I agree with higher fines

- Do NOT target specific breeds.
- Owners require training
- Better investigations behind why the bite first occurred instead of just putting blame on the dog and owner immediately. Putting focus on Pitbull like dogs is discrimination and will make no difference in the amount of severe dog bites that occur. People with aggressive small dogs get away with it because their dog small. Every owner no matter the type of dog should be dealt with equally and given the same level of punishment. Many dog who are adopted end up with bullie like features. If you put through these acts against bullie like dogs, adoption rates will significantly decrease which is the opposite of what the government should be promoting.
- fines to owner for poor training, its never the dogs fault
- The pit bull heavy leanings of this survey are very biased and wrong. They will serve no purpose beyond further harm the overall breed. The city of calgary should be ashamed of its biased, jaded, and undereducated members
- Higher fines for off leash dogs outside of off leash parks.
- Owners of nuisance dogs must undergo training to learn how to properly control and own an animal.
- There are MANY amazing pit bulls out there. Do not punish the breed for the action of some. ANY dog can bite ANY dog can be aggressive and ANY dog can bite. Pit bulls should be allowed the same freedoms as any other dog. It should never be breed specific.
- Why would we punish pit bull and pit bull owners more if they aren't more likely to hurt anyone than any other dog? Rottweilers and German Shepards, Bulldogs, etc also have comparable bite strength but I see no mention. It's a scare campaign not fully based in science. Extra training for any dog with common bite strength over 200 psi if you want to be serious about this, otherwise it's just unfair and PR based targeting.
- More bylaw presence in on-leash parks
- Not breed generalizing. I was bit by a German Shepherd and a Jack Russell.
- Owner training required for prospective pit bull owners, outlining the special care required for the breed.
- Pit bull breeds are not the problem. Owners are. I know more friendly pit bull breeds than "dangerous" ones. Go after chihuahuas they are more likely to bite.
- This is so wrong to say just pitbulls and and blockheaded dogs, my dog has been attacked way more by small dogs than he ever has a pitbull or big dog. Labeling pitbulls as dangerous dogs increases the negative stamina towards them, as well as making them less likely to get adopted, which will cause them to be put down, pitbulls are the sweetest dogs, I am disgusted by this bylaw.
- Fines and jail time for owners whose dogs harm people
- Required obedience training following first instance of biting.
- Please do not discriminate against pit bulls.
- Breed Specific Legislation DOES not work. Leave bully breeds alone and focus on the rules you already have a do not follow. Example, I walk Edworthy everyday. Not once have I seen bylaw. Poop in dog parks. Dogs at large in dangerous situations. The people who are good law abiding citizens and already follow bylaws do not have the dogs are you're worried about. The people with untrained, vicious dogs don't follow the law.

- Age minimum requirements for ownership as well as size ie must be at least 100lbs heavier than your dog
- Please do not go the Breed-Specific offences route. It is not a fact-based policy position and BSL is being undone around the world. Calgary has been an example in animal care - don't cave to this ridiculous idea.
- Fines for dogs off leash in non designated areas. Also, don't bully my breed. I've seen tons of dogs off leash when they shouldn't be, if there was an altercation with my bully, he would be the one to blame. Also, maybe google bite strength because there are a ton of dogs that have strong bites. Doberman, boxer, German shepherds, rottweiler, Leonberger, mastiffs. Why aren't they included?
- Breed laws are horrible blame the people not the breed. These types of laws are shameful.
- Breed specific legislation is not fair, all dogs have potential to bite and pitbulls are not the problem. Also the above listed definitions of pitbulls seems like you can deem any dog a pitbull based off of looks. This is WRONG
- It is not the dogs fault. It is the owners and people approaching them. Some dogs don't like people or other animals. Generalizing a breed is ridiculous. [removed]
- Let all dogs be dogs. Pit bulls are just as friendly as a golden retriever!
- Pit bulls are being unfairly singled out in this survey, the responsibility for proper training is on the owners and an entire breed should not be shamed or victimized because of poor management by humans
- There are countless studies that show banning a dog based on their physical appearance lacks not only common sense but also goes against what expert organizations have stated on record including the American Bar Association, The Canadian Kennel Club, The American Veterinary Association...the list goes on. You need more education that doesn't target breed but behavior. You also need to put in proper laws for breeding. You have one of the worst XL Bully Breeders in North America in Alberta, and because of poor breeding several of these dogs have killed people. The breeders are a young couple in their early 30's making so much money off these poor animals. Better breeding laws (animals are not objects!), more education, and hire educated animal patrol officers. Also, implement better animal abuse laws. These breeders should be held responsible for the the death of these people.
- Do these powers not already exist (seizing of deemed dogs, restricting deemed dogs' public interactions, increased fines for repeat offences)?? The City of Kelowna (where I was employed as a Dog Control officer for years) has had these since at least the early 2000s and used those authorities regularly and without issue. Dogs caught roaming repeatedly faced a doubled impound fee every single time they were caught - so some dogs cost owners $2,000 for release after about the 5th time in a 2-year window.
- All these additional restrictions and recommendations targeting "pitbulls" is ridiculous and unnecessary. Anyone that knows anything about dog behaviour and training understands that it is not about the breed. It is about responsible dog ownership. Don't blame the breed. Blame the owners. If you want to create more safety, put in laws requiring positive reinforcement obedience classes for all dog owners. Don't bully the breed.

- Nothing because if a person cannot handle their dog they shouldn't own it you are dog shaming. shame on you.
- This is ridiculous to target only bully breeds. Do better City of Calgary.
- Pit bulls are no stronger than any large breed of dog (pit bull bite: 235 psi, Great Dane bite: 238 psi; for reference) - I don't believe that the specific breed is the problem in any situation, I believe it's how the owners raise and bring up the dog and how it is TAUGHT to behave. Obviously, smaller dogs would not inflict as much harm/damage of a situation did arise where it becomes aggressive, but singling out pit bulls specifically only stems from the media's portrayal and "popular" belief of what the breed entails.
- Owners should be banned from keeping dogs if they can't control them. I am a dog walker who walks many pitbull breeds without issue. It's the owners who don't train their dogs that are the issue
- definitely no blanket bylaws against specific breeds. All dogs act as they are taught, not according to the type of breed they are. That is discrimination against the dogs and their owners!!
- Breed Specific aspects of the bylaw should not be allowed. The onus of dog behaviour must be held to the same accountability for dogs of all breeds in order to be effective and protect the public from nuisance dogs of all breeds.
- Stop being so discriminatory toward pit bulls. Implement fines for ANY breed that attacks in public, singling out one breed is out of line.
- Ban Pitbulls from every community.
- Ban pit bulls
- No breed specific legislation! Ban the bad owners!
- Do not allow pit bull ownership in the city
- ANY DOG BREED that is involved in an attack, the owners should be fined. Its not the dog breed that's the issue; it is the owners and how they train their animals that is the issue.
- ANY breed of dog exhibiting aggressive behaviour must be enrolled in a behavioral training course within 30 days of offense or said dog shall be reprimanded by authority to withgo a behavioral training course.
- None this is stupid. Punish the owner not the dogs and stop DISCRIMINATING
- Human education on Dog/Cats etc in GENERAL. Not just pit bulls. To many irresponsible owners buying breeds they can't accomodate.
- I don't support any of them. You guys are ignorant and uneducated. Dog breed has nothing to do with behaviour. It bad owners not bad dogs.
- None
- I have been attacked/bitten by small dogs on numerous occasions and told by the City of Calgary employees that it's not a problem. How about better education vs ludicrous laws made by ineffectual half wits.
- Pit bulls should be banned.

- Breed specific bans. Ontario has already done this and it has worked out wonderfully for them. No more severe bite injuries and deaths from pit bulls. Just look at the statistics to see how much of a nuisance pit bulls are.
- Higher fines for Off-Leash dogs not in off-leash area
- Mandatory Training for dogs involved in altercations, more bylaw availability for dog park regulation and reporting
- No one is allowed to own No pitbulls or similar
- The owners should have to undergo a self paid training program.
- breed specific legislation is a joke. if a dog is a nuisance it's the owner who's the problem and likely shouldn't own any dog. legislate against bad owners instead.
- Penalties to people who provoke attacks from dogs to further a stigma on a specific breed.
- ALL dogs should be allowed un-muzzled within a off-leash dog park. The purpose of these dog parks are to provide exercise for dogs that live within the city. No dog should be mandatory to wear a muzzle if no incidents have occurred. If a dog has had one or more incidents then a muzzle may be necessary, but this should be a last resort.
- Ban Pit Bulls and the similar breeds you identified above.
- Better monitoring and fining for any dogs off-leash where they shouldn't be (where I live in Bowness this is a big problem).
- Fines and insurance are all reactive measures. Need for preventative approach. Calgary Community Standards must have proper dog behavior training to be able to recognize and address problem behaviors without escalating the situation and prompting a dog in question to be scared and act out further. Proper training is required to recognize normal dog play from a dangerous behavior. Proper training for pet owners by qualified animal behaviour professionals is required as a preventative measure to ensure all pets are set up for success as members of household.
- By introducing more costs to dog owners through additional insurance or requiring obedience training, you are putting up more barriers for these pit bulls, even those that are not a nuisance, from getting adopted at all. Fines should only be administered after an offense has taken place, not before.
- Owners with multiple complaints/fines are not permitted in off-leash areas, and may be unable to obtain additional dog licenses until they have completed training on how to be a responsible pet owner.
- How about a program offers to train and educate owners but also the public. Someone walking by could go to pet your dog and it could bite or be mistaken to bite! Education is a key component of a healthy people dog relationship!
- Dogs who attack people or pets unprovoked (except if being teased, protecting a home or fenced property) should be euthanized and the owner restricted from acquiring additional dogs without having taken a course).
- Additional training for owners prior to being able to own a breed which typically is referred to as a "nuisance"
- Obedience training required for all dogs

- It is absolutely disgusting that this city would consider banning a certain breed of dog from being owned. There are no bad dogs, only bad owners. ABSOLUTELY go ahead with creating fines and restrictions for nuisance dogs. Expect that category to be full of dachshunds, pomeranians, chihuahuas, and every other dog that is actually a dangerous nuisance. Pit bulls and their related breeds and cross-breeds are gorgeous, loving animals that do not cause specific harm just because of the way they look. It is horrendous that anyone on this project that cares about animals would actually consider banning these breeds.
- Treat all dogs equally!!! Punish the owners or those that pushed the animal to become aggressive
- I would support a pitbull ban within city limits
- Ban them all.
- Higher fees for pit bulls does not stop bites.
- Enforcement of existing bylaws in Calgary Parks, especially leash regulations.
- Higher fines for dogs (nuisance or otherwise) off-leash in leash required areas. Also breed specific legislation is ineffective. Very disappointed to see this as a major topic on this survey.
- Dog owners (regardless of breed) should be held to nearly the same level of accountability and liability as firearms owners. If ANY dog attacks another person or animal and causes injury and the victim chooses to press charges, the dog should be seized and potentially destroyed or the owner should face stiff penalties including massive fines and even prohibition from dog ownership. Perhaps "pitbull" owners should have to register their dogs and be required to have special additional licensing to ensure the dogs are trained and required to see a vet at least once per year for health and well-being of the animal.
- Outright ban on Pitbull type dogs in Calgary
- None of these should be implemented. The singling out of pitbulls is unacceptable in this type of survey. There are 7 other breeds that have a strong bite force than pitbulls, yet you never mention those. The bias of the survey and the agenda of the City are blatantly and unacceptably obvious. Shame on you.
- 1st offence of nuisance dog should be mandatory training. 2nd offense should be a fine
- Don't allow pit bulls or dangerous dogs in the city. Small dogs bite too but pit bulls have the ability to kill. They are too dangerous if they get out....which can happen very easily. All it takes is a gate left open...please ban them or make it difficult for people to own.
- Crack down on backyard breeding... Limit who can breed and you will start to eliminate poorly bred dogs with bad temperaments. A registered breeder is more selective of where their dogs are placed. They make sure they go to capable and knowledgeable owners who can handle the breed requirements..
- There are many breeds of dog that have the strength to pose as a potential serious bite risk. The label should not be breed specific, "nuisance" dog or "dogs with previously dangerous behaviour" should be the target here for stronger rules, regulations and limitations.
- Do not blame pitbulls, it has been scientifically proven that they do not have a "locking effect" when biting, they were originally nanny dogs. People bought pitbulls to watch their kids, newborn babies, etc. Dog fight rings, and docking ears to make them look more aggressive is what gives pitbulls bad reputations. I do not personally own pitbulls at the moment, if I had the chance, I would. Quit blaming the dogs, blame the owners.

- Pit bulls are some of the most wonderful dogs. The owner and individual behaviour of a dog is what should be looked at.
- Proof of Training for owners prior to getting a pit bull but I do not support the other suggestions in the lists
- Pitbull is not a breed. You're doing a survey without giving stats and incorrect info. Inexcusable
- Do not decide that a dog breed is reason to discriminate and deem a dog a nuisance. Put in place better training for owners of dogs who have tendencies to bite (this includes smaller dogs without the features of those listed) and offer free training to children and adults so they do not approach dogs in a way that may cause a fight or flight reaction .
- I would support the ideas listed above if they weren't breed/ nuisance specific. I would support all dog owners, regardless of breed/ nuisance designation: requiring obedience training, being muzzled in public areas (except for off-leash dog parks), higher fines for any dog involved in previous offences
- Any dog can be a bad dog. More responsibility needs to be put on the owner.
- I support taking extra precautions toward dogs that have been proven aggressive or a nuisance, however, I do NOT support instituting any rules based on a dog's breed.
- Pitbull breeds should not be treated any differently than other breeds. If a dog is dangerous, regardless of breed, the dog owner should be penalized. Owners of dangerous dogs need to be trained in dog ownership and if they can't be responsible dog owners, they shouldn't have the ability to own a dog. Further, "nuisance" dog is too general of a term. What is considered a nuisance to one person might be considered normal dog behavior to others. Unless the dog is a danger to people or other dogs, the city shouldn't step in, with the exception of a extreme cases.
- More onus needs to be placed on the owner. Dogs should not suffer at the hands of an abusive owner
- The owner needs training. It is the owner of the animal that trains or does not train the animal the way it reacts/acts. If the animal has not been trained then that is the owners fault not the animal. If the animal is not good with children then that needs to be told to the other people around. The animal responds the way an animal would. It is the owners responsibility.
- The city of Calgary should be very careful with this claiming Pitbulls as a nuisance could involve legal affairs and lawsuits considering the German shepherds and police dogs are more aggressive than a family pitbull little dogs bite more people than big dogs in Canada every year but you're not saying anything about that
- I support stronger measures for pitbull and pitbull types. Unfortunately they are often owned by those who like to exhibit and tough persona and they either found roaming loose due to the owners lack of concern or lack of strong fencing. I have walked by backyards and have seen the fence boards shake as I walk by. This breed type should be required to attend several rounds of speacial breed specific training. I have witnessed 3 grown men try to separate a pitbull and a samoyed. I have also seen a child (pre-teen) walking a pitbull type. There is no way a child has the strength should an altercation occur. I've also had a co-worker whose dog was severely injured while in the hands of a dog walker who was walking 5 dogs at the same time. Two of the dogs got into a fight (one a pitbull cross). There is no way the dog walker could handle the situation which resulted in my co-worker going through extensive vet bills and stress. A dog walker walking 5 dogs at once there is no way that any of them are under control. I am reluctant to say that "nuisance" dogs should incur tougher measures as the definition above isn't clear enough.

- breeds aren't vicious. how the owner raises the dog is the out come. cancel this bylaw.
- Fully support any measures that hold individuals accountable if they own a dangerous dog.
- Breed-specific legislation is not supported by science and your "facts" above about bite strength are inaccurate and seeking to mislead the public
- Breed banning has not been shown to be effective - multiple studies have been done on this. As a veterinarian I absolutely do not support breed specific legislation. Crack down on backyard breeders and irresponsible pet owners. Do some research before proposing such stupid ideas, there are no studies showing a pit bulls bite is harder than and other large breed.
- Nuisance dogs, or dogs with dangerous behavior, are a result of a lack of dog OWNER training. I strongly believe that the owners of these dogs should be facing the consequence of further training if their dogs are behaving badly, particularly in off leash scenarios.
- Obedience training required for all dogs. Non-pitbull dogs in our community are much more a nuisance (constant barking in backyards).
- Isolating a specific breed is not the answer. The owner needs to be responsible and needs to be fined if there is an incident. Increase the fine amount dramatically. Dogs declared a nuisance? Are they tagged to identify them or is it that the survey is targeting certain breeds.
- More accountability for people buying dogs from backyard breeders, harder for people who don't have access to dog training to get dogs. At the end of the day the owner is to blame not the dog.
- Stop discriminating against pitbulls
- Teach Dog owners what it means to own a dog and fine them
- Stiffer Penalties for Negligent Pet Owners! My black lab was attacked by a tiny Boston terrier! The owner laughed it off, but apologized. My dog now avoids small dogs like the plague!
- Nuisance lacks description. Eg a repeat barking dog, a repeat at large dog, the restriction needs to address/ alleviate the nuisance. Also, in off leash park settings, nuisance dogs should be singled out, not pitbulls. From the perspective of my extensive experience off leash park experience with sensitive colkie- type dogs, you are barking up the wrong tree and punishing the typically very responsible and educated Pittbul and pitbull type owners. Also it is near impossible to identify dog.is off.leash.parjs. nuisance dogs need to carry an easily readable label.
- No additional restrictions
- Dogs need to be leashed in front yard, even if on owner's property. Dogs do not know where their property ends and approach/attack people off the property.
- NOT breed specific, dog specific. Please also put effort into halting backyard breeders and the commercial sale of dogs (i.e. top dog).
- Owners Need to be Vetted to own a Pitbull .. its not the dog .. its the owner that is the problem

- None of these should apply. Dog breeds cannot be aggressive, they are taught to be that way by the owner. This by law is a sham and should be thrown out. The nicest dogs I have owned have been pit bulls, the worst and most aggressive have been chihuahuas.
- The people coming up with these ideas must be out of their minds to even consider these as options, it's shameful
- Dogs declared a nuisance must wear a specific coloured collar so that people know that the dog is undergoing training and not to approach it.
- Fines, follow up, training, etc FOR ALL DOGS declared a nuisance or aggressive, NOT just "pit bulls".
- This is absolutely disgusting. You are singling out breeds because of some [removed] bias y'all white people have. Get a grip and do some actual research on bully breeds. Maybe without listening to Karen about her crying and whining you'll figure out and realize that these breeds are amazing. If you are planning on having these stupid bylaws in place, they should be for every single dog breed there is. The smaller dogs are more vicious and I have been attacked and chased by the devil Pomeranians. This breed specific bylaw proposal is beyond disgusting.
- Breed specific bans
- Large breeds are only a nuisance if they aren't trained properly. Stop blaming animals for the owners mistakes. Statistically small dogs are more likely to be aggressive than large dogs. Pitbulls in particular are one of the most gentle dog breeds. Start holding owners responsible for their lack of discipline, it's not the dogs fault.
- Ban Pit Bulls!
- Do not name specific breeds in any bylaws.
- I think this should apply for all dogs over a certain weight/size
- Training required for any persons owning unsocial dogs. Jail time, records and/or fines for people harming or training dogs to fight. Pit bulls are not the problem the owners are.
- Any dogs, especially small dogs with a history of biting should be subject to the same conditions as large dogs
- These are all horrible
- Pitbulls are not the problem here. There are many dogs (regardless of breed) that can become aggressive due to bad and inadequate (and oftentimes downright cruel) training, lack of structure in the home environment or animal abuse. Instead, responsible dog ownership is key. Perhaps Calgary should invest in a media campaign about how to prevent dog bites/attacks - which includes telling people to socialize their dog, pay attention to its body language, put a muzzle on your dog if you're worried, avoid risky situations with your dog, or keep your dog on leash in public settings. However, making these things offences when not followed through or banning "pitbulls" will ONLY ensure that responsible dog owners are punished for the misdeeds of exceptional incidents. This would be wholly uncivil and unfair.
- THE CURRENT STANDARDS FOR OWNING "PITBULLS" OR "PITBULL TYPE" DOGS IN THE CITY IS WORKING JUST FINE, THERE IS NO REASON TO BE LOOKING AT ANY OF THE ABOVE! THERE SHOULD NEVER BE BREED SPECIFIC MEASURES LOOKED AT BY THIS CITY AT ALL!!

- I would include bullmastiff in the Pit Bull and nuisance category
- Pit bulls should not be punished. Owners should be the ones getting educated. BSL is an ignorant proposal and negatively impacts humans and the breeds being targeted. Pitbulls are not known for human targeted aggression and anyone who has met one would know that. I think owners should be properly educated on any breed they get but "bully breeds" should not be punished. If anything we should implement more programs that limit and prohibit poor backyard breeding and breeding aggressive dogs and it can be an inherited trait.
- None of the above
- Work with societies like AARCS, Calgary Humane Society, etc., to develop information campaigns to educate children in schools on dog safety. Dog bites would be severely diminished if people understood dog etiquette and body language.
- Pit bulls are not an aggressive breed. If the dog is aggressive the owner should be fined and dog should be taken away! Its not the breed ots how they're trained. The bite is more severe yes but actual facts Chihuahua breeds bite more, just not reported as much because they're minor.
- Supports available for owners of Pitbulls or nuisance breeds to get training when they can't afford it.
- Penalties are required for nuisance dogs, such as those that bark all the time or don't allow neighbours to enjoy they backyards because they start barking
- Obediance for dogs who bite becuae they generally dont bite unless threatened or treated poorly at home
- There should be no separate category for pit bull breeds.
- Do not bully one specific breed! This is outrageous that you have singled out Pitt bulls.
- Breed-specific targeting of dogs should not be taking place - any breed can exhibit undesirable/bad behaviour if not properly trained.
- These items are vague. I support corrective measures levied against a particular dog based on past behavior. I do NOT support legislation pre-condemning any particular breed.
- Why are pit bulls being called out??? They are just as worthy as any other dog. Shame on you calgary.
- These measures need to be based on individual animal/owner behavior, not on breed stereotypes
- Breed-specific rules are not an educated decision. Owners are the issue. Many different breeds exhibit aggressive concerning behaviour and many of the bull breeds listed are great pets.
- All pit bulls should be put down immediately.
- There should be equal punishment/ fine for all dogs that are problems . Not just based off of breed type or looks . Any breed of dog can be good OR bad .
- Have higher fines for all dog bites regardless of severity.. no dog should bite. Punishing only pitbull type dogs would be wrong of the city. Ive been bit by small dogs that drew blood never once by a large breed dog
- No breed specific legislation whatsoever. The breed is never the problem it is owners lack of training that causes any dog to be aggressive and it is a myth and pit bulls having a stronger bite

- Training for owners of any nuisance dog regardless of breed to provide better owner handling and aggression management
- It is despicable that the city of Calgary is making this breed specific. There is no such thing as a bad dog, the problem is bad owners. If you look at the high percentage of "knuckleheads" that owns pit bulls, the problem becomes clear.
- Many dog bites are provoked or preventable, a dog should be allowed to defend itself. Any breed that is capable of or unprovoked attacks on people or other dogs should be restricted. As other municipalities have restricted pit bulls, Calgary has become a haven for them and there are too many here now.
- [removed]
- ALL DOGS SHOULD HAVE TO DO ALL THIS NOT JUST PITBULLS!!!
- The pit bull designation is misleading and should never be used.
- Perhaps, instead of punishing owners and dogs that are seen to be "nuisances" they could be encouraged to take such a pet to a pet training course. I know for a fact dogs will bite (usually when they're provoked). One bite does not make a dog vicious you morons.
- Change the term "nuisance" to not include a specific breed. Define "nuisance" as any animal who exhibits aggressive traits.
- Obedience training for first time owners of large dogs. Also, Pitbulls should not be singled out as looking at the facts, their bite strength is overblown relative to other big dogs (if you're going to discriminate, it should only be classes of dogs based on size). Speak to Vets to base policy, not a handful of outraged citizens using only poor anecdotal information.
- Do not specify pit bulls!
- Do not discriminate against breeds. There are aggressive smaller breeds. The owner needs to appropriately train their dog. Offer reduced behavioural training.
- People should have to register their chihuahua and other small "ankle biting" dogs since they are more aggressive and suffer more from "little man syndrome", more easily spooked, etc
- A short quiz on good dog ownership as part of the dog license program
- None of these. There is no evidence to support that Pit Bulls are more dangerous than any other dogs.
- Obedience training for ALL dogs regardless of breed.
- This is ridiculous and unnecessary. How about ensuring owners are responsible and understand how to own a dog regardless of breed. I see a lot of large dog owners who don't know how to handle a dog and none of these are pitbulls. I own a mixed breed with American staff and he has never caused an issue nor is he "VISCIOUS". It's the humans 9/10 times not the animal. This question is irresponsible. My friend has a miniature pincher who has bitten more children than I care to mention. Shame on you city of Calgary. If you want the answer its online training for dog owners who license their pet regardless of breed. NOT increased fines or having a dog wear a muscle just because of its strength and potential. Are there any dog owners who put these questions together?
- Don't discriminate against breeds! Be better!!!

- It's ridiculous to single out Pitbulls within this survey. It's important to have regulations for dangerous animals or situations where owners are negligent, but making specific rulings based on a specific breed is uneducated, uninformed, and is a disservice to the public. Policy should be based on behaviour not breed.
- Not be breed specific, it also has to do with owners and the way the dogs are trained I have been attack more by small dogs then anything. It is not fair to single out one specific dog breed to do this towards
- The very fact that officials are still trying to push breed specific laws is ridiculous. None of the above should be applied, BSL should be scrapped!
- Pit bulls should be outlawed. They are dangerous and have killed, maimed both people and other dogs. A bite from a pit bull has a completely different intent, apart from the extreme force, of a bite from another dog.
- SMALL DOGS EX CHIHUAHUAS ARE MORE OF A NUISANCE THAN PITBULLS. IF THE DOG IS TRAINED CORRECTLY PITBULLS AND TERRIORS ARE NOT A PROBLEM
- NO BULLY BREED DISCRIMINATION. THEY ARENT THE PROBLEM
- Don't implement breed specific legislation
- Pitbull cross or other pitbull breeds are not the problem. It has always been the owner. I have had dogs my whole life and started training them from day 1. I have never had a violent experience with a pitbull dog. I have had 3 experiences with German Shepherds and a few small dogs at the city parks. My view is owners should have to take a course on pet ownership and understand how to create the proper behaviour in your dog. Grand father those who already own a dog but come the next dog a one time course is needed to own.
- All of the above, but only for dogs with a recorded history of aggression.
- Treat breeds equally and give all a chance. We dont go around making special rules for breeds of people cause that's racism. Same thing here!
- Higher fines as well as tougher laws for all breeds of dogs who are a nuisance but especially German Shepards, boxers, mastiffs, etc.
- Owners should be held responsible for their own dog regardless of breed. Pit bulls are not dangerous. Irresponsible pet owners are.
- Stricter bylaws surrounding obedience training and animal trainer certification to support positive reinforcement training only
- I don't support how this survey singles out pit bulls. It is always how the dog is raised, not the breed that determines behaviour.
- How about in order to own a pittbull or nuisance dog the owner must apply for a license to own the breed. As it's 100% on the owner that these breeds become hostile
- All owners and dogs should be made to take training and obedience lessons
- Focus should be solely on nuisance dogs! Do NOT single out pit bulls to contribute to the uneducated and unfounded reputation of this dog.
- I think the above should apply for all dogs and not just pitbulls.

- Owners of nuisance dogs must go through mandatory training of how to take care of them (not just obedience)
- THERE ARE MUCH WORSE BREEDS OUT THERE THAN A BULLY BREED. THIS IS THE MOST RIDICULOUS THING THAT I HAVE READ.
- There should be a way to have your dog removed from nuisance list through training.
- A premium on pit bull (or Rottweiler) licences to fund education courses, refundable upon attendance.
- Dismiss in literature the misplaced public fear and / or distrust of Pit Bulls and instead focus on breeds that are statistically more likely to inflict a bite injury like Dobermanns or Daschunds. Pit Bulls, when properly trained and cared for, are loving and gentle creatures that care deeply for their family.
- Breed specific bans
- Criminal charges for owners of dogs that injure any person. Too many owners of unstable dogs insist "he's never done anything like this before!" Fine, if you want to take the chance of owning a loaded weapon, there should be very serious consequences if anyone is injured.
- Do not discriminate against "pit bull" type breeds. Trying to argue "strength" as a determining factor is not appropriate when taking into consideration how many large and "strong" dog breeds there are (for example: German Shepherd, Mastiff, Rottweiler... etc).
- Singling out one dog breed is totally wrong it is no different than singling out humans because of their race colour or Creed. It is more likely that a small dog will bite and cause injury. Singling out pitbulls or any of the bully breeds is wrong if you are going to do this you need to do this for all large breed dogs. It is a proven fact that pitbulls have no bigger bite than a German Shepherd or a Rottweiler. If you are going to segregate one breed you need to segregate all. Once again pull your head out of your [removed] this is ridiculous. I work in an industry where I go to people's houses everyday and I have been bitten by little dogs on several occasions and nothing by by law has been done other than a written warning which is a joke. And in one case I even needed stitches and the owner still only got a warning because it was a little dog. If your laws are going to be brought into effect I will take the law into my own hands and when a little dog bites me I will put the thing out of its misery. My American Staffordshire Terrier has never bitten anyone not even another dog. He is 16 years old and these laws are a joke
- Honestly, just ban the ownership of pit bulls if that is possible. Also Rottweilers and Dobermans.
- Targeting a specific breed has no merit. It is noted above that pit bulls are NOT involved in more incidents. Please please engage places like clever canines in this discussion. Dogs that are not allowed to socialize because they are thought to or have exhibited nuisance behaviour only makes the issue worse.
- An aggressive dog is not a reflection of the breed, OR the dog it is a reflection on the owner. This is absolutely ridiculous. Whoever made these proposals is aphonous. Y'all had to use a story from 2014 to justify this. Get over yourselves and stop bullying the pitbull breed! Your moms Chihuahua is more vicious. Sei muto.

- Dogs are usually never a problem, its their environment/owners that have the responsibility to make sure their dog is respectful and not dangerous. I don't think we should penatilze dogs on the breed they were born, I feel owners who have a dog that has biten/shown aggression should be given opportunities to have dog behavior specialists take a look at their dog.
- These measures noted above should be applied consistently to all sizes and breeds of dogs, singling out certain breeds does not solve the problem of irresponsible ownership that is typically the cause of dog bites/attacks.
- Disagree with breed specific legislation. How are you going to determine these breeds? There are studies showing that people are often incorrect in guessing a mixed breed dog's breeds. In most of the guidelines above would I want to see if more EDUCATION and accessibility of services so that people can safely keep their animals and the community is kept safe too. So help teach people to humanely prevent nuisance and or dangerous behaviour. Additionally, by the definition of "nuisance" given above these restrictions don't make sense. A dog barking in their yard is not a predictor of aggressive behaviour so why would you require a muzzle? If the dogs exhibit dangerous behaviour towards humans or other dogs then regardless of breed, I fully support humane muzzles.
- None of the above. You should never judge a dog by its breed. NEVER!!
- I do not think this bylaw should include CKC Registered Am Staff's or Staffordshire Terriers. But unregistered dogs should be included. I think all pit bulls should be muzzled and on lead at all times outside their property and property should be properly fenced to contain said dogs.
- This survey is deeply flawed and an embarrassment to the City of Calgary, especially the section related to Pit Bulls. BY YOUR OWN ADMISSION Pit Bulls are not responsible for a disproportionate volume of incidents yet you somehow think it's okay to single them out. If dog bites from large breeds are a concern you must include ALL large dog breeds. Whoever put this survey together needs to give their head a shake.
- Education must be completed before purchasing or adopting a dog/cat/pet - just like a boating licence, etc.
- PIT BULLS ARE KIND LOVING ANIMALS SHAME ON YOU CALGARY FOR BANNING PIT BULLS
- Breed bans and muzzles for specific breeds do not work and are not the solution. I do not support this move. It has proven costly to taxpayers in other cities and creates a fear mentality.
- More education provided or offered to pets owners. Maybe when they register their animal with the city or if an accident occurs. It's often not the animals fault, it's the humans fault which isn't fair.
- Any breed can be declared a Nuisance
- Dogs that have history of aggression should be muzzled in public parks/off Leash parks
- I do not support any of these rules trying ban or add extra rules to any type of pitbull or bull breeds. I've been approached by other aggressive breeds that were not pitbulls. For example, Rottweiler, chihuahua, German Shepard. I would not blame these dogs for being aggressive. I would put the blame to their owners for not being responsible for raising them properly.
- None of this BSL [removed]
- Any dog that has caused death to another dog should be seized. The 3-strikes rule is ludicrous.

- should not be something enforced by the city, it's an owner's responsibility stricter rules for people NOT pets
- Most of these options above are not clear. What defines a nuisance dog and what defines dangerous behaviour? Is my dog barking at someone passing by my yard dangerous behaviour? Some clear definitions need to be added.
- Support additional measure for dogs who have had multiple major offences. Dogs who are found at large or have noise complaints are not the same as those who are aggressive and they should be in two categories.
- Obedience training for all dogs, small dogs are often worse behaved than these "nuisance" dogs
- When a dog is recognized as being a nuisance there should an evaluation done on the owner to ensure that they are capable of supporting good behaviour in there dog.
- By-law that the OWNER cannot own more dogs if they are involved in a certain number of incidents. Encourage owner training too.
- Training for pet owners is addressing the issue more than the dog itself. Breed specific fines/punishment is not appropriate when it is the owners who do not have control of their pet. Responsibility is ultimately on the pet owner.
- Small dogs are worse
- The owners must face more penalties for any nuisance
- I don't feel any breed should be singled out. Individual dogs, and very often the owners need to be dealt with on a case by case basis. Many "nuisance" dogs are not the problem, it is their owners that create the situations. Not fair to go after any one type of dog as like humans each is individual with their own personality.
- Fine owners who choose to teach a dog, any breed of dog, to be aggressive. Do not punish a living creature who does not have a voice to rally against you themselves. Discrimination is a problem. Bad owners are a problem. Pit bulls and other terriers are not the problem.
- This ordinance is biased and uncalled for.
- STOP BLAMING THE BREED!!!! Science has proven there are many other breeds with a stronger bite force than pitbulls, why arent they even mentioned?
- Mandate Training for pit bull owners on how to properly train and care for their pets, following any incidents.
- None of the above!
- Do not punish pit bulls, this is ABSURD!
- Ban pit bulls, dobermans and other dangerous breeds, similar to Ontario. There's no need to have a vilolent animal, particularly in the city.
- These are all awful
- Ban agressive breeds
- any breed can be a nuisance so declaring an entire breed is bullying and not right
- Breed specific legislation has been shown again and again to not be effective. Please see explanations by the AVMA and the American Kennel Club <https://www.akc.org/expert-advice/news/issue-analysis-breed-specific-legislation/>

- Dogs undergo behavioral testing before being declared a 'nuisance' (at owners expense if necessary)
- Stop discriminating against specific breeds, that is extremely ignorant.
- I find it interesting that pit bulls are being singled out. I do not own one myself, but do not like this. Any large breed of dog, including golden retrievers can cause more harm when they bite. I have never encountered an aggressive pitbull, and have been visiting dog parks for years
- Any breed untrained can bite. May as well ban every dog then.
- ALL dogs should be required to have obedience training, not just bully breeds. I have personally been bit by ONLY small dogs.
- While I understand the strength of a pit bull, whether it is a nuisance or not has everything to do with whom the animal is being raised by. It's the owner that deserves the fines and requirement to seek training if the animal is involved with any bylaw infractions. I have a neighbour who's small chihuahuas are far more aggressive than any pit bull I've met. These dogs have attacked me and others on several occasions. The owner is not being held responsible for her dogs, yet if they were pit bulls they would be put down. It's not the dog. It's the owner.
- I believe that nuisance dogs should be treated differently and not breed specific. I also believe that it's an owners responsibility to treat their animal properly. It has nothing to do with the pet and everything to do with the owner(s). If an animal is treated poorly they will react to that treatment. There is no such thing as an aggressive dog! There might be a dog that bites, or barks, or jumps. But all those things are from poor training and ownership. It has 100% to do with owners of animals and not the pet itself or the breed. If there was a shitzu in the neighbourhood that was as big as a bully breed it would 100% be labelled as aggressive. Those little guys can go crazy! But because they are 12lbs and not 80-90lbs they are not labelled as aggressive. I really believe we need to stop using the words aggressive when it comes to dogs. They are dogs. They are animals and they have no ability to display any behaviours that have not been taught to them. That includes negative or positive behaviour.
- Breed specific legislation is fear driven and not effective. "Pit bulls" are not inherently dangerous, responsible ownership for ALL dogs should be the focus.
- One offense the dog should be put down.
- I dont think it should be just one type of breed All Dogs big or little. Stop pointing out bullies. I was attacked as a child by a little dog.
- All dogs must have obedience training and have a training certification
- [removed]
- Obedience training and muzzling should come as a rehabilitation in hopes to retrain a dog of any size that has harmed or is a repeat offender in attempting cause harm to other humans or creatures (that occurred without instigation). It is hard to write a black and white rule about a very large spectrum of issues.
- This is complete discrimination. Unacceptable. If you look a certain way your personality is deemed dangerous? What kind of prejudice is that?

- A bit more reference checking when it comes to new owners looking to acquire a pitbull or any other dogs I.e. rottweilers, dobermans, boxers, or any other dog big or small, ITS NOT THE BREED, ITS THE OWNER!! Stop handing over dogs to any random [removed] that comes off the street with the money thinking that because they have said money that they're entitled to own a dog
- Obedience training should be required for ALL dogs, exemptions for owners with proof of prolonged responsible dog ownership/dog trainers
- Dog owners who cannot take the time to properly care and train for their dogs should be banned from having them. The fact that Calgary is trying to put a BSL is unacceptable. Since when did you think this was okay? Bully breeds are NOT the issue. It's the owners and irresponsible people. Like the ones who even suggested such a stupid idea. I've met smaller dogs with WAAY more behavioural issues than I have meeting bully breeds. Don't pass this, it's absolutely horrendous that you're even considering it as a bylaw. Shame on Calgary counsel for considering this
- If dogs are considered a nuisance, owners should be held responsible and enroll said dogs into appropriate behavior training courses to address specific problems the dog has. The city should also made said training courses more affordable and accessible so owners are educated when owning a dog. Breeds of dogs should not be singled out because any dog raised by an untrained owner and stressful environment will exhibit similar behavioural problems. Not all dogs that act out are aggressive. Some are anxious and reacted because uneducated non-dog owners do not heed the warning of responsible dog owners and behave inappropriately around anxious dogs and then find reactions intimidating and want to report it as a nuisance. Both non dog owners and dog owners need proper education. Fix the people first.
- Everyone knows chihuahuas are most likely to bite, yet we don't see them muzzled morning destroyed. It is irrelevant if a pit bull has a higher probability of doing more damage. There should be NO BSL, only nuisance dogs, ones that bite repetitively should be fined, muzzled etc. Obedience should be mandatory in order to own a dog!
- Behaviour training for owners with strong breeds should be required and for a cheaper cost. Positive reinforcement based training only.
- Ban the purchase of dangerous dog breeds for the safety of the general public which should take priority over dog ownership
- I do not agree or at all support any of these measures, as they are targeted very unfairly to pit bulls. I think this bylaw would be one of the dumbest things calgary could possible do and I would imagine that if this bylaw passed with its discrimination against pit bulls, there would be a lot of anger and backlash from many people.
- It is misleading to include non-pit bulls (e.g. American Staffordshire terriers) within the definition of a "pit bull." Doing so purposely is also negligent. If The City of Calgary wants to label this class of dog, then it should use a more expansive term (such as "bull-type terrier"). Ordinary members of the public are likely unaware of the aesthetic differences that exist between the bull-type terriers, and labelling every such terrier as a "pit bull" will further erode public acceptance of pit bulls.
- None of the above, as this is cruel towards these sweet animals.

- Why are you targeting pitbulls? There are multiple breeds you can get in North America with higher strength bites.
- Not all pitbulls are nuisance dogs and they should NOT be labeled as such, emphasis on rehabilitation (training) at the owner's expense, there should be a way to clear a dog of the "nuisance" label after a period of time w/out incident.
- Higher fines for people who raise pitbulls poorly, stop attacking this poor breed and target ownership instead
- This question is ridiculous, stop trying to implement breed-specific legislation. Pit bulls might be stronger than many other dogs but it speaks volumes that they are the only breed listed here. Do better.
- Breed specific legislation is absolutely ridiculous. Irresponsible ownership is the issue. The pit bulls I have known are the sweetest dog's I've ever met, meanwhile labs, poodles, and shih tzus are the worst in my personal experience. Perhaps seizing and rehoming "nuisance" dogs is the answer as owners are proving they are too lazy to put the work into training their animal, because dogs of all types and sizes need training. Dogs are not bad, yet we make them bear the consequences of bad owners.
- Singling our Pitbulls is disgusting.
- No extra penalty for pitbulls or any forced training to a specific breed because stated in this survey they do not have a higher bite rate and also they do not have the strongest bite force aswell. So to specify against pitbulls specifically is rather pointless. Personal opinions or how pitbulls and other bully breeds have been broadcasted over media for a few bad dogs or poorly written articles with big captions to catch the attention of people for views is not a reason to put restrictions in place. Also this survey does not allow for actual opinion but suggested answers that sometimes are one sided example of question #1 where there is no option on opposition or an option to say nothing is needed.
- Ban pit bulls and similar breeds as was done in Ontario. There is no need to own this type of animal.
- It's the OWNERS not the DOGS.
- Mandatory prison sentence for any pit bull owner whose dog attacks a person.
- NONE. TAKE THIS OUT. THIS IS STUPID. PIT BULLS ARE NOT ANY MORE DANGEROUS DOGS THAN ANY OTHER DOG
- Why single out Pitt Bulls? Why not Dobermans, German Shepherds & Rottweilers that have equal or greater bite force? Or Chow Chows, Dalmatians and Huskies that are proven to be very aggressive breeds? Furthermore, Staffordshire Bull Terriers ("Staffies") are NOT the same as American Staffordshire Terriers or Pitt Bulls. Staffies are not naturally aggressive - they are affectionate dogs and don't deserve the stigma you are trying to attach to them.
- Fines should be given to the owners of ANY dog that bites/attacks/chases - even those little ankle-biter dogs that are quite often not trained
- The owner should be fined and if there is an incident, the owner should be trained as well as the dog. If there is a repeat, the owner should be banned from the breed and a responsible owner found. The breed is not the issue, it is the owner.

- NO! It is the owner, not the breed that is the problem! You want to be bias against certain breeds of dogs; then go after the Llasa Apsos, Jack Russells, Pekinese, Papillons, Chihuahuas, Cockapoos and other small mixed breeds. They are nuisance breeds that bite people all the time and bark to no end! Just don't hear it on the media simply because it is a small dog! Statistically, there are more bites from small breeds than there are for breeds (over 25 kgs). What's next? Are you going to after white, blonde, brown, red, brindle & mixed coloured dogs and only allow black dogs off leash? Give your heads a shake!!!
- Aggressive dogs - owner should have to take courses to learn "proper training/control" of their dog.
- Banning pit bulls.
- Leave pit bulls alone
- Perhaps mandate socialization training for dog owners (puppy socialization) - this is an essential part of helping dogs learn appropriate behaviours when they are young
- None of the above, just because some dogs created a bad rep, not all of them are bad!
- This is very ignorant as pit bulls are amazing/loving animals
- Obedience training requirements are the best options for all dogs. Discriminatory conduct towards pitbulls ignores how all dogs can be aggressive. Pitbulls used to be nanny dogs.
- Ban all pitbulls!!
- I'm using this field to express my express disapproval in singling out Pit Bulls. More extensive HUMAN training is required.
- Stronger consequences for irresponsible ownership of ALL breeds. And why list Pitbulls and not dogs with a stronger bite force? This makes zero sense! Your "important note" fails to mention that Pit bulls do not have the strongest bite force.
- [removed]
- Pit Bulls need to be banned, regardless of what vets say, Pit Bulls have been genetically bred to kill, and when they go into attack mode their genetics moves them to kill, not just defend. Most other dogs when they bite, do not go for the throat. People in general that buy these dogs what them as a threat weapon.
- Off leash parks - maybe they need to be fenced and individuals only enter at their own risk and need to understand that a dog is an animal and to be respected. It is like a human, ask if you can approve and be respectful. Any dog can bite - why are pit bulls being targeted?
- this survey reeks of bias. owners should be fined for dogs that attack. end of story. no muzzles. this gives too much power to the people and leaves too much variance in what constitutes a nuisance dog. Some people will find a puppy a nuisance. Theres no guidelines for what people can tolerate. If someone were to have low tolerance for hyper dogs they will call it a nuisance. I dont trust people to be honest in their opinions
- Fine owner! As a dog is someones full responsibility like a child would be. If someone is willing to own a animal they need to have proper training for ANY breed of dogs, & Take full responsibility for they're own dogs actions. Animals are the work you put into them.
- This should apply to ALL dogs, not just nuisance dogs.
- [removed]

- None of the above. Rottweilers have a stronger bite but they're not listed, so why are pit bulls? It's more about individual DNA and ownership training, NOT A BREED. I've been bit by a chihuahua and required stitches. What's the difference? More often than not, animal "bites" or "attacks" are brought on by humans; ie. the dog being threatened by a human near their property, or experience of a situation such as someone breaking in. If we wouldn't "euthanize" a human for self defense, why would you even CONSIDER doing it to a dog?
- I don't think any 1 breed should be signaled out. Where it's a chihuahua or a pit bull.
- Mandatory training for ALL breeds of dogs with a certified trainer. Mandatory training/screening for all Humans prior to purchasing a dog to ensure that the Human has the appropriate skills and means to take care/support their animal.
- I don't believe this needs to be "pit bull" specific. It needs to be on a per case basis. There are German Shepherds, Shar Pei and Retrievers that are more scary than a pit bull. An untrained, unadjusted dog is still a dog regardless of looks or breeds.
- No need for breed specific legislation
- [removed]
- Do not discriminate against any specific breed.
- Do not separate pitbulls from other breeds of dogs.
- Pit bulls, and other dogs stereotypically deemed "aggressive breeds", are not aggressive at heart. These dogs are not born aggressive, which is why (as mentioned above) pit bulls are not responsible for any more dog bites than any other breed. There are little dogs that bite WAY more than pit bulls, they just don't receive any reprimanding because their bites typically don't cause much harm. If you REALLY want to reduce the incidence of dog bites, education is the way to do it. Require people looking at owning bully breeds to undergo some sort of education process, make sure they know how to socialize their dogs, and ensure they are not wanting to own pit bulls (or other bully breeds) for the wrong reason. Dogs are not aggressive because it is their nature, they become aggressive due to poor and aggressive ownership. Surveys like this additionally only increase the stigma surrounding bully breeds. If you implement a combination of education for bully-breed owners, and active reduction of the stigmatization of these dogs, a noticeable difference will be seen.
- With all due respect pit bulls and dogs in general are not the problem, the owners are. I have provided this feedback in the past dog owners should require to get dog licenses to own a dog, much like a driver's license. Why? Because if a dog is not properly cared for or trained it can kill just like a car can.
- Get rid of this breed specific language. Owners should all be properly vetted by a breeder or rescue organization. There are no bad dogs, there are bad owners. If a dog has re-occurrence of bad behavior then there should be an investigation into the household and if owners found irresponsible, the dog is taken to rescue for evaluation and re-homing. Pitbulls are some of the best dogs I know.
- How about focus on making sure people are educated on being responsible owners. Most of those options make it seem like the pitbull is so dangerous that no one will adopt them since those would options above make it way more expensive to have one. They are not bad dogs its bad owners that cause the issue. My "pitbull" is the biggest teddy bear in the world and wouldn't hurt a fly.

- Dogs who are seen as dangerous should be taken from their owners and retrained. The owner should then be charged/fined. The dog is only dangerous because the owner did not train them right. It's the owners fault. Not the dogs.
- Dog parks are not for everyone. While we would love for all dogs to get along without a problem, dog fights happen. Pitbull owners need to REPSONSIBLE!!! Organizations need to be able to do criminal record/background checks should be done on home owners, renters, and individuals who want to own this breed. Private dog rescues or people posting on Kikiji need to be held responsible also in sending these dogs to owners who cannot handle the breed. They should have to do home checks and obtain background checks also on the people who want to own these dogs. The media also has a responsibility in spreading the correct information about a dog incident. I can find many examples of the media expressing that a Pitbull caused a bite but when it is other breeds they will not mention the breed. I believe the media causes the hysteria!!!! Everyone thinks there child is perfect no matter what they do...that includes people with small and medium sized dogs. If a fight occurs the only thing that most people will see in a fight is the Pit Bull, no matter who started it or if your Pitbull is just defending themselves. I would suggest trying to keep your pet out of harm's way from other breeds or people trying to make an example of your dog to have their 15 minutes of fame. If you want this breed then do the research on them. I'm talking from experience but drug dealers, gang members love this breed and treat them like shit! They are loyal to a fault and don't realize a good home compared to a bad home. If you are a couch potato then maybe this breed is not for you as they are energetic, highly intelligent and need a great owner, who is responsible, strong minded and can be the Pack Leader!! These breeds need to be worked running, pulling agility, fetching toys etc.
- Mandatory training classes for owners and their dogs, regardless of breed. Special licensing for breeders all other animals must be spayed/neutered within 2 years of animal's birth.
- More measures to defend property owners from neighbours' dogs that exhibit aggressive behavior such as loud and frequent barking that make it impossible to feel comfortable in one's own backyard. Reconsider the criteria for how much barking is too much (i.e. measured in minutes/day presently). Require more stringent measures against mounting behaviour in dogs in off-leash parks.
- Ban pitbulls and/or dangerous dog breeds please. One injury is too much. See link: <https://globalnews.ca/news/7293560/calgary-woman-pit-bull-attack-pet-survey/>
- High fines for owners that cannot control dogs. Ability to put down aggressive dogs. Quit singling out pit bulls, blame the owners and have a proper system in place to fine or jail repeat owners
- Why are other breeds like chiwas not included? They are quite viscous dogs.
- STOP TARGETING PIT BULLS ONLY ! there are other dangerous dogs out there...it is the owners how need to fined and banned not a breed of animal and most certainly not ONLY Pit Bulls ! Make the owners accountable DO NOT make the animal / breed suffer because of ignorance!
- Competent ownership of any dog, its not the dog that is the issue it is the owners,

- none of those, there is no bad dogs, only bad owner. the dog should not be punished, due to their owners.
- nuisance should be applied after one spontaneous altercation
- Any dog breed that bites from a small breed to large! Your bias is showing! Cats you have a by-law you do not enforce, Start there!
- This is absolutely unacceptable! ANY medium to large breed dog has strong jaws. This suggestion of BSL is absolutely disgusting. To think we have come so far when it comes to inclusion and diversity with humans to just label a specific "look" of a dog? Where is your proof? Just because un-educated and misinformed people believe this does not mean it's true! I do not agree with this proposal and consider the wording of this very ignorant and offensive as well! I have spent many years with dogs that "look" this way and they couldn't be more empathetic, sweet and sensitive in nature.
- Training programs offered for a owner/dogs first offence. However, the training must be force free methods, and available for low or no cost.
- I do not support breed specific legislation Define what is "dangerous behaviour". (Lunging, pulling, jumping, bite, growl) Define what nuisance would require additional insurance (barking? running at large? Licensing?) Contradictory statement. Dogs running at large are not allowed to go to the dog park?
- Pitbulls are not the problem here .
- ANY dog that is aggressive should be muzzled. A pitbull should be left alone unless it has shown that its a risk. Smaller dogs are more likely to be nasty.
- More education and more contro taen to stop backyard breeders, nuisance can be just dogs who bark all day so paying a fine to the city won't fix anything however if a owner is irresponsible and doesn't control an aggressive dog then education to that owner should be made mandatory
- Pittbuls should be banned they are way Too dangerous!!
- All of the above.
- They should do dog specific. My sister in law owns a dog considered a pit bull breed but it is the nicest, friendliest dog i have met. If the dog passes a check green bandana. If a dangerous breed RED bandana.
- do not agree with breed specific bylaws or requirements based on breed.
- This is a fantastic example of discrimination. There are other dogs just as aggressive or worse. Hold the owners to a higher standard where training is needed to own said dogs
- It is not just the dog, it is the owner that should be required to be trained. People with little dogs tend to be more of a problem (and some large dogs) in that they allow their dogs to run loose or on a long leash letting them jump up on people and dogs causing the larger dog to be aggressive. Then the owner yells, it's alright he/she is friendly never thinking that your dog might be uncomfortable. People need to understand its is a privilege and responsibility to own a dog. An owner must be vigilant when in public to watch for the kids and adults who have no idea how to approach or not approach a dog. I'm constantly stopping kids running up and trying to touch/hug my dog. Then I take the time to teach them to ask first, wait for my dog to sit and then touch them on the top of the head all while being yelled at by parents for interfering. Have schools create a program for domestic and wild animal do's and don'ts since so many parents do not have the knowledge. There are so many problems that arise that a good (and I emphasize good) trainer could help alleviate if there was mandatory positive training involved. In answer to Q8 to be safe all responsible dog owners should put a red bandana on which unfortunately would not teach kids the proper way to approach the dog. Q9 fines the same with mandatory training of person and dog cases of bites or attacks should technically be reduced. I can't stress enough that training by an experienced and knowledgeable dog trainer is paramount to success.

- Problem dogs must be put down for public safety. Kids bitten by dogs that draw blood are to be put down.
- Common sense, any breed can be a danger and own breed shouldn't be used as a scape goat.
- ban pit bulls altogether, they are a dangerous weapon and lethal to children
- Think they have to be classified as nuisance first. And not by a by law or a bad neighbor that doesn't like them. And it shouldn't be just pit bulls. Don't forget about all the other dogs either. Shepherds saint Bernards. Even the little ones that bite. Not innocent either. Let's be fair.
- Pit bull breeds, as noted above, are not involved in any more incidents than other breeds and should not be singled out. The owners of any animal that is declared a nuisance should be fined and required, along with their pet, to take obedience training. It is as much about the owner as it is about the animal. Further more, why would you limit the number of pit bull breeds in a household. Limit the number of any breed in household - may max of 4?
- It has been proven that a "breed" is not an issue, it is concerning that the city doesn't understand (or has investigated) the science of it. Stigmatizing one (or several breeds) is not just foolish but causes no benefits. Proper training and good owners is what is required.
- None. Pitbulls are not predetermined to be nuisances or aggressive dogs & it is not fair to label them as such.
- Additional insurance and muzzles penalize well behaved/socialized dogs and owners of those dogs. Maybe dogs found to pose a threat should be assessed by a behaviourist before the above steps are taken and the owner could pay a fee for the assessment.
- NO breed specific legislation please. It is not effective.
- No Breed Specific Legislation. No additional legislation surrounding any breed of dogs other than "owner Training" for individuals who have a dog who has shown strong aggression.
- Ban them completely
- Too many households in our neighbourhood (Canyon Meadows) have two large dogs in their backyards. Whenever someone walks a dog or dogs in the back lanes, the fenced dogs set up a constant loud barking that goes on and on. And there are some irresponsible owners who simply leave their dogs out all day to bark incessantly when the owners aren't home. That should be illegal.
- you absolutely can not discriminate against pitbulls and pitbull owners. There are far worse nuisance dogs. If you make obedience training mandatory for one breed you had better make it mandatory for every single dog owned in the city. Or perhaps you should make people pass a pet ownership test prior to being allowed to have an animal because the majority of problems with dogs and other pets are because of the owner not the dog

- I was bitten by someone else's pitbull on the street, I sincerely support banning this breed.
- Total ban of "PIT BULL" dogs in Calgary
- Better animal rights that gives them more protection from poor ownership from humans that don't meet their needs... eg. ethering.. leaving outside, guard dogs, dog fights, malnourishment etc.
- It is not the dog's fault. Owners need better training on how to train and care for their pets. People also need more education and to teach their children how to approach dogs.
- More severe penalties for owners with dogs that bite up to and including life time bans from owning dogs. Which should include the small dogs that bite more frequently
- Some sort of education for owner. The owner is usually the problem of the dog's behaviour.
- Bsl is not a solution. Someone's appearance does not determine temperament
- Fines for Nuisance dogs and their owners are required. A breed does not denote behaviour, it's environment and training does. A pitbull is no more aggressive than a golden retriever when raised and trained properly. Unfortunately these breeds are favoured among individuals who want "Guard dogs" and have developed this horrid reputation. Logically this is no different than racist legislation based on preconceived notions that other races are predisposed to some action.
- Big fines for owners of dogs who attack humans or other pets and cause harm.
- Leave it as is. I had pit bulls growing up. It's the owner's fault. Take dog away from. Owner and make owner pay fine for bad parenting
- You are way off base targeting pit bulls. Of the top 23 dog bites in order of bite psi, pit bull is only number 5. Dog Bite psi 1. Kangal 743 psi 2. American Bandogge 735 psi 3. Cane Corso 700 psi 4. Dogge de Bordeaux 556 psi 5. Tosa Inu 556 psi 6. English Mastiff 556 psi 7. Dogo Canario 540 psi 8. Dogo Argentino 500 psi 9. Wolfdog 406 psi 10. Leonberger 399 psi 11. Akita Anu 359-400 psi 12. Rottweiler 328 psi 13. Siberian Husky 320 psi 14. African Wild Dog 317 psi 15. American Bulldog 305 psi 16. Doberman 245 psi 17. German Shepherd 238 psi 18. Great Dane 238 psi 19. American Pitbull 235 psi 20. Labrador Retriever 230 psi 21. Dutch Shepherd 224 psi 22. Chow Chow 220 psi 23. Malinois Dog 195 psi
- I ABSOLUTELY DO NOT agree with any of the statements around pit bulls. This is an appalling question and continues to fan the flames of people believing this breed of dog are scary and bite which is simply NOT TRUE. Pit Bull owners should be able to visit off leash, not have to have separate insurance, not be fined higher etc. All dogs should be treated equally and the owners of nuisance dogs (whatever the breed) should be punished per the bylaw. Honestly this question is awful
- Not punishing the breed. I've been bitten by more small dogs than ever had issues with big dogs. At the dog park we've had to stop more small dogs harassing our dogs than big dogs.
- I do not believe standards should be breed specific
- Ban them.
- Bully breeds are not the issue humans are. If any dogs have anger bred into them it's small dogs, Chihuahua breeds, and other small dogs.

- None of the above. Extreme regulation for no good reason.
- You guys are dicks and dogs shouldn't be punished for their breed, nor should the people who love them. Make the public take a class on how to interact with dogs that don't belong to you instead. Dogs don't just bite for no reason, you know.
- Ban pit bull type dogs altogether. They are simply too dangerous and there will always be irresponsible owners no matter what bylaws are in effect.
- All dogs at off-leash dogs in parks should be required to be neutered.
- This is ridiculous! The issue is not the breed of a dog the issue is a irresponsible owner. I am totally against this!
- No Dog shall be Off-leash in any of the city park of playground and outside of the dog owner property
- Prohibit Pitbull's and other dangerous dogs completely. Destroy them before they destroy a family or young child's life.
- NO BREED SPECIFIC BYLAWS
- Any dog can be a "nuisance" it's how that dog was raised and treated
- A dog that barks at passer-bys in its own yard is not a nuisance
- Would there be a process for an animal to transition from nuisance status to non-nuisance?
- I abhor breed specific legislation when the issue at hand is responsible ownership. All dogs have the potential to be aggressive / a nuisance and regulations should therefore be standardized regardless of breed with owners held accountable after an incident occurs, not before.
- Stop picking on pit bulls. Any dog that is a nuisance should be fined. Not by breed
- Please do not treat so called "pitbulls" as particularly problematic. This term has become a sound bite that triggers an emotional response that is not how public policy ought to be created. All dogs need obedience training. All owners need to be responsible for their dog's behaviour. Focus on the person and their responsibilities.
- The City should provide a virtual course to any dog owners getting a dog license teaching them what behaviors are acceptable/unacceptable. Easy to pick on the Pit bull- how many attacks have we have had relative to other powerful and small breeds? Other powerful breeds should be mentioned.
- Owners should have to have taken extra training how to manage these dogs. This needs to be a part of licensing.
- Ban pit bulls and problem dogs, as the owners can be the problem, fines don't stop a dog from attacking or killing.
- Stop demonizing Pitbulls
- Pit bulls are not the issue, it's the owner's responsibility to train the dog correctly. I do not own one but I have never had an issue with friends dogs or at dog parks
- Ban pitbulls near playgrounds.
- All breeds of dogs that are deemed as "potentially dangerous" because of their aggressive nature must be forbidden in the city of Calgary without excuses by the owners. Aggressive dogs are not human beings: they cannot serve "jail time" or be reprimanded or punished in any way. Adoptions of new aggressive dogs must be banned from the city now, while existing aggressive dogs must be phased out and not replaced without waiting for an accident to happen before extreme measures are taken. The idea of creating "dog courts" is silly, expensive and impractical: courts of law are too busy with human cases before adding "criminal dogs". Crocodile tears by dog owners and by city officials are not accepted after the fact.

- All breeds and crosses should be treated the same. It is about behaviour not breed.
- I take offense to the generalization of pit bulls. Yes they are strong, but they are also extremely smart which makes them victim to people who train them to be vicious. You have generalized that all pit bulls or pit bull type dogs are going to bite someone more often than another breed. Golden Retrievers and Huskys bite more people but we never hear the breed just "dog". There should be an area in the bylaw that reporting on media should include the breed so that people will realize that other dogs attack too. Myself and my pitbull type dog were rushed and almost attacked by 1 golden retriever multiple times because their owners weren't smart enough to put their vicious retriever on a leash. Who would have been blamed for that attack, the retriever who came after us or my sweet and kind pit bull type dog who was protecting me? It seems the minute anyone sees a pit bull there they assume, and unfortunately the human will lie and the dog gets killed for doing what its suppose to do, protect its human from an attacking. Stronger bylaws are needed yea, but it should not reference a specific breed.
- [removed]
- increased enforcement of all pet related bylaws in public spaces
- Please update this poll to define "dangerous behaviour" so your constituents can provide accurate feedback.
- Outlaw pitbulls altogether
- Nothing, this is absurd.
- Owners are the issue, not the breed of dog. Fines for owners who ignore basic ownership bylaws are where you should be enforcing. Dogs outside in yards in distress, owners not picking up after their dogs. Owners walking dogs off leash in on leash areas. Etc.
- Targeting a breed(s) is not the right way to go. Targeting nuisance dogs deals with the troublesome dogs/owners which is where the problem lies
- No breed specific legislation. The logic for pitbulls being singled out here doesn't even check out. Many other dogs can do very serious damage and do so more frequently than pitbulls.
- Make the owners with ANY "nuisance" dog go to training. It is 95% NOT THE DOG!! It is a result of lack of dog knowledge and training.
- Targeting one breed or type of dog is not the answer, there are many other breeds that can cause issues so targeting nuisance dogs and working with their owners is the right approach
- Stop allowing children under 12 to handle dogs in public unsupervised by an adult.
- Breed specific legislation is not appropriate.
- Spay/nueter existing and a complete ban on new pit bulls and associated genetically similar mixed breeds.

- Training of animals and responsible owners are the key. If a person trains their dog to be aggressive the owner should face hefty fines, Kids need to be taught warning signs that dogs will show and little ones need to be watched. (stay off your phones)
- We need to keep in mind that it is the owners and how they raise it, not the dog breed. Courses tied to raising and training the specific breed will only work if the owner follows what they learn. It's not fair to punish the dog, but the stigma is out there now because of this issue brought to light.
- Pit Bulls and Nuisance dogs cannot be in or around playgrounds or children's facilities without a muzzle.
- Once declared dangerous they should have to go to training. Maybe this way, people will take more responsibility before buying a dog. Not all dogs are bad.
- None, pit bulls are an amazing breed.
- Don't make breed specific bylaws!! Blame bad owners, majority of issues stem from poor breed knowledge/training by the owner not the dog. This is why German Shepherd, Rottweiler, Dobermans and bully breeds have all gotten a bad reputation over the years!
- Please don't implement breed specific measures.
- I don't own a pit bull, and probably never will, but you're delusional if you think it's a dog's fault and not the owner. Bad dogs come in all breeds.
- "Nuisance" dogs are not AT ALL breed specific. My suggestion is to not create such close minded rules about pit bulls.
- Ban Pitbulls they are dangerous my friends own pitbull attacked her and put her in the hospital
- No change. It should not be breed specific. That is unfair and almost like being racist. The most vicious dogs are small breeds in my opinion.
- BSL is a proven failure around the world
- Pitbull's should be illegal to own like in Ontario
- Implementing any form of BSL is a sure fire way to polarize the city [personal information removed] BSL has been proven a failure the world over STOP Look to Toronto not. Only have bites increased so has severity BSL is nothing but flawed legislation that placates the stupid and uninformed
- In an Alberta tourist town there is a Shepard breed dog with multiple "offences". The local authorities require the one dog, as this was handled on a case by case basis, to be muzzled when off property and the owners are required to have a "vicious dog" sign with photos visible on their property.
- We should not discriminate by breed all dogs bite not just pitbulls
- Breed specific laws are not effective. Years ago it was German Shepards that were considered nuisance dogs. Breeds don't determine anything, everything is based on how the dog is raised.
- Treat all dogs the same and stop putting pit bulls in a different class. This is absolutely retarded what Calgary is trying to impose!!!
- Calgary should not have breed specific by laws. There are many other types of dogs that also attack.
- I disagree with this.. if the dog is mean, then yes.. however the owner needs to be held responsible.. It is not the breed it is the owner. People need to wake up and do their homework.. before making these bylaws.. As for a dog barking, that is what they do to alert the owners that something is going on around them.. I would worry more about making the City safe from all the criminals before worrying about a Pit bull dog.. City council really needs to get their heads screwed on..

- None of these; I'm applaud by the city of Calgary for stopping this low.
- I find it ridiculous in the highest regard to single out Pit bulls. I have never in my life seen a pit bull exhibit any more hostility than any other dog in the same situation. I've always only ever seen them be tolerant and more loving than all other breeds. I have never heard of anyone in my personal life being bitten by a pit bull, but have heard of countless other stories of bites from "lap dogs" and dogs considered to be gentler breeds.
- You should have to have a license to have a pitbull.
- Fines for off-leash animals should be significant. Same with for not picking up animal waste. Both pose a hazard to human and other animal health. Off-leash or roaming dogs overwhelming, mauling and harassing owners and on-leash dogs cause stress, dog trauma and injuries so fines should be 1000 dollars or more to encourage people to leash pets.
- Ban pit bulls
- If a dog is wearing a mussel and not allowed in off leash public spaces it will fail to develop proper social skills therefore this is counterintuitive as you are creating a potentially aggressive dog. This goes for all dogs and is not discriminatory to pit bulls. This suggestion is based on a lack of research and education and is harmful to both animals and people alike.
- Let the dogs be.
- Require the city to investigate "nuisance" dog owners since dogs are taught violence, not born violent
- No, to breed specific legislation. Affordable positive reinforcement training.
- If a dog is dangerous it should be based on that dogs actions and not what breed it is. [removed] Therefore there should not be biased laws based on breed. [DUPLICATE]
- Proper investigation on attacks. false accusations on city registered dogs deter owners from registering their pets if they will be incorrectly blamed due to location/proximity alone.
- Less picking on pitbulls. Dog owner are the ones that make nuisance dogs.
- Prohibiting owning pit bulls
- There is no distinction between a pitbull and any other dog, the only difference are their owners punish them not the animal.
- I think there are other breeds that should be considered for this special attention?
- I feel it is playing into the discrimination against pit bulls to specify them when there are definitely other dogs with a higher bite force that are not being pointed out.
- Target bad owners and stop villifying based on breed. I've been bitten numerous times by small dogs, I have NEVER had a pit bull act aggressively towards me.
- stop considering pit bulls to be aggressive animals.
- There are many nuisance dogs. This seems unfairly set against pit bulls even though as stated above they are not proven to bite more. I think the focus needs to be on bad owners and known aggressive dogs rather than breed specific bylaws.
- Stop discriminating dogs by breed, you ignorant bureaucrats.

- More fines and harsher penalties for all owners. What about little dogs that bite? What about higher fines for people who's dogs bite or show aggression... there are no bad dogs. Just bad owners.
- Higher fines for repeat offenders (the owners, not the dogs!), treats for good dogs, including pitbulls.
- We do not support breed specific penalties. We do however support penalties for dogs that have had documented behaviour concerns in the past.
- Registration and behaviour assessment of all pit bulls
- The use of nuisance is misleading and lacking. for being at large, was the dog bothering anyone or being invasive? for noise, that they bark, or whine, or yip. is this only while in public spaces, in residence yard, inside residence? "Exhibits dangerous behaviour" was someone walking passed their yard and they bared teeth, were they in an off leash, was there another dog or action that caused a natural defensive reflex.
- None as there are effective measure already been taken by other parts of the world. I'm sure Calgary can find something better.
- [personal information removed]
- Stricter rules for adoption of dogs as owners are the true source of many dog problems and abuse.
- NONE!!!!!!!!!! BREED DISCRIMINATION IS CRUEL ITS THE OWNERS NOT THE BREEDS
- ITS NOT THE DOG BUT THE OWNER! Owner should be muzzled and jailed!
- I do not support any of the above measures. There are bad owners and people with irrational fear of dogs. Each and every incident and dog should be assessed on its merits regardless of breed. If there is a bite, the owner should be evaluated for competence and fitness to own a dog. There are no bad dogs, only bad/mismatched owners. A fitness test should be a requirement to own a dog.
- Ban pit bulls
- Breed neutral bylaws
- Punish the owner not the breed
- dog owners who are declared unstable, mentaly ill or dangerouse to the public should have dog taken and put in a shelter for adoption to a better pet owner.
- Dog owner training. It's not the dogs fault. It's the owner. Education for owners and obedience training for owners. Low cost if dny
- All dogs nuisance dogs. Its how they are trained.
- Don't discriminate against pit-bull-like dogs! Bylaws to protect citizens are understandable, but breed specific bylaws only creat more fear of a breed that does not deserve to be discriminated against!
- Consider banning pit bulls
- Obedience training should be required for all dogs not breed specific
- I think that the first offence, the owner should recieve a review about their breed of dog, seeing as how ALL dogs can be labeled as a "nuisance" regardless of breed (eg. Pitbull, rotwiler, Chihuahua, chow, bullmastif, boxer, great dane....)
- It's about the dogs environment, not about the breed of dog.
- It is absolutely outrageous to be so specific about the breed of a dog when it has been explicitly proven to be an ineffective way to distinguish a dangerous dog. If the City of Calgary passes breed specific legislation, it is not a city in which I would like to live.

- Responsible ownership. BSL is proven ineffective and very costly to taxpayers.
- Limitations (like muzzles) for nuisance dogs that bite or exhibit dangerous behaviour (but not for dogs that bark, or dogs whose owners don't clean up after them; they aren't dangerous)
- Non of the above. Respectfully i do not believe pit bulls should be treated any differently than other breeds.
- No breed specific laws, deal with the dog causing an issue or problem.
- It's not the dogs who need the training, it's the people. Nuisance dogs are a product of their environment. Case by case. You cannot discriminate against pit bulls. It's the PEOPLE, not the Pitbull. Come on you guys.THINK!
- Review all off leash parks for pedestrians being harrassed by dogs not under control.
- one could make owning a pit bull a lot harder than just getting buying/adopting one. A test or interview could help limit the amount of poor pit bull owners. No BSL
- People who are found to not be treating their dogs correctly or do not train them correctly are given higher fines or jail time. Punish the owners, not the breed.
- Breed neutral bylaws only. No BSL!!
- Any breed, or size of dog, should be held at the same standars when inforcing any bylaw, including nucance, bites etc.
- Ban the breeding of pit bulls. Most of this wording is too ambiguous to say yes or no to. Purebred of the listed breeds should not be allowed in dog parks, but mixes should be permitted (although breeding of pit bull mixes should be outlawed as well). Many people that buy pit bulls want a 'tough' dog, so requiring obedience training would be ideal.
- I have been at off leads several times and have found many well behaved pit bulls. And other breed or mixed breed dogs have been aggressive... (for example huskies and the owner was aware and continued to take the pair of dogs to the off lead. it is not breed specific.
- Breed specific legislation does not solve the problem and is discriminatory.
- How will you make sure owners of nuisance dogs take them to obedience or have extra insurance? The owner often determines the dog's behavior, not the breed of dog. What about dog breeders re number of pit bulls in a household?
- Require special licensing for pit bulls. The licensing requires the owner to produce proof of increased insurance, and requires the owner to attend a series of responsible owner workshops/classes. There are other very dangerous dogs that should be included in this. Akitas certainly should be.
- Maybe people should have to complete training in order to own that breed or prove they can ve a reponsivle pet owner as it not a breed issue it a bad owner issue
- Strongly against any Breed specific legislation or discrimination. The responsibility is and always should be on the pet owners. BSL has been repeatedly proven to be ineffective. Calgary should continue with it's already excellent pet bylaws.
- TRAIN THE OWNERS TO BEHAVE, IT IS NOT OFTEN THE DOG'S FAULT!!!!
- Education on responsible pet ownership. Education on K9 body language. It is the responsibility of the owner not the individual dog to ensure public and their pet are safe.

- Pit bulls are nice animals, their owners are the problem. They need love just as much as any other dog. Cracking down on one specific breed makes no sense. Dogs in general need to be looked after. Pit bulls just happen to be stronger than other breeds that are hereditarily more violent and bite much more frequently but you just don't hear about it as much.
- Training for pet owners to effectively manage their pets
- Calgary needs to actively enforce leash by laws. Every day I see unleashed dogs in areas where they need to be leashed. This is what causes potential issues. Not a specific breed. Get more by law enforcing this. I see ppl everyday walk by my house with their dogs off leash. Pooping, running up to my gate antagonizing my dog.. guess what.. I own a bully breed and I'm responsible. Every breed under the sun I've seen off leash except for bully breeds. Calgary has too many entitled ppl who don't follow simple by laws. Don't enforce BSL. Enforce responsible dog ownership. That begins with leashing your dogs.
- This discrimination towards pit bulls is absolutely uncalled for and unfair. All dog breeds should be treated equal and the responsibility/liability should fall on the owners. Witnessing more bites, aggression and problems from smaller dog breeds is absolutely more of a nuisance than any pit bull type dog that I've met or seen. The City of Calgary should be ashamed of themselves for pushing this.
- Stop targeting Pitbull breeds!!! I have three currently and they are well behaved, socialized, kind and literally just couch potatoes who prefer a cuddle over anything else in the world. I know pit bulls who are dangerous. I know shepherds, huskies, st bernards, and more than any other dog breed, I know humans who are dangerous! Do not single out those that are innocent and have committed no crime Just based on the colour of their fur and look of their face!!!
- BSL has been proven not to be effective - I do NOT support any BSL
- The City of Calgary should not be categorizing dogs in regards to their physical appearance, such as "pitbull" type dogs. Doing so will not prevent "nuisance" dogs or lower the number of bite incidents whether it involves a "pitbull" or not. Any breed/mix of dog has the potential and ability to bite and cause severe damage if it wants. By putting breed restrictions in place against "pitbulls" and responsible dog owners who own these breeds, you are just allowing irresponsible dog owners to continue being irresponsible and not held accountable. BSL is not the answer, but education is!! In order to prevent situations (such as bite incidents, dogs at large, etc.) from happening, we need to educate and provide resources to all dog owners and the general public. Why doesn't the city provide incentives such as when an individual licenses their dog(s), if they can provide a valid training certificate, they get a reduced fee (similar to if your dog is spayed/neutered). If they can't provide that then should be provided with a list of training programs within Calgary and the opportunity to get a fee reduction in the future. Calgary has always been a leader within the dog community and that is something we should strive to continue. We have a countless number of successful and certified dog training programs, dog daycare facilities, walking services, ambassadors etc. Therefore we have the resources and people to help educate and work with the city. BSL is not the solution and it is extremely disappointing that it is even up for debate.

- Discriminating against pitbulls because their bite is stronger is like fining the buff person in a fight higher because he's buff -they're both [removed]. Puppy mills should be illegal, breeding dogs should be illegal.
- This is extreme discrimination. This has happened in the past with other breeds and this is unjust. It's not the dogs fault, rather the owner. However, discriminating against an entire breed is wrong - this happened with people in the past and we know it is wrong. Shame on your for considering this at all.
- Obedience training mandatory for new owners for all types of dogs unless can prove dog behaviour or knowledge of the breed.
- I do not support BSL
- I think pit bulls shouldn't need any of these rules there harmless animals, no need to muzzle as long as there is proper training from the owner the dog should be fine at any public setting.
- Stop BSL please
- Ban Pit Bulls. Protect kids. The blood of every maimed child or adult is on your hands.
- Status quo. If we don't have responsible owners, it doesn't matter what breed they are. Creating sever punishment will just increase the stray dogs that a both a nuisance and/or pit bulls because you are making it impossible to own one without exorbitant costs.
- The definition of a nuisance dog above includes "noise" - this is highly subjective and depends on if the neighbours have a reasonable tolerance for dogs that may bark at times. I don't think suddenly requiring them to be muzzled in public spaces makes sense. If they are known to bite, fine, but the definition is too loose as it stands now. I also do not agree with 'dogs that are substantially similar' to pit-bulls, that sounds like a complicated nightmare to enforce and subjective.
- no BSL.
- Please define "bite". Once I was told that a "scare" or a lunge constitutes a "bite" and I want to be aware of the actual offence. For my own protection and also for that of my dogs in case someone tries to falsely claim an offence. And also for myself in case of a dog getting to up in my face.
- We all deserve the right to feel safe walking our dogs in the park. The city needs to Increase the fines dangerous dog and owners that have their dogs off leash. No one enjoys having a dog run up to you even if they don't attack. There is not enough bylaw patrols to give out fines. Fines are the only way people learn.
- Obedience training for all dogs results in lower cost for licensing during the first year.
- the penalties should be to all breeds, bad owners, not bad dogs
- Bylaws and rules that apply to ALL nuisance dogs. It is not breed specific.
- Training for the owner on how to be a responsible dog owner.
- Pitbulls should be totally banned in Calgary, NO exceptions. Nuisance animals who have a history of biting should be euthanized.
- Don't make breed specific, focus on the dogs behaviour and the owner.
- Massive fines for owner as Pit bulls and NOT dangerous by nature and learn from abuse by humans. Also do massive investigation on who was bitten and if there is a history with this person.

Dogs will growl as a warning to be left alone when being abused then will bite when warning is ignored.

- I agree to nuisance dogs having more restrictions, I do not agree with breed specific restrictions or punishments
- Dogs with a previous complaint about biting, attacking, vicious behaviour, not just noise, etc., should be on a short leash (3 feet), muzzled in public and not allowed in off-leash parks.
- Breed neutral regulations that are evidence based, pitbulls are not the strongest dogs, all large breed dogs can inherently inflict harm due to larger size. This is discriminatory and does not prevent dog bites.
- I think a lot of these measures are superficial and don't really address the problem. #1 - not all pitbulls are dangerous. Some of them are gentle. Why would they need to be muzzled, or why would their owners pay extra insurance? Obedience training should be a must for all dogs (not through bylaws though) - there are some pretty bad other "friendly" breeds that misbehave because their owners did not train them at all. Also I have concerns with singling out one breed. It's pit bulls today, Akitas tomorrow? This worries me as we own two Akitas. While one of them does have aggression towards male dogs, he is a sweetie with humans, children and female dogs. We've learnt to manage him and muzzle him in the presence of male dogs. Because of his dominant behaviour, he has been attacked by other male dogs who were neither pit bulls nor Akitas a number of times (when not starting the fight), and we had to cover vet fees. Our second Akita is friendly with absolutely everyone, zero aggression, and she runs towards everyone, humans and dogs, to give them some kisses. Which goes completely against the stereotype of Akitas. Responsible pet ownership should be enforced with all dog owners regardless of the breed. Also obedience training does not guarantee no future trouble for a dog. Our male Akita was the perfect student "in school" but outside he is still very independent-minded by nature. What should be mandatory is the "canine communication" courses for ALL dog owners. This could prevent a lot of incidents. Finally, there needs to be more responsibility for people falsely accusing dogs and owners of aggression. I had a pretty nasty shouting incident once in my neighbourhood off leash park because my dogs, peacefully playing with each other and her dog, were accused of attacking her. They were nowhere near the woman, and she was just fearful of their size. She threatened to kick them and report to 311, while filming me with her iPhone. This is not acceptable behaviour. Her husband did apologize to us later. Another time my dog got into a fight with another dog (our fault), and the dog owner accused him of biting her. When I asked about the details she didn't give me any, there were no signs of a bite and he had never ever exhibited aggression to humans. It is important that when any accusations are made, they are followed up with specifics and dialog. Only this way we can prevent bad incidents and having nuisance dogs, or having dogs declared as nuisance dogs unnecessarily. Seizing a dog by the City without a thorough investigation is completely unacceptable in my mind. To us our dogs are family. Would you seize someone's child without an investigation?
- I take SEVERE offence to pit bulls being targeted. I have been attacked by minpins, Pomeranians, and other small dogs but NEVER a pit bull or other large dog. It's sickening that they are targeted instead of the little land sharks, as vets call the small dogs

- Individual dogs can be dangerous. The breed of the dog does not pre-determine whether it is dangerous or not. The proposed Bylaw language indicates that "ALL pitbull- looking" dogs and bull breeds are being designated as dangerous. This is ridiculous. Take out all references to pitbull/bullbreeds. There is NO evidence that they, as a breed, they are more dangerous than other breeds.
- Pit Bulls have been shown time and time again to have aggressive tendencies/outbursts that are unpredictable. This is built into their genes. Just like how other dogs have instincts to herd, pitbulls have instincts to kill. They're fine until they're not. Why put the public at risk and people's safety in the hands of negligent dog owners?
- Do not single out any one breed of dog for required training or punishment. Punish the individual animal not a breed
- increased fines & requirements to keep dogs at home if they are found in public places running at large in a pack.
- its not fair to single out pit bulls. Any dog can be a nuisance, its the owners. All dogs should be treated fairly. The rule should be unless your dog is obedient, it should not be off leash. I also feel that pet owners should not gather to talk while they are not paying attention to their dogs. They go to socialize but dont pay attention to what their dogs are doing... ie, being a nuisance, poop with no scoop, but its not fair to single out a breed. The onus should be on the pet owner of all dogs!
- Concentrate on the problem owners and dogs, don't paint all of one breed with the same brush.
- Ban bully breeds
- Education and training for the owners
- Don't have a problem with pit bulls in general. While more people that want a "vicious" dog get them, it's really about the training, they can be good dogs. Punish the behavior, not the breeds.
- The problem is the owner, not the dog. If a person's dog is uncontrollable, the owner is to blame and they should be fined and made to take obedience classes, or never own dogs.
- All dogs required to be off leash when off their property ALL dog owners are required to go through basic obedience training within 1 year of getting ANY dog
- We should not be singling out any breed. We should be administering and controlling the behavior of the owners. If a dog becomes a 'nuisance' it's because the owner has not taken the appropriate action to control that animal's behaviour.
- Its not the pitbulls, its the owner's. There should be restrictions and criteria for people who own those type of dogs. I know a few pitbulls who are lovely dogs.
- I am quite supportive of the specific next steps/escalation of response based on # of offenses for ALL nuisance dogs (regarless of breed, shouldn't only be specific to pitbulls)
- I've always thought of Calgary as an intelligent city that leads by example. Breed specific legislation is not ok. I only support legislation that will address animals that are deemed to be a nuisance. Calgary should uphold itself to a higher community standard.
- It shouldn't be breed specific. If a dog is a nuisance it should be held accountable, no matter what breed.

- Pit bulls are not the problem. I have been bitten almost bitten by small dogs, not at all by pit bulls of any types. The owners are the problem. Dogs are dogs but mostly the problem dogs that attack/bite/chase or due to their owners and the training they receive. Very unfair and unnecessary to put the restrictions on pit bull types of dog. I know pit bulls and mix breeds with bully to be very gentle and loving, never bitten as their owners have trained them well. Would be willing to look at increasing rules for specific dogs if they have bitten. All dogs to be treated equal until they have done wrong, and then fines/results same for any breed
- Public disclosure on nuisance dogs and owners/addresses
- If the dog is a nuisance, it's a nuisance. Breed has nothing to do with it. It's inappropriate to legislate based on appearance. This is akin to racism.
- Muzzling dogs might be a problem for them being able to defend themselves if they are attacked. But, pit bulls need to be banned.
- Any breed that has offended due to aggression should have restrictions, just like humans that offend
- None of the above are reasonable
- Stop targeting individual breeds for legislation when it is purely owner/trainer responsibility.
- Obedience training should be required for any dog, no matter their breed or history of behaviour
- Your questions are not helpful. Obedience training should be required for ALL dogs, regardless of breed. There are too many completely ignorant owners. Pit bulls SHOULD NOT BE SINGLED OUT in this survey.
- Term and definition of a nuisance dog is NOT labelled to one dog breed. ALL dogs and owners should be assessed and not just one specific breed but every one. It is on the owner and not the dog.
- BSL is proven to be ineffective. Any restrictions should be on a case by case basis. Pit bulls are some of the most loving and gentle dogs and putting in BSL restrictions on them is ridiculous. I DO NOT SUPPORT BSL AGAINST PIT BULLS OR ANY OTHER BREED.
- It is never okay to discriminate against any specific breed of dog. A dog bite is a dog bite, all bad dogs are not pitbulls. If a dog misbehaves it is always the owner that should be punished. If the owner is mistreating their animal creating a mean dog, they should be banned from ever owning another dog. Their dog should be rescued and re-trained.
- Invest in public awareness campaign to support nuisance prevention, better dog ownership, as well as educating Calgarians on the fact that dangerous behaviour isn't breed specific. Perhaps this could be a joint campaign with an organization like the Calgary Humane Society?
- Completely ridiculous to single out "pitbulls", whoever came up with this idea has no idea what they are doing and no knowledge of dogs, dog breeds and dog behavior. Ridiculous garbage again from the city of Calgary
- Regulations regarding breeding in an effort to discourage 'backyard breeding'. Obedience training should be required for most, if not all, breeds
- All breeds can be dangerous. Just a dangerous dog bylaw needs to be implemented, not just Bull breed type. We've had much more success with a dangerous dog bylaw.

- I would want to see the mandatory obedience training before higher fines for nuisance dogs (fines should be a last resort whereas obedience training may give an opportunity to actually change the nuisance behaviour)
- Pit bull owners must have training. Pit bulls aren't born bad, their owners MAKE or TEACH them the bad behaviour. Let's train the humans not punish the dog.
- I don't agree with all the extra bylaws for pit bull type dogs. These rules should apply to all dogs as science and professionals have already stated that breed identification is extremely difficult and that pit bulls scored higher in testing to not attack vs other breeds conducted by the CDC
- No breed specific legislation
- Mandatory training classes for all ticketable offenses including nuisance dogs or bites
- There are several issues with the above measures. Pit Bull is not a breed. American Pit Bull Terrier, American Staffordshire Terrier and Staffordshire Bull Terrier are the breeds that make up the umbrella of "Pit Bull". These breeds are not more inherently dangerous than any other breed of dog, nor is their strength higher than any other breed of dog. With your own description of "nuisance" behaviour, I'm not sure why noise or running at large would warrant a dog being muzzled. These issues of nuisance are a direct result of an owner's lack of responsibility, having the dog muzzled does not change that. What does Calgary Community Standards deem as dangerous behaviour?
- Dog should not be judged based off of their breeds. Period. End bsl.
- NOT ALL PITBULLS ARE BAD IT IS THE OWNER THAT TEACHES THAT BEHAVIOUR!!! DO NOT PUT IN ANY LAWS ONLY FOR PITBULLS!
- a distinction should be made between vicious vs nuisance dogs... i support vicious dogs not being allowed off leash... but if a dog is "nuisance" due to barking - it does not need a muzzle. I do not support breed specific legislation. People who have nuisance dogs should perhaps be required to go through a training program
- Calgary needs to revamp and enforce the owners who don't leash their dogs. I just moved here and I'm astounded at the amount of ppl who let their dogs walk/run off leash. I'd say 8 out of 10. These dogs run up to my leashed dog and then there is an issue. It's not the breed it's an irresponsible owner issue and Calgary needs to address that not BSL
- Ban Pit Bulls Completely
- Always seize dogs exhibiting dangerous behaviour immediately.
- I am really not understanding why pit bulls are listed separately. Nuisance dogs, absolutely. Breed should not be listed.
- I'm surprised that YYC is being breed specific despite all of the research world wide that clearly shows bites/aggressive behaviour is an owner issue more than breed issue. Aggressive people are drawn to "protective; assertive" breeds & sadly often mistreat them as do the breeders/puppy mills - both from birth or a young age setting these dogs up for failure. Target that. Target training (not just puppy classes). Target buying all animals off of Kijiji - etc. YYC is way behind in attitudes & initiatives in these regards.
- No government action required

- Stop breed specific, don't punish the animals for bad owners, I believe that it's individual case to case that we need to review not the breed.
- Dogs must be seized for bites and severe bites such as bites to face, or requiring stitches must be destroyed, all dogs on second offense must be destroyed e must be destroyed
- Muzzling a dog can put it in danger if it's attacked by other dogs.
- If any bylaw amendments are targeted to nuisance dogs, they need to be tailored to the offences that caused the label to be applied. For example, a noisy dog does not need more insurance. And, a wanderer is unlikely to stay put with obedience training. Don't target nuisance dogs with bylaws just for the deterrent effect.
- No pit bulls at all!
- The way you have defined nuisance (running at large or noise) - why would you muzzle this dog?
- Mandatory obedience / leadership training for owners of nuisance dogs. Often it is not the dog that is the source of the problem, its owners who do not comprehend animal body language and as a result, they do not accurately anticipate and prevent a dog's behavior from becoming a nuisance. Although I have no desire to own an overly-muscular breed within the city limits, I am not afraid of those breeds of dog's I am, however, concerned about the lack of awareness exhibited by many dog owners when they bring their dogs to off-leash parks.
- None of these
- No laws based on breed.. Dog on dog attacks should be investigated for both dogs temperament . Many small dogs are extremely aggressive Unfortunately when they exert that on a larger breed the results usually look like the big dog was the bad dog.
- Put potential dog owners through testing before buying a dog, dogs model owner behaviour
- Why is only one breed being pinpointed especially when you look at bite stats in Canada which pit bulls, which by the way, include a vast number of breeds. I think all dog owners whose dogs are a nuisance should be obligated to do training regardless of breed. Breed specific legislation has never worked. It's time that all dog owners regardless of breed take responsibility.
- Owners of dogs behaving irresponsibly must be penalised, including being required to pay for training (of both owner and dog) up to being forbidden to own dogs.
- Higher fines for any dog owner who is not exhibiting responsible pet ownership, despite the breed of dog.
- I do not agree with BSL. It has been proven that it does not work. Let's hold individuals accountable instead of a group with similar characteristics
- I don't think the problem is with the Pit bull race. It is a problem with the way the dog has been cared for and trained.
- You are totally out of line tageting the dog and not the owner.
- I believe the city should have the right to apply restrictions on dogs that have bitten only. This should not be placed on a dog based upon the breed. Deal with dogs and their owner based solely on any incidents of biting. Having said that, there should be investigation to figure out circumstances on why a dog has biten. This view seem like common sense and doesn't discriminate dogs or owners.

- I have worked for many years with rescue animals. I do not think there is a clear set of rules about pitties. The clear majority I have met, have been very sweet lovely dogs. I have met a much larger number of very aggressive chow chows. That said, pitbulls are a breed that some individuals with certain negative personality traits are drawn to. My dog was attacked by a pit bull that launched itself across the elbow river. The other dog was known to be aggressive, had a muzzle order, had attacked other dogs. Yet, it was unmuzzled and off leash. The dog was owned by an individual who freely admitted to me they had recently gotten out of jail for murder. When I asked them to pay for our vet bills my family was threatened. There are many responsible, level headed owners of pitbulls. Those dogs do not concern me. Any dog owned by a man like I had the displeasure to meet concerns me.
- Not supportive of breed specific bylaws; behaviour of the dog, regardless of breed, and the owner should be the main deciding factor.
- Lots of pitty cross breeds out there!!! Not fair!!! I was half an hour
- Free training to dog owners offered in ALL adoptions of a dog. Humans are the problem, not the animals. We've caused fear, hurt and pain. How would you act if your guardian conditioned you in terrible ways? Mandatory training for owners in first offense. Second offense, community service, fine and a warning that the third offence the animal gets taken away.
- All pit bulls must be bred and purchased from a registered CKC breeder. All other non-registered pit bulls when located must be neutered, spayed or euthanized, depending on each individual case. No exceptions !
- Owners should pay for the vet bills if their dog is responsible for injuries.
- I believe proper training should be considered because it's not the breed it's the training and the owners fault
- NOOOOO breed specific legislation please! these dogs are not the problem. the owners are..
- Refusing ownership of ANY breeds to owners who have broken these laws or needed more than X fines about nuisance dogs
- Breed discrimination is unacceptable (i.e., singling out pit bulls); the same expectations of responsible pet ownership and by-laws should apply equally to ALL breeds and pet owners.
- Just leave the poor dogs alone, Pit Bulls are actually really friendly.
- Stop using the tag pit-bull....this is unfair, wrong and as a life long dog owner - I know labs and wee dogs bit more however is NOT covered in the news nor reported.
- A dog is a dog. If a chihuahua bites it should be dealt with the exact same as if a pit bull bites because the fault for both falls squarely on the owner. A dog should not be branded as anything - good or bad - before it has done anything to anybody. End BSL.
- Obediance training for owners of pit bulls and other dogs declared to be a nuisance. Dogs involved in more than one offence should be euthanized.
- This is an extremely bias survey which is intended to produce a particular outcome. Would you please stop singling out one breed.
- Outright ban; no grandfathering; punitive fines and seizure of all "pit bulls". There is no place for these animals in the city.

- The options above are reactive; YYC needs to be proactive. Educate OWNERS about dog behavior, humane & effective training methods, fulfilling an animal's physical & emotional needs so "nuisance" behaviors are minimized, REQUIRE spay/neuter. REQUIRE licenses to BREED animals!! Prohibit nuisance people from pet ownership, either temporarily or for life. I worry if I select any of the above options, my selection will just be tallied in overall results. I believe in education. I believe pet ownership is a PRIVILEGE, not a RIGHT.
- What's with the attack against 'pit bulls' only. I've had more aggressive behaviour shown from little dogs and retrievers when walking along off-leash pathways in my neighbourhood. So STOP attacking and singling out one breed only for the bylaws above.
- Any dog REGARDLESS of breed that has bitten or cause any type of problem should be held responsible through Bylaw and be fined. And responsible for any damages.
- I do not believe 'pit bulls' should be singled out. They are for the most part a wonderful family dog.
- full enforcement of leash rules in all areas of the City - no warnings! If a dog is off your property and not in a designated off-leash area, the owner should get at least a $500 fine.
- We have a 'pit bull' that is a big sucky baby. You should be ashamed you are even considering implementing some of these bylaws. I have been bitten by a jack Russell terrier twice, plans on having restrictions against that breed as well?
- I think there should be a difference between dogs that are violent and dogs that are noisy or tend to get out of their yard and roam. To group both together does not make sense. A violent dog should be muzzled in public but not one that barks too much.
- Some certification/evidence of training that must be provided to access off leash parks for all dogs
- Education of Calgarians - this is not a valid response, [removed] this is ignorance and fear driven reactivity you are proposing....please educate people not limit or punish the animals
- Obedience training should be required for all dogs, especially smaller breeds, chihuahuas and such.
- The breed is not the issue. It is the owner. Do not single out a breed based on bias and subjective perspectives
- Please don't have breed specific legislation. Equal rights and responsibilities for all Canadian pet owners is the direction to move in. Inclusivity.
- obedience training should be required for ALL dogs. Dog ownership should require license regardless of breed.
- Need to clarify what is meant by 'multiple offences' (2? 10?). I assume the above rules only apply to dogs (including Pitbulls) who are ACTUALLY deemed a nuisance.
- Ban bit pulls from living in the city.
- More liability needs to be on the owners and not the animal. We also need to look to the public to be smart about dogs and interacting with them. Many children get bit by petting a dog when they have been told not to or they pet a dog without permission. Teasing dogs through fences as well should also be looked at, as this increases chances for a dog to bite.
- I feel just declaring pit bulls as a problem is too narrow. All dogs over a certain size have the chance to seriously injure someone. So that chance should be removed by requiring all dogs over a certain height and weight to be muzzled. Even if the dog is on the owner's yard.

- There is no need to identify specific breeds! I remember when German Shepherds were the problem, then Dobermans, then Rottweillers.... The bylaw should not identify a specific breed!
- A law where pit bulls are to be treated as any other dog.
- Holding owners accountable for dogs behaviour. Have a demerit system. 3 strikes and that individual can no longer own a dog.
- The above measures as they are posed are too vague in some cases to answer affirmatively especially since the term “nuisance” appears to cover a range of behavior, with no explanation as to what the “etc.” refers to. By the City’s own definition, if I understand correctly, a dog cited for the offence of noise (not aggression) could possibly not be allowed in off-leash dog parks and/or be faced with being muzzled in public or at dog parks? I do agree a dog that has demonstrated aggressive tendencies should be leashed regardless of whether in public or off-leash park and regardless of breed. Shouldn’t a muzzle approach be considered on a case-by –case basis, regardless of breed? Should this bylaw be passed, what, if any exceptions would be in place for owners of pit bulls who are visiting friends or relatives in the City of Calgary with a pit bull? Would one expect that a dog who has never in its life been subjected to wearing a muzzle, now have to wear one? Would the City look at offering programs on responsible pet ownership and education for the public? A requirement that pit bulls be muzzled (without any prior relevant aggressive behavior) in public and off-leash dog parks, will only contribute to perpetuating fear and thus, will further unfairly malign these dogs.
- Punishing (or euthanising) the offending dog is NOT a solution. The owners of nuisance or vicious dogs should be held responsible. For example, if a dog owner needs to use a prong collar to control their dog, that dog owner should never have their dog off-leash.
- Do not discriminate by breed my dog has been attacked and I have been attacked by a number of dogs and never a “pit bull” or other bully breed. German Shepard’s have attacked my much smaller dog and drew blood with a huge gash to his head. Other mixed breed large dogs have attacked him and once myself and bit my knee.
- Some pets owners are defiant and want to dictate the rules and the city have been fickle to stand up and take stronger control and protection of citizens.
- I highly disagree with almost all of these options and obedience training should be standard for any dog no matter the breed
- Please do not single out pitbulls, leave it at nuisance dogs.
- There should be clarity around nuisance dog; a dog who barks a lot in their secure yard should not be treated the same as a dog who is regularly roaming at large or threatening other animals
- Irresponsible dog owners should be severely fined and banned from owning any pets for 10 years.
- Pitt bulls are never the problem. Bad humans are the problem.
- Pit bulls are fine as same as any other day. This is BS slander towards this breed
- Its not the breed, its the owner's dangerous behaviour towards any breed that causes exhibiting dangerous behaviour of the dog. Obedience training should be required/law for homeowners and must pass a test before owning certain breeds.

- Aggressive dogs should not be tolerated in any public area. Any offence should be regarded as an extension of the owner's behavior, and the owner should be dealt with to the full extent of the law as though he/she had committed the offence personally.
- I don't think we should discriminate against Pit Bulls in general as all breeds can be aggressive.
- I don't support breed-specific legislation. Need better defining of nuisance behaviour. If nuisance behaviour includes running at large, does that mean that dog can't run in an off-leash park?
- Training and education should be a requirement for the humans.
- More information is required in order for dogs to be declared a nuisance. Who is making this determination? Someone unfamiliar with dog language could perceive a dog as displaying aggressive behavior when it could be playing. And Breed specific legislation doesn't work [personal information removed] Please don't go backwards and let's punish the deed, not the breed. BSL is canine racism and singling out breeds is such a narrow minded approach to a city that touts diversity.
- Obedience training required before issue of any dog license. Training must be updated every 2 years. Cost of such training is to be the responsibility of the person(s) applying for the license.
- No special measures just for pitbulls - that's ridiculous and completely biased. No additional insurance fees either - puts cases in a box too much and does not allow for case by case discretion
- Making laws about different dog breeds is the same as making laws about different races. Each individual animal is different and to just assume a breed is aggressive is wrong.
- Dogs should never ever be off-leash except in clearly designated areas or in enclosed portions of private property where there is no egress. No exceptions, at the cost of significant fines. Dogs that bite should be put down immediately and their owners charged with assault. Having a nuisance dog should result in a fine and the confiscation of the dog. It's time to get serious about this. Stop trying to be nice to dog owners who are not capable of controlling their dogs.
- [removed]it's bad owners the make this breed out to be bad again [removed]
- ANY dog can be a problem if not properly socialized.
- My concern with this question is that a nuisance dog definition was not defined in context. A dog will bark to alert about someone approaching their yard. My mom was accused of having a nuance German Sheppard because he barked at homeless people. The officer was fair and said he was only barking with cause. If we allow any dog to be nuisance, the bylaw suggestion is too far reaching and doesn't allow due process. If a dog is predatory or malicious, then restrictions. I was bitten by my dog as a child but it was my fault. I have also been bit by a dog on a pathway... I blame a bad owner who did not socialize and did not have her on a leash.
- The definition of a nuisance dog should never contain anything breed specific. The only breed of dog that has ever tried to bite me has been a Chihuahua.
- Insights about the Epidemiology of Dog Bites in a Canadian City Using a Dog Aggression Scale and Administrative Data - study by University of Calgary states that "Overall, this finding is supportive of the growing body of research that indicates that breed specific legislation is not a successful approach to dealing with dog aggression issues [45,46]. Dogs in all breed groups are capable of inflicting a bite, and the probability of a high severity bite was not significantly higher in any particular breed group." Please follow what the studies show. The dogs targeted in this bylaw are ACTUALLY the third LOWEST group for bite severity in this study !!

- All dogs to have obedience training size and breed irrelevant. To pick a breed ie pit bulls is no different than choosing a race and saying they are more likely to be a nuisance!!
- DO NOT bring in BSL
- Please keep the laws breed neutral.
- Pit bulls need/dogs that are deemed nuisance need muzzles in off-leash parks but not necessarily on leash parks
- Case by case no discrimination
- BSL against pit bulls or bully breeds is so wrong! Stop punishing them! Charge the bad owners.
- mandatory spay/neutering of nuisance animals or animals involved in bites. mandatory permanent id on nuisance animals or those involved in bites. Dog owners with dogs involved in severe bites to take mandatory seminar/lecture about reading body in language in dogs. Owners with problem animals are generally the real root of the problem.
- These questions are slanted, negatively towards "pit-bulls". Leave bylaw enforcement to "dogs in general" and do not show bias against a type. Any dog can bite and be dangerous and be a nuisance. Enforce for those behaviours, not based on breed and lack of education on the City's part.
- Dogs declared a nuisance should have follow up with specific certified trainers/behaviourist within 6months of declaration with proof of correcting behaviour before reassessment or any sort. Otherwise resulting in fines.
- Having been around pets all my life, including working in all levels of Calgary Court Services and volunteering at Animal Services, I don't see why you are singling out pit bulls. Cruel, nasty dog owners train any dog to be vicious. There are wonderful pit bulls and biting tiny, overbred, designer dogs. It's the owners who are at fault of dangerous dogs, not the dogs.
- THIS IS SO AWFUL AND UNNECESSARY.
- 'Pitbulls' should be treated as all other dogs. They are NOT a nuisance and should not be treated differently. You've said it above in the writings that these dogs are NOT more Likely to bite.
- Deal with the dog owners on a case by case bases
- Leave as is. This is breed discrimination.
- Any breed can be a nuisance. So requiring pet owners to responsible regardless of breed would be the common sense approach
- Responsible dog ownership and Dog bite prevention classes and new dog owner training
- This bylaw, and any amendments to it, should be directed at problem dogs based on proven behaviour, not based on breed. I find it ironic that I am answering this question, which has a statement regarding the severity of pit bull bites that is not supported by evidence, right beside the picture of 2 boxers that is the photo representing Kristen. You are aware, I am sure, that it was boxers who killed the woman in Montreal a few years ago even though pit bulls were initially blamed.
- Restrictions (muzzles, where dogs can go, etc.) be based on any dogs actions not a blanket rule
- Its the OWNERS that need mandatory training along with their dogs!

- The focus on pit bulls needs to be provided with more real evidence. There are many strong dogs that may have just as much potential for harm. Seems arbitrary and appealing to stereotypes to focus on pits.
- Owners not the breed are the problem. Responsible ownership and their education is key.
- This is tough because if a dog is declared a nuisance something has already gone wrong. I don't support targeting one breed.
- all of these questions are proposing BSL. none of these questions even make any sense. you are asking incredibly leading questions. NO BREED OR the appearance of dog should be discriminated against based on appearance. i am offended even by the wording of this question. this doesn't even allow for engagement. you are answering the questions for the people you are asking to fill it out. if this was truly neutral you would use the word dog not immediately chose (with prejudice) one appearance of dog. the city of calgary should be ashamed of this line of questioning.
- Our kids in the parks need to be safe. Pit bulls are a very dangerous and threat for the kids who want to play in the park with other kids or their parents. Any family should never have to feel terrorized or not being able to enjoy the public park premises due the fear of having their loved one get hurt or not by unexpected wild behaviour of the pets such as pit bull. Also owners of these pets must need to understand that off leash dog areas are assigned for their pet's enjoyment and the kid park areas are for the benefit of kids leisure. Thanks you!
- breed specific bylaws are unfounded and unscientific
- I would suggest mandatory training for the OWNERS of nuisance dogs, and a record kept of nuisance dog owners.
- Do not pin point breeds! It's ridiculous.
- Nothing, the city should stay out of it...
- No BSL, no breed specification is required
- None of the above should happen. The aggressiveness is based off of how the dogs were raised. There should be nothing pointing to any specific dog as the more aggressive dogs are usually smaller breeds.
- No breed specific legislation against any bully breeds
- Owners should have to take training on how to be a better dog care giver to ensure the care of the dog when caught putting their dogs in high risk environments with known behavioural problems.
- This is not a breed problem it's an owner problem.
- The breed does not determine a dog's behaviour. This is ignorant to suggest so. Even small dogs can and are known to be nuisances regardless of breed.
- You have said "nuisance dogs" are dogs that bark and roaming around. This does not tie in with the comments above since it is the OWNERS who should be trained, and not the dogs punished as the owners are not caring for the dog. Dogs who bark are bored or left alone and not inside with their family and not taken on enough walks etc. I suggest that it would be good to make it so that gates have to have locks so the gates cannot be left open for dogs to escape.
- FINE IRRESPONSIBLE PET OWNERS, DON'T DEMONIZE BREEDS.
- This is a very unfair question. It is breed specific. ALL DOGS BITE

- Owner specific training
- BSL does NOT help, targeting problem dogs and their owners DO
- None of these options directly speak to the ability of the dog owner to have control over a dog, want to have accepted levels of control over a dog or adhere to any imposed restrictions on owners of nuisance dogs. The use of the terminology "nuisance" dog is preferred over signalling out pitbulls and related breeds. If they are the primary concern then addressing the area of who wants to own one and how it is trained by that owner is more the issue.
- I would like to see the city deal with chronic barking/yapping dogs. Those are just as much a "nuisance behavior"
- I don't think pit bulls should be bred
- no breed specific legislation, and only dogs involved in serious incidents should be declared under any label. Noise, being at large etc are not acceptable reasons to flag a dog.
- These conditions are [removed]. BSL is discriminatory and WRONG. Bad owner, bad dog, ALL BREEDS have capability to be dangerous. This proposal is absolutely disgusting.
- It's not the dogs fault. Require training for humans and pets that cause issues. More involvement in apprehending and revoking mistreated dogs
- Investigation/Surveillance into whether the dogs considered a nuisance have been abused or mistreated/trained to hurt others. Not the dogs fault.
- People training for dogs that are found to be a nuisance or demonstrate dangerous behaviour
- Designate some times for nuisance dogs at off leash parks, like Tuesdays between 4-6 pm. Or designate some off leash parks for nuisance dogs only. Also have the ability to remove the moniker nuisance3dpg after obedience training and a 6 month probationary period
- All of these are blasphemous. as an owner of 2 "pitbulls" I'm highly offended and would move out of city limits if any of these were enforced. neither of my dogs has any aggression or bite history. All dogs have the "potential for severe" attacks you cannot single out 1 type of dog for this.
- Training for ALL dogs after first complaint
- It makes no sense to call out "pit bull" breeds, which is a term you're using incorrectly. Unless a dog has fought in an actual pit, its not a pit bull. I see no mention to an increase in bylaw enforcement or anything either. This seems like a targeted ban at pit bulls with other considerations thrown in to make it seem less obvious.
- i would support a bylaw fining owners for dogs that have been declared a nuisance, based on the animals behavior not because they look a certain way. I consider that the animal equivalent of racism
- Additional community outreach re: training ALL dogs. To register with the city owners must provide proof of obedience/other training classes as with proof of vaccinations.
- Owners of ALL types or breeds of dogs should be held to the SAME standard. Little, big, fluffy or not fluffy can still bite and singling out one breed or "type" of dog DOES NOT FIX THE PROBLEM. Breed Specific Legislation has been proven to not fix or lessen the problem, education and accountability for ALL owners does. There are loads of well trained and properly socialized pitties just like how there are loads of chihuahua who bite and are poorly trained and people laugh it off, if it isn't funny when a large dog does it then it isn't funny when a little dog does it but BOTH should be held to the same standard. It's on the owners, not the dogs, to teach them how to properly act. When I worked as a dog walker I was bit more times by little dogs and German Shepard's. Not once did any pitbull type dogs in my care ever act aggressively towards me or other animals. Responsible pitbull owners know the prejudice against their dogs and most work accordingly to have their dogs not be a part of the stereotype and have them be well mannered functioning parts of society. [removed]

- Declared a nuisance should to be far more clear for anyone to answer these questions. For example: A Husky might be declared a nuisance because it needs social interaction or longer walks.
- Make the legislation about the PERSON, not the dog. Dogs require a good home and training - regardless of the breed. More Chihuahuas bite than Pitties.
- Absolutely none of these options seem necessary.
- I think pitbull and other vicious dogs should be completely banned here in calgary. Often these owners are young, and /or own these dogs for "status & aggression" rather than a true understanding of dog ownership. And often these owners do not have the emotional capacity to understand (or admit to) the consequences of a vicious dog attack.
- This is about the dog I have had goldens shit tuz and a pit bull type out of all three the smallest one was the most aggressive
- Fines, rehabilitation efforts and punishment should be served on An individual basis. Lumping dogs into catagories such as breeds or even perceived breeds does nothing but promote fear and poor dog ownership. Make the owner take responsibility for the dog and their actions is the only way to fix the problem.
- BSL doesn't work. Please actually enforce our laws around vicious dogs. Vicious dogs come in ALL breeds. No science to prove pit bulls are stronger than other big dogs. All big dogs are "strong". It's 2020- can we please stop discrimination and make our laws based on facts. Every professional association like the SPCA is against BSL. [personal information removed] Other places made their laws based on ours!!!
- Don't bully the damn breed!
- Seizure of any dog that seriously injures (requiring substantial veterinary care) or kills another pet. Time ban on owners whose dog seriously injures or kills another pet. Significant fine $5000 plus for any dog that seriously injures or kills another dog.
- I do not support any measure which singles out a breed or a collection of breeds. The breed of a dog does not dictate whether it has behaviour problems and numerous studies have shown that breed-specific bylaws and legislation in other municipalities have no bearing on dog behaviour problems. Also the singling out 'pit bull' in this survey is factually wrong and discriminatory - the bite force (strength) of a 'pit bull' is comparable to (or less than) that of many other breeds, including German Shepherd, Rottweiler and Boxer.
- This is ridiculous and you have zero science to prove they bite harder than other dogs

- Here is the latest updated list of all human deaths caused by dogs in Canada since 1983. As of May 19, 2017, there were 42 incidents resulting in 43 deaths. I have chosen not to provide the original spreadsheet. Instead, I have reformatted it into an easy-to-read, web-friendly list. Please read and understand the following few paragraphs before reading the list. Regardless of the fact that I have included breed in the list, it is crucial to understand two things: First, breed identification is ALWAYS suspect. Breed information may be supplied by the owners of the dog, by the victims, by animal control personnel, by police officers, by neighbours, or by members of the media. It is NEVER reliable. Second, even if breed identifications were accurate, the breed is far less important than the circumstances. Here's an example: The majority of these attacks are blamed on "huskies" or "sled dogs". So is any dog up north that has some husky characteristics going to be called a husky? In addition, the term "sled dog" (and "farm dog" in an early incident) is a description of function, not breed, so those dogs could literally be anything that can pull a sled. When you consider that a large number of these incidents occurred in northern communities with little or no animal control, sometimes on First Nations reserves, is it surprising that the dogs involved are northern types of dogs? As you read through these accounts, it should become apparent that breed is not the issue. Circumstance is the key. Children not supervised. Dogs running loose or breaking loose. Dogs chained in areas where wandering children could enter. Dog/child interactions not supervised. These things are what caused the deaths of the children in particular, not what type of dog was involved.

The conclusions from the details listed are: A secure enclosure for all dogs loose in their yards would have prevented 31 incidents (74%). Supervising young children (too young to be on their own), without knowing there was going to be a dog involved, would have prevented 26 incidents (63%). Supervising a known interaction between a child and a dog would have prevented 10 incidents (24%). Having secure enclosure for all dogs and supervising all children would have prevented 36 incidents (88%). Here is the list updated as of May 19, 2017: Mar 1983. Found dead at water treatment plant surrounded by 30 dogs. Why are pitbull type dogs being discriminated against in this survey? Education and enforcing current bylaws are what is needed. I do not support BSL for any breed

- nuisance dogs must include small dogs (all dogs) as the only dog I have been bitten by is a small dog but there doesn't seem to be anything done
- Classes on how to properly care for an animal for owners whose dogs are considered a nuisance. It's usually the owners mistreatments of the animal's that cause this.
- None of the above
- all by laws should apply to all breeds ! Not just pitbulls
- That any dog can be free at a dog park no muzzle and they can be unleashed
- Responsibility training for nuisances owners.
- Breed specific legislation is awful. Pitbulls are not the danger, it is bad owners. Invest in education that teaches about the false information and stigmas that are associated with the breed.
- [removed] targeting based on appearance BSL is a proven failure the world over and the Calgary model is heralded as a model other jurisdictions around the world look up to .. Don't implement BSL listen to the actual facts listen the science Ontario has had BSL for 15 years it has not made society safer it has increased in number of attacks and severity even though pit type dogs are all but gone [personal information removed]
- Please do not ban a specific breed of dog for Calgary
- Police the ppl not the dogs. Leave breed specific legislation out [removed]
- City wide ban on all pit bull type breeds
- You haven't provided spaces to cover my other concerns, so I have put them here. 1) The dog early warning system should be mandatory. 2) All fines should be increased dramatically, especially for any injury, at large animals, & failure to remove defecation, 3) All dog owners should be required to submit a DNA sample to the City for each pet so that injuries from dog bites and feces not picked up can be efficiently prosecuted.

- Policing of off lease parks for dogs not under control. Also a limit of how many dogs per person. Some dog walkers have up to a dozen dogs off lease.
- I DO NOT support BSL. I believe that everyone should support proper education. If you want to own a strong animal then you (or the household if more than one person is at the residence)should be required to take training courses with those animals. The unfortunate reality of dog incidents is that it is 90% of the time human errors in training or handling are the cause but we punish the animals for it. Please reconsider this. There is so much more potential in training and education for a safer city, also dog parks should not be a place for children, while some parents care enough to educate their kids on the proper ways to interact with new dogs, alot of parents don't and it creates a very high risk situation where the child could be hurt very badly and unfortunately it would be blamed on the owner and not the parents.
- The city of Calgary provides training for dog owners who cannot afford it. This would decrease the number of nuisance dogs.
- Calgary Humane Society does not support any form of BSL and opposes labeling any specific breed as inherently aggressive, vicious or dangerous. The Society takes the position that each dog must be regarded as an individual and assessed on its specific behaviours. CHS maintains that rather than BSL, the required deterrents to dog aggression are responsible breeding, responsible homing, responsible and humane training, and responsible pet ownership. Research indicates the breed of dog is not an important indicator of whether a dog might be involved in an aggressive incident, nor of whether the animal will pose a danger to the community. If the CHS does not agree with BSL why is it included in this survey? I STRONGLY support Breed Neutral Bylaw. Education is a must for everyone this should be taught in schools and a program should be available for everyone to partake in
- These laws cannot just be breed specific. I've met some very sweet pit bulls and have been bitten by small dogs with careless owners.
- I don't like when rescue groups bring pit bulls from USA. Dog history is often missing when transfer from shelter to shelter. If someone wants a pitbull can get one from AB. This would control help the numbers. Our Portuguese Water Dog Was on a leash and was bitten by What I think it was a Cane Corso. It was scary since would not let go till owner jumped on top of it and punch it. But still I think if you allow pitbulls in the city they should be exercised otherwise more trouble. So I think okay in dog park as long as not aggressive. We should have more dog parks so not so crowded.
- You shouldn't single out pit bulls. Dogs with poor behaviour are because their owners have not trained them well.
- I'm sorry but I don't understand my dog is not a pit bull but because he has staffordshire terrier mix and may have the appearance this should not label him as a pit bull, he is the sweetest most obedient dog , has taken his classes and I would not feel comfortable having to muzzle him if he is perfectly capable of being a good dog. You need to focus on these back yard breeders that are breeding dogs that are not stable and causing trouble for those that have purchased dogs from loving reputable breeders , the back yard breeding needs to stop or be regulated mutts are being sold for thousands of dollars , please focus on that. Not our innocent dogs that are loved

- It's not the breed it's the owner
- Picture of Dog and Owner as part of licensing process. Picture submitted by victim can be matched with Dog and Owner. 2. All off leash parks are completely fenced. Dog is removed from Owner if a bite victim chooses
- I don't think there should be a bias towards pit bulls as there are numerous other large dogs that are capable of same extensive injuries, such as german shepards
- Please provide off- leash dog areas for pit bull type breeds.
- Pit bulls are not the problem. The myth of them having stringers bites is exactly that. A myth.
- educate public on how to greet and interact with a strange dog. often it is the owner that unknowingly act so the dog is not acting appropriate.
- Pit bulls are not inherently more aggressive than other dogs, nor do they have more strength than say a German Shepard or Rottweiler. Punishing and discriminating against a breed for what they look like is ridiculous. It hasn't worked in other provinces and it won't work here. Punish the deed not the breed. Calgary is better than that.
- I am against BSL
- I am against BSL
- Dogs should only be deemed a "nuisance" if and when they prove to be so. There are no bad dogs just bad owners! Restrictions should be based off of punishable offences not the specific breed of a dog, that is prejudice and misinformed!
- Please dont single out pitbulls there are no bad dogs, just bad owners!
- give higher fines to ANY breed that is a nuisance. You shouldn't single out pitbulls. Little dogs also attack other dogs
- Please avoid specific breed restrictions. The stated rationale seems to be a cover - if bite strength is the measure then why are other breeds not included?
- Stop with the pitbull, other breeds bite just as hard or worse with bigger teeth, unbelievable you can be so uneducated!
- Make it mandatory in order to get an animal license that you have to attend dog training first. Also, prohibit an owner who has had a history with animals that are declared a nuisance to have another animal.
- Put down dogs that have one occurrence of biting a person. Massive fines for multiple noise complaints or aggressive dog behaviour (eg running up to strangers growling with fur raised or biting). Restrict dog breeds allowed in Calgary. No German Shepard's, pit bulls, aggressive breeds. Allow only one dog per household! (Otherwise there is noise and other disturbance to neighbours)
- Training for the owners of the dogs considered a "nuisance". "Pitbulls" are not all the same. They are not all dangerous! Also, Mandatory leashing for all dogs because any breed of dog can attack.
- Problem dogs are the result of owners not training them properly. The owners need to be trained.
- Owner of a deemed nuisance dog through a bite must take a class on how to properly handle dogs and how to treat dogs of any breed. This will lead to better health of animal.

- There is nothing wrong with pit bulls. It is the owners/ trainers doing and goes for all dogs.
- More strict rules for 'dangerous' dogs (i.e. history of biting or injury to others). Many of the nuisance suggestions would apply to the dangerous dog.
- Breed specific language is [removed]. Remove any reference to pit bulls if you expect an answer to this question.
- Higher fines for ALL owners not obeying animal bylaws. Does not need to be breed specific.
- Focus on training and educational programs for owners.
- Your pitbull laws are stupid and based on untrue information about the dog breed
- All of the above answers depend on what the definition of a nuisance is. I do not consider a dog barking to be a nuisance. I find the neighbors children screaming incessantly more of a nuisance than barking dogs. I feel that pit bulls should not be the only dogs that would require additional insurance, I myself have been bitten by both a collie and a maltese as well as a chihuahua. I know a few people that have been bitten by shepherds as well. As for fines, I think any dog that bites or is involved in a bylaw incident should have a higher fine.
- find one! instance where breed selective enforcement solved more problems than it created. no, no, no. ps.. i am not a pitbull owner and would never own a pitbull
- Dog training for the owners of dogs that are declared a nuisance. Owners are usually the problem.
- Reporting of nuisance animals should always showcase the breed and stop singling out pitbulls. Mandatory reporting should be created for all breeds
- Just want to clarify that the I don't agree with the breed specific segregation. Any animal declared a nuisance should be subject to this, a there shouldn't be a specific option for pit bulls.
- None of the above.
- No Dog specific penalties should be leaved against certain breeds , More fines won't help , but some training and help, proper management of dogs
- BSLs are BOGUS nonsense!!! Training is req'd for bad "OWNERS" of dogs if there are any issues with a dog! HUMANS are the ones needing training, including how to be RESPONSIBLE for dogs' wellbeing! Absolutely NO!!! to all "breed" laws and ignorant, draconian measures that punish the dogs who are the VICTIMS of stupid, uncaring people!!!! Dogs will end up killed off or abandoned by bad owners who don't want to pay to save them! QUIT promoting discrimination!!!
- If you, so help me god, ban a dog breed because of its "potential" to be a threat, you really need to reflect. How in the WORLD is that fair? Do we just arrest people when they're a "potentially dangerous" person? No!! So why do it to a dog?
- Can you specify what is considered dangerous behavior in the context of the first option
- Just enforce or educate people on the bylaws already in place (exs. off-leash dog areas need <6' leashes, no off-leash dogs on the path).
- It is wrong to discriminate against pit bulls, or any particular breed for that matter. It is a myth that pit bulls can "lock their jaws." Also, you discriminate against pitbulls "because a pitbull's strength allows the potential for a more severe bite" when Rottweilers and German Shepards have a more powerful bite than pit bulls! But I don't see them on your list! You shouldn't discriminate against Rottweilers or German Shepherds either, but at least do some research before trying to muzzle pit bulls or any dogs that have done nothing wrong.

- Please do not include breed specific legislation. It doesn't work! please focus on the responsible pet ownership regardless of breed
- All dogs, regardless of size or breed, that are registered in the city should be required to take Obedience classes. BSL has already been proven ineffective so instead of focusing on discriminating one "type" of dog, let's focus on responsible pet ownership instead
- Ban Pitbulls
- It's unfair to the dog, and the owner, to treat pit bulls the way you'd treat a nuisance dog. Pit bulls can be as aggressive as other dogs, but also just as kind.
- The wording of these questions appears to be heavily biased against dogs having a perceived 'pitbull-type' appearance. Breed-specific legislation simply does not work, and is discriminatory. A focus on education for dog owners would be more effective. You will unfortunately always end up with bad eggs, but education will go a long way.
- This bylaw shouldn't be a thing
- Owners must be responsible of their dog NO MATTER THE BREED!
- No breed specific legislation is needed.
- none of these should happen
- Give dogs that have been proven aggressive training on a case by case basis unrelated to breed
- Pitbulls should be muzzled in Off Leash Parks. But not banned from them.
- I don't think these measures can be used in every instance. Many dog attacks are due to human error, whether that be the owner's error or someone else. Educating children on respect for animals and how to approach a dog is the best way to go.
- None. Stop picking on bully breeds, deal with owners who poorly train dogs.
- all dogs over say 30 lbs and have aggressive behaviors be deemed dangerous, and be required to wear a muzzle, and be under strict care, custody and control of their owner.
- This is pure [removed]. Are you too lazy to do your job so you just google what other places have said??
- All large dogs are strong. No science to prove pit bulls are stronger. Focus on vicious dogs and actually enforce the current laws we have that reduce the number of bites when actually enforced.
- Do not judge all dogs by a particular breed. My neighbour has a small chihuahua type dog that is more aggressive and annoying than many of the pit bulls that I run into in the dog parks and off leash areas. This is ridiculous.
- None. This is dumb. Please let people just have what dog they want. No proof that these dogs do anything and these prohibitions will not decrease dog fights/bites.
- Repeat offenders have their dog taken away.
- Small dogs must be on leash unless in off leash area.
- That all dogs require obedience training not just pits
- Treat nuisance chihuahuas like nuisance pitbulls.

- I believe that the Pitbull breeds are truly beautiful inside and out and treating them as all aggressive and muzzling them would be similar to saying a type of coloured person should be watched more closely. It's the owner's responsibility to make sure they raise their animals as well as their children as responsible and kind beings! Don't blame the dogs, blame the parents (owners)!
- I have seen more issues with smaller dogs than large dogs. If there are more regulations on bully breeds, there needs to be more requirements and expectations on small breeds
- Let the dogs be it's not the dogs that are naturally aggressive how about punish the people than make them aggressive instead of the dog
- Ban pit bulls, dobermans, rottwielers etc or make the licence fees for them quite high so as to discourage people and reduce the numbers of these dangerous dogs.
- How about if the dog has a history of aggression then mussel it and do not go after Bullie breeds that didn't do any wrong
- don' target one specific breed but improve education and enforcement when public contacts bylaw services regarding a dog that may be a nuisance
- Pit bulls are sweet dogs, please get more educated on the dogs and don't blame them for their owners being horrible.
- Dog specific language should be removed from all choices.
- Owners of nuisance dogs need to be trained in animal management and prove they are responsible pet owners
- Immediate euthanizing of dogs that have bitten people and seriously injured other dogs.
- Dog breeds are not the problem, lazy dog owners and lack of training and discipline
- Smaller dogs should have the same punishment as a pitbull when bites or attacks occur since the dog should be under the owners control no matter what size or strength.
- The city needs to start holding the terrible pet owners more responsible instead of generalizing breeds and punishing the dog
- A city approved dog trainer to determine if newly issued pet license for a dog requires Obedience training for dog
- Obedience training for all dogs
- Obedience Training Required by all dog owners
- I think people who want to own pit bulls or dogs like pit bulls should have to go through a test before getting one, along with having a license to own one.
- None
- None.
- Pit bulls need to be banned in the City of Calgary. Other cities have successfully done this. Why is Calgary waiting? What other statistics do we need?
- Do your research on bite strengths. You are largely missinformed. A lab has very close to the same bite force as a pitbul (in its various breeds) and there are MANY other dogs with stronger bite forces than pit bulls. There are studies done on breeds bite forces and they are posted. The myth of pitbulls having a lock jaw is a myth (so your research on that too). Ask yourself this question...are any dogs born vicious ? If you answer no, than ask yourself how they become viscous? The answer is humans train them that way. Some intentionally and some through ignorance. If it's humans causing the issue, then if you ban one breed they will train another (and if many have equal bite force they will pick from those breeds and the problem won't go away. If you ban more breeds, they will choose dogs that aren't banned until all dogs are banned. Because you can train a Chuhwawa to be vicious (in fact there are more so unarmed cases of chuhwawa bites than pitbuls in the US). People are the issue, not the breed. So don't ban breeds, ban people who have recorded cases of their dogs biting from having dogs. Makes more sense. And with everything going on in the world with people standing up against racism, sexism, gender equality, etc...do you think it sends the right message to be breed racist? It's wrong and you know it. Do the right thing and Fix the real issue and bam people with recorded bite cases from being allowed to have a dog. Which may mean all dogs are registered (as they should be now) and have a license. Link it to drivers licenses (recorded cases show up on Drivers license for police to see.

- I am disappointed in the city of Calgary for singling out specific breed of dog in the wording of this survey
- Breeds are not the problem. Irresponsible owners are. Deny irresponsible owners pet licenses.
- None of these are okay. Pitbull are genetically well tempered dogs and instead there should be information on proper training resources as well as information on how to correctly and incorrectly approach ANY dog. Cornering the pitbull family like this would move the city backwards rather than forwards.
- Breed-specific legislation (BSL) has no place in our city - research does not support the idea that it reduces risk. In addition, there is insufficient connection between 'nuisance' behaviours and bite instances to merit restrictions on nuisance dogs such as muzzles or bans from off-leash areas (non-violent, non-aggressive behaviours such as noise, or escaping from a yard, are not connected to aggression)
- No BSL. Breed neutral laws.
- Leave the dogs alone this is not going to help you
- It seems that in many cases, it's not the dog's behavior in question, but the OWNER'S behavior. For example, are these dogs placed in good homes with a responsible pet owner? For what I term "attack breeds", I think the OWNER should be screened (police check, home environment, previous dog owner etc.) before allowing any such breed to live with them. ANY dog could become vicious if they are abused in their home environment and/or had a prior history of abuse.
- Bsl does not work, it causes panic in public. Mistreatment of animals who are taken into custody after a suspected incident. Anxiety for the owner who will feel scared to bring their pet out into public.
- Pit and bully breeds are no more dangerous than other dogs. The bite strength of a pit or bully breed is not as dangerous as people believe. They don't "lock" their jaw. They should be treated like any other breed.
- There must be follow up on off leash dogs in on leash areas. I constantly see this happening and it causes distress to people and dogs who are following the rules. It is one thing to make a law but it must be enforced. I have not experienced problems with pit bull like dogs, it is people with dogs they think are fine that come up and bite my on leash dog and then get upset when my dog reacts by growling. This has happened to my large, scary looking dog by a little off leash white dog that the owner says is not a problem. It is not the dog that is a problem it is the owner! Unfortunately there are a lot of bad pit bull like owners.

- This is absolutely outlandish and incredibly discriminatory and is against our human rights to have rules such as what you are suggesting. This is looking closer and closer to a communist action by even contemplating this idiocy.
- Stop singling out pitbull breeds. Its not the dog its the owner. There are other dog breeds that have a stronger bite that pitbulls such as Rottweilers and German Shepards.
- Don't put the ban on pit bulls and target negligence owners
- None of this should happen
- Heavier laws against bully breeds don't do anything to improve attacks and their probability. Bully breeds are not the problem.
- I would strongly contest any breed specific legislation.
- Please do not enact any breed specific laws, they do not have any effect on improving public safety.
- Education required for dog owners of these types of Dogs
- Ban pit bulls
- No stipulations on Pit bull breeds!!!
- We advocate for sensible responsible pet ownership. Education and socialization of dogs and owners are key to well behaved dogs. Licensing and fines will not suffice as the only method. Breed specific legislation only hurts responsible owners. Irresponsible owners will move onto other large breeds and continue to be an issue to the community. Education and socialization of humans and dogs are key to success. Invest in local training facilities so we all have good access to appropriate training
- I do not think that there should be any discrimination between different breeds of dogs. All breeds of dogs should be assessed the same when it comes to judging if they are a "nuisance" or not. Trying to implement discrimination against pit bull type dogs is unfair and displays unnecessary fear from the city. Whether big or small, all dogs should be treated the same. Perhaps instead of these new proposed ideas that spark uneducated fear, there should be opportunities for dog owners and the public to learn about responsible pet ownership and dog behaviour.
- Educate all dogs owners (of all dog breeds)
- If humans train their dogs why is all the blame being put on the dogs? If you want to do something about nuisance dogs do something about their owners. Also, a class in elementary schools on how to behave and treat animals could help the situation as well. Many people are not taught how to treat animals as they are to treat humans. It is all about all behaviours involved, human (victim/owner) and the dogs.
- None of the above
- No breed specific legislation. Any dog can be vicious in the right circumstances. As the owner of a pedigree white boxer I have been accused of being evil for having a pitbull

- the reason they are listed here is because a pitbull's strength allows the potential for a more severe bite. --- this statement is inherently flawed and has disproven. Golden retrievers have higher bite statistics than a "pit bull". Breed discrimination is as stupid in dogs as racist behaviour in people. Calgary, you're better than this. There is so much more to focus on in the world than singling out dogs that have historically been abused.
- my neighbour has a dog that will not stop barking at other dogs, people, animals, sprinklers, cars, etc...they do not have a full fence around his property and has an aggressive, doesn't listen to owner, pittie. there must be a bylaw saying that properties must be completely closed. and aggressive, or nuisance dogs never left alone in yard. there must be a way to file a complaint and a ticket or warning be issued. they also have a cat that is let out at night and does a lot of digging and popping in our gardens. this is not alright. there must be a way to complain without having to trap the cat and bringing him in. There must be a way to report the tenant or landlord or homeowner about aggressive behaviours especially when it comes to a pitbull type dog. when someone doesn't feel safe on their own property because a pet owner does not have a fence to contain their pet is very wrong. i have witnessed aggressive behaviour like pacing and following while growling, lunging at kids, and also chasing a man down the alley when it was let off property by mistake and barking non stop and refusal to listen to owner when called back. very scary incident. but was told by 311 until someone comes forward(victim) or the dog actually bites nothing can be done... why is that?
- Dogs that exhibit these behaviours should not be given a second chance. This takes care of item #4.
- Treat all dogs the same and don't target one specific breed
- In any dog incident (nuisance or bite) an independent evaluation of the dog's situation. Is the dog in a mismanagement situation? Where owner or handler is the cause of the incident? Did the owner put the dog in an unsafe situation? Education of people going into off-leash parks. What is basic appropriate human behaviour and basic appropriate dog behaviour.
- NOT ALL PIT BULLS ARE VICIOUS. CHIHUAHUAS ARE MORE VICIOUS THAN PIT BULLS.
- All dogs should be required to have obedience training and a special license stating they passed a test for recall and obedience before being allowed in off-leash parks
- there should not be laws in place punishing dogs just because they have the potential to be dangerous
- It's not appropriate to single out pit bulls in these regulations. The city will not be taken as seriously if they do so.
- Every decade seems to have a breed of dog to pick on. This one is broad stroke painting over and beyond breed affecting over a dozen plus any cross breeds. It is subjective to the appearance of the animals and not actual behaviour. It criminalizes everyone who has anything like this in our city regardless of the level of responsible ownership they have already displayed and regardless of the temperament or level of training already invested in these pets. It will lead to owners of these family pets to fear registering/licensing, increased abandonment of dogs due to cost to owners and open all owners harassment and judgement by neighbours as you have bought into stereotype and fear mongering. This legalizes discrimination on the subjective basis of looks leaving pet owners at increased risk of harassment and prejudice by neighbours. A small portion of society that are irresponsible and look to own perceived power breeds as status symbols will continue to do so. In the 70's it was dobermans then German Shepards and Rottweilers before bully breeds. Infact the power breeds of choice by this element has already moved on from the bully breeds. Just look at Kijji. The backyard breeders looking for a quick buck are breeding mastiffs, cane corsos and Dogo Argentinos to fulfill that demand. Legislation shpuld focus on breed neutral legislation applicable to all breeds amd owners equally and if reform is needed look at ways to curb back yard breeders, businesses operating as rescues from importing dogs for sale (under guise of adoption). These imported dogs come with unknown or wiped histories. One little such dog adopted out had fear issues, bit his new adopted owners and then a neighbours child The adopters reached out to the Calgary rescue that they got him from to learn this was the fogs 3rd home due biting. The decision was made privately with the owners and rescue business to euthanize the animal. Important to state here not a bully breed dogas ALL dogs have potential to bite when their upbringing has been uneducated and unstable. No to BSL it just does not work.

- Please do not employ breed specific legislation. You state that pit bulls are not involved in more offenses but that their bite is stronger. This is not actually the case. Pit bulls do not have a bite strength that is more than almost other big dogs, for example a German Shepherd Dog. Please please do your research!
- Dogs only need a mussel if they've bitten someone in the past.
- City will stop spreading incorrect info on pit bull breeds
- Better training and understanding if the dogs.
- Pit bulls shouldn't disregarded just because they are a dog
- Breed-specific legislation has been proven ineffective and problematic in multiple jurisdictions where it has been implemented and often subsequently discontinued. I do not support BSL. Please do not go down that ill-advised and dangerous path. The focus must be on responsible pet ownership and consequences for dangerous dogs, not members of certain breeds. I left Montreal when they were implementing this type of breed-specific legislation (which was ultimately unsuccessful) and at the time (2016), Calgary was being held up as a model of successful animal control. Please do not call victim to ignorance and hysterical thinking. Consult with educated dog behaviour professionals as well as the public. [personal information removed]
- I do not support any breed-specific legislation. Pit bulls are big dogs. Big dogs have strong jaws. Any big dog will hurt someone if they bite them. Breed-specific legislation only leads to pit bulls being further maligned. Pit bulls don't deserve this - it will only lead to good people being afraid to adopt pit bulls. It's about how you train a dog, not the type of dog they are.
- Focus on the people who are poor dog owners, breed has nothing to do with it. WHAT a waste of time and money to focus on dog breeds!!!!!!!!!!!!
- Pit bulls should not be reprimanded simply because if there breed. They should be treated the same as any other dog. If a child is teasing a dog that child should be held responsible for getting bite. Not the dog.
- Reducing licensing fees when a dog owner provides proof of obedience training

- Also there should be a look into the owner. If there is issues with this owner in the past possibly ban them from owning pets. Bad behavior is learned and trained. Animals should not be blamed for it.
- The statement you made is not scientifically accurate and is irresponsible. It lends to a blatant bias shown in this survey. I did some research and Calgary has been cited by other municipalities as an example to follow with current bylaws. What is missing is consistency in following through on current laws and education programs. Properly find this, get back to basics. My research also showed breed specific legislation to be costly to engage in and enforce including loss of revenue and cities with this in place have hired task forces to see if their BSL had been effective in improving public safety. It was not. For a city in financial peril and in the midst of a pandemic fear mongering and polarizing citizens in irresponsible. Do not waste our tax dollars in this manner or any manner with my money. You would be instantly criminalizing pet owners, giving license to public harassment to owners with any animal that might look like a "pitty". That is highly subjective by the way. As Inam in complete disagreement with this biased survey I imagine my comments will be omitted from the councillors view. Properly execute on the by-laws we already have. Consider a way to work with AHS and groups to safely report bite incidents. Stop letting foreign gained dogs into our country from agencies posing as rescue organizations. These businesses for profit pulling on heart strings of could be adopters bringing dogs from unknown histories. Stop backyard breeders require permits etc. Discount responsible ownership practices regardless of breed.
- There cannot be more than one nuisance dog in a household.
- The owner of the dog must be educated, this behaviour the dog is exhibiting is learned behaviour, I blame the owner for the dog acting out. It is how the human raises the dog in how it behaves. Maybe some classes and education to the human on how to treat and teach their dog in a loving way so they are not aggressive.
- [removed] Pit bulls are less aggressive than a fair amount of other dogs owned in homes. [removed] Even if they are stronger than a lot of other dog breeds. Your not forcing bodybuilders to put constructive gear on to keep them from being so strong in public your not doing anything like that. [removed]
- No breed specific legislation. Seize nuisance/dangerous dogs. Owners are accountable animals aren't.
- None of the above
- Create a campaign to reduce the stigma regarding pit bulls instead of persecuting innocent animals or their owners
- It's the people who teach the pit bulls to be violent, pit bulls are actually really friendly
- None of these. All statistically proven to not lower dog biting rates.
- None because if they do nothing wrong they shouldn't be punished
- Not all pit bulls are dangerous. In fact, most aren't. There's no reason they should face discrimination for some thing they didn't do.
- I support absolutely none of these
- No a dog should not have to be muzzled for being a breed of dog. Blm btw
- None of the above

- Obedience and training should be mandatory for all dog owners. The worst are small dogs with no training. They just aren't big enough to cause harm...
- leave pitbulls alone but look at all breeds and even owners dogs are not to be defined by breed this is just another form of racism or speciesism not ok respect the Dog any dog and it will respect you any dog can be a nuisance dog or aggressive or anything you think a pitbull is, this has nothing to do with the breed it has everything to do with owners of any dog.
- Obedience training should be required for all owners who adopt a new dog for both the dog and the owner.
- Don't let stupid people have dogs. Its the owner not the pet regardless of animal.
- Most people dont even register their dogs with the city and if they have a pit bull more extreme measures will push this stuff underground.
- Owner education for problem dogs. A dog is a product of its environment and its owner.
- Find the root cause of the problem. Better training is required for the dog owner. Raise awareness about proper dog ownership.
- I do not accept BSL.
- Please do not discriminate against the bully breed. You have no facts to suggest they are more aggressive or require more training than any other breed of dog. Consider actually holding irresponsible owners accountable for their dogs- REGARDLESS OF BREED.
- all dogs should have obedience training; also I have seen owners, in winter, simply let a dog out of the car for a poop, then putting the dog back in the car. I also wonder about the number of dogs that can be in the care of dogwalkers. I have noted, 2 in particular, who have 5-7 dogs unleashed and pay no attention to poop.
- Breed specific laws and fines are ridiculous!!
- This should not be breed specific.
- I think it would be important that any requirement for obedience specifies that the training must come from approved trainers. The science has shown that trainers who use adverse methods are likely to exacerbate aggressive behaviour. I also do not support any form of Breed Specific Legislation, it's been proven to be ineffective in other locations that have implemented it, could highly penalized dogs in need of rescue, training and rehoming, and the use of the language "substantially similar to those" is unclear and confusing.
- Training for owners to properly care for dogs that have been declared a nuisance. If you cannot properly care for a dog, you should not be allowed to own one.
- All dogs can bite, do not discriminate based on breed
- Make this for all nuisance dogs. Including the little "harmless" ones like chihuahuas and shitzhus
- Ensure there is a quick way to report offenses/incidents involving pit bulls and nuisance dogs. Ensure those reports get prioritized for quick enforcement actions.
- Do not stigmatize any specific breed ie Pitbulls!
- Nuisance dogs are not the problem. Owners are! They need to educate themselves, be aware of the breed they want. Even a poodle could bite! We need to have a permit for any dog and increase control for illegal markets.

- I oppose the breed-specific legislation suggested in this question; there is no evidence to support the claim that they have a greater bite strength than any other breed
- There cannot be more than one nuisance dog in a household
- When a pet exhibits bad behavior, it is always of the owners origin (not understanding species, not providing training, etc). Fines and offenses should be made against the owner and not animal, with mandatory education classes and performance reviews for those who keep dogs or pets that have the potential to be dangerous. Seizing dogs and turning over to a pet shelter (not a kill one) until the owners can prove they can keep a higher maintenance pet is preferable.
- Dangerous dog breed ought to be outlawed altogether
- I think the pitbull argument is ridiculous. There are no bad dogs only bad owners/breeders. There needs to be training for people who want those breeds before the adopt one.
- No to breed specific legislation. How awful pitbulls and bully breeds are singled out as 'problems' Most dog owners of all breeds are respectful, loving, and support the well being of their dogs. They also pay taxes, pay for insurances, and promote community well being. To target and declare a breed dangerous is painting a insane broad stroke. Please handle all bites (small dogs, large dogs, cats too) on a case by case basis. This is the foundation of the justice system (innocent until proven guilty) and it should apply to all of our furry friends and family members. Out of all of the dogs in the city, nearly all have wonderful parents and families who could not afford higher insurances, liability coverage, muzzles, registration, proof of classes (even if their animals are trained at home). This proposed legislation will severely limit the freedom and the ability 'pitbull types' to be fairly adopted, treated, or given freedoms that any other animal would in Calgary. I am for responsible ownership, and perhaps dogs that aren't that social should have the owner's place a warning system up or wear a bandanna that says they are reactive or require owner permission before approach. This is NOT to implement blindly across a breed or breed type that 'looks' dangerous. We need a compassionate approach that is easy for everyone to adopt. Your bandanna idea is wonderful and voluntary. Incidents can never be reduced to zero (nor can crime or the propensity for humans to enact violence), but we can stop terrible legislation or perhaps even hire more animal welfare officers that can work with owners, promote education etc. These breeds are wonderful and I know many owners who would not be able to keep their dogs or even adopt new small puppies from rescues if they were pitbull types if this passed. Please take this on a case-by case basis and not with blanket, discriminatory laws. Lots of huge animals are incredibly gentle with all others, and forcing muzzling, no interaction at parks, declaring them violent or dangerous or assuming they will bite will do more harm than good - both in stereotyping the dog and thereby fostering a culture of fear, but also harming the freedom that our family members so rightly deserve. Please do not enforce 'pit bull' restrictions, fines, liability, or insurance increases like you proposed above.
- Ban pit bulls, as defined above, from the city of Calgary.
- I highly object to "pit bull" type dogs being singled out. It is an owner problem, not a dog problem. Mandatory owner education for breeds such as staffies, German Shepards, Rotties, Mastifs, Akitas, so that owners understand what their dogs need.

- Prohibit people from owning dogs if they have had multiple nuisance dogs or dogs that bite. Also, I think that all dog breeds need to be treated similarly. ALL dogs should go through obedience and socialization training if ever leaving an owners property (even if leashed), not just nuisance dogs or pit pulls. In my limited experience, I have seen more bad dog behavior in small dogs at off leash areas.
- Stop isolating bully dog types. Many of these dog owners are very responsible and by implementing specific laws towards this breed, you are lowering their standard of life. Putting muzzles on them mean they cannot defend themselves from other dogs- which usually end up being the issue. Thought Calgary was smarter and more progressive than this.
- Pitbulls should not be singled out.
- Dogs (of any breed) who injure or kill another pet - owners of offending dog are required to fully compensate the victims for any incurred medical costs.
- Pitbulls should never be persecuted for owners negligence
- breed specific owner training
- Owners of nuisance dogs are required to have additional education and limits on number of animals they can own.
- Higher fines for dog owners who do not appropriately leash their dogs, leading to dog bite incidents (ie. smaller dogs that run up to larger defensive dogs and instigate dog bite incidents)
- Minimum requirements for fence height for yards where a pit bull is living.
- This is just wrong. Its not the animal thats the problem its the human that raises it!
- Increase access and funding for responsible dog training courses for all dog owners. Pit bulls should NOT be singled out.
- I would state Pit bulls that already has an dangerous behavior OR an Interim orders are not allowed in off-leash parks and would be needing extra obedience training
- Stop allowing inexperienced people keep larger so called “nuisance” dogs. The owner is the problem, not the dog. I don’t understand why that’s a struggle to understand. A dog isn’t born aggressive it’s either trained to be that way or not trained well enough to know the difference and listen to it’s handler. Stop letting anyone who’s anyone own a dog and put the bylaws on people not dogs. Larger stronger breeds need proper care and training by someone use to the breed and who knows what they are doing. You look at any animal abuse case across this province. In Calgary people leave dogs out in -40 weather, people have duct taped animals mouths and starved them in storage garages. Why is the city not monitoring who is allowed to care for an animal? Before you start blaming “nuisance” animals and putting a muzzle on them, look at nuisance Alberta residents who harm and mistreat them who like the idea of a “big tough dog” but haven’t a clue about the responsibility. Shame on this province if they can’t see that animal abusing evil people are the issue. Start a law that changes people’s behaviour and prevents abuse and mishandling. An animal of whichever breed or creation will respond positively if shown proper care, training and love. I’m not saying there aren’t aggressive animals out there but we all need to realize how our behaviour as humans effects everything.
- Mandatory training for owners whose dog, any breed, is found to be dangerous (bites a person)

- dogs involved in a bit offence (except minor nipping) destroyed
- When you say nuisance dogs, it should be explained further to what you mean exactly. A dog that has bitten previously? Then it makes sense. But just based on the breed, absolutely not.
- I do not support anything based on categorizing a dog based on its appearance and a subjective assessment that a dog looks like and has physical characteristics of a type of dog. In whose assessment? Based on what? This is subjective and arbitrary and has no place in a by-law
- Absolutely nothing. Dogs learn from owner training and control. This should not be a breed specific issue. It would be a very unfair by law to pass on "nuisance dogs", dogs all need control but also some freedom to live a happy life. If an owner is unable to control or train a dog, the dog should not be brought into situations that may cause conflict or issues.
- None. Pitbulls and "pitbull looking" dogs are so stigmatized. There shouldn't be extra fines just because they are a certain breed
- How about NO to breed specific legislation and just look at all dogs evenly. I'm extremely saddened and disappointed Calgary is singling out pitbull and propagating BSL that even other countries have proved is not only incorrect but is discriminatory. Calgary needs to stand up and foster a community of inclusion, where bite cases (disproportionate reporting that often excuses small dog breeds because of size too) are looked at fairly, assessed with the welfare of the animal in mind (not judgements about the breed or instilled incorrect stereotypes and misnomers) to come to a reasonable solutions. If the dog is involved in a serious bite incident or THEN have the dog assessed. Do not blanket all pit bull dogs as violent or push restrictions, costs, insurance jumps, registration increases and liabilities on the rest of the owners. Here's the thing, doing so punishes innocent well behaved and super great pets and their owners. Truth be told they are the bylaw compliant, pay registration and most of them and their dogs have NEVER even had a complaint or issue. I support no BSL or sanctions against pitbulls. I support hiring more bylaw officers, more help for animal shelters, and case by case intervention only. We are better than this Calgary!
- Nuisance needs better definition. Consider dangerous and nuisance definition. Inappropriate to say a dog that barks can't go to off leash
- If you are going to single out any particular breed, single out the pet owners.
- I think we should consider a ban of 'pit bulls'. As other provinces have banned them, have our numbers increased? Also, has anyone looked to determine if there is a correlation to higher numbers of dog fighting rings?
- Don't bully breeds for having a bad owner. Have better screening processes for owners and follow ups on how the animal is cared for. It's not the animals fault the have protective issues if abuse is all they know and have been taught.
- Require assessment, training and insurance for owners who have had dogs cited for dangerous behaviours. Require education for all owners before pet acquisition.
- Fines for owners of nuisance dogs. Pitbulls aren't the problem, the training is the problem. Don't punish responsible owners.
- Owners of nuisance dogs should be required to attend dog handling training
- Pass a test of obedience skills and knowledge BEFORE you can own a dog. Like a driver's licence.

- Obedience training should be required for all dogs. It should be a requirement for getting a license. Park signs for off-leash areas are confusing to many dog owners. It should state on-leash on pathways, not show just a sign with offleash to one side of the pathway (e.g. top of Bowmount Park in the NW). Owners rarely have dogs on-leash on pathways where they are supposed to. I run several times a week. Nuisance dogs should be expanded to cover a threatening behaviour without biting; that would include dogs which chase me, or run at me aggressively, or jump on me uninvited. There needs to be city parks representatives in the city parks in the evenings educating dog owners and giving out fines to people who don't follow the rules. The focus should be on prevention (education on park rules and forcing owners to train dogs) more than identifying one problem breed.
- Warnings then fines for dog owners who do not have their dogs under control at all times
- Have a test for people wanting to own bully breed dogs to access if they would make proper owners
- Any dog owner not following the rules should be fined. This should include being approved by a dog on the extendable leashes. Leashes should be no longer than 1 meter long! I don't like being approached by any dog and owners dines have control when the dog is too far extended on a leash.
- There are many responsible dog owners. I don't believe in labelling a specific breed a nuisance but specifically define the behaviour that is the nuisance.
- Mandatory dog training for any person that gets a new dog
- None of the above
- I cannot stand that Pitbulls are being labeled here, I have friends and family with Pitbulls and they are the most loving and gentle dogs I know. Like any dog it depends on the training and owners, I have seen people bite by more small dogs then Pities. If someone's dog bites whether it is a Poodle, Lab or Pity then fines should be given but do not rule out one single breed as nuisance that is not accurate or fair.
- nothing should be breed related, a nuisance dog is a nuisance dog regardless of breed characteristics.
- Targeting pitbulls makes no sense. German shepherds and Rottweilers have pretty strong bites and were bread for guarding, and aren't included. Mastiffs have very strong bites and were bread as fighters, as do Akitas, Dogos, and even Sharpei.
- you are WRONG to single out one dog breed - all dogs are capable of causing injury. Perhaps ALL dog owners should be required to take an online education course on pet care before dog tags are issued...
- Obedience training required for all dogs
- There NEEDS to be support systems put into place to help low-income and uneducated people learn how to properly care for and train their dogs. If a dog is involved in an incident or becomes a dog who could become a dangerous animal, there should be a rehabilitation program that both the owner and dog must complete together. Fining people will not help solve the problem. Discrimination against specific breeds is the WORST approach. The dog is never the problem, it is ALWAYS the owner!
- I do not believe that pit bull dogs should be singled out, and the reasoning is unsound, if this were terue police dogs such as german sheppards and other variety of large or high impact biting dogs should be listed. this is the equivalent in humans to racial profiling and should not be part of animal bylaws. Nuisance animals should undergo some training, nuisance meaning multiple offences not first time offences, not all dogs get along, nor are they meant to be friends and minor incidents can happen, this is the nature of the dog world. When talking animal bites to humans, situation should be assessed if an animal is protecting its owner from a threat, they are not a nuisance. if an animal unprovoked has bitten a human then training classes should be recommended for their correction.

- I'm reticent to separate pit bulls out from other breeds. I would support labeling some dogs as "nuisance dogs" and apply additional requirements (ie bi-annual licensing, additional training, and certificates...)
- This is so uninformed it's appalling. Breed specific rules are wrong and should never be ratified.
- All dog and cat owners should carry annual pet insurance through home owners liability insurance and must be apart of obtaining a pet licence
- Handling training for owners who own the animals.
- An aggressive dog is an aggressive dog it should not just apply to bully breeds.
- It is incorrect that a pitbull's strength is stronger than other dogs to inflict more damage. I am disappointed this survey includes common myths instead of actual facts.
- Due to 1)a pit bull attacking our 1 year old Sheltie severely, in a dog park and the owner responding with profanity and not taking any responsibility, I would vote that pit bulls become illegal to own in Calgary.
- We wish to outline our concerns about the possibility of breed specific legislation (BSL) in our city. As you know, Calgary's Animal Services department has requested public feedback on elements of the Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw. We participated in Phase One of this review, and in all the comments we heard and read from the public, including the 93-page summary report, there was no mention of BSL. In the published internal staff engagement report (26 pages) there was only one passing mention of anything vaguely breed-specific. As such, we were surprised to see BSL included on the Phase Two survey - featured quite prominently in fact, with specific questions about muzzling and leashing requirements, higher fines, exclusion from dog parks, mandatory insurance, and household limits. It is difficult not to infer that BSL is being strongly considered by Animal Services and/or City Council, since there were only twelve questions overall. This is a confusing and disappointing development. Calgary was once a leader in animal control [personal information removed] Our city had some of the strongest enforcement, most progressive outreach, highest licensing rates, and lowest bite rates on the continent. All of this was done without targeting breeds. The solution was strong, clear bylaws that promoted owner responsibility and targeted known risk factors for dog aggression. These laws were coupled with enforcement and legislation. This combination worked, just as it continues to work in other jurisdictions that used Calgary's laws as a model. BSL is flawed. Should Calgary choose this approach, here is what we can expect. -- BSL enforcement will rely on visual identification. BSL assumes that two dogs that look alike will always act alike, and that behaviour is correlated with physical characteristics. Studies show that visual breed ID is usually flawed, especially when it comes to mixed breeds and dogs of unknown parentage – which make up a majority of Calgary's dog population. --BSL is an inefficient use of animal control resources. Instead of investigating behaviours and actual risk factors, our officers will be required to police dogs based on the way they look. Neighbours can call in complaints not because a dog is barking or running loose but because a dog looks like a restricted breed. --Bite rates and nuisance concerns will stay the same – or increase. This has happened in the vast majority of BSL jurisdictions. In the last decade in Calgary, an average of 12% reported bites are attributed to “pit bulls”. That may seem concerning, until you note that similar levels are attributed to groups like German Shepherds, Labrador Retrievers, and herding breeds (all subject to the same visual identification concerns of course). Over 60% of all bites are by other/unattributed breeds. A total of 180 breeds have been implicated in bite incidences in Calgary. By targeting only one type of dog for restrictions, you are doing nothing to address the majority of aggression incidences. You are only gaining a temporary, false sense of security. ---You are subscribing to the “pit bull” umbrella definition, which is problematic. Most dogs in our community labelled “pit bulls” are mixed breed dogs and/or dogs of unknown parentage. They range from 30 to 130 pounds, have a variety of body shapes, and come in almost every colour and set of markings. Their personalities vary to the same degree. It is impossible and flies in the face of animal behaviour science to assume they will all behave the same. Calgary Animal Services has claimed that “pit bulls” are responsible for more serious bites, but this cannot be attributed to an umbrella breed label – there is nothing in their genetics or physiology that would explain this. ---Restricted breeds will proliferate in the shelter system. When these dogs are targeted because of their visual appearance, it makes life more difficult for responsible, law-abiding owners. If a dog is caught as a stray, for example, an owner may be afraid to claim him and face harsh penalties and judgement. If the city restricts these dogs, landlords will too, leading to more surrenders. At the same time, the dogs will be less adoptable for all these reasons. ---You will be alienating responsible dog owners and a large segment of the community. While these dogs have been stigmatized in the past, “pit bull” type dogs are increasingly mainstream. They are used in advertising and movies, and as therapy, service, and police dogs. The majority of Canadians don’t support discrimination by appearance when it comes to dogs. In Montreal, Mayor Denis Coderre pushed through a breed ban and months later was voted out in favour of an underdog candidate who made breed-neutral legislation a major part of her platform. -- You will be moving backwards when other communities are moving forwards. Every year, more communities reject breed bans enacted in the 1980s and 1990s in favour of evidence-based, breed-neutral legislation: the exact legislation that Calgary pioneered at one time. ---You would be acting against the recommendation of dozens of reputable organizations. Every professional organization associated with animal welfare, animal behaviour, and animal control takes a position against BSL. So does the SPCA and the Calgary Humane Society, as well as the Centres for Disease Control and the American Bar Association. There are better alternatives. We can look to the successes in Calgary in the early 2000s, and expand and improve upon them. These could include clarification and refinement of existing bylaws, expanded and proactive enforcement, dog bite prevention programs (these are available for free), training and spay/neuter programs, and public education. Calgary is a progressive and diverse city, and our animal legislation should reflect that. Please do not punish responsible dog owners and allow our bylaws to discriminate based on visual appearance.

- None - the dog should not be punished, muzzled, or not allowed in off leash areas - the owner should be the one who takes responsibilities. Higher fines should be given to ALL dog owners, not just pitbull owners or nuisance dogs owners - for an owners inability to be properly educated, and properly train their dog.
- There should not be any legislation specific to a breed. Need more clarification on what considered a "nuisance dog"
- I strongly disagree with the 'pit bull' discrimination. I understand the consequences of their bite might be more damaging but other very popular breeds, such as Golden retrievers, misbehave just as much as 'pit bull-like' dogs, if not more. Dogs are pets, but not toys. And owner should be required to understand this at the time of adoption, besides realizing the time commitment and effort it takes to raise balanced and socially educated dogs.
- End BSL...if pit bulls aren't involved in more incidences then please don't discriminate...any dogs that are declared a nuisance should have consequences for their owners. What you are doing is breed profiling and akin to saying that all people of colour are thieves and should be handcuffed when walking around shops incase they steal...you wouldn't propose that, so why label my 6 year old "pit bull" a danger when he has been attacked by labs, westies and a Dalmatian in 4 separate incidents and never responded?
- BLS only will punish and hurt responsible owners and their families. No not have BSL in Calgary. Enforce breed neutral bylaws and hold individual owners accountable! The answer is not a blanket bylaw that makes things black and white and ostracize people and their pets from our community. I am so sad and worried and dissapointed to see City bylaw even considering this :(
- I think an extremely high fine is warranted if a dog of any kind attacks and kills another animal in an unprovoked attack.
- Maybe have more bylaws about ownership rather than discriminating on a specific breed
- Smaller dogs have caused more injury while working in a vet clinic... This should be applied to ALL breeds.
- Ridiculous to spotlight pit bulls because they're stronger, but have not done anything wrong or acted as a "nuisance", definitely need some changes for dogs that are a problem though
- Looking at data from other municipalities that tried BSL it is costly and ineffective, it gave rise to popularity if other breeds, incidents of actual aggressive dogs was not curbed. They come in ll breeds and damage. Italy experienced this and eventually had 92 breeds of dogs on their banned list by 2009 reduced that ban to 17 breeds. In 2016 they scrapped BSL legislation focusing on addressing the actual issues. The Netherlands gave successfully dealt with their issues through incentives, accessible spay/neuter programs and cost breaks to citizens that participate in responsible ownership.
- The dogs are not the problem, it is the owners. The City should be able to demand training for both the owner and the dog in cases of nuisance designation. Failure to comply should result in removal of the dog.
- nothing but bigotry and hate directed to dogs based on appearance [personal information removed]

- You question is biased closed minded and bigoted targeting a "perceived breed issue" who ever drew this question up is a pit hating moron !! Waiting to protest if you people are stupid enough to add BSL against science and facts ... of its ineffectiveness ... Mess with my dogs see what happens --
- All breed. Should come from official responsible Breeders buying a dog from Back Yard breeder , dogs that are not CKC registered or from other recognized associations (FCI, AKC) are a big part of problem. The responsible breeder will filter buys and will take dog back if the is a problem
- obedience training for the owners knowledge acknowledgement of the dog bylaws, fines for waste, problem dogs, all dogs regardless of their size, it is the licenced owners responsibility to maintain control. An example maybe, in an off leash park where a dog may run up and then jump up onto people. While not serious typically, this is the dog trying to potentially play or assert itself? I am not sure but as a former licenced dog owner people do not know the dog bylaws (dogs on right on paths, no dogs on school ground/sport fields). In my life I know of two people with serious permanent damage due to dog attacks, people need to know and sign off on their liabilities and accountability's as a city of Calgary resident dog or cat owner.
- BSL has been proven not to work. Why don't we hold each individual dog/owner accountable instead of blaming a group
- BAN PIT BULLS: for any future purchases/adoptions, let the ones in homes already live out their lives with all the above precautions/penalties, and remove the rest from the city/shelters. * * * * *
- REQUIRE ULTRASONIC ANTI-BARK DEVICES WITHIN ALL NEIGHBOURHOODS: people get dogs but don't know how to train them, they disturb all their neighbours - please make them put up these harmless yet very effective devices ignorer to own a dog in Calgary
- The above are all sensible measures to address the consequences of dogs declared a "nuisance" - in many cases, isn't the root problem with the owners who keep eg Pitbulls because of their reputation?
- Personally I do not trust pit bulls, although I am told many are loving pets. I am not qualified to answer questions on this breed.
- Obedience training for ALL dogs, not breed specific
- Education programs that help owners understand how to manage their pets. A lot of people at the dog park will say dogs are just being dogs when they are in fact being aggressive.
- Leave pit bull owners alone, there hasn't been an increase in bites, attacks or complaints. So why target them? Your biases need to be checked before pushing such a ridiculous motion.
- DO NOT PASS A BSL!! That in it self is biased and unfair to a specific breed no different than human racism toward people of specific races. If you are going to increase fines or go after dogs that are acting aggressively than do so for ALL dogs. Including the small ones! Teach the owners of legitimate complaints (not ones based on breed because some thinks its bad) about training and how better to control their pet.
- Instead of focusing on pitbull - maybe include more breeds that are also consider dangerous or based on actual numbers, such as bites per breed - this would include labrador and GSD...

- In terms of a dog being declared a nuisance, I think consideration needs to be given to the type of offense.
- Mandatory training classes for ALL DOG OWNERS. Need to be fair now. If one dog has to be muzzled, they all should be.
- Discrimination against a specific breed would be ridiculous. It's never the dog it's the owner. If an owner has a dog who is a nuisance then they should be required to attend behavioural training classes.
- Fines and/or charges should be laid against negligent or irresponsible dog owners, and repeat offences by the same owner should result in a ban in animal ownership.
- Obedience training for the OWNERS of nuisance dogs
- Severe bites need to be dealt with....but enabling breed specific bylaws is a knee jerk reaction. Being involved in obedience training, the only bite I received was from a German Shepard. Cocker Spaniels were also on the top of the list for biting. Blanket bylaws and rules is a mistake.
- These breeds should be dealt within a individual case not all these dogs are bad and it's unfair to specific breed them deal with it on a case to case event
- Do not be breed specific, all dogs should be held at a standard of behaviour. Not just one breed.
- Owners and dogs should be charged for how they act, not how they "could" act. Dogs under 60lbs are 89% more likely to bite. Dogs shouldn't be biting period. ANY dog that bites regardless of the size should be punished or have "strikes". This city is a joke for even trying to make breed specific.
- Instead of breed specific legislation, the definition of nuisance needs to be made clear and it should apply to all dangerous dogs equally, regardless of the breeds and size.
- Breed specific legislation is wrong
- Focus on the owner, not the dog! Focus on pet owners education, not on breed specific regulations, most smaller dog breeds are at much higher risk to be a danger than big ones, and this is because of lack of training. Use licensing fees and fines for free education on dog behaviour, body language, basic training.
- banning pitbulls, similar breeds as described in the introduction and dangerous or nuisance dogs in Canada, Alberta and Calgary.
- Don't discriminate against pit bulls and other bully breeds
- DO NOT support any type of breed ban or breed specific legislation. It can be any dog who create a nuisance.
- Nuisance is fine, but BSL is ridiculous. Take out the pit bull language.
- Bylaw needs to actually do something about aggressive dogs being reported. I report my neighbor and they do nothing. These dogs bark and lunge at people all day long.
- In my preference dogs should be treated nicely and not being isolated or punished.
- Pits do not have the strongest bite of any breed, so confused as to why the focus is on them? Hysteria around a breed exasperates the stress of the public and the dogs themselves, causing more issues. Any nuisance dog should have further training. Any nuisance dog is that way because of an issue, just like humans. This can be taught out in 99% of cases. Owners need to have the responsibility of training and helping their own dogs.

- Its not the pitbull breed, its the owner and this should include all dogs
- In Britain, I've heard that all dogs and their owners have to go for obedience training. I would like to see this in Calgary.
- Other breeds are as strong as pit bulls. German Shepard's and Belgian Malinois for example.
- Pit bulls are not vicious dogs how you raise
- I think that laws to protect people should be under the umbrella of problem dogs not specifically Pit bulls, and there should be fines for people who teach any breed of dog to be aggressive
- I think all dogs are capable of biting and we shouldn't single out one breed of dog. It is not fair.
- I do not support any of the above proposed ideas. This is judgemental and punishing owners for taking dogs who have a bad reputation.
- No profiling based on breed
- These measures do not work as proven in other jurisdictions that enacted similar policies
- By the time there is an offence it's usually too late. I'd like to see puppy classes and obedience classes be mandatory and perhaps prof has to be shown when licensing. That may however increase the number of unlicensed dogs.
- All damages or costs incurred by a victim must be paid by the dog's owner within 30 days of the incident in addition to whatever fines are levied. (Thinking of when a dog (or other pet) is attacked and requires emergency medical intervention by a vet. To a maximum of $15,000 per incident.
- Again you have not defined 'nuisance' as someone that does not like animals or dogs in this case can call anything or action a nuisance. Also fines and for owners of a dog should be in place. Also dog handling training for owners should be a must if a dog is not of a gentle nature.
- Mandatory training for Pit Bull and nuisance dog owners on obedience and sensitivity training.
- Dog owners must show proof of training to be licenced.
- It is wrong, and unfair to single out "pitbull" breeds based on their looks and perceived jaw strength. Every bite damages. I believe the emphasis should be on obedience training for ALL dogs (including purse puppies). Possibly a higher licencing fee for dogs that do not pass obedience training. It is unfair to single out a breed/type based only on some peoples opinions. Probably people who have never really known a terrier. German Sheperds can do damage. It is about the owner, not the dog breed. I believe the emphasis should be on nuisance dogs and their owners, breed shouldn't matter.
- I am against breed specific legislation and bylaws. It is unfair and prejudiced for city council to impose them
- Obedience training should be incentivized for all breeds. While pit bulls and other large breeds can inflict more damage with a bite it is small breeds that often are aggressive due to a lack of training.
- All dogs registered in Calgary must have proof of obedience training. It's not the breed that's a problem, it's the owners. Very few people understand dog training or do it well.
- Don't judge the dog before it is warranted. Humans are almost ALWAYS responsible for an aggressive dog. Pile the fines on and make the human pay the price. Not the animal.
- Stop fixating on certain breeds. It's the owner not the dog
- Ban pit bulls (and the like) from Calgary.
- Educate people and children on how to handle animals...

- Pit bulls are only [removed] because of their [removed] owners. Train the OWNERS to treat their dogs properly and we won't be having this pit bull "issue".
- I do not support any BSL in Calgary. It have proven time and time again to not be effective. Please review available information on how BSL has not been successful. This is very disappointing that Calgary is even suggesting this.
- Low cost spay/neuter
- If dog, as above, injures animal/people the owner should be fined, dog seized and owner pays restitution for vet fees, etc related to injury
- I don't support BSL, all dogs should be treated equal. Individual incidents should be treated as individual incidents
- I do not support BSL. Each individual dog should be treated as an individual
- Offended by your discriminatory [removed] targeting breed - Pit bull is not a breed you dumb as a 80's pet rock moron stop! BSL is a failure the world over and I for one will protest daily if its imposed
- Training for owners of all dogs that are allowed off leash.
- Pit bulls are also named nanny dogs it really is not in their nature to harm it is the owners that make them aggressive yes they can be big and intimating yet rottweilers have the top bite force then Sheppards you dont here about them to often or what about our firehouse dog the delmation they to are breed with a fighting dog and not very good with kids. But there again its status police have shepherds firefighters have delmations and the drug dealers and bad guys have the pitt bull I guess the point I'm making is that because of the status pit bulls are looked at as mean aggressive killing machines when really there are gentle caring loving loyal dogs that just happen to get a bad rep because of the way they are treated.i would trust the lives of my children and grand children with a pitbull before any other breed I've said it a 1000 times get rid of the owners that are abuseing their dogs/ animals that is how you will solve the issues if you single out one breed for any stipulations you must be prepared to do it for all breeds as they are all animals and have the capacity of being dangerous.i personally disagree with the options you have above as they will not solve the issues just make them worse step in on animal cruelty dont take it out on a dog that was only acting the way the owners wanted.
- ALL DOGS SHOULD BE TREATED THE SAME AND FAIRLY. WHAT GOES FOR ONE, goes for all!
- Current owners of pit bulls can be allowed to keep their current dogs as long as they are muzzled when outsid eof their house.. The ownership, rearing and sale of new pit bulls must be banned. The severity of pit bull bites and attacks greatly outweighs any perceived right of ownership!
- [removed]
- none of these. Pit bulls are usually lovely dogs. I do nto support any kind of anti-pitbull bylaw.
- Concern for definition of "nuisance" are not necessarily dog behaviour (i.e. noise may be neighbour issues). Bites, aggression, damage would seem to be better for the definition
- I would modify one of the statements to read "There cannot be more than one nuisance dog in a household" (omitting Pit Bull), then I would agree with the statement

- Why the hate on pit bulls there are other breeds that are statistically more dangerous. Fact please not a popularity contest
- Banning the breeding or acquisition of pitbulls would be alright.
- I do not have a dog - "why does everyone always talk about pit bull dogs" I have been introduced to many dogs, pitbulls included and believe me it is not the dog but the owner that is the problem. I am more afraid of some some dogs than the larger ones. Lets be fair in dealing with problem dogs and not picking on one breed.
- Ban Pit bulls within city limits
- Don't constrain where animal insurance comes from, but specify min limits. Is nuisance dog designation lifetime or can it be rescinded, e.g. after obedience training?
- Every dog and owner should go through obedience training.
- All dog owners should by law have an obligation to send their dog (regardless of breed) to obedience training. There should be government regulated trainers and schools. When a dog enters a new home with a new owner both owner and dog should be required to recertify for obedience training. Heavy fines for dogs not certified as obedience trained.
- dogs deemed dangerous must be muzzled in all public areas
- I would make obedience training necessary for every breed of dog registered in the city, if what the city wants to do is actually decrease moderate-severe dog bites
- I disagree with singling out pit bulls
- Breed specific bans and conditions are BIGOTRY plain and simple. Chihuahuas in old age are FAR more vicious than any pit bull I've ever met. And I've met lots of both.
- Nuisance owners or owners who refuse to abide by city bylaws should lose their rights to own animals.
- Remove the word 'multiple' and replace with 'even after a single aggressive behavior'. Some people hurt others with guns - others are arming themselves with dogs.
- I hesitate to endorse some of these, as a "nuisance dog" can, by your definition, just be a dog that barks excessively. Requiring those dogs to be muzzled, have higher insurance, etc., seems excessive. Perhaps there needs to be more nuance allowed in how these terms are applied.
- Dogs defined above as "pit bulls" should not be permitted within the City of Calgary. They should be subject to removal and humanely euthanized.
- Pit Bulls do not need to be held as pets. I support a motion to limit pet ownership and not allow such dogs.
- Not sure I agree with any dog that has an appearance of the above dogs. Unless they show poor behavior they should not be lumped into a dangerous dog list
- Extra training for owners if they do not have a controlled dog
- Owner of offending dog is liable for any and all medical expenses incurred by either the dog or human
- any dog regardless of size or breed should be fined the same if a bite occurs; different designation/fine for 'being at large' and 'off leash' - eg. a dog under control on a pathway currently is designated as 'at large' - should be a leeway to a lower fine of off leash. Yet a dog in an off leash park that is not under the owners control (too far away from owner, does not recall), while should be technically at large as they are not under control, there seems to be no penalty for these owners.

- Increase knowledge on dogs and their behaviours for all people
- There is big difference between nuisance and dangerous. If nuisance simply means the dog has gotten out of its yard or barks, there should be no restrictions on these dogs although fines for offenses to the owners would be ok. Dangerous incidents (i.e. attacks or bites) need to be evaluated on a case by case basis and perhaps training requirements would be fine, for dogs with multiple incidents of this type of behavior, they should be prohibited from off leash parks (regardless of whether they have a muzzle). I also do not support breed- specific bylaws. Regulate behavior (dogs and owners), not breeds.
- Should be worded and applied to all dogs not selected breeds. Restrictions should only be applied on demonstrated Bad/Nuisance behaviours. All dogs must be licensed as having taken an passed obedience/temperment testing to be allowed in public spaces.
- This should not be just for select breeds of dogs, but all/any dog that hasn't been trained properly.
- BSL isn't the answer. Nuisance/aggressive labelling is the solution.
- Breed specific targeting does not work. Problem / nuisance dogs have problem owners. Bad behaviour in dogs is a result of inadequate or inappropriate training, not because of breed stereotypes. Owners should be fined / penalized, and restrictions on pet ownership for problem owners must be enforced.
- More money for officers for enforcement. Much more important than the useless art and huge city council pensions we pay for.
- It's not the breed, it's the owner. Go after the owner!
- No breed specific legislation
- The bylaw should be able to address specific dogs, rather than specific breeds. Any dog that has bitten another animal or person in a public place should be required to wear a muzzle when in public. Any dog that attacks (without provocation) other dogs or people should not be allowed in off leash parks. Nuisance behaviours should be dealt with according to the behaviour, not a blanket policy.
- Dog owners generally do not abide by requirements to have dogs on a leash and see the entire city as an off-leash area. it has gone way too far especially on the Crescent in the Rosedale area above McHugh Bluff.. Also the diagonal path running from 5th street NW towards downtown through McHugh Bluff is the only real option for anyone walking to work from the Rosedale community. It tends to be slippery in the winter and people are frequently being knocked over by dogs who are mostly friendly but its a hazard. It would be better to require pets to be on a leash on this path especially when there are so many other places people can let their pets off-leash. My kids have both been knocked over and I've seen lots of dangerous situations with bikes and off-leash dogs.
- Nuisance dogs should be defined separately; a roaming dog is far from being threatening and as the noise maker, owners could use help with ideas.
- All of these options are too targeted and neglect ownership responsibility as well as general education. If a nuisance occurs in ANY dog there should be made an effort to educate the owner and ensure proper training is conducted. It is a product of improper training and irresponsible ownership that can make a "bad" animal. Breed is not a legitimate excuse. Ensuring proper owner education and dog training should always be solution #1, not blind bylaws based on breed.

- Not all pit bulls are bad, eg: samoyed, german shepards, even dachshunds can bite. All breeds of dogs will bite if provoked.
- Mandatory training for owners of pit bulls.
- A dog that had bitten (in a mean way) should be euthanized. A pitbull bit our dogs ear off but the vet said it could have been much worse. That dog was never put down but it should have been because it will bite again except next time it could do much more damage than just taking an ear off another dog.
- Include training in animal behaviour for pit bulls and nuisance dogs. 2. Pit bulls can never be off leash at any time. They should be kept on a leash and under control of owner. I'd rather see that than a muzzle bylaw or a bylaw banning them from off leash parks (I think owners will just take them off leash in areas that are not designated as such causing additional problems). 3. Pit bulls must be on a property with secure fencing. 4. Pit bull and nuisance dog owners are responsible to reimburse for medical and vet costs for any person or animal their dog may injure from the dog bite/attack.
- There should be a special dog training to the owners of a large dogs
- Compulsory training for owners of nuisance dogs.
- Dogs that have attacked people causing severe injury should be put down.
- Severe penalties to owners of offending dogs for bits. 10k and up for severity. Punish the owners, not the dogs
- Higher fines for bad ownership. When you call bylaw about abuse to an animal not a whole lot is done. In reference to the latest attack, the owner was a abuser and clearly did not take care of the dog, said dog attacked and it is blamed then the owner hung his own dog. There needs to be more monitoring on people that should not own animals.
- Dog seized and euthanized if involved in more than one incident involving biting
- I would like to see all dog have muzzles when walking.
- There needs to be an appeals process for non-pit bulls declared "a nuisance". Our pet has passed away now but was reported to have bit someone when in fact it had not. We went to court over this and the judge basically reduced the fine to being off-leash instead of the bite but the records still show we were in court to defend a trumped up lie of a charge.
- Obedience training for ALL DOGS!, if the owner of a dog or multiple knows he she or they are reactive DON'T take them to a dog park and muzzle them when out on a walk to prevent anything that could possibly happen if the pet exhibits reactive behaviour, that way no one is hurt including the dog!
- I am not clear on when a dog would be seized for dangerous behaviour. I thought if a dog does cause harm to others it could be seized. Assessment and training should be required for those dogs who demonstrate aggressive behaviour to harm. As for other dogs who are being a nuisance, it would depend how bad they really are as some people just like to complain. I have received a small nip, wouldn't say bitten, by a dog who was on a leash and from that point on I just kept my distance and always positioned my hand so the dog never got another chance. Sometimes walking in off leash areas, we all need to do our part.

- The very best case scenario is to not allow ownership in Calgary of any pit bull breeds!!
- Owner engagement must be encouraged. A man walking one dog, drinking coffee and on a cell phone is not being responsible. A woman walking six dogs picking up after them and having them under control is responsible.
- PITY BREEDS ARE NOT THE PROBLEM THE [removed] [removed] OWNERS ARE FINE THEM. MAKE THEM HAVE TO GO THROUGH A PROGRAM LIKEGUN OWNERS. THEY ARE INTERMEDIATE DOGS THEY ARE NOT A PROBLEM THE OWNERSHIP BASE IS. EDUCATE THAT
- Owners of any dog that is not properly trained should be fined and dog should be placed in the care of a trained dog trainer to rehabilitate the dog. This is NOT a breed specific issue, it has to do with the owner and how they train and treat their dogs. Do NOT blame the dog for an irresponsible human.
- TRAIN the humans! The dogs are behaving like dogs. the reason some are more aggressive than others is the fault of lack of proper care and training. NO breed should be singled out as "stronger" There are many "strong" breeds.!
- Fines for people that do not pick up after dogs and properly dispose of feces.
- If "nuisance" dogs have gone through training they should be allowed anywhere other dogs go. I definitely do not support any different laws for pit bulls.
- bit bulls are not the only problem
- Do not discriminate against a breed of dog. Punish irresponsible oh owners
- Exception for noise as part of the determination of "nuisance" for the sake of the above restrictions.
- Ban German Shepards and Shepard crosses.
- ALL dogs that run and jump up to strangers showing no restraint, and seemingly vicious even if their owners do not think they are, must be on a leash regardless of the location.
- I am disturbed that this document is heavily swayed against pit bulls as a breed. There are numerous breeds that can be aggressive. In the vast majority of cases it is the owner that is the problem. All dogs regardless of size or breed shall require behavioral training if deemed a nuisance. This questionnaire is so disappointing. Not sure what happened to our fair an balances city of Calgary.
- Monitoring and orders/fines against negligent owners. Don't single out pit bull type dogs that's not appropriate. The term "nuisance" is the right term and would include all problem animals irrespective of breed. Hold the owner more accountable.
- All dogs declared (not just pit bulls as there are pit bulls or dogs that look like pit bulls that are fir lack of a better word nice dogs).
- Consider breeder or retailer requirements for training owners prior to purchasing pit bulls, etc. The training should cover the basics of safe handling and breed specific requirements with a test prior to the sale of the dog, or Imported dogs to the City of Calgary. This should also be a licensing requirement in the event that the purchase is made in another province or city.

- “If declared a nuisance” - by what criteria? I do not agree with criteria based on breed alone. My dogs have been attacked numerous times at the dog park and never by the breeds identified here. I am more concerned with dogs who exhibit this behaviour as being identified as nuisances. THEN I would support a lot of these suggestions, but not based solely on breed.
- Mandatory training for dogs AND their owners if their dog is a bite risk either for other dogs or humans. DO NOT separate pit bulls as "dangerous breed", because humans are these that are ultimately dangerous with not properly treating and training their dogs, whatever breed they are.
- Strict guidelines should apply to all large fighting dog breeds, such as Presa Canario, Dogo Argentino. Any of these dogs have a high prey drive, dangerous attack characteristics, heavy musculature, and weigh as much as an adult human. I would also support higher licensing fees and automatic $10,000 fines for any serious injuries inflicted by one of these dogs, as well as the dog automatically being euthanized.
- Stronger backyard breeding laws are required, and all dog owners should be forced to take obedience classes.
- It is not the breed it is the owner. ANY dog can be aggressive. Even little dogs.
- No differences between penalties for breeds
- If there are costs to dogs attacked by nuisance dogs the owner of that animal should be responsible for payment.
- Bite victims should be 100% compensated by owner expense when they're dog is found guilty of biting another dog at the hands of their disregard ie. Unleashed
- NO BSL! Obedience training could be promoted to ALL dog owners when they are adopting and registering their pets. Proper education for owners is the best way to avoid unwanted aggressive behavior. Perhaps lower-income homes can receive rebates and special offers for approved trainers through the city which will ultimately benefit all communities. Money for this training could also come from dog licencing costs, and owners with dogs which are unlicensed could pay a higher fine to help raise money for these efforts.
- Owners that leave after their dog instigates an incident should be fined.
- If you are going to legislate nuisance dogs then you should be targeting the breeds of dogs who are actually a nuisance like any smaller dog who bites consistently and daily. The dogs who jump on, scratch and bite children unprovoked. Who also bite other dogs. But because of their size it doesn't matter? All dog bites hurt. If Your logic to muzzle or restrict pit bulls is based on their physical strength and size then we should consider men too. They're known to be physically stronger than women. This bylaw is wrong on many levels. I support enforcing harsher penalties for irresponsible owners for all breeds. Don't single one breed out.
- Regardless of breed - dog owners should be charged in the criminal system for their dogs behavior. If a dog (of any breed) attacks a person the owner shall be charged with assault. If a dog (of any breed) attacks a person the owner shall be charged with assault. If a dog (of any breed) attacks a person the owner shall be charged with assault. If a dog (of any breed) kills a person the owner shall be charged with manslaughter. Breed is not important.

- any actions on "nuisance dogs" CAN NOT be restricted to specific breeds. considering 99% of people INCLUDING LAW ENFORCEMENT can't actually properly identify a pitbull, this will not be fairly applied. Also, no specific breed is an issue. Obedience training should be a requirement of ALL dog ownership no matter the breed and inclusive of fluffy little lapdogs and chihuahuas - make it mandatory for licencing. Be careful with the "dog chases or threatens" fine below because a lot of people don't understand dogs and a happy nice dog running toward you can be interpreted as a threat by people who don't like dogs or don't like big dogs. Nobody is scared of my daschund running at them but they will certainly freak out if my boxer mix runs at them even though my boxer mix is too shy of people and won't actually go near the person she is checking out.
- There should not be measures to restrict or punish dogs based only on their breed
- Require prospective owners of all dogs to prove they can care for whatever companion animal they choose. Don't penalize an animal for its irresponsible owner.
- These breeds of dogs are too unpredictable and there exist many cases of responsible owners losing control of their dogs, and in some cases both people and other pets have been injured. At the end of the day, legislation can not control the thoughts and behaviours of a human, let alone a dog. Responsible ownership is a construct that is easy to conjure, but in general, does not materialize much beyond picking up dog poo.
- Banning a breed is not a intelligent decision at all and borders on the line of stupidity. I have seen small dogs inflict major damage to children as they will put their face close to these dogs with little fear. People have to be responsible solely animals are animals and can be unpredictable at times. Even the most experienced people have had issues with animals.
- If a dog is declared a nuisance I am in support of increased fines or restrictions. But I have an issue with breed specific legislation. Countless studies have shown the inefficacy of BSL and I'm shocked it's being considered. Vocally and vehemently oppose BSL
- This wording is restrictive as a nuisance animal is the owners fault. I don't believe one single breed should be identified as all dogs have the ability to harm. It should be the mandate of the municipality to create laws that not only protect its citizens but the rights of a dog owner. Nuisance can be defined by your bylaw as receiving infractions for noise which should not impact an individual's home owners insurance. No
- If they bite or attack they should be put down a grizzly bear is a protected animal yet when they attack or fake attack they are put down a pit bull or it's relatives are not endangered put them down
- Pit bulls (and bully-type dogs generally) are not any more dangerous than any other breed. Breed-selective legislation is damaging, discriminatory, and scientifically unsound: all dog breeds must be held to equal standards of bite risk and nuisance behavior.
- Any dog can be a "Problem," Breed/Dog. Both my dogs have been attacked by a dog on a nice Sunday morning walk. The owner stepped up and paid for the 2400 bill. Fortunately both my dogs survived. The dog wasn't a "Pitbull". So please remove this from the process. Any dog can be aggressive, protective. Dog owners in certain situations need to be SMARTER and respectful of the environment.
- Opposing any measures to restrict or punish dogs based solely on their breeds.

- It is barbaric to declare any bylaw posed specifically to pit bulls. It would be an embarrassment to the city to take such a backwards step.
- Focus on owner's responsibilities - avoid targeted dog breed 'witch hunts'. Any poorly trained dog can turn into a 'nuisance'
- If a dog causes injury to another dog, cat or person, the owner MUST be responsible for paying any and all vet fees associated with the incident
- I oppose measures specific to breed, especially those that impact non-nuisance (innocent) dogs
- So frustrating that the city is talking about BSL. When I am out for a walk the most well behaved dogs in my neighborhood are the bully breeds. The owners always have great control of them. Just today I came across 2 dogs in which the owner did not have control and neither was a pitbull type dog. 1st was a woman riding her bike with her doodle running un leashed on the sidewalk running up to other dogs. 2nd was 2 children around the age of 5 walking a yorkie with NO adult present the dog was snarling and growling at me and my dog and broke free of the young child and charged at myself and my dog luckily I had very good control of my dog and the child was able to run and grab the leash. This is NOT OK BEHAVIOUR. If these were bully breeds people would be up in arms. At the end of the day the owner must take full responsibility. I cannot report these interactions as there is no address to attach to the complaint. What I am trying to say is this: all animals need to be under control at all times. I DO NOT SUPPORT BSL. I do support enforcing our current bylaw with possibly increasing fines for all breeds large and small. Bsl is expensive and does not fix anything.
- Obedience training required for all dogs!!! All dogs (including grandfathered ones) should require obedience training in order to be registered. All dogs need obedience training so that in a dangerous situation, they're more likely to universal commands. There are terrible dog owners out there who don't care of thier dogs hurt people, or thier dogs get hurt. Better trained dogs don't bark all day. Better trained dogs don't bite unless defending themselves. It's not about bully breeds. It's about bad owners.
- I oppose any measures to restrict or punish a dog based on breed
- Would also support a full ban on licensing of new pit bull breeds - there are a hundred+ other breeds and mixed rescue dogs that I'm not sure why people have to be adamant that they have the right to a breed that's caused so many problems in recent decads.
- Fines need to be WAY higher if a dog causes death to another dog. $350? That's nothing compared to a vet bill. If my dog was killed by another dog and the other owner was given $350 as a fine, [removed]
- I do not support breed spEcific legislation. Only bad owners.
- Increased access to and support for training and behaviour evaluation of all adopted dogs and additional resources to make obedience school more affordable
- YOU point fingers @ 'pit bull' type breeds (pit bull) is a reference term.... Why are YOU NOT holding the OWNER responsible? Its not the dogs fault of its breed just like its not your fault for your breed! ARE Chihuahuas, Mini French bull dogs/ Pugs, Schnauzer and Shih Tzu ALL being considers for this

- Mandatory dog behaviour seminar/webinar. Understanding dog language and signals is a huge part of reducing bites, dog fights, etc. This is why supervising kids and dogs doesn't work. I would guess 80% of people have no idea what to actually look for in terms of dog signals and behaviour, so that 'supervision' is rendered useless. If people know what to look for when a dog is uncomfortable, near a bite, etc. - then we can minimize the risk of a bite/fight substantially. Alternatively, BSL has proven to be ineffective. First - those that would be identifying an American Pitbull Terrier (this wasn't correctly noted on the survey), or a breed with similar characteristics don't even have the proper experience and education to do so. Many dogs would be incorrectly labeled and penalized because of this. Second - responsible pet ownership should always be the focus, not BSL. For example - If a blonde haired kid beat up another kid at school, does it make sense to ban all blonde haired children because of that act? No. You would default to the parents and professionals to handle the child and situation responsibly and provide support where needed. It's the same thing. Banning or Muzzling a specific breed just isn't effective. [personal information removed] it is really disappointing to live in a city this is even being considered. APT (or breeds 'alike') are NOT the only Breeds with a powerful bite. German Shepherds for example are, and they aren't listed above. Why? To claim this is based on the bite power, is ignorant and insulting.
- Every single point here should strictly be decided in a case to case basis. I'm really disappointed to see that Calgary would take a step back and start discriminating towards "pitbulls". It's not the dog, it's the owner and good owners shouldn't be penalized for no reason. Not to mention passing these laws would lead to so many good dogs being euthanized because less people would adopt them if they were forced to muzzle or not allowed to bring a perfectly well behaved dog to a dog park. Calgary is working so hard to accept all races, all sexual orientations and all people in general for who they are. Why would we do anything different for animals. Let's be what Calgary should be which is accepting and non discriminatory and make our city an amazing, accepting, welcoming place for everyone including all breeds of dogs.
- Against measures imposed upon dogs based specifically on their breeds
- All dogs and owners should do obedience training
- it would be absolutely ridiculous to put any bylaws on pitbull since they are not a breed. they are mix breeds.. plus if they are train properly like any other dog they are the best friend you could have. we dont accept people to be judge by their color or apparent, same should be for dogs..
- no pit bulls, or these types of dogs within city limits
- No extra bylaw. And do a case by case assessment
- I do NOT support breed specific legislation. This line of questions are not fair to responsible pit bull owners (I am not one, but know several)
- I do not support breed specific fears. Please address each situation as an individual issue not one blanket for all (its like saying only one large adult male person per household as they are larger and can cause more damage if they become violent) and its simply wrong. I would support cruelty free behavior training (not obedience) is likely best directed at the dog owners who cause the dog issues to occur via lack of understanding how they are driving unwanted behavior. Education, awareness and skills training are key for the people to be able to help the dog. Please remember the dog has no control of their life situation and no choice in their owners yet they suffer the consequences / are held responsible.

- Ban vicious breeds!!!
- Dangerous behaviour needs to be better defined.
- Pitbulls as listed above do not have more potential for bite damage. They are a nanny breed initially bred to help watch over children. It's the owner not the dog so stop penalizing the dogs and punish the [removed] people who don't understand how to take care of an animal. Jail time or revoke the ability to own a pet from the owner if a dog attacks.
- DO NOT impose breed specific laws. That is such a backwards way of fixing issues. We should be punishing owners and not the dogs. Some of these breeds are the sweetest pets and you will take away someone's family member. Get to the root of the issue by higher punishments for owners, do not punish innocent animals because of their bad reputation. I am disappointed Calgary is even considering this. Be better!
- We need to ban Pit Bulls period (excluding ones living in the city now). Phase out ownership of them.
- Please do not single out breeds - pit bulls are not bad dogs - yes they have strong jaws, but so do other breeds of dog.
- Fines for nuisance owners, who are unable to manage their dog, no matter what breed. Programs to support training for owners to cope with any dog breed.
- Ban ownership of pit bulls
- Mandatory training after each nuisance offence. Why target pitbull breeds specifically? Especially when you have already stated that they do not have the most amount of bites. Has this approach worked in other cities? How is cracking down on pitbulls going to help prevent the majority of dog bites?
- No breed specific legislation, "pit bulls" have a better temperament than many dogs. If a smaller dog attacks a "pitbull" and a "pitbull" retaliates, the pitbull will be punished. No breed legislation is effective.
- People should have a place to report dangerous dog owners and owners given an opportunity to take them to training ect. To help prevent issues before they happen there should not be restrictions based on breeds. It's silly to rule out one breed VS another. If you're making these rules about pit bulls what about Rottweilers, Mastiffs, Ridgebacks ect they have the same power as bully breeds. Make owners more responsible for training ANY breed.
- Nothing. Close the bylaw enforcement department and fire the entire department.
- I have owned 9 pitbulls, and have no issues. They have been therapy dogs for Military and also with children. I think it's horrible to target a breed of dog; before pitbulls, Doberman's were given a bad name. Prior to that, German Shepherds. In places around the UK, pitbulls are used as police dogs because they are outstanding to train. To consider putting rules towards a particular dog such as a pitbull, is horrible. I've witnessed more problem dogs at dog parks and bites, attacks, from chihuahuas and small dogs as people underestimate them due to size. But they are also nasty and mean if not trained; which people tend not to train a small dog as well as a large because they feel they can “handle” their small dog due to size. But they cause more issues around kids and dogs than a “pitbull” breed.

- All bylaws should be all inclusive not for just one type of dog as many dogs have different traits not just those you are deeming a problem.
- All dogs/owners must take a training course within 3 months of adoption (for adult dogs/re-adoption) or one year of birth.
- I would support higher licensing fees for all dog breeds to regulate and investigate pitbull breeding. Good breeders have an important role to play in ensuring their dogs are sold to responsible owners. Informal breeding or puppy mills can result in dogs ending up with irresponsible owners, or the dogs themselves may have emotional problems if they were bred in neglectful environments.
- People are the problem, not pets. People who chose to bring aggressive dogs to dog parks will likely continue to do so even if by-laws prohibit it.
- This is so ambiguous. I have gone to a dog park several times where the highest nuisance dogs have been less than 15 lbs. There are several dogs that bark non stop, but we accept this because they are small and so we deem them harmless. There are also several times where I have seen Collies who become aggressive because they are chasing a ball and other dogs want to play as well. Rather than banning breeds, why not consider banning toys? Many dogs become aggressive simply because they are possessive of their toys. Furthermore, I have met many many pit bulls that are absolutely harmless. What is the actual statistic on pit bull/ bully breed attacks vs other dog breeds?
- I take offense that you have only highlighted one breed of Dog. All dogs can bite. German Shepard, Bull Mastiff, Rottweiler, Dalmatian, Doberman Pincer etc etc etc etc .. Please take out " BREED SPECIFICS " I find this as an alarmist and an offensive discrimination against one specific breed of dog.
- Ban pit bulls outright. No pit bulls should be allowed in city limits
- The American Pit Bull Terrier has less PSI than a Labrador or Chow Chow. It is the lack of knowledge from the owner, or plain irresponsibility, that results in any dog being a danger. We need to educate pet owners of simple dog language. How else can we understand what dogs are staying before it turns into barks and lunging?? I do not mind a higher insurance cost for "pit bull" owners as a TEMPORARY solution, for them to help those who have a biased fear of these dogs. This cost will help weed out the evil owners who are not responsible, with any breed.
- I wonder if instead of specifying 'pit bull' it should be dogs of a certain strength/jaw strength that require extra training, insurance, etc.
- I'm in favour of euthanizing any dog that attacks and kills another animal or viciously bites people without provocation.
- Fines for dog owners who do not address barking dog problems.
- Maybe have a bully breed off leash park that keeps them separate from other people that aren't comfortable around bullie breeds
- If pitbulls are not involved in more bites than others this is blatantly ridiculous dog-racism! Train owners! Nuisance dogs being "noisy or at-large" should not require such draconian measures.

- Have an online venue in which those witnessing / providing written or video proof of dangerous or nuisance dog behaviour may allow for bylaw officers to investigate the dog in question.
- Ban Pit Bulls out right.
- There cannot be more than one nuisance dog in a household - I disagree with the use of pit bull or nuisance in this questions listed above. Someone should not own more than one nuisance dog regardless of the dog's breed. It would also be beneficial to include in the bylaws that the owner of a nuisance dog is responsible to pay the damages caused by that dog (ie vet bills, property damage etc)
- Breed specific rules are horrible! This goes against EVERYTHING that society is trying to fix right now. Punish the dog and the owner, not the breed. Please stop considering these laws!!
- Mandatory fine of $10,000 issued to owner(s) or handlers of pitbull that attacks a human. Mandatory fine of $6,000 to owner(s) of pitbull that attack another dog. Mandatory traceback of pitbull attack to any SPCA or Humane Society or any other shelter that adopts out a pitbull or pitbull type mix dog that attacks another dog or child with mandatory fee of $5,000 issued to that organization.
- Stronger bylaws that target repeat offenders whether it be roaming, barking, etc. You don't define "nuisance" so I cannot agree with any mentioned propositions regarding "nuisance" dogs. There is NO EVIDENCE that banning or restricting "pitbull" type dogs decreases bites. I would be in favour of mandatory spay-neuter of all dogs that are not a part of a regulated (ie CKC) breeding program.
- FINES FOR ALL DOG BREEDS NOT JUST PITBULLS A LABRADOR IS PRONE TO BITE AS ANY OTHER DOG!!! Disgraceful city of calgary
- NO BREED-SPECIFIC BANS OR LAWS. STUPID AS [removed]
- Please do better research about your so called "pitbulls" having more strength. A simple google search would do. Perhaps also including someone on your committee who has actual, hands on experience with your so called "pitbulls" would be beneficial.
- Much higher fines for owners that have allowed their pets to be untrained and placing the responsibility on them.
- I do not support a bylaw that included the term BSL. All dogs have the potential to bite and specific breeds should not be singled out because of their strength. Especially when you are only singling out a few. Seems bias. The bylaw should be on a case by case basis, look at the circumstances surrounding the bite. For example was the dog properly trained? Spayed/neutered? Abused? So many factors that lead to a dog bite. Was this the first offence? Researchers have looked into the cause of dog bites and breed is not one of them. Identifying a "pitbull" is subjective and mislabeling mixed breeds will become an issue. Not to mention BSL is incredibly expensive to enforce and our tax payers money is better spent on educating the public around bite prevention. Introducing funding for spay and neuter clinics as most dogs that are intact tend to be a bit more aggressive. [personal information removed] Increase fines but enforce them. BSL in other cities and countries around the world has not worked and are starting to repeal their BSL. Introducing BSL can take away from the actual root of the problem and that is the owner and the owners responsibility to keep their dog under control at all times. BSL only punishes the responsible owners it does not make irresponsible owners accountable for their actions. The owners behaviour has a direct impact on their dogs aggressive behaviour. Time and money will be better spent on addressing irresponsible owners, enforcing BREED NEUTRAL BYLAWS, providing educational programs for the public, and responding to actual dog incidents no matter the size or breed of dog. [personal information removed] We need to get to the root of the problem and that is the owners need to be in control of their animal at all times.

- Don't single a breed out. It's like saying ALL policemen are bad, or ALL council members are only in it for themselves. Obedience training should be required for ALL dogs if they utilize Public Off Leash areas. People need to have control of their pets.
- If a dog has caused any harm to an other dog or person it should be put down.
- There is no reason to discriminate against a particular breed. It is the responsibility of the owner to care for and train the dog so it is not a threat to other people.
- How about supporting training for the dog and the owner first at no cost. Education goes a long way. Other measures can be implemented AFTER non-compliance with a mandatory training order..
- Owners of Pit Bulls must have taken a Course on how to handle a Dog .
- You have to treat ALL dogs the same, otherwise it is illegal to stereotype and you open the City to several lawsuits, aside from the fact that, more small dog bites go unreported than any animal bite period. All dogs have the ability to be a nuisance. Their strength has nothing to do with it. We all deal with some asshole neighbor whose shitty little dog won't stop barking ALL DAY. That is a nuisance dog in a neighborhood. Dogs who repeatedly escape, that's a nuisance in a neighborhood. A dog existing, that simply LOOKS like it MIGHT be a nuisance, is no reason to penalize it. All large breed dog owners should be required to know how to handle them, and to some extent, need training. Teach ladies and seniors not to carry their small dogs like a toy as it gives them giant egos that make them think they're the size of a human and, therefore, the alpha/equal. They will bark and bite and growl and snap at anything that is bigger than them and comes too close because they mature thinking they're huge, so everything big scares them. This alone results in more bites a year than all other animals combined. The City is not using facts to create their bylaws, they're using fearmongering. It's the equivalent of jailing a group of people because of the color of their skin or hair or eyes. These dogs don't choose to look big or scary. Do you not remember the dobermans of the 80s on the news, the rottweilers and shepherds of the 90s. The very things you're insinuating about pitbull looking dogs, were once said about multiple other dogs, who are no longer worried or talked about. The only reason that is, is because now, with social media and the "news" more people have access to sensationalized dog attack stories. You never, EVER hear about all the other dog bites. Just "pitbull type" ones. You've fallen victim to those lies. An Akita has the most vicious dog bite and their attacks are almost 100% fatal to humans, but they don't make the list? Chihuahuas and shih tzu's are responsible for more than half of bites on children under 10, but they aren't on the nuisance dog breed list? You are penalizing such a small percentage of the dog world, that it's useless. Media has also said that more people come forward with a pitbull "attack" because of the attention it garners. That is a hate crime. Dogs with a PROVEN aggressive nature or history of violence, should definitely be evaluated. In fact, you could just hire actual dog professionals, maybe just a couple extra employees, to evaluate and analyze the dogs who are reported or who have a history, rather than terrorizing families and children who have "pitbull looking" members of their family. I would reconsider your choices. They're too judgmental and you will lose even more people of Calgary than the recession has released already.

- BSL- evidence shows it decreases the number of bites requiring hospitalization: <https://injuryprevention.bmj.com/content/19/3/177>
- I wouldNot support any of these examples
- Pit bulls should not be singled out period. It is not this breed it is known that other breeds can be worse for issues such as biting and harming people. It should be the onus on the owner for ALL breeds. We should never ever single one breed out period to do this is like singling our one culture or one race in humans. The exact same thing. Not fair or just.
- It's discrimination having specific bylaws just for one breed of dog just because they have a strong bite. There are so many other aggressive breeds that also have a strong bite. Calgary shouldn't jump on the hating pit bull band wagon.
- Ban pit-bulls in the city
- Obedience training for ALL animals. And tougher laws for idiot owners, not breed specific.
- Owners of pit-bull like dogs and/or nuisance dogs must take a mandatory (online?) training session; Owners found to be participating in anything close to dog-fighting to be fined a LARGE sum.
- Fines for owners not controlling bad behavior dogs
- Higher fines for dogs not leashed in public parks or sidewalks
- I do not agree with isolating a specific breed for aggression profiling. Aggressive dogs are the result of irresponsible owners, not breed-specific. The fact that the city has narrowed in on a specific breed of dog in relation to aggressive dogs and dog bites is disappointing.
- If a dog hurts another dog it should be the owners responsibility to pay the vet bill.
- Nuisance dogs owners MUSTpay any vet bills generated by injuries to other dogs they attack.
- Full ban on any new pit bull ownership. In addition, add a requirement that any current pit bulls in the city be spayed or neutered. Any unlicensed pit bulls should be seized.
- Nuisance dogs will likely be re-offenders and may turn into vicious dogs since their behaviour was not corrected at a younger age. In my experience owners of nuisance dogs are not skilled and educated enough to prevent future offences. For example all three of our kids, at young age were bitten by the same neighbour dog. Neither the owner nor the dog improved the behaviour. In my opinion a dog that bites at multiple occasions and improvement is not noted should be removed and euthanized to prevent harm especially to children who cannot distinguish a dog that can be dangerous to them.
- More bylaw officers to enforce bylaws. Eg dogs on leash on paved pathways this is a common violation
- They're shouldn't be anything other in place. Every dog is capable of biting it's up to the owners to train them
- Any dog can be dangerous, don't just target a breed

- The owners who train their dogs to be mean should have a higher fine and if the problem persists they should not be allowed to own any more animals. Animals are trained to be mean, it should not be taken out on the animals, its the humans that are the problem in these situations
- Redefine nuisance dog as clearly one exhibiting dangerous behaviour not just noisy or running at large. I dont have a dog but feel that this is too broad. If a dog is Exhibiting dangerous behaviour then fines are larger when bylaws are broken, they should not be allowed at off leash dog parks and must be muzzled when out and about.
- I only support a BREED NEUTRAL BYLAW. There is no evidence that restricting a specific breed will reduce the number of dog bites. Researchers have reported that the factors of a dog bite is not breed related. Identifying a Pit Bull type dog is extremely subjective and will lead to the mislabeling of mixed dogs. BSL is a complete waste of money with no reduction of dog bites to show for it. Mandatory spay/neuter of animals will reduce the aggression factor. The city needs to look at funding low cost spay/neuter clinics, a bylaw that is BREED NEUTRAL and focuses on the behaviour of the owner and the individual dog, graduated fines for any individual dog (not breed) that is deemed dangerous, a bylaw that holds the owner financially responsible for failure to adhere to bylaw, a stronger enforcement for neglect and abuse on an animal, community education, bite reduction education for public. So many options that would be better suited than BSL. [personal information removed] By enforcing bylaws and educating the public that I will support.
- I think the dog should be obedience trained. That is all. The problem is backyard breeders and lack of spaying, neutering. Only licensed people should be able to breed Any animal. All animals should be spayed and neutered as pets. This would help with the unnecessary euthanizing of animals. There should be a fee Included to cover the costs of neutering, Spaying, vaccines etc. I feel if a person willingly pays a fee, they might be more committed to responsibility of owning a pet.
- The City of Calgary is reviewing their responsible pet ownership bylaws. Included in these proposed bylaws is a ton of breed-specific legislature discriminating against pitbull-type dogs. The proposed bylaws include a definition of “pit bull” that names four breeds of pitbull-type dogs and then “a dog that has an appearance and physical characteristics that are substantially similar to those of dogs referred to in any clause a) to d)”. A study (1) concluded using appearance to determine breed was highly unreliable and out of 244 dogs identified as pitbull-type dogs, 62% had less than 50% DNA concentration from pitbull type ancestry. The survey itself states “...while pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents than any other dog breed, the reason they are listed here is because a pitbull’s strength allows the potential for a more severe bite”. This is scientifically inaccurate. There is nothing anatomically advantageous in terms of bite force about a pitbull-type dog’s skull that makes their bite any more forceful than other big dogs. A couple studies (2, 3) concluded that domestic canids biting force was strongly related to size of the dog, body weight, size and shape of the skull, and the presence of mouth related pain. Pitbull-type dogs are reported (4) to have a bite force of 235 PSI, which is 26% lower than the average bite strength of the breeds tested and fully in-line with other dogs of similar sizes and strengths (i.e. German Shepards, 238 PSI). The Canadian Veterinary Medical Association (CVMA, 5) states a number of human, dog, and environment related factors contribute to the risk and severity of dog bite incidents. Lastly, the City of Calgary is proposing that “additional liability insurance be required for pit bulls, pit bulls cannot be in off-leash parks and must be muzzled in public (including off-leash parks), obedience training is required for pit bulls, there are higher fines for pit bulls involved in bylaw offences, and there cannot be more than one pit bull in a household”. A few studies (6,7) concluded that behaviour (including aggressive behaviour) is influenced by genetics, environment, and experience among other factors due to substantial within-breed behavioural differences. Breed doesn't define behaviour, and no reputable animal welfare organization (CVMA, ASPCA, AVMA, AKC, AVSAB, CDC, NACA, etc) supports dangerous dog legislation that is discriminatory of a specific breed.

- Calling out pitbulls is not a fair statement if the stats show that they are not escalated biters.
- If a dog bites or attacks a person or another animal, there should a very clear ONE STRIKE RULE. An aggressive animal should be put down Immediately, the owner should face a hefty fine. If there is a history of the owner having aggressive animals, then a permanent ban on pet ownship should be enforced.s
- Ban them. They may be able to be trained to be good family pets, but there have been too many incidents where other pets are harmed or killed. It's just not worth it.
- It is absolutely ridiculous to have breed specific bylaws. A bad dog is the result of a bad owner. Also, why are pitbulls being targeted when there are so many other large and powerful dogs that could cause damage? A Kangel has the most powerful bite force of any dog, but it looks nothing like a pitbull. The media is feeding a misconception about pitbulls, and it is completely unacceptable.
- Dangerous behaviour definition needs to be defined. Nuisance dog definition needs to be defined ..cannot be open to opinion of enforcement offer.
- If a dog is involved in an attack, the animal should automatically be destroyed and the owner should see larger fines and possibly jail time for multiple infractions.
- There should be no breed specific legislation, only dogs considered a nusicense after demonstrating certain behaviours.
- Ban them - grandfather in existing pit bulls, but ban the acquisition and ownership of new ones.
- Proven and fact is the Pitbull has a lessor bite strength than other dogs of similar size such a German Shepard, Rotweiler and many other large breeds .all of your above questions suggest a current bias that has been instilled into the public domain by media hype
- Complete ban on pit bulls
- I don't understand why Do you want to bring breed-specific, Pit bulls are not the aggressive breed, I want the owners to be accountable for any breed of dog, small or large, to be responsible.
- pig bulls should be banned in the city.
- Owners of nuisance dogs that cause damage should have to pay for that damage.
- owners of dogs responsible for death or injury of another animal should be help responsible for all vet and related costs of injured party.
- Pit bulls should be banned in Calgary. Too much risk to greater public (especially vulnerable people - kids, elderly, weak)
- Ban all pit bull ownership.

- Penalize the owner of the “bad dog” and let the people with good dogs do as they please. I’ve met some lovely pit bulls!
- It is not the pitbull as a breed that is the problem. Having come from the Maritimes where there are lots of pitbull mixes. The problem in this city seems to be that the owners take their dogs to off leash parks and THINK they can control their dog. Unfortunately they have no idea how and ruin things for other pet owners.
- ban the pit bulls, please. As a dog owner (and I work with dogs as well) I know all the excuses used by the pit bull enthusiasts. Ive also seen the damage these inconsistent breeds can cause. One 'accident' is too many
- Ban then entirely. Doent hurt anyone to not b able to own a angry breed dog. Only people who do own them are the lower class people who wont even follow the above rules.
- A ban on all pitbull breeds within city limits
- Owners of dogs that bite a second time must face much more severe penalties including, lifetime bans on dog ownership, jail time penalties, and at the very least must pay all medical and veterinarian costs. bills
- Targetting Pitulls or similar breeds is silly, as all studies have shown that banning them does not decrease the number of bites and their severity. Would be a waste of taxpayers money to target this breed.
- Ban pit bulls. They do have more severe incidents than other dog breeds and I bet at least 30% when taken as a quantitative measure. If you don't have the statistics look at Edmonton's. Also this would be the most enforceable measure. The rest will only be determined in reactionary enforcement (so is basically useless for preventing anything).
- Often dog behaviour issues are a result of owners' behaviours; dog training needs to be understood to educate the owner as much as (or more than) the dog!
- BSL leads to higher costs to cities and taxpayers. More animal control resources are required to investigate reports of “pit bulls” – policing their visual appearance rather than answering calls about actual risks or behaviour complaints. Disputes about labelling tie up resources and may ultimately end up in court. Discrimination, restrictions, and higher fees may mean that a city may actually see more of these dogs in their sheltering system for a longer amount of time. If a dog is found at large the owner may be less inclined to claim him. It can also be more difficult for owners to find housing or other resources, resulting in more surrendered dogs, and fewer opportunities to adopt them out when the legislation is stacked against them.
- ban pit bulls - period, end of the problem
- Mandatory testing of owners abilities to control and train their dog. Dog should also be checked for signs of abuse amd neglect.
- I support a full ban on pitt bulls and pit bulls like dogs
- CITYWIDE BAN ON ALL PITBULL BREEDS PUNISHABLE BY $$$$$FINES SEIZE OFFENDING DOGS AND HUMANELY EUTHANISE THEM IF IT CAN BE PROVEN THE OFFENF+DING DOG HAS HARMED ie BITTEN OR ATTACKED any HUMAN any ANIMALie another dog or cat/pet/or

child NO exceptions NO appeals and the owners get a CRIMINAL RECORD and PAY damages to the "victims" ps. I AM SERIOUS-IT HAS TO STOP>the trauma doesn't "go away."

- [removed] and leave people alone. Also, you're punishing the dogs for [removed] owners. This is simply stupidity at large.
- Restricting breed ownership has not reduced the incidence of dog bites. A survey of reported dog bite rates in 36 Canadian municipalities found no difference between jurisdictions with BSL and those without. Likewise, a 2010 Toronto Humane Society survey found no change in dog bites in Ontario in the years before and after Ontario's BSL. Calgary, however, saw a five-fold reduction over 20 years – from 10 bites per 10,000 people in 1986 to two in 2006. Rather than banning breeds, Calgary uses strong licensing and enforcement plus dog safety public education campaigns. Ontario Calgary The Future Vancouver, Cincinnati and the Netherlands recently repealed their breed specific legislation.
- Breed specific legislation, including Ontario's pit bull ban, is problematic for many reasons The law punishes dogs for their appearance, when aggression can result from many factors, including lack of training and socialization, lack of exercise and mental stimulation, poor breeding, mistreatment, health issues and failure to spay/neuter (which reduces aggression) It deprives owners of due process, with no objective method for establishing whether a mixed breed dog falls under the legislation's vague "pit bull" definition. 1 The ban is unconscionable. As dogs are considered pit bulls unless proven otherwise, the law is open to abuse through false allegations and unfairly penalizes low income individuals, where an accusation can mean the de facto death of their dog. Focussing on breeds gives the public a false sense of security, as individual dogs may be dangerous, regardless of breed; and punishes many dogs that are not dangerous. It is costly to enforce, both for municipalities (through increased sheltering and enforcement costs) and the province (through lengthy, expensive and high profile court cases). Various jurisdictions have found that BSL does not work because it targets specific breeds instead of irresponsible owners. The Centres for Disease Control in the US noted that, not only is it virtually impossible to calculate bite rates for specific breeds, but dogs of any breed can become dangerous if they are raised to be aggressive and individuals who exploit dogs will simply turn to another breed.
- Higher fines for off leash dogs in regular parks/pathways. Too many owners are convinced that their dog is good. Please enforce broadly, my dog has been threatened by multiple 'safe' breeds with carless owners
- It would be nice to just ban the breed altogether. My dog was attacked by 3 different pit bulls in her lifetime. How very sad for a Nova Scotia duck tolling retriever
- Higher fines and sentencing that includes a ban on owning animals if you have not trained your nuisance dog.
- A dog bites, period, it is seized and euthanized. Just like we do with bears, cougars, coyotes, or any other vicious animal.
- I absolutely do NOT support breed specific rules. From everything I've read there is no evidence that there are more issues with pit bull breeds, and there are a number of common breeds that consistently test higher for bite strength (German Shephard, Doberman, Rottweiler, bull dogs, and many more less common breeds)

- Nuisance dog owners should be made to pay the vet bills for animals their dogs have injured.
- Drastically increase penalties for owners of aggressive dogs of any breed, including jail time.
- Obedience training should be required as part of the city license program
- This is absolutely ridiculous. Twenty years ago, it was Dobermans, then it was German Shepherds, then it was Rottweilers, now it's pit bulls. Pit bulls as a breed ARE NOT DANGEROUS; they are nanny dogs unless brutally trained by vicious owners. Each dog should be judged individually. If you look at statistics for 2019, Labrador Retrievers were responsible for more attacks than pit bulls. IT'S THE DEED, NOT THE BREED.
- No dogs for people in trailer parks. I don't support breed specific legislation but we can all pretend we are good people when we make poor people suffer.
- As a Vet Tech this survey is very lacking in evidence to support special restrictions for "pitbulls" because as you said they are not more aggressive than any other breed of dog. If the city wants to address nuisance dogs they should be requiring behavior training before a dog is adopted or registered and if an incident happens with an animal who has not participated in this training there should be a fine for that. If they have participated in the training, further training should be required before they are labelled as nuisance. There should be different restrictions for dogs who are labelled nuisance because of excessive barking vs aggression.
- A dog that bites is not necessarily a dangerous dog . You must look the circumstances. Was the dog in a dog fight and The human trying to break up fight get bit . That would be the humans fault . Has someone come into the dogs property not invited and got bit ? That would be the humans fault . Dogs are animals. They have territories and boundaries . What's the dog that bit being abused and finally decided they were not going to take another blow to the head . All circumstances not the dogs fault and should not be punished . Now if a dog attacks un provoked and seriously hurts someone then yes they are dangerous and should be put down but an attack is much different then a bite their are lots of levels to biting and it's up to us humans to do the right thing and educate ourselves instead of always trying to push the blame onto the next poor animal victim. All dog breeds have the potential to hurt and bite stats show that toy breeds are more aggressive and dangerous then large breeds but bc they are cute and small they get away with it . I think the city of Calgary needs more education better off leash areas with specific guidelines to owners and separate areas for large and small breeds . The law should be for all dogs and dog owners period .
- Owner is responsible for his or her dog no matter the breed all rules should be applied to all dogs the same as they are to humans
- I recommend you charge the owners. 99% of the time it is the owners mishandling of a canine that brings out the aggression. No particular breed is born aggressive. A mistreated animal presents itself in unfavourable ways as they can't express their pain otherwise. Stiffer requirements for dog ownership and severe maximum fines with community work for animal abuse would help eliminate many of these existing issues.
- Owners of nuisance dogs should be required to pay for damage done by their dogs.

- I'm in favor of requiring muzzles for dogs exhibiting reactive or aggressive behavior. "Nuisance" such as barking or being at large does not warrant that in my opinion.
- I support responsible owner legislation, not breed-specific legislation. Bylaws should hold owners accountable for the behaviour of their dogs. Fines should increase for owners with multiple pet-related offences, and owners with previous citations for dangerous animal behaviour should be required to hold insurance for all pets they own. If only dogs—and not their owners—are tracked for multiple offences, it allows negligent owners to rid themselves of "nuisance" animals, purchase or adopt new animals, and continue the same cycle of negligent or abusive behaviours. Responsible owner legislation motivates pet owners to be accountable for the behaviour of their animals and deters irresponsible pet ownership.
- I do not like that Calgary is exploring breed specific legislation.
- All dogs and owners go through training, no matter the size or breed of dog. Dogs the harm another dog has to pay vet bill
- Why single out Pit bulls? Please do your research, PPSI the Pit Bull is not even in the top 3. What is the City's definition of a Pit Bull? That is the first problem, a Pit Bull is a slang name for a APBT, grouping dogs together because they have a blocky head and short hair is wrong. Breed profiling is wrong. All dogs are individuals, treat them as such. I am all for pet responsibility but not discrimination!.
- There appears to be a lot of focus on the dog rather than the Owners. I'd like to see Owners of nuisance dogs restricted in their ability to have a pet if their nuisance dog has to be apprehended.
- Ban dangerous breeds of dog
- I want owners to be responsible for vet bills/medical costs of the injured party. If they choose to have insurance, good for them. If not, they're on the hook.
- Proof of insurance to be provided to licensing authorities at annual renewal.
- Bylaws should NOT include breed specific language!
- The City should consider applying the pit bull standards to all other bully breeds.
- Pit bulls not be allowed within the city of Calgary.
- PITBULLS SHOULD BE BANNED!!! HOW MANY MORE STORIES DO WE HAVE TO READ ABOUT PITBULLS FATALLY ATTACKING OTHER DOGS OR PEOPLE, OR CAUSING GRIEVOUS INJURIES?!!!
- If your dog bites a person or other dog ONCE (of course bit must be sufficiently severe eg blood draw) It should be put down! Dog ownership is a privileged and a responsibility not a right
- Stop bred specific bans...how about mandatory pet owner training prior to owning an animal
- A nuisance dog is owned by nuisance owner who has no regard for the laws that are already in place. There are ONLY bad owners, The actions of the dog are at the discretion of the owner so owners must be held to a higher standard. For god's sake, people need a licence to catch a fish but anybody can get a dog??! Preposterous!
- ALL BREEDS OF DOGS ARE CAPABLE OF BITING. EACH INCIDENT SHOULD BE HANDLED ON ITS OWN AND NOT JUST TARGETING BULLY BREEDS OR DOGS THAT MAY LOOK LIKE A

BULLY BREEDS. THERE ARE SOME PRETTY VICIOUS SMALL BREED DOGS THAT HAVE COME AFTER MY LARGE BREED CALM DOG

- Obedience training required for all breeds of dogs before they become a nuisance
- Owners of dogs that do bite or are a nuisance should be blacklisted from owning animals.
- Training for Owners who's dogs have been declared a nuisance
- Ban pit bulls
- Due to covid the city is saying it is running at a deficit. Why are you wasting time and money looking at changing a bylaw to something that has already been proven in other cities to not be effective? I feel it is unfair to responsible dog owners and dogs to single out one type of dog based on their looks
- I support a ban on pit bulls, including the other breeds listed above
- QUIT SAYING PITBULLS OR OTHER BIG DOGS WHEN LITTLE DOGS ATTACK MORE.
- Obedience training for all new pet owners.
- Mandatory rehabilitation to prove the dog has been full rehabilitated before being allowed in public again/ around other people or dogs.
- Consider having a higher annual license fee for "nuisance" dogs; seems unfair to penalize only one type of dog (PitBull) when many different breeds can cause issues.
- Owners are the root cause of this issue. I don't understand why the city of Calgary is pointing blame at the dogs, it's not their fault. Owners should be held to account to ensure proper training and treatment of dogs.
- Higher fines for ALL dogs involved in any bylaw offences, not only pit bulls or nuisance dogs.
- There needs to be a small dog only off leash park. For example in the southland off leash park there's ample space to create a separate small dogs only area. I have a small dog who has been attacked several times by large breeds (ie - once by a pitbull, once by a Doberman and once by a shepherd). Small dog owners need a place that it is less likely for severe injuries to their animals should an instance occur.
- This is especially disappointing coming from Calgary, because the city was a leader in animal control and welfare in the early 2000s. [personal information removed] conceptualized a Responsible Ownership Bylaw that combined community outreach and education with enforcement. [removed] dog bites in Calgary decreased by 75% and their bite rate was thought to be the lowest in North America, while their pet licensing rates were the highest. There was no breed-specific language in the bylaw. It was focused on the known risk factors for dog aggression – poor breeding, poor early socialization and care, dogs at large, past behaviour, compromised health status, spay/neuter, etc. Owners were expected to be accountable for their dog's actions, and any concerning behaviour or risk factors were identified early. If the owner did not comply with education and warnings, there were fines and other strong enforcement measures with each offense to prevent the concerning behaviours from escalating. At the same time, the Bylaw recognized that most pet owners were trying to do their best by their dog. The City introduced dog safety education to children and other populations at high risk for dog bites (e.g., postal/delivery workers). There were incentives for licensing your pet and for complying with leash laws. Off-leash areas were expanded and patrolled by outreach officers. Subsidized training and spay/neuter programs were offered. Costs for the enhanced services were covered by licensing fees, because more people were licensing their pets. [personal information removed] breed is not a risk factor for aggression. Unfortunately, [personal information removed] things have changed. There have been changes in leadership and staffing, budget cuts, and a poor economy. It seems that bite rates have begun to climb again. While the clear solution is to return to the solutions that made Calgary successful 20 years ago – solutions that have been adapted and have worked for countless other communities – it appears that the current leadership is tempted to turn the clock backwards. Phase One of the feedback for the new bylaw changes occurred from February 26 to March 18, 2020. Calgarians were consulted about changes they wished to see. In the 96-page summary document of this process, there is no mention of breed-specific legislation. Phase Two is meant to build upon the feedback from Phase One, and includes an online survey. In this survey, breed-specific language like mandatory muzzling of “pit bull” type dogs, increased insurance for “pit bull” type dogs and a limit of certain breeds per household are proposed. None of these measures are fair or science-based. There is a wealth of information available about breed-specific legislation and why it is problematic – starting with the premise that it is based on visual identification of a dog. Very few of the targeted dogs are purebred, so breed specific legislation asks peace officers to make decisions about a dog’s potential for aggression based on its physical appearance.

- Obedience training and higher fines and insurance s/be required for all dogs that have been involved in bylaw offences. gs that have - not just pit bulls.
- Your definitions of ‘nuisance’ and ‘dangerous behaviour’ are not defined well enough to make an informed choice.
- These bylaws need to be enforced. Not only biting, but attacking, jumping on pedestrians is frightening and frustrating. Also, too many beautiful parks and areas of the city are relegated to off leash areas where dogs are not under control. I am providing these comments here, as I was unaware of any previous consultation. I have also experienced dog owners who have become abusive when asked to keep their pet off of my property and fouling my front lawn. There really needs to be more control.
- You are considering additional action against a mixed breed dog that is being discriminated against. Please weigh all the scientific and current information available. There is a reason that Humane Societies and vets do not support legislation based on any specific type of dog. It isn't factually based, it is discriminatory and has not proven to reduce dog bites
- Owner must be held accountable and/ or fined appropriately in incident
- Higher fines for off leash dogs in leashes areas
- Nuisance dogs are not necessarily dogs that bite, so if a dog is a nuisance because it barks, then not permitting it to be in an off-leash park seems counter-productive!
- For the muzzled if nuisance question, if they are declared a nuisance just because of barking loudly they shouldn't need to wear a muzzle because that makes no sense
- who are these people that set community standards, every dog will bite under the right circumstances, are we going to pass bylaws that people cannot own small dogs because they bark and nip indiscriminately, this goes back to the grass bylaw, we live in the prairies, if someone has a yard with native grasses

- I had a dog that was labelled and registered with the city of Calgary due to the fact that it had jumped up on a neighbour and when it came down it's too caught her jacket and it tore the jacket. The dog was not vicious. The neighbour claimed the dog attacked her if it had attacked her. She was little in stature and the dog was large. We brought the dog to the SPCA. We brought the dog to be put down and due to a paperwork error a couple days later they called us and have not had the dog put down yet and said this dog was not [personal information removed]. We were able to bring the dog home but being registered with the city of Calgary if it ever did have any type of another incident true or untrue we would be fined and the dog will be put down. Situations are not always black and white, right and wrong vicious and not vicious.
- Only the phrase "nuisance dogs" be used and not any reference to a breed like pit bulls. It is all about the pet owner and their training of the pet. Any breed, properly trained, will not be a nuisance and if the pet is not properly trained, it is not the pet's fault, and the pet should not be the one punished with a muzzle or with euthanasia, it is the owner who should be punished!
- High visibility markings for nuisance dogs must be worn when off home property or unrestrained (eg. off leash on front lawn or courtyards at apartment buildings)
- All pit bull type dogs should be muzzled, short leashed, fixed, chipped, kenneled with a cement floor, roof, no new pit bulls should be allowed in the city, only those currently present with said restrictions in place.
- Mandatory training and licensing for owners of nuisance dogs. Fines / penalties for owners for violations.
- Pit bulls should be banned. It's not the dog, it's negligent owners; but the dogs are a ticking time bomb. They kill. I would like to see a total ban for this reason.
- Owners of dogs that attack and injure/kill other dogs should have to pay the vet bills for the dog victim as a result of the attack.
- Ban pit bull dogs entirely
- Ban pit bulls.
- Training required for people who own pit bulls or "nuisance" dogs -- owners are typically at fault here, not the breed. To add, I've seen far more aggressive small dogs than big dogs -- so maybe all owners need some training...
- Ban these dogs breed for aggression. People need to feel safe being outdoors.
- Singling out one breed of dog (pit bulls) is a short sighted and ignorant position. All dogs require proper training and socialization, no matter if they are 5 lbs or 100 lbs. I have incurred more scratches and bites from small dogs than large dogs, and I have been a dog owner for decades.
- Owner MUST pay vet bill of injured animal.
- Enforcement of on leash areas. More on leash areas.
- Pit bulls are not the problem, the owners who raise problem dogs are. I have been bitten by a small dog. Based on that logic you should ask if all small dogs should be muzzled in public. I suggest making the punishments and restrictions severe for any problem dogs and their owners, not for a specific breed. Prevent those people from having dogs and ENFORCE that - follow up. Do not let these people have dogs at all and make them truly responsible for what their negligence has caused.

- Do more research. All you are doing is creating more bureaucracy you cannot enforce.
- Ban on pit bulls in Calgary.
- Pit bulls should be banned from the city period!
- Euthanise after one bite.
- This is not a breed specific issue and should not be handled as such.
- Do NOT discriminate against a specific breed especially pit bull. All dogs have the potential to bite or be considered a nuisance. It is dependant on the owner how dogs react
- no more new pit bull should be allowed as a pet
- The owner of an attacking dog must pay all vet fees etc caused by their dog, as well as a significant punishment/penalty fee to the victim.
- Banning the breeding of the same animals for city use, only allowing them outside city limits like farm properties
- Ban all pit bulls and aggressive dogs.
- Ban pitbulls
- Ban pit bulls in Calgary
- Pit bulls and other vicious breeds should be banned. Owners of vicious dogs should be charged with criminal offences when their dogs injure humans.
- Unfortunately breed does come in to play, but I strongly think that the owner must be responsible for proper training of their dogs and held accountable for any actions, unfortunately the dogs are most times the smarter of the two.. My property backs on to an off leash dog walk, amazing to see the owners irresponsibility of their animals, and most are more interested in looking at their phones than what their animal is doing IE: DOG [removed]!!! Can I tell stories!! You need bigger fines and more surveillance of these areas, cameras are everywhere why not off leash dog parks... This city wastes money everywhere... its disgusting!!!
- Higher fines for ANY dog involved in bylaw offences
- Require owners of dangerous breeds to obtain permit just like with weapons
- Euthanization of nuisance dogs.
- Dog owners responsible for all damages caused to other dogs. ie the associated vet bills
- Any rule should apply to all breeds, but the biggest thing is the owners of any nuisance dog should be required to receive training and have a better knowledge of their breed of dog. To single out one breed is not fair and it comes down to the owners. Part of getting a license should be a mandatory puppy classes / socialization. Once these classes are complete, then issue the license (proof of attending classes). Follow up on those who have not completed the classes and potential fines. As a long time dog owner of various breeds, it is unfair to put a label on a dog breed when it is their owner who, through lack of knowledge, inconsistency in training, or simple neglect is the real issues. Many small breed get away with a lot more than larger breeds but can still do damage especially to a small child

- Owners of nuisance dogs should be prohibited from owning dogs if their current dog bites or does harm to another animal or human. Owners should be held responsible for their dogs actions
- Ban nuisance breeds.
- The owner of a dangerous dog should be made to pay for all the injured dog's vet bills. Why should the owner of the injured dog have to pay monies that they don't have, that was not their fault.
- It's not the dog, a chihuahua bites more humans and are alot more noisy than any other dog. Charge the owners of the dogs. It is the owners that raise the problem dogs. Dogs are loyal to a fault. All they want to do is make their owners happy. Pitbull are known as the nursing dog. Ie. Used to watch over babies and look after the young kids and family's. It's bad owners that get them to be bad.
- Exorbitant punitive fines for repeating offending owners.
- Repeat offending owners of these dogs should have subsequent higher fines leveed to them to the point where they are not allowed to own dogs.
- Ban on dangerous breeds
- Don't support any of the above. It's the owner not the breed.
- Can't be more than 1 nuisance dog in one house. More than 1 pit bull is ok
- Off leash areas are for well trained dogs. Use at own risk.
- Dog OWNERS should have to get licensed to own this type of dog
- Pitbulls should not be allowed in Alberta.
- Pit bulls should no longer be allowed to be imported into the city, issue licences for all current pit bull owners and do not allow any more.
- Total ban on vicious dogs like pitbulls.
- Way higher fines. And responsibility to pay up to a certain amount of vet bills for victims
- [removed]
- I think that dogs should not be discriminated against because of their breed. But on per case basis for dogs declared nuisance.
- I think we should have all owners of pit bulls and or nuisance dogs have a mandatory training process and must fully complete and pay up front. Once they have completed the training and pass the test they should be reimbursed. A portion of it. They as well should be known that they have a dog that can cause harm. This should be a city and province commitment. For the love of these animals. The insurance to cover damage to another's dog or human should solely on the owner that had a dog that was not controlled. No questing here at all. Everyone should feel safe when walking there dogs and the blend of humans and dogs should never be a scary thing. In other parts of Alberta I have heard horror stories and we should set a responsible example how to over come this issue. Safety always first!!
- Any dog owner should be given a warning if there dog is being a nuisance and if a repeated offender they should be fined.
- Offended that pit bulls are singled out. Dogs aren't the problem - owners are.
- Owner of offending dog should be pay the vet bill through court ordered.
- If your animal attacks another, you should be responsible for all vet bills incurred by the owner of the attackee

- [removed] They are GOOD DOGS and do not deserve to be discriminated against. We have been praised for our current practicing laws.
- Dogs must never be off leash in public places.
- I do not feel that these types of animals should be individualized. German Sheppard, rottis have strong bites too. If people actually look at the statistics, there are MORE small dog bites being treated then pitbulls.
- I don't support the calling out of "pit-bull" dogs but feel that nuisance dogs, dangerous dogs, aggressive dogs, and unmanaged dogs suffice and that it be their owners that are held responsible, not the dog breed. I think this sends the wrong message and makes pit-bull owners defensive, which makes us focus more on the political argument than the real issue -- that dangerous and unmanaged dogs are around and that the owners need to be held accountable and rectify the problems.
- any breed of dog with agression towards other dogs must be on leash on and off park
- Breed specific rules don't address actual problems. Any legislation put in place should address ALL dogs not specific breeds or styles
- The owners need to pay vet or doctors bills from injuries
- Higher fines for owners of dogs that are unleashed in leashed areas
- Dogs should be only allowed off-leash in fenced areas, fines should be 10x what they are now for irresponsible dog owner and if a dog attacks another dog the owner should be made pay for damages
- Having dealt with neighbours who are just grumpy and may not like dogs, establishing rules that are put in place by past bylaw offences can be full of false claims. I would support higher fines, etc., only if based on substantiated evidence that the dog/pet is actually a legitimate danger and/or problem and not just subject to discrimination based on breed and fear.
- Pit bulls should be banned in Canada
- Do not specify pit bulls as they are not the only dogs that can be considered nuisance.
- Zero tolerance. One bite = euthanized
- Owners of dogs responsible for harming a human or another animal should be responsible for any medical bills.
- Ban pit bulls in this city before they kill a child
- Not the dog - it's the owners. It's pathetic the city of Calgary is considering Breed Specific Legislation. Owners need to be responsible
- Publicly name the offending owner & address.
- Much, much higher fines for owners of nuisance animals. START the fines at $3000. Second fine should double, etc. If another dog is killed by a nuisance animal, dog owner should have pet put down and fined $5000.
- Leash length restrictions for nuisance dogs (ie retractable leashes not allowed)
- All dogs require obedience training. Expect all dog owners to be responsible and dont blame the breed.
- Pitbulls should be banned in Calgary

- Ban pitbulls and prohibit dog owners from owning another pet for 5 years after an attack
- This is a serious issue. A dog that has attacked another dog more than once needs to be dealt with.
- Training for dog owners.
- Special licensing required for ownership of nuisance dogs, requiring yearly renewal to ensure that standards of ownership are upheld.
- It is unrealistic to focus on the dog; focus should be on the owner(s) of dogs and cats. One needs to ask "what has caused the dog to be the way it is". I would trust a "pit bull" type breed more than I would a smaller dog - Chihuahua, Pekenise, Toy Poodle, Yorkie, etc. As for off leash areas, no dog should be off leash unless the owner can say without a doubt that his dog will listen to him 100% of the time.
- All dogs behaviours are a reflexion on the owner. I would, as a dog owner go 25years in Dalhousie, appreciate if the responsibility was put where it belongs - one the owner. There has to be a place somewhere, that teaches pet owners how to manage their dogs specific temperament. It is not dog obedience classes. It is how to understand and control our specific animal. Nuisance dogs need their owner to be trained.
- Any barking dog creating noise after hours full stop. Train them!!
- Very concerned with focus on one breed! Training of some sort perhaps should be mandatory for first time dog owners, no matter where they get their animal from.
- Make a classification for a dog owner who's dog has multiple minor offences. They should be the ones punished for not being responsible dog owners
- I do NOT support any language specific to 'pit bull' related in a Calgary bylaw.
- The Dogs in question are not born aggressive, the owners made them that way by neglect,poor training or abuse. There Are No Bad Dogs Just Bad Owners.
- Mandatory training/obedience training or intervention for nuisance dogs and their owners
- Make it mandatory for ALL dogs to be muzzled when out. All dogs can be dangerous if trained by the wrong owners
- The issue isn't with the dog. The issue is with the owner / guardian of the dog. Training and licensing should be with the human not the dog.
- I would just like to say that I DEEPLY disagree with segregating pitbulls and like breeds
- Ban pit bulls, they are too dangerous in city environments period.
- Pit bulls and related breeds should be prohibited entirely in the city.
- I do not support singling out one type of breed eg: pit bulls. Sanctions should be specific to dangerous dogs of any breed.
- Dogs that have attacked a pet or human should be subject to fines evaluation but a dog of any breed who hasn't attacked any person or pet should not be subject to any special conditions based by breed
- Enforce leash requirements near off leash areas such as near the parking lots at nose hill park. Actually give fines.

- Si many cuties repealed this legislation because it simply does not work and it costs so much money. We din't have money. I want more cuts my tax bill has increased WAY higher in the last 7 years than is acceptable. Stop being wasteful please. .
- Except from fines, depending the breed, the owner should be liable with jail. The fines should be much more than now.
- The concept of banning specific "pit bull" breeds is a stupid idea, and it should not be something that becomes a bylaw in the city of Calgary. There could be lists of hundreds of dog breeds that have a stronger bite and thus pose a stronger threat. Singling out one specific breed is stupid and unnecessary. Ban bad owners, not bad dogs.
- This does not target the issue as aggressive dogs come in all breeds and I find no evidence that bulky breeds have super powers. This will only make owners of targeted pets vilified and reluctant to license or register. This criminalizes people without a crime being committed and dog bites will still happen. Focus in enforcing current by-laws, education, maybe incentive to license including training dicounts and discounts to spay and neuter. More regulation on backyard breeders and impirt of "rescue" dogs from out if country (regardless of breed) for sale here. They operate on emotion of adoption and under assumption of non profit. False advertising.
- Do not punish any specific breed, focus instead on educating dog owners on proper dog behavior and how to train their dog. A lot of people with poorly behaved dogs won't take training courses because it costs money. Invest in free dog training programs for the public, then whichever dogs have multiple offenses, make these free classes mandatory for those owners.
- Not feasible. A quick internet search found many cities who trued BSL removed it because it was costly and did not reduce incidents of dog bites. Breed was not and is not the issue. Please don't waste my tax dollars this way.
- Anyone who owns a dog it doesn't matter the breed should have a basic training, not the dog i am talking about the human. And if the dog is a powerful breed the owner should have an advance course. So the human gets a licence to own a dog
- Banning aggressive breeds such as pitbulls
- Higher fines and financial compensation required for irresponsible owners who do not control their aggressive dogs - not targeting any breed. Owners are the issue. Not the dog!
- All pit bulls, and other breeds known to be vicious must be totally banned with city limits. Period.
- Fines for all dogs off leash in non off leash areas.
- I do not support any restrictions on breeds of dogs. Any dog can be deemed a 'nuisance' and the bylaw should not discriminate against any breed specific dog.
- Outright ban the breed. They were bred to be killer dogs and do not belong in any city. If a ban cannot be done, a $500 annual licence, plus liability insurance requirement should help get rid of the breed over time.
- Pitbull type dogs should be banned. There is an unfortunate tendency for immature and irresponsible persons to associate with these dogs to seem "cool". There is no place for such dogs in the city.
- I do not agree with breed specific legislation. It is discrimination against dogs [removed]

- Require all dogs to go through training. Dog training is the insurance.
- When the city begins daily news conferences updating the public on dog bite numbers and the mental stress it is causing on society than maybe city council should balance its budget without increased taxes and fines.
- Pit bulls should be outright BANNED in YYC. They were bred to be aggressive.
- More resources provided by the city for dogs that have been abused/mistreated for rehab. Pit bulls can be absolute sweet hearts if treated properly. You need to make sure the owners are responsible versed banning all pit bulls from parks or making their owners get more insurance.
- Nuisance dogs (barking/noise, being at large) is very different from dogs that bite and should not be treated the same. Having restrictions on dogs that have shown aggression is different and should be dealt with on a sliding scale. Your statement that pit bulls pose a greater risk due to their bite strength is misstating the truth. Bite strength generally increases with the size of dog. Some data shows the difference in strength between a pit bull type dog and a lab as 5 lbs (335 vs 330 or 1.5%). Deal with the offender's first - the irresponsible owner and. Then retrain the dog.
- Take an individual approach to unacceptable vs general breed . It's often the humans that don't have the knowledge/skills who should be banned not the breed. There needs to be the opportunity to assess and work with dogs demonstrating unacceptable behavior to determine if they can be unrestricted in public off leash spaces or if conditions need to be put in place. Don't put in a generalist approach to a multi factor issue
- Ban pit bulls.
- Obedience training should be required for all dogs. Build the cost into the adoption/purchase fee. Spay; neuter; train
- Prohibit owners of vicious dogs from having any more.
- I would support breed-neutral legislation and instead, more opportunities for dog training, owner education and non-owner education fo dogs in general. Spotlighting one breed for physical attributes is wrong
- Ensure proper owners, animals are a product of environment. If they are trained and cared for properly they exhibit good characteristics.
- Leave all mention of breed out of it, your statement that they have the potential for a stronger bite is not accurate
- Breed specific legislation does not work (there is no research to substantiate it) and targeting a specific breed is a waste of City resources.
- Financially the cost to implement BSL is high and reports from other municipalities that tried it did not benefit from reduced incidents or severity of bites. Calgary already has been a recognized leader for reducing incidents through existing by-laws and education. Get back to those basics. We don't have dollars to waste on ineffective programs.
- Leave the bylaw as it is now.
- Big dogs/specific types like pitbulls shouldn't be allowed in condos or appartment buildings. Even they are private properties, those have public areas like parks, elevators, halls. This should be mandatory in each building bylaw.

- Discriminating against pitbulls because of their breed is no different than discriminating against a human because of their skin color.
- nuisance dogs must never be off leash (anywhere but home)
- Research does not back up Breed Specific Legislation (<https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC5521144/>), thus introducing "Pit Bull" specific language to by-laws is not helpful. Historical statistics also indicate that "dangerous" breeds are often more related to popularity and perception than reality: <https://montrealgazette.com/news/local-news/how-calgary-reduced-dog-attacks-without-banning-pit-bulls>
<https://globalnews.ca/news/2527882/torontos-pit-bulls-are-almost-gone-so-why-are-there-more-dog-bites-than-ever/> <https://globalnews.ca/news/3556190/what-dog-breed-is-behind-the-most-attacks-in-metro-vancouver-its-not-what-you-think/>
- I really don't like singling out specific breeds. Many dogs can be nuisance and I feel we should be dealing with the owners to address the concerns. Different situations require different levels of compliance. But don't focus on a single breed. Focus on where problems are and how to resolve these.
- Responsible ownership. BSL is proven ineffective and very costly to taxpayers.
- Measures should not just target to certain dog breeds. My neighbour's small beagle/jack russell cross was a nuisance in our block. It was at large and barked constantly during spring and summer and liked to tease our dogs and my other neighbour's dogs. We had to speak with the owners about their dog.
- Dogs that have bitten/ repeatedly shown aggression (to other dogs or people) must be muzzled or banned from off leash parks.
- Terminate dogs that attack humans and their pets. Terminate dogs found off leash. Arrest owners of dogs that attack
- I think there should be an affordable nuisance training program for the under privileged.
- My words can't even express the way this makes me feel as a bully breed owner this is discrimination of the breed I'm a responsible owner they are my kids as for many of us, let's flip the script would this be ok if it was to happen to your children for me it is no different they are my kids !!!!!!! It is not the breed !!!!!!!!
- No pit bulls in Calgary
- What you should be doing is screening pet owners upon registration of their pets. Too many irresponsible pet owners are giving certain breeds (like your outrageous choice of pitbulls at the moment, are we going to include Doberman's and Shepard's as well since that was a thing too decades ago?) be better Calgary.
- Ban pit bulls
- I would like to see more about free roaming cats scratching up our things on our property
- It's not the dog it's the owner
- "Pit bull" breeds should not be segregated out....

- Don't limit this just to pit bulls. I believe if any dog bites someone there needs to be action but not all the way to seizure of the dog right away. Little dogs can bite just as hard and do as much damage as a pit bull
- NO BSL. Calgary is recognized around the world for our current bylaws that focus on Responsible Pet Ownership and Education, not BSL. Many other jurisdictions that have had BSL have not found it to be effective. It is much more effective time to ensure responsible pet ownership and educating the public at large.
- Fines for dogs of ALL breeds not just pit bulls
- Breed Specific Legislation does not deter those individuals from obtaining specific breeds, nor does it prevent them from irresponsible pet ownership that results in aggressive/ volatile/ dangerous behaviour in an animal. If an animal is a concern, promote having a certified animal behaviour specialist make an assessment and train the human - not punish the animal.
- Punish the deed, not the breed! Labeling all pit bulls is canine racism. Is Calgary not capable of moving forward? [personal information removed]
- If the owner isn't being responsible with their animal they should be punished not the animal. Obviously the owner didn't put the time and effort to train properly
- Do not specify breeds, you are stereotyping.
- ALL dogs require obedience training.
- Obedience training for all dogs and dog owners, small dogs cause more problems than large dogs
- treat them like any other dog
- Dogs that have bitten a person or dog cannot be off leash. Higher fines for dogs that are actually dangerous, not nuisance dogs because it is subject to opinion.
- Outright ban on pit-bulls within Calgary.
- Pitbulls should not be targeted. BSL discriminates against pitbulls, while other breeds can also be considered a nuisance. Blame should be placed on owners not dogs.
- Equality for all breeds. The owners should have to go to training if the dog is a nuisance.
- I feel that an owner of this breed or any nuisance animal should be forced to take classes on how to manage these issues. I also believe the lessons should be customized to the problem. A dog is only as good as its owner!!
- Dog behavior is learned from owners- we shouldn't be blanketing a breed as a nuisance. If it's felt these particular breeds are a danger to the public then you need to limit the people causing the problem not the dog. Banning from owning any animal if a behavior or incident is deemed from the negligence of the OWNER is the way to go for this.
- Obedience training should be required for all dog owners. Not only dogs deemed a "nuisance"
- Fines for bad and irresponsible dog owners regardless of breed
- Owners should be held responsible more. If an owner lets an abused dog out and something happens, the owner should be fined and flagged - and perhaps should not own a "nuisance" animal. Not every animal is perfect, and most require 24/7 care/watch. If the owner cannot provide this, the dog should not be punished.

- I don't think that breed specific bylaws or legislation are ever appropriate, it's not the dog or the breed it's the handler or of the dogs experience/trauma that affects their reactions - please see <https://www.endtheban.ca/> for information and research that shows that it is not effective and costly for other areas that have implemented it
- dogs that have bitten people/ other dogs should be required to wear a muzzle at dog parks.
- I do not support BSL... it has proven to not work. Education!!!!
- Required training for the owners. It is their responsibility to be responsible pet owners.
- Stop targeting pit bulls as a breed! Go after bad owners or hoarders and give them $10,000 fines or something that if they are know. As a bad owner they are sent to jail for breaking limits or not paying fines. Any animal can be trained to be mean. A breed is not inherently bad
- Whatever is decided the same rules should apply to all dogs. Singeling our one breed or type of dog is unacceptable. All dogs can bite and it can be severe.
- I think it's only fair to have owners go through trainer and graduate with the knowledge of how to treat and own a pitbull, considering that all dogs have the same aggression in them, the only difference is the owner of the dog.
- NO BREED RESTRICTIONS!!! PUNISH THE DEED NOT THE BREED!!
- I am not in favour of breed specific legislation any breed of dog can bite and leave injuries, I believe it is totally unfair to pick on pit bulls or similar breeds.
- A dog that is declared a nuisance from barking too much is quite different than one that bites often. I don't agree with additional fees, training for dogs that are barking too much but if a dog is showing repeated signs of aggression/biting then yes, a ban from off leash parks make sense until training is completed
- Measures specifically aimed at pit bulls are not supported by the veterinary community. The American veterinary medical association says "while BSL may look good on the surface, it is not a reliable or effective solution for dog bite prevention. The AVMA is opposed to breed-specific legislation." Why would you propose legislation that is not supported by science, you are pandering to uninformed, ignorant people who think they are experts based on internet browsing.
- mandatory training for all dog owners
- Education programs for general public and pet owners. I am very disappointed in the City for proposing Breed Specific Legislation. Breed Specific Legislation is ineffective, discriminatory, and is not backed by behaviour science or animal control best practices.
- In my opinion, I think the owner should be fined for small dogs that continually bark or growl at people walking by on a sidewalk. I see more small breeds go after people than large breeds. I don't think large dogs should be punished because the owners do not know how to train their dog. I believe the City of Calgary is discriminating against different breeds of dogs and that should not be allowed.
- You cannot stereotype "Pitbulls" as vicious! Better to stereotype pitbull owners as 'stupid!' I have seen pitbulls that were better trained and more docile than most chihuahuas! It is all dependent on the owners! 'Vicious' animal owners should be fined at a higher rate should their dog bite, chase, scare, or harm any other person and / or animal! The owners of said animals should be made aware that if there dog is involved in an incident, penalties can be, and most likely will be more severe than other dogs. But to ban all pitbulls from all owners is WRONG! Why penalize the good because of the bad? Should all cars be banned from the road because a few people drink and drive? NO! Penalize (albeit) severely, those who endanger others through carelessness or stupidity. Put the onus on the owners! Make them responsible for their decisions!

- There should be a please walk your dog curbside bylaw so pets don't urinate and scent on private property.
- leave specific breed right out of it. this question is disgusting
- Total ban on pit bulls!
- Mandatory dog behavioural education for bylaw officers and councillors
- The problem generally is with the owners who do not take responsibility for their dogs , nor do they go to Obedience school.
- Improve funding to Community Standards to increase bylaw officers who respond to pet problems.
 2. Do not allow imported rescue pets - they often have behavioural issues that owners are unaware of or can't deal with
 3. Mandatory training for owners of dogs - do not wait until their pets become a nuisance but prevent it from happening beforehand. Can be tied to pet licensing.
 4. Partner with the industry for education support - for example, a dog/pet can't be sold or adopted unless the owner completes training . Could even have a pet mentoring program where good pet owners can mentor a new pet owner.
 5. Look at strategies for reaching pet owners who come from other provinces where pet ownership laws are different.
 6. We need so much more education on cats and their effect on migratory birds.
 7. Finally, educating non-pet owners about what they can expect from their pet-owning neighbours. It's ok to call bylaw for support and noisy dogs don't have to ruin neighbourhoods and neighbour relationships.
- training should be mandatory for new dogs. too many owners do not know what they should do to raise responsible dogs. "I just want my dog to be a dog" is a terrible method of training.
- Why are pitbulls being targeted? And I don't own a pitbull but know that the owners are the problem not the breed. And some of these options make no sense. An example of "nuisance" includes noise, being at large yet some of the measures include muzzling and limiting attendance at off-leash parks(?). How is that going to help the problem of barking or at large dogs? These measures need to be more specific in order to address the problem. Target known aggressive dogs.
- Reprimand the OWNER.. do NOT punish the animal for being INCORRECTLY trained...
- None
- Just require obedience training to register any dog. If they don't do training then they get fined.
- These dogs should be banned. I see too often kids attacked or adults and their pets. It is unacceptable
- Criminal charges should apply to owners with nuisance dogs. As well as bans on owning future dogs if a person has been fined or charged for aggressive dogs.
- This recent attack in Calgary is a prime example as to why negligent owners need to be accounted for their animals this is unacceptable behaviour this man has been known and been reported to abuse his dogs yet by law Calgary police service did not do anything about it it allowed this poor dog to be abused and abused and abused and abused therefore turned aggressive harmed another animal because that's all he knew. There has been reports that this negligent owner has hung his dog off of the balcony why because he doesn't want to be caught so that he can go and buy another dog of any breed and train it to do the same thing please Calgary do not discriminate against breeds this is an owner problem humans have failed dogs again stricter fines mandatory neutering and spaying of all animals and bylaw needs to enforce these fines remove animals when there has been abuse reported abuse reported multiple times yet this dog has now suffered and the dog that attacked has suffered This is not a breed problem this is a people problem

- In my opinion, it is the responsibility of the dog owner if there is a problem and I would suspect it is due to lack of training and socialization. Training is primarily for the owner not the dog so they understand dog behaviour and can use consistent commands so the dog knows what is expected. It is about irresponsible owners not specific dog breeds. I also think parents should be teaching children how to approach all dogs not just specific breeds. I don't like the idea of colour bandanas re: reactive dogs off leash. If an owner can't control their dog in off-leash areas, they shouldn't be there. When walking dogs, encourage owners with dogs that begin barking when they see another dog to move way in a different direction or change side of the street to continue their walk.
- The notion that pit bulls are more of a nuisance than any other annoying dog at the dog park is crazy.
- Make them, only wear a warning bandana. Make pit bull owners take training on how to handle dangerous dogs. Carry a license to prove it. Much like a firearms license.
- None.. your breed specific attitude is inappropriate.. these breeds aren't the problem, it's the owners
- Mandatory training with an animal behaviorist for dogs who have behavior issues that could eventually result in harm to the dog (being euthanized) or anyone else.
- Dog training for all breeds mandatory
- It's not the breed that is the problem. It's the owner! All dogs can be dangerous if not properly trained. Also more enforcement of off leash Dogs in on leash areas required (pathways, sidewalks)
- Ban pit bulls
- Stop singling out a specific breed. Small dogs can be far more aggressive And vicious than, for example, a pit bull
- I do not support any breed-specific legislation (i.e. the possibilities shown above including the term "pitbull"). I believe in treating every dog as an individual, and I am a strong supporter of breed-neutral legislation. I would suggest taking out any legislation that includes any specific treatment for animals based on their breed alone. #bslfreecalgary
- You cannot be breed specific like this. Bad dogs are the result of bad owners. The City is not being logical in its thinking on this issue. Yes they are bigger - so are Great Danes, so are Newfies and St. Bernards. You are not dog trainers yet you act as if you know more than a professional. With any nuisance / dangerous dog, it's the owner. Dogs aren't born bad, they are taught to be that way. The owners should be fined, and the dogs taken away from them so they can find a decent home.
- How about training the owners, and using the proper name for the dog instead of pit Bull

- I do not agree with any of these as it's targeting breed specific dogs. I think it the owners responsibility and has nothing to do with the dog breed. What we need are stricter measures for adopting or owning pets that they have no experience on. Education is the key not punishing a specific breed.
- Can't blame the dog. It's the owner and pit bull are not the problem. Been bitten more by little breeds than I have large breeds and pit bull breeds. This is just WRONG
- If you do this for one breed you should do it for all of them. Pitbulls are no more dangerous or aggressive than a chihuahua.
- To be clear, I do not think that a dog should be removed from the home or the owner. I firmly believe if a dog acts out it has to do with the owners behaviours and how the animal was raised. Dogs should also be assessed after incident occurs for its own well being. Perhaps the home they are raised in provokes the behaviour.
- Three researchers from the University of Calgary just published a paper stating that education of the public is one of the most important factors in reducing dog bites ! BSL was not listed as helping reduce dog bites. No to BSL
- This survey does not provide any justificaiton for singling out specific dog breeds and in other Canadian communities these bans have been overturned. Why is this being presented as a viable option? I am further confused by that the question is specific to dangerous dog behaviour, but then goes on to ask about 'nuisance' dogs. A dog that bites humans is not a 'nuisance' it is a danger.
- I do not support any BREED-SPECIFIC measures/rules/regulattions/bylaws (e.g., pit bull or otherwise). Also, please don't lump pit bulls and "nuisance dogs" in the same category for selecting options (i.e., "There cannot be more than one pit bull or nuisance dog in a household")
- Streets and parks must be safe for everyone. Why am I inhibited from and in fear of pitbulls in public areas, should we not all be safe in sharing outdoors.
- Class pit bulls in with nuisance dogs. Escalating fines for nuisance dogs, specifically for repeat offenders.
- ban Pit bulls entirely. Far too much risk and they're way over-represented in severe bite incidents
- I dont think its always pitbulls that are a problem to fo after one breed is not fair ,it is not tye dogs fault on how it was raised or trained so the owner should be held responsible . If a dog is deemed aggressive it should be allowed to show that it can be a good dog and be reformed just like we do with criminals
- ban all variations of this breed
- I think that the questions, instead of focusing on a dog breed or if they are a nuisance, should be more specific. I think the process of assessing how dangerouse and how much of a nuisance any dog is, it could follow a progressive discipline approach similar to what workplaces use. Even a rock is dangerouse in the right person's hands. And any dog can become a nuisance depending on a give individual's perspective and emotions. Perhaps having a scale to rate a dogs level of danger and nuisance to guide decision is what is needed. I don't believe it is fair to focus on breeds. It is the owners responsibility to educate and protect their pets.

- Strongly encourage mandatory obedience training as a method of fining owners and correcting dog behavior.
- Do not single out pit bulls.
- Personally I find it unacceptable to label a "breed" of dog as a nuisance. All dogs should be held to a standard of acceptable behaviour
- High (prohibitive - suggest $5000) licensing fees for dangerous breeds, and high penalty fees for not licensing animals.
- Declaring a dog dangerous or a nuisance should be based on the history and behaviour of that animal not based on the breed. It isn't right to declare all pit bulls dangerous. I have met so many that are the most loving and gentle dog. I have also met many other breeds whose behaviour has been dangerous. All animal owners should be held accountable for the behaviour of their animals. It just isn't right to punish one breed because of some owners' actions and ignorance.
- Breed specific is not appropriate. It's all nuisance dogs
- public parks where dogs are not permitted, pathways restricted for humans so that people who are afraid of pets could avoid them.
- Laws that nuisance dogs are bot permitted in multi-family dwellings with no caviats.
- Fines Should be levied on dog owners who leave dog bag crap all over the parks including the garbage bins. What's the use of byelaws if they're not enforced? And how can you get catch a dog owner leaving his dog crap all over the parks. Especially during this Covid we are the owners think they're too good to open the garbage can to put the dog crap in. They can use gloves or a doggy bag to open the garbage can. It is disgusting how they leave them on top of the garbage and all around it. Nobody catches them so how is anyone getting fined? I see bags of crap all over city parks and I'm in them a lot walking and riding my bike. They leave them on the pathways and by the garbage bins
- I believe pit bulls and other dangerous dogs must be banned. If this is not possible, then the owners must face severe consequences for the harm their dogs cause.
- na
- I do not agree to or want any kind of breed specific legislation or bylaws. It is unfair and discrimination.
- if a dog is considered a nuisance, perhaps it is more so the owner. need harsher laws for poor ownership
- If a dog has been reported as a problematic dog, no matter what breed, there should be limitations to their allowance at an off leash park as my dog has been attacked a few times. If a dog of any breed has no history or record of attacks, there should be no issue of the dog being at an off leash park. The pet should be identified on their own and not represent the entire breed
- Obedience training required for nuisance dogs and owners of nuisance dogs. Then they can't just pay someone to do the training and not learn themselves.
- banning the importation of nuisance dogs from other countries!! Any dog that bites someone randomly walking down a path should be a nuisance dog. Small dog with a small bite required my mother to have medical treatment for more than a year.

- PITBULLS SHOULD NOT BE SINGLED OUT! THERE ARE NO BAD DOGS, JUST BAD OWNERS. I am a dog owner. I have a miniature dachshund. He is 12 lbs and he is BY FAR more likely to be a nuisance than 99.9% of pitbulls. If you are going to make restrictions, they should be for ALL breeds. I am certain the City would not try to single out specific races of human when implementing legislation, so I would ask that they treat animals the same way. Again, I reiterate that there are NO BAD DOGS, JUST BAD OWNERS.
- Noise complaints should NOT be part of the definition of a nuisance dog, if this is focusing on bites and attacks the two are NOT related. I am only selecting nuisance dogs to wear a muzzle in dog parks if they have a history or near misses or altercations with BITING. NOT NOISE complaints. Warnings should be issued to owners to identify a nuisance dog before the city DEEMS the animal a nuisance. Also, near miss events (attacks) should be flagged on the nuisance dog's file (ie. no bite, but an altercation has occurred). Owner's with multiple incidents to their name should be the ones flagged - they are the irresponsible ones, not the dogs. Can you identify nuisance owners too rather than animals? That's probably a better route to take here.
- More focus on the owner - training required
- Any dog that is a repeat biter should have mandatory muzzle in public. Not just a specific breed!
- Fines and prohibiting people from owning any animal if they are shown not to train their pets to be anything but a pet. Aggressive pets are the result of the owners own actions not theirs.
- I do not support any of these suggestions. Breed specific legislation is not based on fact. The question even states that Pit Bulls are not involved in more biting cases so why are we singling out a breed and raising alarms especially with individuals who have minimal knowledge of animals and will be responding to this survey from a fear perspective as opposed to a fact based perspective.
- Why would pit bulls be separated? If a dog is a bus dance the owner should be penalized. Any dog. This survey is leading.
- There cannot be more than one nuisance dog in a household (no matter the breed). And fines/jail time for owners whose dogs have been trained as weapons, that cause injuries. Owners need to be responsible, it's not necessarily the dogs' fault.
- BSL has been proven to not work. Calgary has had the leading role in responsible pet ownership. Lets not move backwards. Start enforcing the current bylaws with increased education and increased fines for those owners that do not abide by the bylaw. NO TO BSL
- Not be more that one Nuisance dog in household. The selection above should not be breed specific!!
- this all is taking into account circumstance and provocation of the animal. It cannot be a nuisance if it was acting in retaliation to provocation or any aggressive behaviour from the human as that is not within the animals capabilities to understand human behaviour if it causes them to feel unsafe.
- Well this sounds like someone who knows nothing about animals is trying to sound smart when what's happening is you're targeting a special breed when the problem more lie in the owner and lack of training and knowledge doing so.
- Look at the owner, not the dog. ALL dogs. Not just pit bulls can bite.

- Looks like other municipalities that tried BSL did not reduce incidents of dog bites (seems any breed is capable of biting) and found the by-laws expensive to implement and enforce. Seems like a waste of money. For a city under economic strain there must be better ways to manage the money and focus on attracting business not creating social divisiveness
- Targeting one dog breed on your form is not ok just as you can't be racist to people you can't to dogs every breed has bad dogs it's the owner's job to raise them properly
- Owners must submit to approved dog handling and training courses
- Breed-specific bans have been shown time and time again not to work. To consider putting in restrictions for pit bulls as a whole, poorly defined group (any dog that 'looks' like a pit bull is not remotely specific enough) rather than individual dogs that have actually been shown to be a nuisance is ridiculous. Some people will always want big, aggressive dogs. Irresponsible owners will move to German Shepherds, rottweilers, doberman pinschers, and other big dogs they will then train to be aggressive, or leave chained up outside and left to escape and cause problems. When those bite numbers go up, will they be banned as well? Why not simply punish poor owners and nuisance dogs instead of going down the road of BSL which has been shown in many jurisdictions not to work? In Toronto, pit bull bites are down since, obviously, dogs that look like pit bulls have been banned. But overall bites are up, the breeds are just different. Calgary led the way in reducing stray and nuisance cats when they implemented cat license requirements. Please do not take a step backwards with this.
- Overall accountability for owners of dogs that are aggressive. This is NOT breed specific.
- *Pitbulls are not necessarily stronger than other bully dogs, but they do have a stronger prey drive that can lead to more severe injuries. Your language might need to be tweaked a little.
- No BSL base the laws on dog behaviour not looks.
- As a pit bull/bulldog owner I am appalled at how these dogs are being profiled specifically. I've seen it with my own eyes and I know first hand it is not my dog that is the issue. I've seen other breeds be sketchy and way more aggressive toward my dog who mostly just walks away and tries to avoid a problem. He is super playful and loving, or else I wouldn't have brought a baby home with him here. I get extremely frustrated with people constantly judging and assuming my dog is bad because he is a pit bull. It is the owner of ANY breed of dog's responsibility to raise and train them right, so that my dog, and so many other innocent pit bulls, can finally stop getting profiled against.
- Target owners, not the breed.
- This is racism against pit bulls or any sort of dog. I have a 90lbs Doberman and the dogs that come after my dog are the little 5-20lbs dogs. And my dog is minding his own business sniffing.
- Literally every option available is in the affirmative for action against pitbulls specifically over and above other breeds. I have owned multiple pitbulls in 3 provinces across Canada and have never once even almost had an issue. This survey is strongly biased AGAINST pitbulls specifically with no checkboxes being provided for opposing views. I expect the city of Calgary to be more objective on the matter. Research top ten aggressive breeds (#9) and pounds per square inch in bite pressure (#7), with huskies and German Shepherd ranking above in both categories, but no survey against those breeds. Be better.

- Ban Pit Bulls outright! How many children must die in North America before this is done? Strange that this is not an option.
- I do not agree with breed specific legislation. Any dog can be dangerous, highlighting one is on par with racism.
- Why talk about introducing BSL when we have been the leader in our bylaws. A better idea is to enforce the current bylaws. Introduce more education to owners and officers. This will be expensive and our taxes should be used in a multiple of other ways. For example increased police to take care of our increased violence. BSL has proven it does not work in other places why ruin the lives of thousands of responsible pet owners for a few negligent owners. There are so many good owners of this breed. Above it is stated that pitbulls do not have the most bite incidents. Which breed does? Will that breed be subjected to BSL as well? Not fair to punish a breed of any size. Start focusing on the owners. Bsl will not stop negligent owners from owing aggressive dogs they will simply find another breed therefore BSL does not work. We also need to focus on back yard breeding of any breed and the unethical rescues that do not run a ethical buisness
- Training for by-law officers to ensure they understand behaviours and that small dogs can cause harm to larger dogs. Also off-leash areas should provide a separate area for small dogs.
- Properly define nuisance, the above definition is so broad as to be useless. Any petty bureaucrat could use that definition to declare any dog a nuisance, truth not withstanding
- These should be dog specific and not breed specific. It's the owners that are responsible and not the breed. There are good points here but they must be used as individuals not breeds. Any dog can be a problem dog.
- You cannot compare BITING to escaping/being at large and barking... that is just plain ridiculous! How about a questionnaire for information when people register their animals... with recommendations on training facilities. None of this is about the dog, it's about the owners and training.
- Owners of Nuisance dogs should need to take a course and be licensed to continue ownership of the problem dog.
- Negative dog behaviour is due to bad ownership.....not the breed of dog
- The focus should be on the people, not the animals. Breed specific language/ rules is not fair to the animal - it is up to the owners to ensure they have properly trained, well behaved dogs. Many small dogs are extremely aggressive as well and get away with it because it is "cute".
- I do not support breed-related restrictions, esp. where the city wants to restrict animals that 'an appearance and physical characteristics that are substantially similar to those of dogs referred to in any of clauses (a) to (d)'. This clause is poorly-worded, non-specific, and not helpful to dog owners.
- None of the above.
- A well thought through education campaign for non-dog owners as well as dog owners. Too few people understand dogs these days. Calgary's diverse population includes many who see dogs purely as guard animals / personnel protection. This is at odds with at least the last 100 years of Canadian culture. Far too many people act in a way that will encourage aggressive behavior even from a docile dog. We stress sensible behavior when encountering wild animals "Be Bear Aware" etc. The public need to do the same for domestic animals as well. This would demonstrate that the city is actually educated, intelligent and compassionate instead of simply following the politician's syllogism.

- If there is non-compliance on the part of a pet owner, the animal should be seized and put down. No
- The owners should undergo more training with their pet.
- Higher fines for ANY dog involved with a bylaw offence.
- Just because a dog is declared nuisance, does not mean it bit someone, therefore should be excluded from having to wear a muzzle and not allowed in off-leash park. to off leash park. Nuisance dog = obedience/training class. VICIOUS dog (no matter the breed)= MUZZLE and CLASS
- I'm hesitant to answer questions on nuisance dogs as the wording in the introduction seems to be designating any Pit Bull type as a nuisance dog. Please clarify! There are many breeds that are very powerful.
- DO NOT PICK A BREED OF DOG AND LABEL IT AGGRESSIVE. IT'S THE OWNERS OF ANIMALS THAT ARE THE PROBLEM. DO YOUR RESEARCH!!
- People need training more than their dogs. Dogs behave/react to situations that their owners are not reading. Training/educating owners is a much better way of preventing/reducing incidents.
- Potential criminal charges for negligent owners resulting in attacks/dog bites
- No pit bulls/dangerous dogs should be allowed to be bred.period.
- do not single out breeds. its a training and care issue.
- Obedience training required for all domesticated wolves, public shaming of anyone who thinks "pit bull" is an actual category of dog
- Obedience training required for a dog if they bite
- This is HORRIFIC that these are the only options and that this breed is being singled out. I do not own a pit bull, but have met many that are absolutely lovely. The dog is not the problem, the owner is. When any dog is prompted to be unruly, aggressive or inappropriate, then trouble will happen. But to target one breed is a bad strategy on the City's part.
- Ban Pitbulls and Ban people from owning dogs that are irresponsible.
- If dog has been deemed a nuisance/aggressive the owners should have to attend behavioural classes. If the owners refuse, the dog should be seized.
- If Pitbulls aren't involved in more bit incidents than other dog breeds, then it seems the City of Calgary is trying to fix something that isn't broken. I would support leaving Pitbulls and their owners alone.
- The problem is usually the owner in how they treat and/or are train the dog unacceptably. Seizing dogs would be fine as long as they are not euthanized. Sometimes they just need large private areas to run and let out energy, therefore, perhaps a home area that can accommodate should be approved rather than condos, etc. to home them. Mandatory owner retraining and dog obedience training each time they are in violation and face fines.
- More enforce of the the existing laws.
- I don't think it's fair to penalize dog owners and the dogs when most of the time the bite is caused by people approaching and touching a dog they shouldn't. Make proper animal care something mandatory to learn in schools. If the average person understands animal body language, the amount of people bitten will drastically decrease. Stop blaming innocent animals for reacting when scared and start teaching our citizens how to act around animals.

- Prohibit pit bulls within Calgary city limits
- Higher roaming required by bylaw officers for off leash
- Dog breeds are not the issue the owners are and should be held responsible for the pets behaviour some pit bulls are very well behaved where some little dogs are very viscous. It is how they are trained no matter what breed the animal is.
- No dog should be allowed to bite/attack a second time. There needs to be a reminder that these are animals and animals are unpredictable. If people want to have pets therefore there should be an expense to ensure that people are safe as well as if they hurt people then the victim is not left with the responsibility for care.
- Government funded programs for “high risk” breeds. Sometimes the problem is that after all the costs of a dog, owners can’t afford training programs. A higher insurance won’t stop biting, only training can do that.
- Why the focus on pit bulls? I see way more unbehaved labradoodles in off leash areas than pitbulls. Perhaps focus on mandatory behaviour training for the owners that can’t control their dogs.
- Stop with this breed specific nonsense! I have owned over twenty dogs over the last 60 years and know you cannot judge a dog by it's breed. Can you judge a person by their race?
- You should not be discriminating against pit bulls. Breed specific bylaws do not work, it is not the animals fault they were not trained properly. How about muzzling stupid individuals and making it a fine able offense to tease and provoke someone’s dog.
- Its not the breeds but the owners fault!
- Problem behaviours need to be clearly defined, with animal behaviour specialists key stakeholders in contributing to this definition. Breed-specific legislation has been scientifically proven to be ineffective, more costly, and punitive to responsible pet owners. Please read through the following resources to understand why any form of breed-specific legislation would be an unequivocally bad idea:<https://www.nationalcanineresearchcouncil.com/public-policy/breed-specific-legislation-faq>
- Please do not put in a breed specific bylaw. Not all pitbull looking dogs are a nuisance dog and should not be treated that way based solely on their appearance.
- No breed specific legislation whatsoever. Unless you want to consider humans as nuisance animals too. The other day, we drove past a roadside zoo with three lions in an area not much larger than our livingroom. There are bans against pit bulls but go ahead and get as many lions as you want!
- I do not support any legislation that targets only one breed of dog or dogs having the appearance of (i.e. "pitbulls") Please focus on measure proven to keep us safe from ALL dogs (incentives to register, spay & neuter, and dog bite prevention education for children)
- All breeds should be included in this
- Dogs must be certified before going to a off leash park and the owners and dog must go through a check/certification to make sure the owners will be good owner for the dogs.

- Make the same rules apply to all dogs... have had more issues with other breeds than the above breeds
- Firstly the owners should be pre screened to own a breed of this kind - muzzling them is not the way to do it. There are MANY well behaved looked after Pitbulls. Punish the ones who commit the offences AFTER not the ones who haven't done anything
- No dog should be declared a nuisance. Owners have the responsibility to take classes and training to make sure their animal is well behaved and handled
- I think you are unfairly targeting certain dog breeds. Although I would not personally own a pit bull I would not want to punish others who are responsible owners or those whose dogs have been well behaved.
- I do not believe in any breed discrimination & do not support any revisions to laws that would include such discrimination
- Breed discrimination is ridiculous. Deal with problem dogs and problem owners appropriately.
- I do not see any owner education here. Things like exercise and stimulation needs of a high energy or intelligent dog as well as body language interpretation and what good dog manners look like is key.
- Ban owners of dogs that have been involved in biting incidents or worse with any breed of dog. The dogs behaviour is only as good as the owners training of the dog no matter the breed.
- There should be much higher fines for off-leash dogs. A dog that is not on a leash is not being controlled. If someone wants to approach a dog that is on a leash, that is their choice to make.
- Higher fines for all dogs involved in bylaw offences.
- No changes to current bylaws
- The breed of the dog is not the issue - there are many pit bulls and other large breed dogs that are loveable and well tempered. Not all large breed dogs are aggressive or bad mannered. It is wrong to lump all dogs from a certain breed, and to punish those that are not the problem. This would be no different than categorizing people based on their size, colour, or birth place. Just because a man is large and "looks" dangerous it doesn't make him any more dangerous than a small woman with an agenda.
- I believe obedience training should especially be required for pit bulls because generally the type of people who own these dogs are NOT responsible or considerate pet owners. The owner needs to understand breed characteristics and is usually the one that requires the training, not necessarily the dog.
- Provide support for dog owners by offering low cost training and individual sessions with licensed trainers and behavioural experts. This idea that isolating dogs away from socialization is going to improve behaviour is unfounded and counter intuitive. This survey is further stigmatizing pit bull and bully breed ownership. Education on responsible dog ownership and providing free/low cost resources for ALL dog owners is the only way to effectively make public spaces safer for dogs and people.
- Special license and Training for wolf content dogs!

- Its usually not the dogs that are the issue but the idiot owners that should never have been allowed to have any dogs period. There should be mandatory retraining to the owners if they own nuisance dogs. All dog owners should have mandatory training in order to own a dog(s) no matter what breed.
 - There is no objective method of establishing lineage of cross bred dogs or dogs which are not registered with a national kennel club. In addition, many municipalities do not have access to qualified persons that could accurately perform breed identification. • Dangerous dogs may exist in every breed and breed cross. • Dangerous temperament and behaviour are products of many factors other than just breed. • This type of ban will result in exclusion of some dangerous dogs, and inclusion of dogs that are not dangerous. • The incidence of dog bites has not been shown to be reduced by restricting the ownership of certain dog breeds
- I do NOT support breed specific legislation Define what is “dangerous behaviour”. (Lunging, pulling, jumping, bite, growl) Define what nuisance would require additional insurance (barking? running at large? Licensing?) Contradictory statement. Dogs running at large are not allowed to go to the dog park?
- Owners of nuisance dogs should be checked like mental checks if they are qualified to own any animals. It's not a pet that is a problem but the owner who is not accountable. There might be requirement to request special training for certain breeds to keep owners accountable and educated.
- No breed specific bylaws. Responsible dog ownership education for all new dog owners. Free basic dog training.
- These are absurd and arbitrary. OWNERS should have to go through training on how to properly care for any and all dogs. It is not a dogs fault it is the owners.
- [removed]
- Dont know why you pick ...I've been bitten by small dogs and border collies and rescue dogs ..never by a pit bull ..focus s/b on nuisance dogs with bad behaviour and ignorant owners
- STOP discrimination against dogs because of their breeds!!!! I've had way worse experiences with aggressive small dogs.
- Depending on the charges that result in a dog being determined a nuisance, I would support the aspects I have checked above. However, if a dog is a nuisance due to noise, I would not support them being prohibited from off leash parks, being muzzled, or the homeowner requiring extra insurance.
- this is too general. You could turn around and declare that pit bull types are a nuisance breed.
- All these suggestions would be great and a gep forward towards sensible solutions. However in regards to the pitbull breed I feel there will still be accidents that could slip through the cracks and happen. And I feel pit bulls should be banned enitirely.
- Screening of pet owners. If trained properly, regardless of breed, a dog will not bite.
- Breed specific targeting is awful! Irresponsible pet owners are the problem, not the breed. Owners of any aggressive dogs, including smaller breeds which are far more aggressive, should be punished!!
- irresponsible breeders of all dogs, but particularly stronger breeds should be fined and closed down.

- Every incident should be looked at on a case by case basis. This is racism and is Disgusting, Appalling and shameful! Council should be ashamed, look at the day and age you are in! The real problem is poor dog owners and training, not specific breed! You have in your wording of your statements above made this the exact same discussion as, [removed] This is not the Calgary that I would like to live in. SHAME ON YOU ALL!!!
- I do not support anything that appears to be heading toward breed specific legislation. Free/very low cost obedience training should be available for ALL breeds.
- Target problem dogs, dogs who have offended. NOT a blanket breed target!
- Owners should be trained. If you have a repeat offender then owners should have to take mandatory training or be faced with a ban on owning a pet. Also, 'nuisance' status should be revoked if the dog receives training.
- Introducing BSL will have a negative effect. Not being able to properly exercise your dogs will create boredom which will create negative behaviour. Placing a muzzle on a dog is unsafe to the dog when worn for more than 20 minutes. Muzzles also have been known to create anxiety and destructive behaviour in dogs. BSL is not the answer here. You have stated above that pitbulls are not involved in more bite incidents, then why are they being singled out? Because of the potential? Makes no sense. Do we ban people of other races due to the statistics that they are more likely to act violently? No we do not. Calgary has been the leader for our current bylaw so why change now? Education for officers and owners is what is needed. Stricter fines for those animals that do bite more emphasis on the owner to have a well behaved animal cats included. At large cats are more of a nuisance than pitbulls. They kill songbirds destroy property with urine and poop. Yet nothing is done to owners who do not contain them. I do not support a city that wants to introduce BSL lets not move backwards lets move forward with education.
- Focus on the bad owners the backyard breeders the rescues that only care about flipping dogs. Focus on higher fines for any animal that bites no matter size or breed. Focus on education. Singling out one specific breed will not work it creates fear. NO TO BSL
- Pitbulls should not be discriminated more than other dog breed
- When asking for specific answers please broaden what is deemed a nuisance animal, two options and an examples and etc do not provide insight into what I would be agreeing to.
- I don't think breed is an issue, I think it's the human and the training. You can't blame an animal for how it was raised, that's on the human. A nuisance dog shouldn't be declared as those at large - stuff happens. To me a nuisance is when they act threatening towards our her dogs or humans. That's when actions need to be taken. Not for barking or getting out of the yard.
- None of the above
- Mandatory competence and pet 101 course required for ownership. (licence)
- There should be a fair way of determining if a dog is a nuisance. Dog owners should have the ability to appeal said decision. If a dog is declared a nuisance, the dog owner should have the ability to redeem the dog through training. Dogs declared a nuisance should only be banned from off-leash parks if their owner refuses to take steps to properly train said dog. Fines to dog owners are more appropriate then punishing the dog with things like muzzles. Some dog owners may lose the right to own a Pitbull if it is shown that they fail to prevent the dog from becoming a nuisance.

- City wide banning of pit bulls and other aggressive breeds.
- Cannot be more than one nuisance dog per household
- Training classes should be a requirement for anyone who owns a dog. This applies for ALL BREEDS. Vast majority of dog bites, aggression is due to the HUMAN'S lack of responsibility.
- Please go back to the basics and be consistent in the delivery of the existing programs and by laws that have made Calgary a world leader in animal services and responsible ownership.
- Owners should have animals taken from them if the animal is a repeat offender.
- Dogs should be put down immediately and the owner fined at least $1000 if they bite someone.
- Requiring pitfall and nuisance dog owners to undertake an acceptable level of training, with meaningful sanctions for failure to take the training. Generally, except on rare occasions, problems with pitfalls and nuisance dogs result from an owner not knowing how to handle the dog or owners deliberately trying to engender aggressive traits in their dog.
- If the dog is a nuisance then more precaution is needed, it should not matter the breed, many dogs are dangerous other than pitbulls, to think otherwise would be caused from having a lack of intelligence.
- Pit bulls are not the problem and should never be separated as dangerous any more than the jack Russel who bit my daughter. Owners should have mandatory dog training and be re done every 5years of ownership from a city of Calgary approved trainer. Shorter re training for dogs that are deemed 'problematic' (like a probation officer). Owners are.
- There cannot be more than one nuisance dog in a household regardless of breed
- Perhaps "nuisance" or "dangerous" dogs could be required to wear a dog tag (from the city) that is a bright colour, as a way to let people know when a nuisance/dangerous dog is in the area.
- The actions/behaviors of a dog must be what determines if it is a nuisance or dangerous, not its breed, size, age, or appearance, otherwise, that is straight up discrimination, presuming guilt by association, fear based, and unjust. Poor dog behavior is a reflection of the humans who have failed them- whether the breeder/rescue that inappropriately matched the dog to the family or the owner who didn't take the steps to meet the dog's needs and keep it safe. Education is a big piece as is accountability. Responsible pet owners do not set their dogs up to fail.
- Need more advertising re: reminding owners to ONLY let pets OFF leash in their yards or off leash parks not on public sidewalks etc.
- All bylaws involving pit bulls are ignorance and lack education on breeds and species. If anything their should be mandatory background check on people who are buying/ adopting dogs. No bad dogs just bad dog owners.
- I think bad owners should be punished, I find it disgusting that the city is considering discriminating against a breed.
- All dogs can attack and bite. Owners should be fined and potential have ANY dog removed from them if it attacks or bites another person or dog. I know of a pit bull that was the most gentle dog and obedient dog I have ever seen until he lost his battle with cancer. I also know of a Chihuahua that has bitten kids and adults in the face causing damage, multiple attacks to peoples legs or hands for just being near the dog. But only one of these dogs is listed as dangerous

- no breed specific legislation should be allowed. Pitbull cannot do any more damage then a lab or german shepperd. Those are myths. Laws should be focused on the problem owners not on breeds
- I strongly disagree with Breed specific language, this bylaw improvement should read any dog who has bitten, harmed another animal or person should be subjected to...
- Breed specific legislation doesn't work, stop beating up on bully breeds
- DO NOT TARGET PIT BULLS
- Higher fines for owners who do not pick up after their dogs, including on their own property.
- Mandatory obedience training for ALL dogs, upon completion of obedience training a dog is no longer declared as a nuisance.
- Obedience training is good, but not the thing to prevent aggressive behaviour in canines. See comment regarding the CKKC test Canine Good Neighbour Test.
- Distinguish between dangerous dog and nuisance, address separately. Have users register for offleash access. Maybe a 2 part license?
- Dogs are not the problem, dog owners are. There should be greater fines on the owners.
- Should be put in place for all breeds regardless off size. Also situation must be taken into account. What triggered the attack, were there outside factors like animal being harassed or provoked.
- Either treat all dogs like this or dogs dog, go after huskues as they're much more likely to kill other dogs; stop picking on breeds that you don't like
- This section bothers me. I do not like that pit bulls are listed. I have never been bitten by a pit bull but have by many small breed dogs. It is the owners responsibility to properly train and handle their animal, whatever the breed. It is also the owners responsibility to ensure that if their dog is on the 'not so friendly' side to ensure that precautions are taken no matter the breed.
- The City of Calgary should stop perpetuating the myth that pit bulls are more dangerous than other types of dogs.
- BSL is been proven non-effective , and doesn't reduce dog bites. Every dog owner is responsible for their dog's behaviour and their training. Regardless of the breed , every dog owner should be aware of how to prevent any incidents. BSL is bringing fear , misconceptions, discrimination and Hatred ! Let's live in a world without prejudices
- The bylaw should not be imposed by breed but by the dogs history. There are many dangerous non-bully breeds out there whose owners should be held responsible for their dogs actions.
- I feel that its very unfortunate that Pit Bulls have been given a bad reputation. Like people every dog is different and I don't believe there is such a thing as a bad breed. There are however people who mistreat dog which can lead to bad dog behavior. Any breed of dog can potentially be dangerous and the owner of these dogs should be punished and banned from owning a dog. All dogs every should be required to take obedience training.
- NO BSL in Calgary! This has proven to be ineffective in change to dog bite, or nusiance dogs.
- If an owner cannot train their animal to be obedient, that it is the owners issue and should be dealt with accordingly. Dogs are not born evil, stop creating bylaws and stigmatizing them.

- Punish the owner of a dog as they only act as they are taught
- Training for owners on how to train and maintain dogs declared nuisance.
- Under the pit bull definition, do not agree with item “e” where physical appearance is grounds for restrictions. All dogs regardless of breed with aggressive behaviour should be treated equally.
- All dogs should undergo at least one obedience training to be licensed.
- I DO NOT SUPPORT BSL ALL DOGS ARE EQUAL. Focus on education and stricter fines on a case by case basis. All dogs can become aggressive if in the wrong environment singling out a specific breed is not the answer. Focus on backyard breeders, rescues not caring for the animals and using their business to flip dogs. More programs for education.
- To single out a specific breed of dog is absolutely despicable on the part of the city. A dog regardless of its breed is purely a product of its environment, if not cared for or trained properly, ANY dog can become a "nuisance". Have more in depth bylaws for pet ownership and filter out people who should not be dog owners in the first place.
- MANDATORY obedience dog training. FOR ALL dogs. Why isn't this on here?
- Tighter controls on who is allowed to own them!
- Ban pitbulls in the city limits.
- City develops programs with certified behavioural specialists to support owners of nuisance dogs.
- Mediation and education. I find that these suggested measures are very biased towards pit bulls and very suggestive for folks to opt for one of them, since they're soooo many involving them to choose from and next to few other chooses to explore and ponder. Brutal.
- None of the above
- [removed]
- “Pit bull” ban. These dogs are raised to be vicious. People generally don't get these dogs for their friendly qualities, they want them for their aggressiveness. This cannot be encouraged. These dogs are like assault rifles: they serve one purpose that is unacceptable for the general public to have to experience: violent attacks.
- Stop attacking pitbulls, target the owners of nuisance animals
- STOP BREED SPECIFIC FEAR MONGERING...
- Pit bulls are not the problem. ANY untrained dog is the problem.
- Breed specific legislation is not the way to go. All dogs should have the same rules.
- Pit bulls should not be singled out. Problems should be dealt with on a case by case basis looking at severity, context and circumstance. If owner is willing to be responsible than they should generally be allowed to redeem themselves and the pet through training and rehab.
- Would potentially support more measures if the threshold for “nuisance” was higher or if correlation from nuisance to danger was clearer
- Breed specific legislation is ridiculous. Dangerous dogs should be treated as such, regardless of breed.
- Pitbulls should be banned. I've seen too many attacks. It's nothing personal, it's statistics. These dogs are too aggressive.
- Training on how to safely separate fighting dogs.

- I would prefer a ban on pit bull or similar breeds. I like dogs, my best friend in life was a dog, but pit bulls have no place in modern society.
- obedience training for dogs considered aggressive or a nuisance upon a repeated offence, particularly if a dog or owner had already received a fine and that animal is involved in a second incident then obedience training should be mandatory after a first or second offence.
- Dog owners that choose to own aggressive pit bull type breeds must complete at least two dog obedience classes for each pit bull type dog they purchase.
- Training should be standard to have any dog licensed.
- To have owners decide if their dog should go through a obedience training to prevent them from biting people, and at the same time not being discriminatory to a certain breed of dog. Giving them a choice and not being discriminatory.
- Nuisance dogs should be on leash on off leash parks and muzzled if necessary.
- None of the above
- I hope the nuisance dog designation does not target pitbulls but other breeds, including small dogs, as well. Also maybe educate people who frequent dog parks for walks but do not own a dog as to how to approach or avoid dogs.
- Pitbulls are some of the gentlest of dog breeds. It's always the owners fault(of lack of presence) they are aggressive
- Making it illegal to have a pit bull in Calgary.
- Training for OWNERS on dog obedience, training, and recognizing behaviour. Owners need to be held accountable. Owners need to be responsible for training and manner in ANY DOG BREED
- Obedience training required for all nuisance dogs.
- BAN ALL PITBULLS FROM ALBERTA (NO EXCEPTIONS)
- Obedience training for all dogs
- I do not think there is evidence to discriminate against pit bulls. Please stop promoting this. It would be more helpful to focus on "nuisance" dogs and more importantly on the "nuisance" owner as this will engage the group that need special help. Can you show us the evidence that Pit bulls are responsible for the majority of bites and why there should be a specific category for the dogs? Please try to stick to the science and facts rather than jumping on the populist bandwagon.
- Behavior training for owners of dogs that are displaying behavior problems. These problems almost always stem from owners awareness or how an owner treats their pet. Pit bulls are not the problem. All breeds of dogs uninformed and poorly skilled owners will display Behavior problems.
- There should be absolutely no breed specific legislation. Owners should be held accountable on a case by case basis regardless of breed or size of the dog.
- If there is an incident, owner and dog should have to do and prove obedience training. You cannot single out one breed, that's disgusting
- Train owners,
- Breed specific legislation is highly discriminatory and wrongly punishes a breed for the poor training choices of its owner. Small dogs are often far more aggressive and willing to bite. Severe fines are fair, not a breed-discrimination bylaw. This only leads to homeless pets that may have otherwise done great in the community. Punish based on incidents, not breed. No dog "breedism" is acceptable in a modern bylaw. Don't punish innocent dogs and owner.

- I DO NOT SUPPORT THIS BSL AT ALL. Stray cats and cats allowed to roam on other people's property is more of a nuisance than a specific breed of dog. All pets should be spayed and neutered unless you are a registered breeder. Education is key for all owners this is not a breed issue this is a people issue. Properly trained and exercised animals can be very well behaved. Banning one breed will not solve aggressive dogs. Proper education will
- rescue dogs undergo obedience training
- BREED SPECIFIC LEGISLATION DOES NOT WORK!!!
- Fines and obedience training should be the same for ALL dogs. No breed should be discriminated against. As a dog trainer I've seen more Labrador Retrievers biting people than pit bulls.
- Escalating fines for repeat offenders (including leash offenses)
- The dog breed does not correlate to its behaviour. Focus on handling nuisance dogs rather than blindly targeting a specific breed. Targeting dogs of a certain breed is unacceptable.
- I don't agree with any of the above. Sounds like the city has made up their mind about bully breeds being "nuisance" I won't accept your preconceived notions. Check your facts, there is no science proving a bully breed has a stronger bite than any other dog breeds. Punish the owners of dogs that allow them to exhibit aggressive behaviour towards other dogs and mitigate through training and socializing with other dogs in a controlled environment. If that doesn't work make the owner surrender the dog to a shelter and help find a better owner.
- Actions should be based on dog behaviour, not breed. To base limitations and penalties simply on breed is discriminatory. All of the dog bites and nuisance dogs I know are not pit bulls.
- Owners of repeat nuisance/problem dogs any breed must complete training programs or forfeit animal ownership for 2 or more years
- A ban like Ontario
- Although "pitbull" type dogs are perceived to be the worst, any large dog (husky, doberman, etc.) can be extremely dangerous. Furthermore, small dogs are often not trained and provoke dog-dog attacks. There should be a mandatory basic training requirement for all dogs.
- You [Removed] at enforcing current bylaws so the only thing you should change is increase bylaw officers
- I don't think it should be breed specific. A dangerous dog is dangerous no matter the breed
- Leave pitbulls alone and do some research on them instead of listening to people's bias
- Stop being inhumane to pit bulls. I have no pets and kids however even I understand that there pit bulls should not be discriminated against. Even the United States in all their failures don't have these bylaws I am ashamed that Calgary is choosing to side on the wrong side of history against man's best friend.
- A vicious dog is a vicious dog, regardless of size. Granted, the damage caused is worse but any dog that bites should be required to have training. Also, the 'pit bull' breed doesn't have the strongest bite force.

- Just a reminder that if you specifically say "nuisance dogs," it covers all breeds, and any dog with a history of aggression would be included. Also, as someone with a B.S. in Animal Sciences from the University of Illinois, I can tell you that pitbulls have less biting power and damage potential than German Shepherd Dogs, Huskies, wolfhound, and other breeds with an elongated snout (like a wolf's mouth).
- There should be no breed specific legislation. Let's instead focus on animal abuse, neglect and dog fighting. Hold owners responsible, not the dog.
- Literally none of these, dont discriminate againt pits
- All of these options are illogical. To help prevent issues, how about providing education and training to new dog owners, afterall a dogs mannerisms reflect the training it is received from its owner. There is no good or bad dog, just how much love, care and training it has received. And certainly, issuing penalties based on breed is just ridiculous. It's 2020. Wake up.
- NO TO BREED SPECIFIC LEGISLATION!!! The german shepard has the highest bite strength. This is biased and had been proven not to lower dangerous dog encounters, and moreover victimizes the dog and their loving families for no reason other than how they look.
- please stop targeting "pit bulls," breed specific legislation is outdated & cruel.
- Breed of the dog should not be a factor to declare it a nuisance or dangerous
- The owner should be trained in handling if dogs a nuisance. Not the dog!! Nor a specific breed I have seen worse out of chihuahua's!!!
- Nothing because pitbulls are just dogs. More bylaws for shitty owners.
- I ABSOLUTELY DO NOT support BSL, restrictions or increased expectations for pit bull owners. I might support restrictions or increased expectations for dogs with multiple offences where there is a higher potential for dangerous behaviour - it would depend on the situation and should be considered case by case.
- I think that the criteria of what 'nuisance' fully entails needs to be much more specific, with many examples. My concern would be that the variance between those in charge of declaring a dog a 'nuisance' would be too large with the current vagueness of criteria.
- If a dog bites the owner should be held liable. Focusing on pitbull's is very narrow minded. I own a pitbull cross rescue. He has never displayed aggressive behavior toward any animal or person ever. He loves to play with other dogs run around in the dog park chasing his ball etc. However he has been bitten by a border collie because my dog was running in the dog park. Where are border collies on your list. This is such a mindless, cruel stereotype of beautiful animals. I'm a Jr. High teacher in Calgary. I would move from this city before I would ever allow my dog to be muzzled or on a leash in a dog park. Airdrie and Cochrane would be my first choice. Less taxes no inhumane treatment of animals. Who would put a muzzle on a dog in the summer when the only way for them to cool off is through their mouths? Wow.
- I think it's absolutely horrible the way you're singling out pit bulls as a violent breed. Shame on you.
- Breed specific legislation is a waste of your time, efforts, and tax dollars.
- Absolutely stay away from breed-specific legislation. Owner education and responsibility will be more effective than any fear-based laws.

- Owners are the problem and folks with nuance dogs need to have support to either rehome their animals and lead a dog free life, or both train their animal and themselves. as such I'd rather see owners get proper training.
- Do not ban pit bulls and other bully breeds, ban BAD OWNERS. NO SUCH THING AS BAD DOGS.
- Re-educate yourselves. Bad owners make bad dogs, singling out a breed with no real stats is not ethical in the slightest. There was a golden retriever that attacked a small dog at sue Higgins last week, are we going to start muzzling all of them? I can't believe you aren't trying to do more for other real issues in this city, specifically domestic violence. Pull your heads out of you [removed] and start doing something worth while.
- My dog was attacked by a chihuahua at a vet!!! Nothing happened and she still has the scar!! It attacked her face! A chihuahua attacked a 65 pound husky and by-laws did nothing!!! Ban those
- Have a bylaw, mandatory for all rescue dogs and owners , comply with certified obedience training course . INCLUDE with all adopted dogs fees obedience training course. Competed. INCLUDE incentives with discounts for merchandise at the animal shelters.
- Harsher punishments for all dog owners who do not take the time to properly train any dog, you can not make this for just a pitbull type dog, that is wrong and unfair!
- High fines for dogs off leash in on leash or bike areas.
- Bylaws should target irresponsible dog owners not specific breeds. It's not the dogs, it's their people...
- I support a ban on pit bulls. I have witnessed a pit bull attack another dog and was shocked to see that 3 large men could not get the pit bull under control. An unleashed pit bull came up to my kids' faces during fireworks and all the owner said was, "Don't worry, he's friendly." I've known two women attacked a total of three times by their own pit bulls.
- Definitely need more by law officers to enforce all pet related matters. Off-leash happens outside of off-leash parks
- Absolutely do not support breed racism, but even more that you define the breed as "any appearance of" ..that is ridiculous!!
- I would like to see large dogs in better control at dog parks. I have a smaller dog and larger dogs have tried to bite her while the owner was on the phone and couldn't care less. It looked to be a teenage pitbull. I think dogs that haven't had obedience training yet (and their owners regardless of whether it's a bit bull or confirmed nuisance dog or not), should not be allowed off leash at off leash parks for the safety of other smaller dogs. I don't care so much about getting bit it attacked (because I'm big enough and strong enough to fend off most dogs), but I do care if my dog gets killed. I'm too scared to take her to off leash parks now and cannot make the most of a faculty that I should have equal rights to because I fear my dog's safety. This had also happened on other instances with non-bull dogs. One was a German Shepard and I'm not sure what the others were.
- Limit the number of dogs to a household to three.
- Criminal background check on individuals looking to adopt a pitbull
- none of these unless your enforcing them upon all calgary dog owner nonbreed specific

- Dogs who are aggressive shouldn't be in off leash parks. Cheaper classes should be available for ANY BREED to help them with whatever they have been through. Dog aren't aggressive for no reason. And background checks for these animals before buying so we know those dogs aren't being abused.
- Owners who are found to cultivate nuisance behavior in any dog breeds fined and their dogs seized for activity related to dog-fighting etc.
- Obedience training should be a standard for all dog owners as well as funding programs for such programs.
- Most of these are ridiculous suggestions that are not based in science. Your own survey states pitbull dogs don't have a higher rate of bites. BSL perpetuates fear mongering of animals instead of addressing the issue of bad ownership.
- Rescue dogs must undergo a safety certification.
- I only support the above IF the insurance is on a scale based on income. And would also question what happens if the owner is not able to pay? Does the dog get taken to the pound? Do we not think perhaps this will worsen the dogs behaviour or otherwise have an impact on it?
- No breed specific laws
- All dog owners should be required to complete obedience training with their dogs as a condition of licensing. The city should put funding towards accessible and affordable dog obedience training.
- Responsibility Training Program for Owners of nuisance dogs
- I don't think any of this should single out pitbulls. I feel that these rules should apply to ALL dogs even the small breeds. Every dog owner should be expected to be responsible regardless of breed.
- no BSL this should apply to all dogs regardless of breed or size
- I do not support any form of BSL. I am more scared of being bit by a Chihuahua. My dogs have been teased by the neighborhood kids so now bark every time someone walks by, but would be potentially restricted from attending an off leash area?
- Targeting pit bulls is absolutely insane to me. Don't make an entire breed suffer over [removed] ownership. Instead just treat all dogs the same and if nuisance behaviour ensues then deal with it the way you would any other dog. I'm disgusted that my own city would target an entire breed.
- Pit bulls should be banned completely as they are in many other places. They can and do KILL people and pets on a regular basis. They kill 66 dogs PER DAY in the U.S. and one person every two weeks! In 2015 they KILLED 24,000 dogs and 13,000 cats. Their jaws cannot be pried open. There are groups across Canada and the U.S. made up of people who have been attacked by Pit Bulls or have had loved ones killed by Pit Bulls. One Pit Bull can cause terrible grief for victims. Six Chihuahuas can hurt no one, so the TYPE of dog is much more important than the number! No one should be allowed to have an animal that is a dangerous weapon.
- Instead of targeting pitbull type dogs, enforce proper training FOR ALL adopted dogs regardless of breed. I am more scared of a chihuahua biting me than a pitbull, but if a chihuahua bites nothing happens and a pitbull would be put down. This is not okay.
- Obedience training required for all dogs. Small dogs can be instigators which can cause another dog to react and get blamed for the incident. Bad behavior is dangerous in any size or breed of dog.

- Stop mixing the word pit bull with nuisance dog. They are not the offenders. Bad owners should be held responsible but do not condemn a breed.
- I do not support breed discrimination. Please leave pitbulls alone, they are wonderful dogs.
- Better ability to report animal abuse and stiffer penalties for abusers
- Lower license fees for owners of any dog that do initial and ongoing training with their dog (proof req'd). Similar to car insurance: better premiums for responsible drivers w/o offenses.
- Breed specific bylaws are not acceptable.
- I am troubled by this survey singling out specific dogs breeds and feel you are coercing dog owners to villify all pit bull type dogs with this questions wording
- I think everybody should have to take their dog in for training no matter what breed it is because it's the owner who makes the dog vicious or not.
- No opinion
- Focus on the deed not the breed all animals have the ability to bite and the owner needs to be responsible no matter the breed. Focus on stricter fines for those who DO bite no matter the breed. Focus on education regarding safety around all dogs
- I would not support anything that singles out pit bulls. I work with a local rescue and have many pit bulls that are sweet in nature and no different from any other breed. Singling the, out would be grossly unfair to a responsible dog owner.
- All rescue dogs must undergo obedience/aggression assessment by qualified individual.d
- Focus on the root of the problem banning or restricting a specific breed is NOT the answer. By doing this you are not stopping neglecting owners from owning an aggressive. Focus should be on education as well as when an animal bites and it is reported it should be on a case by case basis no matter the size or breed of dog. The owners need to be investigated regarding why the dog bit in the first place.
- I wanted to note that the ambiguity of what a nuisance dog could be doesn't allow me to answer these questions appropriately. A dog who barks in their yard is very different from an aggressive dog in public and cannot be lumped into the same category.
- There should be no breed specific rules
- I don't support any of this, the problem is the human not the dog! My pitbull was attacked by a Herman Shepard he ended up at the vet and the German Shepard without a scratch. Why punish the dog? They are like kids, Is the owner the problem.
- Ban pit bulls. As a breed
- obedience training should be a requirement for any dog, not just certain breeds or nuisance dogs.
- I had a lovely and well-mannered American Bulldog picked up and put into Biter Quarantine at the civic pound once because someone mistook her for a pit bull. Training for those who will enforce these regulations is essential! They must be able to determine dog breed, and be able to interpret dog behaviours correctly, not just make assumptions.
- Higher fines and extra insurance for dogs that have actually done something wrong, not based off of breed or being scared.

- I disagree with any Breed specific bylaws. The bylaws should be about making the human a better trainer, not vilifying innocent pit bulls.
- This stereotyping is absurd and antiquated. The dogs that have been most aggressive towards me are chihuahuas, and they never stop barking unlike larger breeds.
- Nothing. I have 2 pit bulls and they're sweethearts. My kids can lay with them do really anything and they won't even so much as nip, or growl. My husky is more likely to bite someone than my pitbulls. There is nothing wrong with the breed at all. They're just an intimidating looking dog because of their size. By that logic any body builders, trained fighters, or overly muscular people should have to walk around with handcuffs and leg restraints just like a prisoner, I almost never see nor hear about any bully breeds biting or attacking it's almost always other breeds this is by far the most ridiculous law this city has ever tried passing
- The owner is responsible for the dog and should attend good citizen classes on being a proper owner as well as taking the dog to training... the dog is only as good as it's owner
- Train or muzzle the owners, if they can't train or handle ANY dog big or small shouldn't have one. If they are going to have a big dog, they need to have training. And don't let people approach the dog unless it is safe.
- nuisance means a dog involved in multiple "MINOR" offences. The owner of the dog should be fined for the offences and owner and dog should have to attend training if offences continue to happen. We do not need new bylaws. The bylaws that we have just need to be enforced. And exhibiting dangerous behaviour and being dangerous are two very different things.
- All dog owners should engage in training
- All breeds of dogs should have the same rules. My elderly mother's buchon used to attack when you entered the house. The dog is now deceased.
- None of the above
- higher licensing fee for pitbulls to discourage those without resources to properly train and care for them from owning one
- Trainers must have a history of being experienced (minimum 10 Years) and demonstrate the ability to identify and modify the root cause of behaviour and to educate the owner.
- I do not believe in breed banning. Certain breeds are sought after by certain types of people. It is these people that need to be banned from owning any dog.
- What is considered a nuisance dog? might change a few of my answers.
- None of these options are reasonable. Pitbulls are inherently good, a nanny breed. Proper education about handling and better efforts from authorities to stop dog abusers who creat mean dogs. Whom by the way with proper care, love and patience can almost always recover.
- In the case of more than one pit bull or nuisance dog in a household, I would like to see it permitted only in the case of the dogs being rehabilitated.
- Legislation should only feature nuisance dogs, breed specific legislation is misinformed
- I so hearty believe the "pitbull" breed everyone keeps talking about shouldn't be singled out and muzzled just because they have the "potential" to cause more injury. A German Shepards should also be muzzled too since they have a higher tendency to nip

- Programs for dog owners to educate and help. Background checks and investigation on living conditions before dog ownership. Obedience training for dogs over a certain weight limit.
- A bite is a bite. Dog breed should not be a reason to isolate. A biting small dog should be treated the same as a big dog
- Mandatory dog training for all dog owners at time of purchase or adoption training by certified dog trainers.
- No breed specific rules. Focus should be on nuisance dogs which can be any breed.
- Remove “pit bulls” from every statement suggested above. Breed is not a factor in this. I have been bitten twice by two separate Labrador Retrievers in my lifetime, while the dogs you are assuming to be “dangerous” have been nothing but loyal and kind to me.
- I just want to make it clear that there is a difference between nuisance dogs and pit bulls. This makes me so angry that BSL is even on the table.
- I would support additional measure only if a dog is involved in unprovoked attacks. To declare a breed of dog as a nuisance as a generalization is totally wrong. You cannot punish the breed for the actions of a single dog.
- Nuisance offences should be totally separated from "aggression" offences, and treated differently. "Nuisance" issues such as barking / noise are totally subjective, and should not in any way be taken as an indication of aggression or danger.
- I do not believe that any single breed should be singled out. It is the dog owners responsibility for the behaviour of a dog. Any dog can be a nuisance and any dog can be a great pet.
- Muzzle the owner not the dog! Pit bulls are NOT THE PROBLEM
- Discrimination of dog breeds is ignorant. Any breed can attack or be considered a nuisance. The regulations should be applied to the BEHAVIOR of the dog NOT the breed. Consulting a dog training expert should be mandatory when brainstorming by laws concerning dogs. Do better [personal name removed]. Discrimination on dog breeds is Discrimination on a race of a child ... the parents/owners are the ones to blame not the colour/breed. I am disgusted this is even being considered.
- I would be embarrassed if Calgary started any breed specific discipline. It is apparent that these ideas came from ignorant planners and I hope they become educated in the fact that it isn't the breed, but how the dog is trained. I have a Golden Retriever and go to the dog park all the time. The pit bulls are the nicest dogs and are usually very well trained. I am appalled at the idea we would penalize a breed rather than an owner. I feel like the planners should be ashamed of themselves for not looking deeper into this.
- No extra measures, for any reason.
- No breed specific rules! This would be discriminatory! Lots of breeds bite and cause harm usually bad owners! Pitbulls like other dogs are gentle and sweet.
- Pitfalls aren't the problem. Owners are the problem.
- The underlying cause of nuisance dogs is that they have been abused. I would like there to be investigations into whether a dog owner has been abusing their dog, if it bites or attacks. I live pit bulls. Also there could be more restrictions on rescue dogs until it is proven they can properly socialize with other pups.

- criminal trial of negligence for pit bull and other dog bites that causes severe injury or death
- Higher fines for nuisance small dogs that bite, charge and instigate aggression toward larger docile dogs and especially docile pitbulls who DO NOT retaliate.
- Obtain proof you know how to deal with potentially difficult behaviour before being allowed to own and license one
- This shouldnt be breed specific! 9 times out of 10 its the owners fault not the dog! Any dog ANY dog/owner that has a past should be dealt with prehaps all dofs should be muzzled on off leash parks.not one pitty or bully has EVER attacked or given chase to my dogs! Its always been little dogs with big complexes or retriever types!
- All dogs should be under the same rules. A pitbull owned by a responsible owner is not dangerous. The only additional thing that should be considered is perhaps obedience training and proof of such training.
- No to all above suggestions- these are serious infringement s of our rights.
- certain level of training required to go into public areas with a dog. If a dog goes unmanaged, whether able to little or a lot of damage, they should be trained to a certain degree and treated as potentially a weapon of sorts without proper training certification.
- BSL does not work and will not work, the fact that it is stated that it is stated “pit bulls strength allows for a more severe bite” shows that there is an agenda and bias, and it is incredibly untrue when you consider the strength potential and size with say a mastiff or a Rottweiler, or the potential of a German Shepherd to cause extreme damage. Having worked in AC I know the potential for all large breeds and suggesting a BSL is ridiculous.
- Have a higher teir of fines for animals that have been put on the nuisance list. For an animal to be out in the nuisance list I believe the owner should be spoken to more then 3 times on a specific issue. Also basing a nuisance animal on what a dog looks like is awful and basing this theory that they could be more dangerous than any other dog is wrong. How a dog behaves is mostly based on the owners and how the animals are trained.
- None of the above the is breed specific! This is WRONG! Please provide the statistics for the amount of bites from the listed above breeds!
- dogs that bite should be put down and owners fined
- Generalizing certain breeds of dogs and punishing owners with additional insurance fees is unacceptable.
- If you have a high risk dog (doesn't matter the breed) you should have to pay accordingly to ensure other peoples safety and the safety of the dog.
- It would be wonderful if in future surveys you could include the City's definitions on certain terms such as "nuisance". I support obedience training being mandatory for dogs who have demonstrated uncontrolled violent tendencies, and the same goes for prohibition from being in off-leash parks. If and only if the dog, of any breed, has established violence, should those be mandated.
- Put owners of nuisance dogs in training on how to handle and train their dog.
- Unneutered male dogs (of any kind) should not be allowed in off leash parks.

- I would like to challenge why the City of Calgary is stereotyping the "Pit Bull" breed. I have owned dogs my entire life and never have I had a negative encounter with a "Pit Bull" or terrier breed. The dog attacks I have personally experienced have come from vast majority of dog breeds non of of them being "Pit Bulls". The archaic notion that these dogs are "dangerous" has been disproven time and time again. I question the City of Calgary's "experts" proposal. The City of Calgary should not be discriminating against a dog breed as it is a band-aid solution that will provide more problems than results. The City needs to start holding pet owners more accountable for their dogs actions. The problem lies with the owner, not the dog breed.
- ANY BREED OF DOG that bites should be ordered to take training
- Basic obedience training required for all dogs. Discrimination of certain breeds should not be acceptable within City of Calgary bylaws.
- I DO NOT agree with any of those rules!
- No breed specific rules
- No breed specific legislation. RACISM AGAINST A DOG.
- The issue with a nuisance dog, pit bull or otherwise, is the owner not the dog. Anyone considering adopting a large dog breed should be vetted for appropriateness, owner should undergo training on how to properly handle a large dog, and the dog should receive obedience training. If the owner cannot pay for training for themselves and the dog, they should be denied the ability to adopt the dog.
- BSL does not work. Owner education is key and I think that is a better way to combat this.
- A bylaw should not be created to generalize a breed of dog. Any dog breed can be a bite causing harm. Dog bites should be reviewed on a case by case basis. You cannot discriminate against a breed of dog. It's not fair to the owner or the animal. Many people try to fight against this pit bull stereotype to help an animal in need. To make an owner pay more money to rehabilitate or care for these animals is outrageous
- leave the pit bull alone for fs sakes. The owners are clearly the problem.
- If the definition of a nuisance dog is one that barks too much and is running around, it makes no sense at all to require them to be muzzled. Barking is a natural behaviour and is their way of communicating. If a dog has a problem with barking, it should be the owner's responsibility to become more educated and learn what is wrong with the dog. For instance, dogs left outside on their own all day is absolutely terrible. Those people should be fined!! That is neglect! Too many of these options seem to be punishing a dog for an owner's bad behaviour. That is the same case for pit bulls. As you have stated, they are no more likely to bite than any other breed. Putting restrictions on a particular breed has zero efficacy against dangerous attacks. Again, that comes down to responsible ownership. The only reason I agree with obedience training for nuisance dogs is so that the owner is required to have some sort of training and can learn how to be a more responsible dog guardian.
- Repeat nuisance dogs owners should be investigated to make sure there is no abuse or neglect happening to the animal. If it is proved that there is, the best thing for the animal should be considered including whether the dog should be removed and rehomed.

- This should not be breed specific. The people should be held accountable. These dogs are some of the best family dogs a person could have. If with a irresponsible person any dog can be dangerous. Hold people more accountable and not the breed. Some of the rescue pit bulls are the most loving animals on the planet and show it back every day they didn't want to be abused by humans and made to fight.
- There cannot be more than one nuisance dog in a household. The option above does not allow this selection without implicating pit bulls. 2 non-nuisance pit bulls SHOULD be permitted in a single household.
- Fines/jail time for dog owners who off leash their dog when they know it is aggressive. They just won't pay fines, and continue to train their dog to be vicious (all dogs, not just pittbulls). If jail time is involved, they would less likely put the public at risk. Also ban future ownership of animals if they are repeat offenders. Dogs aren't bad, they're taught to be.
- I do not support any fines or prejudice against "Pitbulls" and "Pitbull type breeds". As an experienced dog owner I have heard of more other types of breeds who are vicious and attack/bite. It is not right to single out pitbulls or pitbull breeds. instead look at education and training for both owner and dog. More times than not, it's the owner who's to blame rather than the dog.
- None of these because if you actually do research, breed specific laws actually do not help and pitbulls do not have extraordinary bite strength as opposed to other breeds
- What is wrong with you? The only one at fault for any issues regarding any animal is the guardian of the animal, there are many large dogs that have vicious bites and if you do not know that then you should not be making these rules and (or) questions, using pitbull as an example is pathetic, and this is coming from someone who does not own a dog. Any dog can be a nuisance, how dare you use stereotyping as a way to allow others to get away with bad behaviour (because depending on your stereotyping others who are not under the law will probably use it to their advantage.). There should be no specific dog under scrutiny when it is the owners who should be held responsible, [removed] So how dare you try to say that "oh this dog has a visious bite so definitely going to have to mark that down"... You are rediculous and should be ashamed. [removed]
- Having owned multiple "pitbull type" dogs in the past all these bylaws for specific breeds are ridiculous, uneducated assumptions that show a huge lack of research, understanding and education on our cities part. Growing up with animals my entire life I have more scaring and reservation from small dogs and cats then I do any pitbull I've ever owned. Holding terrible irresponsable owners more accountable is one thing, but assuming 1 dog type as a whole is the problem is ridiculous.
- Dog owner should be psych evaluated and they should be properly trained on dog obedience and prove that their dog is obedient to their commands after obedience training.
- anything to prevent people from keeping dog off-leash anywhere that is not on-leash...i am sick and tired of people telling me "my dog is friendly" when i don't want close any dog ...friendly or not I don't want to be touched / sniffed by any dog!

- Targeting specific breeds with any of the above measures has been shown to be ineffective at reducing bites. Better owner education for all dogs would be a better investment than targeting specific breeds.
- Fines to be doubled or tripled when an offence has been repeated.
- Owners of dogs declared nuisance dogs and the dog be required to take obedience class or remedial class, including proper methods for training and correcting bad behaviors.
- Obedience training for all dogs and owners.
- Stop disproportionately demonizing a specific breed and deal more harshly with irresponsible, bad pet owners.
- Fines and law cannot discriminate against a particular dog breed. People with their negligence create dogs.
- that all breeds be treated equally, and for Pit Bulls not to be 'the exception'. I've had a Pit bull / Mastiff cross for 8 1/2 years and she is far better behaved than your average poodle, bichon, daschund, or terrier.
- Behaviour specific fines. Cannot be based on breeds
- Dangerous dogs and poor behaviour is a TRAINING issue and is NOT breed specific!!!! Creating breed specific bylaws is well documented to be ineffective.
- I don't believe that any dog that hasn't committed an offence and been given its proper inquiry and day in court should be punished just because of the type of dog it was born to be.
- People should be screened for owning an animal. How you raise your animal is the problem, not what breed they are. This is discrimination against a breed. Your argument is also invalid. There are canines with a higher bite force than the pitbull. For this breed to be specifically mentioned is ridiculous. Not to mention there are larger breeds than this in general that can cause the same amount of damage.
- immediate seizure of dangerous animals, subject to home evaluation prior to return.
- more stringent control of leashed areas. It has become very common to see owners unleashing their dogs where prohibited.
- I do not support any breed specific measures.
- I do not support any measure which singles out a breed or a collection of breeds. The breed of a dog does not dictate whether it has behaviour problems and numerous studies have shown that breed-specific bylaws and legislation in other municipalities have no bearing on dog behaviour problems. Also City's singling out 'pit bull' in this survey is factually wrong and discriminatory - the bite force (strength) of a 'pit bull' is comparable to (or less than) that of many other breeds, including German Shepherd, Rottweiler and Boxer.
- Suggest better education of proper dog etiquette in public spaces, for adults and children. A campaign encouraging people not to approach unknown animals would be helpful, or the right ways to approach when greeting a dog. For example asking permission from the owner before proceeding. Also, all dog owners, especially inexperienced ones should be encouraged to seek basic training for their dogs. If financially responsible enough for a pet, then also for appropriate training. Large dogs and small dogs can both have behavioural issues. Declaring one type of breed more dangerous than all the rest seems like doggy racism. At the end of the day more could be done to educate owners and public about safe practices for dog ownership, especially in public or mixed use spaces.

- None of the above. This is ridiculous and breed specific laws have been proven false and unfair in repeated studies
- Pit bulls are not the problem, many other breeds are just as bad but do not get the bad wrap. This happened to other breeds in the past and it's bad owners that make bad dogs and that can be in any breed size or shape
- Owners of nuisance dogs should have the book thrown at them, but owners of innocent pit bulls that have never harmed anyone or exhibited dangerous behaviour should not! These provisions will only make these dogs harder to adopt and lead to more euthanasia of innocent dogs.
- Based on my above answers, my thoughts are "Go after the owner not the dog"
- This should be for dangerous dogs not a certain breed
- Smaller breeds have a much higher frequency of biting. Singling out dogs by breed doesn't help anything
- A case on any dog. No discrimination between what breed the dog is. It's a CASE TO CASE basis. Not a pit bull problem.
- Pit bulls are NOT the problem. PEOPLE are the problem. I know little tiny dogs that BITE, it's the OWNER who NEEDS TRAINING!!! OWNERS of ANY BREED of DOG should have to undergo mandatory training BEFORE owning ANY DOG
- just pointing out specific breeds are not the problem, bad owners make bad dogs. If anything maybe requiring dog training as part of ownership could help. Even if it's just a few videos on tips for keeping dogs better behaved
- Obedience training for ALL dogs, regardless of size or bite strength, those are ridiculous measurements to base rules/bylaws on. A dog that bites is a dog that bites! They should all be treated the same, as picking on one breed creates a stereotype and unnecessary fear of that breed. Owners need to be targeted, not breeds
- Why are you specifically using Pit Bulls? any dog can be aggressive towards humans. I own a pitbull and he has never or bit any human. he is the most loving dog ever.
- If this is going to happen it should apply to all dogs!
- It is time to punish the owner of nuisance dogs, not the dogs. If a dog is deemed to be a nuisance, it would be desirable to rehabilitate the dogs and have them rehomed at the expense of the owner of the dog when it became a nuisance.
- Should go for all dogs if this was people we were talking about this would be considered segregation and inclusiveness. Proven fact that pit bulls or bully breed as they have been termed score high on temperament test that dachshunds.
- All dogs should be muzzled(cage muzzle) in off leash parks to reduce potential for injury.
- It is wrong to have any form of breed specific legislation. It is unfair and prejudiced
- No breed specific legislation; there are plenty of non-pitbull type dogs that are nuisances or poorly trained/handled by owners

- Mandatory check and maintain fences and dog pens when a nuisance dog is involved and some way to stop the dog from forcing exit through windows and front door..
- Owner training for large dogs (mandatory for dog license renewal) that discusses socializing the dog, training the dog, aggressive/nervous cues, general behavioural stuff. Have a dog behavioural expert visit the dog's residence to meet the dog and assess it's behaviour to recommend training if required.
- OWNERS need as much training as the animal. It is not enough to send a dog off for training without expecting the owner to receive attitude and behavior training as well. This is part of the expense and responsibility of owning a pet.
- I would prefer if this was not a BSL. All of these questions should stand for all dogs not just pitbulls or bully bread dogs. The fact that this is in your survey is disturbing as you are playing into the media hype about pitbulls. It is discrimination and I do not agree with this at all.
- We should not be pointing fingers at a specific breed. It is the owner who makes and tailors the behaviour of a dog. We should mandate, as a responsible dog owner, that upon purchasing/adopting/gifting a dog the owner should register with the dog in obedience classes and provide proper training to the dog, otherwise, the owner will get fined if the certificate of obedience classes is not registered with the City.
- none. all dogs should require obedience training. breed should not matter. punish bad owners, they're the ones who allow dogs to become violent. punishing people for "nuisance" breeds is just ridiculous. I've been bitten by more Chihuahuas or small badly behaved dogs. never once a nuisance breed
- Training programs for problem OWNERS. Bigger fines for owners with dogs (ANY BREED) who exhibit and have previously exhibited problem behaviours. Banning and bigger fines for "backyard breeders." Giving out proper educational materials on dogs, dog training, dog bites and attacks (i.e. golden retrievers and german shepards have more reported incidents than any other breed, including all "pit bull" breeds combined - why are there no surveys on these types of breeds???)
- Any change you make for pit bulls should then also be applied to large breed dogs such as German Shepards, chow-chow, huskies, etc as their bites are just as strong. Only making a change to pitbulls is breedest and will upset a large portion on the community.
- Online training course on dog safety required prior to licensing dogs. Higher fines for unlicensed dogs
- if a dog REGARDLESS of breed has been declared a "nuisance", it would be nice to have some sort of...collar or vest they could wear to let other dog owners know so they keep their distance. Once said dog has done training and can be declared non nuisance then they won't need to wear anything.
- I think if there is an incident then mandatory obedience training should be implemented, this could provide information and guidance on how to properly manage an animal. This could be provided at a discounted rate and could provide some jobs in today's workforce.
- Possibly have a registry for higher risk dogs so people are being more responsible and can be more accountable for misbehavior

- There cannot be more than one nuisance dog in a household;
- Owners of nuisance dogs prohibited from having more than one dog in the household. Owners of nuisance dogs prohibited from breeding dogs.
- i do not believe in BSL... bad owners need bigger penalties. Animal abusers need banned for life, across municipalities and provinces
- All dogs should be given an adequate amount of exercise daily.
- It is not the breed of the dog that I am concerned about; it is the human who is behind the dog. Any dog breed can be trained to be vicious even a chuawawa can be dangerous; so please take out specific breeds and put DOGS IN GENERAL!
- Stop labelling pit bulls, it is an ownership issue not a breed
- none of the above
- There should not be a specific label on a specific breed of a dog, make owners take training, if owners are caught abusing or training a pet for violence - have a severe penalty and do not allow them to own a pet ever again and monitor this
- Stop BSL period! It is the owner, not the dog. Don't be racist against pitbulls purely on their "bite" or look. There are far worse dogs. This is an archaic step backwards.
- get rid of those Bull breeds. They are all [removed], and I know better than most working in the dog industry. Sad, but it is what it is. Can't train out genetics and prey drive.
- DO NOT ENACT ANYTHING AGAINST A SPECIFIC BREED. WE ARE A MULTICULTURAL COUNTRY. WE DON'T CHANGE LAWS BASED ON A CERTAIN SKIN COLOR OR RACE WE SHOULDNT DO THAT TO DOGS. IT SHOULD BE GOING BY INDIVIDUAL DOGS. EVERY DOG IS DIFFERENT AND THIS ISNT FAIR TO PITBULLS. 2ND THE PITBULLS IT STRONGER THING IS A LIE YOU ARE FEEDING LIES TO PUSH YOUR NARRATIVE. YOU ARE USING THE MEDIA TO LIE AS WELL THIS IS UNACCEPTABLE. IF THIS GOES TO VOTE YOU CAN BET JUST LIKE AIRDRIE THAT YOU ARE GOING TO BE SCREWED MYSELF AND OTHER "bully breeds" OWNERS WILL MAKE SURE THIS DOES NOT PASS. BSL IS UNACCEPTABLE
- None of the above.
- All dogs required obedience training
- The dogs are not the problem! People are the problem. If there is a problem, the dog should be removed from the home to a loving caring home. Pit Bulls are one of the kindest and loving dogs out there in the right home. No dog should have to be muzzled at all times when outside walking, and should not be excluded from dog parks! It goes to the same saying as guns don't kill people, people kill people.... the gun is just a tool. German Sheppards, Dobermans, rotwillers all have the same potential to do more damage. Again it is the people and not dogs fault.
- Owners of nuisance dogs require training and strong screening guidelines for owners of pitbulls. I am appalled at the nativity around this Brees. Yes their bite is stronger but I have been attacked by multiple small dogs at off leash and never once has a pitbull come at me. At one point I owned two rescues. I don't feel limiting the number of pitbulls per household will make any difference. People like me (responsible pitbull owners) rescue this Brees to help change their reputation. Those who aren't responsible aren't going to register them so you'll only be hurting the responsible pitbull owners

- Education I'm dog handling for owners. Nearly all bites are the product of ignorance.
- Any dog that attacks and causes harm to a human or another animal should be put down/destroyed. Too many chances are given to aggressive/nuisance/dangerous dogs.
- I do not believe that a breed of dog should be singled out! And to single them out to the point of looking like a pitbull is condemning a dog that has done nothing but be born! I do believe if the dog has done something to deserve action then it shall be felt with. But why charge the dog and it's owners based on a name of a breed that isn't involved in more bite attacks as you have stated here. I owned a pitbull classification dog back in the late 80s and he lived a full and happy life with many children from infancy. He never once bit anyone or caused anything that would be classed as a nuisance breed other than being the dog he was born to be. We can not impose extra cost and fines on the owners and animal if it is innocent and has done nothing wrong!!
- The owner of a dog should be criminally responsible for the behavior of their animal. I.E. if your dog/pitbull attacks and/or kills another person or animal, you should be charged with an equivalent offence as if it were you who attacked/killed someone.
- Punish the owner. If the dog is a nuisance, then they must attend court ordered training until they pass. Just like for humans who have anger issues.
- not just pitbulls. Any dog can exhibit these behaviors. Fines should be issued for all dogs
- NO TO BSL! IT DOESN'T WORK.
- Pitbulls are not inherently a nuisance. Do not treat them as such. Dogs that have committed an offence may require obedience training
- NOTHING BUT DISGUSTING BREEDISM [personal information removed] IN 35 YEARS THERE HAVE BEEN 45 DEATHS ONLY 5 HAVE BEEN ATTRIBUTED TO PIT TYPE DOGS NUMBER ONE KILLER SLED DOGS - BUT YOU CONTINUE TO DEMONIZE THE VARIOUS BREEDS [removed]

Tribunal

The following comments are responses from participants who selected 'I would support a tribunal as long as it followed this condition'.

- The tribunal would have to be made up of dog owners that were not all small dog owners or at least have a few dog owners on it
- Where are fines for dogs in vehicles?
- They knew what they were doing not dogooders. The dog should stay with the owner under house arrest til situation resolved. Retraining is the first action (ie dog fight victims)
- I would support this if this means that the situation is looked at the dog or the owners. If owners treated or trained their dog a certain way and sometimes it's on the owner not the animal. You don't know how the animal is being treated (beaten, neglected) without more investigation into cases

- It is open minded and hears all responses from people involved and wasn't bias towards dog breeds as this whole new change is to a specific dog breed
- Pitbulls are treated the same as other breeds
- the dog owner(s) need to check in all the time with bylaw until a decision is made. Let's not plug up the Courts...
- Pitbulls were not targeted for unfair and biased reasons
- There should be an appeal process available
- Suggest alternative measures than euthanasia
- The tribunal consists of people within the vet or dog behavioural industry. Not just general people or councillors.
- Yes
- That the 'dog' in question is fairly assessed by a CPDT (certified pet dog trainer) before any euthanasia decision is made
- There is no breed specific laws (I.e. pit bulls deemed more dangerous than other breeds)
- STOP EUTHANIZING ANIMALS FOR THE FAILURE OF HUMANS
- Clear ethical guidelines, systems, and processes layed out for them to follow
- That animal experts are included as representatives such as vets, trainers and behaviorists.
- It's an independent party
- Euthanasia only when serious bodily harm or multiple incidents of biting have occurred.
- Review whether the animal poses a threat or not - completed during a reasonable amount of time
- I support any measure that is as punitive to the animal as possible. Any support should go to the victim. Why does the animal have more rights again. Out the dog down like they did in the old days and stop wasting tax payers money over this.
- Can not mandate euthanize for the dog. Must go to court for that order.
- What is best and safest for the dog is the guideline
- Dog is assessed by a certified veterinary behaviourist
- There is fair non breed biased decisions
- Tribune must consist of at least a subset of experts (veterinarians, animal behaviourists).
- Maximum process time. ie no more then 3 days to decide outcome.
- Fair and impartial
- Not bias on breed of dog
- So long as all are dog owners. I don't believe someone who's never owned a dog couldn't truly relate to what is best for the dog and owner.
- Instead of euthanization, they are taken to a training facility for rehabilitation
- Take into consideration a dog's past. Some previously abused dogs will be quite and with drawn, some will in a sense, act aggressive to protect what wonderful life they've been given. Also view what things the owner has done to care for the dog and the public. Any dog can be aggressive and go overboard. What was the actual if any contributing factor.

- Euthanasia was not on the table. Rehabilitation is key. You don't put down a child with problems, you help them
- Euthanizing as an absolute final option after rehab has been exhausted completely or placements in appropriate settings, i.e., a sanctuary
- Appeal at lower court (QB requires costly legal counsel). Info to be reviewed must include owner, witness, vet, behaviourist info as provided by owner and bite victim).
- Give owners and dogs a second chance, and require owners to put dog through training after first bite to prevent secondary bite. Obviously this is variable, if bite results in death than a second chance isn't ideal.
- Serious injury should be treated differently
- Professional who does the assessment my bet is an agreed upon person by both parties involved
- Funded through pet licensing fees or by owners of nuisance dogs
- A certified professional dog trainer is a member of the tribunal
- Allows owner to continue housing the dog (must remain on home property)
- If the owner is the cause due to lac of control/training, abuse, or neglect that the animal be surrendered and assessed for rehabilitation then placed with a rescue or Humane Society for re-homing
- The people on the tribunal must be impartial, be capable of looking at the situation as a whole, and have both compassion and logic- just as any judge would when looking at a situation. It is all too easy for tribunals to become wildly biased and unreasonable.
- The tribunal selection process is fair and unbiased
- Problem dogs could be seized for A vet check And held for 48hrs. After that time, pets would be released to owners with strict conditions that It remain on their property (no public ventures) until case is processed and closed. Frequent if not daily checks to ensure compliance.
- Unbiased to breeds. Bully breeds get a bad rep and I feel they get reacted unfairly
- euthanization only as a rare and last resort.
- Animal behaviour considerations / motivations are fairly reviewed in addition to other evidence
- Review the dog and give owner restrictions to keep that dog
- That the owner is penalized and prohibited from owning animals in the future
- Involvement of a veterinary team for assessments
- Opt to keep the dog with the owner on their property unless it is unsafe to do so
- The people sitting on a tribunal can not be associated in any way shape or form with supporting breed specific legislation and should be knowledgeable enough about dogs to make an educated, informed and unbiased decision
- Not prejudice toward specific breeds. It is based off behavior and loud does not count as this is a fear tactic. Many rescues experience this issues but are wonderful dogs and are very kind
- Hhhh
- The tribunal would have to prove that they do not have any existing biases, and prove that they are qualified. They can't just be a "concerned citizen".

- As long as they are fair and hear each side
- The tribunal is made up of people who are educated in dog behavior.
- restrictions placed on a dog, which the owner would need to abide by to keep the animal
- As long as there was appeal or additional action that could be taken
- All those condition seem very fair to me.
- It's fair
- Need concrete documents on how to classify and punish situations. Personal bias (ex. Breed bias) should not be allowed.
- Professional animal behaviourist was part of the tribunal and could fairly and accurately assess the dog (ie outside of high stress environments where an accurate assessment could not take place)
- The tribunal does NOT take breed into consideration it has nothing to do with breed and everything to do with how the dog was raised (ei locked in a kennel for over 5 hours little to no walks/workout and little to no contact with other dogs or humans
- Not breed biased
- Corrective actions should be made. For example if a dog escaped the property must be deemed safe for no escape. Discretionary decisions should be made on individual cases. Animals should stay with the owners.
- As long as the dog is kept safe with the owner. Of course if the dog was also involved in previous problematic behaviour, the dog can be muzzled in public. But absolutely not be put in shelter away from the owner, if the owner especially does not support this.
- The tribunal members are extensively educated in behavioural and environmental factors in dog anatomy, psychology and training. It cannot be individuals who do not understand the complexities of dogs
- The appeal process is explained thoroughly.
- Third party non biased expert
- It remained unbiased and was ACTUALLY appropriately assessed. An incident is rarely the animals fault, owners need to be held more accountable and the animal shouldn't have to suffer for it.
- As long as appeal is available and tribunal are diverse and properly educated in dog behavior/qualified.
- This would be tricky to ensure, but a good idea.
- The panel consists of expert dog trainers as the fault is not the dog but the owner. Owners need to be educated and trained as well as the dog.
- There should be no assessment regarding euthanizing. If a dog is displaying violent behaviour then the owner should be looked at as to their treatment of the animal and if they have put in the work to maintain the animal's behaviour. To euthanize a dog for biting when it has learned aggressive behaviour, or when it feels scared or threatened, would mean cats should also be euthanized for scratching or biting. If you think euthanizing a cat is ridiculous, then so is euthanizing a dog.
- All breeds are included not "pitbull specific
- Significant oversight preventing it from becoming a typical power grab, ensuring fair and objective assessments.

- Euthanasia as a last resort. Not a first
- You must work with the family to help rehabilitate the dog.
- Panel members must be veterinarians or professionals - NO members of the public or non-professional representatives.
- Dog causes bodily harm.
- that the dog be able to remain with its family till a decision is made, it is hard to evaluate a dog in such a stressful environment as a cage in a shelter. And that there is no prejudice to the breed of the dog...
- There would need to be a safety in place to avoid bias. Be that folks who have experience owning difficult dogs, veterinarians, techs, etc. I am hesitant to include more monitoring and regulation that already has preconceived notions that dogs can not be 'rehabilitated'.
- The dog stays with the owner during the time wait
- as long it gets the dog home in a timely manner
- As long as there is a well defined appeal process.
- Breed or breed appearance should be irrelevant
- If it does not cost taxpayers to run it
- Review restrictions.
- Cannot use breed specific wording or ideas
- Pets would be vigorously tested and obedience training completed before any choice to euthanize is even considered. Not just for "nuisance" breeds. Every Breed!
- That the tribunal weighs in the evaluation of an accredited animal behaviourist of the dog and situation(s).
- Unbiased, honest and fair assessments and facts. The situation and history is also a consideration.
- A veterinarian as well as a well educated canine behaviourist would need to be permanent members on the tribunal.
- Severe bites= required behavior assessment, and owner loses their dog. (Unless it's obvious self defense or error and not poor ownership- if dog is deemed to be safely rehabilitated with RESPONSIBLE owner.
- Members had sound knowledge of dogs and dog behaviour.
- As veterinarian or veterinary behaviourist was consulted on each individual case.
- Unbiased breed tribunal - equality for all situations despite any sort of breed. Or size. Consider all pet history, stressors etc
- Don't euthanize the dogs. That should not be an option. Allow the dog to be rehabilitated and trained to become better than what their owners have taught them.
- It should not discriminate against pit bulls, as German shepherds or other breeds can do just as much damage.

- Persons who exhibit non biased behaviour towards breeds. At least one behaviouralist there to review and assess the dog and explain to the individuals what behaviour the dog is exhibiting and how this could or could not be improved/resolved.
- legislation acknowledges that pitbulls do not have a more severe bite compared to dogs of similar size.
- There is no conflict of interest, such as the non city representatives that were victims of the bite and or family/friends being involved as a board representative
- Depending how these representatives are selected
- At least one member was well educated in dog behaviour and had experience as a trainer or behaviouralist
- No dog should be euthanized. No person should have the power to euthanize a dog unless owner allows it.
- They cannot penalize a dog based on breed (large or “dangerous” breeds receiving harsher penalties or treatment than a smaller “non dangerous” breed.
- As long as the dog also has a 3rd party advocate, perhaps from a bully rescue who is considering rehabilitation as an option.
- if it was the dogs fault and randomly attacked. I have warned kids and parents not to just approach a dog leash or off leash without asking the owner or how to safely approach. PEOPLE NEED SKILL AND TEACHING. A dog no matter the breed will give warning signs.
- More info
- The tribunal would have to have current veterinary doctors and professional dog trainers in it. They have the most experience and would be best suited to identify the dogs disposition.
- The owner is on board and understanding with everything
- They abide by humane society standards
- There are credible dog trainers involved in the team. I do not trust half the people we have been putting into political or elevated powers.
- stop euthanasia! This should never be an option
- If the people involved were experienced dog persons
- Tribunal made of members who own higher risk dog types.
- Experienced dog people, non biased, no BSL
- Did not order a dog to be euthanized because of one or two bites
- Possible appeals especially on euthanasia
- I would support the tribunal as long as certain breeds would not be penalized or have harsher repercussions just because of their breeds. I do not think pit bull and bully breeds should be recognized as nuisance breeds just because they could have the “potential” to cause a harsher bite. Treat each case uniquely and get rid of the stigma.
- The decision can be appealed
- All tribunal members are experts in animal care that may appropriately assess the animal and consider root cause analysis for why animal behaved the way it did (trainers, vets)

- A thorough investigation
- External behaviour experts are involved in assessment of dog's behaviour and part of tribunal decision making process.
- Does not increase City costs.
- A veterinarian be on the tribunal panel
- Dog put into foster care while waiting, no euthanization.
- Always look at alternatives to euthanasia
- Those on the tribunal must be dog behavioural experts.
- There is no discrimination against certain breeds. Pit bulls may have stronger bites but you have no evidence to show that Pitbulls bite more. This is a good idea if there is no discrimination
- Must be an independent appeal process
- Rehabilitation, not euthanization.
- those appointed are not just representatives that have a issue with certain breeds of dogs, or those appointed have had other types of dogs and understand more about dogs than most people who oppose these "nuisance" breeds.
- Does not target specific breeds & judges stay open minded.
- Be fair and allow representatives
- A dog expert/trainer must be attended
- Euthanasia should be a last resort consideration after all attempts to rehabilitate the caregivers ability to handle dog in safe manner have been exhausted.
- animal is placed in the best situation, depending on the circumstance. If the owner has repeatedly proven irresponsible then the dog should not be placed back with him/her.
- It sounds like a tribunal would be to expedite the dog being found "guilty". Owners are responsible for their dog's behavior and for managing behavior issues, not the dog. Therefore owners should pay the consequences, not the dog.
- No "vicious dogs" would be euthanized without a third party, non government funded behaviour analyst reviewing and agreeing.
- It was separate from animal in-law services to be fair and unbiased.
- A rep from Calgary SPCA on the tribunal
- that no.breeds are singled out as nuisance breeds because they are that breed of dog. It is the owner many times that is the cause of the behavior. Ive seen just as many small breed jerk dogs that have caused problems as pit bulls and related breeds.
- All dogs are treated equally, a severe bite is a severe bite, regardless of the dog being a chihuahua or a pit bull. It is not fair to blame specific dog breeds.
- Assessment of animal, owner, household and situation by positive reinforcement QUALIFIED with credentials trainer
- Don't focus on the breed, focus on the behavior. BSL is biased and unfair.

- The standard of review by QB is reasonableness or correctness with no requirement of deference to Tribunal. Also fixed terms for tribunal members with at least one veterinarian or dog behavioural specialist sitting on every case.
- A appeal process that does not involve the court system. The courts are busy enough.
- Unbiased opinion on dogs breed! Any dog can do significant damage if it wants to! Not to mention more times than not, the victims dog or they themselves provoked the attacking dog to feel threatened and in need to protect them and their owner & we are often to quick to jump up and take the side of the victim
- Reviewed history of the owner to determine if dog acts the way it does because of the owner.
- That the dog is not judged based on its breed, but rather solely on its behavior.
- Review of the case with both owner and victim present
- People who know dogs and have no bias against certain breeds
- Did not base its decision on breed but severity of incident. Breed MUST be excluded
- Specific reasons that would indicate euthanization as the only option.
- Independent adjudicators with strong knowledge of dog behaviour.
- Veterinarians, Animal Rescue, Bylaw officers and dog trainers were an integral part of the tribunal.
- Not bylaw staff on tribunal.
- That they are not allowed to euthanize dogs, but rehabilitate them in foster care and taken away from their irresponsible owner.
- No dogs get euthanized, it is understood that dogs only bite when not trained or when taunted. At worst the dog should be surrendered to a humane society.
- It takes into account the best interest of the dog. Restrictions don't work and can offer cause more aggression due to frustration. Opposed to restrictions there should be mandatory classes the dog and owner must go through and only if there has been issues.
- Participants provided legal assistance when accessing the tribunal.
- Fairness. A look at all of the evidence.
- As long as Breed Specific Legislation (as used in section 3 above) is NOT used. For example, if a pitbull breed dog bites someone, it doesn't mean the dog is vicious or needs to be euthanized. Instead, first confirm what was going on, how was the dog approached by the individual, what was the individual doing at the time, etc.
- Those involved in determining the restrictions and consequences to the dogs are trained dog behaviourists
- So long as the owner didn't have a record of owning vicious animals.
- They accept character statements of said dog from friends and family members who interact with the animal on a regular basis
- It focuses on the behaviour of the owner and mitigation strategies the owner xouls out in place.
- No members had been involved in an animal incident, to reduce any bias towards a specific breed.
- That not every case is gone to euthanize

- The tribunal workers were not dog breed biased. It being more strict towards pit bulls for the same actions having been done by a pug.
- Non biased representatives were used
- Had a fair representation of dog trainers, actively involved in both regular training classes as well as specialized 'problem dog' training
- As long as this tribunal is fair and not used to discard nuisance dogs that have been poorly treated or trained by their owners.
- Restrictions on a dog always be attempted before a choice to euthanize
- Having a dog taken from its home and owner is traumatizing and therefore should be kept at home with owner. This extra trauma can increase aggression. Instead should be connected with a trainer that specializes in reactive dogs for rehabilitation
- Experts in dog behaviour are involved
- The owner goes for behaviour training on how to manage a dog.
- As long as they are processed in a timely fashion that minimizes the dogs time in isolation.
- It can not assess if a dog is to be euthanized without a court ruling.
- Members of the tribunal are educated professionals involved in, but not limited to, members of the veterinary industry (not necessarily solely a veterinarian) , registered breeders, behavior specialists, bylaw officials, etc
- Euthanasia should be always last resort
- Third party assessments mandatory for dogs. Certified trainers using force free methods.
- Qualified dog trainer that can evaluate behavior.
- Perhaps multiple offenders should go to court?
- I think there should be a further review, with perhaps a referral to the court systems, if the decision is made to euthanize. This is a significant decision and should have various experts involved.
- There is no breed ban.
- Dog behavior expert(s) on tribunal
- If training/rehabilitation doesn't work the first time try again, don't just go for euthanasia off the bat.
- It does not go specifically after pitfalls only
- shouldn't cost tax payers.
- Don't euthanize the dog, deal with the owner
- That they take everything into consideration and do not come into cases with a basis for a specific breed
- If the dog was teased, those people be held accountable.
- The owners of the dogs should have a psychologist to examine their well being. All dogs are nice, it's the owners who raise them that turn dogs vicious.
- Some kind of restriction on appeals. Because otherwise all cases will simply be appealed and there's no time savings
- Animal experts, such as board certified veterinary behaviourists, would be consulted on any case where euthanasia is considered.

- People who are properly educated in dog behaviour be included in the panel. People who have taken highly respected and well known certification programs, are fear free based, not “self taught” or took a weekend course and now hangs out a shingle saying they are qualified. Also should include a Board Certified Veterinary Behaviourist (currently only one “in residence” living in Alberta and is based in Cochrane) but others could be involved virtually perhaps.
- I do not support euthanasia as a first option, I feel that it should be an absolute last resort, and would like to see more steps added to rehabilitate defensive animals. I think it's also important to inform people when they register a new pet on basic obedience training, proper socialization for animals with people, other animals, new situations and new environments.
- I'm not sure how I feel about the tribunal being able to assess euthanasia as an option. This could be a very unbiased opinion by the group and could lead to the destruction of more animals than is necessary.
- The dog gets a behaviour assessment or spends time with a trainer who is not biased towards the case
- The members of the tribunal have a reasonable, fact-based, understanding of dog behavior.
- Not being breed specific i.e. a golden retriever kills someone one and lives. Where as a pitbull protects its property by biting someone and the pitbull has to die
- As long as any extreme rulings such as euthanasia are bumped up to court. This tribunal could be an intermediate step to rule out extreme cases for the sake of the owner and dog.
- Retrain the animals when possible
- Does not discriminate against size of bite. A small dog can cause extreme damage by the infections in their mouth. A bite is a bite no matter how large.
- The breed of the dog is not taken into consideration and an equal determination is given across small and large breeds for equal offenses.
- Rehabilitation program, no euthanizing
- The representative has to be bias free of size and breed.
- No breed specificity was aloud when considering a case
- No dog should be euthanized because of irresponsible owners. [removed]
- Canine behaviouralists would need to be consulted to determine if the animal could be rehabilitated and what conditions would need to be met.
- Tribunal consists of specialist in dog behavior and has the power to make conditions of return of the animal to the owners (eg. Corrective behavior instruction/classes) that can be verification sometime after an animal is released back to the owner
- There is a fair and educated group members involved
- All tribunal members must remain impartial to breed.
- That bully breeds aren't unfairly targeted, and that if a dog is out down, so is it's owner.
- They absolutely had to consult a veterinary behaviourist (veterinarian specialized in behaviour) on every case before making any decisions, especially regarding euthanasia, as someone who is not professionally trained in behaviour and behaviour modification is simply unqualified to make these decisions.

- It's not biased in who is on the tribunal.
- Tribunal members have set terms of duration; Tribunal member CVs/bios are easily publicly assessible
- That a member of a known and trusted organization (Calgary Humane Society) be able to participate and/or evaluate the tribunal on an ongoing basis.
- Dog behaviour expert on the Panel and a fair evaluation by a neutral party
- Representatives declared experts in science based dog training and behaviour are part of the tribunal.
- euthanizing a dog should not be an outcome. Alternatives like fines, mandatory training, banning from public parks, etc. should be options.
- Ok
- The dog is not to fully blame. Owners are responsible for their animal, as well as others should always ask to approach and or pet said dog
- The tribunal needs to include trained, accredited dog behaviourists to help assess.
- Be comprised of educated dog owners and veterinarians.
- A veterinary behaviourist and/or dog trainer was a member of the tribunal
- proper representation for the dogs. Not immediate euthanization as a means of finding a result.
- Provided proof that enough research was done regarding the reason behind the attack/bite
- Na
- Don't agree that the tribunal can rule for euthanasia
- At least 25% of the tribunal be dog behavior/obedience trainers.
- Include behaviour specialists in the decision.
- The representatives are a group that lean towards saving the dogs' lives and are more in favour of requiring training and rehabilitation, with a BALANCED dog trainer experienced with aggressive & reactive dogs.
- That it be done by a board of peers who had no prejudices against specific dog breeds, and that if euthanization is ordered that it be done with the dogs family present and as humanely as possible for the dog and it's family. Preferably in the Dog's own home.
- Considering if it is the dog's first offence and the pattern of their past behaviour
- Owners need to be heard and given a chance to correct the problem
- The tribunal members are not labelling dog breeds but instead only review the actions that have occurred to make a judgement call. Unbiased against race.
- So long as "bully breeds" weren't targeted, and humans were punished if they provoked the attack.
- Consultation with a behavioural trainer is provided before thinking of euthanasia.
- The dog in question is not based on its breed
- I support the tribunal as long as the OWNER is also held accountable for the lack of proper training the dog has been given.
- Can not decide on euthanization
- Actually gives you enough time to properly go through the courts.

- does not discriminate on breed
- The City and non-City representatives be very knowledgeable on dog behaviour (dog trainers etc.).
- The cases must be thoroughly investigated as most dog bites are provoked and no animal should be euthanized due to someone else provoking the dog.
- Owners taking anti aggression classes by a professional or SPCA would be taken in to consideration
- No bias involved, especially when it comes to the breed of dog (BSL)
- Punish the owners NOT the dog, it's the owners responsibility to teach there dog behaviour.
- There is no breed bias, all must be treated equally
- The dog stays with the owner but is required to stay on the owners property. Unless it's an abuse situation or abuse is suspected. If the dog leaves the property then the are seized.
- Wherein the breed of the dog does not play a factor and the decisions are based case by case on the specific dog in question.
- The tribunal is not Breed specific, compassion is shown for each canine involved,
- An unbiased tribunal that will asses all bites fairly and not punish a dog harder based on breed
- Breed is not a determining factor in the dogs outcome.
- Members of the tribunal must be unbiased to any and all breeds, not be former victims of dog bites or attacks and must be impartial overall.
- Provides an advocate on the side of the animal at no cost to the owner.
- Decisions aren't backed by a breed bias
- Unbiased panel of experts make up the tribunal, not the neighbourhood watch.
- Non-city representatives are educated and certified in canine behaviour
- That the people making verdicts are legitimately educated in animal behaviours & not just opinionated.
- Dogs should not be euthanized until the owner and dog have gone through extensive training and rehab. An owner who's dog is determined to need euthanasia, should not be allowed to own another dog until certain training requirements have been met.
- There should be dog behaviorists on the panel as well as an experienced trainer. How will you ensure that a member of the panel simply does not like dogs.
- Representatives should look as cases objectively (without biases based on breeds and sizes) and consult scientific evidence to make the best assessment (whether a dog can be trained and re-habilitated)
- But I do not agree with euthanization.
- If tribunal included at least two professional individuals to support the animal. Eg a vet and a dog trainer
- It is staffed by pet owners.
- As stated
- I'm not sure how I feel.
- A dog trainer/ behaviourist should also be included within these tribunals.

- The dog should remain at its home but be ordered to remain inside and only allowed out on a leash for bathroom breaks
- If the tribunal included animal behaviouralist a
- The tribunal had at least one dog trainer/behavioural expert on the tribunal
- Setting forth an immediate way for dogs to be returned to their owners under strict conditions. Kind of like probation. It's a dog, sometimes dogs bite. Their not people. Their dogs. They can rehabilitate quite quickly. Quicker than the ultimate decision of it being put down. Being with it's owner, who is willing to correct the behaviour while court proceedings are going on or tribunal, would be beneficial for the dog and it's recovery.
- The members selected for the tribunal must have backgrounds in animal health and animal behaviour.
- The dog would be returned to the owner until the final court case is concluded.
- Sufficient time and support are provided to owners to facilitate the appeal process before irreversible conditions, like euthanasia, were carried out.
- Fair understanding of the circumstance leading to the issue. You dont kill pedophiles and rapists right away now do you?
- as long as it is not breed specific
- Where the Person is held 100% accountable and to blame, not the dog.
- Having the correct balance of people sit as members is essential. An expert in dog behaviour would be a must. Much like in child welfare cases, because the dog does not have a voice they should be assigned an advocate to speak on their behalf.
- Fair, impartial and MUST include animal behaviour experts or veterinarian.
- They understand dog language and look at the whole picture, animal and people combined, to see what can be done differently.
- The tribunal consists of dog trainers/behaviourists. "Victims" be fined if it is found that they antagonized the dog (going onto private property without permission, touching the dog without permission, hurting the dog first) and thus caused an attack on themselves. Judgement based on the breed of the dog should be thrown out.
- Tribunals were made up of responsible dog owners who have been through dog training.
- The decision made is equally as enforceable as the decision made in a court.
- Don't pick on pit bulls
- Had a wide representation. Including pit bull type responsible owners and trainers on the board
- Unbiased jury
- As euthanasia is not the immediate end result.
- Those involved in the tribunal have extensive training of dog behavior, And therefore it can actually give informed advice/ruling
- As long as the group is not one sided. Or go with their feelings instead of facts. Or are apart of the fear mongering against one specific breed.
- As long as the individuals are experienced and knowledgeable in the subject matter.

- On the condition it is staffed by pet owners
- you have a panel of dog trainers and dog owners with dangerous dog experience evaluate the dog. I have had many dogs that were/are problematic. Not every expert.. knows every dog trait. Dog personality can be hidden by fear ,environment, smells. Ect. Fait of a dog should not be determined by ONE PERSON
- They cannot euthanize an animal without owner consent.
- Regulated ethics and goals , with steps to be followed to increase dogs staying with their owners unless owner neglects to follow recommendations (education, muzzles etc)
- as long as there are animal behaviorists that will assess the animal and work with to see if it can be rehabilitated- some are just not a good fit with certain owners but could be rehi Ed through shelters and their vetting process
- Give options for required training before dog is put back in custody of the owner
- Only those actually familiar with dog behavior are involved in discussions.
- Tribunal should be more than adequate to review dangerous animal cases
- A well educated (including professionals in the dog behavior industry) and balanced range of perspectives represented on the tribunal.
- Every attempt is made at rehibilitaiton prior to euthanasia. No prejudice e against specific breeds (such as pitbulls, boxers, ect).
- There are “pit bull” owners on the tribunal.
- As long as it isn't biased against certain breeds
- the law
- Fairness to all parties involved.
- No euthanizing the animal. Attempt to rehabilitate it first.
- Consider the circumstances of the attack. Was it provoked or not (ex was a child Left unattended with the dog and was tormenting the dog?)
- As long as you can appeal it.
- Independent review by a behavioral specialist of the owner’s choosing, programs to subsidize costs of the owner is low-income, contextual awareness of the owner’s socioeconomic situation, since the declaration of a dog as a nuisance can cause housing instability for poor people. An awareness of how the verdict will affect the owner is key, especially if they’re renters.
- As long as a sufficient amount of time is given between a decision and appeal.
- Dogs are permitted to receive rehabilitation training prior to considering euthanasia
- More information is needed to appropriately answer the question
- The individuals appointed to the tribunal have experience in animal behaviour (such as trainers, vets, etc) and there is no breed bias.
- Only euthanize if truly needed, this should be the LAST option
- As long as it didn’t assume pit bulls are more aggressive than any other dog.
- The condition to not be biased, a German Shepard could bite someone or another dog just as hard as a Pitbull.

- Tribunal made up of experts in dog behaviour and both parties are appropriately represented and supported.
- Evaluation by qualified dog behaviour professional as to rehab ,etc
- As long as the city engages the proper advice from a vet or other pet authority, and does not take guidance for any employee of the city of Calgary who is not qualified to offer such guidance
- it is a clear ruling and both parties agree on the outcome
- Dog is allowed to stay with owner for first time offence and not be automatically placed in a shelter
- did not discriminate against specific breeds
- Did not allow for breed specific bias (BSL)
- At least one member is a veterinarian and another is a certified animal trainer
- Two sides to every situation
- Dogs don't get euthanized due to bad behaviour caused by bad ownership
- Experienced Veterinary professionals are involved in the process
- Further investigation and obedience training should be required before a euthanization is considered.
- Focussed on rehab and incorporating mandatory training for animals that are at fault in incidents
- Support
- Pit bulls are not a problem, aggressive dogs and bad owners are. I support consequences for aggressive dogs/bad owners but not based only on breed
- being sure that pitbulls arent unfairly punished more than other dog breeds.
- If the offending dog was able to stay strictly with the owner on their property during the case. If the opinion of the general public was taken into account. If all sides were taken into account including anything that provoked an attack.
- All animals are viewed equally. Breed should never be a factor.
- There are veterinary and animal behaviour professionals on the board
- Average members of the community should be involved. This shouldnt be city officials and this should be strictly volunteer based.
- To see if it is the dogs fault or not
- Those on the tribunal are experts in dog behaviour.
- depends
- A chance for the owner to speak on their behalf.
- Dogs history, severity of incident, and most importantly the owners demeanor as the owner is most likely a route cause to why their dog acts out
- Don't be discriminatory to one breed of dog.
- Is fair
- there has to be appropriate trainers on the tribunal, ONLY those who use non violent training methods
- Qualified animal behaviourists are consulted
- The breed of the dog was not used in court.

- Using euthanizing as a last resort.
- release said dog back to owner with rules in place until matter is heard. Trauma of this kind would only make the dog worse.
- should have a behaviorist and vet on the tribunal
- That this would not be used as a quickers means to euthanize the dog.
- Rescues or dog rehab experts were involved with the process.
- As long as the dog is euthanized as a last resort
- Allow said dog the change to be put through proper training to be rehabilitated
- The tribunal committee must be made up 30% members representing Calgary Humane Society or other animal welfare organizations (eg AARCS, Alberta Humane, etc)
- Not discriminate based on the breed of the animal
- Do not bully bully breeds
- Euthanasia decisions have secondary review
- There was an appeal process
- There is a certified professional canine consultant or vet behaviorist as part of this tribunal, making objective recommendations about animal outcomes.
- Dog training experts and behavioural experts be paid and part of the tribunal
- Decisions can be appealed to a higher lev
- Owners are allowed to visit the dog. The dog has daily vet check ups to ensure it is not in distress.
- It takes into considerations the behavioural and welfare history of the dog
- Give the owner an opportunity to train and educate themselves and the dog
- as long as part of this tribunal involves someone who works closely with "dangerous dog breeds" and can provide an educated and experienced opinion.
- That the members come from a non discriminatory background towards breeds (i.e someone that has been bitten before) and it should be case by case and not breed specific
- That all other options of rehabilitation has been exhausted.
- In a timely manner ie 10 business days.
- Both parties victim and owner would have to come to an agreement.
- That there be an agreement by both parties as to the members of the tribunal.
- They are fair and unbiased in overseeing these cases. I do NOT want to see breed bias becoming a factor
- Tribunal made up of animal professionals such as Veterinarians and certified/credentialed trainers
- Dogs cannot be euthanized. Education and canine handling training must be required of the owners in order to reclaim their pets.
- Aslong as the noncity representatibes are volunteers that change at every visit. Make the noncity rep's fraud-resistantt
- Tribunal made up of animal experts
- ggg
- No euthanize, its the owner not the dog

- It's not based on breed BSL prejudice. And facts are taken into account of the bite was provoked; in self defence etc.
- Cases were seen within days of the incident. No point in adding another step that takes forever.
- I would support this as long as this includes members who can be advocates for the animal and for promotion of education and rehabilitation for the animal. This could include staff from animal shelters, or dog trainers.
- euthanize orders should only come from the Court of Queens Bench.
- Dogs should not be euthanized they should be rehired. In most cases of attacks they are provoked by people. Do not punish a dog when it should be person punished
- Non lethal remedies
- No Euthanizing, rather evaluate how the owner keeps their pet and maybe see they are the problem and rehome the pet to someone who is willing to help them correct behaviour. Funny how some people do terrible things and we don't have laws here to put them down why should a pet be any different.
- As long as everything is done fairly
- Term limits
- They are professionals in a field that deals with dogs and have knowledge about dog behavior.
- Whomever the representative is to review the roles mentioned about must be educated in dog behaviour and psychology. Many times the dog is reacting like a dog should and it doesn't justify euthanization. Did a child come along and pull on it's tail or smack it in the face or on top of it's head? Were there clear behavioural warning signs that the dog will bite before actually biting (i.e. tucked in tail, growling, etc.)
- That there is follow up within a certain. Time frame
- No BSL, dog breeds are not prejudiced against, the tribunal is made up of a variety of dog specialists like vets, humane society representatives etc.
- Until the tribunal has made its decision, the dog should remain with its owners, but not allowed off the owners property and always restrained while outdoors.
- as long as city and non-city representatives are objective and have no bias.
- Wasn't against certain breeds. Open minded people.
- That there must be a vet , spca bylaw officer, dog trainer on the tribunal
- Yes
- Euthanizing the dog would require court order.
- Only the court can determine if a dog needs to be put down.
- Making an unbiased decision; not based on pitbull breed.
- The dog is not removed from the owner until the final verdict.
- Tribunal composition would have to be completely unbiased with a background and understanding of dog behaviour.
- there are no biases and there is an understanding that if provoked an animal will bite and thats not the animals fault.

- Have at least three different behaviour assessments done by three different assessors from different areas of the Country. Have 7 impartial tribunal members with at least two being veterinary professionals, 1 dog law savvy lawyer, 2 behaviour assessors who have had no contact with the dog. My worry is that by hurrying the process proper and thorough vetting of members will not be done.
- listened to positive reinforcement dog trainers opinions. did not focus on breed but focus on behaviour and what prompted the behaviour.
- Dogs shouldn't be euthanized for an accident that they usually give notice before proceeding with.. we don't even have the death penalty for humans?
- Consultation with all involved as well as animal advocacy organizations or dog trainers who specialize in aggressive behaviour to determine if the dog can be rehabbed.
- Rehabilitation
- Could dog be fostered with dog trainers
- Fair and unbiased opinions
- No BSL. Singling out "pitbull's" is so uneducated it hurts.
- That an animal behaviour trainer was on the tribunal
- A tribunal makes sense to support the speed of a decision.
- If you go the tribunal route, then do it properly, consult the people or culture who are experts in tribunal methodology. [removed] can ruin the potential of a good program like this resolution method
- If the dog is to be euthanized, it must be a second or third offense where the owner of said dog has been clearly notified that the dog need to be kept under control and the repercussions of another incident. Ie: they must know that if their dog is involved in another incident that the dog will be euthanized.
- Dog bites are most often excluded from most common home insurance liability policies , meaning their claim will be denied because companies do not cover dog bites.
- That there are sides that understand the breeds in full and why the dog attacked not just euthanasia because the dog was provoked and defended itself
- enforceable.
- A reasonable balance of private citizens, responsible rescue representatives, bylaw officers and others involved in humane animal contact
- Non-bias against specific breeds
- No euthanization. Proper training.
- proven impartial and unbiased in terms of breed and personal connections
- If animal educated persons were on this council (vets, dog trainers, animal behaviouralist etc...) were on this tribunal it would be effective and fair.
- An expert experienced dog behaviorist gives input. Not a bylaw officer
- Euthanizing an animal is only used as a last resort. The owners should be heavily fined and perhaps a new home found for the animal.
- Dogs should not be euthanized

- The dog's behaviour was not reasonable in the circumstances
- Properly qualified people in assessing dogs ability to be rehabilitated
- The animal should not be placed in shelter
- I think those on the tribunal have to have education in the subject (either vets, those part of the SPCA etc)
- A mandate to spay/neuter ANY dog which has been declared a nuisance, or who has bitten, or exhibited aggressive behavior.
- it's tribunal is dog professionals and not emotional public
- The animal is not euthanized without the recommendation of a veterinarian, and that there is time for an appeal before euthanasia
- the owner claims responsibility and the animal is on leash at all times, failure to comply implies euthanization
- 3 or more vets from different clinics agree
- I do not think the dog should be separated from the owner. Allow the dog to stay in owners home, but restrict from walks and dog parks.
- Don't buy into public opinion about bad breeds. Complainers are the loudest and most incorrect and notl proof behind their stance
- Euthanasia is only the owners decision as the dog is their property and family member.
- If there is an appeal process in place, a tribunal would be fine. if the tribunal used the existing laws to make judgements they would gain credibility.
- As long as everyone involved is credible and knowledgeable in the aspects involved in the case (example being canine behavior, training, etc)
- No breed discrimination
- Have the animal re-homed to a facility that can handle at risk dogs at the owners expense
- All measure to not destroy dogs is the goal.
- Only in cases for severe bites, no other function.
- I would support this decision if animal behavior specialists are present as representatives
- Each dog is vet and temperament checked
- no dog is euthanized ever and owners are assessed for being fit to own a dog
- Tribunal cannot order euthanization of an animal without in-depth input from animal behaviourists AND proof that animal cannot and will not be kept safely by current owner and cannot be rehomed.
- Both parties to tell their side of the story and gain an understanding as to why the dog may have acted as they did. As well as allow for a third party to interact with the dog to understand its normal behaviour as the incident may have been provoked or a one time incident caused by increased stress or another variable.
- As long as at least 50% of the representatives are or have been certified dog trainers
- Yes they should be given a mandatory training if possible first before deciding to euthanize the animal

- Consider strongly the ownership and home the animal comes from. Most "nuisance" dogs are brought up poorly, it is usually not the animals fault.
- All dogs were reported not just bully breeds
- Decisions appealable to Court of Queens Bench
- The breed of dog mentioned or used as a determining factor
- It needs to be reasonable and not a one person emotionally driven decision.
- The owner of the dog is required to cover all costs for the tribunal. NO taxpayer money!
- If the owner disagrees with the tribunal's decision, they can opt to have the dog apprehended and proceed with regular court hearing.
- Must contain an equal number of dog owners and non-dog owners.
- Has an appeal system in place with review by different panel.
- It has a vet, a dog trainer, and an attack victim.
- The dog is not euthanized unless the owner has had the opportunity to process the case through the courts.
- -
- As long as the representatives are knowledgeable in dog behaviour, dog psychology and behaviour modification.
- A fair and unbiased tribunal
- The dog remains with the owner
- Na
- If it actually sped up the process for the well being of the animal. Otherwise sounds like another city paid position that will cost taxpayers
- Rewards-based behaviourists are members of the tribunal.
- The wait period is no longer than 72 hours. Radio collars on the dog if restrictions are put in place.
- Owners of dogs that were found to be dangerous may not own or live with a dog for a specified period of time, such as 10 years
- They were not more lenient than current processes.
- It was fair
- Done
- that the entire incident is looked at carefully as it isn't usually the animal's fault but usually human fault
- This has to many "ifs" to answer. I do not like the idea of Calgary identifying pit bulls as an issue or putting the spotlight on the breed. It is the owner, not the breed.
- The owner has a fair chance at defending the animal as well as the actions that caused the bite be assessed as well.
- as proper assessment are done by the bylaw enforcement that took the dog and the keepers/vet tech
- As long as the whole scenario is addressed and observed. Animals often pay the price for the human error which is not right. As an animal advocate I would want the whole story to be heard.
- It comes down to the dogs behaviour and not the breed

- People of the public, not appointed by prejudice parties
- Euthanizing an animal for nuisance should be a last step for multiple infractions not as a first step
- The tribunal was made up of individuals knowledgeable in animal behaviour (ie. credentialed, vet, behaviourist, etc) and bylaws
- I think a board of people including vets, shelter workers, dog trainers, and civilians would be effective for this.
- Animal remains with the owner
- Immediate control of the dog and frequent checks that dog is being controlled
- No discrimination/bias against pit bulls and NO euthanasia
- As long as they are professionals in animal behaviours.
- It actually reduced length of stay, the process was completely transparent, the basic elements of court that ensure justice remain the same such as sufficient evidence and presumption of innocence until proven guilty, tribunal demonstrate qualifications and ethics such as in depth knowledge of animal behavior, EVIDENCE-based practice, the communities within Calgary, and demonstrate a commitment to being non-discriminatory towards both people and dogs..
- The people on the tribunal are experienced with handling animals such as a veterinarian and/or a dog trainer that specializes in behavioral issues.
- There is a neutral third party representative to ensure a fair hearing.
- There should be appeal processes and multiple chances to prove that the animal is either improving or manageable
- Any tribunals to deal with these issues must be breed-neutral. This is a sound idea but it cannot and must not discriminate based on breed.
- As long as it does not discriminate based on breed
- The tribunal needs to ensure it follows the history of the dog, living conditions and the situation that caused this to arise ie: previous complaints, children teasing it etc
- They would need undergo sufficient training and certain facts about the situation should be void in the information shared, such as dog breed to eliminate biases. Dobermans, pit bulls, bullies, Rottweilers, etc have a underserved negative reputations. You're more likely to be bit by a chihuahua.
- The tribunal MUST be a neutral party. They cannot be biased against any breed or owner, they must undergo training and educational programs to ensure this.
- "It is important to note that while pit bulls are not involved in more bite incidents than other dog breeds, the reason they are listed here is because a pitbull's strength allows the potential for a more severe bite." This is completely false and who'm ever put forth these certifiably false claims on a government website should be let go. All I can say is, this had better be changed because it's 2020 and bigoted government wont be tolerated.
- There is a qualified professional dog trainer among the decision makers to assess the animal's risk of offending again.
- As long as there is discrimination of breeds is minimal.
- Above

- the owner needs to abide by following the direction of the court. not all cases are the same
- As long as the members of the tribunal displayed that they did not have any bias against any dog due to breed.
- For a first offence. If there's already been an attack criminal proceedings should be followed.
- As long as it's fair and takes everything into account
- If a fair agreement cannot come for both parties it should move to provincial court
- Un biased decisions
- in the event of euthanization decision by tribunal - there must be an appeal process which the owner can elect to default to the courts.
- As long as the tribunal is in full understanding as to what really happened and NOT governed by people who have issues with any specific breed or size of the dog. Way too many times a dog is labeled being vicious when, in fact, the person/animal that was bit was at fault and the dog was only protecting itself.
- Determine, and review restrictions placed on a dog, which the owner would need to abide by to keep the animal
- A dog is a dog regardless of breed. Fair non judgmental rulings.
- Dog stays with owner unless severe aggression issues or past history of bites until tribunal is done. Maybe with the stipulation dog cannot leave the residence until tribunal complete, etc
- The dogs also need to be assessed by a Certified force free dog trainer, as well as the owners (to see if the owners actually know how to work with the dog)
- Give the dog back to it's family or you're going to cause it more mental damage than necessary
- No breed specific provisions
- The panel does NOT have a predisposition about particular dog breeds. It is a case by case instance. You need a fair panel and to interview extensively. Otherwise it is an immediate death sentence for dogs who don't stand a chance against bias individuals.
- Made up of people who understand dog behaviour.
- Who would be on the tribunal? I would support if a veterinarian, expert dog trainer, and other experts were on the Tribune but not if random people with no accreditation.
- The person can still sue the owner in Provincial or QB for damages
- The dog is not put into a shelter until the ruling is made, unless there is a risk to occupants on the property (example kids)
- No dog should be euthanized. Proper training to correct behaviour should be made mandatory.
- It would have to be a fair decision
- Must include the owner, the victim, and at least one dog behavioural professional who is highly regarded in their field. Must be a majority rule.
- That there is a basic understanding that dogs that are teased, threatened or feel their owners are in danger may bite and therefore there is always the possibility that a bite is not the dogs fault. Just because a person is a human does not make them innocent victims.

- Please note that dashaund and chihuahua attacks are SUPER prevalent, but less reported because of tiny dog status..
- Contained an unbiased and certified animal trainer and, ideally, a veterinarian to assess the temperament and behaviour of the dog.
- Bully breeds should be held to the same standard as any other breed.
- The tribunal includes a majority of people who know and understand dog behaviour, specifically dog behaviour or training specialists.
- The tribunal would need to have vets, animal behaviourists, and certified dog trainers. The tribunal would need to be made up of experts in dog behaviour.
- It remains breed neutral.
- As long as it was fair and those reviewing orders and declarations are educated in dog behaviour and review the "big" picture.
- The owner would be able to have fair representation.
- Owners need the chance if it WAS NOT their dog to prove same. Speaking in a situation where it is a dog without an owner (stray or run away) and the dog is gone after the report. The current system of looking up registered dogs in that area that fit the description and getting their photo for identification is incredibly flawed. Calling a dog a nuisance, charging them or ending their lives is a grave decision so there needs to be no doubt on which dog it was.
- Dogs are assessed by professionals
- Again it's the owner's responsibility and the owner needs to be held more responsible than the dog. Dogs must prove they're not dangers, and if they are...the human is ultimately responsible.
- committee made up of both ends of bully breed spectrum
- Follow up with owners
- Dogs apprehended for ANY bite. I realize that pitbull type dogs can cause damage, however ANY dog bite should be treated with the same level of caution and diligence. Little dogs that bite are not cute or harmless.
- Ok
- The dog and owner are properly monitored to ensure compliance, laws that can't be policed are not laws.
- It includes animal behaviour specialists
- Work with an agency such as ARCCS for assessment.
- Unbiased people towards
- Euthanasia being an absolute last resource. Just because a dog bites doesn't mean its not able to be rehabilitated
- This include assessment of the dog by qualified behaviorist. Owner have option to surrender dogs deemed trainable to bodies with knowledge o
- An absolute unbiased panel on the board. People with bias and think specific breeds are dangerous cannot be on the tribunal
- That the tribunals fair to all breeds and follow strict guidelines.

- Balanced tribunal - include knowledgeable animal behaviourist with credentials
- Not breed specific
- the tribunal committee be comprised of dog experts such as vets, certified trainers and certified handlers.
- The members don't show a prejudice against pit bulls
- Only persons who own a pet are able to serve on the tribunal. The chair must be someone with dog behaviour background.
- Hold handler accountable if problem dog.
- Great care is taken to ensure there is a balance in opinions of those on the tribunal, specifically those who are anti pit bull and pro pit bull.
- The general information about the case and their decided restrictions.
- A certified animal behaviourist must speak to the conditions/acts leading up to the bite incidents, the dog's home environment and the owner's interactions with the dog.
- A wide cross section of individuals are represented, not just pet owners or those in the pet industry. Plus, see above, euthanasia should be the default for dogs that severely injure a person.
- Dog had to adhere to the above mentioned and remain a(n) indoor/on property only animal
- No euthanasia without court ruling.
- As long as they were QUALIFIED to make such judgements. By qualified I suggest a board limited to certified trainers, vets and animal behaviour specialists.
- As long as interviews are held and someone with expert dog knowledge is included.
- They not be allowed to make the final decision on euthanizing a dog without appropriate input from experts in the field of dog aggression.
- Is lacking any bias towards a certain outcome and is free from any party that has an invested interest in unjust decisions.
- This should look into the owners history of actions included to reduce the harm presented by the dog.
- Made up of third party people include a range of professions and a mix of pet and non-pet owners. As well a process to appeal any decisions made by the tribunal.
- Using real dog behaviourists people who understand why dogs do what they do and what triggers them
- Determine why the dog is problematic. I.e: is the dog being abused physically etc but owner
- It needs to be made up of educated dog trainers and behaviour consultants. I am a force free dog trainer in the city and I don't want to see dogs futures being determined by people who have little or no experience with fear and reactivity
- You may NOT urbanize any animal without owner consent.
- Extenuating circumstances
- Be fair! Make sure people have no bias
- The last option is euthanasia, and the owner is investigated for their treatment of the dog.
- Anyone on a tribunal had proven expertise to assess an animal

- I would support this as long as there is strict oversight! The tribunal must consist of active animal owners of the same type of animal being tried.
- Owners would need to pay full cost of compliance for tribunal representatives' time in monitoring restrictions . This monitoring process would need to be well defined for adherence.
- If we are willing to Euthanizing a dog for biting someone.. why aren't people who murder or rape get put down? The dog could feel threaten, you have no idea what that dog has been through. Or what that human has done to them.
- That part of the process is OWNER education and training.
- If the end result is euthanasia make sure the dog can not at all be rehabilitated first. I think the tribunal should explore this option before passing it on to a judge
- No breed specific tribunal
- No breed specification and option for approved rehabilitation program
- Judging a dog based on breed is not fair. This shouldn't be allowed to sway a decision either way
- The tribunal has people educated in dog behaviour. Not a bunch of bleeding heart do gooders.
- The tribunal had an individual(s) who either have the ability to access a dog or can understand the assessment of the dog in question
- The review needs to be fast to benefit the victims. Offending animals need to be euthanized immediately.
- Tribunal would need to allow only fact to be introduced. No generalizations based on breed submitted as "evidence". Only the facts of each case and testimony from certified animal behaviourists or trainers
- That each dog is treated equally and not because of its breed.
- As long as the Tribunal follows the 3 points made and action is taken. Furthermore, if a dog is demean Vicious it should be euthanized and never allowed to roam in public again to protect the public.
- The officials making decisions need to have extensive knowledge of canine behaviour.
- That it did not result in a less thorough and fair assessment of the issue
- The qualifications of those reviewing the facts were well educated in dog behavior.
- The people on the tribunal are aware that pit bulls are not inherently vicious and that they do not have stronger bites than other dogs.
- Qualified members of said Tribunal would have actual dog training including rescue groups
- Must have experience being a long time dog owner ex: have had more than two dogs in lifetime
- Dogs not be euthanized, but instead go through proper training.
- Uses a qualified and certified Veterinary Behaviour specialist as reference, not just someone who claims to train dogs
- Included a vet and/or canine behavioral expert
- It was a cut and dry case. Ie something was wrong with the dog and the bite wasn't provoked by unwanted attention

- I would like to ensure evidence is valid. A 6 yrs old walked a Great Pyr past my house. The pyr ran into my yard and attacked my gsd cross. The 6 yrs old intervened and was bit. The animal control appeared to seize my 15 yr old dog. The traumatized child had a father demanding that the dog who bit his child be killed immediately. Upon further investigation, the child admitted to his dog being the biter. Where were my dog's rights in his OWN yard?
- as long as the tribunal had experience and an experienced behaviorist is allowed to examine the animal. It's not always the animal's fault and an absolute liability is not fair to the animal.
- That euthanasia should only be considered in the case of unprovoked, severe, disfiguring bites.
- Look further into assessments before putting a dog down.
- Owner could appeal in the case of a euthanization order
- The people on the tribunal would have experience and knowledge about dog behaviour (for example, trainers with certification).
- Look more towards the owners not the dogs.
- Appellate avenue available
- No euthanizing
- Owner pays for all cost. Nothing for the tax payers
- The veterinary industry is involved in the tribunal as well as a certified dog behaviorist
- The tribunal has the power to fine owners and enforce the fines. In the case of a vicious attack or bite, the dog is euthanized.
- Don't put the dog down just because of its breed
- The dog can remain in the owners care is possible until the process is done. If it is safe enough to do so.
- Support/intervention/training before euthenization of dogs. Some dogs are provoked, and use bites/attacks as last resort. Sometimes it's more of the owner's fault than the dog's.
- People with knowledge only ...
- There is an option to chose at least some of the members of the tribunal similar to a jury and that the members have knowledge of dogs and can be unbiased when it comes to visible representation of breed characteristics.
- More dog owners on the tribunal then non dog owners. People need to have empathy when dealing with these difficult situations
- The people sitting on the tribunal were well respected and knowlagble trainers and behaviorists.
- Change in sitting members on an annual basis and no affiliation or benefits to certain organization such as Calgary Humane society
- The people serving on the tribunal MUST be qualified as animal specialists ie: vets, behaviouralists, trainers. They must have education and experience relating to animals (dogs in particular).
- Review In quick easy manor, fair to owner and pet
- As long as the victim is not a minor in the same household as the owner, that is too much bias and needs to go beyond just them and the tribunal
- It always had member which is a certified dog/animal behaviorist/trainer as one of the member.

- Completely dependent on the tribunal panel
- The owner is punished severely.
- I can't read the whole question.
- There needs to be a unbiased source. An all animal activist individual or group that loves all animals and is not one sided. All areas need to be explored before taking any drastic steps like euthanasia and it needs to be thoroughly done, tested, etc to make sure what happened, why did it happen, could something be done, was the dog provoked, teased, mistreated, etc.
- not heavily based on specific breed. I do not support ANY of the BSL language found in your documents. It should be down to each individual dog, and I would fear that a tribunal would lay heavily into specific breeds with no other consideration.
- Have proper oversight and be staffed fairly
- All tribunal officers are trained in behaviour and more then one person is needed for a decision to euthanise an animal
- The tribunal system included people that are experienced at dealing with dogs, ideally have worked with them in some capacity.
- While euthanasia could be a recommendation, tribunal should not decide this. CoQB should decide.
- Not breed specific
- Trainers of different methods were on the tribunal so the dog gets a fair assessment
- In order to be euthanized it went higher up
- There was absolute proof the dog in question was to blame and it had a history of bad behaviour.
- Check in on the progress of the dog and owners dogs can be trained with the right help
- All non biased persons must be seated on this tribunal. No mention of the dogs breed but instead what has happened with said dog. There are plenty of dog breeds that are very strong ie) all working/ farm breeds, labs, retrievers, poodles, dalmatians, great danes, ect. With all the pointing fingers at "pitbulls" right now it can not be based on a dogs breed to determine if it is dangerous but rather the behavior it has presented. I truly believe this would be the only way to fairly determine whether a dog lives or dies because a human has taught it bad behavior.
- These decisions need to be made by people who actually care about the wellbeing of the animal.
- Had both a vet versed in animal training and a certified trainer (i.e. CBCC, IAABC, CPDT-KA)
- Dogs in question go through a training /test period. Given. That some dogs have problems. Does not mean they must be destroyed.
- Pitbull breeds are not being singled out.
- If the person is proven knowledgeable of animal behavior, then yes, let someone judge in the tribunal process.
- Not biased against certain breeds (i.e. pitbulls)
- Tribunal has no authority to create an order for euthanasia. This must be reviewed & ordered by Criminal Court level judges.
- Community safety is paramount and it contained at least one expert or the advice of an expert.

- Dogs are not euthanized but repurposed for a more fitting role, where they won't be a threat to the public.
- There is no one on the tribunal who dislike pitbulls or pitbull types
- the dog is brought to a behavior specialist for proper review. Not by the court.
- Tribunal members must have appropriate experience and experience in pet management
- The Tribunal must take into account the "Severity" of the offense. Human bites give animals a "Taste" for human blood.
- If the owner doesnt follow steps to educate him/herself on how to correct the issue.
- No seizure of the dog should take place without due process through the tribunal. The tribunal must be a third party and must include one person educated in canine behaviour with a CBCC-KSA, PCBC-A, or ABCDC (iaabc) credential.
- The owner is given the opportunity to defend the dog, or bring supporting evidence for the dog.
- At least 1 member of tribunal should be dog behaviour specialists voted on my community.
- The members of the tribunal are neutral
- This tribunal includes animal professionals who could adequately assess each circumstance
- The animal can be Assessed by the right people to see if it can be rehabilitated.
- long as it still holds the owner responsible and actually is willing to make the tough decisions including euthanizing vicious dogs
- That is openly and honestly looked at all dog breeds as equal and as the full scope of the incident. A small dog can traumatize a child or adult just as badly as a big breed.
- That the dog is completely isolated from other people before the case is decided.
- Not immediately euthanizing a dog until the owner has a chance to present their case and/or say goodbye to their pet, when appropriate.
- Fair rulings
- As long as the members are knowledgeable dog people, like dog show judges, dog sport competitors and trainers, vets, vet techs.
- Highly qualified vets, lawyers, police, psychologists etc on it. Must own a pet
- The owner/victims are able to attend and offer their views. Also having a mixture of people involved that are both pet owners and not pet owners.
- dogs remain on owner's property properly secured until decision is rendered. The opportunity is there for appeal prior to animal being euthenized.
- Experts on the tribunal
- Included a tribunal member who is experienced in dog behaviour/proper assessment of dogs
- Extenuating circumstances
- The owner has the option of requiring it be handled through court.
- The same options as if in court of law
- Appeals are dealt within a set time period.
- As long as the representative actually knows how dogs behave.
- All participants have absolutely zero histroy of breed discrimination.

- Rules would need to be set in place, a strict guideline for selecting people to eliminate the possibility of bias and breed discrimination. Preferably a good reliable source of knowledge regarding dogs.
- Qualified vets or dog behaviour experts only
- It would depend who was on the tribunal. There needs to be people on the tribunal educated in animal behaviour such as vets.
- A veterinarian should always be part of the tribunal
- Maybe for non-death issues. If a dog's life is going to be in jeopardy then it should go through the courts. If it's a minor case, a tribunal sounds appropriate.
- as long as it was composed of knowledgeable people, i.e. vets with a behaviour background, certified science based trainers etc.
- The city and non-city representatives are completely objective and open-minded about ALL breeds of dogs.
- Requirement for breed specific representative, vet (non city, neutral 3rd party), certified animal behavior specialist and trainer (neutral),
- Have non-biased members preferably those in animal medicine who can properly assess animals.
- No euthanasia
- I do not believe that holding dogs in shelters does anything for the situation other than to terrify the dog, keeping them in an unfamiliar place without their owner/family. Think of it if your child was taken from you and placed in this situation. How would they be reacting - certainly not in the manner they would in front of guests in their home. However, this is how and when we judge the dog's behavior - when they are possibly at their worst. Seems unbearably unfair in the animal's defense. If a tribunal could be held such that the dog was allowed to remain, and possibly be assessed WITH the owner, or IN the owner's home you would be able to get such a better understanding whether or not that dog is a danger, or if it was reactive, or if it was provoked.
- As long as rulings are coming from educated individuals that understand animal behaviour such as animal behaviourist, veterinarians, certified positive reinforcement-based dog trainers, etc
- As long as The City of Calgary does not pursue a Breed Specific Law (eg requiring Bully Breeds to be muzzled, more insurance, etc WITHOUT any previous incidents.
- the tribunal would need to be 3(at least) people with specific skills to assess animal behaviour
- People on the tribunal are highly qualified not just in mediation but also in animal behaviour
- It should only apply to first time offenders
- The dogs are not euthanized, unless it's [removed] good reason!! Not just because it's breed specific
- The euthanasia judgement must be moved up the ranks of our court system. One tribunal (with who knows how much dog experience) should not be able to make sweeping death decisions.
- depends upon WHO is on the tribunal....Is it a voted in position? if so Yes.
- Tried to have a neutral non biased panel/members
- Large dog breeders/owners must be part of the panel.
- The tribunal consisted of people who are documented experts in dog behaviour.

- The owner is able to make a written and oral presentation to the tribunal which includes a live demonstration of the dog's temperament and training.
- As long as the decision was unanimous
- As the tribunal were vet behaviourists, or were professionals that understood canine behaviour (at least two professionals)
- Euthanize the dog.
- You have appropriate people on a tribunal and not just [removed]
- Not only subject to pit bulls
- There was a review processes for the efficacy of the tribunal performed on an annual basis.
- It would have to be a fair process for both parties and ultimately the dogs needs are met. Bad dogs come from bad owners, that includes pit bulls! In my profession as a letter carrier, i've been bit several times, all them were by small dogs and a lot of them were no fault on either our parts. You unintentionally scare a dog it will react, it's just common sense.
- The not only looked for the best solution for the victim but also the best solution for the dog (who is also a victim).
- Trained dog behaviorists should be involved in every step of each case.
- No euthanasia
- It would need to involve at least one certified behaviourist
- As long as a veterinarian is present to assess/diagnose before any decisions are made.
- They make their reasons public
- As long as the tribunal is made up of individuals trained in animal behaviour and bylaws. This would be a negative/pointless process if the tribunal is made up of the general public or self professed animal behaviourists
- Chosen representatives provided a cross section of knowledgeable and trained dog professionals appointed by election.
- All measures were taken to rehabilitate the dog with sufficient time before euthanasia is deemed necessary. Additionally, non-city reps must be educated and/or experienced with dog assessments, behaviours, etc. and not random citizens.
- dog owner pays for the tribunal
- As it is placed on the owner and not the dog or breed
- Recommendations to euthanize a dog can be stayed if a licensed dog trainer or shelter is willing to take and rehabilitate the dog.
- Quick review, support to the victim, and immediately euthanize the dog, as it will attack again
- A tribunal could be effective as long as those on the tribunal were certified by a recognized certifying body that requires training in dog-dog social dynamics and dog behaviour and body language.
- There cannot be a bias on pit bull breeds, all dogs can be vicious, it is dependant in the owner and proper training
- Need more information to support or not
- Fair and non-biased

- The tribunal should include people with canine behavioural specific training. The tribunal should allow and consider input from witnesses and behavioural specialists brought by all parties involved.
- As long as no bias towards any pit bull looking dog! Little dogs bite more but are not reported .
- .
- the people making judgments would be force-free experts and trainers
- Dogs need to be evaluated by qualified third parties. Said third party should be a certified fear free trainer with behaviour background.
- Led by animal care workers who have experience with traumatized dogs and whether or not they can be rehabilitated
- Dog is not allowed off owner's property
- Tribunal members are not prejudiced and have no history of campaign against particular breeds.
- Volunteer basis
- They have the authority to severely punish negligent dog owners.
- I would support the tribunal if it was made up of knowledgeable people - dog trainers, vets, etc. not bureaucrats.
- no dog should ever be forcibly removed by anyone from its owners.
- It would be dependent on who the representatives were. Are these people trained in dog behavior? Do they have breed specific biases (it seems like that is a problem based on the significant focus on pit bulls above).
- Dogs deep into the history of the person that is bit is looked at closely - eg - was the person tormenting the dog....
- The process is open and transparent. The tribunal needs to be an honest broker and not seen as an easy cash grab. This should not be an excuse for all parties to lawyer-up, a cost cap should be considered.
- If they were given all the facts and history and able to make an educated and unbiased decision not based solely off that one offence.
- No pit bull advocates
- I don't believe dog attacks are totally a problem with the dog - it's the owner's poor training. If a dog is involved in attacks, it should be trained and put up for adoption with a new family.
- Who would serve on the tribunal? I would suggest representatives from the Calgary Humane Society, a veterinarian, and a member of the public.
- The tribunal needs to have experienced dog owners/trainers to effectively understand the nature of the offence and provide corrective action accordingly TO THE OWNERS (not always to the pets). If it's just some stupid city councilor than I object to the tribunal
- No animal should be euthanized. Train the dog and get it out of the home it's in.
- Those determining the fate of the dog must be professionally educated in animal behaviour. i.e. a professional accredited dog trainer
- Supported documentation and testimony of breeders, trainers and people involved in the dog community.

- The dog should not suffer and have severe restrictions due to a bad owner. The dog needs healthy socialisation, care and lots of exercise to curb unhealthy energy and behavior.
- A type of bond payment in order for the owner to get the dog home - and the bond is forfeited if the dog is involved in future incidents of aggression (prior to conclusion of tribunal efforts)
- If the owner elects. This should be an option.
- Non city representatives would NOT be from the Calgary Humane Society. 2. Non city representatives would be CKC licensed judges or CKC registered breeders of Sporting, Working or Terrier breeds.
- It included a dog trainer on the team and veterinarian
- owner pays for the care while awaiting result
- The tribunal is fairly represented and includes people knowledgeable about animals and invested in their best interests.
- Yes
- Any dogs with more than one offense must go to court
- The representatives receive specialized training regarding dog behaviors including what provokes a bite
- Provided there is a professional that has expertise in dog behavior on the tribunal
- As long as there is no breed conditions put in place (ie. ridiculous bias against pitbulls)
- Would like to get input from a licensed Dog trainer
- the dog has gone through a proper assessment and there is clear understanding the dog was in the wrong and not the person whom it bit.
- The people making the rulings are knowledgeable about dog behaviour.
- legally binding but an option can be appealed to a higher court solely at the pet owner's expense.
- The members of the tribunal would have to be carefully vetted. The members could only serve a limited term.
- The right people need to be chosen to be a part of the tribunal
- Unable to declare that an animal should be euthanized.
- Determine, and review restrictions placed on a dog, which the owner would need to abide by to keep the animal Tribunal decisions could be appealed at the Court of Queen's Bench.
- diverse panel.
- Included mandatory rehabilitation training instead of euthanasia
- Punishments are not harsher than what would be suggested in court
- A dog that bites someone once should be euthanized. No second chances.
- Yes
- Somehow follow the dog and owners between cities and Provinces.
- There would need to be a fair panel. One that would include owners of all breeds including a Pit Bull type dog.
- More than one "expert" to assess and determine the dog's demeanor vs one person calling the shots in ending a dog's life based on one type of assessment.... all dogs react differently with being scared/threatened or abuse/neglect and euthanasia is a easy out for a owner's neglect or abuse and what stops them from doing it again and again?

- Knowledgeable area experts on the tribunal equipped with a wide variety of tools at their disposal (restrictions they could place, remedies they could require (like a particular training program etc). I also think owners should be given the choice between waiting to be seen in court or going before the tribunal (after being informed of the differences of both paths). I really like the idea of a tribunal.
- Reconsideration can be taken if requested, and appeal is taken to an appeal tribunal before having to be taken to court
- Would need to know the criteria for the people in the tribunal and as long as the Court of Queen's Bench is not just a rubber stamper of the tribunal decision.
- Condition: tribunal shall not consider trauma experienced by a dog. It's just a dog, not a human.
- no breed prejudice.
- Just want to say that the owner has to be really looked at. Sometimes the owner is more to blame the the dog.
- More focus on the bad habit of the owner. Restrict the owner from having animals and attempt to rehome and rehad the dog!
- that the tribunal is made up of legal professionals, volunteers and animal care professionals for best possible representation of our communities.
- The tribunal panel includes a dog behaviouralist to determine likelihood of rehab. determine rehab po
- They do not have the authority to prescribe permanent action such as euthanasia
- Repeat offenders must be treated more seriously
- Good expertise on the tribunal and no conflict of interest
- The dog would get to stay with it's family the entire duration. Kept on the property when possible.
- Proper representation from shelter/rescue and dog trainers to assess the true damage to the animal before decisions on putting down the animal.
- As long as the tribunal has the full authority to resolve the issue completely and is not just another step for the dog owner to appeal.
- You've not identified who the tribunal is in this question. Who and what authority is required knowledge before being able to answer this! Police, judge, committee made up of who?
- Animals who are unfit to be in public (i.e. dangerous), are not allowed in public.
- I would support a tribunal as long as it treats all breeds equally and treats aggressive Behavior from all breeds equally. A bite is a bite no matter the size of dog. Discriminating against dog breeds is no different than discriminating against people for what they look like (race).
- ethuanization not being a go-to option, especially for a one time offender
- N/a
- The tribunal tries everything posible prior to ever coming to a decision to euthanize a dog. Or if possible eliminate that option all together.
- Dogs couldn't be put down without a second chance, and the Dog could potentially go home with its owner while it waited

- Dog is allowed to live with their family until the hearing
- There is no bias based on breed and each case is looked at individually and at face value.
- Staff is properly trained in situations.
- All mandates of the legal system and isn't cost prohibitive to any party
- Inclusion of dog behaviour expert in tribunal
- Minimum professional qualifications of panel (Vet/Vet Tech etc)
- To not be guided by breed discrimination. And help the owner to become a responsible dog owner with education and assistance with the dog in question.
- Has Veterinary professionals and licensed animal behaviouralist/ trainers as the non-city representatives
 - The tribunal is made up of owners and/or pet professionals 2) The tribunal operates within the provincial court and it's regulations and legal processes. 3) the tribunal does not cost more than placing an animal in the provincial court system.
- Not breed specific but each situation treated individually
- It would take into account the entire situation. Those who are making the decision must be unbiased in all ways. I think when making these decisions, the breed of the dog should not be released until after the decision has been made.
- as long as they get more than one party doing an assessment on the dog. It needs multiple options before deciding to euthanize. Include not only "behavior expert" but also a person from a dog rescue that interacts with many dog temperaments. As well as let the dog have a couple of week to adjust to its new surroundings in a not stressful environment.
- It be breed [removed]
- Educated and unbiased individuals that is fair to all breeds
- if the owner wants to appeal the euthanazia order of the tribunal, the tribunal must wait for the courts before any action is taken
- Respects me and my dog. He is half staffirshire and I'm tired of always avoiding people because of what he looks like. (At least with vivid I can take a wide path around because he wants to meet everything he sees.)
- The focus of these reviews should be on the owner and how to punish them, not on the dog!! A bad owner will just result in more dogs getting put down, and the dogs don't deserve that fate.
- The owners complacency in training should be considered.
- this is comprised of people that work professionally with dogs. Example; Trainers, Vets,
- It has to be answerable to a higher authority & ensure that the decisions made are subject to regulations. The use of approved animal behaviorist as well.
- There was no implicit or explicit bias against pit bull breeds.
- I believe a trained professional, specifically someone who has extensive knowledge in bully breeds dogs, should be in charge of making unbiased decisions. A dog trainer or vet would know more than a city representative.
- The dogs aren't the issue it's the [removed] people raising them wrong
- No euthanized animals.

- Persons on tribunal are elected not appointed
- The owner has to take a course to understand how to keep their dog safe and others
- There should be a review on the owners behaviour and bad owners should be flagged. Held responsible and prohibited from dog ownership.
- There needs to be protocols to follow and making sure people aren't making biased decisions and are looking out for the welfare of the dog. I witnessed a dog bite where the dog was defending himself from an aggressive attack, But then does the biter get penalized or the aggressor?
- Euthanizing should only be an option if there is no chance that the dog can have a happy life otherwise, and the officer should not have a bias against bully breeds.
- This would need to ensure that it was actually for the good of the animal and not a fast track to euthanasia. Was it the animal's fault or was the owner unequipped to have this animal? Sending an animal to a rescue not a shelter should be a potential outcome as well where the animal would be given the opportunity for proper care and training and love and to be fostered out to someone who could help the animal get ready to be adopted
- A diverse group of educated individuals so dogs have the best shot at rehabilitation and not just euthanasia. It's not really reducing the trauma for the dog if you're just going to kill it anyway.
- I don't know enough about the process to comment on this
- there is rehabilitation and training available for the dog and human before any form of euthanization
- Properly vetted members of the tribunal who are impartial
- It was held by an independent third party, not the city Or SPCA but a rescue group
- Rescues are also given a position on the tribunal
- Tribunal is made up of elected officials with experience in veterinary medicine and/ or dog behaviour.
- As long as it was right away as the dog and owners will be distraught from being apart
- If treated fairly and owner given options to rehome or education provided for owner and dog
- That the tribunal focuses on the owner and not the pet. A pet should not suffer the consequences of bad owners.
- Veterinary and behavioural experts must be part of the of the discussion
- Those on the tribunal would need to be thoroughly vetted to ensure bias is not present and the option to appeal should be available to owners if an unfavorable outcome is determined
- Persons selected should all have experience with dogs, ie. qualified trainers or vets.
- Unbiased tribunal
- They follow the above suggestion of ensuring investigation into the owners treatment of the animal.
- Does not lead to premature euthanizing of animal to clear space
- Explained fully
- If the person was harassing or trying to touch the animal without permission
- No dog should be killed. It's not a dog's nature to hurt people, this is the fault of irresponsible owners.
- There wasn't an unfair bias to particular breeds.

- I think there would need to be at least two animal behaviour specialists. One not appointed by the city to be on the tribunal
- They were a group of individuals well educated in dogs, force free training, and were not boded in any way.
- It is not biased
- All the facts were taken into account from the surrounding environment, the people involved, what happened, past situations with the dog and the other people too.
- If tribunal is similar to a mediation & reviews all details was it attack or defense? Owner response, attitude, payment for damages and continued education/training.
- There is no bias or un bias option about the breed.
- every option must be discussed and able to be tried prior to deciding on euthanasia (euthanasia should never be one of the first choices)
- More emphasis on owners rehabilitation as most dog incidents are due to irresponsible owners
- All options are exhausted before euthanization
- Don't be biased against pit bulls.
- Review statement from owners and victim
- You shouldn't be given dogs a death penalty. Unlike humans they don't understand the difference between right and wrong. They are innocent.
- There are people who are educated on dog behaviour and welfare on the tribunal. There should be NO breed related restrictions or bias.
- The individuals representing the tribunal MUST be animal specialists and NOT members of the general public or politicians!
- Representative from organization like Humane Society be present to educate and prevent bias
- They are educated on the topic to be on the tribunal.
- Neutral 3rd party to engage in assessment of the dog at owners expense
- The tribunal had animal experts on it
- Dogs that bite should be euthanized
- Pet should be allowed to stay with the owner
- The tribunal takes into consideration circumstances of an accident, consists of experts on dog behaviour, and also considered rehabilitation or rehoming a dog.
- Members of the tribunal system should be formed with prerequisites that consist of a variety of dog owners each with different breeds. This could be considered similar to a jury due to the large range of personalities each breed possesses.
- H
- Animal advocates were included in the tribunal
- The persons delegated to be on the Tribunal must not be breed prejudice.
- input from all parties was considered
- These representatives would need to be qualified to make these decisions. This shouldn't be like joining a condo board so you can offer your uninformed opinion.

- No euthanization, that is very inappropriate.
- Allows for owners to submit appeals
- As long as vets are part of the process.
- The dog stays in the home of the owner.
- For first infraction tribunal yes, but after multiple it shouldn't be an option.
- That pit bull breeds are given a fair chance, and that euthanasia is not the go-to and that behaviour training is the first step.
- Follow up with the owner, most often dog attacks happen because of owner abuse
- Any dog apprehended must attend obedience training and there is provision to be able to mandate financial compensation for victims.
- That cases be looked into very thoroughly and possible have a panel of tributes to discuss and create a verdict as opposed to one person's opinion dictating the cases
- Depending on who would be the representative (avoiding bias)
- A professional veterinarian familiar with the breed in question was consulted during the tribunal process
- I like the idea of a tribunal to speed up the process, reduce time separated between the pet and their owner, and be able to conduct a full investigation. However, I believe that euthanization should be an absolute last resort, provided there be serious or permanent bodily harm or the animal is a repeat offender of serious incidents and all other resources or rehabilitation attempts have been expended.
- As long as there isn't breed specific laws
- Dog stays with owner until decision made
- There should be no euthanizations for aggressive dog behaviour. The behaviour is learned, they are not aggressive by nature. It is the owners fault, not the dogs. I would support the tribunal only if it allows for dogs to stay at home rather than being locked somewhere unfamiliar for any amount of time where they would become scared and more aggressive as a result.
- You take everything into consideration. What set the dog off? Dogs have natural instincts to protect themselves, if they were being taunted, then they had every right to attack
- Welfare of the dog must be taken into account.
- The only condition would be that the animal is not euthanized
- It isn't breed specific and more so bite specific. Don't base this on breeds, base this on individual dogs.
- The tribunal would need to be qualified to make judgement calls based on the dog's demeanor, behaviour, history, etc. as well as the owner(s) behaviour, history, etc.
- Those on the tribunal be educated and have experience in the field.
- You didn't mess it up
- The tribunal must be impartial and independent. The first whiff of activism or bias would permanently destroy its credibility.
- Case by case

- That dogs "deemed" to be euthanized wait until the trial is over so they have a chance. Most dog bites ARE NOT the dogs fault. And I would only support if the assessments are done through third party.
- Have an animal behaviour therapist assess the dog!! It is not always the dogs fault.
- Again it's about the owner, the owner needs to be looked at. Stop always blaming the dog, the dog doesn't deserve to suffer because the owner provides poor training.
- Breed bans or limits are ridiculous. Go after bad owners not the dogs!
- Allowed the dog to remain at their home and not a shelter. Making it on a sort of house arrest and only able to walk with a muzzle.
- There are levels of severity, and immediate apprehension and option of euthanasia should not be the first step.
- No discrimination based on breed.
- There is an opportunity to prolong the process in order for good pet owners to collect themselves from this trauma and make an appropriate plan that they can implement and help their case. The death penalty should never be taken lightly. Rehabilitation is almost always possible with well educated and dedicated guardians
- Unbiased and allows for reasonable mitigations/restrictions for the owner keeping the dog and rehabilitation rather than the "easy out" of leaning towards euthanized frequently
- Veterinary and dog behaviourist also agree on results and are involved throughout tribunal process.
- some dogs defend themselves when they are being teased, it needs to be determined if this is the case, if so give the owner a fine but release the dog to him or her and require disciplinary actions, the victim should also understand that they can not tease animals and should also receive a fine if that's the case.
- Owners wishes and circumstances of bite are taken into account
- Tribunal for the irresponsible owners. Mandatory courses for them
- Euthanizations would need to be a last resort and should not be discussed unless this a repeating incident with a dog.
- The powers of the tribunal were similar if not identical to that of the provincial tribunal.
- If there was no bias to dog breed
- The understanding that it's not the breed but the owner. And the owner should be dealt with and the animal regimes not euthanized because of a neglectful pet owner.
- The dog be assessed by dog behaviourist and deemed safe to be re-intergraded back into society....my strong beliefs are all dogs are trainable and any aggressions can be reversed...no dog should have to die because of bad owners...
- This group will only help if it doesn't discriminate against specific breeds.
- Euthanization is a very very last alternative and not breed-biased. Many times it's owners, not dogs.
- Each dog be treated the same. I notice quite often that nuisance dogs (excessive barking, aggression, etc) are quite often smaller dogs. It seems that owners of these smaller dogs don't realize that they also need training. Personally I had 2 very aggressive small dogs that had to go through behavioural training to address concerning behaviour. I don't believe singling out a breed is fair as there are many other large AND small breeds that can become aggressive.

- The dog has been involved in an Incident causing harm to person or other animal without being provoked
- Members of the tribunal are unbiased towards different dog breeds. Eg. unbiased towards bully breeds
- It's a fair process
- The tribunal must have a dog behaviour expert, preferably multiple, on the panel to more accurately judge the condition of the dog. Furthermore, no police should be on the tribunal panel, because they are more likely to seek extensive punitive measures (this includes all current and/or former police officers, of ANY municipality, of any rank, as well as RCMP, bylaw officers, peace officers, etc.). However, if the City feels a cop is necessary, it must not be a cop that has ever dealt with the dog, which if that means having an open rotating position for police officers to fill in order to make them impartial, so be it.
- All dogs and owners judged on a case by case basis regardless of breed. No bad dogs, Just bad owners.
- As long as it can be appealed
- Animals are not euthanized at all. They are living sentient creatures, not property. Our treatment of them is appalling.
- It be optional to use. The owner would be able to decide which route they would like to take
- The owner must have a say in whether or not the dog will be euthanized. In most cases I agree that attacking dogs need to be euthanized, however in some case there could be other. impacting circumstances.
- Dog must go through training with owner.
- All parties must be allowed to speak, including dog owners.
- The tribunal was clearly unbiased towards so called pitbull/nuisance breeds
- A professional dog behavior specialist is involved and can asses the dog's behavior fairly and unbiased. Full review of the dog's history and reasoning behind a bite. It is not always the animal's fault.
- Certified dog trainers with knowledgr of dog behavior and positive reinforcement training.
- No dog should be euthanized because they bit someone. There is always a reason that a dog will bite. If it feels threatened, scared or hurt.
- The identity of the tribunal is known to the public, it has people considered experts in dog behavior, and the public can have a say in the efficacy of the tribunal and can request change if needed.
- The tribunal must rule fairly, especially is a small breed attacks a larger dog and the larger dog protects itself. The small breed owner is responsible in that situation as they never trained their dog.
- It was not a "head hunt" on any one breed of dog
- The people who are reviewing the case as a tribunal must be knowledgeable and familiar of dog behaviour.

- If the representatives was a known dog trainer based from balanced training practice. Working dog trainer as well as behaviouralist.
- Members of the tribunal must represent both pet owners and non-pet owners
- That they are not presiding to one breed.
- That they have the same guidelines and processes as they would in court
- The OWNER needs to be heavily fined if any dog is not on a leash, with the exception of an Off-Leash Park or in the owner's fenced / secure backyard.
- Professional canine behaviourists and any other appropriate professionals being involved to make it in the best interest of the animal victim and all options being explored thoroughly.
- Set percentage of members should be expert on animal behaviour. There are no bad dogs - only lack of training, trained bad behaviour and strangers that don't respect the animals personal space
- Training for both owner and dog
- This applies to ALL dogs no matter the size or breed of the dog. Attempt to train the dog properly.
- Tribunal must be made up of unbiased and impartial individuals. Especially against specific dog breeds.
- Focused on punishing the owner and not the dog. As it is the owners fault if their dog isn't trained properly not the dogs fault.
- It must increase the ability of knowledge and access to skills to manage said animal.
- An unbiased verdict is key, I quite like the idea as long as it could be appealed and possibly overruled depending the circumstance.
- The tribunal should be a collective of dog trainers and handlers and not a bunch of useless politicians and people who have no knowledge of dogs
- Proper understanding of animal behaviour
- Elected officials
- Reputable dog professionals are part of the tribunal. We don't want people on the tribunal who don't understand dog behaviour.
- Pit bulls are not singled out as a breed and given harsher orders than other breeds, and representatives are consistently screened to be unbiased of breed.
- Fair look into the reasoning that caused the nuisance.
- No euthanization
- If the tribunal is comprised of unbiased individuals.
- Unbiased committee. I do not support euthanasia, all alternatives should be considered first.
- Restriction for the dog and the owner abide by them.
- Reduce the time of the courts but the panel has to be well informed
- It was a choice of tribunal or wait for courts
- No euthanization
- Review vicious dog declarations and assess if the dog should be euthanized
- Owner experience/attitude toward pet ownership

- All sides of the story are taken into consideration, such as why the attack occurred, background of both victim and dog. For euthanization to be approved, all parties on the tribunal must review all aspects (both stories) and consensus must be reached.
- It is not biased against breeds.
- DO NOT EUTHANIZE ANIMAL. Dogs do not just bite for no reason.
- No euthanizations
- Tribunal must be knowledgeable in dog behavior and take the circumstances of the note into consideration, some people behave inappropriately towards animals and that's not the animals fault
- The owner is who is responsible for the dogs actions. The owner is who the city should be concentrating on, not the breed of dog.
- the option was given to handle it either way by the defendant
- Owners of pit bulls or large dogs should be on the tribunal for balance, but those representatives cannot have any record of nuisance dogs in their care.
- Look at all the factors on first offence before urbanization
- The tribunal will review the case, and only pass judgment on whether the dog can be released to the owner while waiting court. The courts still should review bite cases.
- There are trained professional animal behavioralists on the tribunal
- It is not breed specific. The worst attacks I've been witness to have not included the pitbull breed.
- It was ensured that appropriate animal expert professionals were on the tribunal such as veterinarians and Registered veterinary technologists
- They are actual dog behaviour specialists AND owners can be punished rather than murdering already abused dogs.
- Properly trained and educated people are on the tribunal
- Allows both sides to present their case.
- Leniency to treat pit bulls as any other dog breed.
- Specifically trained judges in dog behavior!
- Decisions must be equally agreed upon and process for reducing bias must be applied.
- Dog has to be muzzled outdoors, not allowed outside unsupervised, until hearing is complete and final decisions made
- Dogs would not be euthanized until the case is processed in court.
- Considers if the owners were at fault for not trained or were aggressive with the dog before assuming the full responsibility was the dog.
- Everyone on the Tribunal has a reasonable understanding of dog behaviour.
- As long as it doesn't cost more to tax payers
- euthanization to be determined only court of Queens bench.
- as long as euthanization is not an option
- A fair trial, not based solely on the breed. What if a smaller dog bites 100 people and a larger dog bites a person put of defense? That has to be considered
- Depends who is on the tribunal and how people on the tribunal are selected

- maximum tribunal tenure of 3 years
- The tribunal was made up of animal care professionals including vets and trainers. The Humane Society should not have power to make decisions unilaterally the way they do now
- That it is fair and all parties are represented.
- Who would be conducting the tribunals?
- owner pays for the tribunal costs
- The dog is safe
- Owners become liable on training their dog and not placed dogs themselves (Bad Owners)
- Not biased based on breed.
- The cases were looked at in an unbiased manner, specifically with regards to misplaced breed specific bias vs. Pit bulls or dogs that cosmetically looked similar to Pit bulls.
- Don't Euthenize - rehabilitate
- These people are screened to be fair to both sides and not have a specific motive against these breeds.
- Tribunal is made of a mix of people, experts etc
- It was made up of animal behaviourists, vets, and trainers.
- Members of tribunal receive training in administrative tribunals. Members of tribunal have appropriate subject matter expertise (animals, etc.)
- The dog should have a chance to be put through a training program instead of euthanize it. If training is unsuccessful and the dog is deemed as dangerous then perhaps it would need to be euthanized.
- A true investigation into the animals lifestyle first, as the cause may be its owners.
- If it's the first incident with the dog and it has not has training or obedience, it must be mandatory for the owner to enroll the dog in these programs. Then a re-evaluation should be done. Dog must be muzzled at all times!!
- Properly Determine if the OWNER is FIT enough to have the animal.
- What did the person do before the dog reacted; what have the owners done to work with the dog?; was the dog teased? So many factors that should be assessed before sentencing the dog!
- more community consultation on this with dog behavioral specialists.
- It greatly reduced time animal has to be in shelter
- I would support a tribunal so long as experts in dog behaviour (e.g., the behaviour department at the Calgary Humane Society) are also involved in these tribunals.
- Follows the same assessment methods and standards as a court would
- on the tribunal. They need people that understand all breeds of dogs.
- Give the owner the chance to work with a trainer when possible to rehabilitate the dog. No dog should be put down without the honest effort to rehabilitate. We extend the courtesy to hardened criminals - why not our pets - they are members of the family.

- Often dogs are unfairly euthanized. Sometimes all they need is dog owner education and dog training, dog behaviourist and veterinary help. It would be great to have a veterinary behaviourist on the tribunal so that dogs are not unfairly euthanized.
- Euthanasia should require secondary approval following current process.
- So long as it actually provides a decision quickly, isn't costly to run, and that if an appeal is sought, to dog would remain in shelter
- There would need to be impartial parties. The decision to euthanize must have a second opinion.
- As long as it is not breed specific
- The tribunal includes an animal behaviorist
- It does not have the authority to order euthanizing
- The dog owner must be willing to take the proper steps to ensure their dog is safe around others. Proper training classes, etc. Euthanization should be the last resort after all other options have been exhausted.
- As there are people on the panel who understand all dogs are capable of aggression, not just pitbulls.
- Those selected were educated on the realities and are not just random members of the public, not even volunteers. MUST have clear education on real issues - humans being the issue, sometimes the dog, definitely not the breed.
- There were rules and regulations in place, as well as the ability to appeal
- They can be declared not a nuisance dog isn't he future
- Proven dog bite fir no reason.
- Allowed the animal to be treated fairly and humanely like it would in a home environment.
- It had representatives on the tribunal that were not bias towards larger dog or "nuisance" breeds!
- I think by default a dog should be left with the owner if the owner is found to be caring and responsible while waiting with restrictions put in place immediately.
- That the first line of defense recommended by a tribunal must be obedience training. Then a visit following obedience training by a trained professional dog handler to determine if dog (and human) are ok to resume at home relationship. Most aggressive dogs are this way because of the treatment they receive at home.
- Who would be these representatives? I would only want to see representatives that are from animal shelters for example. Process would have to be in the most humane way possible.
- Euthanasia should be an absolute last resort
- When it comes to any talk of euthanization - This dog must have offended multiple times, and the cause of the incident should be taken into account; Was the person who was bit doing something the dog didn't like before?
- Specific dog breeds aren't discriminated
- The owner is able to provide a minimum of three strong references which undoubtedly confirm that the dog was either provoked or was acting out of its natural behavior.
- need unbiased people in the tribunal. Bully breeds arent the problem

- If there should be a human victim involved that the victim or someone representing them can petition the court instead of having to go through this process if they felt necessary.
- The panel must be made of qualified veterinarians, minimum 2, qualified and certified dog trainers, minimum 2 with different specialties, 1 animal behaviour specialist, and 2 lawyers, one weighing in for the city the other weighing in for the public, and two city council members, that must remain on the tribunal during their time in office.
- Dog owners are not being punished because their dog is a specific breed.
- Review and assess the OWNERS of the dog. It is not the breed that makes the dog dangerous but rather the training or lack of.
- Had Pitbull experts (from rescues) as well as vets make the decisions not just average people. Have experts.
- That the dogs in custody are treated humanely and fairly, and given a chance despite their breed.
- It would depend on the rules set forth for the tribunal and who would be sitting on it. Not enough information to make a choice.
- I think if the dog has a history of bites, while waiting court the dog could remain home and muzzled when outside and on walks.
- Assessment by a veterinarian with behaviour specialist to determine if this was an isolated incident or if rehabilitation is possible either through surrender or owner compliance.
- Review and assess before euthanization
- To do whatever it takes to rehome whichever before euthanizing
- That there is an animal expert present on the tribunal
- I don't know if I could cause it would probably end up being useless.
- If the dog is a pit bull, it should be euthanized on a first offence. Fighting Breed dogs should be banned in Calgary.
- The tribunal consists of all dog owners some of which own what you deem as "an aggressive breed"
- The tribunal is fair with educated people
- At least some of this time, the person who was bit was at fault (ie. harassing the dog or dog owner), these people should have to be trained in proper dog interaction or fined.
- It is a fair and unbiased process and would not increase costs to dog owners
- So long as everything is reviewed on a case by case basis, without the stigma of certain breeds. The other thing to consider would be to have established clear rules and regulations in regards to the tribunal itself so that owners are prepared and can therefore get through the process quicker.
- Euthanization decisions are not included in their powers. This should only be done by the courts and should have an appeal process.
- It must remain fair and impartial. So many "tribunals" are nothing more than rubber stampers, processing cases based on bias and prejudice.
- Clear set of requirements for representatives that represent the concerns of the community and well-being of the animal.
- .

- This is an issue with the pet owner and not the animal. Working with a animal to adjust the behaviour is the best thing. Not to punish the dog based on poor training from the owner.
- The owner is at fault, not the animal
- Look at the dog itself not the breed of dog it is. Bias cannot be tolerated in humans or dogs.
- All parties have equal opportunity to prove/defend their case and no members of the tribunal have been thoroughly vetted to insure they do not have any sort of dog or Pitbull bias.
- A way to remove bias against certain dog breeds
- Ensure it is the evidence they are basing everything on and not the dog type
- If it makes the process faster that is great. But I don't think taking a dog away from the owner is appropriate. I believe the dog should be able to go home with restrictions from leaving the house until decisions from the tribunal are made.
- Reasonable prices, chance for appeals
- The dog stays at home with the owner and NOT in a shelter.
- All dogs judged equally and breeds not specified. Context of attack is extremely important, as the dog that was attacked, may have instigated the fight.
- IF IT WAS FAIR. DONT BREED SHAME
- People with immense training in all breeds of dogs.
- euthanasia not supported
- Tribunal has knowledgeable people trained in dog behaviours and training
- The breed of dog should not be taken into consideration. Other breeds can be aggressive also. The owner is responsible for making their dog aggressive.
- Da
- Get the full story most dogs will only attack if provoked or they have a bad owner
- Tribunal representatives must not show bias toward specific breeds of dogs or socioeconomic, racial, religious or demographic characteristics of owners.
- Dogs need to be assessed by a trainer outside of government. Owners need to be assessed and some consideration needs to be made if owners have attempted training prior to incidents.
- Appropriate and un-biased participants, with proper knowledge and training were leading tribunals. Owners or interested parties would be allowed to appeal and have new tribunals or excel to higher court.
- As long as vicious dog declarations cannot result in the dog being euthanized. Please provide education/training to the owner and dog instead. All dogs can learn to stop vicious behaviour.
- Unbiased
- It would need to be comprised of dog behavior professionals
- As long as it is believed the dog can be effectively trained or retrained in a way that there is no risk of biting in the future or the bite did not result in death
- Tribunal members must be a mix of dog owners and non-dog owners
- That the tribunal have an animal behaviour scientist, a veterinarian, and psychologist to assess the owners participation, and that the tribunal not have the right to issue death sentences.

- These people are actually have a level of certification in animal behaviour...
- Holds the owner responsible. And do not euthanize the dog. Treat all dogs equally. Do not single out a breed.
- I can not see thd rest of this sentence on my phone. I need further explanation.
- I agree and support that a tribunal system would be ideal to regulate dog restrictions.
- It cannot order a dog to be euthanized, it can order muzzles and corrective training
- Certified vets and dog trainers not politicians making the decision.
- I don't think every "problem dog" should be euthanized. I think they should be rehabilitated not locked in a cage and killed. Euthanasia should be done as a last resort when dogs won't respond to any training (with the right trainer this should never be an option)
- The owner of the dog and the person claiming damage must be allowed to provide evidence of their claims. The fate of the animal cannot be determined by taking the word of the victim in good faith. The victim needs to prove they did not provoke the animal as well.
- That there would be a unannounced check up on the owner of said animal as well to see how they behave. Most animals behave a certain way because of owners not based off of breed.
- As long as it doesn't increase taxes.
- That members of the tribunal must contain animal experts not just citizens
- So long as the decision made is void of the influence of racism against specific dogs. As said above pit bulls are involved in bite cases no more times than any other breed. Maybe there should instead be encouragement/resources/investment/financial aid put into helping owners of larger breed / strong dogs to ensure they are properly trained and cared for so they will not act aggressively.
- That the tribunal would not require an euthanization unless specific attempts at obedience have been attempted or it is agreed upon by all parties to the case.
- If the owner didn't have to be separated from their pet and the pet had to be in a shelter.
- if the decision made by the tribunal was not agreed upon it can be appealed
- Dog should stay in owners care
- People on the tribunal be animal experts like veterinarians, certified dog trainers.
- maybe foster the dog to people who are responsible, it's not the dogs it's the owners responsibility to take a dog and socialize it and train it, so many bad owners, I see it in my neighborhood the dogs are confined, never walked wouldn't any human go mental
- The tribunal is made of people with no pre decided personal agenda and does not have a history of closely knowing anyone who has been attacked by a dog. I also feel that they must NOT show judgement based on breed or size
- Any person on my panel must be a dog owner
- That the tribunal can be appealed if required prior to any final actions being taken (euthanasia)
- The tribunal is unbiased towards breed
- a unbiased group.
- That there is representation from cities with varying bylaws on animals so that decisions made are non-biased.

- It is NOT biased against pit-bull breeds
- No muzzling
- Allows owners a second chance to re train their dog
- That a professional, with the animals best interests at heart, who have worked with “dangerous” dogs has the ability to spend a reasonable amount of time with the animal to do an assessment. Many dog lovers are willing to adopt or foster these animals and provide the training they need. Perhaps a follow up in 6 and 12 months should all be part of the process instead of euthanasia as the option.
- The dog should never be euthanized, euthanize or at least severely punish the owner and put the dog into a home with someone who knows how to train an animal.
- They aren't biased against the dog breed. Bad training, or timid dog issues are not the fault of a pet, it is a human problem.
- Dog behaviour experts included in the panel to better asses why something occurred and work through proper steps to correct the situation: training of the owner,
- You also look at the full situation going on around not just the dog that bit
- The tribunal needs to be made up of experienced people who have worked with dogs on a professional level. Veterinarians and Veterinary Technicians, Groomers, Rescue workers, etc.
- I would want it to be taken into consideration that if the person that was bitten was antagonizing the dog prior to the incident that it is the persons fault and not the dogs...dogs do give off signals to back off and if a person gets bit they deserve it just like when a schoolyard bully finally gets beat up
- Dogs and animals were not taken or euthanized. Deserve a fair investigation just like people
- Euthanizing should not be an option. Dogs have shown they can be rehabilitated.
- Yes
- Proper investigation
- Dogs should never be euthanized, euthanize or at least severely punish the owner and put the dog in a home with someone who knows how to train animals.
- Criteria to be a member of the tribunal must include dog training experience.
- Pit bulls and other supposed “bully” breeds are not egregiously targeted as “nuisance” dogs and steps are taken to prevent biases against them.
- volunteer based and made up of experts on canine behavior
- As long as tribunal has knowledge on dog behaviors and owners are required to go thru proper training by certified trainer.
- tribunal members are elected and have dog behavior backgrounds (spca workers, dog trainers etc)
- Avoids breed specific focus
- All circumstances surrounding the incident are investigated(why the dog did what it did, was it provoked or not)
- Never euthanize!!!! There is ALWAYS a training option if people ARE WILLING TO LOOK
- The dog is kept humanely and treated with respect, owners permitted to visit and walk the dog while waiting the tribunal results.

- If a dog is aggressive and bites there could be many factors in which the dog reacted. Fear, protection, raised to bite. I think the owner should be responsible for the dogs behaviour. If a dog attacks, the owner should be responsible to have a highly experienced dog trainer intervene. Low enforcement should then keep in contact with the trainer and the trainer should approve the dogs behaviour or not. If not the dog should be removed from the home. If the dog improves its behaviour the owner shall keep the dog. If the dog strikes again the dog shall be removed.
- It would need to be fair and whoever was chosen would need to be non biased to all breeds.
- Tribunal could not order animal to be euthanized
- Proper screening to ensure individuals on the tribunal are working in the best interest of the animal. Representatives should be knowledgeable and educated in animals and animal behaviour. It should be mandatory that one member of the tribunal is an owner of a previously declared vicious dog.
- The dog is treated fairly and past history is assessed. Base the conditions off of the dogs history & behaviour not off of what it looks like or what breed it is.
- Fair people presided over it. Not a bunch of Karen's.
- Tribunals held by those that own dogs, or worked with dogs
- Keep your Biases out of the case!
- Na
- It does not discriminate against particular dog breeds
- That euthanasia is not an option.
- This cannot be just random members of the community with social status but those with empathy and who think logically. It's not the animal it's the owner. In order to obtain a dog one should have to go to training.
- Pets should remain with their owners to avoid trauma
- No dog breeds were singled out as higher risk inherently. Tribunals must review cases on an individual and unbiased level.
- There is a lot of people who do not like certain breeds of dogs. Those people should not be allowed to be in this
- They didn't over think and they looked at the whole entire picture regardless of the breed of dog it is!
- The people on the tribunal must not have any breedism as all dogs can be vicious.
- The SPCA should be involved as part of the tribunal process to make sure the animal's best interests are protected.
- each case has a case manager who is being held accountable to the life of somones four legged family member. lets say someone breaks in, and dog bites; thats diffrent than if youre on a walk in the park and your dog attacks. CASE BY CASE. we need to overveiw these cases ith care
- That each case is treated individual by a 3 rd party to make sure the right decision is made.
- That this does not increase the chance of a dog to be euthanized for thd purpose of "speeding up" the due process.
- it would take less tax payer money and actually speed up the process
- No person on the tribual can have any pre-existing biases against any dogs or dog breeds. No dog breed deserves to be singled out because of ignorant people.

- The history of the animal and the owner is reviewed
- Fair and reasonable assessment of the situation without eliminating due process. I would hate to see innocent dogs euthanized because of gaps in the processing system
- It was fair and background information as well as situation information, including witness details are shared.
- Release dog back immediately then proceed if need be. Warnings sent out etc.
- Reassessing of what qualifies a dog as a nuisance and stricter guidelines on how a dog is determined to be euthanized. Dogs do not need to be put down, rehabilitation and accountability on owners part can be effective
- Not judging one specific breed as worse... example. I dont agree with ALL pitbull type dogs are bad. In my opinion that is racist. you would NEVER do that against humans and the kind of nationality we are so why would you do this with dogs? They are family too...
- It does not lead to euthanization. There should be restrictions placed however on allowane in public spaces including fines for not wearing muzzles or being let off leash in publis areas
- They shouldn't have the power to euthanize.
- The tribunal needs to include dog owners, including those with specifically noted breeds.
- Putting dogs down as a last resort investigate the dogs home to see how they are being treated and if they are abused and if the dog acts different away from the own the dog may have to go to a different home if the owner can not care for it properly.
- As long as these tribunals don't become a he said, she said, kind of accusation train that allows dogs to be put down when they shouldn't be
- If decision is euthanasia, there should be a second review by the courts.
- A veterinarian is a member of the tribunal
- The breed should not be judged, it's the owners that are at fault. I believe that all owners that choose to have a dog should be committed to the training and responsibility of owning the animal. It is not fair to the animal to be put in a muzzle because of its breed. Pitbulls have a history of aggression which means any owner that chooses to own a pitbull should be certified by a dog psychologists authorizing that this owner is able to provide this animal the best future
- Sitting members on the tribunal can NOT be a negative dog hater. Also absolutely NO breed specific rules. Dogs, but more important the owners are to be held responsible, NEVER a breed
- Option C that they review restrictions the owner must abide to while the case is processed in court. This will cause less stress for both owner and animal, this situation would already be stressful enough for all parties.
- that no specific breed of dogs are specifically called out. Bad dogs are the result of bad owners.
- The whole circumstances involving the incident are reviewed. (i.e., don't just look at the fact the dog bit someone - look at whether it was being teased or taunted, etc.
- Looks at rehabilitation options and owners impact on dogs, if dog is dangerous and must be euthanized the owner should be barred from owning pets in the future. As Dogs are reflections of the owners, not their breed. Pitbull specific laws will further stigmatized that they are dangerous, when it's literally stated above that they are no more aggressive or violent than other breeds.

- As long as the tribunal consisted of multiple decision makers with clearly different backgrounds and viewpoints, with a goal of reaching an objective decision that is best for all parties involved.
- "Determine, and review restrictions placed on a dog, which the owner would need to abide by to keep the animal" is absurd. The owner does not follow the rules or common sense - that is why their animal is a nuisance. The owner will not comply with any restrictions set by a tribunal. Animals deemed to be a nuisance should be destroyed, PERIOD!
- That the people on the tribunal are highly educated dog people, unbiased, and fair.
- The tribunal committee needs to be impartial and educated in animal behavior
- Euthanasia is ONLY used when there is no other option or a dog has murdered someone. It cannot be a first option or second. Must be last resort.
- no euthanizing any dog, the dog can be properly trained and go to obedience classes
- The Tribune is filled with animal services experts.
- It should be based on an individual case, not a breed of dog
- Getting underlying behaviour base lines from people in the community in which the dogs lives (ex. Neighbors); the decision should not be solely based on what city workers see at the time of incident(s)
- I would like to know that the selection process for the tribunal is diverse and unbiased. Cannot have had negative experiences with dogs.
- has to be fair
- They shouldn't be able to decide if the dog can be euthanized.
- If it based on individual case before them, not breed related in any way.
- No biased judgments towards pit bulls
- Members of the tribunal would be qualified to make those reviews, ie. Vet, animal behaviour expert, etc.
- I do not believe that the dogs should be euthanized ever.
- individuals on the tribunal were well educated, understand dog behavior and psychology, take into account that breed bias/scapegoating is not tolerated and each case is based primarily on the owner and the situation. Cannot be individual with breed biases.
- As long as it was done as a trial to make sure it is fair and works as intended
- Contains a number of dog owners who are involved in rescue.
- This was used equally for all dog breeds, regardless of size. An aggressive shih tzu is just as dangerous as another aggrieved large dog
- They remain indifferent to "bully" type breeds. ie, they don't show discrimination towards them
- As long as the dog isn't forced to be euthanized at the scene. There has to be multiple people to approve.
- They were assessed properly by a formal trainer before going to court
- Pet is interned at residence property while pending hearing
- As long as the representatives are not biased and are 100% neutral when reviewing the case. Biased representatives could result in a unfair decision for either the dog, the owner, or the victim.

- Tribunal must have representation for vets, as well as certified individuals trained in animal behaviour or obedience. Considering the bias of this engagement survey, I would also request that members of the tribunal have first-hand knowledge of working with and training bully breeds
- The owner of the dog is held accountable for the actions of their dog with little punishment to the dog itself
- I would like to mention that whether the dog was provoked or protecting their owner should be taken into account.
- The owner picks if they want to go to court or have a tribunal decision. That might stop the wasting of funds for tribunal process only to have the owners appeal it anyways.
- There is a measurable window of time allowed for a case to sit there, otherwise it gets handed over to provincial court
- Not biased on breeds.
- The persons on the Tribunal have good knowledge of dog behaviour.
- That could be appealed
- The tribunal consists of individuals that hold no sort of bias towards breed
- Dogs shouldn't be euthanized. They should have to go to mandatory training
- That all cases be assessed using the same criteria regardless of breed
- Paid for by the owner
- Experts in animal behaviour were included in the process so that they could help identify if a dog is vicious or aggressive because of the owner (suggesting seizing the dog instead of euthanizing it) or factors outside of the owner's control (not taking dogs from owners who were not at fault)
- The tribunal includes people who are unbiased to pit bulls. This survey already shows a severe bias against them.
- The owner of the dog at fault MUST pay for the Tribunal on top of an increased fine. The rest of Calgary doesn't deserve their taxes to go up because people are bad dog owners.
- Dogs should not be euthanized but given the option for behavioural therapy on the owners expense.
- Dogs should not be euthanized but instead put in behavioural therapy on the owners expense.
- Unbiased to breed of offending dog.
- There is a fair appeals process
- There was notice of who was in the tribunal
- There has to be proof of the dog being aggressive without being provoked
- all involved in the fate of X (dog) should have extensive training in canine behaviour or something of the sorts. Dog experts should be the only people assessing the dog.
- The panel would include at least 1 licensed veterinarian, with min 5 years experience and one experienced animal worker ie: dog walker, animal shelter caretaker/volunteer, or trainer with minimum 5 years experience
- With a clear mandate of dog rehabilitation and training

- The owner of the dog is to blame, not the dog. Dog's who are mistreated and abused by bad owners cannot be held responsible for defensive actions, just like people who are defending themselves. All dogs have the right to a life without abuse.
- The dog is given back to the owner if the dog is being kept under safe circumstances until the trial is finalized
- I honestly don't know how you would please people on abiding by the rules when people who are not supposed to own pets due to hoarding or something still secretly own pets.
- Dog stays with owner during processing. Dog should not be held in a shelter at all. (Restrictions could be imposed like dog being muzzled while not secured on owners property).
- As long as every effort is made, prior to euthanization, to rehome the dog to owners that will better manage and correct aggressive behaviour.
- Sections within the enabling statute, with detail, prohibiting prejudice against pitbull and pitbul type of otherwise looking dogs.
- The tribunal be made up of educated animal professionals from a variety of backgrounds to best determine if the dog can be rehabilitated and look at a variety of different methods to allow the best chance for rehabilitation for the dog.
- As long as it is composed of knowledge and educated dog behaviour specialists
- Who would the tribunal be made up of? Depending on who would dictate my answer. Need more information BUT again use my tax money for something else!
- Dogs do not get euthanized.
- As long as there is more effort put into researching the cause of the accident to avoid just ending the dogs life because that affects the family of the dog and not all bites are the dogs fault.
- Do not euthanize an animal unless it is the very last resort!!!! Most animals can be rehabilitated and if our in proper care, they will no longer show aggression. Most aggressive behaviour from any animal comes from the owner!
- A veterinary professional reviewing the case and giving their opinion
- Allow all parties to make an informed decision on the dog an behaviour. If it is once there is no need to euthanize if a proper train practice can be Maintained to reduce likelihood of the attack happening again.
- representatives should be well versed in behaviour and psychology of dogs for educationally based decisions
- There's an appeal process
- Dog kept on own property
- Dogs are sensitive creatures and are not inherently evil or aggressive. Circumstance, fear and owner engagement shape dogs into aggressors. I think owners, not dogs, should be penalized for incidents. Dogs are under the care of their owner. Children aren't penalized when they do something wrong to a stranger- parents are held accountable. Same thing!
- That the dog is assessed by a professional trainer/dog handler who then determines where this dog can live while waiting.
- Legal process - similar to residential tenancies tribunal

- fair and just counsel in trial
- The dog isn't found guilty based solely on being or appearing to belong to a certain breed
- The tribunal includes at least one animal behavior expert and one animal care expert (preferably a DVM, either practicing or non-practicing)
- It contained a variety of dog owners
- It was impartial and not decided on by people who have a dislike for certain breeds.
- The prominent pet owner eg own a pet store or train dogs or what ever but actually understand the animals they are judgeing
- Did what was best for the dog and the family
- Its not just judged on pitbull breeds. I do not agree to the judge meant being placed towards the Billy breed dogs. Education towards the owner would be better
- The do not issue dog euthanized
- Euthanization is the ABSOLUTE last resort. If an owner has a nuisance dog, as is well aware of that, the owner is responsible and should not be putting the dog in a situation where it could react from fear (reasoning behind attacks). This is not the dog's fault, but the dog needs rehabilitation and support from an owner who knows how, and can, provide that support.
- The dog should not be taken from the owner in a traumatic event. As this can cause the dog to rebel further, proper assessment should be done when the dog is NOT stressed and afraid.
- Accoutabililty should always be held on the owner and not the animal
- the city representatives are not involved in the case and are neutral in their opinions until they hear the case.
- I have no faith in City of Calgary. So whatever the outcome, I don't believe it's in the best interest of the public.
- The owners must be deemed responsible and undergo dog training to be able to own another dog.
- There is NOT an option for any dogs to be euthanized
- So long as the people called to a tribunal have no animal biases. It would not be fair to have someone with dog trauma declare to euthanize a dog that could easily be trained just from a past experience. So make sure there is vetting of some kind for the participants in the tribunal.
- Every option is exhausted before euthanizing the dog. Euthanizing should only be used as a last resort.
- Adheres to the facts. Has people who are trained in dog behaviour and have some years doing it. Impartiality. Proper risk assessment of dangerous dogs. Considered feral/unsocializable/other
- People were given proper oppportunity for representation
- Many measure would need to be taken to ensure no biases are present on the tribunal
- A tribunal should not be allowed to determine if an animal should be euthanized. This should only be determined by professionals.
- Understanding the punishment might not fit the fit (someone trespassed), or if dog was defending owner

- if the owner handling skills of the dog are looked into and if the victim is questioned of if they did anything to provoke the dog to bite.
- There should a recognized expert on dog behaviour, someone who specifically works in the field of dog behaviour.
- Tribunal members are dog owners
- Provided the dog is assessed with the owner present by a trained professional to determine if the dog is actually a danger or if there were extenuating circumstances.
- Please review the dog ownership aka the Owner. You need to look at them! They are the reason why dogs are vicious, they are trained too and they know no better than to listen to their Master. I do NOT support euthanization ! The Dog deserves another chance at life
- is what is best for the dog. Dogs dont have voices. If they bite something is wrong. Very few dogs cant be rehabilitated.
- Euthanasia of an animal should be a last resort and only for extreme cases, more priority for training or other behavioral modification techniques
- A thorough look into the dogs actual behaviour by an expert in dog behaviour.
- It was shown to be more cost effective (i.e. cheaper) than the current method of housing and waiting.
- That the dog does not suffer because of the owner's fault. The dogs should be given grace and training
- Is not prejudiced due to breed. Does not bring up breed (any breed) as the cause of the incident.
- That this is not used as an excuse to persecute pit bulls, or other breeds. The tribunal must ascertain if the dog itself is the problem or the improper, or lack of, training is at fault.
- non-city representative includes dog behavior expert
- As long as it does not disproportionately affect pit bulls due to bias against their breed
- NO euthanasia; dogs should not have to suffer for the poor training given to them by their owners. Instead, force the owner and dog to undergo dog training to better the pair. There are no bad dogs, just bad owners!
- As long as the representatives have had EXTENSIVE training on the matter.
- It cost taxpayer's less than the alternative.
- Owners of the specific dog breed in question are present on the tribunal. The tribunal is picked like a jury with rotating and new members for each case.
- There are professional animal behaviouralists involved
- tribunal must include animal rights activists and professional dog trainers who can help assess if the issue is the dog or the owner and what the proper steps to rehab are if any.
- As long as members of the tribunal do not belong to any animal rights associations or have expressed pro-animal sentiments in the past as it would cloud their judgement when euthanization may be required.
- The owners property has been investigated
- committee agreed by both parties or at least an impartial group of people not decided by City of Calgary

- Panel must have certified animal behaviour specialists
- As long as the members of the tribunal are experienced, knowledgeable individuals who understand the dynamics of dog behaviour. These individuals should have the necessary qualifications to be able to evaluate each individual case.
- Tribunal members take safety for the community into equal or greater effect as the safety of the dog.
- Dog owner and victim involved in tribunal proceedings to ensure entirety of incident is captured and both sides have a chance to weigh in on tribunal decision
- The dog is not punished or secluded from its owner. It should be kept at its home.
- As long as there is a trial which includes a fair unbiased assessment of the dog for external parties.
- Must have an open mind to the fact sometimes people bring an attack on and frighten or antagonize the animal. It can't be a kangaroo court where the "victim" is automatically believed to be truthful.
- The victim of the attack is also investigated. A lot of attacks are at fault of the person who was bit, and the dog is only protecting themselves. A dog should not be at fault for protecting themselves.
- It does not focus on breed but rather the individual owner, dog and building an j deer standing of what lead to the incident including the behaviour of the victim.
- the tribunal includes a varied panel of individuals educated and experienced in areas relating to the cases
- The onus should be placed on the human not the dog, and euthanasia should not be an option.
- Both parties of the incident must be present at the tribunal
- Nobody on the tribunal has a pre-existing opinion regarding dog breeds.
- Those who are representatives are checked for any biases
- Included unbiased arbitration with a set of protocols based on offence
- An unbiased tribunal - randomly selected for each case. People become jaded over time and lose their ability to empathize
- Making sure the members are not biased against one breed of dog. People that have experience working with dogs etc.
- The people on the tribunal have to be seriously vetted to be impartial and no one should be on it if they are bias towards certain breeds (i.e. pitbulls)
- Tribunal representatives would need to include experienced animal behaviour experts.
- Breed of dog does not impact the severity of the fine/ penalty. Rather all cases reviewed omit breed from the discussion. The tribunal has height weight age of dog but no mention of breed
- The dogs best interest
- The dogs went to rehab and didn't get put down.
- It did not have breed specific rules.
- as long as the judges, or people involved in making recommendations are well informed and knowledgeable about dogs and not biased against dogs like most non dog owners and bylaw officers seem to be.
- At least one certified dog trainer and one veterinary professional should be on this tribunal
- Dogs cannot be euthanized for their behavior

- No euthanization of dogs in any way.
- Euthanizing a dog would be completely out of the picture and should not be allowed by any means
- The animal is not euthanized unless it has an underlying condition (rabies, etc.)
- Educated on do behaviour and handling
- n/a
- Treats all dog breeds equally and put blame on owners not on the animal.
- Tribunal decisions could be appealed at the Court of Queen's Bench. If appealed, the dog must be kept at an Animal Shelter and the owner must pay for the care of the dog while pursuing the appeal process.
- Not breed specific
- They are educated dog professionals that have zero breed bias
- No bias towards "bully" breeds
- Assessment..muzzle in public. All dogs causing death should be euthanized.
- It could guarantee that representatives do not maintain an unfair bias towards specific breeds in their judgement.
- Has experts involved. Not simply city employees. Animal behaviourists and vets.
- Everyone is given the same rights as regular court proceeding
- If there was a relatively easy way for the owner of the dog to make a defence if they feel it's required.
- That the decision to euthanize a dog is the LAST possible option, after extensive training programs for both the dog and owner have been completed as well as possible change in ownership (if the owner is not fit to properly train / take care of said dog). To conclude, the decision to euthanize a poor dog, should be the very very last option, and there must be proof that we have exhausted all other options before we decide to euthanize.
- it didn't have authority to euthanize a pet, and recommendations for euthanasia would be referred back to courts.
- The make up of the tribunal would need to be public ally available and mandated to be people of varying opinions and backgrounds. I worry that it could easily end up being all people biased against animals in general, and overly recommending euthanasia or it could end up being overly composed of people biased against specific types of dogs, ie pit bulls, and result in harsher penalties against those specific types of animals.
- That if blames the owner, not the dog.
- Ensure that people who are educated of dog like behaviour have more say on it then some general public.
- any order to have a dog euthanized MUST go through the court of queens bench.
- We cannot enter into any legislation that is breed-specific. Ever. It's useless, and stupid.
- Representatives include at least one dog behaviouralist as well as a veterinarian. They will have a better understanding of a dogs breed and dispositions to know whether a dog is likely to repeat the offense.

- The dog owner is entitled to their pet and may be allowed to continue caring for them in their home.
- I feel that the members of the tribunal should be transparent and that the Humane Society and licensed animal behaviouralists should also be involved
- Non city members of the tribunal are selected by the City as objective, non biased persons who have an understanding of both animal behavior and impacts to communities. I.e. veterinary medical personnel would be preferable over a person who is an advocate for the pit bull or other known nuisance breeds.
- It proved to be a fair assessment of the dog and not a rush to judgement.
- The dogs were no longer held in a shelter and returned to owners if needed to appeal at Court of Queens Bench
- The dog remains in the owner's home under restrictions while awaiting tribunal decisions rather than in a shelter
- Euthanizing was last resort
- I don't like the idea of euthanization as a method to control dogs deemed vicious - simply because of their BREED. That is an unfair assumption because it's not always a particular breed (ie: pit bulls). Only as a LAST resort - it at all.
- There shouldn't be appeals... the decision of the tribunal should be final
- As long as a professional animal experts reviewed ALL cases. Not uneducated people that do not know anything about animals.
- Tribunal should be composed of a balanced representation of views. Pro and Anti views.
- The owner and the victim should be allowed to give statements of the account.
- The individuals were not biased on type of dog
- The tribunal is only comprised of animal behavior experts, where euthanasia is only acceptable when all other options are exhausted.
- As long as the bench consisted of animal professionals with an unbiased approach
- Non-city representatives must be impartial and not related to any causes or organizations that would make them biased
- appointment of tribunal members appropriate (i.e. unbiased and knowledgeable)
- A mix of dog owners and non dog owners. If one of them had a "nuisance pet" that would be optimal.
- The tribunal must be formed by people with knowledge in regards to animal behavior, including at least one veterinarian who can accurately make an informed decision.
- Require the owner to get obedience training BEFORE the thought of euthanizing. And there should be a number of strikes before euthanizing - it shouldn't be a first choice.
- There is no breed specific regulations. The owners are assessed
- Should not be able to decide if a dog should be euthanized without attempting other options for rehabilitation first
- TRIBUNAL MEMBERS WEREN'T PREJUDICE TO CERTAIN BREEDS
- No decisions based on breed of dog. Rehabilitation should always be an option.

- They aren't biased against certain breeds.
- Not financially wasteful or bureaucratic like Calgary City Council is.
- If proper visitation and care is provided for the animal
- The tribunal rep has experience with dogs.
- tribunal membership has to be fair and equitable.
- That the dog isn't put under too much stress and both sides are heard.
- The victim is given the option to provide an impact statement and it is given strong consideration in the final assessment and the victim is given a vote in decision.
- That it would be a fair and just system that isn't in place just to point fingers at bully breeds. The system must recognize that smaller dogs can be and are more aggressive but people only see the breed not the dog itself.
- Treat all race of dogs equal
- That the tribunal has dog behavioural specialists
- As long as rulings are made based on evidence not the breed
- Euthanasia to be used only as last resort after all rehabilitative options have been exhausted.
- if it was fast and not only used against pitbulls and Pitbull like breeds.. get that idea out of your heads right now and leave our innocent babies alone
- Review past history of dog
- Veterinarians were involved in the tribunal process/decisions
- As long as the tribunal is made up of competent people and objective criteria is established for making conclusions.
- Each party has been verified to be non biased eg, suffering a previous bite themselves, being of a culture that hates dogs etc
- Must not interfere with ability to immerse pursue civil case for damages
- The tribunal included a objective group of people that have experience with pets
- With the guidance and help of certified dog trainers, canine behaviour analysts and vets, there needs to be a proper assessment of the animal before coming to a final decision.
- The dog stays with the owner, under "house arrest" while the case is pending. This further reduces trauma to the animal. (assuming there is proper care and shelter etc being provided. I also STRONGLY object to the term "dog attacks" you used in this question (dropdown#1). This presupposes some ill intent. This bias in this questionnaire is becoming more and more apparent as it continues.
- No kill
- Including a vet and a animal behavior expert on the panel
- The dog has to be declared a danger to the general public not just a nuisance
- Dogs are assessed by a professional in a low-stress environment. Statements of witnesses and the actions of the victim (animal or human) leading up to the incident are taken into account. The dog's history is considered, including a statement from any trainer, dog handler or veterinarian familiar with the dog.

- The tribunal should include a dog behavior specialist
- A thorough review of the owner. Its usually the owner to blame for the animal's behaviour. Not all people should own animals.
- Both sides have an even chance.
- Involves people with knowledge on dog behaviour
- Not specific to ONE DOG BREED
- As long as it is any breed
- assessed owners capabilities of training and proper treatment and care of animal. If the owner is deemed inadequate the animal should try to be relocated before euthanasation is considered.
- As long as every single dog that does attack gets sentenced the same way. Whether it's a small dog or big dog. Shouldn't matter.
- There should be more than one person reviewing each incident. The panel should include a veterinarian and someone from the Calgary Humane Society.
- Appeals are possible
- Dog obedience specialist and pit bull experience professionals.
- The tribunal cannot be made up of solely dog lovers and/or pitbull owners.
- Veterinary professionals are included in the tribunal
- A professional dog trainer is also involved in making the decision
- As euthanasia is not an outcome. Dogs should be allowed to rehabilitate from lack of owners training.
- No decisions where the breed plays a part, for example pit bulls. If you label a dog breed as bad or dangerous it puts a label on a creature that may never do anything wrong it's whole life.
- It did not make euthanasia delicious based on breed. (Ie. Just cause its a pitbull doesn't mean it needs to be put down) assess the situation for severity and whether the dog was provoked or if the owner has not trained the dog or will not train the dog to not bite.
- Review and screen the owner for incompetence of training their dog
- Not putting dogs in shelters or euthanizing after an incident. Assess the training the owner has provided and the environment the animal resides in. It's the owner not the breed.
- Do not go after a specific breed of dog however only dogs that have had a history of biting or being violent
- Don't blame owners up front and fines should not make it so owners can't even afford get pet back
- As long as euthanasia was not considered as an immediate action. It would be preferred that the dog was maybe given to a dog trainer/someone capable of dealing with rescue dogs would monitor the dog through different behavioral phases. Only then should the dog be considered to be euthanized.
- Euthanasia is utilized as a LAST resort, and an animal behaviourist is utilized to help assess the danger of the animal. Again I feel like pairing with local rescues here, where euthanasia is already a LAST resort is a step in the right direction.
- It is solely staffed with professional licensed dog behaviourists and dog trainers.

- The owner must keep the dog inside or use a muzzle whenever leaving the house until deemed safe
- Dog allowed to stay with owner during tribunal process
- Members must be experts on dog behaviour
- Give the owner and dog proper training
- Members cannot use "Feelings" nor personal experience to make any decisions, facts, evidence, and EDUCATED precedent only. The fact the city is considering banning a dog breed not on evidence or fact. Beyond a weak excuse that "pit bulls bite harder" is already a red flag this will be handled horribly
- If both parties agree to a tribunal
- No breed specific rules are applied. Dog breeds are not a problem owners are.
- Owners investigated to why the animal is a problem!
- Depending on how many offences a dog has against them. First offenders should proceed with Warnings and mandatory training
- Two members of the public and must be dog owners.
- Don't single out ANY breed. Pitbulls don't deserve to be punished due to poor ownership. Dog bites are the direct result of ownership and training. Don't punish the dogs because of their owner not either properly training or acknowledging the temperament of their dogs
- Knowledgeable representatives are appointed
- Professionals in the K-9 World should be on the tribunal not Layman hyped up on Fear
- There is no discrimination against particular breeds of dogs
- All dogs are treated equally, not because they are 'pitbull' like. If a chihuahua attacks & bites, the dog should receive the same treatment.
- The owner is held responsible and that safety measures are taken to make the dog more comfortable.
- The dog should not be euthanized but instead rehabilitated through training WITH THE OWNER so they receive the same amount of training, expectations and observation done by the court.
- Members include professionals of veterinary medicine and animal behavior.
- Their decision CAN be timely challenged in court
- The tribunal had actual experience with animal behavior
- I do not like the idea of euthanasia. If a dog is repeatedly a nuisance and the owner continues to do nothing about it, the dog should be seized and placed for adoption. A dog does not deserve to die because of an owner's refusal to see there is a problem.
- As long as dogs are always referred to for obedience training and euthanization is considered only in the worst cases. No discrimination against pit bulls.
- There are animal advocates who are experts in dog behaviour to determine what the cause of the behaviour was.
- That the reason for attack is thoroughly reviewed.
- You look at if the owner is training the dog properly. It's not always the dog's fault which seems to be a massive missed point so far.

- At least 2 or more tribunal members with extensive dog behavioral training, tribunal made up of min. 8 members, min. 75% agreement in decisions
- non-biased experienced and knowledgeable people must be on the tribunal.
- Had a large ranges of representative of people from the community
- The dogs behaviour would be assessed but also taking into account if it's a neurological condition the dog has or if the dog was poorly trained and can be retrained.
- The tribunal must consist of community members or individuals involved in animal care services. It cannot be made up of a prejudiced group.
- The tribunal must consist of community members or individuals involved in animal care services. It cannot be made up of a prejudiced group.
- I require more detailed information than is provided here
- Consideration must be given to provocation of an attack by inconsiderate humans.
- As long as the process is fair and impartial and all evidence has been reviewed
- The owner has sufficient/fare time and resources to appeal the case after the tribunals decision.
- Consist of qualified individuals, with a mix of dog owners and non dog owners. The affected parties also need to be given the opportunity to speak to tribunal (provide statements/records/explanations/video,etc) before decision is made.
- Both parties present and valid fight from both of the parties in court
- Tribunal members should be qualified for the task, familiar with animal behaviour and training practices for aggressive animals
- If the tribunal deemed that a dog should be euthanized - that case should go before the court for a final decision.
- There should be non-biased professionals able to assess the dog LONG-TERM. In a calm, safe environment for the dog.
- No breed-specific legislation. It's the same discrimination as racism.
- The dog is not forced to be euthanized but to be trained. Or given to an owner that will put in the time and effort to train and socialize it properly.
- The tribunal cannot determine the dog should be euthanized.
- Animal experts are included to prevent BREED SPECIFIC DISCRIMINATION
- It is made up of people with actual knowledge of dogs and breeds, and is utilizing facts and verified statistics to make decisions. It must not have a bias towards any particular breed of dog.
- That the dog not be euthanized.
- The individuals acting in the tribunal must be able to present some credentials of higher education, such as a degree or diploma.
- Appropriate rehabilitation measures are sought-after before euthanasia
- The owner is able to prove that the dog bit another person or being due protecting their owner from harm of another dog or human. And that just because the dog hurt another animal does not mean that it wasn't provoked. Their should be monitoring of daily activity of the dog to see if it normally acts very well around other people and dogs. Also it's important to investigate the owners and not the dog. Maybe the owner is abusive and/or did not properly train dog. Owner should be held responsible in such cases and the dog should have a chance to prove itself for training and adoption.

- If fault / negligence was found by the owner, the owner should be fined and dog removed from the home. A responsible owner should be allowed to adopt said dog before euthanizing is considered
- Limit the sanctions they are allowed to impose, and maybe only take first time cases
- As long as the first step isn't putting the dog to sleep. Other steps should be taken first like obedience classes and muzzle/off leash regulations.
- Has people on it who are experts in dog psyche and behaviour
- An alternative solution (where possible) to putting dogs down
- The owner having to abide by the rules in place to have the dog.
- Meetings with involved parties to get a detailed history of the dog's previous behaviour. Keeping a detailed list of past issues.
- The owner is also reviewed to determine if further pet care education is needed.
- There were at least 3-5 people in the tribunal and it had decent representation and people who have been given training as to animals and the information needed to make a fair decision.
- People on the tribunal have the appropriate qualifications to make the right decisions.
- This needs to apply to ALL dogs. There are many small breed dogs that have bitten people/dogs on multiple occasions and the repercussions are not equal.
- NEVER single out a 'breed', or develop subjective reasoning based on a breed, as to influence the decision.
- Equal number of dog owners to non-owners on the tribunal board
- There is not a breed specific bias
- Fair representation
- the tribunal was composed of animal doctors and experts only.
- Case by case bias and not breed by breed and hold owners more accountable
- Fair review of the case looking at if the dog is truly at fault or if the person bit provoked the attack
- Should not be appealed
- Not looking at the dog as being in the wrong always, this is still an animal. We need to look at the owners to see if they are fit to train and take care of the dog, see if the dog has any history of abuse in its life and also look at the one that was attacked to make sure that dog was not provoked or teased or the dog was defending its self or its owner or other people for that matter
- Responsibility is put on the owner, and if needed the dog is appropriately rehomed or fostered
- No thanks
- No breed discrimination. All breeds can bite.
- The tribunal must sit for all breeds.
- The dog should stay with their owner but be on house arrest until the decision is made
- Impartial and educated representatives including people that work with animals on a daily basis.

- It is either elected by the public or it is made up of qualified, unbiased professionals who understand animal wellbeing and health care (ie: vets, animal behaviourists)
- Non biased to certain dog breeds ei. A pitbull.
- Members of the tribunal must be responsible Dog owners
- Euthanasia is the last resort after behavioural training and rehabilitation has not worked and owner continues to put other dogs and owners at risk in public areas.
- What would be the make up of a tribunal? Joe bylaw or actual trainers?
- tribunal is not bias. Owners animal records are taken into account - are they providing proper care, do they keep up to date on treatments, meds, etc. have they had incidents in the past, have they had previous pets ? Where did they get their pet from ? If from breeder, was the breeder meeting proper standards, why were they breeding?
- As long the tribunal representatives are unbiased.
- as long as the decision is solely based on the severity of wounds caused by the dog is truly looked into thoroughly
- Money was not put first and cases were looked at with fairness and empathy
- If they decide a dog is to be euthanized, there should still be opportunity to appeal regardless of the staying time in the shelter
- Depending upon the dogs attack, if it's show over aggressive behavior. Then definitely it should be euthanized! People that own these types dogs will never be able to control them!
- The dog actually attacked. Not a nip or a dog that was defending themselves.
- No bias on type of dog
- The answers for this question are unreadable past tribunal in each one. I cannot read the rest of the answer. I would support it only if it reduces stress and trauma for the dog, the owner and the injured person.
- Fair appeal process
- Judge the dog without mentioning the breed of the dog as to not attach any pre conceived notions about the dog, or prejudice.
- The dog doesnt go back to the owner while this is being determined, people with vicious dogs are not responsible enough to follow restrictions.
- As long as they are not biased and hating the breed that was on trial. YOU CAN NOT USE JO BLOW OFF THE STREETS! It would have to be dog behaviorists and trainers. NOT COMMON PEOPLE WITH A HATE ON FOR A BREED!!!!
- Reputable dog trainers, behaviorist and vets are only ones on the panel - people who know dogs, can assess the situations and if needed give effective solutions or options that are then enforced and must be followed through on by owners
- I would support a tribunal as long as it followed this condition
- A minimum of 80% of the tribunal vote is required for a dog to be euthanized
- Those on tribunal needed certain qualifications.
- Any additional costs for tribunal process be put on dog owners

- It is also an option to identify an incompetent owner, where rehabilitation and transfer of ownership/rights are given to an experienced (and willing) dog owner / trainer. If the dog is rehabilitated because the owner is reckless, the dog is very likely not to be aggressive again.
- It must be fair for both parties!
- Tribunal members would have the experience and qualifications to assess dog behaviours, coming from veterinary, animal control/conservation, and dog training backgrounds
- Do not euthanize dogs
- Properly accredited dog behavior specialists and veterinarians. Not a mob of appointed concerned members.
- It depends who sits on the tribunal and how they are elected. Should be animal advocates and behaviour experts
- No euthanizing
- They met certain educational requirements. Such as taking courses on the difference between reactive and aggressive dogs and can non discriminantly assess cases on individual merits.
- Part of a tribunal consists of parties who are a part of animal care in the city (whether Humane society or trainers).
- Offered extensive training as a first rehabilitation option before being euthanized
- Are well educated in dog obedience and obedience methods
- Pet and dog experts formed the tribunal, rather than random people who don't know what they're talking about when it comes to pet ownership.
- It isn't biased toward a specific breed (ie. Pitbulls)
- Dogs should remain with their owners if this ever happens. It's cruel punishment to both the animal and it's human(s) to be separated during a traumatic time.
- There should be certified dog trainers/ dog behaviorists on the tribunal to help come to a fair decision.
- The tribunal is not biased towards breeds and is more focused on the owner and training. I would also like the Tribunal to focus on methods of training and prioritize positive reinforcement techniques and be extremely biased against punishment in training.
- There is diversity in the appointments and candidates are not biased in favour of one side or the other.
- As long as there is no breed discrimination.
- The tribunal should include a veterinary professional (trained veterinarian or animal health technologist) with knowledge of animal health and behaviour.
- That you as a city doesn't use this survey as a way to stigmatize against a breed that is not a problem. While completely overlook the actual problem of poor ownership and irresponsible pet owners. THE DOG IS NOT THE PROBLEM AND BY ADDING TO THE STIGMA YOU ALSO ADD TO THE PROBLEM. Do better.
- I do not believe tribrunal should be allowed to assess whether a dog be euthanized or not. Review the owners care, enforce training and therapy for the dog. Do not punish the animal for a human's mistreatment. Also, multiple individuals (ie. Veterinarians, Dog Trainers, etc.) should assess a dogs mental and physical health and capabilities before considering euthanasia.

- the pet rehabilitation. Prolonging the process is hard on the owner and person injured.
- Right to request a second trial at the provincial level
- Limited euthinization- only under extreme circumstances
- That it looks at the reason the dog attacked and not just the breed of dog. Most dogs will not attack unless they are threatened, those that are threatened should not be punished.
- Case by case basis
- No euthanization for any dog, regardless of breed or attack. Dogs can be trained or restricted, it is completely unfair that a dog be sentenced to death rather than taught how to behave. That being said, a system for compensation after dog attack is a good idea.
- Had dog behaviour experts on the tribunal
- I think euthanasia should be a used only in the utmost extreme of cases.
- There is no bias towards the breed of the dog(s) and the behaviour of the victim is considered (teasing, rough housing, petting without the consent of the owner, etc.)
- Fair and honest representatives from BOTH sides of the 'training' world. IE. only "positive only trainers" don't get to judge on a dog nor do "negative only" trainers. A mixture or a "balanced" trainers panel gets to decide to ensure the dog has a fair hearing from both sides.
- I would support this as long as there were other legal appeal options for owners.
- The decisions were come to by a board of individuals not just one
- There are experts involved in assessing
- They have experience in dig behavior
- There should be one owner off multiple small dogs, one owner of multiple big dogs and a professional dog trainer. Non dog people will not be able to understand the difference good training can make on a "bad" dog.
- We need to focus more on rehabilitation of the dog instead of euthanasia.
- No euthanasia but options of different tiers of training programs.
- Reached out to canine experts to properly asses the dog, & to offer the owner a chance to abide by whichever rules needed to keep the animal without euthanasia occurring.
- Same Due Process for Owner as provided by Provincial Court; an Appeal Option not related to Court; Focus on rehabilitation and collaborative solutions vs. wielding power and euthanasia.
- The people appointed to this tribunal show absolutely no bias based on breed of animal. Breed holds no bearing, inly how they are trained.
- It needs to happen within 48 hours of the incident
- Every case must be looked at fairly/nonprejudicial, on its own merit based on facts, the animals best interest must be taken in to consideration as well. Any person(s) who have personal issues, fears or dislike or prejudice of animals or of specific breeds, color, shape, size should not be permitted or should be excused from participating in a tribunal of this nature.

- There was an actual fair trial for the dog - as most dog attacks are not due to the animal being inherently viscous, but negligence on the owner/surrounding human's part. Therefore the dog may not need to be euthanized, but removed from the owners care and placed within proper care.
- All other options ie dog training, rehabilitation are considered prior to euthanasia.
- The dogs remained in a safe place that would not cause trauma (i.e. foster home, vet, etc.)
- A tribunal is a great idea but only if it consists of experts in the field not various citizens. IE: vets, trainers, physiotherapists for dogs etc
- A reasonable amount of time is given after the tribunal decision for any appeals to be made. During this time the animal is allowed to remain with their owner. This is especially important in cases where euthanasia is decided. Owners should be allowed to be with their pets while trying to appeal this decision and/or spend time with their pet before they are euthanized.
- Have the animal spend a year in obedience training with lots of love and care and PATIENCE
- The representatives must have sufficient training and knowledge of animal behavior and must adequately consider that the dogs problematic behavior is likely a result of inadequate training rather than the dog itself, decrease euthanization practices and instead attribute funds towards free behavior training for dogs.
- It is NOT run or influenced by so-called 'animal rescue' or activist group or person. They are a biased party whose focus is on dog 'rights' and not public safety.
- The tribunal be made up of certified knowledge dog experts/trainers.
- Don't euthanize dogs, funded training and behaviour classes provided after incident
- Considers the dog's history, i.e. was it rescued from a fighting ring, has it been abused, etc. Sometimes it is not the owner's fault for the bite because the dog may be afraid or in the process of overcoming abuse. Dogs experience anxiety and trauma too. Euthanasia should be the absolute last resort.
- pet not allowed off of owners property without muzzle.
- As long as the people involved in the tribunal have never been involved in a traumatic incident. A person previously attacked by a dog may not be able to step back from that and judge the episode fairly and on its own merits.
- Not bias towards breeds
- Have a qualified non biased professional assess the dog
- Don't euthanise the animal, rehabilitate it.
- As long as it fit the actions of pet, owner etc
- Removal of the euthanasia option. Look at other solutions to help resolve any behavioural issues
- Take full consideration of the animals history and be more willing to explore behavioral training before euthanasia.
- So long as the tribunal is run by the people, of the people, and for the people.
- dog muzzled in public and not allowed off leash for that time.
- assess if the dog requires to be rehomed/additional training to be a good citizen...
- A tiered judgement on euthanasia

- so long as bully breeds are not discriminated against because of their breed. The behaviour must be first and foremost taking into the consideration.
- That it cost the city no further money as the city cannot afford an outlay like that. If there were no way to create a tribunal that netted no cost to the city, then I would not support the creation of a tribunal.
- Appropriate qualifications for those on tribunal
- Equal number of pet owners to non pet owners on the tribunal
- The dog was only euthanized if the bite was life threatening
- The RIGHT people are on the tribunal; informed, educated, unbiased representatives.
- Against euthanizing as an option.
- Euthanization as absolutely last resort
- The dog being euthanized is the absolute last resort. The dog should not suffer consequences of poor ownership
- Depends on who is on the board, very little information given how I am supposed to properly answer this question. Who would be on the board, how do they get to be on this board, what are their qualifications... etc thanks for making a biased questions allowing you to do whatever you want...
- No discrimination against pitbulls
- provided the dog and owner are not entirely and fully separated--this could lead to increased stress for the dog.
- Do not assess dog in shelter environment. It is a scary place and you won't see the true personality
- Not be allowed to determine if a dog should be euthanized
- The dog is assessed by a science based trainer/behaviourist.
- euthanization is not required as a punishment for infraction.
- Pit bulls should not be targeted as aggressive animals due to severe bite. there is no scientific evidence proving such statements. Animal would have to be a repeat offender to be labelled as a nuisance.
- Give the dog a chance by obligation the owner to get training lesson by a PROFESSIONAL and let the professional trainer make the decision.
- As long as the tribunal is assembled using a mixture of dog owners and/or professionals and has a fair makeup so that the dogs have a fair chance.
- Clearly defined process, procedures and authority
- BSD is not implemented
- Members of tribunal are proven not to hav breed specific bias
- no dogs are euthanized. owners are given the resources to train out the violent behaviour.
- There is a non-breed bias in the tribunal. They cannot make decisions to euthanise based on the breed of the dog, the potential of the breed of the dog, or anything else unrelated to fact. Any speculation regarding the breed of the dog, especially speculation that includes overlooking the circumstance and previous history of the dog, cannot occur or be allowed on the tribunal. The tribunal must be impartial and treat all cases equally, regardless of the type, size, or strength of the dog. The tribunal must be selected under great scrutiny to ensure this condition is met.

- Make sure your looking into how the dog has been living - check into the owners! They are the problem.
- Ensure two opinions of the dog are recorded that are not involved or related to the incident. People can be unnecessarily harsh, crude and vindictive. I would like to live in a city that uses unbiased reason and a lot of compassion to effectively evaluate situations.
- On first offenses, we address the environment the dog was raised in, the owners competence of training. And potentially look at putting the dog through rehabilitation as there life should not be shortened because they were adopted by someone incompetent
- Non city representatives are balanced dog trainers and not force free alliance (positive reinforcement only) trainers.
- As long as the people on it were all qualified dog trainers from a variety of philosophical perspectives. In other words not biased one way or the other.
- That the tribunal base decisions on incident and not breed.
- Tribunal needs to be fair and unbiased. There needs to be a representative from the city that is competent to discuss animal behaviors.
- No one displays breed discrimination.
- The tribunal does not decide euthanasia and qualified vets and trainers are on the tribunal
- It was treated as innocent until proven guilty. For example if a pitbull were involved in an attack during a break and enter.
- Tribunal needs appropriate professional on it.
- That it is not bias toward pit bull breeds
- Make sure said tribunal actually includes veterinarians and dog behavioural specialists
- That euthanizing is considered as a last resort. Take the time to understand how or why the attack happened and make a non biased conclusion on how to proceed
- The cases must be handled with the utmost respect and empathy
- It depends on why the dog was apprehended - does "severe" mean hospitalization? Does "severe" mean stitches? It depends on the reason dogs are apprehended.
- Impartial judgement. They should not know of the breed while deciding, just what happened in the incident. Knowing the breed will allow biased results
- Euthanasia was only considered for dogs with health issues/mental issues as confirmed by a vet.
- I completely disagree with the use of euthanasia. No dog should be euthanized. If humans aren't euthanized why would we do that to our animals?
- Fair chosen representation. A multi step threshold for offenders .
- Not to discriminate based on breed.
- Someone who understands dogs is on the board as well.maybe a respected vet or trainer.
- There was a fair investigation in the pet owner to find out why the animals behave the way they did. Most animals are innocent and react to something , for example a child sticking a pencil or an object up a dog's butt and the dog turns around to snap at them the dog should not be destroyed because the child was not doing what they were supposed to be doing.

- Euthanasia was not the consequence for first offenders. It should only be a last resort.
- Experts on dog behaviour are involved.
- Canine behavioural experts and veterinarians are included in the tribunal decision
- REVIEW THE OWNER NOT THE DOG
- NO euthanasia
- If euthanasia is proposed, owner has the option to request case go through provincial court.
- Have at least one veterinary professional on the board, allow for trials to occur more quickly and for the tribunal to not work as a way to get pit bulls euthanized.
- It does not have any breed specific punitive options; there are no breed specific conditions or consequences.
- Euthanize is the last option. Most animals that have dangerous behaviours are the fault of the humans in their life. Dogs should not be euthanized unless it is for pain measures and illness. Every dog can be rehabilitated, a lot of humans can not be.
- There is more than one person presiding and deciding course of action.
- This must be for all dogs not just pitbulls
- The members are knowledgeable and have some kind of background related to animals. The members of the tribunal are rotated - a pool of members that a board is selected from for a hearing.
- They can not declare a dog be euthanized. Any euthanasia decisions would need to mandatorily proceed to the provincial court.
- That there were people on the tribunal with a healthy respect for the fact that pit bulls, german shepherds, dobermans, etc are not wrongly discriminated against due to their breed.
- takes place within one week of incident
- Do everything possible to help the dog, dog owner and victim so that the dog can stay alive and retrained
- non-biased representatives
- Leave the dog at home under house arrest
- Dogs shouldn't be euthinized because of the wrongdoings of humans. Most (not all) of the time the dog attacks for a reason, meaning they most likely feel unsafe or threatened by the person who ends up getting attacked. There are warning signals and people should know what they are.
- Non-biased opinion of breed. There are no bad dogs only bad owners.
- Euthanasia should be banned for offences. Forcing proper and specialized training for the dogs and the owners is necessity.
- Anything to make the process less traumatic
- Provided myself or a like minded person is on the tribunal
- dogs must be places into rehabilitation programs before considering euthanasia
- Measures in place to ensure fairness

- As long as they give their recommendations when it comes to euthanization and not the final decision. Also would recommend requiring training from the owner for the human and the dog. With recommended dog trainers at the owners expense.
- There need to be representatives from rescues around the city involved. Calgary Humane, AARCS, ARF, etc
- First offence and unique conditions like someone running through a “fenced, off leash, dog park”
- That it could be appealed at the Court of Queen's Bench
- Animals that are apprehended are treated fairly
- The people running the tribunal has the best interest of the dog at heart.
- No breedism. Don't judge a dog based on what breed it is.
- Fair and not targeting breeds. Must have varied “judges”, not just bylaw officers.
- They were in a foster system, with an experienced handler
- That the person reviewing the case is WELL trained, and the case is very well examined, and the dog in question is given a chance to undergo retraining so as to save its life, and potentially adopted out to more responsible owners.
- Vet and train the people on your tribunal so you don't have someone biased against a certain breed or against animals in general for any reason.
- no judgements for specific breed of dog. the tribunal can only work if each dog is looked at on an individual basis and judged based on the issue at hand, not because of their appearance or perceived breed
- It had non biased people who are level headed and don't hate pitbulls
- Euthanasia should never be considered. The owner should be fined and the animal taken away for rehabilitation.
- Pets owners need to be held accountable for the ownership of their pets
- Experts must be part of the tribunal. Such as vets, dog behaviouralists, etc.
- STOP DISCRIMINATING AGAINST PIT BULL TYPE BREEDS
- There must be an professional dog behaviour analyst or someone to that effect in the tribunal at all times.
- Unbiased representatives, similar to a jury system .
- Tribunal members should go through unbiased education on pit bulls, or people with a biased view of pit bulls should not be allowed on the tribunal.
- The SPCA or other animal welfare and qualified people made up some of the panel.
- The owner's perspective and statement were considered and the dog's history was evaluated.
- You send the owner to obedience school. Dogs aren't inherently vicious, they are trained by their surroundings
- More than 1 dog behaviour/trainer are doing separate an assessment.
- The tribubal must review the owners as it's the owners fault if their dog is considered a "vicious dog". If dogs have to be euthanized due to the owners neglect, owners should receive jail time and heavy fines as their behaviour is criminatory.

- No dogs being euthanized without thorough review
- Dogs cannot be seized without warning, or time to appeal. Both sides of a case must be heard equally - there is a lot of misinformation and misunderstanding that can occur when people try to interpret what happened during a dog bite. Facts should not put all of the burden on the dog, or the larger animal in animal on animal circumstances. If euthanasia is the outcome of a tribunal there should be an option to appeal and take the case to the next level.
- The dog, no matter what the breed, isn't put through any emotional stress
- As long as the pet's stay could be subsidized, or paid for by the province. Not everyone can afford to have their animal kept in a shelter until it's able to make it to court. More serious offenses, and repeat offenders should just be euthanized.
- Euthanasia is too extreme to even consider.
- People on the tribunal owned dogs themselves
- The makeup of the tribunal must be dog behaviourist outside of city enforcement, protection dog trainers would be ideal
- Members of the tribunal are well educated in animal bylaw and behaviour and consist of animal professionals capable of making sound and educated decisions, as the potential euthanasia of an animal is not a decision that should be made lightly or by people with little to no experience in animal care.
- Receiving input from neighbours and people (aside from the dog's family) about the dog's typical behaviour.
- Certified dog behaviourists are included on these panels
- Who is paying for this tribunal? if its tax payers, then I do not support it at all. Its a joke
- Does not euthanize the dog. Does not take the dog away from the owner
- Those involved show they are not biased towards or against certain breeds.
- was a well thought put process that takes everything into account, and not a way to quickly euthanize a "problem" dog because thats easier than rehab.
- At least half of tribunal made of pet owners, pet experts consulted
- Would need to be reviewed by a court if they choose that the dog is to be euthanized
- The owner NOT the dog should be the subject of the tribunal.
- Support
- The tribunal does not include People who are anti dog (open minded)
- People on the tribunal would need to be properly qualified.
- No euthanasia unless involving children or death.
- Adjudicators include knowledge experts in the fields of animal behaviour.
- as it would be fair and consider all events that occurred and did a proper investigation.
- Again, not choosing a punishment towards the dog, but holding owners accountable and assessing if it is even a safe environment for the dog to return to.
- I don't believe in euthenization, I believe the dog should be romoved from owner custody and the pet owner is no longer permitted to own an animal for a set number of years. And must complete dog training classes if they wish to own in the future. For the dog we should have a government funded animal rehabilitation center to try and help the animal.

- Don't let the breed of the dog determine the fate of the dog, and before euthanasia all other routes to help understand why the dog is biting must be used
- Involves only members of effected community.
- Only for minor cases.
- If the tribunal consisted of experienced and educated people who deal with animals
- People that understand behaviour of dogs (sometimes there are reasons dogs bites. Eg. Kids playing inappropriately with them)
- Resolution for the dog asap
- Included a team of animal behavioural experts
- If the owner can prove to keep their dog locked at home during the decision period it would be best for everyone including the animal
- The dog is able to be with its family not kept in a shelter
- the owner was also incarcerated at the time the dog was.
- The dog gets to stay at home with the owner (not leave the property) until a decision is made by the tribunal.
- Made up of partly community members where the dog is located as well as citizens from Calgary.
- I support a tribunal as long as it followed this conditions
- Tribunal includes behavioural experts (expert dog trainers and vets)
- Judge the owner and not the dog
- Was composed of individuals that are not biased against pitbulls.
- Fair
- All dogs are given a warning, that no animal would be destroyed without an attempt at rehabilitation. The tribunal members should have experience owning pets.
- They should not be allowed to decide if a dog is to be euthanized.
- All breeds are considered equal
- True animal experts are on it. Ones without breed specific bias.
- No unauthorized euthanizations. (Without owners permission)
- No Animal should be euthanized for behaviours - there is a reason for the behaviour. You wouldn't euthanize a toddler for biting or a grown man for ending another life.
- The tribunal should consist of people who have knowledge of dogs and their behavior, not just general public. Your previous selection of the pit bull breed is unfair. Any dog will react and the situation has to be on a base by base issue.
- The people in it are educated about dogs and not just biased because the breed is one that is "scary". This way there is no inherit bias against the dog and the case can be reviewed fairly.
- Not to bypass provincial court and have individuals uphold their own opinions when it comes to breed specific laws or decisions. It needs to be objective.

- I don't support the tribunal deciding if a dog should be euthanized. I also don't know the regular process for this decision. Depending on the expertise of the tribunal (veterinarians vs. volunteer citizens vs. experts in dog behaviors) I could get on board with them making the assessment in euthanizing.
- Persons appointed have proven (e.g 3-5 years) experience training, walking, or volunteering with dogs
- Dogs are rehomed and rehabilitated, never euthanized
- euthanization does not occur, animals can be trained and the blame/consequences should be placed on the owners
- Put down crappy dog owners before the dog
- At least three different veterinarians, three different reputable/qualified dog trainers and a reasonable standard set of criteria that must be met 100% for euthanization recommendations
- As long as there is people with a legal background and people with experience on animal behaviors. Family and friends can attend to testify.
- Dog innocence to human guilt
- Rehabilitation of the dog before euthanized
- the tribunal is not a set of people with previous assumptions about dogs and breeds. there should be experienced dog trainers and behaviourists involved in the process.
- qualified people and does not include euthanization. It is a misunderstood and usually scared dog that requires training not death.
- There is representation by a bully breed positive group. Bully breeds suffer from stigma, and there should be representation to ensure they are not receiving harsher sentences.
- That those on the tribunal are not for or against specific dog breeds and that the hearings are fairly represented by those who support certain breeds
- The fines don't increase based on the type of dog but the severity of the incident
- Do NOT euthanize the dog. It has been trained poorly. All dogs deserve the right to have a second chance. It may cost more because of prolonged training, but their life should not be shortened because of someone's sick brain to train them as a mean dog.
- Again depends on situation
- Has broad rights of appeal
- Variety of people on tribunal/non bias etc
- Do not euthanize but assess if the dog should be put in some sort of training or rehabilitation program
- There were experienced and credible dog behaviourists present
- If the attack does not involve the death of another animal or person. Any deaths by dog attack should be processed through the provincial courts.
- First offences only.
- they are unbiased towards certain breeds. There are no bad dogs, only bad owners.

- I would want an annual assessment of its rulings as compared to similar cases ruled in provincial courts in other cities and provinces to ensure the arbitrators have not developed a bias.
- Look into the pet owner. Do not blame the dog first. Many times biting is a taught behaviour.
- A canine behavior specialist is present
- The tribunal sounds like an excellent idea. It would be important that the members are well educated and experienced in animal behaviour and welfare.
- It has people who understand all dog behaviours not bias against pit bulls as this Survey seems to be
- The owners be held accountable should it be found that their actions in any way encouraged the dog behaviour, and the punishments for those actions be severe enough that these people be held fully accountable and the behaviour will cease.
- That they are helping to rehabilitate the dog, not just putting it down
- Fair trial by trained dog behavioural specialists, with mire effort put on training and examination of the dogs environment. Emphasis on being able to remove dogs that are being mistreated, living in unhealthy environments, etc
- If veterinaries and animal behaviouralist were involved in recommendations and providing insight and education to cases. Decisions should be made based on the animals best interests.
- The tribunal should include a veterinary professional
- Could not be appealed at the Court of Queens bench
- The dogs breed is not a determining factor
- That it would not throw out cases in which the dogs were "smaller". A lot of the time smaller dogs instigate the attack, and get hurt because of bigger dogs. In cases with humans, a dog attack is a dog attack and the owner is at fault, regardless of the breed.
- Owner and Dog should be put in a training course before any euthanization talk is happening.
- Why a death penalty for a dog? We dont even have that for humans in Canada. PUNISH THE PERSON NOT THE DOG. Most times dogs bite is because their fear/trauma manifest itself through aggression. If a dogs attacking people, go to the [removed] source of the problem: ITS OWNERS.
- Any assessments or determinations of course of action needs to be conducted by a professional that is familiar with dog behaviors.
- The procedure is against the owner and their history and not the dogs, as far too often fearful and weak citizens place the fault of an attack on a protective dog and not on the inadequate ownership of said dog.
- Fair and done by a variety of pet owners
- The dog should not be in a shelter unless the owner consents to this. Dogs should have the right to a speedy trial
- Case by case
- They should not be assessing euthanasia. Many responsible dog owners can manage a reactive dog if given the chance. Especially in first offence scenarios.
- As long as there was some oversight to ensure they a breed isn't being singled out for euthanization and there was additional oversite for all euthanization cases.

- Dog stays with its family, not allowed in public or around kids or
- All costs born by pet owner
- A tribunal is a qualified veterinarian
- Fair selection of tribunal officials that are unbiased
- Must have balanced representation and not biased against bully breeds.
- It must be made up of people who work at/volunteer at animal rescues as they have a greater understanding of animal behaviour and a love for all animals to remain fair minded.
- representatives from local humane society and animal welfare groups or a zoo person, someone who has the dog's interest
- All members of the tribunal must not be anyone who has been bitten by that breed of dog, as that would lend an unfair bias to the judgement.
- That the OWNER not the dog is what is focused on . Training should be mandated and fines for the owner .
- If the panel had an animal behaviourist on it
- People need to be open minded - and knowledgeable. Not all Pitbulls are bad, and its disheartening to see here that they are being singled out.
- They are well educated on rehabilitation of dog behaviours and favour rehabilitation and proper training over euthanasia
- Based on dog's actions not breed.
- People on the tribunal have knowledge of dogs.
- Situation specific
- It is fair and just
- Did not allow for euthanasia and that the dog could remain with owners during the time under certain conditions.
- Tribunal members have clearly demonstrated experience with dogs and dog behavior, and keep in mind that the dog's behavior is due to the owners training.
- Providing the owner of the dog is additionally investigate for abuse to that animal that may have contributed to the behaviour
- Option: house arrest if the owner is responsible. Also court or tribunal should both be options.
- Euthanasia is seen as a last resort, not a regular outcome.
- If dog doesn't get euthanized asap
- No Breed specific regulations!
- Caution to classify English and French Bulldogs with "bull breeds"
- Do everything we can not to euthanize the dog.
- There is no possible way for someone to exploit a case based on breed
- Tribunal should not comprise individuals that have bias against specific breeds. Must be impartial.
- If the recommendation is to euthanize, the case should still proceed to court.
- intense training paid by owner with SPCA or affiliate. Dog must be muzzled when walking but can stay in the owners care if requirements are met.

- Remove the euthanization authority, and staff the tribunal with at least half responsible dog owners, animal rights experts, and ban appointing anyone who would profit or benefit from the position
- As long as the dog is given a chance to do better, if that's obedience training that the owner and dog must go through. But these dogs deserve a fighting chance to change, it's not fair too be classified as their breed stereotype and not a chance to prove different.
- Can guarantee non-biased decisions
- Members of the tribunal met a specific standard I.e. worked in a related field, completed training
- No breed specific legislation or prejudices involved in the process. A dog is a dog.
- I'm not sure how a tribunal would reduce times if it's decision can be appealed
- A veterinarian and dog behaviour expert assess the dog
- The dog remains on the owners property in the interim and if appealing
- decision not bias on breed, but on aggressive behavior, no matter what size is the dog
- there is a formal, objective selection process for members and training, there needs to be a balance of expertise on the tribunal and a member of the public who is not necessarily an expert but represents the community
- Exhibited no breed-specific biases
- The tribunal must have at least one expert on dog obedience/training
- The breed of the dog is not disclosed to the tribunal as pit bulls are judged unfairly. All dogs have the same risk of being violent but it is not the fault of the dog, it is completely the fault of the owner.
- There was no-bias judgement/prejudice based on the breed of the dog in question. The case would be looked at from all angles and the tribunal would review WHY the dog in question was biting in the first place.
- The tribunal consist of a group of neutral people representing many areas of life. And include dog owners, dog breeders, and behavior specialists.
- fairness and not having automatic rulings based on breed.
- If assessments are fair. If a dog is being terrorized or it's life is being threatened it also deserves the chance to defend itself
- The breed of the dog is not a factor in their sentencing. In fact the dogs species should never be a factor. The victim should get a voice so should the owner of the dog and the dog should be able to have a character witness outside of the family speak to their general behaviours. The death penalty should only be on the table after the animal in question has been sent to a behavioural specialist and they have deemed the dog unmanageable and or dangerous.
- As a former Animal control officer, I do not feel that a tribunal such as this should be given the authority to enforce such a drastic measures as demanding euthanization. I do not feel any authority should have this right barring a full court proceeding and with extensive research and involvement of professional behaviourist and veterinarians. I do not feel that our enforcement officers have sufficient training to fully assess a significant bite situation and all of the surrounding factors.
- Euthanasia should not be included in any prosecution
- The people on the tribunal would be people who have no bias against any breed of dog and be well informed on dog behaviour

- It consisted of unbiased animal experts, including a vet, a dog behaviorist, and a dog trainer.
- Dogs are not euthanized unless it is a last resort
- Determine, and review restrictions placed on a dog, which the owner would need to abide by to keep the animal.
- The tribunal needs to be non biased and not just blame the animal but asses the owners. The animals should not be euthanized unless they in rare extreme cases have no chance of rehabilitation. They should be removed from bad/neglectful owners, and surrendered to people who are trained in rehabilitating animals before placed in a new home/foster care until a new home is found. Euthanasia should not be a simple choice.
- Dog is kept with owner until a decision is made
- What background would these people have? There must be non-biased people on this tribunal if there was one and certainly not anyone that supports BSL
- As long as the decision to be euthanized can be appealed
- The tribunal members should be REQUIRED to understand that poor behavior by dogs is a result of the human element and act as advocates for the dog since they are victims as well, but are unable to speak for themselves.
- Tribunal should be clearly defined and members should be voted in and not appointed
- No euthinization of animals
- As long as they looked at the complete situation and circumstances and not just the breed of dog involved.
- Eliminate euthanasia! A better understanding of the owner-dog relationship, rehabilitation for the dog if owner is not compliant.
- Tribunal not empowered to assess if a dog should be euthanized.
- Investigate the situation in which the bite occurred! Do not just put the animal at fault! Something would have triggered the animal to bite!
- Fair & appeal process implemented.
- Time frame for this process should be days, not weeks or months. Establish a timeframe and communicate to all citizens of Calgary.
- There is ZERO bias against breeds and that breed specific legislation is NEVER in play
- Faster processing with better overview
- It does not target any breed specifically and focuses on the owner not the dog.
- with experts on the tribunal. Vet, animal and people phycologists and with the authority to do behavior testing on the the dog and interview owners
- That this is not about reducing increased trauma to the dog. Please make the victims, the human ones especially, the priority here.
- They must have the appropriate training and knowledge to be able to determine these things.
- Not biased by presumptions about square-headed breeds. Pit bull is NOT a breed. This survey is biased! The issue is always terrible owners and owners who encourage negative behaviours in their animals. "nuisance" is not "breed" - specific.

- All assessments must be done by a trained dog behaviourist. No dog may be euthanized until this step has been fully completed. And No person on the tribunal may have any prejudices against any dogs or dog breeds
- All dogs are treated fairly. Including aggressive chihuahuas and smaller breeds who do less severe damage. They're just as dangerous.
- The circumstances around the bite MUST be clear and concise. You will not euthanize a pit bull who bit a child that was harassing them or another dog that was doing the same, or any other breed of dog. They cannot speak for themselves, so we have to.
- Choosing to euthanize isn't used as a method to decrease the number of dogs under review when the numbers get large.
- The focus should not be breed specific. If the dog has bitten or caused hem then it was on the owner to take precautions and train their dog.
- The tribunal must include people who are actual experts in the field of animal behavior and rehabilitation and/or the psychology of animal/people relationships (i.e. hold relevant degrees, have done relevant research in the field etc.). Decisions must be evidence based.
- If I keep custody of my dog throughout the process
- Review the declaration and decided based on the assessment of the animal
- The dog should not be euthanized. Owner should be held responsible, not the dog.
- It is not based on breed
- Depends who would make up the tribunal
- It would need to be made up of a mix of unbiased people. Someone who knows the law (police, lawyer, judge), someone familiar with animals and animal behaviour (vet).
- Rehabilitating the responsible parties to be more responsible pet owners.
- No bias towards certain breeds like pit mixes!
- Have a dog trainer/dog behavioural expert on the panel, all owners should be required to train their dog
- If one of the members of the tribunal was a veterinarian or an animal behavioural expert, and the purpose of the tribunal was to educate pet owners as well as enforce fines or other punishment
- That they are independent of the city, nor serving the city's agenda, and they are not breed biased
- Dog breed should not be released. Case should be viewed solely on what happened and not swayed by breed
- It must include educated people about dog behaviours. Vets ect.
- As long as clear criteria is defined and personal opinion is not involved plus specific breeds are not targeted
- The tribunal should not be allow to euthanize. Dogs need to be rehabilitated, not killed.
- As long as you listen to what your people want.
- Everyone in the tribunal was a dog expert/trainer, otherwise we will be losing a lot of good dogs that just aren't a good fit for that specific home!
- Had the dog's best interest

- There is NO breed-specific legislation (the absurd pitbull bylaws) as they do NOT WORK and the City of Calgary has thousands of dogs (large breed) far more dangerous than pitbull types.
- The owner of the dog and the victim would need to be involved in any tribunal process.
- There is a unbiased advocate for the dog.
- Mandatory training until the dog is not a hazard rather than euthanized
- Do not automatically blame the dog. Look further into the reasons behind the bite; may have been abusing the animal which led to self defense
- The dogs would be allowed to return to their home, it certain conditions are met. Providing the previous owner wasn't abusive
- Euthanization is used as a last resort not as a first option
- Right of appeal to the court system
- The people sitting on tribunal have background in dog behavior, and that tribunal is focused more on owner than dog
- Doesn't judge a dog based on the breed, such as being a Pitbull.
- That every effort is made to avoid euthanasia and provide every dog and owner the opportunity to rehabilitate, especially after a first offence. In addition an animal behaviourist should be on the tribunal or at very least consulted in each case.
- Is for every breed of dog
- All breeds matter , no unfair judgement to breed types or looks
- Individuals on the tribunal have adequate background in dog behavioural training . And as this is the only available place to comment, I am also 100% against any breed specific restrictions. This is close minded and fear based, and does not act in an animals best interest.
- it is based solely on the behaviour and the dangerousness of the animal. If the animal can be rehabilitated, then it should be attempted (poss in another home). Its not always the dogs fault, sometimes its poor parenting. WHY did the dog attack should be referenced. Afterall, if someone kept pulling ur ears and picking on you, how long till u get angry and lash out?
- as long as it is fair and not bias towards pitbulls and other dogs of that nature.
- It had a
- have impartial people who have no bias against specific breeds with proper training most dogs dont bite no matter what breed
- N/a
- Proper oversight and wellbeing of the dog are the top priorities.
- the people on the tribunal are dog behavioral specialists
- Consisted of professions and community members with the education and training to make informed non biased decisions based on evidence (both of the issue before the tribunal and best practice based research).
- Educated on dog behaviour and sensitive to all parties
- there are multiple opinions made as not to take a biased decision for a dogs life. The owner gets to defend the situation. That there is NO BREED DISCRIMINATION!!!!!!!

- The tribunal is non-biased towards all breeds
- Non-city representatives must include people with formal education on dog behaviour and the tribunal must consider all factors leading up to the incident.
- The dog should be trained better and given a chance rather than killed.
- D
- There is no dog specified. Chihuahuas are more noisy and aggressive than every single pit bull I know. It's about the individual dog, not the type of dog. Replace the word "pitbull" with "black human" in every one of your questions and see what I mean. It's disgusting.
- Conditions need to be in place
- Must speak to dog's vet to get an understanding of the nature of the animal in question.
- Strict review of circumstances leading to incident.
- Dependent on who is picked to be on the tribunal.
- There was NO BIAS against pitbull terriers
- There must be animal behaviourists both a part of the tribunal, AND either that animal behaviourist or another must assess the dog and give a detailed report to the panel.
- Target the owner not the dog. I am tired of people blaming an animal that is influenced by whom they are with.
- Tribunal would NOT have the authority to euthanize any animal.
- was optional to request it to be tried in a different court.
- Rehabilitation for dogs would be good.
- Aggressive dogs should not be euthanized, it's not their fault they weren't trained properly
- How many times was the offender warned by the attacking dog, what measures were taken, how many times did the "victim" instigate behavior that would make the dog retaliate. Regardless of size.
- Ability to assess if a dog should be euthanized be removed.
- That there be a tribunal free of biased opinions towards certain breeds.
- Breed isn't taken into consideration and the owner is required to work with a professional dog trainer until they are able to properly care for and control the animal.
- No animal should be euthanized for being labeled as a nuisance. Absolutely none.
- The panel of people must be unbiased towards all breeds of dog. Taking into account the physical attributes of a breed is one thing, but going into trials with a predetermined notion of a dog is unacceptable. Cases should be treated equally, and fairly.
- Really listen to the owners and consider ALL factors
- Tribunal should involve dog owners that own similar breeds as they best know those type of dogs.
- As long as the owner is held more responsible than the dog for a lack or bad training.
- A trial and review period to ensure this system is more effective than the current one in place.
- As dog experts including a veterinarian were present on the Tribunal.
- No authority to euthanize
- Included individuals with knowledge in dog behavior

- Representatives are not showing prejudice for breeds; all parties are still heard and alternative options are made possible before euthanasia (other mandates from above like obedience classes)
- No dog should be put down for mistakes made. Make a training and rehabilitation centre for dogs who have committed an offence and the attacking dog owner responsible for all vet bills.
- Yeah makes the most sense
- Non bias
- Breed specific punishments are not involved. All breeds can bite and be a nuisance.
- Decision maker provide written reasons and it's a statutory appeal on the record. Not judicial review. Faster and easier for self reps to navigate (I say this as a lawyer.)
- that the order to euthanize should not be influenced by petitions, pit bull pressure groups, or false narratives made public by the pit bull owner.
- That there is no bias towards pit bulls and other "mean looking" dogs
- The results of the decisions must still be carefully thought out and avoid euthanasia whenever possible
- I would only support a tribunal as long as it followed why the dog bit the person and if the history of the dog is checked.(if the dog has had a traumatic past, anxiety etc.)
- Dog behavior is the consideration not dog breed
- It was based on the dogs actions and not it's breed
- The dogs best interests, and safety of ALL (dog included) is held at the highest priority
- If all reasoning is taken into account
- The other party can be held responsible for irresponsible behaviour as well- approaching the dog without permission, hitting the dog, etc
- It was professionally manned- vets, shelter professionals, etc.
- One member of the tribunal is a veterinarian.
- Breed cannot be factor in these decisions
- They would not have the authority to approve euthanasia
- Not discriminate on a dog based solely off its breed
- No biased towards breeds
- That the tribunal look at both the dog, the dog owner and the person who has reported or was involved in the incident leading to the declaration as in many cases a person may simply want a dog of a specific breed gone and antagonize the dog to illicit a response.
- Owners have an opportunity to take their dog in for training prior to a decision to euthanize is made
- Please do not enact ANY sort of breed-specific legislation. Countless studies have shown how incorrect these assumptions are, and how dangerous these assumptions can be to the dogs, which are the ones who need protection the most
- That a dog be thoroughly reviewed by over two different people before deciding on euthanasia.
- as long as there is no bias against pit bull type dogs. That is RIDICULOUS.
- Be fair to all cases and not see first time offences for some dogs worse due to breed.
- The tribunal does not have the option to euthanize, rather to rehome.

- Cause the least about of stress and trauma to the dog
- education and investigation into why dog acted the way it did. Do not punish a dog for human error or abuse, parents need to control their children and not let them abuse dogs.
- See my notes above
- They do not place restrictions on dog solely because of their breed (BSL)
- Other: "nuisance" dogs are not singled out and treated differently than other dogs.
- Other: $
- Other: .
- Other: .
- Other: .
- Other: .
- Other: ..
- Other: ?
- Other: 1. There should be a veterinarian and animal behaviourist on the tribunal or consultation with the aforementioned is mandatory 2. The animal should be returned to the owner during the trial if they want but must be kept in a leash or private property if they are not a danger to the owner. 3. Dogs who were provoked should be treated differently than an unprovoked attack eg. Little dog continuously snapped at larger dog or child hitting dog with a stick
- Other: 100% transparency to the public on each step of each case
- Other: 2 dog behaviour/ trainers on the tribunals to review the dogs behaviour.
- Other: 2 licensed dog behavioural trainers be in attendance to assess the nuances of dog behaviours for the attacks.
- Other: 30 hour training with the dog or rehabilitation program as first solution to the situation.
- Other: A "professional" mediates the tribunal (meaning someone with significant animal knowledge or expertise such as a veterinarian, animal trainer, bylaw officer, ect.)
- Other: A behavioral expert is consulted to see if the dogs issues are human influenced and if training will rehabilitate the dog.
- Other: A behaviour assessment is done by a qualified assessor.
- Other: A behaviourist and trainer was included on the panel
- Other: a canine behavioral specialist is involved in assessment
- Other: A canine behaviourist has a chance to assess the dog and make expert recommendations
- Other: A certified animal behaviourist or veterinary sits on the tribunal
- Other: A certified dog behaviorist is present
- Other: A certified dog trainer and Veterinarian are on the board.

- Other: A child is not involved with the biting. This needs to be criminal. Also the people who sit on the board must be trained in all breeds not just pit bulls.
- Other: A clear outline of what would be involved in euthanizing a dog that bit. Including questions upon if the dog was provoked or not. In that case a heavy fine on owner and provoker should be set. As well a clear history of dog could be included
- Other: A complete unbiased in regards to breed of dog. During the tribunal the dog remains home under strict quarantine orders. If in a household with children, dog an primary caregiver of dog must reside either at a separate location (hotel), or dog must be isolated from all other family members. If the dog cannot reside at a different location (hotel), then the additional family members must reside elsewhere (hotel). Separate residence is to be at owner's expense. If the owner has to leave the quarantine location with the dog, it MUST be muzzled and remain on a short leash at all times.
- Other: A consideration is always made for dogs that have never had obedience training, where the owner must get obedience training before euthanization is considered. Except in situations where an attack/bite caused death.
- Other: A diverse group of representatives with no specific dog breed bias
- Other: A diverse team of representatives, with at least 15% having a career in dog handling and training.
- Other: A Dog behaviour specialist is also on the panel, to ensure FAIR decisions on cases of severe dog bites.
- Other: A dog behaviour specialist is included in the review panel
- Other: A dog behaviour specialist is involved in assessing the dog to determine the cause of the incident.
- Other: A dog behavioural specialist be on tribunal.
- Other: a dog will not be euthanized
- Other: A dog's breed should NEVER be a factor in deciding to euthanize
- Other: A educated, experienced dog behaviourist is in attendance. To many dogs will be put down due to inexperience in dog behaviour.
- Other: A Euthanasia order should be reviewed by a judge
- Other: A fair "jury." No prejudiced people on tribunal. Members must like dogs. Must have relevant background either legally or working with animals.
- Other: A fair and diverse group and individuals making up the Tribunal party.
- Other: A fair and just look at the situation surrounding the incident. A dog can't speak so sometimes people ignore or are ignorant to warning signs and get themselves bitten
- Other: A fair and UNBIASED decision is made and more accountability is on owners not dogs
- Other: A fair and unbiased opinion as well as a structured plan for both the owner and the dog to follow in regards to training. With the option for counselling or therapy for the victim of the attack. Let them grow and understand why the situation happened and how to prevent it going forward.
- Other: A fair group of representatives that are neutral and unbiased.
- Other: A fair judgment from people that include experts in animal behaviour.
- Other: A fair trail, don't just pin harsher punishment based on the dog breed

- Other: A fair trial for all types of breeds and assessed the abilities of the owner (ie. did the owner abuse the dog etc.) if the owner abused the dog for example then they are the ones that should have to pay a huge fine or have their dog taken away and put into the care of a more responsible individual. The dog should not suffer for the owners negligence.
- Other: A fair trial, with rehabilitation for the dog and possibly owner.
- Other: a first offense. If multiple offenses, then jail time for owner should be a possibility
- Other: A full history of the dog's behavior is considered.
- Other: A highly regarded dog trainer was involved & made an assessment. This trainer should not have bias towards Calgary run operations (I.e., Calgary Humane Society) to provide a well rounded assessment without bias against the dog or its owners.
- Other: A home visit to see the environment of the dog would be helpful in making a decision about the dog. If the home environment could be a factor in the dig's behavioural problems, then that should be factored into the decision.
- Other: A licensed veterinarian be one of the tribunal members and breed-ism is a non-factor
- Other: A neutral third party is brought in to manage.
- Other: A non breed bias non city owned trainer comes in to review the dog, if the trainer is confident it can be trained and rehabilitated to a new home. If the dog has multiple bite history with the same owner then the owner is the problem. Remove the owner and see if that is the softener to insure a dogs success.. as a city we have the ability to change the treatment of animals so they are set up for success rather than failure. If what was happening before was not working chance how the system runs to better insure the success of the program.
- Other: A process similar to jury selection is put in place to ensure the tribunal is unbiased
- Other: A professional dog trainer also be present at the tribunal. Many dogs can be rehabilitated, many can't. A professional should also be there to assess.
- Other: A professional dog trainer/behaviorist is involved and examines the dog
- Other: A professional trained in dog behaviour is on the tribunal. Having untrained citizens be part of the tribunal is ineffective and likely for a high bias.
- Other: A proper behavioral diagnosis and assessment is completed, along with a background check on the owner. First offences may be excused depending on severity of the situation.
- Other: A qualified trainer or rescue is used to assess the animal to see if rehabilitation is possible prior to euthanasia - an independent third party, not a city employee.
- Other: A representative from city, training facility, rescue organizations, etc! should all be represented in the tribunal
- Other: A representative was a dog expert (I.e trainer)
- Other: a review of the owner and training of the dog. The bully breeds you keep listing are just incredibly faithful to their human companions, if the owner trains them poorly that should 100% be taken into consideration before euthanasia is on the table.
- Other: A review of the ownership and approach the situation for the dogs safety, and harsh punishments towards the OWNERS who are solely responsible for behaviour.
- Other: A second party reviews as well in cases that deem euthanasia as the option

- Other: A strict retaining regiment or a release of the animal to A shelter should be prioritized before the decision to euthanize
- Other: A third-party professional on dog behavior, such as a trainer specializing in stronger breeds such as German Shepherds, bull-dog type breeds, etc should be used to determine the dog's behavior and potential for behavioral modifications of the dog before ever considering euthanasia. Most of the time it is an owner who is unable to unwilling to properly care for and modify their dog's behaviors.
- Other: A thorough, fair and transparent review takes place before euthanasia is used as a last resort (if ever).
- Other: A trained and certified dog expert on the tribunal
- Other: A trainer also looked at the dog - to see if it needs mandatory training to assist in recovery/retraining and if that would help first
- Other: A tribunal can only be used for a first offence only if during the release from a tribunal a animal does bite a person or animal again it will be seized pending a court trial. Also of realeased by tribunal the owner must follow a strict curfew and animal must have specific restrain equipment and muzzle will be a requirement for 6 months
- Other: A tribunal member must be 100% non-biased towards ANY SPECIFIC BREED.
- Other: A tribunal must not be stacked with biased dog lovers. Dogs can be dangerous and debate around their danger is not based on risk but on polarized and emotional arguments. The tribunal should have risk based guidelines and not be free to decide on their on whim or love of cuddly killer dogs
- Other: A tribunal should be populated with people who are, if not experts, at least very knowledgeable about dog behaviour.
- Other: A tribunal should not have the right to decide if someone furry family member should be killed.
- Other: A tribunal that is made up of EXPERTS in dog behavior.
- Other: A true balance of viewpoints & animal expertise on the panel.
- Other: A vet AND a trainer is to decide if the animal should be euthanized.
- Other: A vet and animal behavior specialist should be part of the tribunal. Not just the people involved and the city officials.
- Other: A veterinarian and behavior specialist is on the tribunal
- Other: A veterinarian and dog behaviour expert are part of the tribunal.
- Other: A veterinarian and/or animal behaviourist is on the panel
- Other: A veterinarian gives the advice on wether the dog must be euthanized or not. This is a bunch of [removed]
- Other: A veterinarian With behaviour training must be a member
- Other: A veterinarian, animal behaviour expert, or similar must be used as counsel in each review of a case. Representatives involved in the tribunal must undergo a screening beforehand (to ensure no bias against animals/breeds).
- Other: a veterinarin or someone with professional knowledge of animals should sit at the panel

- Other: Abide by court standards with educated and informed members in the decision making process.
- Other: Ability to abide by certain conditions after less serious bites without euthanization. Trainer input
- Other: Ability to appeal decisions of the tribunal and have the tribunal answerable to the public
- Other: Ability to appeal the decision with the Court of QB.
- Other: Ability to quickly process a fair appeal (different judges/reviewers/tribunal members)
- Other: Absolutely NO breed specific laws discriminating against pit bull and pit bull like breeds.
- Other: Actual dog trainers be involved.
- Other: Actual experts in the field.
- Other: Again, consultation with or have outside experts who and invested in the dogs on the panel. These experts and behavioural specialists should be non-biased and not lining their pockets with corporate cash.
- Other: Again, please stop penalizing/euthanizing the dog. If the dog bites or attacks, it's caused by a lack of training and consideration from the owner. Penalize the owner since they are responsible for the care and training of the dog.
- Other: Agreed
- Other: All animals deserve the chance to be rehabilitated and retrained. Not euthanized.
- Other: All aspects are considered. Sometimes it is not the dogs fault. Humans need to be more accountable as well.
- Other: All avenues are exhausted to rehabilitate said dog. It is not always the dog or breed specific when incidents like this occur. Sometimes it's the human that makes the animal act this way.
- Other: All avenues are gone down, such as condition animal lives in before any decision is made.
- Other: All breeds and not hyper focus on Pit Bulls.
- Other: All breeds are treated equally in it..
- Other: All breeds of dogs are treated the same
- Other: All cases involved severe bites. I don't support tribunal for vicious dog declarations as the definition is subjective. What specific criteria are used to label a dog as vicious?
- Other: All decisions are in the animals best interest
- Other: all decisions should be made available to the public and a separate set of rules and procedures should be available and accessible.
- Other: All details made public
- Other: All dog breeds are thought of the same way! And none are labeled more aggressive because of breed!
- Other: All dog breeds were seen as equal
- Other: All dogs are treated equally and "pitbulls"aren't automatically found guilty while other dogs get more leniency.
- Other: All dogs be treated equally no breed shaming

- Other: All dogs, DESPITE THE BREED, is not euthanized for small bites and attacks that were for personal defenders purposes unless it is a repeat offender. Not all blame should be put on the dog because the dog owner was not training the dog properly.
- Other: All efforts for rehabilitation, rehoming with owners education).
- Other: All evidence including cell phone pings at the time of the illeged time of the incident.. All evidence be reported and shared and not withheld
- Other: All evidence is clear, heard and common sense is applied.
- Other: All information is provided and addressed.
- Other: All involved, owner and victim. Must be present to ensure a fair process. That the animal is not euthanized simply because it bit.
- Other: All members are educated on dog breeds, behavior and hold no bias to any breeds
- Other: All members had extensive knowledge of animal training background as well as an understanding of breed types and behavioural adaptations/ recommendations to training facilities were made before euthanizing the animal occurred.
- Other: All members must be dog owners
- Other: All members of said tribunal are dog owners, and have otherwise not displayed any baseless resentment towards any specific breed
- Other: all members of the tribunal must be screened for bias against specific breeds
- Other: All members of the tribunal must first complete dog behaviour awareness training and submit to annual training refresher courses.
- Other: All of the members of the tribunal had previously had personal experience owning or working closely with what you have defined as nuisance dogs.
- Other: All of this breed specific legislation is absolute nonsense. This kind of ignorance doesn't belong in 2020 - you would think Calgary knows better as a self touting progressive city but here we are. Absolutely disgusting.
- Other: all other avenues are tried before euthanizing, training, rehoming etc.
- Other: All participants must be thoroughly screened in regards to bias against particular breeds or cases that may cause a biased decision. Screening results should be made public.
- Other: All parties be included in the tribunal process. A behaviourist and trainer included in tribunal process a part
- Other: All parties involved must insure non bias to specific dog breeds and have some form of education in relation to dog behaviour
- Other: all parties must be present and the history of the dogs abuse and owners previous pet history if they train animals to be aggressive
- Other: All persons involved should have animal experiences. I am a dog trainer and the way that dogs behave is highly reflective towards how they are raised, or if they are rescued. People making these decisions need to understand how animals behave and why.
- Other: All representatives must be experienced in dog behaviour
- Other: All sides of the story.
- Other: All vicious dogs are euthanized and owners are fined harshly.

- Other: Allow for appeals after training, veterinarian led board
- Other: Allow for character witnesses. Perhaps the dog had a bad reaction one time to an unexpected circumstance, but is otherwise a very friendly and well behaved dog.
- Other: Allow input from the owner as a lot of cases don't give the dog/animal adequate representation.
- Other: Allow obedience trainers in to view the animal in stressful situations. If the animal appears to be vicious and tends to snap quickly, then euthanization. I do not support any BSL as pitbull type dogs are least likely to bite and will resort to any other defence first.
- Other: Allow the dog to remain with the owner under strict supervision and only euthanize if it's a severe case. A lot of dogs protecting their property or their pack are being unjustly put down..
- Other: Allow the dog to stay with owner
- Other: Allowance for this to be taken to provincial court if desired for alternative sentencing.
- Other: Allowed people to take their dog home while they awaited the assessment
- Other: Allowing a professionally trained and capable trainer to work with the vicious dog should be attempted before deciding on euthanization. Training for the owner or re-homing should also be required.
- Other: Allowing an appeal just means that every dog owner that loses will end up at Queen's Bench. I really don't think this is a great idea.
- Other: Allowing owners the right to make changes to animal care prior to looking at euthanization.
- Other: Allowing the dog to be at home with conditions
- Other: Allowing the owners of the dog to also give a heard statement
- Other: Allows for owners to attain behavior training for their dog in order to maintain the dog being a "stand up citizen"
- Other: Also increased provided support to the owners to help train their dogs
- Other: always offer alternatives to euthanization, 99% of the time it's not the dogs fault, killing the animal because it was improperly trained, protecting it's self, or an accident is not a valid decision.
- Other: An acceptance of ALL breeds and no discrimination based on breed.
- Other: An animal behaviour expert and a veterinarian sat on the tribunal
- Other: An animal expert was also included to address any bias towards breeds/type of pets
- Other: An animal specialist is on the board such as a veterinarian or animal behaviour specialist to ensure no biases at the hand of the tribunal board.
- Other: An appeal process is available so that biases can not be formed.
- Other: An appeal process is in place and possible in the case of euthanization orders
- Other: An independent assessment of the dog by someone who is non biased and has working knowledge of the breed involved.
- Other: an investigation into why the dog bit in the first place, perhaps it was being harassed or injured and was protecting itself
- Other: An invitation from a Non biased member

- Other: An owner should be assessed by professionals to determine their role in the dog's behaviour. Multiple professionals showed have their opinion reviewed on the behaviour of a dog if euthanasia is involved. Too many times are dogs not given proper attention from professionals before a court orders a euthanasia which does not allow for a chance at rehabilitation
- Other: An unbiased judgement of the dogs behaviour.tribynal.must be made of FAIR and UNBIASED people.
- Other: An unbiased tribunal court, similar to jury duty.
- Other: Animal and dog behaviour specialists are part of the committee
- Other: Animal Behavioral specialists for dogs are able to be a part of the people doing the reviews
- Other: Animal behaviour specialists are involved such as Calgary humane society staff to ensure the animal has the best and most reasonable chance possible.
- Other: Animal behaviourist, professional trainers etc. As advisors of the tribunal. As well as assesment of owners to determine willingness and capability to do what is necessary to prevent their dog from casing more harm based on evidence.
- Other: Animal can not be ordered euthanized by tribunal
- Other: Animal experts are included on EVERY panel to provide information regarding remediation and further training for both the animal and the owner
- Other: Animal get to stay in it's own home with conditions.
- Other: Animal lovers/experts/owners on tribunal. People without pets should have no say.
- Other: animal services and bylaw work together ass representatives may help ,, ensure owners are liable for knowingly supporting nuisance behavior ,, traning for both owner and pet with proof of improvement ,, penalties issued for repeat offences ,, escalating but no keen on ethanaizing ,, thats a call for animal services or fish and wildlife ,, ,,
- Other: Animal specialists are handling these cases.
- Other: Animal stays of of shelters and with owner during case
- Other: Animals are not euthanized based on hysteria. A behaviourist needs to assist.
- Other: Animals are not euthanized with out rehabilitation first
- Other: animals are not to be euthanized unless deemed by more than 3 un bias parties that the animal is not able to be rehabilitated
- Other: Animals shouldn't be euthanized for things that can be worked on.
- Other: Any and all associated expenses are charged to the dog owner not the taxpayer
- Other: Any appeal must stay a tribunal's sentence of euthanasia until heard in court
- Other: Any decision made to euthanize or sevely impact the pet or it's family, must have the same requirements for proof.
- Other: Any decision to euthanize or separate dog from owner would be required to be confirmed by Court of Queen's Bench
- Other: Any decisions were legally binding and that the non-city reps are subject matter experts in their fields (vets, dog trainers, etc.)
- Other: Any dog that bites any human should immediately be put down.

- Other: any dog that bites should be put down.
- Other: Any pitbull that has bitten a person, regardless of severity, is put down.
- Other: Any sentences given to the dog need to still be subjected to review and consultation. A euthanasia needs to be reviewed. Giving a tribunal the authority to make these decisions is not in the public interest.
- Other: any time spent in a shelter for an animal is trauma for the animal. keep the dog at owners home under supervision.
- Other: Anyone on the tribunal would have to be vetted to ensure they have no bias against certain dog breeds or people. Ultimately, it is never the dogs fault, it's the owners.
- Other: Anyone that was apart of the tribunal system should be unbiased to all dogs breeds. (Not be biased towards the generalizations that one breed of dog is more aggressive than others. And that they should speak to the owner and people who have spent time with the dog to determine whether or not the dog is actually aggressive or if it was provoked or had to resort to violence. And also realize that how a dog behaves is 100% reflective of how the owner has trained or treated the dog, dogs ARENT bad unless they're raised in bad conditions/treated badly and or beaten by the owner.
- Other: Anything that causes less stress to an animal
- Other: Anything that speeds up the process I am ok with, owners are the on responsible for having a misbehaved dog it does not matter the bread it's the owners fault no matter the bread
- Other: Appeal levels prior to Queens bench as the costs associated are not accessible for people with low income
- Other: Appeal of decision. Those on the tribunal are voted on by dog owners to avoid breed specific bias
- Other: Appeal process
- Other: Appeals can be made to Court if owner is not happy with result; and dog should be able to be at home with owner under restrictions, not have to stay in doggy jail till a decision is made. This costs more money and is traumatic for both the owner and the animal.
- Other: Appeals can be made to force a court hearing.
- Other: Appeals process is clearance and swift.
- Other: Appeals should be allowed
- Other: Appeals to be taken prior to any euthanization order
- Other: appropriate experts are involved as required e.g. dog trainer etc.
- Other: Appropriate experts are part of the tribunal process and tribunal judgments are legally binding.
- Other: Appropriate representatives included on the tribunal- for example, dog trainers/experts.
- Other: Appropriate training of members who own a variety of animals of different breeds themselves.
- Other: As each case was assessed to address if the dog was taunted or abused that resulted in attack. If the dog is usually a fun loving nevdr hurt anyone dog and gets pushed to a limit its not comfortable with, any person let alone a dog would retaliate.

- Other: As hard evidence was provided that the animal was at fault rather than the handler and the animal was not teased or provoked prior to genuinely attacking. If it was the fault of the owner the animal should be brought to a shelter to potentially rehome.
- Other: As it took into account both sides.
- Other: As long as a full investigation into what could have caused the dog to bite, as well as if there is a bite history etc.
- Other: As long as a pit bull advocate is a part of your tribunal. As it's obvious you're vilifying pit bulls.
- Other: As long as a tribunal could operate without a breed bias I would support it. Breed specific legislation is stupid and I'll educated, many dogs have bite force higher than that of a pitbull and singling out bully breeds is terrible.
- Other: As long as ALL breeds are treated equally a tribunal seems like a reasonable process.
- Other: As long as all dogs are treated the same regardless of their size or breed.
- Other: As long as all parties involved are able to see the status of the case at all times.
- Other: As long as an expert dog behaviourist is included in the tribunal such as Cindy Peacock.
<http://www.cindypeacock.com/>
- Other: As long as animals are not euthanize based on physical characteristics and or breed such as being labelled as a pitbull
- Other: As long as animals are not euthanized.
- Other: As long as breed is left out of the discussion.
- Other: As long as decisions can be made expeditiously, and moved up to the court system when necessary
- Other: As long as euthanasia is not an option there is never a reason for that. Dogs don't just attack for no reason they are provoked and always give warning signs. Depending on the situation the owner should be reprimanded and maybe the dog needs to be taken away but there are places that deal with rehabilitating dogs so there is never a reason for euthanasia.
- Other: As long as euthanization is off the table.
- Other: As long as it cost less to run than going through the court
- Other: As long as It does not effectively lead to more euthanized dogs
- Other: As long as it doesn't involve euthanizing the animal!!!
- Other: As long as it doesn't require additional tax payer funds but instead reroutes already existing funds
- Other: As long as it follows the same conditions as the current legal process.
- Other: As long as it involves people who are not breed specific
- Other: As long as it is a fair panel
- Other: As long as it is breed neutral ONLY. As soon as breed or type is focused on, it takes all rationality of context and circumstances of the individual dog and dismisses it in favour of emotional opinion which does not help the dog, owner, or court.
- Other: As long as it is conducted by balanced trainers and not based on pure positive opinions.
- Other: As long as it is not a one sided hearing.

- Other: As long as it is not breed specific
- Other: As long as it is not in line with breed specific legislation. The breed is absolutely not the problem.
- Other: As long as it is only made up of dog behavioral experts, veterinarians, and experts in this field. No one else should be providing their opinions on this matter.
- Other: As long as it is strictly breed-neutral, ONLY taking the behaviour (and context of the incident and circumstances of dog) into account.
- Other: as long as it refuses to support breed specific legislation. Punish owners NOT innocent animals. There's no supporting evidence that BSL works, it's purely run by fear and lack of education.
- Other: As long as it was done in a timely, efficient and fair manner.
- Other: As long as it was not biased
- Other: As long as it was not full of snowflakes and had some people on it who are level headed with dog experience and know behaviors and did not get the position because of nepotism
- Other: As long as it wasn't specific to breed, that every dog that bites gets the same treatment
- Other: As long as it's a fair trial for the dog; don't want to risk the idea that all dogs who bite get out down when there's always chance for the person who was bitten to be fault
- Other: As long as it's a first offence...the whole story need to be assessed.
- Other: As long as it's fair to the dog
- Other: As long as it's fair. Not based on breed specification.
- Other: As long as it's main goal would be to keep the dog with the order. Much like children with their families in child welfare cases.
- Other: As long as it's fair for all dog owners and not breed specific.
- Other: As long as it's not targetted towards certain breeds of dogs. Singleling out pitbulls only puts the dog in a bad position and makes it so they'll be in shelters more and for longer periods of time.
- Other: As long as judgments were not overly hasty, and took the dogs history into account. It's not always the dogs fault, not should a dog be euthanized for a one time event if they have had no other violent history
- Other: As long as members of the tribunal were non-breed biased and properly trained to assess dog behaviour
- Other: As long as not breed specific
- Other: As long as owners that have more then two offences or cases where a dog bites gets escalated automatically to queens court bench
- Other: As long as pitbulls or any bully breed won't immediately be euthanized because of their breed.
- Other: As long as proper steps are taken. There should be investigations for every dog offenders not just pitbulls
- Other: As long as said person was a dog handler, trainer, behaviour specialist, etc. Not a dog enthusiast but a professional

- Other: As long as the animal is allowed to stay in its home with its family.
- Other: As long as the animal is not fully responsible for its action as it's the owners fault for neglect.
- Other: As long as the animal is returned to its owner as soon as possible.
- Other: As long as the breed doesn't make a difference in the outcome
- Other: As long as the breed is not under question, but the owner's lack of proper treatment and training, regardless of size.
- Other: As long as the breed of the dog is redacted during the process to avoid undue discrimination and as long as behavioural rehabilitation is an option.
- Other: As long as the decision can be appealed in court
- Other: As long as the decision is made unbiased. In some cases a dog can bite someone because they are assaulting the owner. If a dog bite occurs during an assault that should be declared self defense
- Other: As long as the decision to euthanize is made by a certified, professional dog trainer that uses it as an absolute last resort if the dog is deemed unable to return to society.
- Other: As long as the dog and owner were still treated fairly. There are no black and white cases.
- Other: As long as the dog attack was not lethal.
- Other: As long as the dog could not be euthanized
- Other: As long as the dog is not discriminated against (ie. Just being a pit bull) and the investigation is thorough. Some people lie about a dog's behavior to get rid of a dog that they don't like.
- Other: As long as the dog stays with the family until they make a decision
- Other: As long as the dog was assessed by a dog behavior specialist and the target outcome was to correct behavior and hold the owner accountable vs the dog
- Other: As long as the dog was not provoked by another dog or human
- Other: As long as the dogs are not singled out because of their breed. They need to all be treated fairly and equally.
- Other: As long as the dogs could stay in home to prevent trauma of being away from owners and in a shelter. Also if this leads to fewer euthanized animals this would be a good option as the owners would be able to appeal as well
- Other: as long as the individual whom would act as the judge for the final decision holds an unbiased opinion against breeds of dog and if they can not proceed a case without having one biased opinion they would turn it over to someone else to give both personal and lets involved a fair chance
- Other: As long as the investigation was free of discrimination against certain breeds of dogs.
- Other: As long as the officers assessing the situation are trained to properly review the situation and not be trained to determine the pit bull or nuisance dog as the problem by default
- Other: As long as the owner is punished and not the dog.
- Other: As long as the owner was also being looked at. If lack of training and or neglect etc. Played a part in problem owner should be charged and dog should be given a 2nd chance with the right foster home to see if can change before it suffers by death just because of bad owner.
- Other: As long as the owners are present and able to give input

- Other: As long as the owners can have the chance to get their dog back and train it again.
- Other: As long as the panel are unbiased towards dogs and are selected for their integrity and experience.
- Other: As long as the people on the tribunal are qualified to make the decisions and are not prejudiced.
- Other: As long as the people were open minded and let the owners explain any extenuating circumstances or issues and worked towards getting the dog treatment and help.
- Other: As long as the priority of the tribunal is to keep the animals in the home and work on ensuring the animal is safe (to themselves and others)
- Other: As long as the representatives are knowledgeable in dog behaviour, etc and non-biased.
- Other: As long as the representatives aren't biased based on the breed of the dog and they look at the whole picture. Dog behaviour has everything to do with the owner and how the owner treats the animal, trains the animal, and provides an ethical way of living for the animal. The decision cannot be based on strictly the behaviour of the animal at that particular time, there may have been triggers to cause the behaviour. Many animal owners are not appropriate to own animals and should be reprimanded as such.
- Other: as long as the reps or people on the board are diverse, ppl with and without pets and definitely experts in the cat/dog field
- Other: As long as the rules are applies the same in a faster time manor
- Other: As long as the tribunal consists of appropriate members who are unbiased in their decisions. There should be checks and balances to ensure bias does not come into play in their decisions.
- Other: As long as the tribunal has well knowledgeable non-city pro training individuals. Not all breeds are bad. Bad owners make bad dogs.
- Other: as long as the tribunal included people like veterinarians, trainers, behaviorist, etc. and not just a bunch of random people who may have prejudices against certain breeds.
- Other: As long as the tribunal includes a significant number of dog behavioral specialists, veterinarians, and professionals with reasonable qualifications to asses dog behaviors.
- Other: As long as the tribunal includes several dog owners of large breed dogs.
- Other: As long as the tribunal is composed of subject matter experts that have relevant experience to back this up. It cannot be composed of office workers/no experience people.
- Other: As long as the tribunal is impartial and representative of the differing opinions in the matter at hand
- Other: As long as the tribunal is not biased based on breed of dog (ie pitbulls and other similar breeds)
- Other: As long as the tribunal is not biased to dog breed
- Other: As long as the tribunal looked into allowing for training and studying why the dog has aggressive behaviour first before being considered to be euthanized.
- Other: As long as the tribunal maintains an equal number of individuals that are experienced in handling and rehabilitating dogs.

- Other: As long as the tribunal members are sufficiently qualified in law, statistics, biases, and take a comprehensive examination of the evidence and circumstances. There must be thorough screening of tribunal members for personal biases against particular breeds of dog.
- Other: As long as the tribunal stayed neutral when reviewing the dog and the reason for the incident (ie: don't assume a "pit bull type dog" was at fault automatically because of it's breed. Another breed of dog may have instigated the incident.
- Other: As long as the tribunal was made up of experts in the dog field, eg. trainers, behaviour its. Not people that have no experience with dogs and have preconceived notions of certain breeds
- Other: As long as the tribunal was made up of well versed individuals and people that were knowledgeable about animal behaviors
- Other: As long as the tribunal was not biased towards the breed of dog.
- Other: As long as the tribunal was run and heavily influenced by people involved with taking care of animals, and who care about animals. Focus should be on rehabilitation and finding solutions other than euthanasia.
- Other: As long as the tribunal wasn't biased.
- Other: As long as the victims are involved/included in the process
- Other: As long as there a thorough investigation on the body language of both the human and the dog prior and during the attack. As well as an in depth look at the potential triggers the human may have presented the dog. We expect much more out of dogs than any creature or human.
- Other: As long as there are educated dog behaviour experts involved in the tribunal
- Other: As long as there are multiple dog behavior experts on said panel so no personal feelings about breed come into play. As well as looking at rehabilitation/re hoking the animal and euthanasia being an absolute last option.
- Other: As long as there are NO BIAS to the breed of animal
- Other: As long as there is a city representative well educated on the applicable laws.
- Other: As long as there is a committee or group of people making the decisions rather than one single individual.
- Other: As long as there is an active representative of the community whom can dispute the incident
- Other: As long as there is an appeal process. I.e. owner does not agree so then pet would stay in the shelter until court decides.
- Other: As long as there is no appeal to the Court of Queen's Bench. If there is an appeal then jerks will just use the process to drag out how long they can continue to endanger the public.
- Other: As long as there is no bias on the tribunal
- Other: As long as there is no bias towards bully breads and that more blame is put on to the owner. It is the owners responsibility to raise their dog right not the dogs.
- Other: As long as there is no bias towards specific breeds of dogs over others.
- Other: As long as there is no breed specific branding. Look at the incident not the breed.
- Other: As long as there is no breed specific wording or bias
- Other: As long as there is no pre decision circumstances. Prejudgements are made and this determines outcomes which are not considered neutral and un biased. Absolutely a must for any decision made. What provisions are being considered to put a non-biased tribunal system of guidelines in place if they move forward with this decision?

- Other: As long as there is photo, video, or physical evidence of an unprovoked attack.
- Other: As long as there is some sort of training and/or the non-city representatives include those who have background with animals
- Other: As long as there was no bias towards certain breeds, every animal breed needs to be treated equally otherwise there is no point.
- Other: As long as there were 2 opinions on euthanizing one of a vet and a professional rehab trainer
- Other: As long as there's a dog community representative & other neighbors are allowed to speak up against 'Karens'. Also that this process should NOT increase the time on the case as mentioned hopefully it stays true to its word.
- Other: As long as these representatives were held to not have any preexisting bias against certain breeds or types of dogs.
- Other: As long as they are not biased based on breed (such as pitbulls being the center of attention of the city!) I say biased, when really it's a race of dog, and therefore racist.
- Other: As long as they are not biased towards specific breeds. They should be knowledgeable about the breeds they deal with and have guidelines they follow.
- Other: As long as they are unbiased toward pitbulls.
- Other: As long as they CAREFULLY assess whether a dog should be euthanized. Dogs have lives just like humans and it is not right to euthanize dogs without carefully assessing the situation. However I agree that the dogs should not remain in shelters for a long time waiting for the court to make a decision.
- Other: As long as they do not have the authority to choose to end the animal's life; only measures that the owner would be required to follow to keep their dog without allowing that dog to harm anyone/thing else
- Other: As long as they have specific, clearly outline guidelines, such as first-time offenders would get the chance to seek out training or behavior specialists for their dog, depending on severity of the incident.
- Other: As long as they were unbiased towards the specific breed
- Other: As long as they're not biased one way or another, they would have to be absolutely neutral. And be able to make decisions appropriately and through evidence.
- Other: As long as this applies to all dogs, including toy dogs that bite!
- Other: As long as those that are on the tribunal are from human society or similar organization and have intensive training in animal behavior
- Other: As long as the tribunal includes people from all sorts of background. Example) one owns pitbull or other dogs people see unfit, dog trainers, wildlife associates.
- Other: As long as the tribunal is well-versed in animal behavior.
- Other: As long as you actually listen.....
- Other: As long as it does not discriminate against certain breeds
- Other: As long as it was a faster system

- Other: as long its based on the severity of the injuries
- Other: As reviews are based on facts and not stereo types and bias'
- Other: As the appeal process is upheld and a new civilian oversight committee or existing committee
- Other: as the dog breed was kept a secret from the tribunal to prevent bias against any breeds.
- Other: As there is no breed bias
- Other: as there was no opportunity for the tribunal to determine if the dog should be euthanized.
- Other: As they do not separate the owner and the dog during the court trial
- Other: As we would a jury I would support a tribunal if they displayed zero bias towards dog breeds. Much unlike this engagement survey.
- Other: Assess the owners history with animals.
- Other: Assessed by a industry leading dog trainer that has extensive background in assessing behaviour for public safety.
- Other: Assessed by how many times this dog has broken an offence.
- Other: Assessing the dog for extra obedience training and evaluating it on behaviour and not breed
- Other: Assessment of the dog must be done by a qualified individual and not some "Won't someone think of the children" person off the street. Assessment must also include context, what led to the event.
- Other: Assumption of innocence of the animal over assumption of guilt. If the dog is to be punished, the burden of proof is on the "aggrieved."
- Other: At least 1 member is a certified dog trainer and NO members are involved in anti pet ownership movement
- Other: At least half of the people on the tribunal are familiar with dog behavior and breed temperaments and training
- Other: At least half of the tribunal is composed of qualified members (bylaw officers, veterinarians, certified dog trainers, etc..)
- Other: At least one member is a vet and one member is an animal shelter staffer or rescue member.
- Other: At least one member is a veterinarian, and one is a licensed dog trainer
- Other: At least one member must be a dog trainer, understand whether a dog exhibits behaviours that would allow it to be rehabilitated
- Other: At least one member of tribunal must be a dog veterinarian or have another valid license that they know about dogs (ie: trainer?)
- Other: At least two assessments are done on dogs declared vicious as to avoid bias
- Other: attempt to get rid of or balance bias. This involves advocates for and against bully breeds that attempt impartial judgement
- Other: Attempts should be made to corrects dogs behaviour and/or have the dog re-homed to a more suitable owner.
- Other: Avoid bias. I worry that a single circuit could become corrupt. There should be representatives from various rescue organizations (not Alberta SPCA or Calgary Humane as they do are infamous for their own problems). There should be certified trainers and people experienced with rehabilitation. Tests should be fair and humane. For example, the fake hand on a stick is a terrible test of true aggression.

- Other: avoid euthanize and provide training classes first to see if the dog improves, all dogs deserve second chances, it could come down to poor training or inexperienced owners who should get the help they need
- Other: B
- Other: Bad owners are put in jail and dogs go to rehabilitation for a better home.
- Other: Bad ownership leads to a bad dog. If an owner wont train their dog regardless of breed, thats what makes a bad dog. Human owners are just as responsible for the dog bite as the dog its self. All dogs require formal training. All dog owners should by law have to attend obedience training regardless of dog size or breed.
- Other: Balanced tribunal, including breed specialists
- Other: Bbv
- Other: Be fair
- Other: Be judged on the behavior of the dog and not be breed specific.
- Other: Be made fully public. Have follow up to make sure conditions are met moving forward.
- Other: Be made public.
- Other: Be reasonable and look at all angels of the incident with NO prejudice towards the breed of the dog. I'd also recommend having a voice of 4-8 people if the decision is leaning towards Euthanization
- Other: BE SMART ABOUT IT
- Other: Because it should
- Other: before I utting an animal down, the owner has to take the dog through extensive training to try to rehabilitate the dog.
- Other: Behavioral training must be offered to the owner, largely to review the behavior of the owner. If the owner does not comply, they are not fit for ownership of animals hereafter.
- Other: Behaviour of dogs is trained by the owner. There are no bad dogs just bad owners.
- Other: Behaviour specialists to the specific breed are part of the tribunal.
- Other: Behavioural/training experts from industry involved in the tribunal - reps from rescues, trainers, etc
- Other: Behaviouralist and owner have not been able to come to a reasonable conclusion before discussing euthanasia
- Other: Being biased against a certain breed because of something or anything and taking into account the animals past history and the past history of the other animal parties involved
- Other: Being fair and comprised of an expert panel or individuals with understanding of dog behaviour who diligently assess any and all factors leading up too or being the cause of the incident. Strong consideration needs to be considered and all options exhausted prior to ending a dogs/animals life.
- Other: Being fair and unbiased. Not over stepping their powers. Looking at all scenarios. Fir example maybe the dog was provoked.

- Other: best interest for owner and dog
- Other: Best interest for the dog
- Other: better attention to both sides of a story when a bite is concerned. Many times the bite is provoked and the dog is acting defensive. I do not support the euthanasia of animals when the court or tribunal only agrees with the person bit while not considering past actions of the animal itself.
- Other: Better for the dogs
- Other: Binding decisions, as in a judicial atmosphere, that had the same effect as a court decision. The members would also need to be experts in the area of the animal bylaw and responsible ownership.
- Other: Binding results - no loop holes for owners if dogs are deemed high risk/ vicious.
- Other: Blame is on the owner, training, household factors, explicit details on the exact situation. All those reviewing, making decisions and holding ANY power must NOT be afraid of dogs. must have an animal background. Must have someone who trains animals. Must have someone to analyze the owners mental state. If you disallow this, you are allowing systemic racism on a canine front to allow innocent or fixable dogs to be killed.
- Other: Blind breed reviews.
- Other: Board certified behaviourist should be consulted. Breed biases should not be considered.
- Other: Both owner and person who got bit attends as well as have a dog training specialist present.
- Other: Both parties were able to bring witnesses
- Other: Both the owner of the dog and the victim consent to the tribunal instead of the regular court process.
- Other: Both the owner of the dog and the victim must have a voice in the tribunal!
- Other: Breed bias must not be a part of the decision making process (i.e. results of the tribunal should be based on dog/owner behaviour and not how scary the dog is.
- Other: breed discrimination isn't in play
- Other: Breed is not discriminated
- Other: Breed NOT be listed or discussed during tribunal and at least one DVM sit on each tribunal
- Other: Breed of dog must not be a factor, but environment the animal is kept in should be considered.
- Other: Breed of the dog is not included in tribunal to mitigate bias.
- Other: Breed should not play a role in euthanizing the dog. Although it may cause more damage, it you wouldnt put down a small dog it seems unfair to put down a larger one for the same type incident.
- Other: Breed should to be a factor. Pit bulls have the same strength as labs, but labs are not penalized the same way.
- Other: Breed specific labeling was not included in the decision making process
- Other: Breed specification is left out of the conversation
- Other: bsl is a [removed] law , when small dogs are found to be more aggressive than bigger breeds.... if your gunna do that ban all dogs not just one breed because they look scary

- Other: Bsl legislation is not a consideration of any terms. All dog get the same treatment
- Other: Built up of professionals experienced with dogs, and the issues/incidents they'll be a part of
- Other: But the people involved actually had some experience in enforcement
- Other: Can be appealed in a timely manner
- Other: Can it be harsher based on being breed specific, for any type of dog.
- Other: Can not discriminate based on breed
- Other: Cannot be biased against any type of breed. Pitbulls included.
- Other: Cannot be biased based on breed.
- Other: Cannot decide if a dog should be euthanized. Can only decide where the dog stays during the waiting period and what conditions are on the owner during this time
- Other: cannot euthanize. Restrictions only.
- Other: Cannot hand out euthanization sentences - must proceed to provincial court - and all mitigating circumstances must be presented and accounted for.
- Other: Cannot know the animal or owner and has to be an unbiased opinion.
- Other: Cannot make decision to euthanize
- Other: Case by case scenarios and input from dog behaviorists and vets
- Other: Cases be investigated thoroughly and dogs be assessed throughly. Owners are a huge part of why dogs are involved in these types of incidents. Don't punish an animal for the failure of the human. If the dog can be retrained, the owner should be fined and either given the option to train with strict requirements, or dog surrendered and given a chance with another owner/family after being retrained, at the expense of the previous owner.
- Other: Cases must allow appeals.
- Other: Cases where the tribunal believes euthanization is necessary should require mandatory review at the Court of Queens Bench
- Other: Certain breeds are not picked on or singled out
- Other: Certified CPDT-KA dog trainers are included in the process.
- Other: Certified behavioural professionals were involved
- Other: Certified dog behaviourists and those well trained in dog behaviour are involved in the decision making.
- Other: Certified dog trainers are involved in determining the future of the dog. In some cases this may involve determining the family does not have the ability to work with the dog, or the dog is truly in able to rehab, or more training and additional restrictions are needed. The tribunal should be made up of people who understand dog behaviour, and have shown success in retraining in the past.
- Other: CertifiedAnimal behaviorists are involved in the tribunal process with their recomendations holding more "weight" than those without indepth animal behavior and obedience training back ground.
- Other: Checking up on accountability
- Other: Clear process, qualified panelists, written reasons.

- Other: Clear, concise and plain language terms of reference be established for the tribunal members. Member base be equally comprised and include industry advocates. Not funded in any way by political parties. Absolute transparency for every decision made.
- Other: Closely follow existing laws and fines to minimize appeals
- Other: Collect statements from persons knowing the dog
- Other: Community oversight
- Other: Comprised solely of certified veterinary behaviourists as general public, rescue workers, vets etc. do not possess the knowledge to assess for euthanization
- Other: conditions to appeal the tribunal's decision if needed.
- Other: Consider if the dog was provoked. A dog who bites because its owner was attacked or someone was throwing rocks at it deserves a second chance, you can't blame them for self or owner defense.
- Other: Consider past training the dog has had, past medical records
- Other: Consider ways on which to prevent the euthanization. think of other alternatives for the dog first.
- Other: Considering re-homing of nuisance dog to home that can deal with behavioural issues prior to ordering euthanasia.
- Other: Considers the owner to have pet taken back home. Not all dogs are bad dogs and need to sit in shelters.
- Other: Consisted of experts in dog behavior
- Other: consisted of various animal care professionals which needed to make decisions based on majority to prevent misguided decisions.
- Other: Consistent application and interpretation of these rules would be necessary, and there should be a mechanism in place to perform a thorough investigation of the circumstances.
- Other: Consult from the ABVMA
- Other: Consultation with a qualified dog behaviourist with a background in aggressive behaviour and bite risk assessment.
- Other: Consulted with actual accredited experts regarding canine behavior- ie a veterinary behaviorist. Based on questions above the City of Calgary has nonplace assessing these circumstances and has a lot of further research to do to even begin learning who to consult.
- Other: contained a person with a degree in animal psychology
- Other: Cost covered by pet owner
- Other: Could be over ruled
- Other: Could not decide if the animal was to be euthanized
- Other: council members are not biased against certain breeds
- Other: Court is still on option if desired
- Other: Dddd
- Other: Decision makers would have to have extensive experience in animal behaviour

- Other: Decisions are based on the actual history of the animal rather than bias towards or against any specific breed.
- Other: Decisions are based solely on an individual dog without breed considerations.
- Other: Decisions made by many objective people (like a jury).
- Other: Decisions on euthenization should continue to be handled by court
- Other: Decisions should be made based on consistent guidelines
- Other: Decisions were made based off an animals training and behavior and NOT their breed. Punishing a dog because the owner is incompetent is horrible. Measure the dogs temperment individually with dog trainers/behavioralists so an independent and unbiased reflection of the dog's behavior. Any sort of trial or tribunal should also assess the owner's skills and behaviors before it can make a final decision on an animal.
- Other: Deep review of interim orders before euthanasia
- Other: Definition of severe bite needs to be well defined and not open to interpretation
- Other: demonstrate the cost / benefit analysis of creating more bureaucracy
- Other: Depend how the plan to review and assess the dog and situation. As most incidences are a result of uneducated owners not on the breed of the dog
- Other: Depends on who the representatives are that are making the decision.
- Other: Depends who is on the tribunal. Must be pro-dog people not all negative people.
- Other: Determination of the case outcome is ONLY done with a panel of persons highly qualified in canine behaviour. Dogs should not be held responsible for the mistakes of humans.
- Other: Determine & review restrictions placed on dog, which owner would need to abide by to keep the dog
- Other: Determine & review restrictions which the owner would abide by
- Other: Determine and review restrictions placed on a dog, which the owner would need to abide by to keep the animal
- Other: Determine, and review restrictions placed on a dog
- Other: Determine, and review restrictions placed on a dog, which the owner would need to abide by to keep the animal
- Other: Determine, and review restrictions placed on a dog, which the owner would need to abide by to keep the animal, or be placed in a foster home that has dog training experience to work on the behavior
- Other: Determine, and review restrictions placed on a dog, which the owner would need to abide by to keep the animal.
- Other: Determine, and review restrictions placed on a dog, which the owner would need to abide by to keep the animal. No animal should be put to death because humans decide to make bad decisions.
- Other: Did not discriminate against certain dog breeds in order to speed up processing times
- Other: Did not discriminate against pit bulls
- Other: Did not discriminate against specific dog breeds

- Other: Did not euthanize dogs, but rather explored restorative options such as strict policies on wearing a muzzle/leash/etc. For public protection after an incident
- Other: Did not have the right to make euthanization decisions - only to place restrictions on the dog.
- Other: Did not into account the breed of the animal, only how it's being raised and housed.
- Other: Did the dog bite in defence? If so other measures should be taken.
- Other: Did the owner or owners train the animal and act in such a manner that sole blame cannot be placed on the dog for the issue at hand. Irresponsible pet owners should face fines/penalties before the pet does, especially if the owner is the reason for the pets behaviour.
- Other: Didn't euthanize the dog
- Other: didn't take away from actual matters that belong in a court of law.
- Other: Discriminate against dog breed.
- Other: Do no euthanize animal, require the dog owner to put their dog through training to change its behavior. No euthanization necessary unless for EXTREME CASES ONLY
- Other: do not agree with euthanizing dogs or targeting certain breeds.
- Other: Do not allow officers the ability to kill dogs right away. Wow thats asking for officers to abuse it.
- Other: Do not be bias and side with the bylaw officers on all cases like seen in other cities. Each case must be handled differently and not look at the dog as the aggressor in all cases
- Other: Do not decide the euthanize part
- Other: Do not discriminate against certain breeds
- Other: Do NOT discriminate based off breed
- Other: Do not discriminate by dog breed, and make sure members are well educated about dog training/behaviour and are not just concerned citizens
- Other: Do not euthanize the dog. Often people lack the money needed to properly train a dog. The city should be focussed on reducing nuisance dogs by not killing them but giving them what they need to become better. You people need to give these dogs chances and resources to improve. This is ridiculous
- Other: Do not euthanize the poor dog, it is not their fault, it is the owners fault for not properly training the animal.
- Other: Do not have the power to euthanize only court should have that power
- Other: Do not hire, ill informed people to do the job of evaluations, have education available and classes to send the owner and dog for training and behaviour management.
- Other: DO NOT PUT DOWN DOGS BASED ON ONE PERSONS ASSESSMENT and they should be trained in dog training and psychology to understand that a lot of bites are due to poor human training, and dogs with anxiety. Also taking into account the victims actions, if the owner said do not pet my dog and they did anyways, that is not okay and the owner should not be liable. Perhaps do not pet vests optional for people who do not want strangers coming up and petting their dogs.
- Other: Do not represent breed specific biases

- Other: Does not discriminate against Specific breeds. Small breed dogs bite just as often but are taken less seriously. These small breed dogs cause fights in dog parks and cause larger dogs to be blamed
- Other: Does not discriminate based on breed
- Other: Does not discriminate by dog breed.
- Other: Does not go based on breed but temperament of the dog
- Other: Does NOT include breed specific legislation
- Other: Does not increase taxes
- Other: Does not lean towards and breed specific bias. If more pitbull type dogs are being put down we will know that this is caused by a bias and that the system is not working.
- Other: Does not provide the authority to euthanize
- Other: Does not put dogs down unless they've been involved in several incidents. Not just one.
- Other: Does not request euthanasia. Euthanasia orders/requests (unless agreed upon by the owner) should go to Court of Queens Bench
- Other: Does not result in more lax sentencing or the increased likelihood that a dangerous dog will reoffend.
- Other: Does not show bias or prejudice against specific breeds of dog.
- Other: Does not support breed specific bylaws
- Other: Does not support breed specific language. Pit bulls are not the only breeds who bite. In fact, many pit bulls have never harmed a fly.
- Other: Does should NEVER be euthanized
- Other: Doesn't have pre existing bias against pit bulls
- Other: Doesn't increase taxes or pet licence fees
- Other: Doesn't judge by one dogs breed.
- Other: Doesn't euthanise for first offenses or based on breed.
- Other: doesn't take time away from other cases.
- Other: Dog aggression needs to be better assessed in this proposal. Chihuahuas have way higher rates of aggression and these little demons are still allowed in dog parks.
- Other: Dog and owner and trainer work together.
- Other: Dog behavior should be reviewed by a dog behaviour specialist and obedience training should be attempted before euthanasia is required. Euthanasia is last resort, and the owner should also face a consequence such as a fine or a period of time where they can not own a dog.
- Other: Dog behaviour experts currently working in the industry must have representation and their advice should carry more weight than other nonqualified representatives.
- Other: Dog behaviour experts were part of the tribunal panel
- Other: Dog behaviour specialist was called in to work with the owner and dog. Also look at dog psychology and body language and determine if one dog was instigated before attacking. Dogs do not "just attack"
- Other: Dog breed discrimination does not have a role in this rule.

- Other: Dog cannot be declared vicious before an event. If a dog is being considered vicious the tribunal needs to take the situation into consideration. If a dog has been trained to protect the household and someone comes in and threatens then the dog has acted according to his training. When dogs are being punished, the tribunal needs to look at the owners and how/if the owners are training their dog.
- Other: Dog did not need to stay in a shelter
- Other: Dog experts were involved
- Other: Dog experts would be placed on the panel as well as full medical assessment to determine if pain or other medical issues caused the attack
- Other: dog has attacked or injured a PERSON, unprovoked
- Other: Dog has demonstrated repeat biting and owner is not being a responsible pet owner
- Other: Dog hasn't improved
- Other: dog is evaluated by a professional no-force trainer.
- Other: Dog is left in owners possession. Putting animal in shelter lowers chances of rehabilitation
- Other: Dog is NOT Euthanized!! Dog returned to owner! The individual bitten must take a course in how to approach dogs....let see if they pass!!!
- Other: Dog is taken away from owner and is thoroughly assessed and given a second chance. If dangerous behaviour is still present then there may be no choice to euthanize the animal
- Other: Dog is to be muzzled and cant go parks. Obedience training required for owner and dog. If they dont listen remove dog.
- Other: Dog must be given a fair and unbiased chance.
- Other: Dog must be kept at home until decision is made (exception would be a vet visit) Bylaw has authority to make decision to keep the dog at AS if they feel the owner will not or cannot abide with keeping dog at home. Time limit that tribunal must meet and make a decision. ie. 14 days
- Other: Dog must be observed in an unthreatening setting to ensure behaviour is not considered typical. An unbiased and accredited dog trainer should also be a representative in the tribunal
- Other: dog must go to obedience class and not be put down
- Other: Dog must not leave the owners property other than vet and training location
- Other: Dog must stay on owner property and be muzzled on walks.
- Other: dog not allowed in public parks/areas, must be on-leash at all times, must be muzzled
- Other: Dog owner a requirement to be on tribunal
- Other: Dog owner can have input and provide steps they are willing to take when an offense has occurred.
- Other: Dog owners must be on the tribunal
- Other: Dog owners of a similar breed are majority on the board to prevent bias on certain breeds.
- Other: Dog owners of pit bulls
- Other: Dog remains in owner's care under as removal from known space agitated animals.
- Other: Dog remains in owner's care while they wait for court.
- Other: Dog remains in the household of the owner, not in a shelter.

- Other: Dog remains on owners property
- Other: Dog remains with owner.
- Other: Dog shall remain in its home until case is resolved.
- Other: dog should ALWAYS be put back into the care of the owner. taking away a pet will just cause it stress and resources.
- Other: Dog should not be euthanized . Thorough assessment should be completed and required training for owner and dog until improvement is noted
- Other: Dog should remain at home while case is pending but not be allowed in public areas
- Other: Dog should stay in owners care while decision is being made. Dogs are part of your family and if it is determined that the dog is to be euthanized, the family should be allowed to spend that time with their family member.
- Other: Dog should stay with owner unless visible to show aggression
- Other: Dog should stay with the owner but be on house arrest.
- Other: Dog stays in their environment while under review.
- Other: Dog trainers or behaviour specialist is part of tribunal for the unbiased look at the dogs potential for rehabilitation
- Other: Dogs AND OWNERS should be put through obedience training before decision of euthanasia
- Other: Dogs apparent breed is not used to support decision.
- Other: Dogs are able to remain quatantined at home, if it is safe to do so (ie. the victim does not reside in the home), while the process is ongoing.
- Other: Dogs are able to stay with the family during the deciding time, and training/therapy for dog can be done. 2 strikes rule.
- Other: Dogs are assessed based on behavior, not the breed. Also, further dog training as an alternative to euthanization
- Other: Dogs are not auto euthanized unless attack was unprovoked
- Other: dogs are not euthanized
- Other: Dogs are not euthanized - owners are charged.
- Other: Dogs are not euthanized. All dogs are born with love. Humans teach them or neglect to teach them and that's what causes violent dogs. It's not their fault. Instead of euthanasia, mandatory obedience classes should be taken.
- Other: Dogs are not judged by their breed being a pit bull. Should be fairly judged by actual actions and dog behaviour, not breed.
- Other: Dogs are not viscous they are made viscous. There should be a strong strong assessment of a dog before any euthanasia is suggested
- Other: Dogs are rehabilitated and sent to training courses with their owners before euthanasia is considered
- Other: Dogs aren't put down for owners mistakes/ poor training. Dogs should be given to a new owner and taken care of /trained. Dogs aren't dangerous , bad owners are. And pit bulls especially shouldn't be punished, their not vicious dogs at all.

- Other: Dogs awaiting case review should be kept if possible in foster care rather than kennels in order to minimize emotional trauma to the animal. Dogs that seriously attack should be removed from their owner and put up for adoption with obedience/ behavioural school requirements. In these cases the dog should not be held accountable and should not be punished with euthanasia - it is the owner who should be held accountable (why wasn't this dog properly trained, why wasn't it on a leash or in a yard, why was aggressive behaviour encouraged, etc.). If the attack is minor behavioural classes should be required and the person investigated (perhaps while the dog is held in a shelter or foster home).
- Other: Dogs can relearn behaviour; how about training the owner how to handle the dog.
- Other: Dogs could remain at home with conditions placed on them while the process is taking place. Appeals also need to be quick and efficient.
- Other: DOGS DO NOT NEED TO BE EUTHANIZED
- Other: Dogs get a chance for rehabilitation over euthanasia
- Other: Dogs may not be euthanized due to a bite or other act or aggression - we don't have punishments that serious for murders and rapist, so why would we have it for a dog?
- Other: Dogs must be allowed to go through a rehabilitation program to improve behaviour before being considered as a subject for euthanasia.
- Other: Dogs must be contained and appropriately muzzled as needed" prohibited from dog parks and perhaps prohibited from walking during normal hours in which a child may be present
- Other: Dog's owner given the right to speak in defence of the dog with corroborating evidence of dogs demeanor, and situational circumstances to the incident.
- Other: Dogs should be assessed by a trained dog behaviourist
- Other: Dogs should be allowed with owners unless they harmed the owner.
- Other: Dogs should be assessed by a behaviorist. If the owner is unfit to care for the dog or get proper training to help the dog they shouldn't have dogs. Not every dog that bites is aggressive. Owners should be responsible in getting proper training at the first warning. Before the situation is allowed to escalate.
- Other: Dogs should be offered help and assessed by certified dog trainers to determine the threat of the animal and the likelihood of a repeat offence, rather than being assessed by personnel who don't necessarily understand the psychology of the animal.
- Other: Dogs should be revoked if the owner is incompetent not put down.
- Other: Dogs should NEVER be euthanized due to an outlash. Research should be done into the home life of the dog and it should be enrolled immediately into rehabilitation/ training classes. If we were to euthanize every person that made a mistake there would be no one left. It is disgusting that a life could mean that little.
- Other: Dogs should not be euthanized. Any behaviour that has been exhibited is due to human error.
- Other: Dogs should NOT be judged on appearance at all. Dogs should not be judged solely within a strange and threatening environment.
- Other: Dogs should not be put down for biting instead extensive obedience classes should be required. Most of the dogs who bite are afraid- remember there are no bad dogs just bad dog owners. Also sometimes people are insistent on coming up to dogs even if the owner says no- sometimes the bite is the fault of the person who approaches after being told not to.

- Other: Dogs should NOT be put down for their owners not training or taking proper care of them. That is incredibly unfair to the animal.
- Other: Dogs should not be separated from their owner unless the owner is neglecting their dog
- Other: Dogs should not EVER be euthanized. A dog bite is a result of either a) poor leadership from the owner or b) being antagonized by the victim. Depending on the what the tribunal determines it should either result in a fine to the owner and both them and the dog will report for mandatory obedience training or b) a fine to the victim for disturbing the peace/assault and a mandatory class on how to properly behave around dogs so that they can read language cues.
- Other: Dogs stay in home with owner during review process - May have to abide by staying on property order no taking pet elsewhere
- Other: Dogs that are apprehended should not be returned to the owner as often the owners is the cause of the poor behavior in the dog. The dog should be placed into care of a foster home that is able to dedicate the time to training and correct the dog's behavior.
- Other: Dogs well being as in care is put first
- Other: Dogs were allowed to stay home with owners during this time period and instead of immediately seizing the dog bylaw officers should impose a standard that owners must immediately start training with their pet. The tribunal should have a registered dog trainer to access dogs before making the decision to euthanize a dog.
- Other: Dogs were not euthanized. Only a proven multiple repeat offender dog should be removed from the owner and placed in a no kill shelter for rehabilitation. Use the fees collected for dog licenses and the fines for repeat nuisance offenders to pay for this. Owner must pay a fine, they do not get the dog back after rehab unless they attend training and prove measures have been taken to prevent further instances.
- Other: Dogs will not be subject to euthanasia but will have mandated behavioural training
- Other: Dogs with behavioural issues only if responsible owner consents
- Other: Don't be biased because it is of a pitbull nature
- Other: Don't blame a breed, blame the owner.
- Other: Don't give people who dont know [removed] the power to euthanize someone else's family member. Use common sense and make sure the proper people have says.
- Other: DONT BLAME THE DOGS FOR AGGRESSIVE BEHAVIOUR. It is bad owners that are the problem, not the dogs.
- Other: Don't euthanize or put them in a shelter. Fund fosters and trainers to rehabilitate the dog.
- Other: Dont euthanize the poor animal, i understand it bit someone but its the owners fault for lack or taining and paying attention. I would not allowed that person to own a dog/ animal for a set # of years or not at all.
- Other: Don't just decide to euthanize a dog just because they're a troubled dog. They are part of a family too. Educate yourselves better and help educate other too.

- Other: Don't think a dog should be euthanized, should then be placed with owner with instruction to go to training or something.
- Other: don't use someone who has a problem with a certain breed of dog. This needs to be dealt with fairly, it's the owner, not the dog!
- Other: Due course where the owner should be punished vs. The dog if the incident occurred because of poor ownership (off leash etc)
- Other: Duly qualified commissioners with a well defined organizational structure and appropriate supports with robust appeal rights for those involved.
- Other: Each case is heard with the details of the case without knowing the dog's breed to avoid bias
- Other: Each case is screened on a case-by-case basis, and seen as necessary to be taken to court.
- Other: Each person gets 20 min to defend. If you do a tribunal, crazy people will try to filibuster.
- Other: Each person on the tribunal is vetted so they are not biased against a specific breed.
- Other: Educated individuals making the decisions for the dogs
- Other: Efficiency is important, but also need to be kind to animal and minimize trauma
- Other: Elected
- Other: elected members; stated clear qualifications for members.
- Other: Ensure neutrality of the tribunal by including diverse representation
- Other: Ensure non breed bias. Maybe discuss the matter at hand and keep the breed of the dog blind to the tribunal.
- Other: Ensure proper assessment of the dog by a behaviour specialist and ensure all elements of the circumstances of bites are taken into account. For example, if someone trespasses on property and the dog bites.
- Other: Ensure that a) the dog was not being teased, b) has the dog had any other problems? c) has the dog been abused? d) does the animal by law officer have an issue with the specific dog? e) too many dogs are blamed with there are other extenuating circumstances
- Other: Ensure that the tribunal members are trained to assess adequately the negative behaviors in a dog. For example, understanding the behaviors that can occur under a variety of circumstances, like seizure and detainment. As well, dogs should be assessed independently by a non-city employee that can provide feedback on the dog's behavior, prior to euthanasia. An example would be a behavior rehabilitation specialist like at Cochrane Humane.
- Other: Ensure that they are unbiased and take into account all sides of the story, including if the victim is to blame for the bite. Many times animals are labeled as the problem, but they are just being animals and protecting themselves.
- Other: Ensuring owners get a chance to make it to their appeal before something happens to the dog in question.
- Other: Ensuring the tribunal system is made up of competent experts on it that don't discriminate unfairly against certain breeds (like pitbulls)
- Other: Entirely self funded through fines and levies.

- Other: Equal care needs to be taken to understand the behaviours of the victim (I.e. did the victim antagonize the dog by running up to it without asking permission from the owner? Was the victim teasing or baiting the dog? Was the victim on private property without permission? Etc.)
- Other: Equal or lesser cost to victim and dog owner as current option
- Other: Equal representation of parties in tribunal
- Other: Equal representation of the victim and the dog owner
- Other: Equal to both large and small breed dogs not targeting large breeds
- Other: Euthanasia as a last option. Training and education needs to come before something so final as euthanasia.
- Other: Euthanasia as a last possible resort. Owners must be given the opportunity to provide further, adequate training.
- Other: Euthanasia as an absolute last resort- expansion on training centers funded for both dogs for retraining negative reactions AND law enforcement on how to handle a scared/aggressive dog
- Other: Euthanasia as an absolute last resort/ not an option. Rehabilitation or rehoming as the preferred option
- Other: Euthanasia decisions should be automatically reviewed by a higher court.
- Other: Euthanasia is a last resort sentence for an animal, only used when training has not improved an aggressive dog. A training program should be funded for these animals as it is not fair for people who can't afford extra training to have to kill their pet because of extras they cannot afford.
- Other: Euthanasia is a last resort when investigating and determining a punishment for the dog. It's not the dogs fault, it's the owners fault. Do not punish the dog for the humans problem.
- Other: Euthanasia is an absolute last resort
- Other: Euthanasia is cruel, even for a severe bite. The owners know their pets better than anyone, if the animal was being abused and attacked back, people would still choose euthanasia. Cases are bias in that way.
- Other: Euthanasia is last resort
- Other: Euthanasia is never an option. Work to rehabilitate the dogs! We do not euthanize children when they misbehave or are not taught properly in the beginning.
- Other: Euthanasia is not given to the dog
- Other: Euthanasia is not granted. A fair trial should take place before this is approved.
- Other: Euthanasia is the last option
- Other: Euthanasia is the last resort
- Other: Euthanasia is the last resort after all other resolutions have been attempted
- Other: euthanasia needs to be a LAST resort, more often putting them in a loving CALM environment will help them. I would only think veterinarians and dog behaviorist could be on the tribunal
- Other: Euthanasia of the dog should be the last resort.
- Other: Euthanasia only happens when go through all court process

- Other: Euthanasia should be considered as a last resort, after all other options have been exhausted including mandatory obedience training. Obedience and socialization training should be implemented first before the consideration of euthanasia no matter the breed or severity of the bite.
- Other: Euthanasia should be reserved for only repeat offenders. Something akin to third strike
- Other: Euthanasia should only be considered in the most extreme of situations (if the victim died
- Other: Euthanasia was taken off the list all together. Every dog can be trained in the right home
- Other: Euthanasia would need to go to provincial court
- Other: Euthanasia as a LAST RESORT, no matter the breed, age, or crime the animal has committed.
- Other: Euthanasia as the absolute last option available
- Other: Euthanasia cases must be reviewed by the Court of Queen's Bench
- Other: Euthanasia couldn't be ordered. Or a 3 strikes rule applies prior to an order to euthanize.
- Other: Euthanasia is a last resort. First train, or re-home.
- Other: euthanasia is for very very very very very bites nothing less.
- Other: euthanasia orders must go through court
- Other: Euthanasia requests move to court
- Other: Euthanasia should be an absolute last resort and the decision should not be taken lightly.
- Other: Euthanasia should be the absolute last conversation.
- Other: Euthanasia should never occur for an animal due to one person's complaints. Most dogs do not bite unless abused or provoked. Owners should be mandated to attend training should an bite incident should occur, failure to do so should result in the dog being removed from this owner and rescued by an organization that will train and rehabilitate the dog.
- Other: Euthanasia should not be an option. Rehabilitation should be looked into first.
- Other: Euthanasia should not be considered for a first time offense
- Other: Euthanasia should not be considered. Animals bite when threatened and shouldn't be murdered for defending themselves when scared. Create a rehabilitation/training program.
- Other: Euthanasia shouldn't be brought to the table, but the owner should be held accountable.
- Other: euthanasia was seen as a last resort and if the dog in question has been through the system multiple times
- Other: Euthanasia was the very last possible option, if an option at all.
- Other: Euthanasia as absolute last resort. I'd rather see proactive/preventative measures. Sometimes a dog is better off with the appropriate owner.
- Other: Euthanasia at the VERY LAST RESORT. It's depressing and awful for everyone, not to mention very expensive
- Other: Euthanasia of a dog because of lack of training makes me think you're not really for preventive measures like assessable training, neuter/spay, etc.
- Other: Euthanasia of a dog is not a good idea. The dog should be assessed by a behavioral veterinarian that could determine if the dog is indeed a problem (naturally aggressive etc.) Many behavioral issues come from the owner that doesn't know how to deal with their dog.

- Other: Euthanizing a dog is the absolute last resort.
- Other: Euthanizing a dog should only be considered if proper measures were not taken if the dog is a repeat offender, if the dog has been abused or conditioned to act upon displays of aggression and has not been through retraining or has been through training and relapses. Often dog attack is a fear response or a perception of threat that was left unchecked and allowed to escalate.
- Other: Euthanizing an animal seems unfair when we allow murderers, pedos, and criminals live when committing a crime. Most dog attacks are based out of fear. They don't attack to attack they defend themselves
- Other: Euthanizing an animal was seen as an absolute last resort and would require a higher level of oversight if this verdict was reached.
- Other: Euthanizing and animal should never be an option.
- Other: Euthanizing animals would have to be a last resort.
- Other: Euthanizing as last resort
- Other: Euthanizing is never an option
- Other: euthanizing the dog is taken off the lost of roles, and rather training for both the dog and owner is mandatory
- Other: Euthanizing the dog is the last option. Classes, like behavioural training, will be given to the dog first. If a dog bites, there needs to be context as to why it did, for example: somebody was in its space for too long and it gave warnings but then bit. There is a difference between biting and attacking. If a dog attacks somebody, then take the correct steps to stop that behaviour. The people looking at the case need to look at the owner, dogs can even aggressive because of how they were trained, it's not predisposed.
- Other: Euthanizing would be the very very last resort. Like after other disciplinary actions haven't worked.
- Other: Euthenize owner not dog
- Other: Evaluation by independent animal behaviorists
- Other: Evaluation of the dog should be done by persons who have training and experience in dog behavior. This could include people from the Calgary Humane Society e.g.
- Other: Even a small amount of power corrupts a small mind. My concern is stupid people are 95% of the population... Faster than courts is good. An appeal process or an option to go to court instead of tribunal has to be allowed.
- Other: Even dogs rescued from dog fighting can be rehabilitated. Use humanity and intelligence. Give the dog a chance. Do NOT give the human owner a chance!
- Other: Event(s) leading up to incident MUST be considered. Dogs have the right to defend themselves
- Other: Every aspect of the case should be looked into carefully. Human error and poor ownership play the biggest factors in any dog bite instance. Aside from distemper and rabies. I fear a tribunal may act to euthanize too quickly to get through the day quickly.
- Other: Every attempt to rehabilitate dog was exhausted

- Other: Every case has to be treated as an individual case-cannot be based on a previous case with similar breed for example. If humans are innocent until proven guilty and get light sentences then so should a animal.
- Other: Every dog and situation is different. The dog doesn't bite unless provoked in some matter and it should be investigated.
- Other: Every effort is made to place the dog into obedience/rehab classes before any decision is made.
- Other: Every effort is made to rehabilitate the dog, whether it be additional training, removing the animal from a bad home etc. Before discussing euthanizing the animal.
- Other: Every member of the tribunal must be a professional dog trainer with a minimum 10 years working and speaking at dog training seminars. Average citizens have no business making these decisions.
- Other: Every situation is different. If a dog attacks a human out of self defence. The dog should not be utilized
- Other: Everyone on the tribunal must be dog friendly, no dog haters, it is biased and ultimately end with more dogs being found guilty. Appeals that are made through the Court of Queens Bench be given priority, allowing for less stress on the dogs and there owners.
- Other: Everyone was well educated and no rash decisions were made
- Other: Examined by a veterenarian (ie did the dog bite from a pain response)
- Other: Exceptionally high fines or punishments if the animal is found off site or proof is provided they were off site during mediation.
- Other: Exhaust all options first before euthanasia like training, behavior modification, owner education, follow a proper behavior guide to see if they are deemed safe for public again
- Other: Exhaust all options with the dog, training, re-homing, etc. Dog bites are caused by irresponsible owners setting their pet up to fail. Euthanasia should not be the answer, even extreme cases can be managed by a rescue or responsible pet owner.
- Other: Experienced dog behaviourists on tribunal
- Other: experienced people dealing with dogs behaviour and possibly human behaviour to determine if there's a chance for rehabilitation for the dog.
- Other: Expert dog people not politicians
- Other: Expertise in dog behavior, opportunities for owners to make submissions
- Other: Experts must be involved, owner negligence must be identified.
- Other: Experts such as vets were included. This would be to ensure there isn't unfair discrimination against certain perceived aggressive breeds.
- Other: Experts with animal welfare in mind need to be on any tribunal. I'd also like to see the panel include a veterinarian with considerable experience and some sort of mental health professional like a psychologist as well.
- Other: Explore the entire history of the owner and dog, consider rehabilitation courses for the dog.
- Other: External members of tribunal must not be associated with another cities bylaw or council and must have minimum of 4 years education on animal behavioural studies.

- Other: Fair and animal is assessed to see if another owner can save it and ownership was the problem.
- Other: Fair and equal representation of experts in the tribunal panel
- Other: Fair and equitable treatment based on circumstance and not based on breed
- Other: Fair and gives owners a chance to defend themselves
- Other: Fair and reasonable.
- Other: Fair and unbiased against the dog breed and more attention to the owners actions raising the dog. Which is majority of cases is why the dog is aggressive in the first place.
- Other: Fair and unbiased panel
- Other: Fair and unbiased, involving individuals trained to understand animal behavior, and that the situation is reviewed for 'at fault' (dog vs human).
- Other: Fair due process without prejudice (although this whole segment on pit bulls makes me worry that certainly won't be the case)
- Other: Fair evaluation and the dog's breed isn't used against them.
- Other: Fair treatment of an animal. What if a dog lashed out because a person was not properly trained in mannerisms and scared the dog resulting in unfortunate situations. It's not a black and white situation
- Other: Fair treatment of the dog and place more responsibility to the owner to train it properly it is not the dog's fault.
- Other: Fair trial
- Other: Fair understanding of the reason the dog bit
- Other: Fairness and being reasonable take a huge part
- Other: Fairness and consistency, unbiased
- Other: Fairness towards a dog and harsher penalties towards repeat bad owners.
- Other: Faster systems are good but the people involved need to be knowledgeable. Vets maybe.
- Other: Final decisions on dog's fate must be decided by multiple adjudicators working independently from each other to prevent collusion.
- Other: Find all alternative approaches possible to avoid putting the animal down.
- Other: Find another home for the dog. Do not euthanize.
- Other: finding fair and impartial community members to sit on the tribunal would be very important
- Other: First hand experience from the folks reviewing of the breeds to ensure no unjust bias against the breed - like this entire survey showcases :)
- Other: First-time offenders would never be euthanized and both owner and dog would be required to undergo extensive training.
- Other: Focus more on rehabilitation and training, less on punishment and euthanasia
- Other: Focus on rehabilitation of dogs
- Other: focus on retraining for nonviolent behavior don't put them down
- Other: Focus on the PEOPLE not the animal.

- Other: Focused on dog rehabilitation or strict home- arrest type rules rather than euthanizing the dog.
- Other: Focuses more on the owner and less on the dog
- Other: Follow condition
- Other: followed law and precedent and did not call in petty revenge or one sided justice
- Other: Follows an unbiased and step by step process in decision making, including a NO BSL policy.
- Other: For all sizes dogs...even the little ones
- Other: For first time complaints only, and the dog should not be euthanized. The dog should be retrained or rehabbed.
- Other: For severe dog attacks. The dog would be euthanized at owners expense.
- Other: Foster and training not shelter or pound detention of the animal. Train the dog and fix the problem. Rehab not remove
- Other: Found equal members of the public and animal rights advocates were involved
- Other: Full transparency and ability to challenge decisions made
- Other: Fully supervised and reviewed before decisions are made.
- Other: Fully vetted and qualified to make such decisions
- Other: Fund a training program for dogs with behavioural issues INSTEAD OF euthanization
- Other: Gave the owner chances to rehabilitate their pet before you ppl decide to put them down as the ONLY option!!
- Other: Get a fair judgment of ownership AND Dog behaviour. Sometimes it's not the animal but the owner themselves.
- Other: Get another family (without kids) to foster the dog in the interm. This will show the courts how this dog adapts. Perhaps it just needs some love and attention. If that's the case then take the dog away and have it mussels at all times while out in public. The foster family can have the mussel on the dog while it is in there home until they feel the dog is safe. Don't use up the shelter
- Other: Getting money for the victims vet bills if it's a dog on dog attack.
- Other: Give the dog a chance at rehabilitation with a qualified trainer .
- Other: Good investigation on why dog bit someone
- Other: Had a veterinary board certified behaviourist on the panel for assessment.
- Other: Had compassion for the animal.
- Other: Had the stated goal/priority of keeping as many dogs as possible in the owners home.
- Other: Had true dog behavior professionals from all realms (not having a bias against pit bulls)
- Other: Had very specific authorities for passing judgement, and that the owner's background be checked in conjunction with an aptitude test for the dog; often dogs bite because they are being mistreated and the tribunal should absolutely be investigating ownership as much as temperament of the dog itself.
- Other: Has a set time line for the decision of max two weeks
- Other: Has a specialized professional inputs
- Other: Has dog owners of the community on the tribunal.

- Other: Has experts in fields like animal and human psychology to assess behaviour reasons for animals and acknowledge trauma to people
- Other: Have a background in dog behaviour.
- Other: Have a vet specialized in behaviour or an expert in dog behaviour on the tribunal
- Other: Have an unbiased opinion of dog breeds and seriously took into account what transpired to cause the dog to reach their limit.
- Other: Have appropriate representation of both law and shelter/ animal handling professionals
- Other: Have educated people such as a veterinarian or veterinary technologist as part of the tribunal.
- Other: Have members of a veterinary team be able to assess without judgement of breed and for members to assess only on the case at hand.
- Other: Have only accredited dog behaviourist assess the dog.
- Other: Have the dog assessed by an animal behaviourist
- Other: Have unbiased people
- Other: Have vet and animal behaviorist on panel to advise and make recommendations for alternative solutions
- Other: Have veterinarians and behaviorist weigh in and assess the dog and situation ie was the dog provoked or was the owner negligent
- Other: Having a certified canine behaviourist on the panel
- Other: Having the pet euthanized should be the absolute last option and to try other alternatives first
- Other: Health and rehabilitation of the animals should be a priority, and euthanization should be an absolute last resort.
- Other: Heavy fines to the owners, which can pay for this tribunal.
- Other: History of the dog is assessed, fines levied to the owner and mandatory dog training/ behaviour rehabilitation issued to owner and dog to attend IF this is a first time offence.
- Other: Honorary member of authority looks into it as an investigation.
- Other: How is the tribunal selected, what are there qualifications, will they just be bureaucrats or will they be knowledgeable in the appropriate field.
- Other: Humane treatment of the dog, and looking at the victims role in provoking the dog
- Other: I agree with everything except the pet being euthanized. Why not have a tribunal make the easy decisions and leave the hard decisions to the old process?
- Other: I am not familiar enough with tribunals to say.
- Other: I believe dog experts should make up the tribunal or be consulted on every case
- Other: I believe dogs should be allowed to stay with their owners, creating separation trauma after an incident is not healthy for the dog or the owner. I also would like the Tribunal to look at all evidence openly, I.e did the dog bare its teeth saying to stay away and the person ignore the warning signs. Did the person ask to pet the dog. Etc.
- Other: I believe it's the owners responsibility to properly train a dog. A dog should not be euthanized for a humans irresponsibility.

- Other: I believe that all incidents should be handled individually, as in not labeling the breed of the dog as more dangerous than others. The OWNER is THE RESPONSIBLE person for the dogs behaviour.
- Other: I believe unless an owner doesn't want their dog back, I believe the dog should be assessed in their environment (any animal in a shelter begins to show unnatural signs (ie: aggression/depression). They would also need to do a thorough investigation of the incident. Tribunal representatives should also have some background that would help including some that can make animal based decisions ie: animal specialist, trainers, vets, etc)
- Other: I can't read the answers so this is absolutely useless...how about city council steps down and we get some people in there that aren't completely useless?
- Other: I do not support euthanization or the discrimination against bully breeds. Section 3 is unacceptable.
- Other: I do like the idea of a tribunal, as it could be comprised of people who have a better knowledge of dogs than a judge. However I am curious/concerned as to how this tribunal would be selected and that it would be done fairly.
- Other: I do not agree that a dog should be euthanized. Take a look at the owner and their behaviours rather than the dog
- Other: I do not believe a tribunal should be responsible for determining if a dog should be euthanized. The tribunal should determine the restrictions that are posed on the dog in the interim (ie doggy house arrest) until a court date is available
- Other: I DO NOT SUPPORT ANY FORM OF BREED DISCRIMINATION. DO BETTER.
- Other: I do not support breed-specific decisions of any kind. It is NEVER a breed issue, and always a behavior issue.
- Other: I do not support euthanization.
- Other: I do not support the idea of euthanizing dogs. The owner should be responsible to train them in obedience classes or removed from their care. The dog is almost never at fault whereas the owner is.
- Other: I do not think that tribunals should be able to declare the euthanization of a pet and if that is the determination those cases should go to the court.
- Other: I don't believe pets should be euthanized for behaviour that is the fault of the owners
- Other: I don't think a dog should be euthanized for biting. If off property, muzzle in future. On property, was the animal provoked or not being watched if it was with a child?
- Other: I don't think the dog should be euthanized especially if its a first offence. Owners can be the issue as well. Or situationally, why did the dog bite in the first place/attack.
- Other: I don't think the tribunal should be able to declare a dog to be euthanized, or there should be another step between tribunal and queens bench in the case of a euthanasia decision
- Other: I don't think they should have the authority to order a dog to be euthanized.
- Other: I don't agree with euthanizing dogs that bite, especially when the people have been warned not to approach or to approach slowly. Not fair to owners and animals.
- Other: I don't believe in euthanizing untrained dogs

- Other: I don't fully understand how the current system works and would need more details of how the tribunal system works.
- Other: I don't know
- Other: I don't support euthanizing a dog for a bite. They should be put into an environment that doesn't provoke them.
- Other: I don't support having different laws for different breeds but rather handling each situation on a case by case basis to gather the facts and make a decision.
- Other: I don't think a dog attack is plain and simple. In a high emotional case as these described, I think it's a multifactorial problem.
- Other: I don't think a tribunal should have the authority to order a euthanasia. That power should reside with the court system.
- Other: I don't think it's fair.
- Other: I don't support murder. Sorry.
- Other: I feel as though if the decision is to euthanize the dog should be held until a provincial decision is made (unless the owner supports euthanasia) this will give the owner the opportunity to appeal the decision.
- Other: I feel it would be essential that the tribunal would include a certified professional behaviour consultant when making decisions about animal outcomes.
- Other: I feel like this could make the process move quicker.
- Other: I feel more detail is needed as to the training and education of the members reviewing each file.
- Other: I feel strongly that this must apply to ALL dogs not just pit bulls. It appears as though many of these new restriction suggestions are targeted at pit bulls. Too many times I have seen small dogs at large, not under control nipping at people and other dogs who are on leash/under control.
- Other: I had a dog once that bit one person, during a separation and divorce huge life change in the household..... after that things were ok until the second I took it upon myself to euthanize the dog, he had never ever done it before and was 14 years old..... extenuating circumstances may be involved. And as a responsible dog owner I did what needed to be done at the time. Dogs can be stressed for many reasons and have rescued a few over the years. Dog in question was not a rescue but got him as a pup.
- Other: I have reservations about individuals that could be biased in a case just because it is a pit bull. Also individuals should be open to all sides of the story and not be on their own power trip.
- Other: I hope that the stigma placed on pitbulls won't be reflected in the panel. The tribunal should be screened for biases as much as possible.
- Other: I need more information on how the representatives are picked and a way to ensure that they are not biased towards pitbulls.
- Other: I ONLY support a tribunal process if it is ultimately the absolute best route for the dog, dog owner and victims. Calgarians need to be assured that the city and non-city representatives do not have a bias against pit bulls or any specific dog breed and that a dog's appearance and breed is not the smoking gun for a ruling. I own 2 pit bulls myself and I find the entire bylaw review concerning dogs to be overwhelmingly bias towards the many countless dog breeds that have been lumped under the term "pit bull" because of how the dog looks. Frankly I feel that some of the options listed (aka. A limit on the number of dogs from the pit bull family in one household and higher fines for pit bull owners) to be an infringement on people personal rights and honestly just down right bias!! I honestly expected non-bias, actual sensible solutions from my city...

- Other: I support a tribunal as long as it is made up of educated and non-biased representatives. One of the members should be an animal professional (trainer, vet, etc)
- Other: I support this idea
- Other: I support tribunal - these things do need to be dealt with expeditiously.
- Other: I think a dog should be given the chance to rehabilitation, no different then the murders, rapists, and other criminals in our system that get out early on good behaviour. And like these programs, it should be funded by the government.
- Other: I think a pet behavior expert should be included to determine if the animals behavior is retrainable and or if it is a result of poor care by the current owner.
- Other: I think animal rescue groups such as Alberta Animal Rescue Crew Society should be included on the tribunal.
- Other: I think if it comes down to euthanization, it should definitely be something decided in provincial court
- Other: I think in order to be able to euthanize the vicious dog, there needs to be a review of the owner to rule out animal abuse, and secondly I feel as if the opinion of a animal caretaker (such as a vet) would be needed in order to make the most logical and informed decision.
- Other: I think it is most important to review the owners responsibility in the attack and show that they will educate themselves on dog behaviour, training, and rehabilitation. Most incidents are preventable and the owner must demonstrate their dedication to training the dog. Owners need to advocate for their dog when it is in an uncomfortable situation so that it doesn't result in an injury. The owner should be on trial not the dog.
- Other: I think it should be up to the owner to decide if the dog should be euthanized, otherwise I believe that there should just be more restrictions in place in order to ensure future safety for the dog and others
- Other: I think that a representative from the shelter/rescue holding the dog should be present in the Tribunal (and potentially a dog trainer or professional dog behavior specialist depending on availability).
- Other: I think the conditions should be fair, to determine whether or not the dog is actually a nuisance or if there was an issue as to why the dog acted out in the first place to be determined and if so, corrected in a fair and proper manner (ie training, etc)
- Other: I think there should be someone with education from the court as a mediator, to help things along. It can't just be random people.
- Other: I think there would be some non-City representatives that would show extreme bias and would throw cases.

- Other: I think you should be asking whoever got bitten and or the owner, what they have been doing to the dog to cause it to bite.
- Other: I very much support a fast-track because shelters can't house animals for long periods and it perpetuates more issues in the future, especially because often dogs are wrongly accused OR are teased/abused/triggered into biting and do not deserve punishment. In the time they sit in a shelter, you are actually creating the conditions required to cause more bites in the future. That said, I am concerned that a tribunal would be similar to the witch hunts of old, where a biased group of uncaring people who do not understand dogs determine the "easiest" fate that limits their liability. The tribunal should be publicly accountable, include veterinarians, rescue organization volunteers who are experienced with rehabilitation, certified trainers experienced with rehabilitation, and dog owners.
- Other: I want more emphasis put on the owner than the dog. I believe dog bites have more to do with the owner than the animal. I think euthanizing an animal should be an absolute last resort and only be used in extreme cases where all other efforts to rehabilitate the animal have failed.
- Other: I worry about bias with this process .. considering previous question. I think if there was a way to ensure tribunal members were unbiased, it could be plausible.
- Other: I worry that these tribunals could focus too much on the breed of the dog and let that play too much of a role in their decision. Dogs should not be judged by their breed.
- Other: I would like the tribunal reps to be people who are not constantly new (ie, a long-term commitment). I'd like Humane Society rep(s) to be on the tribunal. I'd like euthanasia to not be considered lightly. I think people are at fault, not the dogs. Different subject but please make animal abandonment/abuse/neglect a very high fine or criminal charge.
- Other: I would like to dispute any issues within city rather than provincial
- Other: I would not want it to cost regular dog owners more or be too big of a cost to taxpayers.
- Other: I would not want to see any breed bias happening. As any responsible owner/trainer knows it is not the breed but the training or lack that causes problems. I don't think the tribunal should be allowed to euthanize the animals, that should be decided in a more authoritative body. There could be extenuating circumstances.
- Other: I would support
- Other: I would support a tribunal if they are unbiased in all decisions made, no decision should be made based off of breed appearance.
- Other: I would support a tribunal with a member(s) of an animal rescue
- Other: I would support it as long as there is a proper dog behaviouralist on each case and properly educate the people on the case
- Other: I would support the dog being able to remain home with the owner during this time period, with restrictions on going outside
- Other: I would support this as long as it is ensured that the specific situation was assessed and made sure that it is actually the dog at fault not the other person involved.
- Other: I would support this if it was based on a dog's past behaviour rather than it being based on breed

- Other: I'd support if not in contradiction with the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Also there needs to be an appeal system in place for both parties.
- Other: If a dog behaves badly consistently, then other options such as rehoming and training should be explored. Euthanasia should not be an option except in the most extreme or egregious cases.
- Other: If a dog goes through the process they need to attend approved training classes/behavioural assessment by a professional.
- Other: If a dog's bite is severe enough to have to place someone in the hospital for reconstructive surgery. The dog should be euthanized if the owner is not willing to go through intense training with the dog and put a muzzle on the dog whenever outside in public.
- Other: If a pit bull mauls (Whether it killed it not) someone or another animal, just freaking out it down! Why does it need any second thoughts?!?
- Other: If a serious offence take it to a judge
- Other: If all dogs are treated equally. No bias because of the appearance of the dog.
- Other: If an animal behaviourist were involved in analyzing evidence.
- Other: If anyone on the tribunal voted in favor of breed specific bans or restrictions, they are immediately in a conflict of interest and not permitted to sit. Major penalties and immediate case dismissal should this not be followed.
- Other: If City and non-City representatives included knowledgeable, highly trained, unbiased professionals (eg. breed specialists, licensed dog trainers, animal rescue representatives)
- Other: If decision is to euthanize, must then be pushed back on provincial court
- Other: If determined the representative is byist on a breed they can no longer attend to cases with said breed or lookalike breed involved. Any dog can attack.
- Other: if dog euthanasia is chosen, that a court make the final rendering.
- Other: If euthanasia considered, a second party must agree
- Other: If euthanasia is the last resort. Training programs before euthanizing
- Other: if euthanasia was determined to be the assessment the tribunal would be officially reviewed
- Other: If euthanization is not a potential outcome. This is inhumane and there are better ways to deal with such situations.
- Other: If even a dangerous dog is safe with their owners or on their property, then it should be implemented that the dog has to be either restricted to their property, or on leash/muzzled/not allowed in off leash dog parks. And if that is not abided to, then heavy fines should be implemented. Euthanizing should NEVER be a forceable action without owner consent.
- Other: If everyone involved in the decision was educated and understands that these breeds aren't more aggressive than others and should be treated as a family member just like any other pet
- Other: If it actually did decrease trauma to the dog, did not support euthanasia for this, and required dog owners to be reviewed to see if they should have a dog, and mandatory dog training and rehabilitation.
- Other: If it determined the dogs were a threat to others or if its been mistreated/poorly trained
- Other: If it expedited cases while still being fair to the owner, dog and victims.
- Other: If it had the same quality of decision making that a court would

- Other: If it included individuals with dog behaviour knowledge to help assess the animal.
- Other: If it is a VERY sever bite (life altering/life threatening condition), it should be handled by the courts
- Other: If it is confirmed that there is no biased to any specific breed and the cases are treated like a trial with background checks similar to a jury.
- Other: If it is for all dog attacks from all breeds and not just Pit bull types
- Other: If it is one time offence/ the dog was in a high stress environment - it should not be blamed to the point of taking away the dog or eurhanization
- Other: If it was a fair trial and taking account of owners actions. Its not the breed of the dog that's an issue its how they get trained.
- Other: If it weren't biased towards any dog breed and looked at the dog and owner as individuals
- Other: If its a minor offense that can be solved relatively simple then yes
- Other: If it's the dogs first offence that appropriate training and education for the owner be enforced. If the dog continues to have offended because the owner has not been compliant or refused to comply initially then the dog should be evaluated to see if re-homing to a RESPONSIBLE dog owner is in the best interest of the dog. Eg. the dog is trainable and would make a good pet as long as the owner or new owner was educated and took the responsibility to train the dog appropriately.
- Other: If its the dogs first time doing it, give the owner restrictions rules but don't euthanize the animal. Theres always factors to why the dog may have reacted.
- Other: if owner is deemed the problem then a behavioral specialist rehabilitates the dog, owner is fined and dog rehomed
- Other: If selrction of members was reasonable eg. Not govt employees
- Other: If the bite wasn't lethal; and not just the dog but the owners also had to be trained.
- Other: If the board consists of professional dog trainers and people who actually work with dogs for a living
- Other: If the city is marking pitbulls as nuisance, I have zero faith in their ability to decide on anything.
- Other: If the decision was euthanasia that a second option be given - because dog bites can be caused by bad dog ownership and it is unfair to punish the dog in most cases
- Other: If the decision was to euthanize, then they would proceed to provincial court
- Other: If the dog cannot be properly trained to not be vicious and bite other, then euthanization may be considered
- Other: If the dog has good reason to be put down then do so. But if it was a one time bite or not even a bad bite, they shouldn't be put down for that either.
- Other: If the dog has multiple vicious declarations
- Other: If the dog is not judged for being a type of breed
- Other: If the dog IS required to be euthanized by the tribunal or is required to have serious action then it must go through the system twice to ensure that it is the only and final option
- Other: if the dog was involved in a vicious attack or aggressive behavior, the dog should have to wear a muzzle when leaving the owners property for any reason.

- Other: If the dog was provoked and then bit the offender there should not be a charge at all to the dog or owner but to the offender who harassed the dog.
- Other: If the dog was provoked or someone was trespassing fault should not be the dogs. It is their job to protect the home
- Other: If the dog(s) involved are well known in the community as constant offenders.
- Other: If the owner feels it's best to have the dog euthanized they are allowed to be present at the euthanasia as that is their pet and they deserve that right. I believe that if the owner feels euthanasia is the appropriate action the holding period of that dog should not have to take place if there are rabies vaccine records provided. It does no good for any party especially the dog.
- Other: If the owner is offered an alternative to euthanization such as mandatory training sessions. NO DOG SHOULD BE EUTHANIZED WHEN THEIR OWNER IS NOT A RESPONSIBLE INDIVIDUAL PROVIDING THE PROPER TRAINING AND ENVIRONMENT FOR A DOG
- Other: If the people making the decisions were animal lovers and DOG OWNERS so they could make an EDUCATED DECISION, not just a bunch of people with a vengeance for pitbulls.
- Other: if the representatives would be certified trainers and behavioral professionals, then maybe
- Other: If the tribunal consists of a vet and animal behaviorist.
- Other: If the tribunal could be guaranteed to be non-biased and included people who are involved in the protection of animals as well as that of the city.
- Other: If the tribunal decides the dog must be euthanized it must be referred to the Provincial court
- Other: If the tribunal had an animal specialist on panel such as a vet.
- Other: If the tribunal included a person not directly owning the dog, but who would be familiar with its typical behaviour.
- Other: If the tribunal was neutral in terms of breed
- Other: If there are trained professionals on the tribunal. Not some random City Employee or some random Calgarian who hates animals or had a traumatic experience as a kid. You need a holistic approach here. People who are understanding and want the best for the animals welfare.
- Other: If there has been a severe bite, I think the dog should still be allowed to go home with the owner while it awaits a decision, under very strict order the dog is to stay on leash/in the home etc.
- Other: if there is severe fines (or other penalization) for either party in breach of the tribunal
- Other: If there was a k9 behaviouralist on board to advise. You NEED someone with experience and can properly assess the situation. Not everyone understands k9 behaviour. It's in everyone's best interest to have an expert to weigh in on the matter at hand.
- Other: If there were actually a fair chance for the dog. No speeding things along to put them all down. I don't want the dog to spend unnecessary time in the shelter but this needs to be completely fair
- Other: If they did not have the power to make euthanized orders.
- Other: If they did not take the breed into consideration at all.
- Other: If this is done, there needs to be no biases. For example, bully breed dogs need to be looked at in the same way one would review a golden retriever. It is an owner's responsibility to train the dog, as well as know if their dog has triggers of any kind.

- Other: If you can still fight the decision
- Other: If you do the proper investigation to ensure the dog is actually at fault for the issue
- Other: If you make sure that there are people on the tribunal with dog behavioural experience. People who know and have experience with behaviour issues, challenges and problems so that they are able to make informed recommendations and decisions.
- Other: I'm against putting restrictions on pit bulls. I'm disappointed with Calgary that they are even considering it.
- Other: Impartial and unbiased
- Other: Impartial members
- Other: Impartial participants (animal friendly people who understand situational behaviour and can fully assess the situation while listening to all accounts of incident)
- Other: Impartial third body present
- Other: Impartial to all breeds.
- Other: Impartiality; random citizens if possible
- Other: In my opinion, healthy, happy, well balanced dogs do not act out. A home evaluation needs to take place to find out the conditions this dog is living in. Whiteness need to be questioned if there was an incident that occurred and people who are around the dog daily ie. neighbors also need to be questioned. If the incident took place outside the home, and the home is fit for the dog, than they should be kept at home under strict rules until things are figured out. If it happened at home than the dog should be placed in a safe place until everything is settled.
- Other: In the cases where euthanasia is the verdict opportunities to appeal with an impartial party must be available, history of complainant and dog interaction/defendant history need to be disclosed in court, and owner must be able to say goodbyes/choose own vet if desired for termination.
- Other: In the cases where the owner is found to be in possession of an animal that has generated a severe bite, the owner should be officially recorded in a registry that is available to the public such that residents in proximity to the owner and their animal are aware of the potential risk.
- Other: Include not only legal members but also experts in domestic animal welfare and protection.
- Other: include participation by victims and animal owners
- Other: Include vets on the panel specialized in animal behaviour and assess the owner's role in the bite handing out bans on dog ownership if the owner being a bad owner is directly attributable to the bite
- Other: Included in the non-City representative would have to be ACCREDITED and RESPECTED dog professionals.
- Other: Included individuals educated in dogs and rescue dogs; no people biased on breeds.
- Other: included responsible large dog owners including pitbulls
- Other: included those experienced in dog training and/or rehabilitation OR ranking employees/members of a shelter (like the Humane Society)
- Other: Included veterinary assessments and opinions on rehabilitation first
- Other: Includes an animal behaviour expert not just citizens with no knowledgeable background.
- Other: Includes canine specialists

- Other: Includes dog behaviour experts, does not include representatives with agendas against specific breeds or owners
- Other: Includes dog behaviourist/trainer
- Other: Includes members on the tribunal that are knowledgeable about animal health and animal behavior, and no member shall have a perceived bias for or against a specific species or breed of animal
- Other: Includes members who are considered experts in interpreting dog behaviour and that an effective method is used for capturing the dog's behaviour at the time of the incident like bystander testimony for example.
- Other: Includes people experienced with dog behavior and are not biased towards Pitt Bulls
- Other: Including a professional dog behaviorist
- Other: Including an animal behaviourist, veterinarian, or other person qualified to assess the animal
- Other: Including experts who are open to rehabilitation
- Other: Increase fees to cover
- Other: Independent Veterinary and animal behavior specialists are involved
- Other: Independent assessment of the animal to determine likely hood of recurrence and potentially mitigating factors.
- Other: Independent third parties with public oversight
- Other: Individual cases treated as such, not a blanket bias based on the breed of a dog. More training for the owner, not necessarily the animal.
- Other: Individuals assessing Whether a dog is to be euthanized is sufficiently trained to avoid breed bias
- Other: Individuals on the tribunal are not biased to a particular breed. All breeds are treated equal.
- Other: Individuals on the Tribunal would need to have specific training and testing to ensure bias is not used in their decision-making.
- Other: Individuals should be properly vetted and should not have internal biases towards certain breeds
- Other: Individuals who Have experience in dealing with animals (I.e vet, dog groomers, vet tech, etc). Individuals should not have a previous incident with any sever dog bite (to ensure no bias against specific jobs). Individuals do not pre-judge dogs based on breed and understand behaviour of dog is due to training, not breed.
- Other: Individuals who understand animal behaviours are on the tribunal
- Other: Individuals with animal behavior knowledge are involved
- Other: Input from a veterinarian or similar animal health professional before euthanasia is considered
- Other: Input from vet. Owner etc
- Other: input/assessments were made/ influenced by dog behavioral specialists
- Other: Instead of a shelter; the dog in question is to remain in the owners home. Providing less stress on the owner and animal.

- Other: Instead of euthanasia, do court ordered dog and owner training, as well as proper muzzle training, and have the dogs need to wear muzzled. Keep dogs in their home to reduce trauma with the dog needing to be muzzled when around new people, and no public situations until court matter is resolved
- Other: Interview owners before decision is made. Team up with rescues and dog rehabilitation centres
- Other: Interviews with family and friends in regards to the owner and behavior of the dog.
- Other: Investigating the situation and cause for the bite; if the owner could've done anything to prevent the bite they should be deemed unfit to own breeds like pit bulls, German shepherds, Dobermans, Rottweiler etc.
- Other: Involve professionals, like dog trainers and vets
- Other: Involved actual animal experts such as vets and individuals from the multiple shelters across the city.
- Other: Involved experts, involved both people for and against euthanization
- Other: Involved representation from the Humane Society and a Behavioural Specialist
- Other: Involvement of a competent person with relevant experience and skill to deal with the situation.
- Other: Involving proper dog training while the dog in question is being held until a decision is made. Potential rehab option and rehoming.
- Other: Is actually useful and speeds things up D fairly
- Other: Is fair and with in reason and allows the owner to have a chance to take appropriate action before drastic measures are taken.
- Other: Is not biased about breeds and is a panel of experts.
- Other: Is the owner capable of caring for a dogs need or physical and mental health
- Other: Isn't breed biased. Is a tribunal of dog experts/educators not just random city workers.
- Other: It actually reviews the circumstances of what cause the altercation and allows reasonable time AS WELL AS access to support for appeal. I have many friends with bully breed dogs that are the sweetest dogs. Bully breeds tend to be provoked at the last option (and usually by a much more aggressive smaller breed).
- Other: it allows the owner to realize that this is a problem and that there are repercussions to disorderly activity like biting and attacking.
- Other: It also depends on the behaviour of the pet. The main problem with pet ownership is that they do not train their pets the basic commands.
- Other: It can not consist of people with a bias opinion for certain breeds
- Other: It cannot include any person who has previous issues to any dog.
- Other: It can't be just anyone making these decisions. A trained person needs to be part of this process
- Other: It comprises of at least 1 veterinarian, 1 dog behaviour specialist, and 1 member of the public
- Other: It did not become a shortcut to euthanizing problem dogs or any pitbull type dog deemed problematic

- Other: It did not have increased cost for the dog owner
- Other: It did not hold breed-specific prejudices
- Other: It did not pick on specific breeds
- Other: It did not rush to a decision on the dog and was still a fair assessment
- Other: It didn't allow for euthanasia and that the people involved are non biased towards animals and specific breeds
- Other: It does not define aggression based on breed discrimination and include breed specific legislation. This could further increase discrimination towards renters with pets and destruction of the ability of these breeds to be adopted by humane society and shelters. <https://www.asPCA.org/animal-protection/public-policy/what-breed-specific-legislation>. It is important that obedience training is suggested but not based on breed!
- Other: It does not single out pitbulls
- Other: It does not target specific breeds and push them through to euthanize
- Other: It doesn't assume behaviour based on breed, but instead is concerned with a Behaviour
- Other: It doesn't discriminate against dog breeds and takes into consideration the behaviour of the human injured in the incident
- Other: It doesn't have a full on worded attack on a specific breed ie- pit bulls which can be the most loving pets.
- Other: It doesn't result in a large administrative cost to city tax payers.
- Other: It doesn't automatically decide certain dog breeds are bad or have a prejudice towards certain breeds.
- Other: It dropped the [removed] pitbull bias
- Other: it follows a clear parameter for what justifies euthanasia, bylaw can in fact enforce a home confinement or utilize a tracking device on nuisance or severe bite dogs so they are confined. But not at a shelter. Put accountability on the owner.
- Other: It follows a very personalized very case by case basis. That they look at everything before euthanizing the dog and are thinking of rehabilitation first and what's best for the best and family as well as safety.
- Other: it had actual vets and behavioral experts on the panel. No politicians or Karen's.
- Other: It had both dog owners and non dog owners on the tribunal
- Other: It has qualified people on it - not just a vet, but animal advocates.
- Other: It has to be done for nuisance dogs and not specific breeds. Have we considered mandatory licensing for all dog owners which involves a course on responsible pet ownership (regardless of breed)
- Other: It has to be independent and subject to a middle layer of review, other than the Court of Queen's Bench
- Other: It has to have dog/pit bull lovers on it. People who are not these will not look at the trauma that the owner and dog also suffer.
- Other: It has to have some form of check and balance, comprised of individuals that work in dog related industries such as vet, trainers and breeders

- Other: It identified and lists the events that lead up to the severe bite and is NOT prejudiced by breed only.
- Other: It included a veterinarian among its constituents.
- Other: It included an individual who is very familiar with dog training and behavior.
- Other: it included at minimum one veterinarian, and one dog behavior expert
- Other: It included people who had the wellbeing of the animal in mind. I.e. Veterinarians or dog trainers who could see if it was possible to rehab the dog
- Other: It includes animal experts (behaviorist, vet, etc.)
- Other: It includes experts in dog behaviour and includes due process in determining the environmental contributions that lead to an incident
- Other: It includes folk with dog expertise particularly in rehabilitation of problem dogs
- Other: It includes people that have actually owned pitbulls and have experience with the breed and how they really behave, instead of a tribunal member who's only knowledge of the breed is hearsay they've read in Facebook posts
- Other: It includes properly trained dog trainers who have thorough knowledge of canine behaviour and body language
- Other: It includes veterinary experts.
- Other: It involved actually knowledgeable and capable people, while mitigating bias and denigrating breed specific legislation as this is inherently biased and unscientific.
- Other: It involved behaviour specialists to weigh in on the reasons for the dogs behaviour and a preference was made for retraining or rehoming whenever possible.
- Other: It involves qualified experts in the field
- Other: It is appropriately assessed
- Other: It is balanced and thoughtful
- Other: It is based of people who actually work with dogs, not city council who has owned one maybe two dogs in their life.
- Other: It is based on facts and evidence of a recurring issue with the dog and not a biased public opinion based on the breed and not the individual dog.
- Other: It is cost effective and fair
- Other: It is done fairly and does not breed discriminate. It must not be biased in any way.
- Other: It is effectively and efficiently run and organized with non biased staff with suitable expertise and with suitable expertise on retention
- Other: It is established early on as to whether the owner intentionally trained their dog to be aggressive. If so then I think they should go through the regular process
- Other: It is fair and equal for all cases. There would be no allowance for influencing opinions based on breed
- Other: It is fair and not biased based on the breed of dog
- Other: It is fair, not breed specific. It needs to be based on the amount of incidents, and the steps to prevent. It would be hard to do because people are too biased.

- Other: It is fairly and unbiasedly looked at with an open mind. And the full story of the incident is looked at. Events leading up to event in question and why it may have happened.
- Other: It is free from breed specific prejudices. There is no evidence to support Breed-specific legislation. ANY animal if provoked can be potentially dangerous.
- Other: It is made up dog behavioural specialist.
- Other: It is made up of animal experts ie veterinarians, trainers, phycologist
- Other: It is made up of dog behaviour experts, not politician-types.
- Other: It is not based off of breed specific bylaws aimed at pitbulls. All dogs can be dangerous. Even small breed dogs
- Other: It is not based on breed but on the offence of the animal
- Other: It is not biased to dog breeds, much like this questionnaire. Euthanizing is a last resort. Many dogs just need additional training to work through issues, not be killed for doing dog things. A true investigation as to why the dog did what it did instead of assuming it's just the dog "turning on people." Usually, it's human error and the dog is reacting. So let's give dogs the benefit of the doubt since most people don't train their dogs.
- Other: It is not biased towards ANY breed.
- Other: It is NOT breed specific
- Other: It is not breed specific and euthanasia is a last resort
- Other: it is not breed specific, meaning each incident is assessed and treated equally regardless of breed
- Other: It is not harsher on pitbull breeds
- Other: It is operated by unbiased, reasonable people that promise to use their best judgement. This system would need to be reassessed periodically to ensure no internal corruption has taken place
- Other: It is quick
- Other: It is quick and fair.
- Other: It is run by people who are not biased towards any type of dog breed, and must care about the well being of animals.
- Other: It is substantially quicker than waiting for courts.
- Other: It is taken as seriously as in PC - the individuals making the decision cannot be biased based on a breed of dog
- Other: It is thoroughly looked into
- Other: It is unbiased and does not result in the death of an innocent dog, rather the punishment of the incompetent owner
- Other: It is understood that the dog is a reflection of the owner. The owner should be banned from certain types of breed ownership if their dogs are a continuing issue.
- Other: It just acts as an typical provincial court with adequate representation from people in the field, as well as those in charge of properly reviewing all aspects of the individual animal(s) in question
- Other: It looks and the entire case and is not prejudice of bully breeds.
- Other: It must be put together with experienced pet owners/behavioural specialists.

- Other: It must have experts in dogs and dog behaviour and follow scientific evidence (for example, peer-reviewed articles stating breed-specific legislation is ineffective)
- Other: It must include citizens, representatives from the humane society, and dog trainers
- Other: It needs to be made up of dog behaviourists, veterinarians. No one with a fear of dogs should be allowed to sit on the tribunal..
- Other: It needs to have a veterinarian on the tribunal. End of story
- Other: It pertains to All Dogs equally including small breeds such as chihuahuas which are typically poorly trained by their owners and tend provoke bigger dogs.
- Other: It produces net revenue not net cost.
- Other: It punishes the owners and their behaviour and training of the dog.
- Other: It remained fair to the owners and the dogs (victim and otherwise)
- Other: It seems that this entire survey has been about pitbulls so I would not have confidence that there wouldn't be a bias within the tribunal
- Other: It should be a neutral selected committee or group of people. Include dog trainers, animal workers, behavioural consultants. Ensure that there are no biases toward breed. Give the dog a chance as it is not the fault of the dog.
- Other: It should be comprised of experts in dog behaviour and psychology and not simply made of counsel for local areas.
- Other: It should be done as a case by case
- Other: It should have representatives from Calgary rescues and dog trainers. It should also focus on how to help the owner manage their dog as often these problems stem from ownership.
- Other: it should include individuals such as vets, dog trainers, and rescue professionals.
- Other: It should involve a professional trained in dog behaviour (CPDT-KA designation). The trainer should be a force free, reward based trainer so they know how to properly assess the dog and situation.
- Other: It should not tie up precious time at appeals court. Some other secondary review could take place.
- Other: It should only ever come to this action if a serious incident has occurred, like an unprovoked attack. Underline unprovoked. A dog should never be euthanized unless it is required due to medical reasons and a sign off by a responsible owner. If a dog is attacking unprovoked the owners should be investigated and if found to be unfit the dog should be rehomed.
- Other: It still needs to be a thorough and fair process.
- Other: It took in consideration each dog and their home situation/ the situation in which they became aggressive. If they were protecting their owner or a passerby they should not be penalized for such.
- Other: It took into account if the dog was a rescue from a bad situation. If the dog went to formal or informal training measures. Whether or not it was provoked.
- Other: It uses animal experts to decided. A judge would not know enough about dog behavior to make this sort of decision
- Other: It was ACTUALLY fair and it DID NOT ALLOW euthanization of any aggressive animals

- Other: It was composed of animal behaviourists/ individuals qualified to determine the viability of rehabilitation and training impact
- Other: It was comprised of people who are actually knowledgeable about dogs, their behaviour and their ability to be rehabilitated.
- Other: It was comprised of people with diverse backgrounds (animal lovers and those who advocate for euthanasia frequently)
- Other: It was fair and the decision could be appealed to an unbiased party
- Other: It was fair and unbiased. Involves unanimous vote
- Other: It was fair to the dog.
- Other: It was for extreme conditions a dog would ever be euthanized..
- Other: It was headed by people actually educated in dog training and was kept racially diverse to avoid bias (breed specific legislation has often had racist roots)
- Other: It was led by or partially made up of people who understand dog behaviour and not random politicians or law makers
- Other: It was made of carefully screened individuals to minimize radical thinkers.
- Other: It was made up of dog owners, and had a mandate to not take breed into consideration
- Other: It was made up of public people ie a jury of peers, veterinarians/ shelter careworkers people qualified to determine a dogs dangerous
- Other: It was made up of veterinary professionals
- Other: It was non biased
- Other: It was not breed lead discrimination. Let's not be racist again certain breeds
- Other: It was populated by dog owners who are not biased against pitbulls in any way
- Other: It was reviewed periodically to confirm shorter times in kennel and a low rate of overturned decisions. I'd also like to see independent party to be knowledgeable in dog behaviour and obedience to determine reoffender risk. I'd also like to see a sliding scale of repercussions based on repeat behaviour
- Other: It was stacked with people that rescue all breeds that understand animal behaviors
- Other: It wasn't biased against specific breeds
- Other: It wasn't run by the city of Calgary. I have no trust in them to do an unbiased review
- Other: It would be important that the tribunal members didn't have negative biases towards certain dog breeds (e.i. pit bull breeds) and give harsher outcomes based on that factor
- Other: It would contain vets, dog trainers etc. Most times it is an owner training issue not the dogs fault.
- Other: It would depend whoales up the tribunal. But I don't think they should have to stay in a shelter.
- Other: It would have animal behaviour experts who can best assess the dog's likelihood to be rehabilitated.
- Other: it would HAVE TO include people who are not biased against pit bulls as well as advocates for pit bulls and breeders

- Other: It would have to be an open decision process so that owners and the public know how the decision was made. Owners have a right to know and others could learn from such information.
- Other: It would include veterinarians, people who like dogs, and people who can see past the breed and look at the owner.
- Other: It would need to be made up of the right people. A couple citizens and then a vet and at least 1 certified professional dog trainer
- Other: It would need to be properly regulated, too much bias from vets and others.
- Other: it would not be breed biased and would actually look at the circumstances of the situation
- Other: It's fair and accurate and includes real animal experts, especially vets. Not just bylaw officers or individuals looking to band aid a problem that doesn't actually exist.
- Other: It's fair and not biased to any specific breeds
- Other: It's humane, respects the dog and the owners, isn't discriminating breed specific and reinforce rehabilitation / training first.
- Other: It's main goal is of the dogs safety. These bylaws should reflect the human responsibility for all dogs.
- Other: It's not bias to the breed of dog, and if the victim provoked the dog the dog should not be the one punished.
- Other: Its not expensive for the owner of the dog
- Other: It's not the dogs it's the humans, with a proper handler any dog can live a well happy life!
- Other: It's taken seriously . And the dog does not get euthanized just because of its breed. The severity of the offence should depict that. And if it's a first offence . Should get a warning and they have to take said animal to training . And if it reoffends , then euthanasia is appropriate
- Other: It's the owners that are usually the problem. There should be rehab programs to help dogs who have been taught to be aggressive. Why are you always trying to kill things?
- Other: Its fair
- Other: Its fair
- Other: It's fair and accurate and includes real animal experts, especially vets. Not just bylaw officers or individuals looking to band aid a problem that doesn't actually exist.
- Other: It's not just pitbulls, my pitbull does not have a nasty disposition. It was how he was raised. It's not a breed issue period. A rottweiler has more psi per bite than a pitbull. And little dogs bite more than big dogs.
- Other: its not punishing a specific breed of dog.
- Other: It's not rushed through without all parties getting a to state their 'side'
- Other: It's there a possibility the dog could go back to a foster, the owner, etc during this time?
- Other: I've never had a nuisance dog, but there is a lot of talk against bully breeds which, yes, their bites can be rougher, but its other dog bites that happen more. If there is a different plan for dealing with dog bites, I would hope that they are a little less bias and a little more understanding. Dogs generally don't bite unless something has caused it. They don't have knowledge of death or penalties if they get into a dispute. I would recommend a warning system.
- Other: Jgfcjinnkk

- Other: Keeps dogs stress free.
- Other: Kept off public spaces whilst awaiting decisions
- Other: Killing a dog is never an option and rehabilitation should always be the first line of action. Dogs bite because of [removed] owners.
- Other: Knowledgeable and impartial members of tribunal
- Other: Knowledgeable people be involved in the process (veterinarian, dog trainer, dog behavior expert, animal control personnel and owners.
- Other: I would support
- Other: Legislation isn't breed specific on bans or issues
- Other: Less dogs are euthanized more dogs are put through a rehabilitation program many times dogs are provoked to bite
- Other: Less euthanization. Dogs can be mandated to remain at their residence.
- Other: Limit on time, cost and number of nuisance appeals
- Other: Limits the amount of Euthanizations
- Other: Listen to community members on both sides of the issue, make sure this does not become a tribunal that is tough on others and easy on some. Fair treatment.
- Other: Long as the owner of said dog is accountable for the action or of therefore of the dog in question...
- Other: Long investigation to prove it's the dog and not the human
- Other: look at the owner as well as the dog animal behaviors are typically learned from their owners and how they are treated there are an endless ammount of documentaries on this subject and how a dog can go from being aggressive and near feral to a very loving family dog
- Other: look at the owner, and have proper animal professionals on said panel.
- Other: Look further into animal rehabilitation ex. Animal sanctuary, fostering, or new ownership.
- Other: Look into the history of the dog and be compassionate about it.
- Other: Looks at the owner not the dog
- Other: Made of non biased people who don't pre judge based on breed or appearance.
- Other: Made up of animal behaviour educated individuals
- Other: Make cases based on that case not breeds
- Other: Make euthanization the absolute last resort. Have a good mix of people on the tribunal so it is not skewed one way or the other.
- Other: make sure it has the authority to follow up and follow thru on its findings or judgement
- Other: Make sure it was conducted in a fair way.
- Other: Mandatory conditioning of both dog and owner. Professional training with a trainer qualified - not a pet smart representative. Someone who deals in animal and human psychology.
- Other: Mandatory dog behaviour classes for owners of dog. Followed by training with owner and dog. Euthanization is last resort.
- Other: Mandatory education about animal behaviour/animal training.

- Other: Mandatory training for the owner and the dog, by a licensed dog behaviour specialist and mandatory follow up training
- Other: Mandatory training. There are great programs for aggressive dogs out there. The owners are the issue. Fund the shelters to take on those animals that are surrendered as a result and fund training programs, not a tribunal. Prosecute the owner.
- Other: Many steps taken before the thought to euthanize a dog even is considered. This is not the best solution to many situations! Many bites are avoidable and could be due to improper treatment to the dog by the victim and dog was defining itself.
- Other: Maximum process time within a month
- Other: Mediation between all parties involved and free and full transparency to all parties involved.
- Other: Members chosen for the tribunal would be able to maintain objectivity when judging the case (for example no prior trauma involving dogs; preferably education in dog behaviour/training).
- Other: Members include representatives from rescues such as Aarcs.
- Other: Members like dogs.
- Other: Members must be bias free and shown to be so
- Other: Members MUST have varied experiences in training and keeping animals (i.e. a great variety of breeds) to reduce bias.
- Other: Members of the tribunal are dog savvy and not just taken out of the general public.
- Other: Members of the tribunal are trainers, behaviourists, rescue leaders, or other dog-knowledgeable people.
- Other: Members of the tribunal must be educated in dog behaviour and must not have proven or suspected biases against particular dog breeds, such as pit bulls.
- Other: Members of the tribunal must be vets, vet techs or animal training experts
- Other: Members of the tribunal must go through rigorous no bias training and compassion. And must prove to not be bias against any animal or breed.
- Other: Members of the tribunal must participate in training (face-to-face or online or combo) to learn what their roles entail (e.g., scope of their authority) as well as training about animal behaviour and the potential and/or options for behavioural rehabilitation. There must be an advisor with validated expertise in animal behaviour rehab to work with the tribunal.
- Other: Members of the tribunal were respected members within the field of animal control/training. My issue with tribunals are that they are incentivized to prolong deliberation and delay actionable outcomes in order to get paid their per diem rate for a longer period of time.
- Other: Members of this tribunal had appropriate knowledge around dog behavior issues
- Other: members of tribunal do not have breed biase and have background with animal care
- Other: Members of tribunal should be legitimate trainers (force free background) and/or board certified veterinary behaviourists
- Other: Members were well versed in animal behavior
- Other: Members with vocal opinions against Pitbulls and any other aggressive dogs should not be allowed on the tribunal. We would need a fair and unbiased base in order to cast judgement.

- Other: Members would have to be unbiased towards already discriminated breeds in order to reach a truly impartial decision. Weed members out the same way people are filtered out during jury duty.
- Other: Membership that consists of well respected and educated canine behavioral experts from the community
- Other: Minimal government oversight, representatives from rescue organizations and reputable animal training services as well as a Veterinarian.
- Other: Minor cases are heard without bias
- Other: More due diligence by bylaw officers in investigation. Take statements by all parties and witnesses. Allow pictures by defendants to be presented.
- Other: More focus needs to be placed on the ability and willingness of the owner to create and enact a plan to prevent future problems rather than on actions toward the dog. The dog is only a symptom of the problem - removing a dog and issuing fines does not change owner behavior.
- Other: More than one of the representatives were a trainer that had dealt with these breed specific dogs and had the background to make these decisions. No representatives on the panel voted for a BSL ban, as that would sway their decision without having any real logic and thought to the cases.
- Other: Multi-judge tribunal with unanimous decision for euthanizations.
- Other: Multiple assessments by different parties before euthanasia.
- Other: Multiple expert opinions, it should be very clear who can weigh in, how much knowledge they need to have and that the dog would not be euthanized if they chose to appeal.
- Other: Multiple people review the case, not just one person making the decisions. And if there is no singling out of certain breeds such as pit bulls. It is not right that they are being singled out in general in these new bylaws. Any dog can be aggressive no matter the breed.
- Other: Must attempt rehabilitation and training before even considering euthanasia
- Other: Must be a non breed biased tribunal
- Other: must be able to be appealed to the court of Queen's Bench
- Other: Must be conducted by experts in animal behaviour
- Other: Must be fair
- Other: Must be fair process
- Other: Must be impartial and adhere to the provincial court standards for rulings
- Other: Must be impartial.
- Other: Must be knowledgeable/educated about dogs and unbiased.
- Other: must be non bias persons to breeds of animal
- Other: Must be very qualified people doing these reviews.
- Other: Must be well versed in animal behavior and look at all factors contributing to the incident.
- Other: Must fairly assess where the ultimate responsibility falls on: the dog itself or the owner ? Or any 3rd party before putting down the dog.
- Other: Must happen within 3 business days. Animals should not be separated from owner during this time, it only exasperates the issue.
- Other: Must have a vet and trainer on the committee, all on the tribunal should be pet owners

- Other: must have a Veterinarian and other knowledgeable people on the tribunal; no PETA
- Other: Must have an accountability time frame. Do x by this date or fines /sanction immediately doubles.
- Other: Must have dog owners on the tribunal along with non-dog owners for balance
- Other: Must have multiple past incidents of biting, and must have a change of ownership before euthanasia is considered
- Other: must have some sort of behavioral expert on the tribunal to avoid biases more importantly breed specific biases
- Other: Must have the same burden of proof as a real court.
- Other: must include experts in dog behavior and not biased based on breed
- Other: Must include fellow bully-breed supporters as well as unbiased members.
- Other: Must include non bias people.
- Other: Must include unbiased views of all breeds
- Other: Must include vet, person with official dog training experience, and people on tribunal cannot have breed preferences.
- Other: Must not take longer than it would in court; must meet the condition that all decisions are not final and can be appealed
- Other: must review the owners background and home checks as to if they are a good owner in the first place
- Other: Muzzle if aggressive no off leash parks Ect unless proven to have fixed the issue

- Other: Need to have a canine behavioural specialist involved, or a vet who specializes in this, especially when euthanasia is involved.
- Other: Need to know of the process
- Other: Need to work with surrounding municipalities to make sure they uphold rulings. Must have teeth to be effective.
- Other: Need tribunal members with balanced views, no breed bias and with dog behaviour/training knowledge & experience.

- Other: Needs to be 100% anonymous and cases must be presented completely fairly
- Other: Needs to be truly neutral - without an anti-dog ownership bias/agenda
- Other: Needs to follow conditions
- Other: Needs to include people who are aware of dog behaviour and can determine what is the best outcome for the animal.
- Other: Needs to show itself not to be bias against pit bulls
- Other: Needs to support all evidence of incident, ex. Dog being teased or inappropriately approached
- Other: Never authorize euthanasia of dogs nor hold any bias toward dogs of specific breeds.
- Other: NEVER KILL A PET. NEVER TAKE A PET FROM OWNER UNLESS THEY ARE MENTALLY/physically UNWELL.
- Other: No additional cost to the Clty. Otherwise use existing courts.
- Other: No animal should be euthanized based on breed.
- Other: No animal should be euthanized for poor behaviour re-training should be ordered
- Other: No authority to euthanize
- Other: No authority to euthanize. That must be done in court.
- Other: No authorizing euthanizations, and ALL factors as to why the attack/bite need to be considered (i.e. was a child taunting the animal? Was it cornered? If so, it was simply defending itself, as we also do)
- Other: No bias
- Other: No bias against certain breeds.
- Other: No bias against pit bulls - NOT BREED SPECIFIC!
- Other: No bias on breed. Only on the dumb owners
- Other: No bias to breed of dog
- Other: no bias towards a specific breed
- Other: No bias towards breed specifics and a fair hearing for the owner
- Other: no bias towards dog breed. No one involved in the decision making jniws any party involved or a mutual friend
- Other: No biased based on breed
- Other: No biased is given to type of dog
- Other: No biased reps
- Other: No biases against certain breeds. Absolutely ridiculous behavior. As is the whole section on Pit bulls of this survey.
- Other: No biases against certain breeds. Dogs are dogs. Great Danes to chihuahuas.
- Other: No biases towards pit bulls
- Other: No breed based decisions. Every dog is evaluated on its specific behaviours and tendencies and it is done so fairly
- Other: No breed bias
- Other: No breed bias

- Other: No breed bias. All breeds can be dangerous without proper training.
- Other: No breed biases - they should not know what breed the dog is. Only the situation that has happened.
- Other: No breed discrimination
- Other: No breed discrimination!! Pitbulls are NOT the problem!
- Other: No breed discrimination. This process needs to be neutral and fair. So many people are sadly blinded by breed. We need to move away from looking at the breed and looking at the owner instead. Did they choose the breed based on looks or reputation instead of what fit with their family? Is the dog a good match for them? Why did the bite happen? What lead up to it? Is the dog physically and mentally sound? Are they receiving enough mental and physical exercise? What is the dog's home life like? What other factors were involved in this bite. Dogs are bred for a purpose and no breed is bad in the right hands so we need to ensure we are focusing on that as well as why a dog but not the breed.
- Other: No breed shaming legislation. Don't blame the dog for their owners negligence of training.
- Other: No breed specific banning of any kind
- Other: No breed specific bias
- Other: No breed specific bias
- Other: no Breed specific bias existed, options of dog trainers, rehabilitation and animal rehoming explored
- Other: no breed specific biases
- Other: No Breed Specific Laws
- Other: NO BREED SPECIFIC LEGISLATION PERIOD, there should be a mechanism to make sure that the tribunal is stocked with people who have experience dealing with dogs and never politically loaded.
- Other: No breed specific rules
- Other: No breed specific rules
- Other: No Breed-Specific Judgement.
- Other: No breed-specific prejudice
- Other: No breed-specific rules! It should be on a dog/owner basis.
- Other: No BSL or targeted dogs with blocky heads that fit the description.
- Other: No BSL. Focus on rehabilitating the animal and educating the owner - regardless of breed.
- Other: No chances, euthanize on first incident
- Other: No City of Calgary representatives on the tribunal.
- Other: No conditions
- Other: No decision to be made by anyone other than a judge to euthanize the animal
- Other: No declaration on euthanasia
- Other: No different rules for pit bulls
- Other: No discriminating against breeds - each animal must be looked at individually. If you are biased you cannot be a board member.

- Other: No discrimination against breeds. I.e. a pitbull and a labradoodle should undergo the same scrutiny
- Other: No discrimination against certain breeds. It is more than just pit bulls that are that strong and I do not think it is fair to the animals to judge based on strength. That is like saying we should assume all muscular and very strong humans are dangerous and should be restricted as well.
- Other: No discrimination against dog breeds
- Other: No discrimination against dog breeds
- Other: No discrimination against other breeds and must be treated the exact same way.
- Other: No discrimination against pit bulls and no euthanasia.
- Other: No discrimination against specific breeds.
- Other: No discrimination for pit bull type dogs.
- Other: No dog gets euthanized for biting
- Other: No dog gets harmed or put down
- Other: No dog is euthanized on the first offence and training is offered to help rehabilitate dogs.
- Other: No dog is euthanized
- Other: No dog racism. Every individual case needs to be fully assessed as a individual case not a breed issue. Must be handled with as little stress as possible to figure why the incident happened. Dogs give warning signs long before they would bite and people need to be educated in that.
- Other: No dog should be destroyed, until adequate measures are made to rehabilitate and or to correct said behaviour.
- Other: No dog should be euthanized, but rather rehabilitated.
- Other: No dog will be euthanized unless it has gone through a minimum amount of professional dog trainers who all deem this dog cannot be helped (which is probably less than 1% of the time). Why should a dog have to be euthanized due to a humans lack of training.
- Other: No dogs euthanized!
- Other: No dogs get euthanized, this is not the dogs fault and the owner of the animal is to blame and therefore should be fined.
- Other: No dogs should be euthanized due to their behaviour, I would like to see the city encourage and provide resources for proper obedience training. Many dogs act the way they do as a defence mechanism.
- Other: No dogs should be euthanized for being 'vicious' they should be trained.
- Other: No dogs should be euthanized for biting. It is always the owner of the dogs responsibility and if it is an ongoing issue with a certain owner the dog should be seized and rehomed.
- Other: No euthanizing dogs. Require they and owners go through intense behaviour retraining program.
- Other: No euthanasia
- Other: No euthanasia
- Other: No euthanasia
- Other: No euthanasia

- Other: No euthanasia
- Other: No euthanasia
- Other: No Euthanasia
- Other: NO EUTHANASIA - this is NEVER necessary. All dogs can be retrained and rehabilitated with the right care. Ask ANY shelter worker and they will have a plethora of examples.
- Other: No euthanasia at all. Offer training instead
- Other: No euthanasia for animals, & identifying the cause of the bite from the person making the claim.
- Other: No euthanasia occurs in response to the tribunal.
- Other: No euthanasia of dogs under any circumstances.
- Other: No euthanasia thats awful
- Other: No euthanasia unless involving children or death.
- Other: No euthanasia unless last resort
- Other: No euthanasia unless the animal is suffering
- Other: No euthanasia used. Training measures instead.
- Other: No euthanasia!
- Other: No euthanasia!!
- Other: No euthanasia, any dog can be trained and corrected
- Other: no euthanasia, only rehabilitation
- Other: No euthanasia.
- Other: No euthanasia. Dogs can go through therapy or training to prevent further incident.
- Other: No euthanasia. Extensive training and intervention before considering euthanizing.
- Other: no euthanasia. Re-homing and rehabilitation.
- Other: No euthanasia. The dog can live a full life away from other animals or muzzled in public. It is the owners responsibility. Put the responsibilities on the owner. Large fines, dog ownership restrictions.
- Other: NO EUTHANASING ANY ANIMALS
- Other: no euthanisia
- Other: No euthanising of any dog. Instead require training of some sort.
- Other: No euthanization at all
- Other: No euthanization but more training by someone capable (ie. not the original owner)
- Other: No euthanization orders.
- Other: No euthanization, dogs can be provoked without someone knowing
- Other: No euthanization.
- Other: No euthanized. Period.
- Other: No euthanizing
- Other: No euthanizing an animal without review from court of QB
- Other: No euthanizing animals

- Other: no euthanizing these dogs. I believe it would be best to hand them over to AARCS or similar rescue societies. I strongly believe that animals who are aggressive were not trained properly, nor given love by their owners, and/neglected. And if this is the case then why should the animal have to die? Instead these animals should be given the chance to feel real love in foster homes and adoptive homes.
- Other: No euthanizing. These dogs are unfairly judged and are easily rehabilitated with proper care
- Other: No euthinizations
- Other: No forcing the owner to put a dog down. Dogs can be fixed into behaving well with then right training.
- Other: No increased cost to taxpayers. Owner would pay expenses.
- Other: No kill policies were in place.
- Other: No members show a propensity to breed bias (e.g. pit bulls).
- Other: No more euthanizing dogs- force owners to surrender the dog. Then endure the owner has to go through a training program if they ever want to own a dog again and out the dog through extensive rehabilitation work. This is a human problem not a dog or breed problem
- Other: No non necessary euthanasia
- Other: No one can discriminate based on the breed and their personal opinions.
- Other: No one can tell the owner that a dog needs to be put down.
- Other: No one has the right to determine if a dog should be euthanised. It is not the dogs fault but the owners for not having educated themselves or trained their dog properly in a manner that befits the breed. This is a fear tactic used to create more fear around bully breeds and is unacceptable. Dogs that have proven to be a nuisance/have bitten people other dogs should undergo retraining and rehabilitation and all resources should be used before consider euthenasia. Dogs are parts of people's families.
- Other: No one involved in the incident were allowed on the tribunal.
- Other: No one on the tribunal has been the victim of a severe dog bite/attack
- Other: No person without legitimate training and background in animal behaviour should ever make the decision to euthanize an animal.
- Other: No pit bull bias
- Other: No pitbull-specific legislation is used
- Other: No politician, only a collective of veterinarians and dog behavioralist involved. And Only people who have never been in favor of any bylaw not supported by science (ie bread specific)
- Other: No prejudice is used from the tribunal team.
- Other: no prejudice toward any certain breed
- Other: No profiling pit bull breeds as they are less likely to bite someone than a Chihuahua. Also that civilians like myself who deal with all breeds for many years. Also some consideration on a plan whereby the canine isn't also traumatized. That owners get a chance to care for their dog during the process with guidlines in muzzles, strong harnesses, hours of being able to walk the dog, and location restrictions ie off leash, etc.

- Other: No right to tell an owner to euthanize a dog. The owners should not have to abide to that order.
- Other: No ruling unless there is a dog/cat behavior specialist on the tribunal. Also, proper support needs to be available to the animal.
- Other: No suggestion
- Other: No unfair judgement against breeds!!!!!!
- Other: Nobody in the decision making part of the tribunal can have ill-will towards bully breeds.
- Other: Nobody other than the owner of a dog should have the right to decide if it should be euthanized
- Other: Non bias
- Other: Non bias members
- Other: Non bias to specific dog breeds.
- Other: Non biased based on breed
- Other: Non biased individuals; including those who do not believe in breed specific legislation.
- Other: Non biased judgment of the breed
- Other: Non biased members, a lot of people are scared of the pitbull and pitbull like breeds, and will judge the dog prior to finding any information about it
- Other: Non biased opinions previously on dogs. Used a fair understanding
- Other: Non biased opinions, if in tribunal must have experience with dogs of all breeds.
- Other: Non biased panel with FULL investigations into the situation surrounding the bite, not just deeming the "scary" looking dog as the perpetrator.
- Other: Non biased people in the tribunal. People with fear of certain dog breeds can give biased opinions and ruling.
- Other: Non biased people that are making the choice
- Other: Non City Members. Must have professional experience with canine behaviour and breed dispositions.
- Other: Non city representatives should include experts in the field of dog behavior
- Other: Non city representatives, with equal voting powers as city be SPCA, Behavioralists or Animal advocates(general) to ensure an unbiased decision.
- Other: Non discriminatory against specific breeds
- Other: Non of them are biased on breed
- Other: Non-bias participants
- Other: Non-biased against specific dog breeds (as this seems to be) and involving an animal behaviour specialist
- Other: Non-biased opinions based on dog breeds
- Other: Non-biased, dog educated people should be the only ones to make the decision.
- Other: Non-breed biased
- Other: Non-City representative must be an experienced animal welfare advocate and not a freaking Karen

- Other: non-City representatives are experienced in animal husbandry (vet, vet tech, certified trainer)
- Other: None
- Other: None biased participants thoroughly screened.
- Other: None of the trials are breed specific, only behaviour specific. There must be ample time for an appeal, where the dog accused is kept at home, under severe restrictions.
- Other: Not all blame lands on the dog.
- Other: Not all offenders in dog bite attacks are to blame. Most bites do not happen unprovoked. Often times the victim is the agitator, and cases must be handled with this in mind to prevent the euthanization of innocent dogs.
- Other: Not allowed to put down
- Other: Not allowing anything in section 3.
- Other: Not based on breed of dog but specifically because it's dangerous
- Other: Not based on breed, based on ONLY proof of more than one offence from said dog
- Other: Not based on dogs breed but rather the care the dog is being provided and behaviour of the dog(s)/ people in incident. Dogs can have aggressive behaviour for a variety of reasons and therefore the incident as a whole needs to be looked at.
- Other: Not based on the dogs breed
- Other: Not basing the outcome on the breed or appearance or stereotypes of the dog.
- Other: Not bias on breed
- Other: Not biased against pit bulls and other bully breeds
- Other: Not biased to dog breeds
- Other: Not breed specific
- Other: not breed specific and not euthanasia
- Other: Not breed specific and only animal experts were allowed on the tribunal
- Other: Not determined by breed but by action.
- Other: Not done by breed haters. If one is against pitbulls for example, they might be more likely to deem it to dangerous, whether they are to dangerous or not.
- Other: Not enough information to give informed response
- Other: Not euthanizing dogs specifically due to breed. If the dog is aggressive, chances are it's the owners fault.
- Other: not familiar with a tribunal
- Other: Not impounding the dog. Let the owner take it home to work with the dog. Mandate behaviour training with a breeder
- Other: Not just one representative making the decision. Multiple representatives would need to take on each case to make sure decisions are fair and not corrupted. Many city reps already corrupt and discriminatory against pit bulls as we can see. The fact this survey was even sent out judging pit bulls is complete [removed].

- Other: Not made of the same people or council each time. To not create biased opinion
- Other: Not making rash decisions about a dog's life for the sake of efficiency.
- Other: Not only a single party is responsible for the decision. Those most educated in the field of animals (I.e veterinarians, trainers) should also be involved in decision.
- Other: Not only pitbulls bite
- Other: Not putting dog down
- Other: Not singling out bigger dogs when smaller dogs attack more people
- Other: Not sure
- Other: Not sure how you would pick the tribunal but it would need to be a mix of dog owners and non-dog owners to ensure its fair.
- Other: Not taking the dog's breed into consideration and only looking at the training and obedience an owner or shelter has provided
- Other: Not targeting specific breeds
- Other: NOT TO BE BIASED AGAINST PITBULLS OR BULLY BREEDS
- Other: Not to have any breed of dog singled out as worse than others. All nuisance dogs tried equal.
- Other: Not using discriminatory breed bans
- Other: NOT. BREED. SPECIFIC.
- Other: Nothing makes any of this [removed] ok this city is becoming a joke
- Other: Obedience training rather than euthanizing first offences. Identify the cause (teasing, etc) before making a decision
- Other: Objectivity is enforced. There can be no bias.
- Other: Offer courses for the dog instead of euthanasia
- Other: Offer the owner to get training for the dog do not put the dog down
- Other: Officers with dog training and/or animal behavioural training could be an option. Clearance from a council of animal specialists (including vets and certified trainers) as to what the next steps should be.
- Other: Ok
- Other: Once again, you need to place more emphasis on the person and not the animal. You should be reviewing if the individual is fit to care for the animal, their living conditions and if any training has been spent on the pet.
- Other: One of the representatives on the tribunal was a certified/licensed professional I.e: veterinarian, dog trainer, veterinary tech
- Other: Only for attacks
- Other: Only if someone is severely injured should the dog be euthanized, they are also innocent until proven guilty and no one should die for being trained to be reactive/aggressive and acting out-training/re-training is necessary

- Other: Only if the animal in question is never put down. It is never the animals fault and the animal should be taken from the owner and the owner should be punished.
- Other: Only if the decision-makers are highly educated in animal behaviour
- Other: Only if the dog viciously attacked a human for absolutely no reason
- Other: only if the representatives do not have predisposed bias against certain dogs
- Other: Only in the most extreme cases does the dog get euthanized. It is usually the owners fault if a dog is vicious - in that case doesn't mean the dog should suffer.
- Other: Only people from the neighbourhood that the pet lived in, instead of in city and non city representatives, have an actual professional diagnose the dog find out why it bit.
- Other: Only the courts can decide to euthanize an animal.
- Other: Only the courts should have authority to order a dog to be euthanized.
- Other: Only trained and proven unbiased representatives were a part of it.
- Other: Only unbiased representatives would be able to serve in these positions. Including people that personally owned breeds such as pitbulls.
- Other: Option 3 above
- Other: Other options should be explored. Not jump straight to euthanasia.
- Other: Other restrictions should be considered before euthanasia, even if the animal is determined to be vicious
- Other: Outside dog behavioural trainer to assess dog and make recommendations.
- Other: Owner and dog must go through proper training.
- Other: Owner and individual involved are present.
- Other: Owner and victim and witness are present
- Other: Owner can still appeal it.
- Other: Owner responsibility
- Other: Owner/others have right to appeal if they can provide reasons why reconsideration may be valid (particularly in euthanize verdicts)
- Other: Owners are able to keep the dog throughout the process and are able to issue a statement Regarding the incident.
- Other: Owners are also evaluated.
- Other: Owners are responsible for their dogs as well as their dogs training and therefore should have to take classes on how to properly raise and train their dog rather than punished animals who have been trained to act the way they do
- Other: Owners can appeal a decision and it's not solely focused on a breed
- Other: Owners given the chance to implement restrictions prior to any further action
- Other: Owners had an option to appeal tribunal decisions if they felt it was unjust.
- Other: Owners have a fair chance to dispute/ defend their animals and case
- Other: Owners receive final say in their family member being put to sleep. it is not someones decision to kill your dog on their own merits
- Other: Owners should be held responsible for their dogs behavior not the dogs.

- Other: Owners should have the choice to pursue the tribunal or wait for court. Tribunals can only recommend euthanasia, this would have to be determined/ruled by the court. Your list doesn't mention hear testimony on behalf of the dog/owner..
- Other: Owners treatment and training methods taken heavily into consideration.
- Other: Owners were able to participate and show if they have been working to address behaviour issues. If the owner has been working with a dog behaviourist that this person is also included in the dogs assessment and tribunal.
- Other: Owners were offered the ability to bring their animal to training before euthanasia. At which point the trainer determines if the animal is safe enough to continue.
- Other: Ownership on the dog owner not based on breed of dog
- Other: P
- Other: Paid for by pet owner. Tax payers shouldn't front the costs.
- Other: Panel including behaviourist/veterinarian
- Other: Panel members are trained animal professionals / behaviour specialists, etc. and are required to assess the dog in person.
- Other: Parties from a program such as the Humane Society are included on the panel
- Other: Peace officers are properly trained to work with "nuisance dogs" and the owner is heard throughout the tribunal. As a pitbull owner, I was once handed a fine by a peace officer because he deemed my dog "vicious". My dog was scared because this peace officer decided to run her down on his bike, instead of waiting for her to come to me. If these peace officer are not regulated and my dog (a part of my family) is euthanized, I will sue for wrongful death. I'm sure many more petowners out there would be willing to put money into a lawyer for outrageous accusations like this from Peace officers.
- Other: penalties on the owner were significant deterrents to prevent bad training and encourage responsible pet ownership - dogs, and pit bulls especially, are never bad inherently they're just taught bad behaviour by bad owners!!
- Other: Pending investigation of why the dog might have been triggered in the first place. Were they put in a bad situation and felt threatened? As long as human error is taken into account. They are still animals no matter what breed.
- Other: People appointed need to have appropriate knowledge of animals
- Other: People educated in dogs are on the tribunal.
- Other: People have the opportunity to appeal
- Other: People involved were experts in animal behaviours, vets, trainers etc.
- Other: People must be given the chance to appeal this process prior to euthanasia. Also we must screen those on the tribunal.
- Other: People on the board had better have real life knowledge of dogs behavior not just a diploma from an online course.
- Other: People on the committee were knowledgeable in dog training/dog trauma and there were many biases represented
- Other: People on the tribunal are educated in dog health and behaviour

- Other: People on the tribunal should have dog behaviour knowledge.
- Other: People selected to make the decision are reviewed and also have no signs of prejudice against certain breeds. Things like people with experience in dog behavior and/or laws regarding these types of incidents.
- Other: people who own dogs of varying variety, vets, animal behavior experts and people who deal with animals at large like SPCAs, shelters and similar should make up the tribunal
- Other: periodic follow-ups to the dog owner (3-6-9 months) to ensure compliance with tribunal findings
- Other: Persons on the tribunal include humans society or SPCA staff, vets, and others familiar with dogs, their care, health and behaviours.
- Other: Persons on the tribunal includes professionals in the canine field (ie. professional dog trainers, representative from the Humane society, representative from AARCS, veterinarians, or the like). Regular citizens do not have the dog behaviour knowledge needed to make decisions about a dog's welfare in this instance.
- Other: Pet owner should be able to represent themselves or retain counsel to represent them and address the tribunal.
- Other: Pet stays with their owner
- Other: Pets should not be euthanized. Special training would be a better, more humane option.
- Other: Pit bulls and bully breeds are not targeted based on breed and given a fair review
- Other: Pit bulls and bully breeds are not to be singled out simply because of their breed
- Other: PIT BULLS ARE LIKE ANY OTHER DOG
- Other: Pit bulls are not unfairly judged more harshly than other dogs as they are generally much sweeter in nature
- Other: Pit bulls shouldn't be discriminated against
- Other: Pitbull appearance dogs ARE NOT necessarily pitbulls and need to be classified differently!!
- Other: Pitbulls are not marginalized as a vicious breed. ALL large breeds are capable of being aggressive. My pitbull has been attacked twice and never strikes back.
- Other: Pitbulls should not be singled out
- Other: Pitbulls shouldn't be singled out, very specific when it is about who owns the animal and the training they put into it. NOT the dog/Breed
- Other: Pitbulls aren't being treated unfairly. Let people have their [removed] dogs and make training cheaper and easier through programs. This is dumb
- Other: Please include dog experts ex) vets, trainers etc
- Other: Please review, why is first case to euthanize?
- Other: Potential tribunal members would need to be screened the same way a jury is screened
- Other: Precedence for seizing or euthanizing a dog as set by the court and not by judgement of tribunal members
- Other: Preference towards avoiding euthanization at all costs. This should be a very rare extreme case ruling.

- Other: Process being followed. Exploring all options including rehoming as I believe issues are a result of bad owners, not bad dogs.
- Other: Professional certified trainers being involved in the assessment process
- Other: Professional dog trainers on tribunal.
- Other: Professionals with dog expertise(handling, training, REHABILITATING) should be regulating and creating laws. No one else.
- Other: Professionals, such as a vet and behaviour specialist, were on the tribunal
- Other: Proper balance to the members of tribunal. Include vets, shelter worker, etc.
- Other: proper evaluation of the representative, proper experience, and proper review of the situation, I find people make a judgement without all the facts and think they are dog specialists and they are not. It would have to be a specifically trainer PANEL of reps not just one
- Other: Proper evidence is collected and decision are made on actual case facts and not assumption. Moreover the time frame is short and fast!
- Other: Proper psychological assessment of the owner, proper assessment from a dog behaviourist
- Other: Proper qualifications held by tribunal members
- Other: Proper training, including some basic veterinary training, for those who determine whether or not the dog should be euthanized.
- Other: Properly educated
- Other: Properly educated persons be on the tribunal
- Other: Properly look at the animal as another life notmkist some stray or evil dog, and help the owner find classes for the dog including obedience training
- Other: Provided fair and just support for the animal and not just assuming guilt, or discriminating by breed.
- Other: Provided outdated breed specific prejudice is not a factor in selecting tribunal representatives.
- Other: Provided there's an opportunity for an opportunity to take the case to provincial court if a party wants to dispute the tribunal outcome.
- Other: Provincial court is the proper method for handing these matters.
- Other: Public has a say in how tribunal members are selected
- Other: Punish people, not pets.
- Other: Punishment fits the crime
- Other: puppy training and following through with training. I believe all puppy's should have mandatory puppy classes.
- Other: Puts the dogs best interest first.
- Other: Putting a animal down should be the last resort
- Other: Putting a dog to sleep as a last resort invitatie the dogs home and how it's being treated
- Other: Putting in place a training program for 'problem' dogs and their owners to allow for reintegration to standard society rather than immediate punishment
- Other: Qualified & capable poeple participate, is financially reasonable
- Other: Qualified and informed representatives for all parties involved.

- Other: Qualified animal behaviour specialist reside on the committee. No arbitrary city councilpersons
- Other: Qualified board members, vets, behavioural specialists.
- Other: Qualified personnel to speak to the matters. Eg. Dog behaviour experts
- Other: Qualified personnel, dog owners and professionals who deal with dogs on the tribunal not just suits
- Other: Qualified staff
- Other: Qualified vets/Dog behaviourists
- Other: Qualified, and diverse panel with differing backgrounds (Ex. Veterinarian, reputable trainers and breeders, breed expert, etc...)
- Other: Quarantine to the owner's home and property until the tribunal concludes.
- Other: Re training or obedience training over euthanasia
- Other: regardless of outcome the owner minimally must complete an online training and test... and attend training sessions with their dog. It shouldn't be called Dog Obedience.... they need to understand it is focused on being a responsible pet owner and learning ways to manage their pet.
- Other: Registered trained professionals from dog trainers, bylaw officers and a veterinarian
- Other: Regulated professional behavioral experts are on the panel. Not a kangaroo court.
- Other: Regulations similar to the provincial process are followed. It is not a single person's decision to deter from bias.
- Other: rehabilitating the offending canine, instead of euthanizing or giving it back to incapable owners
- Other: Rehabilitation instead of being put down. No deaths are necessary.
- Other: Rehabilitation is considered for the animal as an alternative to euthanasia first
- Other: Rehabilitation not death sentence
- Other: Rehabilitation over euthanasia
- Other: rehoming and rehabilitating "vicious" dogs is the alternative to euthanasia.
- Other: Remember that there are many reasons why dogs bite, being vicious isn't the only one. They bite when they feel uncomfortable, stressed, cornered, and so many other reasons. A dog biting once does not mean it is a vicious dog.
- Other: Removal of the euthanasia clause; tribunal must include animal behavioural experts
- Other: Remove euthanasia option
- Other: Report from the dog's veterinarian. Representatives from the community.
- Other: Representation be dog owners and non dog owners but no one with a nuisance dog or someone already hurt by a dog
- Other: representation from professionals in animals
- Other: Representatives are educated on the topic of canine aggression and unbiased to certain breeds
- Other: Representatives are from shelters and rescue foundations, and have animal interests as top priority.

- Other: Representatives include experienced dog trainers/handlers with a proven understanding of behaviours
- Other: Representatives must be fair and understand dog behavior/backgrounds. There must be enough time to appeal if necessary.
- Other: Representatives reviewing the orders need to be dog behaviourists/highly skilled trainers. Dogs should not be assessed in the shelter where the additional stress, trauma and fear they are under can illicit unnatural reactions due to the environment and circumstances.
- Other: Representatives were screened appropriately as to reduce bias.
- Other: Representatives would be experts in training and animal behaviour and the owner would be presented with options to keep the dog alive.
- Other: Restrictions are not breed specific, but rather suit the offences
- Other: Review and asses whether the dog is better cared for at home while waiting for court. Lets look at alternative measures and not euthanization,with no other options.
- Other: Review by the province
- Other: Review orders
- Other: Review the conditions the dog is living in. ie has the dog been conditioned by the OWNER to exhibit vicious behaviour.
- Other: Review the owners ability to properly train a dog, suggest dog training classes
- Other: Review the situation thoroughly and not assume that the dog was in the wrong. There is always two sides to a story and a dog cannot tell us theirs. If a dog is being harassed by a stranger, or someone enters an area that they protect (ie. backyard of a home) it is not fair to assume that the dog is aggressive, but to consider that this is the dog's home, and they are doing their job to protect their family.
- Other: Review vicious dog declarations and assess by a qualified and unbiased trainer if the dog should be euthanized
- Other: Review was done in a jury system
- Other: Reviewed by veterianian and dog behavioural specialist
- Other: Reviews should not be taken lightly.
- Other: Right to appeal judgements.
- Other: Right to speedy appeal
- Other: Safety for the public is at the forefront, and cases are all handled in a timely matter with in Stone rules for certain nuisance behaviours
- Other: said people in tribunal were screen for bias against breeds and dogs in general. tribunal made up of at least 5 people.
- Other: Sane and rational people should be a part of the tribunal.
- Other: Selection process involves community, members have training in non-bias and anti-racism
- Other: Sesiure and Euthanasia decisions would be reviewed by a third party before action was taken.
- Other: Set rules in place that people can also read.

- Other: Setting up a Tribunal seems like a big expense for the City for something that I hope doesn't happen all that often. Why not just make the pet owner post bail for their nuisance animal (dog)?
- Other: Several owners(jury) of the same breed to aide in the character of the dog and breed. They would know better than a bunch of uneducated suits who have never owned an animal.
- Other: should be done on a case by case basis. Not all dogs are a problem and almost goes back to treatment they face at home by their owner
- Other: should consist of animal specialists and pet owners only
- Other: Should it be deemed to be euthanized, then it must go to court first.
- Other: Should not allow them to decide on whether to euthanize
- Other: Since the majority of dog attacks seem to result in euthanizing the animal, I would only support this if a) euthanasia was only considered as an absolute last resort, favouring training and rehabilitation first, and b) all factors of the both incident and the animal's history are taken into account. If an external stressor results in a bite from a dog with otherwise no history, it is totally unfair and inhumane to euthanize that animal.
- Other: sit reinforcement and credible) SPCA etc
- Other: So as the dog involved in the incident is only evaluated based on the actual incident itself; not its breed.
- Other: So long as it was NOT breed specific. Breed specific legislation is the brainchild of ignorant, misinformed, uneducated people. Breed specific legislation is the animal equivalent of racism and should not be tolerated. A dogs behavior is entirely dependent upon their OWNER and NOTHING to do with the breed.
- Other: So long as it's headed by those with either veterinary training, or animal training backgrounds.
- Other: So long as the tribunal had unbiased (towards breeds, situations, socioeconomic status etc) members making judgements on cases.
- Other: so long as there is an unbiased animal advocate on the panel
- Other: So long as they are not going to punish some breeds more than others
- Other: So long as this is geared towards "nuisance" dogs as a whole and not just one breed of dog! (ie. pits!)
- Other: Some type of trainer or class the the owner and or dog has to take in order to keep the dog
- Other: Someone in the tribunal must be a dog handling expert with no breed biases.
- Other: Someone on the panel must be a dog behaviourist
- Other: someone trained to deal with bully breeds and similar dogs is involved in deciding if said dog is overly aggressive
- Other: Someone with proper education in dog behaviour must be present on the tribunal
- Other: Sometimes it's the people's fault on why a dog attacks or bites someone. How would you like it if your ears or tail were getting pulled in every direction? Causing the animals to attack or bite.
- Other: Special consideration must be paid to the owner. The dog is an animal taught a behavior. The owner is at fault not the pet
- Other: Specialists would be better to deal with these cases

- Other: Specific guidelines to assess individual cases. Tribunals should be able to maintain objectivity throughout the process
- Other: statements on behalf of the dog should be allowed from neighbors and or people who have had experiences with said dog. Some dogs aren't great with strangers or men for example but that doesn't mean the dog should be taken away ever.
- Other: Stay at home order for the dog
- Other: Stay breed neutral and punish bad owners
- Other: Still holding every condition that would have been set out by an actual court case.
- Other: STOP blaming the [removed] dogs and blame the owners. The dogs shouldn't be punished but the owner. It is the owners negligence for not training/watching the dog. Also in some cases it is the plaintiff (victim) is responsible for provoking the attack
- Other: Stop discriminating against bully breeds! You said yourself they don't bite more than other dogs yet continue to single them out.
- Other: Stop euthanasia and require retraining or rehoming in severe cases.
- Other: Stop euthanizing dogs for human stupidity. Their behavior is almost always a direct result of either their "owners" training or lack thereof or the victims actions.
- Other: Stop pointing fingers at certain breeds and only focus on dogs being a nuisance
- Other: Stricter fines and sentences for owners. Constant an animal will get punished for the lack of responsibility shown by its owner
- Other: Subject to review by the court of queens bench
- Other: Sufficient evidence of incident and dog to remain on property at all times with family until decision
- Other: Supports Calgary Humane Society and City of Calgary ideals.
- Other: Sure
- Other: Sure
- Other: Take into account if the dog was being attacked or taunted by the victim in question. Even the most well trained dogs have a breaking point if continuously harassed.
- Other: Take into account the entire scene, not just a he said she said case.
- Other: Take into account the history and not the breed of the dog. Breeds aren't the issue the owners that raise the breed is the ISSUE !!
- Other: Take into consideration if the owner of that animal has trained it properly and taken the time to take care of it properly. The behaviour of the animal reflects on the persons actions in training it, NOT the animal itself.
- Other: Take into consideration, owner and previous incidents
- Other: Take the dogs away from people who are training these dogs for bait and dog fighting , make stricter Guidelines to who can own a pit bull and require the owner to take training on their own aswell training for the dog to BENEFIT both partys. DO NOT EUTHANIZE A DOG WITHOUT TAKING THE TIME TO UNDERSTAND THE SITUATION ITS IN! BAN BAD DOG OWNERS NOT THE BREED
- Other: Takes into account the ability of the owner to reform and is not breed targeted

- Other: Takes into consideration the behavior of the person that was bit, maybe they deserved it.
- Other: Th
- Other: That euthanization is the last option even considered after training and more than one violent incident
- Other: That 2 impartial qualified animal behaviourists and veterinarians are to make qualifying decisions on if the animal is a candidate for behavioural rehabilitation
- Other: that all dogs be considered equal regardless of the breed. Appearance does not mean the dog is a nuisance. Say no to animal prejudice. Pit bull matter
- Other: That any decision be able to be appealed in court.
- Other: That any owner involved in this process is allowed to make their fair case on their pet. A bad incident doesn't always mean a bad pet, and there's always 2 sides to every story. Not just the victim, not just the bylaw, but the owners and pets as well.
- Other: That any single breed of dog is not singled out. All the choices are labelling pitbulls specifically and that is not fair to the breed. Shards, Huskies, and little "froo-froo" dogs like chihuahuas can be as bad.
- Other: That both parties have been interviewed, and it is known to not be a case of a person provoking an animal (EG: Kids poking, sitting on, rough-housing a dog/cat)
- Other: That bully breed trainers be a large part of this. They understand the breed and they would determine the dogs behaviour and have suggestions
- Other: That City or non-City representatives included very dog-knowledgeable people or took into account the opinion of a dog whisperer or other breed knowledgeable person.
- Other: That dogs are held if deemed to be euthanized until decision is appealed.
- Other: That dogs be given the same rights as people. No discrimination.
- Other: That each dog be given an appropriate amount of training by a trainer experienced and agreed upon by both the city and the dog owner.
- Other: That euthanasia was off the table. And rehabilitation was on the table.
- Other: That euthanization should be the absolute last resort. But, also, that more often than not, it is most likely the owner that is the reason for a vicious or uncontrollable dog. And that education is the best option, but relocation for the dog is a better alternative over euthanization.
- Other: that euthanization would only be considered a last resort, and only for severe harm (e.g. when another pet is killed, or a human sustains severe injury)
- Other: That euthanizing them was a last resort choice and have tried multiple things to appease the problem and all have failed
- Other: That experts with science based techniques/training on dog behaviour are on this tribunal
- Other: That families participate in tribunal mandated training before euthanasia is EVER considered. Additionally, is the home environment explored before anything else? Its the owners fault, not the dog's.
- Other: That if the owner doesn't agree with the tribunal's opinion, they can still go the usual court route, not as an "appeal" in the sense that the court looks for technicalities in the tribunal's decision, but for the court to look at the situation as a "fresh case."

- Other: That if the results of the Tribunal are solid and the harm that the dog inflicted due to the owner lack of care and attention - i.e. not a simple accident and out of character situation - then the owner cannot file to the Bench.
- Other: That if the tribunal came to the conclusion that a dog should be euthanized, this must then automatically proceed to the Court of Queen's Bench. I would not support the tribunal being given the authority to euthanize animals.
- Other: That is sped up the process, but does not change the evaluation of each case - if speeding up means not actually listening to what happened, this is not an improvement.
- Other: That it be based on the incident itself and not on the breed only.
- Other: That it be fair and holistically look at the situation, with termination of the pet being the absolute last resort. Look at solutions such as behavioural training.
- Other: That it be for all dogs and not just Pitbulls
- Other: That it doesn't cost the taxpayer more than the current system. In this economic time please do not waste more precious taxpayer dollars on this,
- Other: That it is a non-biased review, and done in a professional manner
- Other: That it is a panel voted on by the public or by shelters and includes at least two members from independent shelters
- Other: That it isn't discriminatory against breed.
- Other: That it takes the specific circumstances into account.
- Other: That it were fair
- Other: That it would be a non-biased way to ensure the dog could return home (with conditions such as training)
- Other: That it's only on NUISANCE dogs
- Other: That judgement is not prejudiced by breed.
- Other: That members be screened for bias favoring breed-specific legislation, which does not belong in our city.
- Other: That multiple agencies are involved.
- Other: That multiple professional opinions are taken into account and not just one. Animals behave differently around all people and other animals. This too can be said for how people act around others and animals. Multiple professional opinions is a must
- Other: That neighbours and others in the vicinity be contacted as character witnesses for the dog, owner, and victim.
- Other: that no one on the panel has a hate on for bully breeds!
- Other: That only extremely dangerous neglected dogs be put down in the most extreme of circumstances. Issue fines and obedience classes, dog socializing classes, for 1st and 2nd offenses. Give owners time to try and rehabilitate the dog with proper training that the owner should pay for.
- Other: That people on the tribunal had knowledge and experience with dogs/dog training
- Other: That specific breeds of dogs are not discriminated against
- Other: That specific breeds of dogs are NOT discriminated against.

- Other: That the animal go through training to correct all bad behaviour and extensive searching of how the owner brought up the dog and raised it (it's not the dogs fault if the owner abuses the dog. It's a defence, you wouldn't kill a human that was abused for reacting)
- Other: That the decision can be appealed in court, ESPECIALLY euthanasia cases. I believe that the owner should be able to opt to explore any option (with court approval of methods) before the city would be allowed to step in and euthanize the dog (example: training, moving to a different environment out of the city, dog needs to be kept indoors away from other people etc. This would be at owners expense. Dogs are like family to some people and if they are willing to spend the time and money I don't think we should be so quick to euthanize problem dogs. Of course of behaviour continues and dog is still a problem, owner not complying then dog should be considered to be euthanized.
- Other: That the decision was fair not based off of discrimination (breed of dog)
- Other: That the dog And owner are allowed to be together until the case is closed
- Other: That the dog be helped and not put down
- Other: That the dog must be assessed by an animal behaviorist from outside the city's jurisdiction. Someone brought in to asses an animal that is not jaded by the "news" and can fairly and accurately asses the animal.
- Other: That the dog was not provoked to bite. Ie a kid running over the dog with its toy
- Other: That the incidents were caused by kids/teenagers/adults taunting /abusing the animal.
- Other: that the law doesn't go through.
- Other: That the members choosen do not have an pre conceived ideas about certain breeds. The judgement needs to be fairly assessed. Breeds do not make an animal aggressive, small dogs can and sometimes are much more aggressive than a pit bull breed.
- Other: That the members of the tribunal would be from a variety of backgrounds that focus on animal care, training and wellness as well as bylaw or other agencies.
- Other: That the owner process of member selection not be political appointments and that the non-city members be people who have the welfare of animals and their people As a priority, that the tribunal be given ongoing education on both animal behaviour and reactions as well as human behaviour and reaction. AND al members be given equal standing.
- Other: That the owners behaviour is accessed during this time. More often then not dogs poor behaviours are a result of mistreatment or abuse from the owner.
- Other: That the panel consists of equal amounts of members of both sex and minorities and also dog owners.
- Other: That the people involved in the decisions are welcome to the idea of animals or are comfortable with them. People who are not are more negatively going to look at cases
- Other: that the people on the board are true pet lovers, and will listen to the full story and ask the correct question to bring out the honest truth , because the victim will adjust their story or exaggerate the story and possibly miss very important events of the incident and same on owners story , board need strong open minds to make a correct decision , and not have a animal labelled incorrectly
- Other: That the people sitting on the panel are dog knowledgeable people

- Other: That the people who are in charge are educated and unbiased. So far this survey is very bias on pit bulls and vague on what is a nuisance dog.
- Other: That the person doing the reviewing was not biased on either side.
- Other: That the person's conducting the tribunal are educated and unbiased
- Other: That the tribunal include animal behaviour experts and not merely uninformed politicians.
- Other: That the tribunal include professional trainers/behaviourist experiences in working with behaviour issues in dogs
- Other: That the tribunal includes at least 1 veterinarian and 1 dog behaviorist
- Other: That the tribunal is made up of knowledgeable individuals who have no breed bias.
- Other: That the tribunal is not made up of people who don't like dogs. Plus, not having euthanizing as the first option is a dog is considered dangerous. Have an option for the owner to put the dog through training first
- Other: That the tribunal must be within a set period of time. It would not serve its purpose if the time frame was not set and adhered to. Cases could be dealt with in a week but if there was a backlog, it could be much longer. There must be a time frame that can be met.
- Other: That there are individuals from differing backgrounds and knowledge standpoints regarding dogs
- Other: That there be an appeals process for pets declared dangerous and slated for euthanasia
- Other: That there is fair representation and no biased opinion against certain breeds
- Other: That there is follow through to ensure owners are abiding by the decisions put forth.
- Other: That there is no prejudice or bias towards a specific breed
- Other: That there is recourse to appeal
- Other: That there is two or more dog behaviouralist on the tribunal.
- Other: That there was a dog owner option to openly challenge any by law officer, and that the dog owner automatically receives a copy of any paperwork / report(s) submitted by any such by law officer.
- Other: That there would be absolutely no biases towards any dog breed and that a sincere consideration be taken into the habits of the owner and NOT the dog. No matter the breed
- Other: That they do not judge a case by the breed. Any case being heard should have the breed omitted in the reports
- Other: That they don't discriminate against breed but individual dogs.
- Other: That they take into account events leading up to the bite and not just the fact that an animal attacked.
- Other: that they were open minded on all the breeds of dogs and not just after one breed. And understand that they must look at all the facts and what was going on.
- Other: That this isn't just limited to pit bulls. Small dogs are some of the most aggressive breeds out there. There needs to be more education around breeds
- Other: That those on the tribunal are screened for dog breed biases (eg. negative biased opinions on pit bull type breeds, etc).

- Other: That those who are exploring the case are unbiased like jury in a court case.
- Other: That you can Challenge their decision
- Other: That you [removed] off with this inane [removed] and fight drug crime
- Other: That you guys don't just use this role against Pit Bulls, they're as loving as any other dog. ALL dogs bite. Don't just point fingers at the Pitties
- Other: That you look at the owner and make sure they arnt abusing there dog before even considering putting them down it is never the animals fault its is always the owners fault and i think that the animal should get a second chance also i think the dog should not be in that person care anymore and that they be rehabilitate before eeuthanization should be even a thought.
- Other: That's if the dog is determined to be dangerous that further behavioural evaluation be take by a professional.
- Other: That's euthanizing is not an option
- Other: The "City and non-city representatives" go through proper education and are properly vetted to make the decision they need to.
- Other: The animal and owner are checked regularly if not euthanized. If animal needs to be euthanized then that owner should be banned from any new pets until they have taken courses in training puppies and dogs
- Other: The animal can stay with its owner and training is encouraged.
- Other: The animal does not suffer at the hands of the owner. Place the dog into foster care. 99.9% of attacks are provoked and not the dogs fault.
- Other: The animal in question sho3be left inder the owner's supervision (with strict guidelines) whenever possible.
- Other: The animal is overseen by a qualified vet and behaviourist
- Other: The animal should get a chance to be rehabilitated and trained properly.
- Other: The animal stays home with its owner with guidelines
- Other: The animal stays on residence
- Other: The animal stays with the owner, as long as the owner is not a clear and present danger to the animal.
- Other: The animalls properly vetted and an animal behaviourist assesses the dog - the animal could not be euthanized until an appeal is complete
- Other: The best interests of the people involved and the animal. All aspects should be considered before an animal is euthanized.
- Other: The breed of dog be considered irrelevant, and all cases treated based on severity.
- Other: The breed of dog is not allowed to be taken into consideration through the tribunal. The onus must be on the owner, and the blame not placed on the dog.
- Other: the breed of the animal is not included in the report or decision. final say should be decided on the facts of the incident and not be biased by breed. all animals and persons involved will be treated as equals of no specific breed, race, colour or religion. a blind court type of situation.
- Other: The breed of the dog is not important. All dogs are not bred to be mean. Owners are the ones that make dogs act the way they do.

- Other: The breed of the dog wasn't the main focus
- Other: The breed of the dog would not be a factor. There are no bad dogs, just bad owners.
- Other: The breed or suspected dog breed should be left out of the hearing. A dog bite is a dog bite, regardless of breed and should all be treated the same whether inflicted by a Shetland Sheepdog or pit bull
- Other: the breed should not affect decision-making
- Other: The bylaw officers are NOT known to the offender. Too many "friends" helping people cheat the bylaws
- Other: The care for the animal needs to be a priority, a stressed or aggravated dog needs to get home where they feel asap.
- Other: The case be handled in a manner, that focuses on the moments leading up to the bite incident. Was the animal teased, harmed or egged on? Did the owner act to stop the event?
- Other: The case be very carefully looked at and considered before declaring a dog to be put down. There is a lot of harsh dog deaths by both cops and for biting. If a dog is protecting someone in danger or just known for barking it should be able to live.
- Other: the chance to fight for an appeal happens before anything is allowed to be done to the dog (euthanize)
- Other: The city and non city representatives consist of people who are actually educated on dogs (Vets, dog behavioral experts, etc.) and are not biased about specific breeds.
- Other: The city and non city representatives should be voted in
- Other: The city and non-city representatives are individuals that have a history of working with dogs, are knowledgeable on the subject of aggressive behaviours in dogs, and will not discriminate against dogs on the basis of the dog's breed.
- Other: The city and non-city representatives need to be vetted somehow, as to not show bias one way or another
- Other: the City and non-City representatives were actually trained in animal behavior and qualified by science based certifying agencies, and have no breed bias
- Other: The city of Calgary cannot euthanize dogs if they are protecting themselves, children in a yard, etc.
- Other: The committee is formed of non-biased personnel, meaning they would not discriminate against a dog simply because of its breed.
- Other: The committee was on a rotation. I would not support the same people to make the decision every time.
- Other: The counsel selected to make decision is screened thoroughly to ensure they do not have malicious intentions or are inclined to sociopathic tendencies
- Other: The court system is too back logged that they cannot process the case in an efficient manner.
- Other: The decision could still be appealed in court
- Other: The decision is always based upon the best interests of the dog
- Other: The decision makers should be vetted heavily to make sure they are making empathetic decisions.
- Other: The decision to euthanise a dog should not fall to a tribunal

- Other: The decision to euthanize must be escalated to the courts.
- Other: The decision was to be made by multiple (at least 5) unbiased experts. Dog training, dog psychology, behavioral ect. That testing should also occur multiple times and including at the dogs home and not in a scary jail-like environment.
- Other: The dog and owner in question should not be subjected to different rules due to breed. Ex. A Caucasian Shepherd looks nothing like a pitbull and can do similar or greater damage.
- Other: The dog and owner remain unseparated, supervised and the dog cannot leave the owner's property, unless there is a requirement for it.
- Other: The dog assessments were completed by a panel of dog behavior experts with accreditations of DVM and CBCC-KA
- Other: The dog being euthanized would be the last resort. Give the owner the opportunity to agree to keep the animal on their property for a certain amount of time. And investigate if the victim edged on the attack first.
- Other: The dog bite is considered a non-defensive violent attack
- Other: The dog breed is not identified.
- Other: The dog by law must remain in the household of the owner. Being locked up in a kennel can be a trigger to certain dogs, especially those who were rescued from a similar situation.
- Other: The dog can remain in the home and the owner is provided with resources to learn how to manage the problem behaviour.
- Other: The dog can stay with owner instead of in the shelter.
- Other: The dog cannot be blamed for the attack, it is the owners fault. The dog itself is innocent and it cannot be euthanized.
- Other: The dog could be in a training course during the system
- Other: The dog could stay at it's own property
- Other: The dog could stay with the owner in the meantime, as long as they were meeting with a force-free dog trainer to help them work on their dog's problems and to better assess the behavior of the dog
- Other: the dog deserves a change 90% is owner error
- Other: The dog does not get out down
- Other: The dog doesn't disappear by the time the decision is handed over. There should be a huge fine if the dog "disappears" before the verdict.
- Other: The dog got to go home with it's owner in the intern
- Other: The dog has killed a person or another animal. Bites or small attacks the dogs should not be euthanized but rehabilitated and potentially be on house arrest or along those lines
- Other: The dog in question would be assessed by 2 licensed behavioural specialists to make a determination. Only those well trained to make assessments should make that decision.
- Other: The dog involved is not euthanized; just regimes if necessary
- Other: the dog is kept in quarantine at home while waiting for a decision by the tribunal.

- Other: The dog is not euthanized until all other options are exhausted (obedience training, muzzle, adoption to an agency that could handle this etc)
- Other: The dog is not euthanized; the city provides extensive training before it is considered
- Other: The dog is not kept in a cage/kennel for long periods of time. Should be released to owner, paying a "like bail" fee. If the dog re-offends, then the "bail" is kept by tribunal/courts and more serious action should be taken. Otherwise, just trust the owner/dog combo to be better in future.
- Other: The dog is not seized and can remain with the owner within their home, private property, and muzzled while off the property
- Other: The dog is not taken to a shelter. Taking a dog out of its comfort zone will make it more anxious, therefore making it more likely to be "aggressive" and more dogs will just be euthanized for having normal anxiety responses
- Other: The dog is now allowed off of private property while this is in court. Also, the yard would have to pass security inspection of the yard.
- Other: The dog is placed in a foster home during the court case
- Other: The dog is released to its owner on bail and with conditions.
- Other: the dog must be "innocent until proven guilty" very rarely do dogs just bite, there is usually a trigger associated with the attack.
- Other: The dog must be given the benefit of the doubt. Owners need to train any and all dogs.
- Other: The dog needs to be assessed for aggression by a professional trainer.
- Other: The dog owner is NOT automatically deemed guilty because of how the dog reacted. Dogs give out plenty of warning signals and it's on people to take responsibility for how they interact with dogs, known or unknown.
- Other: The dog receive a behavioral assessment by a expert in animal behavior.
- Other: The dog remains in home but can't leave property until tribunal system is conducted.
- Other: The dog remains in the owners home with restrictions of remaining on the property
- Other: The dog should be assessed by a trained personnel to see if the dog is aggressive because of the owners negligence rather than a vicious dog
- Other: The dog should be rehomed to an aggressive breed specialists, not put down.
- Other: The dog should have the option to be able to stay home with their owner.
- Other: The dog should not be assessed and immediately declared a risk that needs to be euthanized. Additional home restrictions should be placed on the owners and the dog to prevent future incidents while the decision is made; the dog should not be surrendered to the shelter. The owner should face severe fines if the restrictions are breached.
- Other: The dog should not be assessed for euthanization.
- Other: The dog should not be euthanized! I say the animal being taken away and provided to the appropriate shelter. Or mandatory training in pending removal of pet. The pet's behaviour is a mirror image from its environment holistically. If the owner cannot prove themselves able to care for the pet (mental, physical, social, and emotional needs) then it will be taken away. Just euthanizing a dog doesn't bring the owner who is responsible for their behaviour to really deal with it. Maybe the owner be banned from owning a pet in the future.

- Other: The dog should not be euthanized, the owner should be fined or the animal should be rehomed if they are unable to properly care and train it.
- Other: The dog stays at home
- Other: The dog stays in the owners property until the bearing is done. The dog would not be allowed off the property.
- Other: The dog stays with its owner until a decision has been made.
- Other: The dog stays with its owner until a decision is made
- Other: The dog stays with the owner during the process. The dog is not euthanized. The dog goes for training. The owner is fined and banned from owning dogs.
- Other: The dog undergoes obedience training after an incident prior to being euthanized. Must show improvement; rather than immediate death
- Other: The dog was able to be back in the possession of the owner under strict conditions until the court/decision can be made on what to do. It is not the dogs fault for poor ownership and lack of training and obedience.
- Other: The dog was not kept in the kennel for more than a week
- Other: The dog was not put down and instead trained.
- Other: The dog was placed in rehabilitation and being euthanized is not an option. It is not the dog. The owners are the one responsible for the dogs behavior.
- Other: The dog would be on a house arrest so to speak, the dog may stay with its owner until the court ruling has been completed
- Other: The dog would have to be analyzed by a dog behaviourist to determine the best courses of action for said tribunal.
- Other: The dogs absolute best interests are first, and the humans who have trained or taken care of the dog in such a way that it feels the need to attack are Held responsible, not the innocent pet.
- Other: The dogs are allowed to live in their own home while procedures take place
- Other: The dogs best interest is in the forefront. The people responsible for making this decision should be put through extensive education on animal behaviour before they get to make a decision about euthanizing any animals.
- Other: The DOGS best interest is the priority.
- Other: The dogs breed is not relevant to the decision whether to euthanize.
- Other: The dogs owner is allowed to defend themselves and their animal in a fair trial. Right now it just sounds like a bunch of people saying whats done with the dog without any input from the dogs owner or their representative (lawyer).
- Other: The dog's owner should be able to choose between tribunal and court; also tribunal needs to be fair, transparent, and run by intelligent people with vision and common sense.
- Other: The equivalent of social worker inspections: unannounced surprise checks on owners.
- Other: The euthanization of dogs should be reserved for only the most extreme cases. The decision to euthanize should not be made by a single person.
- Other: The evidence is clear and all measures have been assessed.

- Other: The experience of the representatives
- Other: The focus of the tribunal should be on the owner's behaviour, not the dogs. There are no bad dogs, just bad owners.
- Other: The full case is looked into and the City is willing to work with owners for offences eg/ a bit warrants house arrest for the dog. No public parks. No off leash. Muzzled in public. Fines or seizures for failing to comply
- Other: The goal should be rehabilitation and enforced training of the dog and surrender if the owners do not agree.
- Other: The home in which the dogs lives would need to be approved as a safe location in which there is little risk of the dog escaping. No bias in the process based on the breed (or apparent breed) of the dog.
- Other: the human be euthanized as they are the problem. And have laws for them not to be able to own a dog again
- Other: The humane society is involved in the case.
- Other: The idea of inflicting less trauma is amazing. As long as it doesn't result in rushes decisions.
- Other: The immediate response is not to just euthanize the animal. Perhaps additional training requirements could be an alternative. Dogs that bite are usually fear reactive, not aggressive. That can be trained out of them.
- Other: The individual splinted was actually qualified to make these determinations
- Other: The individuals are unbiased
- Other: The individuals on the tribunal for it to be fair MUST be neutral in their opinion of all dogs regardless of breed. If they have a bias against certain breeds or display this trait they must be removed from the tribunal.
- Other: The individuals sitting on the board understand a bias they may have towards certain breeds of dogs. A bias that I'm disgusted to read in this questionnaire against pitbulls.
- Other: The involved members of the tribunal have representation of larger dog breeds, and precautions are taken to ensure that there is absolutely no bias
- Other: The judge be knowledgeable in dog behavior if not having them attend a class on normal dog behavior (prey drive...ect)
- Other: The members are focused on the individual dog and owner not the breed in anyway. The owners are responsible for training their dogs regardless of breed
- Other: The members are required and PROVEN to have no biases against certain breeds
- Other: The members either worked in the animal care field or was vetted to not have any breed bias
- Other: The members have experience with dogs and dog training and will judge based on actions and not breed or appearance
- Other: The members of the panel varied and alternated. The panel was made up from nurses, veterinarian, an bylaw officer and management on a rotating schedule. To keep the panel impartial.
- Other: The members of the tribunal are actually informed and educated about bully breed dogs

- Other: The members of the tribunal are significantly vetted and go through a robust process to ensure no bias/issues
- Other: The members of the tribunal have extensive knowledge and experience with dog training and behavior. This would make it fair to all those involved as a random person off the street would have no knowledge and could easily make the wrong assumptions.
- Other: The members of the tribunal have no history of lobbying against certain breeds (i.e. pit bulls) and that there is some representation from a shelter (e.g. Calgary Humane Society).
- Other: The members of the tribunal must be experienced dog handlers, veterinarians, etc.
- Other: The members of the tribunal were educated on ACTUAL evidence and research RE: risk mitigation
- Other: The members of the tribunal would have to both be qualified and be accountable to some body.
- Other: The members of this tribunal must be unbiased and have no breed specific hatred (especially for dog with a stigma such as pitbulls)
- Other: The members that make up this "Tribunal" were members of respected societies whose knowledge base is directly related to animals. I.e. behavior specialist, vet, dog trainer, etc...
- Other: The non-city council members do not have any breed specific biases.
- Other: The non-city representatives consisted of veterinarians and reputable dog trainers with positive only training methods (aka, no Caesar types)
- Other: The non-city representatives should include animal specialists (ie veterinarians or shelter staff)
- Other: The offending dog should be muzzle trained properly and the owners should be using it when off their property if they think it could be a risk once again
- Other: the only people on the tribunal should be vets, and professional dog trainers. no politicians. no teachers. no lawyers...
- Other: The owner and dog attend mandatory dog training sessions
- Other: The owner can participate in the process and determination of the outcome.
- Other: The owner gets to be involved in the tribunal discussions
- Other: The owner has the chance to work with a trainer to eliminate the bite risk prior to it being euthanized
- Other: The owner has time before to prepare and after decision a right to speak all decisions especially when the decision is to murder the animal
- Other: The owner is punished more than the dog
- Other: The owner MUST attend dog training classes before gaining their dog back or buying another dog
- Other: The owner MUST be consulted first. No stranger knows a dog better than its handler, and taking the life of an animal you've met once because it wasn't the most well behaved dog you've ever met is unethical and murder.
- Other: The owner must be held accountable for the dogs actions. It is the owners fault for teaching a dog to be aggressive. The dog or breed itself is not the issue, it's always the owner. the owner needs to have restrictions, similar to what a sex offender would have (not allowed to own dogs, can't have other pets etc.) This is not a breed specific issue. I can't stress enough that it's never the dogs fault for biting, it's the way the owner treats the dog.

- Other: The owner needs to be looked at on how they treat their animal
- Other: The owner of the dog got a chance to share on behalf of the dog their character and also what happened and why they believe it happened.
- Other: The owner of the dog must be investigated to determine if animal abuse or neglect was a factor leading up to the attack
- Other: The owner should be allowed access to the dog so that to offer it comfort. Any dog could come off wrong when locked up and surrounded by strangers. My cat would do the same If locked up away from all she ever knew but no one cares because she's a cat.
- Other: the owner should be allowed to demonstrate their dogs training
- Other: The owner should be allowed to give their dog items to calm their dog down (i.e blankets, pillows, dog beds, etc) and retrieve items after tribunal, regardless of outcome.
- Other: the owner should be held more liable than the animal. The tribunal should be looking into the dogs behavior and see where the lack of desirable traits stem from. Such as developing a program to monitor the dog and owner in social situations where other dogs and owners are present to see mannerisms and corrections.
- Other: The owner should be rehabilitated to owning a trained animal instead of the animal being punished for poor ownership
- Other: The owner was not a personal known by anyone on the committee.
- Other: The owner(s) of an animal subject to decision(s) made by a tribunal should have the opportunity to appeal before the court prior to any action(s) being taken to implement said decision.
- Other: The owners are allowed to give a fair statement and it doesn't not always end in the dog being euthanized
- Other: The owners are the ones punished
- Other: The owners must also be fined and looked into and if they have been proven to be bad owners they can no longer own any type of dog/ pet
- Other: The owners statement needs to be taken into consideration. For example, if a dog (let's say a lab) is being chased or harassed by another dog (let's say a shepherd) when the owner of the lab specifically requested the owner of the shepherd to put him on a leash, and the lab got nervous and bit the shepherd after giving multiple signs (hiding behind owner, trying to escape, nervous behavior), then the owner of the shepherd is equally at fault. The owners should then be required to complete a training course, which they have to provide proof of passing. Same goes for if it was a person. A parent needs to be in control of their child/an adult in control of their actions just as much as the owner does the pet.
- Other: The panel contains qualified people to make judgements based on experience and facts, not just people who throw out an opinion.
- Other: The panel was made up of qualified people.
- Other: The parties are not breed biased. However it would be difficult to find these people.

- Other: The parties have an extensive knowledge of dog behaviour and have participated in dog training with their dogs in the past. There are too many people and cultures in the City who are inherently scared of dogs, and I would be considered that their prejudice against dogs would mar their ability to sit on a tribunal.
- Other: The people assessing are trained, knowledgeable and experienced with dog behavior
- Other: The people chosen to be on the tribunal are qualified to review incidences and make decisions.
- Other: The people chosen were not people that hate dogs to begin with.
- Other: The people get into training and there is improvement within the animals home life
- Other: The people handling these cases are well educated in dog behaviour and canine professionals are present.
- Other: The people in the tribunal are from professions that specifically deal with dogs (ie vets, dog-trainers)
- Other: The people in the tribunal were educated in dog behavior and are unbiased against any breed of dog.
- Other: The people involved have some knowlege about the issue.
- Other: The people involved are actually educated in dog behaviors
- Other: The people involved are trained animal specialists such as humane society staff vets etc and not general public
- Other: The people involved in making these decisions do not show a bid against large breed dogs and have dog behavioral training.
- Other: The people involved making the decision has a certification to work with animals. Euthanizing a dog is not to be taken lightly.
- Other: The people making decisions are unbiased and are fair. That they don't make the dogs take the fall of an idiot owner.
- Other: The people on the panel do have bias against specific breeds and are knowledgeable able dogs and dog training or rehabilitation
- Other: The people on the panel were experts and not non-dog owning members of the community
- Other: The people on the tribunal are knowledgeable about dog psychology. When decisions that determine life or death are made Suzy homemakers opinion isn't not nearly as valid as someone who has spent years learning and understanding how the dog mind works.
- Other: the people on the tribunal are properly trained and able to maintain objectivity without singeling out specific breeds.
- Other: The people on the tribunal need to be properly trained experts in animal behavior not vet, not basic trainers, but people who are experienced working with dog behavior.
- Other: The people on the tribunal need to have a good understanding of dog behaviour and not have any bias' against certain animal breeds.
- Other: The people on the tribunal should have a demonstrated attachment to jobs, ie previous involvement in rehabilitation or education programs for dogs.
- Other: The people reviewing should be animal lovers

- Other: The people ruling on the matter remain unbiased and look at the matter from all sides.
- Other: The people selected do not already have a bias against animals
- Other: The people selected to be on this tribunal are well educated in animal behaviours as well as just animals in general in order to ensure that they are able to review every possible route other than euthanization.
- Other: The people selected to oversee the tribunal are relevant and have experience in the matter
- Other: The people that get put on the case can't be discriminate against the breed in the case
- Other: The people who are in control actually know something about dog behavior!
- Other: The person deciding should have dog behaviour psychology accreditation and be proven to be unbiased and experienced with all breeds
- Other: The person has a degree in animal wellbeing and can make judgements unbiased
- Other: the person investigating the issue is not against any dog breed. As soon as someone is put on a case and they have a personal issue with a certain breed then they'll fight to have the dog put down, even if it doesn't deserve it.
- Other: The person making the ultimate decision on the dogs fate is non-biased on breed and knowledgeable about dog behaviour and dog training
- Other: The person who was bitten or attack gets to decide if the dog dies. Human lives trump animal lives.
- Other: The persons did not have any bias on type of dog and had compassion for all involved. Dogs can be a victim as much as those who received the bite. They may have been defending themselves. I think more needs to be considered.
- Other: The persons making the decisions have animal behavioural experience/training.
- Other: The pet owner has to bear some measure of tesponsibility and teceive training to be able to keep the nuisance dog.
- Other: The pet owner should be treated more harshly than the pet
- Other: The process for determining who is on the tribunal is fair and unbiased (eg not full of people who hate dogs).
- Other: The process for electing the City and Non-City representatives be inclusive and diverse, with a focus on trained and educated individuals in this field
- Other: The process should be able to be appealed.
- Other: The proper people on the panel. Dog behaviourists, etc.
- Other: The public elects this panel
- Other: The reason bite occured. Was the bite recipient teasing and egging the dog on? This happens a lot more than people realize.
- Other: The reason for the bit needs to be considered. If someone was hitting or running away or screaming. There are animals there needs to be on the tribunal a professional in animal behaviour so that there is an equal opportunity for human and animal. There cannot be a bias panel.
- Other: the reason for the bite is identified and deemed not necessary
- Other: The reason for the dogs behaviour is examined (was it threatened, does it lack training etc.)

- Other: The representatives all had the same approach. I.e: whether it was a pitbull or a golden retriever, same punishment.
- Other: The representatives are completely impartial and have experience and knowledge of dog behaviour and treatments.
- Other: The representatives are individuals who understand dogs and have had experience with dogs - not someone who is afraid of all dogs.
- Other: The representatives met the dog and spoke to family members or friends outside of the household about the dog as well as the owners.
- Other: The representatives on the tribunal would include people who are animal behavioural experts.
- Other: The representatives were experts in animal behaviour.
- Other: The representatives were not biased against certain breeds and are knowledgeable on animal welfare.
- Other: The responsibility lays on the owner. This is who should pay the price for the pet biting, not the dog!
- Other: The review restrictions include a thorough process to ensure the dog is being treated fairly by the owner and not harmed in any way. Also, prohibit the euthanization of the dog in question.
- Other: The right of appeal at queens bench with dog returned to owner with strict rules until case is heard.
- Other: The safety of the public is the guiding principle
- Other: The same procedure as courts for case presentation and defense
- Other: The selection of the tribunal members is non-biased.
- Other: The selection of the tribunal would be like a jury process where unbiased people would be chosen to make the decision. Either that or have a mix of dog owners vs non-dog owners vs general pet owners.
- Other: The situation is looked at fairly and if it is a first time offence the dog SHOULD NOT BE EUTHANIZED. All dogs deserve a fair chance. The person could be at fault in the situation where they get bit.
- Other: The structure of the tribunal would need to be centered around the interest of the animal and not those with conflicting priorities, such as cycle Calgary.
- Other: The the tribunal should include members who are dog owners probably a good idea to have a member who has or has had the breeding question as a family member.
- Other: The tribunal be composed of dog owners and non dog owners, including responsible pit-bull type dog owners.
- Other: The tribunal cannot determine euthanization - it should not have this power. Those required to take part in the tribunal should face penalties similar to court charges for failure to attend.
- Other: The tribunal consisted of a city employee and also local rescue agency advocates
- Other: The tribunal consisted of parties from multiple agencies. This must be done to eliminate potential bias.
- Other: The tribunal consists of experienced dog owners (or whatever animal is in question)

- Other: the tribunal consists of impartial people who see able to be both sympathetic to both owner and victim, especially in the case of the dog being provoked into attacking, as commonly happens.
- Other: The tribunal consists of members that are qualified for the position I.e veterinarians, animal behaviour specialists etc.
- Other: The tribunal contained at least a few people with dog breed behavioural and health education/background
- Other: The tribunal could review any cases to ensure if any changes in cases or facts could cause a reversal of decisions made.
- Other: The tribunal decisions be solely based on the current case, instead of past cases or breed specific prejudices
- Other: The tribunal does not have authority to declare a dog to be euthanized, and if euthanasia is the necessary outcome, a thorough court case should be required.
- Other: The tribunal had a balanced and full membership including veterinarians
- Other: The tribunal had both veterinarians and dog behaviorist in the majority
- Other: The tribunal had members consisting of: behavioural trainers, veterinarians and bylaw enforcement officials and rescue workers
- Other: The tribunal had people on both sides, not just anti pit bull
- Other: The tribunal has a fair representation of dog professionals ex. Balanced dog trainer, behaviourists, experience etc
- Other: The tribunal has at least 50% dog owners and 25% own a pitbull or bully breed to avoid incorrect assumptions around the breeds.
- Other: The tribunal has clear guidelines, processes, timelines, deadlines, and members of the tribunal have short term periods, not long, and there is limitations to the number of times someone can serve on the tribunal.
- Other: The tribunal has first hand experience with the dog breed.
- Other: The tribunal has thr power to follow up on their decisions and implement additional restrictions as necessary.
- Other: the tribunal included people trained in accessing the dogs behavior (vets, trainers)
- Other: The tribunal includes dog / animal behaviour experts
- Other: The tribunal includes experienced dog trainer and vets that are not city of Calgary employees and do not have ties to any Council member. Preferably drawn from a pool of people that have the necessary qualifications to insure impartiality.
- Other: The tribunal includes professionals in the animal behaviour and care industry, and who do not stand to receive a political or personal gain from actions taken on this tribunal. IE - no politicians who will use being tough on pit bulls as a platform for election.
- Other: The tribunal is accessible to all (low cost, transportation) and pitbull breeds are not judged unfairly to other breeds.
- Other: The tribunal is compiled of vets, dog trainers, and/or people trained in animal behaviour
- Other: The tribunal is comprised of experts on the subject matter, including animal behaviour professionals.

- Other: The tribunal is made of specialists and veterinarians who understand animals natural habits and instincts
- Other: The tribunal is made up of an unbiased individuals
- Other: The tribunal is made up of animal behaviour professionals
- Other: The tribunal is made up of impartial dog behavior experts for accurate assessment of the individual dog involved.
- Other: The tribunal is made up of open minded professionals within the animal industry and no prejudice is given towards a pit bull type dog
- Other: The tribunal is made up of or consultants a animal trainer and rescue organization prior to issuing a decision.
- Other: The tribunal is made up of qualified and unbiased members
- Other: The tribunal is not biased. Animals when provoked will defend themselves
- Other: The tribunal is operated by experienced dog trainers/owners.
- Other: The tribunal is trained in understanding of dog behavior and can help determine if it is a dog problem or a human problem.
- Other: The tribunal is well educated on dog behavior. Our [removed] don't know anything about animals.
- Other: The tribunal is well-educated in animal behaviour and training
- Other: The tribunal meets the dog and interacts with him/her
- Other: The tribunal members are dog training experts and have an opportunity to assess the owner's ability to handle the dog.
- Other: The tribunal members are educated, informed and have no breed biases
- Other: The tribunal members have received some training in dog behaviour
- Other: The tribunal members most consist of dog owners and non owners to remain unbiased
- Other: The tribunal most only consist of dog owners.
- Other: The tribunal must be composed of experienced dog trainers and rescue organisation representatives who can properly assess the potential for rehabilitation through proper training, and issue orders that could re-home a dog as one of the Tribunal outcomes.
- Other: The tribunal must be comprised of animal behaviour specialists and preference must always be given to retraining or rehoming the animal.
- Other: The tribunal must be made up of a diverse group with chance to change the tribunal members if suspected of bias.
- Other: The tribunal must be made up of dog owners and non-dog owners, similar to a jury picked for court cases.
- Other: The tribunal must be made up of people who are within the dog community. Any breed of dog can bite, but the BSL language used in a question above makes me nervous, so to be a member of a tribunal you must be a dog trainer or work with animals in a non-kill shelter. The tribunal should always work in the interest of the dog. These are living things that have no control over the environment they are put in.

- Other: The tribunal must be overseen by qualified dog experts and veterinarians. Discrimination by breed or dog size must be prevented. As well meaning as tribunals can be in theory, the likelihood for persons to enter into biased judgement based on breed discrimination is very high.
- Other: The tribunal must be properly vetted to not be biased to bully breeds.
- Other: The tribunal must be transparent and members can only sit on the tribunal for a short period of time (for example 4 months or 20 cases whichever comes first. The penalties recommended by the tribunal must be ones that have been proven to a) deter behaviour b) rehabilitate dogs/owners, c) accurately determine when an animal is required to be euthanized with steps of severity that reflect the offender clearly outlined.
- Other: The tribunal MUST consist of dog Behavior specialists! ETHANIZATION is taken off the table as a solution! ALL dogs can be rehabilitated and owners can be trained and educated. Rehoming to a proper home is always an option.
- Other: The tribunal must exercise an appropriate level of fairness and accountability
- Other: The tribunal must have a significant portion of experts on animals.
- Other: The tribunal must have representation from the veterinarian community and reputable breeder of the dog involved.
- Other: the tribunal must include a dog trainer who is a qualified behaviour consultant, the tribunal must also include a veterinarian
- Other: The tribunal must include a recognized animal behaviouralist.
- Other: The tribunal must include members who are dog owners and there should be a mix of owner types (eg. Large breed, small breed)
- Other: The tribunal must not be biased in their decision making. Example believing certain breeds are more likely to attack. As well the owner of said dog must have access to their pet during its time in a shelter.
- Other: The tribunal needs to be comprised of people who actually have animal behavior training and knowledge!!! Not just people in suits making decisions with no experience!!
- Other: The tribunal needs to be educated on dog behaviour, training, rehab etc and not average citizens
- Other: the tribunal needs to be experienced dog handlers and/or owners.
- Other: The tribunal needs to be made of both certified canine behaviouralists & small animal/canine veterinarians that have proven to be unbiased. (i.e. an individual who has publicly spoken out against pit bull breeds calling them all dangerous).
- Other: The tribunal needs to include at least one individual who has a recognized certificate or designation in animal behaviour, for example through a veterinary program or CPDT knowledge AND skills assesses
- Other: The tribunal rules would apply to ALL BREEDS of dogs!!!
- Other: The tribunal shall include a canine advocate
- Other: The tribunal should consist of experts from multiole backgrounds, for example a panel of 3 people could be a bylaw officer, a dog training expert and a doctor. This would round out the panel so bylaw knows the laws, the training expert can assess the chances of rehabilitation and a doctor to ensure the victims injuries are properly weighted in the decision.

- Other: The tribunal should have a vet or tech, lawyer and lay person present
- Other: The tribunal should have no authority to require euthanasia.
- Other: The tribunal should have non-city members that rotate cases. Non-city members should include trainers and vets who have the knowledge and experience needed to assess the dogs and owners.
- Other: The tribunal should include a veterinarian a animal bylaw officer and an advocate for animals/expert
- Other: The tribunal should ONLY be made up of animal health professionals
- Other: The tribunal should only be used to return dogs to their owners, a full investigation should be required to end a life.full
- Other: The tribunal stays impartial and is not biased based on breed
- Other: The tribunal team absolutely must include dog trainers who have a strong background in and knowledge of behaviour. There are too many "dog trainers" and "behaviour" experts in Calgary who do not have the knowledge to be calling themselves trainers, let alone be making these decisions.
- Other: The tribunal was made up of a fair panel, including experts in dog behaviour and training
- Other: The tribunal was made up of unbiased individuals who are not prejudice against breeds. This s
- Other: the tribunal was made up of veterinary, animal behaviour, and social services experts
- Other: The tribunal was made up of vets and knowledgeable animal advocates, not city employees.
- Other: The tribunal was made up of vets, dog behaviourist, trainers and people with extensive canine knowledge.
- Other: The tribunal would consist of a vet, a dog owner or two, they would be a vote on each situation
- Other: The tribunal would have to be based on dog experts and people trained to properly assess a dog's likelihood of serverly injuring someone again
- Other: The tribunal would have to be made of bipartisan members who do not have a history of labeling certain breeds (i.e bully breeds, German Shepards) as "bad breeds".
- Other: The tribunal would have to be made up of unbiased non dog and dog owners who are appointed. If it operates like condo boards based on self promoted volunteers then no this is not acceptable means to solve these issues.
- Other: The tribunal would have to be made up of unbiased of breed and situation.
- Other: The tribunal would have to have a significant increase in time that a dog is returned to an owner. I also think the tribunal should also consider if a dog would be better off in another situation rather than euthanize. I also think a vet should sit on the tribunal.
- Other: The tribunal would include educated people to make effective decisions based on the dog and owners. Such as veterinarians and/or experienced obedience trainers
- Other: The tribunal would include members that are actively involved in animal rescue.

- Other: The tribunal would need to be comprised of ACTUAL dog owners and those with borderline intelligence and integrity.
- Other: The tribunal would need to be made up of actual dog people who know and can assess the risk factors for dogs. Not some random [removed] pr [removed]
- Other: The tribunal would need to include at least two animal behaviour experts (e.g., people with the Certified Behaviour Consultant - Canine (CBCC) designation, veterinary behaviourist, or a professional in animal behaviour working in a humane society)
- Other: The tribunal would need to include people who have worked with animals in some capacity previously for me to feel comfortable with them making the decision on euthanization
- Other: The tribunal would only make sense if it contained most - if not all, experienced dog owners. Even better if they have experience with different dog breeds among the group. This way, they can objectively look at each scenario with some experience to back up their decisions.
- Other: The tribunal's decision is not binding and final... that the tribunal be subject to a legal review of procedural fairness in each case.
- Other: The tribunals members are trained in animal care in some way (vets, dog trainers, animal behaviour experts). This tribunal would be a waste of money and time if they did not have people who can value the life of an animal and see its whole situation. Just as we would want experts on how WE act and feel deciding for us.
- Other: The use of a tribunal instead of a court of law would need to be approved by both the dog owner and the bite victim prior to it being used.
- Other: The vast majority of staff for a tribunal should be vets or vet techs. They should be the one to assess the dogs. Let the politicians assess the human owners.
- Other: The veterinary medicine community should be included.
- Other: The victim and the accused have all the same rights and responsibilities as they would in provincial court, including a right to appeals.
- Other: The victim can be assured the dog will be put down if they so choose.
- Other: The wait times for court would be no longer than 8 weeks. If you have to wait 6 months to find out if you have to out your dog down, you might as well just let it live.
- Other: The whole comment is not showing up for me - this is an error on mobile
- Other: Their non-bias
- Other: their say
- Other: Ther dog does not get euthanized, unless reviewed by dog behaviorist, vet and dog trainer. Bad behaved dogs are just poorly trained.
- Other: There are a great number of so-called "experts" who are, in fact, rigid and letter-of-the-law in their thinking. For this to work, the tribunal would need to NOT be comprised of such "experts." Critical thinking, reasoning, logic and open-mindedness is paramount. If one is not well versed in canine behaviour, this won't end well. For anyone.
- Other: There are alot of homeless people out there, and the dogs can sense this and is making the dogs react. So many of the homeless are coming up to people in a way that could be considered aggressive because they are desperate to get some money from people.

- Other: There are at least two animal behaviour specialist as representatives.
- Other: There are dog behaviour experts present on the tribunal
- Other: There are members of the tribunal experienced with dogs of all breeds and animal advocacy.
- Other: There are no harsher sentences for different breeds
- Other: There are other dogs far more aggressive than pit bulls. Ever meet a jack russel terrier?
- Other: There are people on the board that can properly assess the situation because they understand animal behaviour. Someone needs to be there that is on the side of the dog since it cant defend itself.
- Other: There are people who are educated and up to date on the latest scientific research and methods of dog behaviour and training and are also experienced in these fields
- Other: There are requirements for veterinarians and dog behaviour experts on the tribunal
- Other: There are responsible dog owners, vets on the tribunal vs political crooks, bylaw services.
- Other: There are strongly defined guidelines for what the tribunal can and can't order to be done.
- Other: There are surprise checking for compliance with restrictions placed on the animal/owner
- Other: There are thorough background checks on everyone involved.
- Other: there are timelines & reasonable procedures put in place with resources provided to owners. NO breed singled out or judged harshly based on looks. tribunal are certified dog behaviourists with EXTENSIVE knowledge.
- Other: There are very little circumstances where the dog has to be put down.
- Other: There has to be a clear way to appeal the results
- Other: There is a dog training expert and a vet represented on the tribunal
- Other: There is a fair chance for the owners to make corrections and that all options are offered to support the owners. It has to be fair to the dogs and owners
- Other: There is a quick and sound way for appeal.
- Other: There is a review for the judgement granted by a judge
- Other: There is a way to fight the decision made after the fact in real court, power corrupts always, if some random unelected official took my dog I would want a way to have a day in court as well. Kind of makes the whole thing useless unless
- Other: There is an evaluation on the owner. A dog isn't aggressive on their own. It's based on their home life and proper training which is the owners fault not the dogs fault
- Other: There is an opportunity to appeal. lol
- Other: There is at least one animal behaviour specialist on the tribunal
- Other: There is biases.
- Other: There is forced training for the owner, moreso than the dog. Dogs arent bad by nature, it comes from poor pet owners.
- Other: There is no ban on pit bulls or the other breeds mentioned above.
- Other: There is no bias against pit bull type dogs. Each dog is different and has the ability to bite and cause serious harm
- Other: There is no bias against specific breed ie. pit bulls!

- Other: There is no bias and there would be an ability to review the outcome
- Other: There is no bias towards ANY breed of dog. Decisions should be made STRICTLY on behaviour.
- Other: There is no breed bias
- Other: There is no breed specific biases
- Other: There is no discrimination towards certain dog breeds as already displayed above.
- Other: There is no other option
- Other: There is no prejudice among breeds.
- Other: There is real proof that the dog didn't bite in self defense because of the victim harming the animal in any way.
- Other: There is still fair consideration given (ie. No shotgun decisions to euthanize)
- Other: There is zero breed bias as a deciding factor
- Other: There isn't some biased, dog hating [removed] wit that's the judge.
- Other: There must be a dog behaviourist on the tribunal
- Other: There must be at least one dog specialist, and one rescue organization member on every tribunal.
- Other: There must my MULTIPLE outlets determining if a dog is safe. Being thrown in a shelter after a high tension situation then tested is asking an animal to fail
- Other: There needs to be an appeal process
- Other: There needs to be more than one person with equal experience making a decision
- Other: There needs to be no bias in this system. Dogs that bite are often because of trauma, or because the person ignored warning signs that the dog was showing. Instead of euthanizing a scared dog, use restorative programs. There are many people that are trained to work with dogs from rough backgrounds. Euthanizing dogs because they reacted like an animal is ridiculous.
- Other: There needs to be significant effort to reduce bias towards "dangerous" dog breeds which are largely unfounded lies. The people on this tribunal should be carefully chosen so that dog breeds like pit bulls or german shepherds are not negatively impacted by biases.w
- Other: There needs to be trained animal behaviourists sitting on that tribunal. More than one preferably as they dont always agree. Laypersons with animal behaviour training are not qualified to make those decisions. Decisions to euthanize should never be made without an independant behavioural assessment. Not a simple tribunal vote
- Other: There should always be the ability to appeal every decision even if it's euthanization
- Other: There should be a dog behaviour specialist on the tribunal.
- Other: There should be a full investigation before ever euthanizing ANY thing. I do not believe in breed specific bans or infractions. I think all judgements should be based solely on the behaviour exhibited by the animal not what breed it is, a Chihuahua can do just as much damage as a pit pull if provoked. Breed specific banning is like saying let's incarcerate all black men because one black man committed a crime. This type of legislation is no better than systematic racism faced by people of colour. DO BETTER CALGARY!!!!!!
- Other: There should be a method of appeal

- Other: There should be absolutely no prejudice regarding dog breed.
- Other: There should be individuals trained in animal behaviour on the tribunal
- Other: There should be someone on the tribunal that has adequate dog behavior experience. Someone with qualifications/credentials that would be competent in assessing these incidents. It should not be comprised of random people with no knowledge of dog behavior.
- Other: There should be zero breed specific legislation
- Other: There was a way to regulate and keep the tribunal in check.
- Other: there was at least one dog behaviour professional on the tribunal.
- Other: There was fair assessment no matter the breed. I've worked in the vet industry for 8 years and have not had one bad incident involving a Pitbull or Pitbull like breed. I would say there are many other breeds out there that are more dangerous.
- Other: There was representation from trained animal behaviorists and vets to provide educated and unbiased direction. Also representatives are consulted from animal welfare and rescue organizations who can provide alternatives to euthanasia such as working dogs, rehoming and training for owner and pet.
- Other: There were a variety of representatives that were not biased against specific breeds of dog.
- Other: There were clear guidelines to which members of the tribunal would have to adhere to. It would need to remain as objective as possible and not target breeds of dogs rather the owners of dogs under tribunal.
- Other: There were dog behavioral experts as part of the tribunal
- Other: There were experts in animal behaviour involved in the decision
- Other: There were impartial dog experts as part of the group.
- Other: There were multiple persons involved in the tribunal and they were possibly voted in rather than government chosen.
- Other: There were people to come in and speak for the owner or against the owner. It's not the dog, it's the training the owner gives it. The owner needs to have training or the dog needs to have the option of being taken away and see if it can be changed
- Other: There were restrictions placed first before euthanized. It's not the dog's fault they were not trained and raised properly, give them a chance to fix their behaviour please.
- Other: There were veterinary and animal behaviour specialists involved throughout the whole process.
- Other: There will be NO breed bias
- Other: there would be a veterinary representative
- Other: There would have to be a commitment to impartial and fair rulings as well as an appeal process
- Other: There would have to be a fair system with professionals who are unbiased.
- Other: There would have to be a stringent selection process on who can be on the tribunal. For example, if the incident involved a pitbull-type breed, people who believe in BSL and other anti-pitbull measures would need to be excluded.
- Other: There would need to be people who are dog smart not politically directed people.

- Other: There would still be an aspect of liability to owners for mismanagement of the animal. The responsibility needs to be placed on the owner.
- Other: there's proof that those on the tribunal are not discriminatory against pitbulls and other large "aggressive" dogs
- Other: These dogs should not be euthanized. They should be given proper training why punish the dog when the owner is the issue?
- Other: These must be determined by non biased people. IE some people just dislike certain breeds, and this could sway their decision
- Other: These positions must be held by qualified dog behavior experts only.
- Other: They actually care about these dogs, and are not prejudiced to dog breeds such as the Pitbull-type. This whole bylaw review is extremely opinionated against an already targeted breed, shame on you Calgary.
- Other: They allow the dog to be mediated before euthanasia is even discussed.
- Other: They are a tribunal of TRAINED professionals who know that a specific breed is not dangerous, and with training and care, ANY dog can be saved.
- Other: They are aware certain breeds of dog are not likely to be more vicious. That is a myth
- Other: They are educated and non bias.
- Other: They are fair and not biased
- Other: They are members who do not have biases toward certain breeds.
- Other: They are non bias, educated people
- Other: They are not bias towards dog breeds and they don't rush through cases.
- Other: They are professionals in dog behaviour
- Other: They are taking in account what happened before and after. With witnesses under oath. TooMany people torment dogs of their neighbours till they react they need to be held accountable too
- Other: They are trained properly
- Other: They are unbiased in breed and every dog bite is released to the public not just bully types
- Other: They cannot be biased against specific breeds owners.
- Other: They cannot make the final decision on euthanizing.
- Other: They cannot rule to not euthanize any dogs. Dogs can be made to go to training school, or muzzled if ABSOLUTELY necessary. However. Euthanasia should not be an outcome.
- Other: They can't decide to euthanize a pet before trying everything else before hand
- Other: They could not make euthanization decisions without the support of two industry professionals (vet, dog trainer CPDTKA or higher) owner to pay for assessment
- Other: They court was canine educated, removing stigmas and bias. Misinformation is harmful, especially when a life is on the line.
- Other: They do not get to make the decision on euthanizing an animal.
- Other: They do not get to make the decision regarding euthanization
- Other: they do not have a bias against Pitbulls

- Other: They do not have a bias of a dog Soley on breed or apperance.
- Other: They do not have complete authority on euthanization - cannot order someone to put down their dog.
- Other: they do not have final say on euthanization
- Other: They do not have the power to euthanize any animal.
- Other: They do not have the power to euthanize dogs. A bad owner should not be a death sentence.
- Other: They dont discriminate against pitbulls or other dog types that have been deemed aggressive
- Other: They dont discriminated against breeds!!
- Other: They don't have the authority to make the final decision on if the dog is euthanized.
- Other: They don't have the power to euthanize an animal until that animal has gone though a behavior course
- Other: They explore rehabilitation options for less severe cases
- Other: They followed a no-kill philosophy and never endorsed euthanization.
- Other: They got all sides of the story not just the victim statement.
- Other: They have a dog behaviour background and show 0 signs of breed bias
- Other: They have a knowledge and understanding of dog behaviour or have a behaviouralist to consult
- Other: They have the same degree of knowledge and fairness when determining case outcomes.
- Other: they include animal behavior specialists and rehabilitation experts.
- Other: They investigate the human victim as much as the dog. As most circumstances that involve dog bites the human victim is at fault and the dog is just doing what is rational for a dog. I.e. victim attacks dogs owner dog bites victim, dog is not at fault.
- Other: They look into the history of the owner and see if any animal abuse is present
- Other: They looked at the owner and how the owner handles the dog. Were they trained to be vicious.
- Other: They make the efforts to make sure the owner is the right fit for this dog
- Other: They must have pets of their own to understand both the dog and the owners situation
- Other: They must take their job seriously and review each case with an understanding that each dog is someone's pet and it is loved. Bully breed or not.
- Other: They need to be completely objective. No connections to the victim.
- Other: They need to be unbiased in the situation. They need to look at the situation with no bias towards a certain breed
- Other: They need to be vetted and non biased agianst certain breeds
- Other: They need to be within the canine professions. Preferably educated within canine behaviour and rehabilitation.
- Other: They need to not have a bias towards pit breeds. If so, these poor babies will be uthanized because of someone's preference. It needs to be judged fairly.
- Other: They remain non biases against breeds.

- Other: They review all facts and do not have a bias based on breed, consider human roles in situation as most times the underlying cause is human related and not the dog's fault, consider non-lethal solutions first
- Other: They should be able to assess if an animal should be euthanized, but they SHOULD NOT be able to enforce the euthanization.
- Other: They should be mandated to keep dog in quarantine until ruling made.
- Other: they should not be able to euthanize a dog without a second opinion from a professional
- Other: They should not have the right to declare euthanization
- Other: They stay completely third party non-biased on ruling. They don't take biases against pit bulls.
- Other: They take the owners and victims' statements and hear both sides. Treat it almost like a court case.
- Other: They treated all breeds evenly.
- Other: They try to rehabilitate dogs first.
- Other: They understand the situation that actually happened with the breed notwithstanding. If a black person robs a store or hurts someone, are they processed differently than a white person?
- Other: They were fair and have been looked into to make sure they don't portray any breed-specific bias option.
- Other: They weren't allowed to be biased against certain breeds, such as pit bulls!
- Other: They will not exhibit/partake in breed bias, i.e. victimize pit bull breeds.
- Other: They would have to seriously consider the impact of the offence not only on the dog but also on the owner. If the offence led to euthanizing this animal instead of utilizing obedience training facilities I think it is completely uncalled for. You can't insist someone with addiction go seek help at a rehabilitation center instead of suggesting they die, so why wouldn't you allow an animal to seek help and change their ways instead as well.
- Other: They would need to be unbiased toward dog breed
- Other: They would need to have dog behaviour credentials or their opinions would be merely subjective
- Other: They would not be able to assess whether or not a dog should be euthanized
- Other: They're completely impartial and do not have any biases against any specific breed.
- Other: They're qualified individuals (e.g. certified trainers)
- Other: This
- Other: This answer cuts off so I honestly don't know what it says at the end...?
- Other: This applies to all nuisance dogs, not just pit bulls. I live in an apt building full of poodles who are very well behaved
- Other: This cannot be breed specific. I am so tired of hearing about pit bulls and similar breeds being labelled!

- Other: This cannot turn into a group of people who are against the breed. This should be made up of people who are well educated in the manner of the animal (like rescue groups). If you have a panel where no one speaks for the dogs that's not a fair trial.
- Other: This could work but could easily be biased by the breed of the dog.
- Other: This is beneficial if said tribunal is qualified, board certified veterinary behaviour. And only cognitive and scientific evidence based behaviour methods implemented. This can be used across the board for all breeds and should never be breed specific. It is also much too vague to base this on pit bull looking dogs, there are so many things wrong with this approach considering one lab breeder has pure labs that look more pit bull like. Basing behaviour on look and bite pressure solely on a breed does nothing to help. So to assume a pit bull breed will or could do severe damage should not be based on guesswork or because some people just simply don't like them. There are so many high drive breeds that kill other pets in the home, I can not tell you how many boarder collies, kelpies and heelers have been put down or rehomed for biting. Or in those cases nipping like they were bred for. Or, to think small dogs do not do as much damage consider the Pomeranian that was surrendered because it caused so much damage to its owner they required over 300 stiches from bite marks all over.
- Other: This is disgusting !! Bsl support. This is what is wrong with the world !
- Other: This is not based on a single person's option and a professional dog behaviorist assesses the dog
- Other: This needs to be clear and specific
- Other: This one
- Other: This process would be completed in a certain period of time and the dog could potentially stay with the owner rather than the shelter.
- Other: This process would need to have some legal clout. I would want to know that the orders would be followed by the owner and the city would have the ability to enforce it. If i were the victim I would also want to know the owner would be responsible for any damages caused by thier animal.
- Other: This seems like a waste of money, put the dog down
- Other: This should be net neutral In terms of employees and budget
- Other: This would apply to dogs of all sizes, not just Pitbulls. And all dog bites would be treated the same regardless of the the strength that one bread can have compared to another.
- Other: This would give the owner and others a method to be heard.
- Other: Those appointed should not have breed bias as this survey somewhat suggests. In order to have an unbiased outcome which is fair.
- Other: Those appointed to make the decision were well educated in dog behaviour and the bite severity scale.
- Other: Those assessing the dogs temperament and disposition must be qualified outside of the city's system to make determinations
- Other: Those making decisions have formal and recognized education in dog behaviour and are not bias based on breed

- Other: Those making the decision regarding whether or not dogs should be euthanized or placing restrictions on owners should have an official background in dog training and behaviour and veterinary professionals should be consulted
- Other: Those on the tribunal are educated in current animal behaviour research
- Other: those on the tribunal are found to be with no conflict of interest
- Other: Those on the tribunal cannot have bias opinions on specific breeds or regulations that they believe should be in place
- Other: Those on the tribunal have extensive experience and qualifications in dog behaviour and assessments
- Other: Those on the tribunal have shown no bias towards/against any particular breed of dog, and have expertise in dog behavior and rehabilitation.
- Other: Those sitting on the tribunal have experience with training and/handling dogs. Demonstrate knowledge regarding canine behaviour.
- Other: Those sitting on the tribunal have some expertise in dog behaviour.
- Other: Those who are on then tribunal are qualified animal behaviouralists and individuals without preexisting bias towards specific breeds
- Other: Those who make up the tribunal have a canine training/ public safety and legal background. Dog trainers must be included.
- Other: Tribunal to be made up of non-biased people and NO Breed specific legislation.
- Other: time.
- Other: Timely and fair justice for owner and victim
- Other: To faster process the cases
- Other: To have the dog stay at home with the owner, not in a shelter.
- Other: To have those included in decisions have experience/knowledge in animal related fares
- Other: To not euthanize if dogs aren't vicious. Do not torture or bug the animal during an obedience test and provide video proof of the obedience test to the owner, lawyer and judge.
- Other: to place responsibility where it belongs, owner must demonstrate mental and physical ability to be the right person for the dog, not just the recognized "owner" of the dog
- Other: To put an animal down should be last resort. Other options such as obedience and muzzles should be explored first.
- Other: To remain unbiased, do not specify the breed of dog.
- Other: Took into consideration vets and trainers opinions
- Other: Trained in understanding dog behaviour
- Other: Training courses
- Other: Training is offered and required for an amount of time before any consideration of euthanasia
- Other: Training rather than euthanized if possible
- Other: Training required for all tribunal members
- Other: Training, training, training and having at least 2 individuals who have experience and credential in dog behaviour experience assessing the dog in calm (non caged) environment.

- Other: Training, training, training. If you just go around euthanizing dogs your going to have a bigger problem on your hands than dog bites.euthanize as a last resort, start a volunteer program, reach out to local dog trainers for assistance etc etc.
- Other: transparency on what cost a tribunal would mean for tax payers
- Other: Treat each dog on it's own behaviour and not on the breed.
- Other: Treated dog fairly and put more responsibility on the owner for training. Don't blame a dog for a bad owner, make the owner better so they can improve the current dog and hopefully any dogs they own in the future.
- Other: Treats all breeds of dogs fair, everybody involved should be required to have experience with animals to avoid people who are just there for the pay cheque, for example requiring volunteer hours at a shelter before a position can be offered.
- Other: Tribunal must be very knowledgeable about individual dog breeds, behavior and working knowledge of rehabilitation options.
- Other: Tribunal cannot euthanize a dog. This would have to be recommended and then taken up with the courts.
- Other: Tribunal cannot order euthanization, that would have to go to Court of Queens Bench
- Other: Tribunal consisted of dog trainers, groomers and other licensed dog related professionals.
- Other: Tribunal consists of several dog owners/experts and not only bylaw.
- Other: Tribunal consists of well educated experts with no bias.
- Other: Tribunal council is elected by tax payers
- Other: Tribunal decision could be appealed through the courts.
- Other: Tribunal decision is not final, owner has right to appeal decision
- Other: Tribunal does not have authority to euthanize, only to place restrictions on proven aggressive dogs.
- Other: Tribunal employees are highly educated in canine behavior and control of dominant breeds including Pits, German Shepards, Rotties, Huskies...
- Other: Tribunal has a combination of vets, animal behaviourist, and citizens
- Other: Tribunal has to be dog owners, not people who hate dogs for no reason
- Other: Tribunal includes a minimum number of pet owners
- Other: Tribunal includes vets and behavioral specailist
- Other: Tribunal is impartial and fair.
- Other: Tribunal is made up of dog owners who can demonstrate they have knowledge in training and experience with multiple dogs.
- Other: Tribunal is not mandatory and court option available to dog owner; decision of tribunal can be challenged in court process
- Other: Tribunal is vetted. I want to know how a tribunal is decided upon. Would there be some dog positive advocate as well?
- Other: Tribunal made up of certified animal behavioural professionals only and appeal is possible
- Other: Tribunal made up of vets who can make this determination not a by law officer

- Other: Tribunal member must be qualified animal handlers (ie trainers, animal behaviourists and veterinarians, etc). Perhaps members of the various pet charities in the city (AARCS, Meow Foundation, ARF)
- Other: Tribunal members are as free from bias as possible (including bias against specific breeds like pitbull-types)
- Other: Tribunal members are impartial and show no bias based on dog breed
- Other: Tribunal members are properly educated in animal behaviour, and have experience dealing with animals in the past
- Other: Tribunal members are properly educated in dog behaviour to ensure no bias towards certain breeds
- Other: Tribunal members are qualified to assess the animals risk level (behavioralists, vets, trainers)
- Other: Tribunal members cannot be against a specific breed, they must base decisions on THE FACTS in the individual case
- Other: tribunal members have appropriate qualifications (e.g. veterinarians, animal behaviour experts)
- Other: Tribunal members have education/experience in animal behavior and the appropriate knowledge in order to make fair and well-informed decisions.
- Other: Tribunal members include animal care personnel eg vets, spca etc
- Other: Tribunal members include someone who is familiar with dog behavior such as a trainer, veterinarian. Not just bureaucrats with an agenda.
- Other: Tribunal members must be educated about the risk of recurrence and animal behaviour.
- Other: Tribunal members must be screened prior to being allowed to act on the tribunal for bias against certain breeds of dogs. Failure to do so would be unethical and put far more innocent animals at risk for euthanasia than it would protect other animals and Calgary citizens from nuisance animals.
- Other: Tribunal members must be volunteer only. No pay.
- Other: Tribunal members must include reputable experienced dog trainers
- Other: Tribunal members should be comprised of veterinary experts, as well as dog and non dog owners.
- Other: Tribunal members should be unbiased in their decisions and it should be more restrictions on offending pet owners rather than the animals.
- Other: Tribunal members were people already familiar with appropriate laws. Also, includes a bully breed expert
- Other: Tribunal members would need to include recognized canine behaviour experts (not necessarily veterinarians).
- Other: Tribunal members would require extensive training and have wide knowledge about dogs. Review of tribunal meme or process in which biases could be addressed
- Other: Tribunal monitored so if any concerns with outcomes or a personal on tribunal being biased it can be revisited.
- Other: Tribunal must be have recognized credentials in dog training and rehabilitation

- Other: Tribunal must be unbiased towards specific breeds
- Other: Tribunal must have a full time professional dog behaviourist employed to provide their feedback on each case.
- Other: Tribunal must have simple paperwork, be totally digital, and it must provide written reasons. At least one member of every panel must have formal animal training (vet, vet tech, VMA, behaviourist etc)
- Other: Tribunal must include subject matter expert I.e. animal welfare specialist
- Other: Tribunal needs to be made up of experts in the field
- Other: Tribunal needs to be unbiased and not include members of spca and other animal activist organizations. Should include Calgary or Canadian kennel club members , vetrinarian and othersnel club members
- Other: Tribunal presence by the Humane Society.
- Other: tribunal representatives need expertise and experience or training with dog behaviour and familiarity with bylaw
- Other: Tribunal reps would be Knowledgable dog people: breeders of 20 years, trainers of 20 years, veterinarians of 20 years.
- Other: tribunal reviews should not exceed 10 days to come to a decision
- Other: Tribunal should be efficient and inexpensive - preferably as a means to lead disputes to successful resolution outside of the courts
- Other: Tribunal should have an interaction with the dog before making a decision. They shouldn't make a decision just by the breed of the dog
- Other: Tribunal should not be allowed to decide the animal must be euthanized, if that is their decision, it should be moved into the court system to be approved before the animal is euthanized.
- Other: Tribunal should not have the final decision making power regarding euthanasion.
- Other: Tribunal similar to jury, ask random members of the community for a decision
- Other: Tribunal to be made up of people of varied backgrounds and experience with pets/dogs.
- Other: Tribunal was comprised of a group of non prejudiced people
- Other: Tribunal was made up of staff from rescue/SPCA animal trainers ONLY.
- Other: Tribunal would have include at least one trained dog professional such as a certified dog trainer, dog behaviorist, veterinarian etc.
- Other: Tribunal would have to had people educated in dog behavior, rescue, etc
- Other: Tribunal would include someone specializing in canine behaviour
- Other: Tribunals may only decide that euthenasia is necessary if the dog is unable to go through proper training.
- Other: Tribunals should include non-City representatives that are trained to work with animals (e.g., veterinarians).
- Other: Tribunals should NOT have the authority to issue euthanization orders
- Other: Tribunals should not have the power to euthanize dogs

- Other: Try and alternative training BEFORE KILLING ANIMALS AND RIPPING THEM AWAY FROM THEIR HOMES
- Other: Try every other possibility before even suggesting putting the dog down.
- Other: Unbias especially against certain breeds. The dogs breed SHOULD NOT be a deciding factor. Just because a dog is small does not mean the incident should be treated any differently.
- Other: Unbias towards the breed of dog
- Other: Unbias tribunal, no prejudgement in breeds
- Other: Unbiased
- Other: Unbiased as far as the breed goes. Neglect and poor ownership lead to bites, not breeds.
- Other: Unbiased decision against the dogs breed, find out what led to said events, note if its a first offence etc
- Other: Unbiased dog experts involvement in tribunal
- Other: Unbiased groups- volunteers/members should not be permitted to address cases from their own neighborhood. Members should be non biased to dog breed and should be limited to outside opinion.
- Other: Un-biased judgement toward pittbull breeds
- Other: Unbiased opinions (unbiased on breeds) and only require training or new owners if current owners cannot do the training
- Other: Unbiased opinions first. The breed is never to be mentioned. Again holder dog owners responsible. Even small breed dogs must go through this process!
- Other: Unbiased people on the panel that included behavior specialists. Dogs should be given the chance for obedience training.
- Other: Unbiased people on the tribunal.
- Other: Unbiased people sitting on this tribunal, who have gone through an intense vetting process.
- Other: Unbiased representatives focused on rehabilitation of dogs
- Other: Unbiased to dig brief
- Other: Unbiased tribunal
- Other: Unbiased tribunal. Takes into account all factors of the situation (I.e what caused dogs behaviour) take into account dogs history
- Other: unbiased!!!! And cannot be anti-breed specific!
- Other: unbiased, animal behavior and health experts who can assess the situation effectively, not just put labels on dogs based on a situation that may not have even been the dogs fault. Many times dogs are pushed to their limits by irresponsible people, the dog should not be punished for this.
- Other: unbiased, only recommends death when case is very severe, allows pet to stay with owner until vase heard
- Other: Unbiased/objective attitudes towards breeds and the recognition that some dogs may be able to be trained/rehabilitated

- Other: Unless the dog has had multiple offences prior, the dog should be allowed to stay with the owner with conditions (eg. muzzled when going for walks, no off leash dog parks, dog supervised even if in backyard) UNTIL the court is dealt with.
- Other: Useless bureaucracy.
- Other: Usually there is reason why the dog attack so there should be an investigation into why then attack whether its medical or situational.
- Other: V
- Other: Variety of people on panel, chance to explain, first offense warning
- Other: Verdict includes euthanasia ONLY when the dog has been involved in multiple severe attacks and decision is purely made from proofs
- Other: Verified dog trainers who would sit on the tribunal and see if the OWNER can be trained to handle their dog.
- Other: Very clear rules/regulations and training for tribunal members.
- Other: vetted and certified representatives from all or as many dog sport and dog training facilities involved.
- Other: veterinarians and dog trainers are among the representatives
- Other: Veterinarians to be on the community
- Other: Veterinary and animal behaviour experts included on the tribunal committee
- Other: Veterinary and pet behaviour experts on the tribunal
- Other: veterinary behaviourist evaluation
- Other: Veterinary or vet behavior officials are apart of these discussions
- Other: Veterinary professionals are called to oversee each case
- Other: Vets and dog trainers are on the tribunal
- Other: Vets and trainers are part of the tribunal
- Other: Vicious dog declarations be viewed and assessed in a contextual manner, I.e. the situation. A lot of times the owner can prevent severe bite or nuisance situations by proper training and care.
- Other: Victims who felt the need for criminal charges to be laid would still have the option.
- Other: Visitation and not a shelter
- Other: Was composed of a mix of experts on animal behavior. And the tribunal did not have authority to demand euthanasia
- Other: Was conducted by an independent panel knowledgeable about dog behaviour
- Other: Was fair to both parties and decisions were upheld.
- Other: Was not biased on breed and did what would be best for the well being of said animal
- Other: Was made up including members of the law, veterinary, and animal behaviouralists.
- Other: Was not biased on breed
- Other: Was not biased towards bully breeds
- Other: Was on a case by case basis for punishment/rehabilitation. Involved the pet's veterinarian as an authoritative and professional witness to the dog's past behaviour, owner's care and level of attentiveness. As well as using the vet to suggest alternative corrective measures.

- Other: Was regularly monitored to ensure those serving are not discriminatory against certain breeds.
- Other: Was reviewed VERY thoroughly, as a dog shouldn't get euthanized over a bite.
- Other: Wasn't bias against certain dog breeds (e.g., pit bulls)
- Other: We do not euthanize dogs. There are no bad dogs, only bad dog owners.
- Other: We need to have representatives that are experienced with dog behaviour, and understand that rehabilitation and behaviour training are ideal options.
- Other: We shouldn't punish the dog for the owners fault. This is plain cruelty
- Other: We stop judging a dog on its breed and start looking at the owners
- Other: We would need an animal rights person(s) on this group as well. To avoid prior judgement.
- Other: Weighing fairness in the situation and putting blame on the owners of the animal, not on the animal itself.
- Other: What are the qualifications of people in the tribunal? What measures would be in place to ensure they have all parties' interests in mind and are not biases in one direction?
- Other: What is best for the dog not the owner or person attacked
- Other: what would the make up of the group be? related education, experience, ability to be objective, not make decisions based on personal feelings, need strong mandate for the group
- Other: When child abusers are euthanized before dogs.
- Other: When determining to euthanize an animal, consult with behavioural experts first.
- Other: When owner fails to control the dog and breach the bylaws and dog is involved in attack outside owners premises
- Other: Who appoints the tribunal? Will there be specific investigative procedures exploring options and stories from all parties?
- Other: Who sits the tribunal, and what qualifications do they have? Who decides who is on the tribunal and what qualifications do THEY have?
- Other: Who would sit on the tribunal? How many people would sit on the tribunal? Would they be dog behaviour specialists or simply law enforcement/legal representation? Unless you have several qualified people on the tribunal, it would risk being biased.
- Other: Who you would assign as members of the tribunal. City representatives are NOT animal experts.
- Other: Whoever asses the dog needs to be a team of professional trainers with tons of experience and completely non bias opinions. If the calgary representatives don't like pitbull type dogs, you are setting the dogs and the owners up for failure. Euthanization should be the absolute last resort
- Other: whoever the complaint is is that they be looked into the background to make sure that they're not just doing this because they don't like animals and how many times they've reported animals in the past. Plus I will give the owner and the dog an option to move from the city and also enrol in a behavioural program for the dog.
- Other: Whole and complete view of dog and owners life. Assessing situation and conditions of living, training, exercise etc. Before any conclusions and consequences are made.

- Other: Whomever is deciding if euthanizing is warranted is educated in dog behaviour and veterinary medicine
- Other: Why the dog reacted in such a severe way. Eg: a child hit it multiple times and it snapped. Child is at fault.
- Other: With a veterinarian, trainer, rescue staff, etc. to make sure the process is fair. Dogs should be innocent until proven guilty.
- Other: Worked on rehabilitating bad owners instead of punishing the dog
- Other: Would have dog friendly people on the board. No breed discriminating people.
- Other: Would want to know and understand rules they are adhering to and the boards background knowledge
- Other: [Removed] is with question number three. Pit bulls are no worse than any other dogs and do not need to be singled out. This is [removed].
- Other: X
- Other: Xx
- Other: Yes
- Other: Yes if followed
- Other: Yes the tribunal should be able to place restrictions that the owner must abide by until the case can be processed in court. However I don't think the tribunal should be able to determine if the animal should be euthanized.
- Other: Yes.
- Other: You are looking at the owners fit are to own a dog
- Other: You can not base this by breed. Anyone who shames or singles out pit bulls should be ashamed of themselves.
- Other: You can't decide if it should live or die, only fine, seize, and rehabilitate. Once deemed safely trained it could be adopted.
- Other: You can't euthanize dogs for living. If a dog is violent, and an owner is unable to provide the dog with the proper training to prevent it from being a danger to others, then you can provide a separate solution where the dog is transitioned to someone else's care. If a person is violent, you don't just murder them. They go through rehabilitation to help them. Killing animals should not be your solution to violence. They don't know any better.
- Other: You don't ban pit bulls or put them on the top of your list as they are bred to be nanny dogs!

- Other: You don't place biased people in charge of making decisions.
- Other: You don't go after "bully" breeds only and you take the people and hold them responsible for the dog attacks.
- Other: You have a fair basis of people who aren't biased towards certain breeds. As you guys are being biased towards pit bulls in this survey.
- Other: You have someone on the tribunal that is a dog training experts that are experts in aggression. This is critical as dog behavior is different for every dog and the route of aggression should be analyzed by dog training EXPERTS in aggressive dogs
- Other: You hear both sides of the attack, many times it is people that are fault if they hit a dog or tease it. People do get bit because of their actions. It seems like you have already chosen to hate Pit Bulls I am not so sure a tribunal would be open for discussion if there was a problem that involved a pit bull.
- Other: You need to have a legitimate dog trainer on hand to assess each case as it comes. You can not punish any animal for their owner's actions or inactions.
- Other: You need to understand the situation. Any dog can bite.
- Other: You prosecute the owner more severely than the dog. Dogs are what people make them. Nasty people who are terrible owners have multiple dogs but there's zero repercussions for people. Fines are not enough.
- Other: You provide more training to owners not more consequences
- Other: You remove euthanization as an option.
- Other: You take into account the whole series of events. Sometimes dogs attack other dogs because they got scared not because they're malicious
- Other: You use a non biased certified dog specialist
- Other: Zero euthanizing
- as long as it included individuals with professional knowledge of dogs (ie. Vets, animal protection etc) not just city councilors or members of the general public
- It didn't discriminate a dogs breed. Especially without taking the owners history/behaviour into account
- Increased fines for breach of conditions. Three strikes rule.
- Actual dog behaviourists are apart of the tribunal. Not just comprised of a bunch of Karen's clutching their pearl necklace in horror and making impulsive decisions without considering dog behaviour.
- There should be a veterinarian or other behaviour specialist included in the representatives that are making the decisions
- Didn't discriminate against a specific breed.
- No discrimination based on breed.
- A canine behaviour specialist is a part of the tribunal. And euthanasia is considered a last resort.
- a tribunal should include experts - i.e. veterinarians, animal behavioral specialists, animal protection service experts
- Qualified, educated, independent individuals would be appointed, hired.

- Having an unbiased and nonjudgmental stand point.
- Must be more cost-effective than court
- Dogs should not be euthanized due to the lack of training provided by owner. Dog should be properly trained by a professional before returning to owner.
- These cases need to be closely looked at, dogs can bite simply because they feel threatened, not necessarily because they are not otherwise well behaved. Euthanizing a dog for an isolated incident is wrong
- A decision to euthanize must be reviewed by the court given that the tribunal would essentially have to have court assigned powers wherein it effectively amounts to seizure and destruction of property
- It would have to be people that are actually knowledgeable in dog breeds, temperament and behaviour.
- depending on circumstance, if someone is intruding into my property and my dog is protecting that is ok
- As long as it worked to hold owners accountable rather than punish dogs
- That the dog's safety is paramount, this entire survey reads like you're endangering and harming and blaming pets.
- Tribunal members have varying points of view and decide without bias.
- Civilian members of the tribunal are trained veterinarians and or some other trained animal specialist
- There must be an appeal system. This is too easily corrupted.
- Cases are fairly and without bias reviewed and not targeting a specific breed of dog, rather, looking at situations as a whole and determining if there was some sort of a danger as a result of negligent owners that resulted in poor training of a dog. Breeds should not be deemed a nuisance, rather situations should be determined as potentially dangerous or not.
- obedience training or reform should always be looked at first, initially before an incident happens but if one occurs the owners should be forced to put their pet through more training, rather than fines and a deceased pet
- honesty
- The process was agreed upon by both parties
- They look at the dog owner and the victim. Is dog poorly trained? Easy dog being teased, taunted or abused by victim. Decision must not be because of breed
- As long as it didn't cost more taxpayers money.
- As long as the breed isn't mentioned in the incident reports and only refers to the "animal in question" to achieve impartial and unbiased resolution.
- An animal should not be euthanized for vicious actions, like mentioned before, the dog should go through rehabilitation and training seeing as the dogs behaviours is a result of the owners care, it's largely the owners fault if they are vicious. You don't kill a human for doing something wrong to someone else, you allow them to go through a rehabilitation process, so, if the dogs behaviours is a result of the owners training so why should the dog be punished for the owners negligence?
- Tribunal should not be influenced by the breed. Cases should be adjudicated based on previous behaviour of the animal and it's owner(s).

- as long as the person is proven to not have any bias and has background experience in dog training and/or psychology
- No harm comes to the dog and that worst case scenario the dog/owner are required to attend extensive training in order to prevent reoccurrence
- Decisions are not breed-based, or innocent animals punished for owners' poor behaviour.
- Review of the dog owner - their home and the way they treat their animals
- If the tribunal was made up of independent dog behavior specialists and trainers.
- There will be no breed bias and the circumstances surrounding the bite AS WELL AS what the dog had been exposed to earlier in the day is taken into consideration by the tribunal that is comprised of various individuals that are well versed in canine behavior and psychology
- Dogs are not needlessly being euthanized!!! They need rehabilitation and training after being removed from a household that likely abused and neglected them, Just the same as kids and adults those with behavioural issues or drug/alcohol misuse disorders stems from trauma
- Euthanization is NOT the first option considered when reviewing dogs
- It is handled in a timely manner and the pet owner is allowed to spend time with the pet
- The dog stays with the owner and is required to not leave the premise.
- Have representatives from various sources including animal rescues/shelters on the board so there is an overall big picture thought process
- Look at whether the animal was aggravated to bite by someone.
- As long as the tribunal is not a round about way of putting an end to an animal's life prior to its owner receiving the right to fight for it in court. I would approve of tribunals as a way to reduce wait times only and reduce the trauma to both dog and owner at being separated. The system should not work to punish anyone as punishment does not repair any damage caused and only perpetuates more suffering.
- The representatives are educated in the field of dog behaviour and management
- That they do not automatically assume the pitbull is at fault.
- Euthanasia isn't the primary decision from the courts
- The owners are not allowed to own any more animals and are investigated for animal cruelty
- Provided counsel provided for the animal - similar to a children's guardian in family law proceedings
- as long as they could be appealed
- education is given to member, the public, and owners on balanced management strategies for reactive dogs on the first offense.
- I would support the tribunal if there is follow through.
- Euthanization should not be result of dog that just need more work or poor ownership/upbringing. Assessments should have ZERO to do with breeds and 100% be focused on temperament and environment! Aka- did the dog they bit initially show warning signs that it displayed but were then ignored by the other dog or person which then resulted in a bite!
- Euthenizing cannot be a common resolve. There is no bad dogs, only bad owners...and would they take into account that the bite victim could be sticking fingers through private property fencing or surprise or egg on the dog to bite.

- Have dog educated people on the tribunal. Not people with no clue about dogs, dog sports and ownership.
- the human is punished; the dog kept alive
- Euthanasia shouldn't be an option.
- nuscene dogs not specifically pitbulls and the owners should be held more accountable
- judge all dogs, case by case. No bias to pitbull breeds
- Assessed each animal on a case by case basis. If the dog was provoked into attacking or if it is protecting its home, it should not be euthanized. Case by case assessments are essential without prejudice towards any breed.
- The owner is present and takes responsibility for the behaviour of the dog and how it got to be that way. Remedial work and restrictions on owning future dogs.
- They were fair and unbiased to the dogs breed and take into consideration the history of the animal. Example: first offence, was the incident provoked.
- Dogs who have bitten should not be punished let alone murdered simply because they acted out of instinct. Rather, a rehabilitation system should be put in place and a tribunal should be held decided if the rehabilitated dog should be let back into the possession of the previous owner. I'd rather pay more taxes for you guys to pay for proper rehabilitation than pay less cause you guys are cheap and would rather murder innocent animals.
- Owner has to take dog obedience course
- That there is a review on the owner to determine if their actions created an aggressive dog and punishment for the owner
- As they consider the owner and their training.
- Needs to be professionals- vets and behavioralists only
- that the tribunal was fair and that appeals were easily available
- Orders to euthanize dogs should be off the table as much as possible.
- Unbiased opinions with professional trainer included - NOT JUST VETS AND CITY WORKERS
- Influence from animal behaviour specialists must be considered.
- euthanization is not an option
- Stop killing dogs. Force the owners to hire a dog trainer instead, or donate it to someone who cares.
- No reason
- Dogs are judges on their level of nuisance or aggression. NOT because they are of a particular breed.
- Unbiased panel of 5 or more. Not taking influence from neighbours or families of either the victim side or dog owner side.
- This may speed up the wait times.
- Veterinary medical professional or an animal behaviorist is part of the panel for a decision of the animals status
- As long as the representatives have had animal behaviour training, such as vets or vet techs or animal trainers

- VERY CLEARLY identify if the victim instigated the dog. Citizens of Alberta have a duty to educate themselves on the behaviour of animals just as much as pet owners have a responsibility to train their pets properly. Dogs and pets should not be punished for being instigated to bite, or for protecting their homes/owners.
- It was fair, non-biased and consisted only of animal advocates.
- Adequate proof Must be made before any tribunal can be made. Just because victim says the dog but them but doesn't provide proof there should be tribunal until that proof is made. Photos of the dog is not sufficient in saying the dog but them.
- Dogs are given a fair chance at rehabilitation. And are not separated from the own unless the owner is deemed unfit to own a dog.
- Both sides of the story were known, rather than only victims side.
- Not cost a lot
- Includes dog experts
- Are dog behaviour experts going to be on the tribunal?
- not biased based on breed. Signaling out breeds is not the issue. Pitbull are not a "bad" breed. The owner is the owner
- All members would be certified dog trainers or experienced in canine psychology.
- The tribunal workers have to actually care about animals and understand why animals do the things that they do. Most dog attacks are provoked by humans who are disrespectful of a dogs personal space, boundaries, or by being stupid like running at the dog or causing it stress. People are stupid not dogs.
- Breed is not a factor, just the seriousness of the offence and the owner should have to take their dog to a reactive training class/ program before euthanasia is a consideration.
- The Tribunal included experts in dog behavior
- It did not unfairly target any breed, including "pit bulls"
- I did
- It doesn't vilify certain breeds
- it is optional, owner's choice
- No Euthanizing dogs.
- The tribunal is education on animal reform and are not biased. Euthaniza should always be the last option.
- The decision to euthanize a dog should not be made quickly. Restrictions placed so the animal can get out of the shelter faster is a great idea
- The tribunal consists of dog experts and trainers to determine if the dog can be rehabilitated. As well that the tribunal takes into account what lead up to the incident. The weakest point in this bylaw is people and their actions, that includes the victim and dog owner.
- It is a specialized group of educated individuals who are knowledgable about dog behaviour and training. For example, people that would know that German Shepherd has a stronger bite strength than PitBulls but for some reason are not mentioned in this survey.
- Tribunal includes knowledgeable professionals in veterinary science and dog behaviour

- It allows all parties to provide information, facts and an opportunity to resolve and properly address the issue before making a definitive decision.
- Owners retain the right to appeal tribunal decisions in provincial court.
- reputable breeder input and /or assesment
- Can show panel is unbiased and pragmatic. Processes are transparent and inclusive.
- with no option for euthanasia.
- have a dog go through training before assessing for euthanization
- Tribunal Members must remain unbiased and have no conflict of interest in the case. Tribunal should not have decisions on whether to euthanize. Taking a life should be reserved for the courts.
- a dog behavior expert was on the panel and no animal should ever lose their life over this
- Rather than euthinization, obedience training as an alternative.
- As long as you actually apprehend and asses any vicious dog. The city did nothing to apprehend or asses the neighbour dog(s) that killed my puppy.
- tribunal to include knowledgeable animal advocate
- The people judging the dog need to actually be professionally trained in dealing with dogs. Ie: vets, trainers, kennel attendants.
- The results penalized the owner and not the dog. The dog has become a nuisance because it has not been properly cared for and trained. If you euthanize thier dog, they will go out and get another and have the same problem. We must focus on the owner not the animal.
- There were veterinarians and animal behaviour specialists on the tribunal
- Dog obedience training and facilities that could work with the owner to improve dog behaviour.
- Select, diverse group of unbiased people on the panel with real experience with animal behavior
- Yeah...let's make people on this panel appropriately educated and experts in the correct fields. This has great potential for abuse and misuse by the wrong people being on the tribunal
- euthanization is NOT an option
- A mix of pitbull owners and other dog owners not regarded under the "pitbull" category.
- Animal advocates (eg. humane society) and dog professionals who have education in animal psychology and training certification involved
- Tribunal made up of professionals within the dog care and law professions only.
- Dogs should never be euthanized, in most cases it's behavior comes from the OWNER, NOT the dog. Behavioral rehabilitation for dogs can do wonders, and being placed with a proper loving family can change a dog's personality. No dog deserves to be euthanized.
- Don't be breed specific with pitbulls; their bits is not stronger than other dogs. More research is needed before any of this gets put in place. Also need to look into how much training the owner has put into the dog.
- Representatives do not support breed-specific legislation to reduce breed bias in euthanization determinations, and the tribunals must occur quickly (within a few days) so the animal is not traumatized.

- Tribunal should not have the power to euthanize, only to recommend to euthanize
- Looking at the owner as usually how a dog acts is due to how the owner is.
- Vicious dog declaration and decision leading to euthanasia should not be an option available to bylaw officers. Removal of the dog from the questionable owner should be a first step followed by attempt to rehome animal with better suited people.
- There can not be any type of bias towards specific dogs. And it should be more of a judgement of the owner not the dog. Bad dogs are raised by bad people.
- The dog gets a second chance with a trainer.
- errs on the side of not euthanizing the dog whenever possible and offers offending owners options for some training and dog handling classes
- The owner has strict restrictions to keep the dog, training be mandatory.
- Option for owner to appeal tribunal decisions to a court system.
- It was made up solely of professionals such as vets and dog trainers. It guaranteed less time in a shelter. Testing on the dog was not done in an unfamiliar/stressful place such as a shelter. Accommodations could be made to house the dog at home where there is the least chance of further incidents if owners agreed (conditions such as muzzling could be included).
- people know the breed they are seeing not just people with no dog experience
- Had members educated in science and animal behaviour
- The costs are borne by the owner of the animal regardless of tribunal outcome.
- veterinarians should be part of the tribunal. Experienced dog owners should be on the panel. Panelists screened for their stance on pit bulls
- The tribunal committee is comprised of responsible dog owners of various breeds especially pit bulls, dog rescue organization representatives and/or dog trainers or vets.
- 5-7 individuals with extensive background in dog breeds, behaviour, training and ownership. Contact the Canadian Kennel Club for their recommended breeders/owners/judges and veterinarians.
- Had a well represented group on the tribunal and must include certified dog trainers/experts
- A certified behaviourist is assessing the dog in question
- fully researched the issue and if the dog is not at fault, the offender (human) receives a hefty fine.
- Exploration to causation of a vicious dog needs to be considered within the tribunal to determine objectively if it is solely a vicious dog or product of a neglectful owner. A tribunal with the capacity to effectively render this decision could provide better overall decisions more efficiently, saving already lengthy court process
- That's it's not just based on the breed. Look into the home owners and training
- that is a case by case situation and not just a broad response. this needs to be taken seriously with the animal's welfare in mind as well. why did the dog bite? what were the factors? was it protecting itself?
- The tribunal consisted of educated dog trainers and advocates who can provide educated responses on behaviour and training for the pet owners.
- Favoured mandatory obedience training for first time offences opposed to euthanasia

- That biases for certain dog breeds are noted before hand, and if someone has a negative bias for a specific breed (i.e., pit bulls) they are NOT to take part in the tribunal.
- Had involvement from animal welfare groups such as AARCS
- To not euthanize the animal
- Not just euthanizing any dog. The owner and dog should have to attend a training session or be judged based on ability to train and ability to obey.
- Make sure the panel is made up of big breed dog owners and to keep a level headed mind
- That all information is included, especially when the dog gets provoked by humans
- That a recognized pet behavioral specialist be engaged by one or both sides
- Representatives included animal behavioral specialists and the actions and behaviors of the owner are taken into account
- Participants must be dog owners, and must not discriminate based on breed
- Just as a human has to go through a mental diagnosis, so should a dog but with their human counter part present. To see the trigger or really dig deep with the problem.
- Has to be the same across the board. Pit bull type dogs shouldn't not be unfairly persecuted
- Made up of intelligent unbiased people.
- Determine and review restrictions placed on a dog, which the owner would need to abide by to keep the animal
- Professional dog trainers and behavioralist be involved
- Non-city officials appointed to the tribunal should be expected to represent a variety of non-aligned interests and groups within the community. It should also be expected that the tribunal consists of a balanced number of City and non-City representatives.
- That they use multiple valid references for cases where a dog would me euthanized. (Ie behaviour specialists)
- Breed specific legislation is not utilized. dd
- Multiple independent members of tribunal
- I don't agree with euthanasia.
- ALL dogs, from small purse dogs to any large breed are treated equally. I have been attacked and charged at more often by smaller dogs (30lbs and less) than any type of larger breed
- Euthanizing was a last resort only (after the dog had tried and failed multiple rehabilitation and training attempts and the owner was determined not to be the cause for aggression).
- There was a representative on the council who had a dog behavior background
- That it is NOT breed specific and there are no biases with breeds
- Do not euthanize dogs who are a first offender regardless of the severity of the bite. They are only doing what they have been taught to do. If more than once, may need to consider harsher consequences especially for the owner who clearly has not trained their dog properly even after it reacted poorly to the situation.

- On the condition that the members aren't biased to the breed of dog but rather understand that all and any dog can and will be reactive without proper training. The responsibility falls on the owner and not the dog.
- Representatives are not against bully breeds. They are open to rehabilitation. Do not jump to euthanasia just because they hate bully breeds
- At least one dog training expert and one veterinarian on the panel.
- At least one dog training expert on the panel and one veterinarian
- There is someone unbiased that understands dog Behaviour etc.
- A dog has an innocence that humans do not. When they do become aggressive and attack, it's most likely a result of poor training/care from the owner. Revoke ownership privileges and have the dog put into a shelter where it can be rehabilitated and trained by professionals. A dog doesn't know it's doing something bad, it's reacting instinctively. They should not have their lives taken away because of something a human has failed to do.
- The tribunal included animal behaviourists/shelter workers who have experience and can make case specific recommendations
- Dogs not be euthanized just because they are pit bulls. All dogs should be viewed in light of behaviour not breed. And full consideration given to whether it's the owner that's the problem. If so, they lose the right to own pets and the pets be rehomed/ retrained, not put down
- The behaviors of the human leading up to the bite were examined to ensure that the dog wasn't giving warning signs of being under stress
- Members should understand dog behaviour, expert opinion should always be presented and considered.
- Training and reformation is an option for the owner and is strongly encouraged, the dog should be offered a chance to be educated to not act as violent.
- The tribunal consists of individuals who have previous knowledge of dog behaviour such as: obedience trainers, veterinarian industry staff, dog groomers, dog trainers, pet resort owners.
- Those people making the decision consisted of a vet behaviorist (with an education and registered), a canine behaviorist and a trainer who uses CURRENT methods (IE not shock collars/punishment/pain) and has worked with rehabilitating dangerous dogs and can thus assess the dog appropriately. Also the foster/spca in charge of the animal after being seized should also be involved.
- A certified Animal Behaviour Consultant is a part of the tribunal
- The people on said tribunal are qualified to assess animal behaviour
- A certified dog trainer/behavioural specialist is on the tribunal
- That it judges the owners training and not simply on the breed of the dog and that whoever is in the tribunal isn't biased against "bully" breeds
- It did not have the power to have a dog euthanized
- As long as there is not bias directed at certain breeds. The tribunal's decision must be based on the behaviour of the animal. No BSL.

- Don't euthanize dogs. You don't kill people, so don't kill dogs. People can abuse and rape small children, and they're not killed. What is more traumatic?
- Members of the tribunal need to be familiar with dog behavior and body language
- A solid, short timeline or time limit, with the potential for dogs placed under house arrest rather than confiscated.
- Transparency around requirements for qualifications of members of tribunal eg) vet or canine behaviour expert, not some random person with no particular qualifications in dog expertise
- A trainer and a veterinarian were involved in assessing the animal in question
- Dogs shouldn't be euthanized for a bite. Killing an animal because of an instinctual reaction is morally reprehensible.
- No euthanizations! There are no bad dogs, just bad owners.
- They had a basic understanding that the dog is a reflection of a person and offer healthy ways, and using death as a last resort.
- Breed specific legislation regarding pit bulls is unscientific and largely race based/discriminatory.
- I disagree with a tribunal having the authority to euthanize an animal, but it is a good first step to help deal with more minor offences.
- I would want to know more about this tribunal before agreeing to it to ensure a just trial for animal welfare.
- Yes
- There is a 'committee made up of a diverse section of the population'
- the people on the tribunal should not show any biases against bully breeds
- The tribunal is comprised of equal part pet and non-pet owners.
- No euthanasia. All can be rehabilitated or rehomed.
- A certified dog trainer and a vet should be a part of the tribunal to ensure knowledgeable opinions can be made regarding any dog that is brought before them.
- non euthanasia
- Breed is not taken into account and the owners have a chance to get their dog properly trained.
- Majority vote that considers the circumstance or the complaint and doesn't automatically put the blame on the animal
- I would like to see the folks on this tribunal be pet owners, or people with knowledge about animal behavior.
- Remove the pit bull bias. Rules should apply to any dog who have a history of issues regardless of breed and the requirements for any animal that can be aggressive. With rehoming then following rehabilitation with trainers. Don't blame the dog blame the owner and rehab the dog
- Tribunal composed of dog behaviour experts
- Hopefully a tribunal would be a speedier solution.
- Have a variety of people on the panel from separate backgrounds including laymen
- there are no blanket cases and you actually review case by case and take into account why the dog bit someone. get the idea out of your head that pitbulls are bad!!!

- Na
- I believe the dog should go to a professional trainer to get the dog back to the proper learning spot, you can train a bad dog to be good but it needs to be done by a professional and not some one who will abuse the dog even more. The dog shouldn't be put down if it's defending him self or his humans life and if they were trained incorrectly by the human owner it should be taken away and properly trained and re homed just like so many people do all around the world. If they can train and aggressive dog to be better then it can be done. NO TO KILLING ANIMALS !!!!!!! Charge the human.
- Euthanasia should be an absolute last resort. If the dog shows signs that it's behaviour is not being actively addressed by the owner there should be a seizure of the animal from the owner, however it should be a system where there is attempts at rehabilitation before anything drastic. So if the tribunals are able to facilitate that without bias based off breed I believe it would be helpful.
- They are blind to the dog breed involved. This would reduce bias in decision making.
- As long as proper training is given to bylaw officers to reduce risk of bias against specific breeds or size of dog, seeming level of income of the owners, or any other biases (including sexism and racism) to try to ensure as fair of a process as possible, with severe reproductions against proven biases that result in unfair treatment of a dog and their owner's, a tribunal could be a better alternative to present processes. However, the choice to euthanize should be a very last resort reserved to dogs deemed untrainable or high risk of attacking with little provocation and only be given after a proper investigation, as many dogs bite in defense of themselves, and to kill a dog for protecting itself against abuse is cruel and unfair to both the animals and the owners.
- Euthanasia should not be an option
- It's fair and the tribunal isn't biased
- V
- The tribunal members were qualified to assess canine behavior. le:vets
- Not biased against breed.
- Well constructed policies and procedures were in place to guide the tribunal
- Dogs should not be euthanized. They should be put into a rehab program where they can be trained. THERE ARE NO BAD DOGS, ONLY BAD OWNERS.
- The dog is reviewed by a three unbiased animal behaviorists for assessment prior to any determination.
- Priority is given to the well being of the dog
- Those involved must be highly trained and include animal welfare advocates so that unfair discrimination against certain breeds is not encouraged.
- Again, there should be restrictions placed on the owner, not the animal
- It was not biased towards any breed or size of dog.
- Someone on the tribunal should be educated and knowledgeable in dog behavior and breed information.
- They cannot decide to euthanize an animal.
- Also involved observing visitation between the dog and it's owner(s) in order to take into account the dog's true behaviour.

- Any decision is appealable to a court before punishment is handed out.
- Proper behaviour assessment. Science based education in dog behaviour.
- Dogs are not completely at fault for their behaviour. As a dog owner, the actions (negative or positive) of your dog directly display your efforts in training and controlling your dog. I myself have 6 dogs total, including a pit bull, and have NEVER had a problem with any of them attacking another dog, or a person. They have been trained properly. Animals should NOT suffer for the incompetence of their owner.
- If the members of the tribunal were educated in animal behaviour and it was not used to carry out punishment to animals due to human error, negligence and ignorance.
- That it is in a per dog basis and not breed bias
- I would support the idea as long as everyone has an open mind. All too often the dog is completely blamed, but there are always underlying circumstances. I would want to make sure that everything is looked at before the dog is considered dangerous. Not just have a closed mind.
- That the tribunal be made up of impartial personelle, vets, physicians, groomers, dog trainers. Someone educated to make the decision, not just random people with bias against specific breeds.
- Tribunal members are qualified, bound by ethics, include a variety of backgrounds and professional qualifications, and include members of the public, are subject to reviews, and must disclose conflicts of interest and refrain from participating in tribunal for cases in which they have a conflict of interest
- Vets and those certified to work with animals on tribunal, not just a random city councillor.
- Owner of dog could still go to court to save the dogs life.
- It is being conducted by individuals who understand dog behaviour.
- An investigation is done into the owner for what kind of training the dog has had. If the dog is mistreated. Or any other cases.
- Is not discriminatory towards pit bulls or any dogs that resemble pit bulls or are a variation of pit bulls
- If a dog was rehabilitated compared to euthanized.
- A full review of the dogs history. Look at the big picture not simple a snapshot of occurrence.
- I think a dog that has bitten should be put in a corrective behaviour program
- Fair review of the dog and no euthanasia.
- The dog and the owner's previous history would have to be taken into account.
- That it was binding and to appeal it would see a cost of $5000 non refundable.
- That the person doing the tribunal is fair and neutral to BREED. And look at all sides of the story, whether the attack was provoked or not and be FAIR to all situations
- Members of local rescue and C Humane Society must be involved
- There would need to be qualified animal behavior specialists on this tribunal along with at least one vet and a psychologist.
- To hear all sides, and euthanized being the last results.
- Obedience training as a requirement within a reasonable timeline and no off leash access until completion of obedience training. OWNER(s) must attend and complete training with dog.
- Veterinarians or educated dog behavior experts need to be involved.

- More information needed on this process and qualifications of tribunal members, but I support the goals of this approach
- Not discriminating against a certain breed....such as bully breeds. Because like humans there are dogs with issues and it has nothing to do with their breed whatsoever!
- not breed specific
- No euthanization on first offence . Only be an option if the problem is constant and persists multiple times and no amount of training works or makes the situation better
- For owners to learn how to control dogs
- The owner and the victim both got to be part of it.
- Includes a truly non biased group of people, and is not lobbyable
- As long as everyone is properly certified
- No breed-specific legislation or discrimination.
- It does not factor breed of dog into the investigation.
- That the animal in question I'm guilty. Not here say on people's behalf.
- That pit bull or other large breed dog owners sat on the tribunal
- assessment of the environment dog was raised in
- If the dog has tried everything else. Rehabilitation, moving to a new home ect then euthanasia would be the next choice.
- Each situation must be considered independently. Even the most calm animal can get defensive if it feels threatened.
- Those on the tribunal would need proven experience in animal behavior and training.
- It does not take into consideration the breed, just the deed
- Does not discriminate based on breed of dog
- Provided trainers opinions and educated behavior experts override the majority when euthanization is in question.
- The tribunal is made up of animal behaviour experts, including veterinarians.
- Breed of dog isn't taken into account, only it's history if any
- As the dog stays on the owners pripery and if it is walk has to be muzzled. No off leash parks, or any dog parks.
- I would like to ensure there is a system in place to avoid, deter, and punish vexatious claimants. Moreover, I believe the burden of proof should be on the claimant, rather than the dog owner/dog. I am concerned with the pattern of frivolous cases we have seen brought before other tribunals in Canada recently, which seem to put the onus of responsibility on the defendant; I support the idea of quicker resolution as long as we do not create a soapbox for entitled, anti animal advocates to harass their neighbours.
- Members have dog knowledge.
- I don't think other people have a right to decide if someone else's pet is euthanized, I think egregious cases should be handled on a case-by-case basis.

- The role of the tribunal is to be clearly laid out in a best attempt to avoid personal bias. All decisions may be appealed. The dog owner must be included in all proceedings. Nothing is done without the full knowledge of the owner. Alternatives may be offered - ie a large dog may be moved outside of the city to a rural area where the behaviour may be resolved due to space. Training can also be an alternative, with the dog and owner reviewed regularly during the courses.
- Careful and un-biased investigation
- The tribunals should not include breed it should include activity how it was raised what obedience classes it has and how the dog is socialize with other dogs
- If there is a cost savings to taxpayers. If it costs too much money to implement, and if all cases end up being appealed at Provincial court, I feel like this is wasted energy.
- Has breed neutral guidelines and representatives, also a representative that is educated in scientific based research on canine behaviour
- Provided clear standards were set for the tribunal to follow-to allow for consistency and transparency
- Only if they were to look at both sides properly. Ie, the dog was provoked
- As long as the final decision has nothing to do with the dog's breed. When a dog attacks it's the owner's fault not the dog's.
- This tribunal can NOT be focused on specific breeds more than others. I've seen vicious chihuahuas bite more people than other dogs.
- It includes professional from vet fields and other animal related fields to allow a proper judgement of the situation.
- The tribunal is not biased against "nuisance dogs."
- People in these positions have proper credentials and don't "just know dogs". Start with someone educated enough to know Breed specific legislation doesn't work.
- they were very disinclined to euthanize any animal unless absolutely no other option is available.
- that no extra new staff would need to be hired,
- The dog being euthanized was not an option unless the owner supported the decision.
- .
- It was fair and unbiased towards specific breeds and was made up of animal health professionals
- City representatives are unbiased and fair and do not discriminate based on breed, but instead make informed decisions based on fact.
- The dogs not euthanized
- Punish the owner, do not put the dog down, find a suitable home for the dog ONLY IF the owner is found unsuitable otherwise leave dog with owner until court case and slap fine or jail time on owner pending severity of the case.
- The people on the tribunal are dog behavioural experts.
- owner is able to prove the animal was provoked that it was only in self defence, certify that the animal does have vaccinations and training. The animal is not guilty until proven otherwise.
- That tribunal is formed by animal behavior specialists, positive reinforcement trainers as opposed to force trainers, veterinarians. Also, that the owners are tasked with the accountability of making sure their dog is safe.

- There there is no bias to breed
- That it applies to all breeds
- Don't lock up the dog use rehabilitation and punish the owner
- Every person on the board must have training in dog care and euthanasia must be be a last course of action and always with an option to appeal the decision
- As long as the appropriate people who sit on the tribunal are voted in and are completely unbiased.
- No more taxes
- If the owner has never provided training to the dog then the dog should go into a foster home where the foster family has tools and knowledge to train the dog
- as long and the dog is indeed labeled properly. the process does not get back logged an posses stress on the dog, owner or victims.
- It does not single out specific breeds ie: pit bulls, a kind and loving breed that has the unfortunate luck to be the victim of vicious untrue rumors. Quite frankly I'm sickened at the thought of this city that has been my home for more than 50 years is even considering being so backward as to think that pit bulls are any way a "nuisance"
- As long as it wasn't breed specific/prejudice and had the dog's best interest at heart. Blain the owner not the animal..
- there is appropriate representation for all parties involved.
- euthanasia is not considered. Obedience training should be required for these dogs. The owner should be fined and/or charged
- That it is fair
- It would be important that the bylaw officers check up on the situation to ensure the decision is being carried out
- Some members came from accredited rescue organizations
- The representatives reviewing the case would have to be impartial (ex: not know anyone involved or have been involved in an attack themselves, etc)
- Dog experts on the tribunal.
- They cannot discriminate against breed specifically. Bite severity should still be taken into consideration though.
- I do not support euthanasia as a possible option at all. The tribunal should not have this option.
- As long as the tribunal was an accurate representation for the community and not biased to specific dog breeds
- I don't believe these things should be influenced by breed type (I've known vicious Chihuahuas and gentle Pit bulls, it's all in the owner and how they're raised!). I would worry about bias towards certain breeds.
- Be impartial to breed
- There is absolutely no breed specific rules or practices that would make it unfair for any one type of dog

- At least one of the tribunal members is a veterinary behaviorist to properly assess the behavior of the dog.
- Euthanasia is not an option, penalties should be awarded to owners, not the animal. Dogs can be trained, but vicious dogs come from bad owners
- That the tribunal focuses on education than punishment
- It should be made up of individuals with a high level of understanding of dog behavior
- That the animal owner has the right to hold animal in their home for a fee instead of being seized assuming no one is at risk in the home and the animal doesn't leave the property.
- Thinking of the possibility of rehoming of a dog in shelter or rescue that is willing to help said dog as the problem is the owner not the dog.
- Members/representatives cannot be biased. They cannot be fearful of any dog breeds, they cannot dislike dogs, they cannot know anyone involved in the incident
- Accountability that goes farther than one or two people, to ensure unfair decisions are not being made based on personal bias.
- Qualified individuals subject to screening, ie vets, animal behavior specialists
- as long as it us a fair assesment and not based on looks of the dog. Include how the dog is raised and wether or not this would have been prevented with better ownership or if the person injured was tourmenting the dog. Look at all the factors
- The tribunal would review and assess and suggest restrictions which would then move forward to provincial court. These situations still need to be dealt with in a professional and proper legal manner.
- A third leave of assessment from a veterinarian
- Appeal process for euthanasia.
- Verified by more than one witness to prevent wrong accusations, have the fog fostered not in a shelter
- Those on the tribunal are certified dog behaviouralists, veterinarians, and not random counselors who don't have any experience with animal behaviour.
- No discrimination based on physical characteristics
- Number 1 and number 3
- Mo euthanization without provincial court order
- I think the representatives should include people who also know animals: trainers, veterinary professionals, animal behaviourist experts etc
- The owner keeps their dog during the trial. Shelters cause stress on dogs.
- It was dealt with WITHOUT bias on the type of dog
- As long as the dog gets a fair case
- It must be made up of professional dog trainers/behaviouralists.
- There needs to be strict screening criteria in place that ensures whoever sits at the head of these decisions is not biased one way or another.
- Treat all dog breeds as equals and do not discriminate based on the pitbull breed

- It's in favor of the dog.
- The breed of the dog is not included. It should be judged on behaviour and owner's behaviour and NOT the dog breed. Dogs should NOT be euthanized under any circumstances unless it is for THEIR health benefit
- It can't be a biased tribunal
- Dog are not euthanized
- members are appropriately educated on statistics and risks around dog breeds - there is undo vilianization of pit bull breeds in our culture
- That the Tribunal (members) are rightly positioned to manage these cases and fully disclosing any bias such as breed and/or people discrimination. Also, the owner must have a voice for the voiceless. And the bylaw officers must also have their own records examined in cases of bias/perceptions/charges that are in line with facts. The members who decide on the fate of a dog;s life should not be a position that is taken lightly nor the sentencing to the owner. All parties must agree to hold honesty and fairness to uphold the life of any animal as they would a human being.
- breed of dog is not used against them
- Proper investigation proving dog is actually violent, and has not been continuously instigated. Aggressive training as first order.
- As long as you don't make judgements based on the breed of the dog. All dogs can be bad and all dogs have the potential to bite. Looking "like a pitbull" is the stupidest thing I've ever heard.
- people forming the tribunal need to know and understand dogs. Not be biased against certain breeds.
- A dog bite out of fear or being surprised must not be considered aggressive behaviour (eg. dog with poor vision surprised by a person's hand)
- As long as the emphasis is on the owner, not the breed of dog.
- It takes the owners actions into account. What did the owner do before and after.
- I has to be fair to both side. Yes the one that gets bitten will scream the loudest, but the dog owners have RIGHTS also that should be listened to. This is NOT trial by social media. That is my fear.
- If the dog is allowed to stay with the owner during the process and if euthanization is warranted the owner can have their own vet donit
- Fair and appropriate representation on the committee
- As long as the process includes a behavioural analysis from a legitimate dog trainer or behaviourist (most animal control workers and shelter employees have little to no education regarding canine behaviour and training)
- the people involved in the tribunal are savy about dogs and dog behaviour.
- 3 week isolation
- Must include persons experienced with dog training/rehabilitation so there is a better chance of a balanced opinion.
- If the tribunal is for ALL dog breeds.
- There is an appeal option

- You do not need to euthanize a dog just because it attacked a human. Just train it to be better. An animal is still an animal. You're basically supporting the death penalty for animals.
- At least one person on the tribunal is a certified animal behaviourist.
- Dogs do not get euthenized, the owners should be responsible.
- As long as qualified individuals from varying animal behavioural backgrounds provide the guidance and have a great amount of influence. Force free behaviouralists mainly.
- Impartial, unbiased tribunal members. If anyone claims a specific breed rather than poor training is responsible for action.
- DOES NOT DISCRIMINATE AGAINST A DOG FOR BREED AND OR PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
- Dogs are NOT euthanized, period. They should not suffer due to poor training/care from owners.
- No breed prejudice.
- Provided the dog stayed with the owner or a city-approved foster care giver.
- quick and strictly enforced
- There are people on the tribunal that actually are animal experts (e.g. veterinarians)
- So long as the pet can be kept with the owner with limited restrictions to public outings
- Expedited and fair process, knowledgeable review board/person, appealable decisions. Process for review needs to be publicly available and vetted.
- Euthanization should be a last resort. Training should be recommended first
- People on tribunal are impartial and voted in or agreed to by both parties if not a set tribunal.
- The actions of the victim are considered when determine the fate of the dog. For example, was the victim aggressive towards the dog first, did the dog's owner ask for the victim not to approach the dog, was the dog cornered or scared by the victim.
- As long as they were 100% unbiased. Maybe made up of vets etc
- representatives must be non-biased and educated
- A 2 strike rule. The first strike causing mandatory training
- The animal is NOT singled out for its appearance but for the offence
- The tribunal committee is comprised of veterinarians, animal rescue workers, citizens with animal knowledge and common sense and bylaw officers.
- That the breed of the dog never EVER determines their destiny. That ALL dogs, every breed and every size, are treated the same for bad behavior and that more irresponsible pet owners are punished harder and more accordingly.
- The dog must be seen by a certified animal behaviorist who makes a determination on whether the dog should be put down or not.
- The tribunal must have at least one veterinarian or other animal behavior specialist, and one social worker.
- All members of tribunal have been thoroughly screened to have zero breed specific biases
- As long as the people who own the dog could stand up for it and give an honest word for their dog, there's plenty of time's a dog will bite and it's in defence and not it's fault.
- Careful review of tribunal members. Include Peace officers and humane society members

- Tribunal members are not biased for or against any particular breed, a portion of members must have sufficient education or knowledge pertaining to animal welfare and animal behavioural psychology.
- Firstly, a dog should NOT be kept in a shelter as a result of a bite. Nine times out of ten there is a good reason the animal has bitten a human being or another animal. An investigation should be launched into WHY the animal felt the need to protect itself or its owner, be kept in a "house arrest" type situation until investigation is complete. Under no circumstances should an animal be euthanized for protecting itself or its "pack" (owners). If it is determined that the animal may be showing signs of consistent aggression or over protectiveness the owner should be required to work with behaviour specialists until there is improvement. The only case in which a dog potentially should be euthanized in a bite scenario is if the dog has a virus transmittable to humans and even then - evaluated on a case by case basis. For example, the rabies virus presents extreme danger to both animals and humans. In that case, euthanasia may be the best course of action. I would ask that whoever is going to be making these day to day decisions about what happens to these dogs be required to go through extensive dog behavioural training themselves. After all, would it be fair for you to be tried by a judge that did not go to law school and have an exceptional understanding of law? No it wouldn't. These animals deserve that same right and consideration. Lastly I will say that in no way shape or form should there be a breed specific set of laws to govern this. Animal aggression is something that should be addressed on a case by case basis.
- Animals are given a full health check,And behaviour assessmentBy a qualified individual NOT just a humane society employee or bylaw officer
- That ALL dog/cat bites be treated equally. Chi chi's bite a hell of a lot more often than big dogs do, yet they are NOT treated equally.
- The breed of dog should not be taken into account, only the owners actions and actions of the victim at the time of attack.
- Dog must stay at home until tribunal rather than a shelter, perhaps with a tracker to make sure. There must be sufficient evidence of an attack.
- So much nuance in dog attacks
- no forced euthanasia
- If the members are sufficiently knowledgeable about the animal(s) type in question.
- There are also exceptions.
- It is made up of people with actual dog breed and behavioral knowledge
- I don't support euthanizing.
- Dog assessed by a professional trainer and rehabilitation has failed.
- It should have at least one member from the rescue community and one from a dog training facility.
- The tribunal consists of animal advocates and animal specialists such as trainers and veterinarians. I do not support a tribunal that consists of people who have zero experience, knowledge, and training of dogs.

- Full history of the dog was provided and the full impartial report of the incident was investigated - provocation - all circumstances identified and reviewed and was for all animal incident NOT just Pit like dogs
- that the tribunal is form by dog breeders and vet, no city official but people that actually understand the situation
- I would support the tribunal if they include all available evidence of behaviour from said animal. I find some breeds are discriminated against before their case will be heard.
- The background to what triggered the dog is taken into account.
- The tribunal panel Must include a person who specializes in dog behavior and must be allowed to assess the dog and give heavily weighted input.
- I would want to see recognized legal and veterinary expertise representing all interests including those of the plaintiffs, owners, community, and the animal. No decisions would be actionable without ample opportunity for review and appeal.
- That it takes into consideration if training the dog is an option. Get the humane society and their behaviour specialists involved.
- No dog should ever be euthanized. That is inhumane and often aggressive dogs comes from abusive owners, meaning it's the owner we need to target as well not necessarily the dog.
- there must be training for tribunal members and decisions have to be determined by policy not at the whim of members
- The members of said system had no bias on dog breeds and soley made decision on case by case circumstances.
- There are professionals that are experienced with dogs.
- Consider if there were any social laws broken ie trespassing, loitering, harassing of the property. The dogs are likely there for protection.
- Dogs can remain at home. Those on the tribunal are trained and educated in the relevant matters such as dogs and bites and human health. Dogs wont be euthanized
- It took into cosideration all of the variables that may have led to the bite
- the dog is looked at as a whole in the situation and "why" would they do this rather than the focus being on what they did
- The Tribunal decisions should be able to to be addressed outside of the court system to allow ease of access for all Calgarians. Also the Tribunal should be assessing the owner rather than the dog.
- The tribunal MUST have at least one member educated and experienced in dog behavior and science based training methods, and all other members must have some education of dog body language prior to being able to serve on the tribunal
- It consisted of those qualified in dog behavior, as well as those with experience with pit bull type dogs
- All dogs-not just pitbulls or the like, would have the same process and investigation into the incidents that caused the need for an investigation. The tribunal must be fair and impartial.
- That's breed specifics are not the main reason for the results. That they be based on past offences, the owners behaviour, the dogs behaviour that the dog has been evaluated by a CERTIFIED animal behaviourist as well as how the owner handles the dog. While a pit bull does have a more damaging bite than a chihuahua (who has a higher bite record) the chihuahua needs to receive the same treatment as the pit bull and be required to take all the same steps as the pitbull.

- That it is made up of mixture of citizen's, veterinarians, trainers, no one with a political bias. People with common sense and the ability to make an informed decision.
- The speed at which the case is processed does not compromise the integrity of the outcome; quality assessments over hastened assessments
- rehabilitation is tried before the animal is destroyed.. also in the case of pitbulls and other terrier types that the tribunal has a panel that has advocates of them breeds
- Any dog can be rehabilitated. Euthanasia is too extreme and an extensive behavioral assessment should be conducted.. The dog could be rehomed with someone who will rehabilitate them or tend to the dogs' needs - none children home, only dog home etc.
- A non-biased organization would be best
- As long as their is objectivity and non biased members present in the tribunal; as long as euthanasia is a last resort (only considered after multiple tribunals or for extreme, severe first time offences).
- As long as this did not discriminate against one breed. This needs to be for all dogs.
- The dog is not discriminated against based in breed
- Consultation/ rehabilitation assessment of dog AND owner performed by a competent professional dog trainer that is experienced with the breed separate from security/enforcement training.
- The dog gets a chance at rehabilitation instead of euthanasia.
- You guys are legit morons
- It is easy and fast, so all parties involved are not put through stress.
- There is no bias based on the breed of the dog. Perhaps the tribunal does not get a picture or description of the dog, just the weight and size.
- Honesty and transparency
- As long as the people in the tribunal do not have any bias against any breed and can look solely on the facts of the case.
- Bylaw officers and tribunal staff (judges, attorneys, clerks, etc.) receive and successfully complete advanced dog training and dog behavioural training to be able to fully assess situations, actions to be taken, and penalties to be given if applicable. There are many reasons for canine behaviours and not all of them are aggression related (dog could be sick, injured, defending themselves, etc.). And breed specific should not be even considered. All decisions and judgements should be based on behaviour, research, circumstances, owner-related behaviours (95% of the time the main ulprit)..
- As long as the tribunal has a representation of proven canine behaviour knowledge and is not breed biased.
- They had rubric to assess each situation with.
- Equal city and non-city reps, and the non-city reps are chosen by the Calgary SPCA
- Work with animal behaviour experts (veterinarians, dog behaviour specialists) to make these decisions
- It is not biased towards differing dog breeds.

- Dogs involved in severe bites should be put down if off leash/unprovoked
- As long as its not used to selectively enforce breed discrimination
- As long a tribunal members did not abuse their power
- The tribunal does not have the authority to decide if euthanasia is needed. The case would have to continue on to court.
- Fairly and not prejudiced against any form of Bulldog (i.e. pitbulls, etc)
- Continuing my comment from section 2. I have encountered many small aggressive dogs both off leash and around town. The owners do nothing to stop these dogs. I'm more nervous around a chihuahua than I am a pit bull. Dogs are never born bad. There is no such thing as a mean dog. It's the owners who train them, or more often, don't train them, that causes a problem. We need to be punishing the owners, not the dog. If a parent gave a loaded gun to a child and told them to shoot someone, the child is not at fault, the parent is. This is the exact same for a dog. If the "pit bull" bill passes the city of calagry will be solely responsible for the death of hundreds of dogs. Calgary claims to be dog friendly but this is the exact opposite. Do more research on the dogs you are wanting to ban. You even said above that pit bulls are not the most common for injuries, yet because of neglect and bias, the city of calgary is wants them on a dead list. Same on you calgary, I thought you were better than this.
- The people acting as the source of final say, are educated and unbiased, just as it would be in a court of law. It would not be a rushed means that is not taken seriously or be biased against the dog and/or dogowner.
- Euthanasia should be off the table for bites.
- The tribunal includes veterinary experts
- Tribunal should not be permitted to make a determination on euthanization.
- The dog can be in the owners care with restrictions, not a shelter.
- As long as the tribunal members are assessed on a regular basis and confirmed to lack prejudice against certain breeds.
- You have animal behaviouralists also consulted, or trainers familiar with the dog/breed.
- appropriate disciplinary action on the owners not just the animal
- That there are certified dog behavioural specialists on the panel at every tribunal case and hearing.
- City and "non city representatives" is a vague, frankly dumbass description. It's misleading the public if you can't be specific in writing this option. Do better city council.
- Investigation on the instance this dog acted aggressively. Both parties should be examined at the time of the offence
- .
- I would like to see a few people involved to ensure the decision is not biased/fair.
- Educated dog trainers or behavioral analyziers are part of this group. Must have experience with dogs and understand dog behavior and relationship with owner behaviour
- The animals' best interest must be considered at all times. An animal is never viscous by fault of its own-it always comes down to bad training on the owner's part. If the owner is not willing to engage in dog training and education, then the dog should be placed with a family that will care for it and love it properly.

- Unbiased persons conducting it. People not involved in implementation of breed biased bylaws etc
- Pit bulls should stop being targeted as nuisances.
- As long as individuals were non-biased and all peoples of society were well represented
- Tribunal members shall be animal experts (ie vets) not members of the general public or politicians.
- appointments to tribunal were transparent and merit based (qualified). Tribunal was subject to the integrity and ethics office
- They are not biased against pit bull and pit bull like breeds. BSL is no different then racism and, as we all know, you can't judge a human by their race and the same applies for any animal- dog or not.
- Equal representation of tribunal members, including professionals in animal industries, vets, pet trainers
- Breed specific discrimination is not allowed to be included in any decision.
- Is in favour of avoiding euthanasia as often as possible and focuses on restorative justice.
- the members are screened and have not displayed any breed prejudice before sitting in a trial.
- Non binding if euthanasia is recommended: queens bench decides
- Professional breeders or trainers were being consulted.
- I can't see all the words of my voice here to comment properly
- no euthanizing!! Allow there to be steps to take to better train or rehabilitate your dog first.
- Tribunal must contain dog behaviouralists
- There needs to be equal representation. That means involving someone who knows the laws(bylaw), and someone who has or works in rescue and rehabilitation of dogs. An assessment should also be done of dog but also owner and their home.
- be very careful who is chosen for the tribunal.
- So long as the tribunal is representative of dog owners and all Calgaryans (not just old white people).
- A panel of trained, independent behaviour specialists. A panel of 3 or 5 with a consensus before action taken.
- It is for ALL dogs that have bitten not breed specific.
- The owners required to take some sort of pet care course. It's not always the dogs fault. People can be ignorant
- Includes dog owners
- Euthanasia is a last resort and requires more levels of approval
- It is fair and no bias towards the hate of these beautiful dogs
- Members of the tribunal must be professionally qualified in the assessment of dog behaviors and have knowledge of rehabilitation techniques for dogs and training for owners.
- No destruction of the animal
- Non biased staff for the tribunal in order to ensure there is a fair outcome for all involved. Euthanasia should always be a last resort.
- There is nothing in the bylaw that is breed specific (e.g. pitbulls)

- There is licensed veterinary personnel and professional dog trainers included in tribunal.
- Not euthanizing the animal.
- Transparent, open to appeal, and run by dog owners accepting of all breeds
- AN OUTSIDE PARTY JUDGING ON WHETHER OR NOT THE DOG CAN BE TRAINED
- Those on the tribunal have evidence based training with dogs, are a range of experts in the dog field, and are not breed discriminatory
- They can NOT order a dog to be euthanized under ANY circumstance
- Remove their ability to decide if a dog needs to be euthanized. Let them decide if the dog needs training, and make the owner comply with obedience training, then in the instance of failure convene an impartial panel to decide the fate of the dog. Giving the tribunal the capability to decide a dog will be killed would encourage those individuals who dislike certain breeds to be more likely to recommend euthanasia. Do not give them the power to make decisions based on personal preference.
- Fair representation of all the stakeholders. For example if everyone on the tribunal works for the city then that really wouldn't be a fair tribunal would it?
- They don't have the authority to euthanize any pet.
- Euthinizations should ONLY be last resort due to Multiple report IF found legit!!! Also, the defendant should be allowed to have friends used to define owners true character!!
- I would only support a tribunal if it could not declare a dog should be euthanized. I could only impose fines, rehabilitation or re-homing of the dog.
- Adequate and ongoing training is provided for tribunal members. We've seen examples of poorly trained members of the public overseeing refugee claims.
- As long as the tribunal participants were properly educated.
- The owner of the dog in question should have the choice.
- The dog bit someone on their own and not in self defense against themselves or their families.
- I do not support dog declarations. I don't want to see a list of breeds that are an easy check mark to euthanize. Review offences case by case. I'm in support for processing cases in a timely and efficient manner, but I do not want to see outcomes determined by a list of nuisance breeds.
- Should not have anything to do with the breed
- The people chosen can NOT have a breed bias. They need to be able to judge based on individual dog and not base it on a breeds. All breeds are treated the same. No decision meds can be based on a breed only on the actions of the animal and owner.
- It should include a reputable dog trainer / behaviourist
- As long as it could be appealed in court, which is sounds like it would be.
- The tribunal should include people that know dogs/ dog behaviour.
- As long as they have a qualified dog training specialist in the tribunal to assess the dog
- No euthanization. Rehabilitation, training and re-homing if required.
- Animal control officers and of canine behaviour specialist on the board
- The people running the tribunal are actually objective and fair.

- Decision makers must have extensive knowledge and no biases in animal behaviour
- Mandatory obedience training for the dogs rather than euthanasia. Dog behavior is dependent on its owner not the animal
- Actually results in rulings that can be enforced.
- The human guardian of the dog agrees to force free training.
- Would need to include members of public who are also dog owners. Balanced based on dog owners and non dog owners, Gender and race.
- Treated all dogs the same as Shepards, Retrievers, Mastiffs and all other large breeds of dogs can do just as much damage as a pit bull breed. As well as small dogs should be treated the same.
- The dogs are in a POSITIVE environment during the intern. If this is not available at home, a foster situation should be offered.
- Treated all dogs equal no matter the breed.
- the panel is a fair representation that includes PROFESSIONAL DOG BEHAVIOURISTS/PSYCHOLOGISTS AND TRAINERS, not just a bunch of people in suits pretending they know dog behavior.
- No one involved in anti-pit bull legislation, groups etc. was allowed on it.
- So long as it does not simply discriminate by breed, treat all breeds with equality rather than singling out breeds such as pit bulls and similar breeds based on media and such which only display the aggressive actions of these breeds which would have been due to their upbringing. Dogs aren't born aggressive, they are trained to be what you wish of them.
- the owner should be held accountable, the dog should not suffer because the owner did not train the dogs properly
- Your tribunal would need to consist of trained professionals in dog behaviour, so as to be unbiased. Lay people with limited knowledge and understanding of breeds, behaviours and circumstances surrounding bites leaves too much room for an error in judgement and unnecessary and incorrect euthanization of breeds you deem dangerous like pitbull breeds. This is an incorrect bias as there are many factors that contribute to dog bites. Trained professionals in dog behaviour understand this, lay people do not.
- The investigation was thorough. And the OWNER and handling of the dog in the home prior to the incident was investigated thoroughly.
- Tribunal cannot discriminate against specific breeds. They must stay third party non biased
- Being non bias towards large breed dogs.
- The people presiding are in fact pro-dog and do what they can do save lives of pets.
- animal experts are included in the tribunal panel selection
- Petitions and/or testimony must be provided from persons who know the animal to advocate for its fair trial.
- Animal knowledge IE animal by law personal and vets
- It includes members of a local, acknowledged kennel club, with experience in both animal behaviour and training.

- The dog in question remains with the owner with some restrictions until their court session. Also, euthanasia should ONLY be considered after attempts at rehabilitation
- Condition - tribunal to include professional dog behaviorists and trainers who are not biased by breed
- The animal poses an immitate danger to people and other animals
- Subject to review by a neutral third party
- The tribunal would need to consist of people who work with dogs in an official capacity. Dog trainers & behaviorists, shelter workers, Vets, etc. People who understand dogs. The tribunal would also need to have witnesses from the scene. Furthermore owners should be able to bring character witnesses for themselves and their dogs, along with any proof of obedience training. I say this because I have a reactive dog. Sadly it is normal for us to be approached by off-leash dogs in on-leash areas. This send my dog into a blind fury. It is something we have been working on with a licences trainer and we do our best to avoid these situations. If an off-leash dog approaches us and my dog attacks, would we be at any fault? That is why I feel the tribunal should allow witnesses at the scene, and allow for owners to prove that their dog was thrown into a situation they shouldn't have been in because of the other irresponsible owner.
- No breed / size discrimination. Small dogs held equally liable as large ones.
- It's not a bunch of activists agains a particular breed!
- A dog trainer or behaviourist without breed bias is part of the tribunal. Most often the owners are at fault and need education, and the dog is simply communicating in the best way it knows. Often it is the owners that caused/allowed the dogs to build/practice these behaviours, they misunderstand their dogs and need education. When these people cannot prove having taking dog training to either work on the behaviours, to gain education so they work on themselves to ensure a good life for their dogs, these people should not be allowed to be dog owners. Too often dogs are euthanized when it was all due to uneducated people.
- As long as it's members were unbiased towards specific breeds and acknowledge that any wrong doing on the dogs part is the owner's responsibility.
- The dog is NOT returned to irresponsible owners during the tribunal. Also why is the dog's trauma an issue in this rather than the victim of the attack
- I believe the tribunal needs to be made up of an indepant group of people including vets, animal control officers, ect
- Understand that most dog bites are provoked by the human not the dog
- After the dog was assessed by a trainer that specializes in behavioral issues.
- Animal experts (e.g. Vets, professional trainers, behavioural specialists) made up the majority of representatives on the tribunal. There would be nothing worse than having someone who is uneducated in these matters, and potentially biased, determining the fate of a pet and an owner's responsibilities.
- Not discriminating against certain breeds
- They would have to follow a schematic to make these decisions it can't be all opinion based.
- the dog is in the owner's custody during the tribunal

- Breed of dog is not in question. The bite, severity of injury, and the frequency of occurrences should be the top things that should be considered. There's no such thing as a bad breed, just bad owners (my cousin's have four pitbulls that are very well behaved, loving, and friendly) also the amount of time the owner is able to spend with their animals should be one of the highest things considered because neglect will lead to a misbehaving dog which could cause problems.
- Tribunal members should be qualified professionals such as Veterinarians, dog trainers and animal behaviour experts. It should apply to cats as well
- Only to be comprised of Professional Trainers, Breeders and Veterinarians, no civilians who like to inject anecdotal occurrences into their opinions. And all decisions must be based on Facts, Scientifically based.
- It includes a diverse non bias group of representatives. Also educated representatives (vets, humane society members, ect)
- does not hold bias to pit bulls or any other breed.
- Non biased tribunal members who have expertise in animal training/treatment.
- Unbiased and proper vetting of tribunal members on a case by case basis
- As long as the dog can stay with the owner during this time if the owner is capable
- No euthanasia. We don't have the death penalty for humans, what makes it any different for animals?
- Tribunal members should be knowledgeable about dog behaviour as well as the law.
- That the review applies to all dogs involved in incidents, not just specific breeds. And is done case by case and not as a blanket issue order.
- Quick hearing times and if the dog can be with it's owners until the hearing. There must also be educated people on the board that have experience with dog breeds and is unbiased towards the dog because if the breed.
- I support this to help alleviate the stress on the dog. I think that most dog bites are the result of a protective nature and that the dog should not be punished for improper human behaviour. As long as it is a fair and impartial tribunal that understands and respects all parties in the incident including the dog.
- that people on board know breeds and know that owners are usually to blame and not racist against breeds like the city is towards bully breeds
- To review and fully understand and process the cause of the incident and release the dog back into the owners hands as long as the situations sees fit. For an accidental attack or an attack where an animal's feels threatened, they should not be taken from their home. If you want to own an animal, then you must take the time to understand and learn their behaviours.
- The members of the tribunal also work for or are part of animal rescues and shelters
- Cost effective
- No dog can be tried on appearance and species alone. All animals must be considered equal before the tribunal.
- That it is a true and fair trial. Perhaps the dogs should be kept on the owners property until the trial rather the in a shelter. The owner to be fined if the dog is seen off the property.t

- Tribunal should be selected without bias
- Critical that tribunal members are neutral with no need biases
- That it includes all dog breeds.
- Was not breed specific
- N/a
- Any dog can be dangerous and it should be proven that said dog is a nuisance before any course of action is taken
- Euthanasia is not an option they can impose.
- Tribunals must be made up of at least one representative from all of the following domains: Dog trainers/behavioral coaches, veterinarians, emergency docs, and pediatricians, bylaw representatives (excluding lawyers). That way if it has to go to court of queen's bench the legal system maintains some level of impartiality as they would be reviewing the facts and findings from the tribunal in an independent fashion. I would happily endorse my tax dollars in that direction, instead of wasting time arguing about the length of grass on the lawns.
- Local kennel club and obedience club members the majority on the tribunal .
- Dog remains in owners possession on property
- A certified dog behaviourist, trainer and vet are involved in the decision making since it is not fair for someone with no experience to make those types of decisions.
- Members of the tribunal include those who have professional background in animal behaviour.
- The cases were adequately investigated and no animals were euthanized too promptly without very good cause
- Who would be considered for the tribunal?
- As long as euthanization is the absolute last option and all others are exhausted first.
- as long as the tribunal had at least one veterinarian and one dog behaviorist expert sitting on it
- As long as there is an appeal process as mentioned above and consider keeping the animal out of the shelter and 'confined' to the owner's property during the case review and appeal.
- Members of the tribunal should not have any breed-specific biases.
- tribunal must be made up of people with formal animal behavior training, veterinarians etc.
- That the people on this tribunal are true animal lovers that understand pet ownership, bonds with pets and that accidents do happen. If they would just put down every dog that has an incident i would be strongly opposed to this.
- Tribunal members are experienced members of the animal husbandry, veterinary, agricultural, or other animal care related professions so they provide educated, non biased opinions.
- If the cost of the tribunal loser is required to pay for all fees necessary to hold the tribunal in the first place. We as tax payers cant be setting up a tribunal for every dispute. If the City responds to a situation that turns out to be a dispute of poor faith, the individual that brought forth the tribunal and lost should have to pay reparations.
- NO BREED BIAS

- As long as it's a fair, balanced and just tribunal that follows the letter of the law and bylaws and enforces justice when necessary.
- It is critical to remember that in all cases of dog-related incidents, it is the PEOPLE who are the problem, rather than the dog. Focus should be redirected to what the owner has done to contribute to the behaviour of the animal and held appropriately accountable. Where animals are found to have been mistreated, including training to be aggressive, the animal should be removed and a lifetime ban of animal ownership needs to be implemented.
- As long as the decision can be appealed and is not final
- The pet was allowed to reside in its residency while a verdict is made. Not in a shelter or kennel causing more undue stress than necessary.
- As long as it focuses on the owners lack of control over their dog and doesn't target specific breeds
- Euthanasia would be determined by dog behaviour specialists only
- It contains a vet, an animal behaviouralist and one other person- all 3 must be 100% in agreement.
- Including animal welfare advocates
- As long as the cases are handled with CARE and not just assuming because some by law officers would straight up try and euthanize a dog because they are prejudice against a breed
- It is filled by impartial people and not used for a witch-hunt by people who don't like dogs.
- They're not biased against "pitbull" breeds it's case by case rather than having a breed bias
- Assessed by dog trainer to determine steps in managing the dog behaviours with force free training and teaching the owner how to effectively and properly train and enforce their animals
- Not specific to a breed. ANY breed of dog can bite. Look at chihuahuas for example.
- It does remove legal responsibility from the owner of the dog in the court of law.
- The officers are actually educated in canine behavior and posturing
- There is an appeal process for judgments provided by the tribunal and effective oversight and transparency into the operations and appointments of the tribunal.
- So long as the tribunal was made up of verifiable/certified dog/dog training experts
- The laws are the same for all dogs and the owners have a permanent record attached to them, for future offences by other pets
- As long as the tribunal system does not allow the dog to be kept in a shelter for a long period of time.
- Fair and unbiased based on breed
- 3rd point
- There be someone who actually knows and understands dogs and dog behaviors, and for dogs who have a first offense the circumstance be reviewed and considered
- It is taken into consideration where the dog should be during the waiting period. at home or at the shelter.
- No euthanizing what so ever. never.

- As long as owner is also held accountable for their role in training/raising the dog (ie: if dog is determined dangerous, owner is no longer allowed to own dogs since they cannot train them properly)
- As long as it is not based on the breed of dog but actual facts of individual case
- If the case is appealed by the owners (in a euthanasia decision) that the dog would continue to be held by animal control services until the appeal date.
- as long as its fair and both sides of the situation is addressed.
- I like the idea as long as the tribunal isn't chosen by the same people trying to regulate specific dog breeds. They need to be animal specialists like veterinarians, vet techs or groomers.
- it didn't single out specific breeds of dogs.
- There needs to be people who work professionally with dogs! Informed decisions only!
- The breed has nothing to do with incident
- The animal gets to stay with their families
- Remain at scene is simple like an accident or collision until supported and directed by law officer etc.
- Harsher and enforceable limitations on dog owners including economic consequences and a public list
- Each dog must be regarded as an individual and assessed on its specific behaviors... This comes straight from our own Calgary Humane Society. Please do not use your personal bias to force pit bull owners to mistreat their dogs. By muzzling and treating Pit bulls differently we are doing nothing to help the animals. Please leave your personal bias out of this and instead look at scientific facts/studies which show that Pit bulls are no worse/different from other dogs.
- 50% of the tribunal are current dog owners
- There should be representatives from pro-dog, dog training and education facilities and/or associations that weigh in on these decisions. It must be mandatory that one of these representatives attends the hearing. Could be from Humane Society, profession dog trainer, etc. Tribunal should offer solutions for the dog owner to keep their pet such as training. Should not immediately resort to euthanization but of course decided on a case by case basis. RTDRS works pretty well and I feel that something like this to deal with dogs seems reasonable.
- That the owner is offered psychological counselling. Owners of problem dogs are quite often the root of the problem. They may not understand the breed of dog they own, they may have poor control over themselves and then by extension, have poor control of their dog. Perhaps people should be licensed, rather than the dog.
- Non biased to dog breeds
- As long as all members are dog owners themselves with no discrimination based on the breed of the dog being reviewed.
- there is a dog advocate, expert opinion present
- Seems fair
- Again focus on owner and their behaviour most dogs when handles properly are good
- If all parties are not against a certain breeds! They have to be open to all breeds of dogs and not be one sided

- That a dog is not euthanized because it has lacked training by its owner. It should get the appropriate training or given to a shelter if the owner is unwilling to change.
- Sufficient screening/background checks to ensure that the members of the tribunal are non-biased and responsible
- as long as there is proper oversight on the proceedings and the verdicts are fair and non bias and is taken by is looked at by a case to case base.
- It was not discriminating dogs based on breeds eg pitbulls
- Tribunal needs to be comprised of experienced dog people (eg. vets, trainers, etc)
- It's not Bias against bully breeds
- Involved many people with high knowledge of dog training and did not enforce euthanasia
- This tribunal should consist of dog behavioral specialists that can determine fair outcomes professionally as opposed to biased opinions based on breed.
- each case was treated equally, fairly and accordingly. Take a decent amount of time to look at each case individually.
- I do not think a dog should be euthanized at the decision of the tribunal, and I would not want to see a decision to euthanize expedited for the sake of efficiency.
- This court should not be allowed to decide life or death for an animal. Instead leave that decision up to the owner and make sure the crime fits the punishment. For example, if someone comes on a property where a dog is being detained and ignores signs of dog on premises, the dog should not be held accountable for defending against an unauthorized intruder. If a dog escapes their property and attacks anyone, not just barks or intimidates them, that should be treated more harshly and have a 2 strike rule.
- The dogs behaviour is reviewed in an appropriate environment not one of high stress setting the dog up for failure, and an accurate history of the dog is taken into consideration ie a dog with no history as a Nuisance, or history of aggression.
- Non biased towards a dogs breed and looks more at the character of the owner
- Determine, and review restrictions placed on a dog, which the owner would need to abide by to keep the animal
- It would have to be truly objective and include way too many valid inputs to be truly efficient. It would need professionals in dog behaviour as well as rehabilitative experts and there are currently not enough unbiased perspectives that could be made into a full-time tribunal when these circumstances arise
- Any and all tribunal members must be declared a fair fit for ALL breeds without bias towards specific breeds.
- That at least one member of the tribunal is from the purebred dog community - either a Canadian Kennel Club licensed judge or temperament evaluator.
- Penalties/corrective action must be applied to owners as well as animals
- As long as the decisions were made without bias towards the breed of dog. All dogs can be vicious or a nuisance. The determination should always be about the severity of the incident not the breed of dog.

- Individuals involved in the tribunals should be checked for possible bias
- Yes
- Transparency into tribunal selection process
- No euthanization!!
- No dog should be euthanized without at least putting them through a rehabilitation program or revoking them to a more responsible owner. Euthanasia should be an absolute last resort. It's the owner, not the dog.
- All dogs are treated the same
- It is fair and unbiased and takes ALL the facts into into consideration.
- Representatives are independent on related matters
- There would need to be a certified dog behaviorist / trainer and veterinary on this tribunal; to give background experience in support of understanding what triggered the responses from the dog, (whether they were behavioral or / and medical condition) to make sure that all the facts were dealt with in a professionally expert supported manner
- Tribunal members need to have a clear understanding of dog behaviour and no bias toward specific breeds.
- Dog assessed by 2 trainers having the owner allowed to choose 1 of the trainers. Dog also assessed by 2 different veterinarians. With the choice of one vet by owner. choice by owner
- If these people are properly trained
- The tribunal was not bias towards any person, or breed of animal so a fair judgement can be made depending on each situation. This could be tricky but for faster processing it would be beneficial.
- No opinion
- The animal stays with the owner
- As long as it's a fair straight across the board tribunal that does not discriminate against breeds. [personal information removed] I will tell you right now the most vicious and crazy dogs I see are black/chocolate labs, Shepard's, and shiba inus. You can not be breed-cist when making this decisions.
- prior to euthanization, the animal to be access for rehabilitation and the owner or owners should be penalized (not to own a animal after education courses) and deemed fit for owner.
- All decisions bcan be appealed by the owner and victim in provincial court. And the "experts" are chosen from a diverse population
- Tribunal should have veterinarian and professional
- All attacks be treated equally regardless of breed or size of dog.
- No dog death. It could be the persons fault for the dogs Behavior. Asses the person
- No animal is euthanized if it can go to a responsible sanctuary for animals. The owner is given atleast 60 days after appeal to find one. If the animal is rehabilitated the owner can get it back if they qualify for adoption through the sanctuary, with restrictions. The bylaws apply to all dogs regardless of size and is enforced on all dogs
- Who is on this tribunal, what biases and agendas do they bring?

- Included members from a variety of backgrounds/stances
- Breed was not brought into decisions. They were looking at if the dogs ever been in incidents before. And considering if it was a one time thing or not bc dogs have anxiety too, and people approaching them can make them act out, same as a human that feels threatened.
- A trained dog behaviorist is involved in the assessment and decision making process.
- One tribunal member is a dog obedience expert and determine if it is a nature or nurture issue
- The dog is not put in harms way, can remain with the owner unless the owner poses threat to the animal. Animal to remain on property or not allowed around other animals until process is complete
- If there are restrictions that require the dog to stay at home, unless the bite occurs at home or the victim is a family member
- The owner and his dog have a right to defend their case. If the attack was instigated, or if the dog was attacked by the person who is claiming he was attacked needs to be looked at. Most bull related convictions arent given the opportunity to defend themselves, and end up being euthanized anyways because of bias. You need to make sure all the facts are being looked at.
- Offer support for training at first offence, educate owner in how best to help the pet become a better member of society through training.
- Dogs are taken from bad dog parents and rehabilitated.
- Proper representation of the dog and authority sectors
- Multiple parties of people and rescue societies with actual life experience with multiple dog breeds and actual experience with Bully breeds such as Prairie Pitbull Rescue. Rather than someone who knowingly carries prejudice to any breed.
- The people appointed to the tribunal would need to understand and support proper canine health and wellbeing, and understanding the psychology around potential triggers and situational stressors on dogs. Who would the non-city reps be? What steps would be taken to ensure they have the proper understanding of animals and not just want to put all "bad dogs" down?
- The animal remains in its home
- Different placement, no euthanasia
- Dog owners given the option to skip a tribunal and go straight to court instead.
- Vets and dog behaviour specialists are on the panel
- they have specialized training in dealing with vicious dogs, and strive to rehabilitate the the dog where possible.
- If the representative s included the appropriate people including a vet, dog Trainer/behaviourist with proper credentials like APDT, by bylaw officer
- Those individuals representing the tribunal have the requisite skill/expertise to make an objective recommendation.
- Only if the tribunal actually review all the circumstances of the incident and used the same reasoning regardless of breed of the animal.
- A tribunal can remain unbiased towards dog breeds
- That persons doing these assessments are professional dog behaviouralists and or trainers

- They'd have to have clearly defined outcomes/penalties that were fair across the board otherwise everyone will just go to court anyway
- As long as it speeds up the process to euthanize all pitbulls and dogs that have severely bit other dogs/straggers, then it is acceptable.
- The best interest of the animal is the priority. Why did it misbehave? What was the human error? The humans should be on trial, not the animal.
- The participants are knowledgeable on judicial law regarding animal rights and animal attack, and included members who are Veterinarians, Animal Control officers, and blockhead pet owners, along with those who aren't. It has to be a fair tribunal and not an angry group of villagers with pitchforks.
- Those on the Tribunal are Unbiased. There are a lot of incidents involving biased individuals and Pit Bulls. Just because it is a pit bull doesn't mean it is going to kill everyone.
- It included a bullydog owner with experience handling bully breeds
- An expert in the field must be present and have a vote
- The tribunals decision should be made alongside city representatives as to not fully replace their position.
- Shouldn't cost extra taxpayer money
- I support this as long as the voting are NOT biased against any breed
- people on the tribunal are knowledgeable and unbiased
- Have people who are familiar with animals and not just breed specific legislation supporters
- Had the best interest of the dog included
- That "bully breeds" receive fair judgement and are treated like every other breed of dog
- Review further history of dog's behavior (I.e. is this a recurring behavior?, was the dog provoked wrongfully?), By asking, what caused the dog to act the way they did?
- as you can appeal it in court
- The opportunity to file for an appeal remains in place.
- A mix of viewpoints- not all members can be prejudiced against Pit Bull type breeds
- That the tribunal would be non biased and understand that the dog is/ could be a danger to the community. Ensure that there is a fair process for all attacks and set timelines and dates to ensure the conditions are met by. Ensure that you have all your bases covered to leave no room for error or misunderstanding that would cause the dog to go back into unsafe hands of an owner which has the potential for another bite.
- That it be assured that the tribunal members have no bias against the particular animal
- Ok
- if you're doing to force owners to muzzle their pitbulls then you should also force people to muzzle their mastiffs, German Shepards, Rottweilers, Cane Corsos, just to name a few. All the dogs I just listed have a much stronger bite force than a Pitbull. Please reevaluate your stance to be more in line with scientific facts instead of personal bias.
- Don't euthanize someone else's dog. Tell them to keep it at home, send it to obedience school, pay a fine, whatever. Just don't go around killing dogs for being loud [removed].

- Decision for euthanization to be unanimous in tribunal, recommendations/suggestions be science based, have a certified trainer who specializes in reactive dogs, either on the tribunal or brought in for assessments (ie, Cindy Peacock), and have set standards and rules to follow for every case.
- To interview all parties involved. Sometimes small dogs run up to large ones and bark and snip at them, and the little dog owners assume the behaviour is "cute". Both parties need to have their dogs under control.
- euthanization is rarely only an option. And if the tribunal allows dogs to be trained properly with the right restriction implicated.
- The dog was vicious and not provoked in anyway
- They have extensive training and knowledge about rehabilitation and training of dogs
- The breed/image/description of the dog should not be provided during the case. Stereotypes should not be the basis of a decision. It should not matter the breed of the dog pertaining to the situation.
- No breed specific discrimination- the incident has to be looked at for what actually happened with NO BIAS due to breed of dogs involved
- the owner, as well as victim (or family) are involved. Proof that the dog is in fact not a victim and has bitten in self defence. A fair approach and not just based on breed of dog putting certain breeds into a "bad dog" category before things even start.
- Both parties agree
- regarding restrictions or increased expectations for dogs with multiple offences where there is a higher potential for dangerous behavior should be for all dogs. NOT BREED SPECIFIC!
- Unless the dog is a threat to bite again I would never put the dog down. Have the owner and the dog go thru classes and work with the owner
- Yes
- Rehabilitation was the priority
- Qualified individuals only as representatives; dog/owner rehabilitation attempted before euthanization.
- The people making those decisions included vets and animal rescue group representatives and not include people that have no education, training or hands on experience with numerous dogs of various breeds.
- No euthanizing of dogs, all dog can be rehabilitated it's the owner that would be the issue
- Absolutely no bias against breeds. There are NO bad breeds only irresponsible owners.
- There's an immense amount of prejudice against bully breeds. You need people that love, understand and can handle all dogs.
- There would have to be an assessment done by a educated dog trainer to assess the dogs behaviour
- Yes
- Instead of euthanizing dog send it to a rescue/business specializing in rehab of aggressive dogs
- The tribunal members are dog owners and actively involved in dog training.
- Must be run by canine experts next to law experts. No person on the tribunal shall be any thing other than those 2 mandates.

- Councillors, bylaw officers, judges, city officials that are breed discriminatory are not part of tribunals.
- Zero euthanization unless extreme behaviour. One bite is not enough.
- Willingness to work with the owner and offer support for training and obedience.
- There are not breed biased opinions (ex cannot be against “pit bull” breed)
- There are sufficient appeal periods to allow for further evidence or amendments
- Staffed by people who unlike the people writing this survey know anything about dog training..
- The people on the tribunal must be knowledgeable about animal behaviour, and not enforce stereotypes.
- Unbiased members who are not judging by breed but by owner actions
- As long as a full investigation happens.
- A strong ethical standard is upheld in determining the result of these cases and that they are not taken lightly. Both sides of the incident should be taken into account to ensure that all efforts have been made by the animal owner to re-train their animal before any euthanasia is even considered.
- A board that is completely impartial based on breed/the case, they would have to be trained professionals that understand behaviour, fear and health of animals (veterinarians, veterinary technicians, trainers, etc)
- must include someone from a group that supports animal well being not just the interests of people.
- There must be an assessment by a licensed trainer, that does not work for a pet store. Trainer reserves the right to take dog to boarding for training.
- There should be an effort to ensure there is no breed bias in the tribunal - especially when euthanization is an possible outcome
- The dog was witnessed attacking, and that it applies to ALL breeds, including Golden retrievers...
- I think a bad dog is a reflection of its owner. I think tougher penalties for the owner for attacks. Any dog who is not trained will bite. Any dog with a bad owner will bite even the ownet.
- That is run by people that are knowledgeable about dogs and dog behaviors
- Animal behaviorists and science based trainers should be part of this process including a behavior vet. This way we can look at the dog in question to see how the problem should be solved. Ei put the down down, regime to a more experienced owner, take extra training into account to help the dog.
- A thorough investigation and not an arbitrary determination based on appearance. This should also apply to small dogs displaying aggressive behavior.
- The tribunal should be able to recommend charges against the owner if their behaviour was negligent and charges had not already been laid.
- The tribunal has the authority to throw out a case and return the dog to the home immediately. 2. The tribunal cannot euthanize a dog without allowing the appeal process to run its full course. 3. The composition of the tribunal includes canine professionals in a number suitable to allow a majority in instances where voting is to take place.
- No euthanasia
- Interviewing the owners and victims

- as long as it was fair to all parties and can be appealed if need be.
- the dog remain with the owner on their property.
- So long as the tribunal's interest is what is best for the animal!
- The tribunal was treated in a similar manner to a jury and were able to face the situation in a non-biased manner.
- The same actions for small dogs and large dogs
- The tribunal was made up of people who know something about dogs
- I DO NOT agree with the suggested prejudice against "pitbull" breed dogs. Tribunals should consider each dog on an individual basis and people should not be eligible for membership on a tribunal if there is reason to believe that they are biased for or against particular breeds.
- I think that is fair the longer a dog sits in the shelter scared away from its family the worse it is
- There are educated members from dog communities such as a representative from shelters,experiences member of a rescue group, a veterinarian, dog trainer, etc
- As long as the people picked for the tribunal did not have any biases towards specific dog breeds.
- No one should have the right to decide if my my dog should be euthanized!
- Have employees that are actually knowledgeable about the different dog breeds, not ones who just think pit bulls are evil. (Looking at you Calgary)
- If it included equally the amount of unbiased representatives in the tribunal.
- It needs to be an unbiased tribunal that is not prejudice to specific breeds of dogs.
- As long as the dog is with a responsible owner don't traumatize the dog by putting it in a shelter
- as long as an appeals process is available
- The tribunal includes a CBCC certified trainer who DOES NOT use aversive training. Any credible designation will NOT use any punishment in their training. The tribunal MUST include an expert in dog behavior and NOT someone that claims to be an expert. DOGMA in Calgary had the MOST educated trainers and the owner is internationally recognized for her experience
- That no dog was put down without the owner being able to appeal it at the court of queens bench.
- The dogs are not euthanized, they are meant to go to obedience training, unless absolutely necessary (no hope ever of training the dog out of it, which must be determined by professionals, like several obedience instructors and vets) not as an easy out solution.
- The actions of the supposed victim MUST be taken into consideration. If someone behaves in a way that is against the instructions of the owner OR makes the animal behave in a way that demonstrates it feels threatened; the responsibility for the alleged attack should be with that person. I personally do NOT permit my neighbors children around my dog because they have no social responsibility, personal responsibility or owners9 of their actions. If my dog were put into a position to be judged because of something THEY did, it would be a terrible injustice. Education of owners to know when to allow people to be in their pets lives is key, BUT other people need to clearly understand the owners right to deny access.
- Tribunal is a great idea. Any dog which gives multiple level 4 or single or more level 5 bites to any citizen should be seized and euthanized after the end of rabies hold, these animals are too dangerous to live in a society and can give life altering injuries to citizens specially children. For other offences level 2,3, provoked single level 4 (non predatory) bite, Killing pet cat, pet dog- Do a bail like system - start legal proceedings but no need to seize the animal, if owner does not pay fine , follow recommendations, multiple offences then seize their animals and adopt them out to responsible owners.

- It is transparent and weighs ALL bites the same, regardless of the breed of the dog.
- Breed neutral arbitration
- As long as dogs aren't apprehended based on their breed.
- They make educated decisions
- There are coaching processes to assist in less killing of animals and more support is provided in affording lessons and training for lower income people or those whom have fallen on hard times. Also exceptions and more support should be available to rescue and foster programs to rehab dogs in t any animal not just punish the animal by killing it for having bad owners . Dogs aren't born bad they lack a good owner. With proper handling skills these owners should be punished by being forbidden animals not killing the animal .
- Best interest of the dog
- Tribunal members were ensured to be unbiased against certain breeds and Euthanasia was only considered as a very last resort
- This does not inhibit the quality of life for an animal dependent on their breed. It is the people and owners who cause animals to be aggressive. Owners should be watched more responsibly rather than the pet itself.
- No breed specific restrictions, make it BEHAVIOR BASED
- The tribunal was non biased
- It includes a member who works with a local animal rescue. And a dog trainer or someone with a full understanding of dog behaviour
- Has to be fair
- No comment
- Has dog behaviour experts on it
- The dog can stay with the owner under certain conditions (not allowed to leave the property) until a decision has been made.
- It has been determined that the dog was not coerced by the victim, whether or not there is a lack of training for either dog or handler
- no euthanized measures taken.
- The tribunal must understand canine behaviour and not be biased towards specific breeds. The tribunal should be composed of vets, trainers, etc., not unqualified city council members.
- Had at least 5 experts in the field (I.e. vet techs, veterinarians, ect).
- a certified behaviorist making the declaration Not some bylaw officer or city official scared of terrified dogs
- It is like jury selection, the people involved MUST be neutral and very case is an individual.
- Focused on dog rehabilitation rather than euthanasia.

- The tribunal was made up of people who have knowledge in dog training or behaviour, holding no bias towards certain breeds of dog
- Not requiring the destruction of dogs based on breed and understanding dog behaviour to determine if the offence was purely due to dog aggression or human error. Dogs show MANY warning signs before resorting to attacking in majority of cases.
- Tribunal membership would include representatives from Prairie Pits and veterinarians who understand what a terrible idea this is . You can not segregate a group of dogs based on their looks or genetics .
- If a dog is declared to be euthanized by a tribunal, the case must then go to court for a legitimate court hearing.
- Members of the tribunal board be involved in animal rescuing or animal care
- Did not exhibit any bias against breed
- Take all things into account (ie. Was a child teasing the dog and being mean to it? What's the history of the dog? Has this happened before? Was it another do? Was the dog doing what it naturally was born to do? Was the dog protecting something? Was the dog hurt? Or is this dog bred for attacking? Mistreated? Abused?
- Ensure their are owners of pit bulls or the other dogs listed in the tribunals. Especially those who know these dogs and know they can be loving dogs. Also a tribunal that focuses on owners who make dogs mean.
- The process includes a behavioural assessment of the animal
- that judgement and facts were looked at and not breed myths
- They used CKC appointed dog experts to have input with all breeds.
- Was made up of individuals who were educated in dog behaviours. Someone who understood dogs and what is best for them.
- I would like to have someone that is more "for the dog". Like how you have the prosecution and the defense. There shouldn't be just an entire tribunal made up of people against pit bulls. TOO MUCH GOVERNMENT FOR THESE STUPID LAWS
- Not breed specific.
- Euthanization should not be an option. I would suggest a rehabilitation program for dogs that appear to be "aggressive" that focus's on teaching the owners about responsible ownership and emphasizes proper training.
- the case was fair and all the evidence was heard.
- Tribunal members have adequate training and education on dog breeds and issues
- The owner should be investigated. A dog learns viscous behaviour. They are taught how to act. Therefore, an owner can train a dog to be non aggressive which has been proven in so many cases with pit bulls.
- It looked at the owners of the dog and the owners lead the dog.
- That euthanasia is taken off the table. Because people are biased towards the animal.
- Said "vicious" dog gets obedient training.

- I suggest that while looking at the investigation you see that it's not the dogs fault he became aggressive. If anything it is the owners fault for not properly training their dog
- A professional dog trainer is involved with the case to determine the dog's behaviour
- They don't have the i sane amount of power animal enforcement officers have
- as long as the person/panel doing the evaluation includes a known dog behaviour training specialist
- Tribunal members be dog owners and knowledgeable in these matters. Tribunal members also be voted upon by public for specific time periods.
- Provided it remains bias free based on dog type and there is an option for appeal if owner feels it was treated incorrectly
- The representatives are highly educated animal experts.
- It was voluntarily, the tribunal consisted of dog owners/breeders of a variety of breeds. This includes pit bulls, shepherds, rot ties, and smaller breeds. No cost to taxpayers.
- They need to be tracked. Follow up at certain intervals: 1 month, 6 month a year.
- Apprehending to a shelter may not be necessary. Consider a 'bail' option as funds could help support a tribunal system
- As long as there is an option for rehabilitation for the dog and not just immediate euthanization
- I think a tribunal would be beneficial for the dogs that have a record of being a nuisance. Hopefully with this system, we can weed out the unresponsble dog owners from the ones that care about their animals.
- There is screening for bias towards "blockheaded" dogs to ensure fairness and not an increase in the "blockheaded" LOOKING dogs being euthanized.
- Just review orders that were handed out at scene. If it is really serious address the issues
- Has at least one dog trainer on it and made up of dog owners
- Those on the tribunal are knowledgable with animal behaviour including vets, animal trainers, registered breeders et cetera.
- Members are fairly selected and have the animal's best interests in mind
- One of the board members is from an animal advocacy center.
- Does NOT discriminate due to BREED
- Pitbulls, and anything mentioned above should not be singled out. It is unfair to the pet as it is an owner's responsibility to train and control their pets.
- If the tribunal adequately assesses the nature of the incident: was the dog unprovoked or was there some stress applied to the dog (children screaming/running, child unsupervised with dog, inappropriate behaviour by person around dog, etc.)
- All views are equally represented
- As long as behavior, training and animal experts were on the panel and it isn't just a bunch of lawyers, cops and general whatevers dealing with the decisions. Leave these decisions to the professionals.
- Tribunal must include majority who are extremely familiar with dog behaviors regardless of breed
- Breeds should not be discriminated against.

- Look at the situation. Why did the dog attack ? Was there a person coming at them aggressively, was there a child tormenting them, was there another dog attacking them and it was in self defence, is the owner a new owner and still learning how to train them, or is the OWNER the one who has trained them to attack. You just can't decide to euthanize an animal on a yes or no decision. Look at the situation, they are a family member.
- If it wasn't just a bunch of pitbull hating people on a board to get rid of our fur babies
- Be unbiased. Dogs attacks Normally happen because they feel threatened, their family is threatened, the are provoked or incompetent owners and lack of traini. Why are we punishing dogs for their owners competencies. If a dog's tale gets pulled, they will nip. That is not considered an attack. Have a better laid out plan as to what is identified as a vicious animal attack. If my hair gets pulled by another adult, I'm probably going to slap the. Why would be treat dogs with such viscosity, as they are only capable of so much.
- No euthanization.
- NA
- There were experienced dog behaviorist specialists on the panel and people involved with rescue/sanctuary options as well.
- I would support a Tribunal that is not mandated by Breed Specific Legislation.
- The tribunal needs to include at least 2 qualified dog behavior specialists.
- As long as it is the best interest of the dog being taken into consideration. Example; being allowed to remain in the home instead of shelter.
- The tribunal cannot have any biased members if one member hates certain dogs based on appearance not situation it could end terribly for the animal
- As long as the decisions are still invested, fair and not rushed through.
- No breed discrimination.
- Tribunal is a panel voted and selected by the public
- There were certified and trained people involved who have an understanding of dog behaviour.
- As long as the owner is provided sufficient time to gather evidence and defend their stance.
- this applies to ALL dogs. To select this policy based on breed is the same as making policy for POC vs. White. [removed]. People shouldn't own animals they cannot train or take care of. Many people have dogs as therapy tools and don't register them. Many of these dogs have been abused and partner well with domestic violence victims. Overall, you ban these dogs from good people you'll have a rise in dog fighting. [removed]
- Euthanasia considered as only a very last option when no training can change dogs aggression
- They must understand that the DOG is not the problem. It is the OWNER that is.
- the owner has the ability to take training
- Minimum knowledge requirement for selected city and non-coty representatives
- There are members from the animal field present (vet, dog trainer, etc). These members could offer some educated insight.
- Why are Pitbull's the only ones listed and it's not the dog perhaps you should look into the owners as well

- The people on the tribunal are not biased against any breed of dog and includes an owner of a pitbull at all times as this can lower the chances of an unfair verdict against a pit bull or pit bull appeared dog.
- Block head dogs are not treated differently solely because of their appearance or breed
- Fair and no breed prejudice
- That those in charge of review understand dog behavior and can judge fairly.
- Allow the dog to stay at its own home and instead of trying to force people to euthanize or otherwise give up their pet, have them seek training instead.
- Dog could not be euthanized without approval of a judge
- Not judge an offense because of the breed of dog
- as long as they consulted a good balanced trainer before making any euthanasia decisions
- Fairness and investigation into why the incident happened. Often the dog is provoked which does not set them up for success in any situation.
- Trained animal behaviourists included in the discussion. I don't want the fate of an animal left in the hands of highly emotionally charged. There are many reasons why attacks happen and it does not necessarily mean they are bad animals. Objective professionals need to analyze and be apart of the process.
- It's not biased on breed
- No breed bias
- As long as the appointed individuals for the Tribunal were well educated in the matters of which they are making decisions on.
- If euthanization is a rare case
- The issue was dealt with in a timely manner and the arbitrator was educated in dog behaviour so both sides were equally considered.
- That it had unbiased representation
- There was a certified dog behavioural specialist on the panel
- Should the decision be the 3rd bullet, the owner is required to take training on how to handle the dog and random follow up visits for a specified amount of time, depending on the case.
- If it's done responsibly
- The city doesn't use it as an expedition of a guilty verdict for the dog
- As long as a vet was involved
- If the people on the tribunal were inclined to helping the dog and owner vs just euthanizing the dog. If we can supposedly "rehabilitate" rapists and pedophiles why can we not train a dog not to bite?
- Using a behavioral therapist (like JC St Louis) in a correct environment for temperament testing. Animals have fight or flight and if you take away the ability for flight by placing a dog in an enclosed room you are left with flight.
- There is no breed discrimination and each dog is treated as an individual case - regardless of breed.
- You would need to have an impartial person - one who doesn't judge based on breed but on the situation. For example, if a kid gets bitten and needs stitches. What as the kid doing? Was he minding his business or was he tormenting the dog? Again, let's face it, kids can be assholes and parents would rather be friends than parents. Therefore, kids aren't taught how to behave around animals and may think teasing the dog or pulling their ears or tails, is an acceptable form of behaviour. Wouldn't you react, if it was you being tormented? Now, if the situation is someone has their dog offleash and they randomly attack a person, then yes by all means impose restrictions or euthanize them if deemed a high risk.

- As long as specific breeds are not discriminated against. The idea of BSL makes me sad to be a Calgarian.
- Low cost, has an appeal system, actually speedy
- It would be made up an appropriate representation of dog people including people having the breed in question.
- Don't forget training for the human part of that equation
- You are doing bias checks with the individuals processing these cases because if you pass BSL then I doubt the cases against any breed looking like a pitbull would be fair. It's kind of like how if indigenous individuals are suspected of being involved in a crime they are more likely to get charged with less evidence and proof than if a white person committed that same crime. We need to do bias checks before allowing people to process cases against animals and humans
- The dog would be placed in an appropriate home for behaviour training.
- No city representatives. Law enforcement to replace city representation.
- The dog gets a muzzle and gets to stay at home and not in a shelter.
- Tribunal must include at least one expert (ie. vet, animal behaviourist) and one animal rights advocate, in addition to a city/law enforcement rep.
- It follows the same guidelines a ruling handed down from a provincial court.
- The person making the judgement call on the dog has trained/worked with dogs extensively. And someone that isn't breed biased.
- The tribunal should contain or at least consult dog professionals who have experience rehabilitating aggressive dogs to assess whether mandatory training is an option instead of euthanasia
- The people are not biased AGAINST pitbulls or other "aggressive" breeds
- The dog lives at home during the process
- They were educated and had knowledge around the issues.
- the dog is put into protective care and tested to see if it can be rehabilitated...and not given back to the owner.
- Fair, unbiased rulings.
- The dog is not always guilty of being vicious. If provoked situations are taken into consideration I would support this. If the dog is automatically considered guilty I would not.
- The dog must remain with its family. It is not the dog's fault as it is the owner's responsibility to raise and train the dog properly. Owners must attend dog training sessions with their dog to ensure they have control over their dog.
- Vicious dogs should be trained and possibly rehomed, NOT euthanized!!!

- The tribunal was made up of not only city officials but also individuals who work in and around dogs ie. Trainers, breeders, etc so that they are able to properly evaluate and assess the dogs behavior and provide a proper rehabilitation program.
- as long as there is a program we can put these dogs in to give them a second chance and allow them to be loved and cared for while awaiting the process. The owners need to be on trial not the dog
- An investigation took place regarding whether or not the aggression was instinctual or a behaviour trained into the dog.
- Depending on the severity of the attack, a first attack should not result in euthanasia. There are a number of reasons dogs may bite, and if the Victim was antagonizing the dog this may result in an adverse effect. Look again at the pet owner and not so much the pet. IF a pet owner has had multiple animals that are overtly aggressive then more should be done about the pet owner.
- Emphasis on behavior training and diversion from euthanasia.
- e important and should be considered before euthanasia.
- Had various people included such as owners of the "certain breed" or experts of that breed and not just who ever is available
- Dogs are not euthanized. They are removed from the home that made them dangerous. The owners of the dangerous dog are fined and given jail time / probation.
- People on the tribunal must not have any bias on the matter.
- A behavioral expert is included
- The dog owner was able to put forth their case fairly. And for the tribunal to be able to see the dog owner and dog interact together.
- As long as human and child issues got the same "sped up for minimized suffering" consideration!
- Members of tribunal need to be educated on dog behavior
- The parties involved in the biting incident have a say in what happens to the dog and also that people who know the dog can testify to its usual behavior etc. for a final decision.
- must look at every case as an individual dog/owner, and not be predisposed to label certain breeds bad.
- As long as euthanasia is OFF the table
- Behavior assessment done by a veterinary behaviorist
- Dog should not be euthanized but removed from owner and given to someone who would train and socialize the dog.
- Thorough assessment of the dog instead of quick judgement by only the case in court. Please do not euthanize dogs for no reason!
- No breed specific bylawys
- They aren't allowed to decide whether or not a dog should be put down. Rather they can't be in dog parks must be muzzled while out in public, etc.
- There are people on the tribunal who are educated in dogs and behaviour. The cost of the tribunal should be shared by the city and the dog owner.
- Do not euthanize dogs if they bite. Assess the situation and rehabilitate the dog.

- The selection of people include pet owners as well
- As long as they are great pet owners and have compassion for the animals.
- The tribunal was composed of people that understand animal behaviour/conditions, and not JUST general members of the public
- Need to ensure that there is no bias on the tribunal. decisions cannot be subjective.
- a tribunal would need to have an experienced dog trainer on it
- A legal vs just an opinion at the City level
- There is a system in place to ensure that the members of the tribunal do not have a conflict of interest, especially prejudices against certain breeds, and if euthanasia is recommended the final decision is passed to the courts and can be appealed
- They were to work with a highly trained dog trainer to better assess and/or determine the reason behind the dog's behaviour. Such as, poor owner training, medical issues, outside forces (self defence), etc. There needs to be someone advocating for the "vicious" dog, other than the owner.
- Animal trainer and vet be involved and provide full assessments to be considered in any decisions.
- As long as you do do you not discriminate against breed
- no breed bias
- The tribunal has a degree or experience with animal behavior
- Tribunal is operated with expert dog people and vets, the event needs to be fully investigated. No dog should be euthanized if they were protecting their owners, or due to be teased and taunted.
- A fair and unbiased decision not based on breed but on facts and the individual dogs/owner history of behaviour
- Was composed of a panel of vet professionals, dog trainers and behaviourists.
- Give the owner the right and ability to choose to try to have their pet retrained by a professional dog rehabilitator and all parties will have to accept the rehabilitator's assessment as to the dog's reliability to be safe.
- if the finding could be appealed
- There is two people involved, not just the 'opinion' and decision of one individual.
- External reviews and assessment as well as owner reviews and home conditions reviewed
- Their position does not favour a breed and all types are considered the same, including small breeds!
- Representatives had experience with dogs and did not have biases towards breed which could cloud their judgement
- There must be a fair trial even in tribunal.
- Not be biased against a certain breed of dog. All dogs are equal
- i can't read the rest of the question
- The condition is there must be enough dog bites to justify this. Is it justified today? People getting bit all over town?
- Input from a non-biased expert in dog behaviour
- No existing bias in the tribunal members based on untrue stereotypes surrounding breed behavior

- the metric for membership on the tribunal needs to ensure zero bias
- The tribunal members are unbiased and members make up a diverse representation of the city of Calgary
- Euthanasia was not utilized.
- An opportunity for the owner to present a case and evidence in regards to the dogs behavior, an opportunity for restitution for the victim, and consequences that include dog training or other preventative measures over putting the dog down
- Punishing the owner and not the dog
- The animal remains in home or with a rescue group
- There is no prejudice against a specific breed. Any dog can be aggressive if it hasn't had proper training.
- Appeals process at provincial level in cases where euthanasia is a determined result
- The tribunal had dog behaviour experts as sitting members overseeing each case, so as to prevent the euthanasia of provoked animals. This includes animals who are teased, or feel that thier life has been otherwise threatened and are exercising self defense.
- It'd not done by law enforcement. It's done by an organization educated about dogs.
- I would support a tribunal
- As long as the people were not bias against certain breeds and did not forgive first offences too easily.
- Professional dog trainer and certified veterinarian
- Fair chance to offer the dog rehabilitation
- Providing that breed specific language is not applied.
- Euthanizing is a permanent decision and does not belong in a tribunal. Tribunal is an interim...not final decision. Tribunal should only be acting in the welfare of the dog and safety of community.
- The people on the tribunal don't act out of fear and have the appropriate dog-hqndling education to make a sound decision that isn't rash.
- Media attention tends to sway public opinion; media should be advised that although not a trial, any reporting of the tribunal should be the same as such
- That the owner and dog are allowed to both be together at the tribunal so that the owner can demonstrate it the dog is actually aggressive, that these tribunals be held at a dog training facility such as Dog Topia where dog trainers can see the dog in action and if the aggressive behaviour continues during the tribunal with several dog trainers not being able to correct the issue then that can contribute to the outcome of the the case if the dog needs to be euthanized, but if owners and trainers are able to demonstrate and determine what the cause was for the behaviour and correct it, that can also contribute to the case. The tribunal needs to consist of various dog trainers, other dog owners, veterinarians. And the dog owner should be allowed to bring in any people that know the dog and have frequently interacted with the dog. This can include the dog walker, dog trainers, dog daycare staff, roommates, family and friends that have spent time with the dog, pet store staff that know the dog personally etc.
- Maintains or enhances the level of strictness of the current structure.

- Their suggestions are not focused on disciplining specific breeds (ie pit bulls) but rather individual cases
- Fair process & right to appeal
- Not discriminating against one breed. And actually taking into account what provoked them to do such a thing to have the tribunal systems called along. And euthanasia should never be the option. You wouldn't put down a human if they attacked someone. Why a dog?
- Has to be multiple steps including training as an option prior to euthanasia
- Members of the tribunal would have to include responsible owners of the breed and would need to evaluate both owner and dog (ie: dog fight owner)
- tribunal is never given breed information or images, so that there is no discrimination against specific breeds or looks
- As long as the situation is reviewed b\y a knowledgeable person
- Pit bulls are not unfairly classified as nuisances
- As the owner of 2 rescue bully breeds, I would feel discriminated against under the blatant "pitbull" proposals being made. This is all biased propoganda. If "pitbulls" are discriminated against, your city is moving backwards in its way of thinking and lawmaking. Shame on you Calgary! We will start visiting elsewhere and encourage other "pitbull" owners to follow suite. This is very short sighted of your city. Perhaps clean up the real threats in your downtown core- the meth, the fentanyl and the obscene amounts of garage! It's actually disgusting and you should be embarrassed this is where your priorities lie.
- Dog breeds would not sway the decision at all
- Dog should be released to rehab
- It does not cost tax payers extra. Dogs should be kept with owners not away from them while waiting, no matter which system is used.
- Complete public transparency and the release of all names involved including all tribunal staff.
- As long is there is certified animal behaviorist, certified trainers and not just humane society employee employees.
- All members are animal behavior specialists
- The identity of the breed would not be mentioned as it would keep out myths (which should not even be used) and biases.
- Tribunal must be trained in dog behaviour and must assess dogs temperament before issuing fines or euthanasia orders.
- To take into account the dog owner, it's the owner who is responsible not the dogs the dog is doing what it was taught or not taught by the owners
- There is NO bias. The breed of the dog should not be disclosed until the decision has been made. This goes for any and all dog breeds. Not just "pitbull type" dogs.
- any disagreement to the (so called experts that don't know which way to wipe) referred to court automatically.
- Reasonable people have to be on the tribunal. Where would you find them?
- No people who dislike one dog breed

- Unbiased members. Some members must own pitbull type dogs personally
- Restrictions placed on owner need to make sense for the rehabilitation of the dog. The focus should be education and rehabilitation not punishment as it's been proven ineffective in protecting the community.
- Unbiased opinions on dog breeds- no one who discriminated against 'bully breeds'.
- Included a wide range of board members including humane society representatives and behaviour specialists.
- This cannot be based off a dog's breed! It needs to be based off of what happened, surrounding factors and previous history.
- If a dog needs to be euthanized it must go to court
- It's not breed or look based and simply based on the severity of attack.
- As long as it is SOLELY on a case by case basis, the owner/victim is allowed to take the case through higher authority if wanted, and it is NOT breed specific.
- The dog should be kept at home with their owner unless the home is neglectful or abusive to the dog.
- Does not call out a certain breed
- All dogs were treated fairly, pit bulls or any dog in that family should not be treated differently
- Consisted of reputable dog trainers / behaviour experts
- Does not target "bully" breeds
- Involves both city representatives and UNBIASED citizens
- Did not exhibit a notable anti pit bull bias
- As long as the tribunal has officials on it that are neutral
- Keep the dog at home or with an approved interim guardian where possible to reduce stress on the dog. Approved guardian could be appointed at time of licensing.
- Allow dog owner to come up with solutions and provide references on dog.
- Because I would
- Pit bull does not automatically mean nuisance!
- Tribunal MUST have certified and credentialed dog trainers and/or behaviour consultants
- As long as it didn't discriminate against dog breeds
- Due process.. follow the law, and not notice on specific breeds
- It is used for all nuisance dogs, not just "pit bull-type" dogs. Responsible ownership still is the most important element. I have seen vicious injuries sustained from many breeds, including huskies and boxes and chihuahuas.
- Includes a dog behaviorist on the tribunal and an assessment by an independent behaviourist
- Professional dog trainers and behaviourists are consulted. And if the bite is not fatal, a training plan must be followed by the owner at their cost. Minimum 6 months.
- The people making up the tribunal are not judgemental on dogs based on a breed bias, and if they are aware of programs that help deal with extreme aggression that are available other than euthanasia

- As long as it included people who are educated in animal behaviour such as trainers or veterinarians.
- No animal should be euthanized without a chance to be rehabilitated
- If the person assessing the dog for euthanasia is a qualified veterinary professional, ideally a board certified veterinary behaviorist.
- The dogs get to stay with their owners not the shelter
- Faster isn't always better.
- The dog is sent to rehabilitation training with or without the owner. However there has to be consequence to the owner and prevent him from acquiring dogs in the future until proof of capable training has been confirmed.
- The owner should be the one punished, not the dog.
- Undeniable proof
- Tribunals are effective if the members of the tribunal include representatives from CKC sanctioned dog clubs, qualified dog trainers specializing in and understanding dog behaviour (example, Schutzhund, IPO trainers)
- Judge based on individual animal not by breed
- no dog should be euthanized, we need to look into its living situation/owners and try to rehabilitate them and find them that perfect home. We need patient and time with certain cases that you think show aggression that could honestly be fear.
- Unsure at this time
- The persons on the tribunal need to be people who have knowledge and could understand the facets of the dogs behavior, cause and effect etc. Examples would be Veterinarians or Dog Trainers.
- The tribunal has expertise in animal behaviours, are pet owners themselves, and they consider statements from friends and family of the owners as to how the pet behaves at home or in less stressful situations
- The tribunal has at least one animal representative (ie Veterinarian, behaviour specialist etc)
- Individuals with specific animal training such as dog trainers and vets must have space on the board, and euthanization would be avoided as a "solution"
- As long as they really hear and investigate. There is always 2 sides of the story as well as more than one external factor. Is not always black or white
- Has no BSL attributes.
- to euthanize a dog should be a last resort if dog has committed violent acts
- Property is always given to ensure the dog is not euthanized but instead measures taken to retrain the when necessary. As well, that the family or person owning the dog is given an opportunity to visit and care for the dog to lessen the trauma for all those involved including the dogs.
- The tribunal should be comprised of dog owners and the public should be able to challenge their orders.
- That the dog stays with its owner with some rules stating the dog can not leave the property
- It consisted of a fair and balanced group of members and not all pro or anti dog with pre set beliefs
- Science based evidence with witnessing opinions from direct animal behavior specialists.

- The rules were the same for ALL dog breeds. A chihuahua bite is just as important as a pitbull bite
- Required clear witness accounts to identify dogs accused
- Euthanasia shouldn't be determined by the tribunal.
- Neutral people not anti pit bull/ breed
- There are veterinary techs or veterinarians as representatives
- Expert dog behavioral consultants on tribunal.
- assessment of the entire situation of why dog bite occurred in the first place (ex: dog was in distress and scared and so bit person who approached it)
- It is made up of animal behaviourist and veterinarians or veterinary staff who deal with behaviours of dogs all the time
- Euthanasia is the ABSOLUTE LAST RESORT
- The dog will stay with its owners
- As long as it does not bully specific breeds
- Gives the "nonsense" dog a fair trial and doesn't penalize it for defending itself or its owners.
- A well- balanced group of people - with no bias regarding issues to be able to fairly consider each case
- Qualified people on the tribunal, not laypersons
- Only allow Calgary residents to participate
- Muzzled in dog parks, sent to reactive dog training, and help out with the training costs because usually that's the issue on the first place.
- I would support this if there were experienced dog trainers that specialize in these harder breeds on board to give their input. I'd be happy to help. I'm paid 150-300 an hour for training. I'm willing to volunteer for this
- The victim received justice
- Its done properly by educated personnel.
- The dog is assessed by a trainer known for their work with difficult or aggressive animals before it is returned to its owner... the dog would be happiest in its own home making it safer for people involved ... individual scenarios must be considered
- As long as all of the people involved have training and knowledge of dogs and their behaviour. It can not be people who are afraid of dogs or certain breeds
- Dog in the case remained in the care of a responsible owner and not traumatized in a shelter
- On the meantime the dog should not be spending time in a shelter, clearly it has trouble and change of environment will only cause it more stress and likely to do it again.
- PROFESSIONAL dog trainers, not random city people
- Had dog behavior and vets on it only.
- That there be a number of infractions prior to any animal being seized.
- Fair trial or dog allowed to stay home on the property
- If the dog that attacked was not protecting their property by an intruder, and or a person on their property. Children as well adults should learn that a dog will protect their human, so if a child wonders upon a property and gets bit the adult of that child should be fined not the get euthanized. This sounds harsh but why should the dog be at fault?

- No bias in dog breed. Also, looks at the owners history of dog ownership.
- There is a mix of people ie: people that work with abused animals, shelter owners, pound workers. People that are determined fit animal owners.
- If members of the tribunal were unbiased towards large breed dogs, and one of these members included an individual from an animal rights non profit such as the humane society.
- Includes input from a professional animal behaviorist
- Breed Specific legislation lobbyist, Activist, supporters and sympathizers are not allowed to be part of the tribunal
- I dk
- No breed specifications. Understand that it isn't always the dog who did the biting, fault! Dogs don't just bite because they want to. Psych evaluation on the owner, determine if they are a responsible pet owner who treats the dog properly. These will all help make your end decision. ITS NOT ALWAYS THE DOGS FAULT.
- An animal should never be euthanized if a human pushes them to the point of attacking. It isn't the animals fault they got "bullied" by humans.
- There is no discrimination against specific breeds.
- The dogs are not euthanized.
- Appeal maybe submitted to regular court
- yes
- As long as they don't act like judge jury and executioner with biases.
- NO DOGS SHOULD BE EUTHANIZED
- I would support as long as dogs are not put down because of their breed or without being given a chance to partake in proper training
- The onus is on the owner
- The tribunal must function as an advocate to prevent the euthanasia of the animal. Euthanasia should never be considered as a recommendation. All roads must be taken to prevent the euthanasia of the animal.
- Not when determining if a dog should be euthanized.
- Review of tribunal decisions on a regular (monthly/semi-monthly basis) to assess rates of euthanization
- Dogs are not put down for their first offence.
- Euthanization should be a last resort. Each animal in question should be given the chance to go through re-training first.
- That euthanasia can be stayed at multiple levels
- That no dog is euthanized.
- The dogs must go through intensive rehabilitation, training, and socialization before being euthanized. Euthanization should be the LAST and option.

- Leniency is applied on punishments
- Tribunal should include at least two experts in dog behavioural science
- No euthanasia right away. I think that the dog should first be put into training for help and if something happens again it should maybe be considered
- The dog should not be separated from the owner during the decision time and a dog should have multiple offences against it before being considered for euthanasia.
- Include dog behaviour experts and veterinarians
- Any owner dog who find them self in this situation NEEDS to be held accountable. If a tribunal decides the dog should be put down (i disagree with that) the owner should not be allowed to own another dog. They are responsible for this situation and as a result someone/another pet is injured and a and their dog is loosing their life. They are not responsible pet owner and have no business owning a dog.
- Consists of people with formal education around dog behavior (I.e. veterinarian)
- Testimony on dog's behavior is allowed by dog owners who have interacted with the dog
- The tribunal also reviews the behaviour of the owner and victim, as it is likely a human's fault that the dog has bit them/someone, not the dog.
- The safety of humans be the top consideration. No second chances. Fines to dog owners pay for the tribunal and staff.
- Keeps dog with its owner
- If the person is educated on the situation and knows animals, not some joe blow from the city who hates animals
- They have the authority for any decisions listed above EXCEPT euthanasia of the pet.
- Only if the tribunal board is composed of people knowledgeable of all breeds of dogs.
- The tribunal has people who are all dog friendly, do not believe in breed specific legislation
- Fair and equal information provided by owner as City employees.
- Dog be deemed fit to not re offend by vet and gets training
- Euthanasia should only be considered if it was an unprovoked attack. There needs to be recognition that most dogs require a prolonged incident which antagonizes the dogs. Accountability is paramount. Rather than demonize a breed of dog and fear monger Calgarians, why not place money into appropriate education at school that supports teaching kids how to respect animals' personal space and recognize adverse reactions and cautionary cues. This could also be an elective course or seminar one weekend or available online from the City of Calgary website.
- People on the tribunal are fully educated about dog behaviour and not have a biased opinion against certain breeds. They would need to have extensive proven history with dog behaviour
- There was unbiased representatives
- Owners get their dogs returned in a reasonable amount of time (1_2 days)
- Due process is followed. Witnesses are called. Every party is given a chance to be heard. Dog taunting or abuse be considered if it leads to the bite or can be considered the cause for attack; the abuser to be tried in criminal court. Dogs should be given grace for such acts of self-defense and judged on a per case basis. Also, previous character of the dog shall be taken into consideration. Good or bad.

- No worse/less punishment based on dogs breed
- does not unfairly judge an animal on its breed
- An option to have the dog trained and possibly have it isolated while in training. Until is been assessed by a professional that the dog may be around others
- Restrictions placed on the owner and treatment of their dogs.
- A dog and it's owner must enroll in training courses - YOU CAN TEACH AN OLD DOG NEW TRICKS. Again, people and their scared, timid or violent energy is what would cause a dog to react. All dogs are good dogs. They just need time.
- As long as this system is not biased against specific dog breeds
- It's not a knee jerk reaction to euthanize the animal
- They would need to have several years experience with dogs and educated about all breed, legislation, and mediation
- If there is an animal behavior professional that determines if an animal is to be euthanized or can be rehabilitated.
- Owner keeps dog
- As a responsible pitbull owner the thought of people who don't know my dog making judgments against her based on the word of a complete stranger terrifies me. Think horrible neighbor. For example I would want the opinions of her vet, daycare staff, friends, family and boarding facility to weigh heavily in any decisions that were made against her for whatever reason. Several times while walking we have encountered off leash or aggressive dogs. If there is ever a fight because she is bitten first I feel that she would be blamed because of her breed and that is not right. Perhaps I will wear a body cam everytime we go for a walk.
- It has to be fair and allow advocates for the animal opportunity to present their case
- Fair consideration from trained and educated professionals whom understand animal psychology and training
- no prejudice on breed
- It wasn't breed biased. And reviewed every case fairly and thoroughly
- It should not be just pit bulls that this applies to.
- As long as euthanasia was not carried out without all the other options considered and tried first.
- The tribunal members be vetted for bias, ie: do they dislike dogs? Do they have bad/traumatic experience with dogs? Etc.
- The welfare of the animals is not affected by bias
- The representatives must be or have been dog owners recently
- Innocent until proven guilty, not the other way around
- Explore the why of the situation? We are so quick to put an animal down... We need to invest in "Certified" Animal behaviorist storm do temperament assessments!
- If the dog was able to stay in the home with the owner without being able to leave the yard until a decision was made

- Truly objective officials made the decisions. No bias, including breed bias.
- More timely than provincial court
- Must have an appeals process and oversight
- That an unbiased decision is made not one that hands a tougher punishment to the breed instead of the actual incident
- Severe and repeat offenders should lose the privilege of owning animals and should be responsible for covering all future costs of rehoming the animal to a suitable and experienced forever home.
- Was fair- took into account the provocation of the dog. The dog bit a child, however child was poking a stick in its eye just before- not the dog's fault
- The tribunal is educated in dog pathology and understands that just because a certain type of dog could have a stronger bite does not mean that that type of dog is inherently bad/mean.
- That it is done fairly with appropriate (non-dog hater) and owners involved
- People on the Tribunal Must have support from 5 character references. A max. Term per person.
- It isn't more costly to the current system. If dogs bite, they are dangerous and there should be no leniency. Invest in poverty and hunger for people !!
- Those on the tribunal are educated about dog breeds and behavioural issues. I see a lot of concerning wording around pit bulls in this survey that are a clear misrepresentation of the true nature of pit bulls when they are cared for appropriately. Every dog has the ability to be vicious and dangerous regardless of breed. I'm concerned with Calgary's approach and language around pit bulls as if they are inherently a danger to society. The tribunal would need to be more educated on the subject than those who put together this survey.
- The dog and owner was monitored with fines for probation offences
- It would include dog trainers. Veterinarians are not behaviourists. SPCA workers are also not trainers. Qualified behaviourists to evaluate the dog or to hear of the incident.
- Gets things done
- It includes people from Calgary Humane society or similar experts in dog behavior.
- every possible step is taken to try and return the dog to the family
- No euthanize
- The reason the bite happened in the first place was carefully assessed.
- There should be an expedited appeal system or the tribunal would not solve the issue
- City and non-city members are dog owners, at least one whom owns a pit bull or other dog thought "dangerous".
- Minor bites/attacks
- As it is unbiased
- Euthanization only for repeat offenders
- I'm leery of the tribunal idea, since it can go to court anyway. But if it had the unintended consequence of more apprehension orders (because maybe the officers are leery of the long separation in 'grey' cases) I would support it
- Have people with educated backgrounds in animals

- the right to appeal
- If the dog is to be euthanized the owner should be too, irradicate the real problem
- if an owner has exhibited a patter of irresponsible dog ownership
- The dog can be at home with its family while awaiting trial with tribunal or court
- As long as detailed unbiased (including breed type) investigation was done before a declaration of being euthanized. Every situation is different and everyone has there own side of the story.
- Matter has to be heard within 1 week
- There is fair consideration of how suitable the owner is to handle and properly train the dog and efforts are made to do so.
- Their decisions are fair and depending on the severity of the circumstance(bite or aggressive behaviour) the owner and dog should be given “rehabilitation”. like a training course to see if anything can be done about their behaviour or restrictions on outdoor activities.
- Decision can be appealed on ANY grounds (i.e., including the ability to appeal the reasons for a decision)
- That owners have the option to request a provincial ruling after tribunal is finished.
- NOT breed specific. Just because a dog is smaller and bites doesn't make it less of a danger or irresponsible ownership than a larger dog.
- The persons sitting on the tribunal have been determined to have an understanding of the bylaws and processes and are unbiased towards specific breeds.
- The final decsion needs to happen in a court as a city appointed tribunal could have a bias one way or another.
- Tribunal must be non biased and include individuals from both sides
- owners responsibility to have proper training for the animal.
- Needs experienced dog people on tribunal. Especially experience with reactive dogs.
- The dogs get proper love, care, and treatment (rehabilitation) while in the shelters instead of being punished. Teach them right from wrong. Neglect is not acceptable.
- Tribunal includes dog behaviourists, dog owners and non dog owners.
- If dog owner appeals tribunal recommendation, dog must be kept in quarantine. Dog immediately back in quarantine if owners do not abide by restrictions.
- Before a dog is euthanized, training programs should be mandatory. (Poor training and inadequate socialization leads to more problems than anything else)
- The members of the tribunal were highly regarded and educated pet care professionals (eg. veterinarians, dog behaviourists/trainers, dog daycare owners, & the like). I do not support regular citizens with no dog education being on the tribunal.
- It issues euthanization declarations following a bite which has caused injury to a human being or other animal.
- Any perg owners so they understand the nature of dogs. son who is part of the tribunal must be deemed unbiased towards any breed of dog. They should be educated on breeds, training, and rehabilitative therapies.

- Professional dog trainers / handlers were part of the tribunal as they are best qualified to assess animal behaviour.
- There are MANY dogs out there with the bite force equal to or greater than a pit bull. I do not own a pitbull but ive owned old english bulldogs for over 30 years. They are block heads ,related to pitbulls BUT couch potatoes. U are continuing the block head dog prejudice. I just sold my house,ive been looking for a rental..the ones that do accept dogs do not accept any" bully "dogs.what im trying to say is do not encompass all blockhead dogs into being dangerous. You will open a can of worms thst will hurt more than just the dogs. Thank u
- The process is respected by the dog owners. The public is notified when and where the attacks have taken place. Fines are high enough that it stops the event from repeatedly happening. Drug dealers own these dogs and have enough money to buy their way out of any fines.
- an experienced dog trainer and a vet that specializes in domestic pets must comprise the main part of the tribunal and need to be given time and access to evaluate the dog in question
- No euthanization for first offence
- People on the tribunal are knowledgeable about dogs
- Don't be speciesist towards pit bulls
- Responsible DOG ownership, not breed specific. Do not single out bully breeds.
- The animal must remain on the owners property an not allowed in public and MUST attend a behaviour classes.
- There was a third party agency involed. Sorry but sometime in politics the individuals agenda means more than truth or fact
- If the proper dog breed is always identified correctly.
- A veterinarian was on the tribunal.
- Everyone involved (City and non-City reps) must be trained in assessing dogs - they can't just be volunteers with no background in dog assessment.
- dogs would be assesed on the circumsatnces of the incident , and provocation if any .
- Dogs should not be euthanized for behavior, and the tribunal should not have the power to decide to euthanize a dog.
- I would be concerned that there is some authority overseeing the "judges".
- there are experts (vets, behavioral analysts, trainers) on the tribunal
- It is people educated and experienced working with animals making the decision
- No Breed Specific Legislation
- Appropriate qualifications for those sitting on the tribunal.
- The people assessing the dogs need to be accredited dog trainers or behaviourists. All dog breeds regardless of size would need to be assessed.
- Please follow
- Dog stays in the original owners care. All supporting facts, videos, pictures & evidence from witnesses is reviewed & no biased judgment be placed on the innocent animals life. Animals behaviour is a direct result of that from the owner. Read that again!

- The members of the tribunal should be highly educated in canine behaviours and training, and the decision to euthanize should be an absolute last resort if determined that obedience training has not been effective at mitigating behaviours. Additionally, there is no conclusive evidence that pit bull type breeds have stronger bite potential than other breeds. Introducing rules against these breeds only contributes to the stigma against these dogs and reduces their chances at being adopted from shelters.
- All cases were being considered equally, regardless of the breed of the dog.
- I believe that all dogs can be trained. I do not support euthanization. IF a dog were to bite someone, they should be put into a training program where they are taught what to do.
- As the owner get an equal chance to defend the dog prior to any euthanization order.
- Tribunal members are well educated in dog behavior and training, and not be prejudiced against any specific breed of dog.
- The dog be muzzled and leashed at all times while out of the owner's yard/fenced in property.
- Multiple animals rights advocate groups, veterinarians and animal behaviour specialist should be on this tribunal.
- The tribunal is comprised of experts on dog behavior.
- It is reviewed by a panel of decision makers and not one person/regardless of their credentials
- As long as pit bull breeds are not singled out. Breed specific bylaws are disgusting.
- The owner of the dog is thoroughly investigated AND an appeal is held PRIOR to any euthanization.
- All options are used and tried before euthanasia
- appeals process and FAIR
- qualifications of the tribunal include dog behaviour experts
- Include vets, experts in animal behaviour and rescue (people that advocate for all dog breeds and do not single any out based on myth and media sensationalization)
- Experts in dog behaviour and training.
- Qualified tribunal members (based on experience working in animal protection act and behaviour)
- Dog behaviour assessment performed by Calgary Humane Society or another HIGHLY TRAINED AND PROVEN ON PAPER QUALIFIED assessor
- Appropriately educated professionals were involved in the reviews and decisions
- Be inclusive of a vet, a representative of several dog sports, a few dog trainers and not only “positive only” ones.
- I would need a lot more information as to who sits on the board.
- All facts are able to be shown and not just the accusing party is right.
- Cases are looked for why a dog attacked. If a kids is picking on the dog and they attack, the dog is protecting itself and shouldn't be put down.
- Both the victim and the owner agreed with the representatives selected to hear their case. Ideally we don't let someone hear a case that is already biased against dogs.
- See both sides of the dog attack and figure out which dog initiated the attack, not just created the most damage.

- Jzjajxnndnx
- The owner has the right to get training before euthanasia is on the table.
- If they're trained professionals who are part of the dog showing, training and breeding communities
- Had unbiased members
- They are educated in animal behaviour and thoroughly analyze impartially (as in they don't judge based on the breed of dog).
- Appropriate qualifications for those sitting on the tribunal (as in experts who actually understand the breed)
- The tribunal members be unbiased and or selected at random.
- Can declare a dog vicious. Cannot declare a dog must be euthanized.
- Do not release the biting dog back to the irresponsible owner, who has already proven that he cannot control his animal. Unfortunately, the dog should be euthanized or it will bite again. The tribunal should grant generous compensation to the innocent victim who was traumatized and injured by the offender.
- The representatives are trained well enough to make informed decisions
- Dogs should stay with owners
- There was a place to appeal decisions made by the tribunal
- Members of the tribunal need appropriate qualifications. But probably better than whom ever put this survey together. Its been proven that size is indicative of jaw strength, which would mean any large breed dog, not just 'pitbulls'.
- The tribunal is comprised of those who are appropriately qualified
- No euthanasia
- Members of the tribunal need appropriate qualifications.
- Breeds are not punished and both sides are properly heard.
- AS LONG AS EUTHANIZATION IS THE ABSOLUTE LAST RESORT.
- subject to independent, non-interested party appeal
- More serious cases should still go to court
- IT MUST be determined by the owner NOT THE BREED!!
- I do not believe a dog should be euthanized if it is deemed "aggressive" or based on the breed that it is. The owners should need to keep the dog on their property or on a leash when walking.
- house arrest for the animal
- Tribunal decisions must be final. All members of the tribunal must be fully trained in the process, decisions and applications for the positions should only consider individuals that have the appropriate occupation or training (such as Veterinarians, Dog trainers, or others with similar experience.
- as long as all sides of the story are looked at , evenly , without bias .
- It is something that should be explored further.
- Certain animal experts should form part of the tribunal (eg. Animal services officers, veterinarians, certified behaviourists)

- dog must not be out of home or fenced yard, pending tribunal
- That trial is not Breed Specific
- Zero tolerance for pit pull bites or attacks. Put down the dog immediately
- it was as cost effective or better than current process.
- Imposes serious penalties. My guess is that a tribunal will treat attacks like parking tickets.
- Increased involvement of owner and affected party (mediation component) if euthanasia is recommended by tribunal.
- That the participants of the tribunal be a mix of non dog owners and dog owners or previous owners of dogs!
- The tribunal is made up of those knowledgeable of various breeds and can be unbiased
- It was fair and blind
- N/a
- Providing the owner with options to train the dog before euthanasia.
- Yes
- so long as it's cheaper and impartial.
- Provided there is representation by knowledgeable authorities (ie humane society, vets, etc.)
- Dogs are given a 3 strike rule before being subjected to such. Accidents can happen, people deserve a chance to correct the problem before their dog's life is ever at risk.
- Dogs released on a bail system, minimum $500.00. until matter decided.
- I believe vets should be apart of these Decision
- The victim and owner need to be involved in the decision making process and not just told a decision without having any input
- Decisions about Euthanization should be for the court of queens bench to determine not a tribunal in my opinion. However, If a tribunal does make that decision it should be as a recommendation that an owner can appeal at court , and should only be recommended after all other avenues such as: training and restrictions have failed or the owner has failed to abide by those restrictions or failed to provide training sufficient enough to re-assess an animal as safe. Other than Euthanization I think the tribunal is a great idea.
- Fair and non biased towards specific breeds.
- No authority to euthanize.
- If there is any criminal negligence on behalf of the owner it goes into provincial and or federal courts appropriately
- The people involved have the dogs best interests in mind
- If it had the same rate of conviction. My concern would be if it went easier on offenders.
- The dog is not automatically singled out as in fault based on breed. That bylaw officers would have to have solid video evidence of the offence, and that if the assessment for an aggressive or nuisance dog be handled by a professional dog behaviouralist with an actual degree (not someone who is a trainer) and can do a proper assessment. Also, the tribunal should require to have training on dog behaviour and what makes for bad behavior and scenarios to have an appropriate understanding.

- Put down dog that bite
- It doesn't cost tax payers. Seriously, how many dog bites are there in a year?
- No euthanasia
- The "victim" and owner is investigated for possible reasons due to bad animal behaviour
- safety of the public against any further aggression by the dog
- If the review board is actually educated with facts and not driven by fear.
- A majority of members of the tribunal should be dog owners. No member of the tribunal should be found to have any malice towards dogs of any breed.
- tribunal members must include people with knowledge of animal behaviour and be unbiased.
- Is done in a timely fashion and pet stays with family if that is best and safest option. Being separated from family can cause undue stress in animals making the situation way worse than necessary
- no euthanization to be declared.
- Allow for statements from people affected by the attack
- No BSL
- Personal feelings regarding a certain breed (like pitbulls because that topic is such a huge controversy in the current times) should warrant a certain member to be omitted from consideration. The unfavourable bias against certain people or breeds of dogs will cause a lot of unnecessary suffering and trauma. We need to give these situations a very fair opportunity to get a fair and unbiased set of eyes.
- ,
- That a full investigation at the time was completed and that the animal was not automatically found guilty when perhaps it had been provoked and was defending itself.
- It is binding and appeals are handled by the tribunal body
- Tribunal members must be dog owners.
- Yes
- Are invested in the best interest of the animal
- Unbiased members, all tribunal members should be pet owners.
- That the people involved not have a bias against bully breeds ave a
- Would include a dog behaviorist specializing in dogs exhibiting dangerous behaviors.
- Anyone involved in the tribunal should have a history of working with animals in stressful situations (vets, professional trainers, ect), to be better able to tell the difference between an animal who is actually a problem, and one who was in a stressful situation and lashed out (as animals will do).
- Go into every case unbiased against specific breed of dog and decisions are soely made based on the situation at hand.
- Aslong as there not bias and a animal hater
- Should be composed of individuals trained in dog behaviour
- No breed specific legislation. Problem dogs come from all breeds.

- The dog is returned to the owner without forcing euthanization. Suggest a training program
- Understand the reason for the dog bite, was it unprovoked or was the dog giving warnings signs that the adults did not pay attention to, which is the fault of the owner or other persons not the dog
- Ok as long as the representatives are educated in dog behaviours and have worked extensively with many types of breeds so they're informed and not biased against certain breeds
- I would prefer to have a group who would have enough canine knowledge/experience to assess why the bite happened. All too often small dogs are initiators and owners don't control them causing a larger dog to panic. Children screaming can put the largest breeds into fight or flight mode as well. All factors should be considered in an "event." Again, it's critical for a tribunal to understand the complete picture.
- Determine, and review restrictions placed on a dog, which the owner would need to abide by to keep the animal.
- It is not breed specific and it is case specific, I do believe that the owners need to be looked at in these sort of situations and the dogs need to be given more of a slack. I don't think a dog should be euthanized because they had poor ownership. In fact I think this is barbaric and they should be sent for training and rehabilitation.
- The mandate means of evaluating and need for proof are retained not 3 people with whims
- If the dog is left in the owner possession and the owner has the right to defend it
- Dog owners must go through a training program, including care, feeding and discipline. Most dogs that are "bad" can be directly related to how they have been treated.
- Dependent on individual situations
- Expert consultations with reputable animal behaviourists to determine when a dog is considered a "dangerous" dog on a case by case basis.
- Do not specify or name the breed at the tribunal or Hearing. It creates bias. Small dogs bite just as often as large breeds.
- A canine behavioral expert was part of the panel.
- Little dogs are not trained, Nenshi and his piglets always blame big dogs!!
- Members must be experts in animal behaviour and/or veterinarians
- Non biased representatives
- The owner had a chance to defend or represent the animal
- They should not have the decision surrounding euthanasia.
- as long as the decision is subject to review and appealed with no jeopardy to the dog
- Representatives must be both competent and compassionate, and understand animals and training.
- The tribunal needs to include veterinarians, responsible, certified dog trainers
- It must consist of people who actually understand the bylaws and also have a vested interest in animal welfare. For example, representatives from animal rescues. Not just anyone who may have biases against specific breeds. I want to be clear on this because I'm sick of people advocating for this BSL against any dog that even appears to be a "pit bull" (which is completely arbitrary). People with this agenda should not be allowed to rule in these types of infractions.
- It must be appealable in a court of law and if appealed the decision is stayed during that time

- Not bias against pitbull breed dogs
- it was a tribunal of impartial representatives. No special interest groups, animal shelter employees or animal rights activists. City bureaucrats with no history of bias would be fine
- As long as euthanasia isn't the default. These dogs likely need further training and/or rehoming to caring and responsible owners.
- There are no bias against pit bulls. Ridiculous.
- The tribunal was made up of dog experts, trainers, vets, etc.
- The members had an appropriate selection process
- No prejudice against pit bulls
- It's made up of a mix of experts with knowledge of breeds, handling and owners, such as dog trainers, vets, breeders, dog walkers, kennel personnel
- Each dog and incident was treated separately and on their own merit. Different breeds not having different rules. Targeting pit bulls is ridiculous and ludicrous. The owners should be charged more severely for nuisance dogs the animals should not be.
- If the people on the tribunal were respected dog trainers and could look from an unbiased point of view
- The dog stays in owners care
- keep the dog in nice conditions and provide support/training. Do not euthanize right away, do an assessment first
- There has to be a animal behaviour therapist to help identify if the situation was caused by the animal or the other factors
- Completely without conflict of interests
- Must include a member of the community where the attack occurred.
- If she t shortened the length of time a dog was kept from the owner. Tribunal must consist of experienced and knowledgeable members of the "dog community".
- People are the problem, placing the dog back in that environment is not going to fix anything.
- the tribunal should be made up of an animal enforcement officer, a veterinarian, and an experienced canine trainer or breeder with extensive experience.
- Dog should be assent by a trained animal behavior specialist
- Guaranteed faster decisions, and the dogs should be away from home no longer than 1 week.
- As long as the committee does not hold bias towards dogs of any breed. This may need the support from local or provincial groups that represent pit bulls.
- Dogs that are apprehended for severe bites should be euthanized regardless of the court/tribunal process delays.
- If the dog was provoked in which the animal bit someone I would see what all happened before taking the dog!
- Can be appealed by the owner or victim.
- Considered the reason for the dog attack. Dogs are often only aggressive when provoked or exposed to violent or aggressive behaviour. The conditions the dog experienced prior to the attack should be reviewed- often times it is the fault of the owner and not the dog itself. If the dog was raised in violent or aggressive conditions the penalty should be placed on the owner and the dog should be given a second chance to correct its behaviour (ie adoption/foster to a new home)

- The owner should not be allowed to own a dog again for their lifetime. They should be wholly responsible for their dogs behaviour.
- They would not have authority to decide if the dog is euthanized
- that when possible, the dog is placed with a volunteer to access their behavior outside of the traumatic environment that a shelter could be for the animal
- The tribunal was made up of veterinarians, dog behavior specialists ie trainers, animal advocates and others who had the best interest of the dog at heart and would not come to the decision to euthanize lightly
- That it was for ALL breeds including the little breeds.
- Decision makers should be screened for bias.
- As long as the life of the animal is valued
- It includes dog experts (trainers/veterinarian staff, etc)
- There would need to be a selection process for the tribunal to ensure that the people selected have no conflict of interest and are not part of interest groups for or against dogs.
- contains neutral representatives, with both dog owners and non-dog owners as representatives (to cancel out any inherent bias someone may have)
- The tribunal must focus on the specific animal(s) involved and not their breed, and the actions of its owner/handler. The tribunal must also be able to review the actions of the victim(s)
- Representatives have experience with animal training and behaviour.
- A tribunal decision needs to have the same standing as a court order. Otherwise every decision would automatically get appealed and go to court anyways.
- Owners must have input and breed must not be a deciding factor
- all members should be dog owners or former dog owners, with some being pit bull owners
- The breed of the dog is not taken into consideration. And the courts can appoint someone without prior bias to decide.
- Review vicious dog declarations and determine whether they are justified declarations. The tribunal should serve to reduce numbers of euthanasia NOT increase.
- I think a repeat offender (dog owner) Should pay very high fines, as well or in lieu must attend a training with their dog to decrease the chance of dog on dog attacks and improve temperament, they should also be required to be neutered or spayed .
- Dogs should not be euthanized. Dog should be placed into training, given a second chance. There are so many variables as to why a dog might bite.
- Recommendation to euthanize can be made by tribunal, but the decision is sent up (court perhaps)
- The owner would have a chance to approach and speak with them.
- Euthanization cannot be declared by tribunal
- If the focus is on owner's responsibilities (or lack of) and not focused on particular breeds

- It reviews the dog behaviour and not it's breed
- As long as it was the same rule for ALL dogs, not just certain breeds. Rules should be the same for everybody.
- Supports to correct the dog or rehome to a trained family.
- consisted of a range of people with varied backgrounds and expertise in the area
- Conditions before euthanasia
- Serious attacks by dogs with previous history of problems.
- it is not the dogs fault lock up owner.
- Saving dog euthanasia as an absolute last resort and not using it as a punishment for dogs and/or owners.
- Dog safety and RE TRAINING or RE HOMING comes FIRST. Euthanasia is NEVER NECESSARY.
- Tribunal members are animal behaviour experts, veterinarians, experienced dog trainers, etc. Decision making process is transparent. Case information, outcomes, rational, and/or proceedings are made public as is appropriate/allowed.
- Members of the tribunal should have dog behaviour expertise
- Leave the judgment of euthanization to official courts
- The dog is innocent until proven guilty, and gets to stay with it's family until the tribunal reaches a verdict.
- The dog would be allowed to remain with owner during process.
- The tribunal would need to have people that specialize in the field of animal welfare and care. Vets, animal behaviour specialists, peace officers, bylaw officers, and people with knowledge about animals rather than people who's background is in politics or city management.
- Took in to actual account the situation and the events that lead up to the accident.
- Specific needs would not be targeted.
- It had consistent terms of reference
- As long as the members are thoroughly vetted and proven to not hold any breed specific bias.
- Kill it
- All things are taken into consideration. I have a big dog who was perfectly fine with other dogs until 3 small dogs attacked him when he was on a leash. He is always on a leash and still people with little dogs still use the retractable leashes and dont pay attention and bite my dog then they look at me like im the irresponsible pet owner
- Determine, and review restrictions placed on a dog, which the owner would need to abide by to keep the animal
- Members of the tribunal included experts in the field and a balance of beliefs
- That it does not deem all pit bulls as dangerous and need to be euthanized. A breed of dog does not make it more dangerous.
- Hhfgg
- the tribunal is heavily involved with dog owner/breed advocacy groups who have a greater understanding of the nuances of dog ownership and not just a way of expanding the judicial system.

- Includes veterinarians and representatives from owners of breeds that face public discrimination
- Mandatory putting down of violent dogs.
- As long as members with dog expertise are on the tribunal. The members need to understand the different breeds. Possible dog trainers.
- Procedures/restrictions are put in place to ensure impartiality
- No breed specific legislation, should be based on a case by case basis.
- At any given time in the process, the pet owner can opt out of this process and go straight to the court of Queens bench
- NONE of the tribunal members have a vested interest or financial payback from the city.
- Emphasis on rehabilitation rather than euthanizing the dog; highly consider the influence of the owners responsibility/attribution to the case.
- They officials remain neutral and understand not one breed is at fault. Maybe it's time to crack down on breakers and animal abuse I steed.
- Dogs do not get out down, but put in a better fit home. I personally would revoke a dog even if they bit someone. Dogs bite for a reason and the issue can ALWAYS be fixed.
- Only for minor injury situations
- The non city reps would need to have dog behaviour knowledge.
- The tribunal system be setup and administered by Alberta Justice and not the City of Calgary.
- Clear and transparent steps with justification
- Only if tribunal is composed of dog behavior specialist
- That each individual on the tribunal have proven knowledge of dog behaviour ie Vet, trainer, etc.
- They are not prejudice towards specific breeds. Ie. Pitbulls.
- There isn't a significant cost Burden that falls on pet owners.
- The tribunal must consist of one: legal representative, one dog trainer and one animal shelter employee.
- Takes a look at the whole picture. WHY did the dog bite? What factors let to the bite? Ex: teasing or taunting which leads to a bite are NOT the dogs fault
- At least one member is a qualified expert in dog behaviour.
- The dog/owner history. If an isolated incident I wouldn't support it.
- As long as subject to appeal and review
- 100% non biased against bully breeds.
- review interim orders
- That dogs are rehabilitated and re-homed, not euthanized, due to improper care and neglect by the owners.
- Dogs be given a proper behaviour assessment and taken away from guardian if need be.
- Non biased individuals are used on the tribunal I.e. special interest organizations. Punishment should lye on owner ban them from owning animals.

- The people on the tribunal need to be unbiased in regards to dog breeds. I know more people who've been bitten by small dogs (chihuahas, pomerians, etc.) than by large dogs, so this needs to be taken into account when selecting the people on the tribunal.
- owners should be required to take ownership and training classes
- 2nd incident euthanasia
- they need to assess each dog fairly and not be biased towards certain breeds.
- All evidence and a true advocot for the dog
- Fair and impartial members with NO BIAS REGARDING DOG BREEDS, SPICIFICALLY "PIT BULL TYPES"
- unbiased hearing
- As long as the representatives in charge of each case have first hand and significant experience in working with dogs and are thoroughly educated and well informed about the nature and psychology of dogs. It would be completely unacceptable and irresponsible for the representatives to have no knowledge of dog nature and behaviour.
- I would be interested in seeing the qualifications for those who would be on the tribunal and their ability to be impartial.
- Allow victim statements and take them into consideration in decision-making.
- It includes certified dog experts versed in ALL breeds
- the tribunal should consist of people who have expertise in dog training and behavior so they can determine if the surroundings the dog was raised in were a determining factor in the incident(s).
- There are "pit bull" owners on the tribunal at all times to cut some of the bias toward the breed.
- It moves quickly
- did not just focus on pit bulls or similar breeds, it must be inclusive.
- Independent consultant brought in to evaluate dog, owner, living conditions and rehab potential.
- The dog is not punished. It is an owners responsibility to raise a dog, just like a child. Fine the owner and leave the dogs alone. It's not their fault, it's the owner's fault.
- Na
- Before euthanization, there is the option to remove the dog from the city, or enact obedience classes (then reassess), and finally make it so the owner is not allowed animals (they are trained to be like that, the dog is not inherently dangerous)
- i would like it if the people chosen for the tribunal are dog owners
- I would support the use of the tribunal, but not with the wording listed for "Dog Attacks". It implies that dogs who bite are only attacking and have not been provoked in any way.
- As long as the people are not bias towards the breed
- It is fast and paid by the owner of the animal
- a logical system instead of emotional reasons
- If upon request of the tribunal in mutual standing the case could be transferred to the courts.
- Might work but people are corrupt so probably not in actual application
- They are not all Karen's

- Dog stays in custody at owners expense.
- reeds are just as vicious as pit bulls. Tragic results can happen with any strong breed.
- Tribunal must be focussed on educating dog owners on proper dog care, dogs are a product of their environment
- That it will be fair and unbiased to the breed involved
- The tribunal is filled with experts on dogs (Calgary Humane Society, local rescue groups, local behavioural specialists, vets, etc)
- Owners should have access to their animal during the wait
- Members must be dog owners
- Needs to have an appeal process
- Educated and experienced dog trainers/rehabilitators are involved in the decision.
- Yes
- Previous or current dog owners with no criminal record
- no euthanization without the dog itself already at risk of death
- Obedience training FIRST, with euthanasia as the very LAST resort
- Tribunal "officers" do not make breed-specific decisions.
- I disagree with breed blaming. I would want assurances that the tribunal is impartial to the dog breeds when making decisions.
- Appropriate expertise and representation on the tribunal
- The presence of animal behaviour experts, the "victims" or advocates, and representation by animal owners (not of the apprehended animal, but as a generally represented group as part of the tribunal).
- The dog & owner have to go to behavioral classes before euthanization is even thought of
- That measures are in place to provide behaviour training and assistance for owners to prevent future incidents
- Actual dog trainers and experienced people on the tribunal
- Needs to be fair.
- That euthanization be removed as a possible response, and that the tribunal does not discriminate based on breed of dog
- As long as membership of the tribunal is transparent and changeable by the public in the event of someone malicious, ignorant or with a personal agenda joining the tribunal
- The requirement that an animal behaviorist (arms length) not with the city is included for impartial advice assesment
- If the owner of the animal is not satisfied with the outcome of the tribunal, quick, efficient appeals can be made with the court. Minimal wait time for appeals.
- As long as the their is fair representation on the tribunal (I.e. ppl not biased against pitbulls.
- members of tribunal would need appropriate qualifications
- If a dog is deemed so dangerous that it must be euthanized and not rehabilitated, the owner should never be allowed to be the primary guardian of a dog ever again.

- ALL persons involved in the tribunal must be certified in k9 behaviour and be completely unbiased towards ANY specific breed of dog.
- That fines and restrictions are on the HUMAN owner
- Proper people sat on tribunal with extensive experience and knowledge about the animals and recommendations made - not just city council delegates who don't really understand whats best for animals and families
- It has to have members of an animal rescue involved.
- it be apprised of non-partial people, vets, and animal behaviorists
- Strict policy on overlooking all details and making sure the owner of the accused dog is educated on what they can do to reduce risk.
- Someone with background working with dogs - groomer, vet, vet tech, etc
- Euthanasia is the last possible option and these include ALL BREEDS including small breeds, as all can be dangerous if put in uncomfortable positions. It's rarely the dogs fault and often the fault of the owner, both need to be examined and re-training, re-homing and rehabilitation should always be thought of before euthanasia
- That the representatives were educated in dog behaviour and training.
- No prejudice against bully breeds
- Explained further
- Has animal (Dog) EXPERTS on the tribunal.
- Only euthanasia when ABSOLUTELY NO OTHER OPTIONS EXIST
- That the tribunal focus on the best interests of the animal, not necessarily the animals guardian.
- Euthanizing a dog should be a last resort option, only after it has been decided that there is no rehabilitation options feasible.
- A dog should not be euthanized unless it had a fatal attack to another dog. Pit bulls should not be tried more aggressively - more often than not it is a bad trainer not a bad dog, they should be removed from the household or put into a training program if it is a non fatal attack
- Includes at least 50% professional dog trainers
- The owners of the dog are the ones to be fined NOT THE ANIMAL! It's an owner's responsibility to train their pet.
- Most often a dogs behavior is directly related to how they are raised and treated in the home. If a tribunal were to be reviewing a case, I would expect they also review the owner and their history very thoroughly. Criminal record checks should be done. The owner needs to be looked at through a microscope. Are they abusive? Does the animal show signs of neglect? The expert opinions of a non-biased veterinarian and animal training expert should be included. Does this animal get appropriate care and exercise? Is the animal in a suitable environment etc. All of these things need to be considered. On the flip side, is the case involving a rescue dog? Are the owners working on "said" behaviors. Can they show proof of this? Perhaps they are trying very hard to help the animal. Perhaps they are just terrible owners that should be banned from owning pets. All angles must be looked at very carefully and with non-biased opinions. Simply throwing a group of people together and having them decide the fate of an animal and its owner is a recipe for disaster if not done correctly and fairly.

- Can the tribunal be an elected panel? I would have concerns about bias against bully breeds.
- All members of the tribunal group MUST be dog owners.
- U need experts from a rescue or other that have experience with dig behavior. This can't be a government decision. Use experts
- As long as they were not influenced by antiquated BSL
- All evidence collected and analyzed before a non-biased decision is made.
- It is not breed specific and any dog is prosecuted the same
- Allowed the owners to choose between tribunal or court. Make it an option.
- It included animal behavioural professionals
- Applicable animal experts should be involved in the tribunal (ie. a dog behaviorist)
- The representatives of the tribunal have a thorough understanding of animals and their behaviour
- The decision should not be biased by type of dog.
- Euthanasia can only be recommended at the tribunal level, but must then be passed on to the provincial court for final decision.
- The dog was not euthanized until a court hearing took place.
- There were warnings and owners given opportunities to train their dog, almost like given "community service" and that community service is training or seeking out dog behaviour specialists to hear their options and actively move forward with them and taking the steps necessary. Euthanization should be absolute last option and only if very dangerous or multiple instances with no improvement.
- The appeal process is restricted, to avoid the majority of cases being appealed
- The people making the decision have the experience (is there training, a course, experience they must have) and are not biased to breed.
- Be expeditious and not take forever like most court matters do
- Treat all dogs under the same rules, no matter breed or size.
- Had an appeal process
- Not prejudice against pit bulls or any other breed and looks at the owner instead of dog. There are training programs like dominance training that work wonder for large muscular breeds
- As long as there are guidelines for these tribunals that do not discriminate towards breeds of dogs. The definition of "nuisance" must be based on behaviours exhibited both by the dog and the owners (ie if it's the owner letting the dog run loose, the owner is the nuisance, not the dog)
- There is a way to dispute the tribunal decision and keep it fair.
- If assessment for euthanasia is impartial and an absolute last resort.
- That a dog cannot be euthanized by decision of the tribunal. This would need to go to provincial court
- Don't single out pitbulls
- There is NO bias towards specific breeds
- As long as it had unbiased people, dog and non dog owners and no one with previous dog bias

- All dogs are treated equally independent of their breed.
- as long as it would not support bias to any specific type of dog breed
- No euthanizing.
- As long as it is run by qualified individuals (non biased) and it does not make it impossible to appeal.
- Without euthanization
- As long as innocent dogs are not taken from owners then put down with no warning like has happened in the past to bully breeds
- Unbiased decisions when it comes to dog breed. It should also be emphasized that the victim is analyzed as well. Dog bites can be provoked by disrespectful human behavior including but not limited to uninvited approach, ear/fur pulling, approach by human with an unfamiliar animal etc.
- Assessment by behavioural expert
- Must deal ALL with nuisance dogs, NOT only pitbull breed.
- Court should be used when it is recommended that a dog be euthanized due to behaviour, so the process is more fair and there has been time and due process used before ending a pets life.
- No
- The tribunal is made up of a representative sample of individuals who are competent (adequately qualified and suitably trained) in animal behaviours.
- Tribunal has representation of people with expertise in dog behaviour and rehabilitation
- It would be case specific, where the owner would also be assessed (are they encouraging this dogs behaviour) - all breeds of pit bulls should not be treated as the same 'nuisance' animal. While I understand it is the strength they possess that poses a threat if they were to bite, most dogs behaviour is synonymous with a nature versus nurture approach and I whole heartedly believe the owner and their training habits should be assessed first.
- The tribunal included dog behaviourists/trainers/other people highly trained in dog health and behaviour
- Have dog owners and known vets on the tribunal
- The representatives making this decision need to be a fair mix of individuals and should not only contain peoples who have views that support a blanket approach and paint every dog with the same brush.
- The owners must show that they will train their dog properly. If the owner can not demonstrate that they put in the effort to train their dog, then they should have mandatory training for their dog. Again, it is the owners responsibility to train their dog properly.
- The tribunal is made up of people without a bias to block-headed/"pit bull" type dogs. I don't know how to ensure that neutrality, but this bias the city is attempting to employ is disgusting.
- The dog be assessed by a canine behaviorist
- It would need a strict code of ethics and framework
- There is no way these should take up the time or expense of the courts. Including appeals. Appeals should also go to a tribunal.
- A fair process for the owner and dog.

- No prejudice against bully type dogs.
- Members of the tribunal had a background in animal behaviour
- No Euthanization to be decided by tribunal
- I do not like the idea of a tribunal getting to decide whether a dog is euthanized. I also feel as though a tribunal would immediately have biases against "pit bulls"
- Dog breed has no bearing on punishment, it is randomly selected from the community, both sides are looked at, if the jerk dog at the dog park antagonizes the wrong dog, kinda a life lesson not to be a jerk
- didn't discriminate against breed
- !
- As long as dogs aren't discriminated against because of their breed rather than their behaviour.
- Representatives professionally trained in dog behaviour and had the dogs best interest at heart
- No bias to a particular breed. Each dog treated as an individual.
- That there is still an appeal process available.
- Members of tribunal are qualified to assess; for example Vet.
- A tribunal could be effective in reducing strain on the courts, but the process would need to be carefully considered. How frequently would they sit (scheduled not on demand)? What qualifications should tribunal members possess? Will 'accused' owners have access to representation?
- There is an appeal process.
- That appropriate people are involved and vetted
- Does not involve any euthanasia decisions.
- Would need people knowledgeable about dogs on this tribunal, not just random people.
- Within 24 hours
- Experts in dog behaviour or health (ie vet) included
- There are dog owners on the tribunal panel
- Do not euthanize people's loved ones.
- The tribunal should include someone who runs or works in a dog rescue that's there for the good of the dog and not concerned in public opinion.
- I don't really understand what this means. I only support the idea which puts less stress on the dog so he can come home sooner. I've heard how those dogs are treated under the city when they are taken from their home.
- They should not have the power to kill a dog
- At least half the members of the tribunal are familiar with dog behaviour in various situations (I.e. they are able to distinguish between a dog defending itself and a dog attacking viciously in more nuanced situations)
- This tribunal is not bias towards certain breeds
- Need to know who comprises the third parties. Need dog advocates, bylaw etc, cross sector of representatives

- Stop euthanization of dogs. Dogs are not inherently violent. It is a trained behaviour and Pit Bulls are no more violent than any other dog. Owners are always at fault for this kind of behaviour.
- As long as the owner is made to have the dog properly trained
- As long as there are open minded individuals who are actually educated when it comes to dogs and their behaviors.
- It had a variety of people including owners of certain breeds, people of colour, women and LGBT+.
In addition, the tribunal members must undergo several tests of judgement and values before joining.
- Any animal that is under review for euthinization. Is assessed by a certified and qualified trainer for chance of rehabilitation. Rehabilitation options are available and euthinizing is the last resort. I would also like to see at least 50% of the tribunal members be someone who works with dogs and understand k9 behaviour. Then the undereducated general population is represented, as well as the k9 educated population. All animals need a chance, and breed specific bylaws are unfair and unkind to our society. It's been said here that Pitbulls do not represent the highest number of bites. Let's address the problem as a whole and not target one breed because they can be strong.... well so can a shepherd. The stigma around pitbulls is unfair and biased by those who are uneducated.
- Democratic and fair elections for the tribunal with regular turn over and accountability
- Why is it assumed when a dog bites somebody, that it is the dogs fault. Could a human possibly been trying to harm it? These questions have ridiculous options as possible answers.
- There would need to be a proper selection process for the individuals on the tribunal.
- That the reason they are aggressive is looked over before the dog itself is punished
- Is not using breed specific guidelines/language
- The dog is not mandated to remain in a shelter.
- I would support a tribunal as long as the first instinct was not to euthanize but to attempt any other method of training possible.
- It is done through consultation with a dog behaviour specialist.
- Educated individuals were at the helm of this tribunal Not those that have a cross to burn !
- Do not euthanize the dog because that's murder
- There be a fair representation on the committee.
- I think there needs to be a vet and a behavioral specialist. Much like humans, dogs need to be rehabilitated after these instances because they are also acting out of fear
- Look at the history of the animal and what circumstances led to the offense
- The owner and the dog go through training. It is important to train a human so they can have a healthy household for a dog
- There is sufficient time to appeal any decisions to euthanize a dog.
- Those who are assigned to the tribunal are qualified and unbiased
- That the members of the tribunal are unbiased in regards to breeds, have accurate knowledge of what a reasonable pet owner is, they have accurate knowledge of what a trained dog, regardless of breed, looks like, and are capable of looking at the facts in the case and make an impartial decision
- Really looking into the case and the details of the case before making the decision to euthanize.

- That every single detail of the incident was taken into account
- No specific breeds there are also instances where the dog is overly provoked or someone comes onto the dogs property are the dog is protecting its owners there needs to be a full evaluation of the whole situation and the owners responsibility. Neglectful owners need to be held responsible but there are situations where it's not necessarily the dog or the owner's fault
- Members of the tribunal have dog of similiar breed to offending animals.
- The tribunal is made up of people who are familiar with animal Behavior (eg. veterinarians)
- Dog can be kept at home while tribunal takes place, Non-euthanasia interventions are emphasized
- Members of tribunal are knowledgeable of dog behaviour and psychology, and not individuals who have preconceived negative bias against certain breeds.
- Is fair
- Unbiased. Should have a veterinary professional on the tribunal.
- No bias for dog breed or size. Consider euthanizing to be the very last resort, after multiple offences and no attempt made by the owner to rehabilitate. Or, an alternative to euthanizing could be sending the dog to a rehabilitation center to have proper training (then can be adopted by a different owner)
- People have the option to fight their decision in court
- Animal professional must be involved.
- The owner's ability to raise a non-violent dog is also assessed. Is it nature or nurture?
- The people selected are knowledgeable and impartial.
- Involves 2 parities
- no one against any type of animal (biased) is allowed to serve.
- The tribunal that is hired is an animal expert
- The Tribunal follows advice by an animal behaviour specialist and/or a veterinarian
- The tribunal be made up of unbiased representatives who are properly informed on the nature of these dogs, and the ability of the owners to provide the proper care and rehabilitation, if required.
- V
- Euthanasia needs to be carried out after a behaviour analysis. Not just put them down,
- Recognize that it's not the breed of dog that's inherently dangerous, but the way the dogs are bred and raised that is problematic. Not all pit bulls are aggressive and dangerous, only those that are trained to be are, and not all pit bulls should be punishment for th mistakes of a few awful humans.
- Euthanization should not be a decision determined by a tribunal
- All parties are involved. Fair process where all get to say thoughts. Euthanasia is final option after it has been found that training and other options have been completed.
- It is focused on rehabilitation for the dog and training requirements for the owner. Dogs should not be getting euthanized.
- I disagree that the dog should be seized and put in a shelter.
- It does not discriminate against any specifics size or breed of dog. A dog bite is a dog bite. Doesn't matter if it's a 2 lb chihuahua or an 80 lb Rottweiler.

- As long as the representatives don't have any prejudice against any dog breeds and peoples origins. Everyone, whether people or pets, should be treated equally.
- Tribunal includes at least one animal health/welfare expert.
- The owners should have a chance to say their side of the story
- Specific guidelines were put in place for making decisions on the animals future. Also, the owners part in the attack should be looked at. Are they responsible and do they truly have the dogs best interests in mind
- They could not pass judgment on a dog being euthanized. This extreme measure, if it must be in place, should only be determined by the court. Ideally euthanizing wouldn't be an option unless aggressive behavior was determined to stem from a untreatable medical condition.
- Yes
- vicious dogs should not be euthanized they should be rehabilitated.
- If is able to be fairly represented for each side
- That it addressed the owners behaviour again dogs get aggressive due to the incompetence of the owner in most cases
- Isn't breed specific the officers look at the situation (dogs and owners behaviour)
- Breed is not a factor. This perpetuates current untrue biases AND statistics. This should be a case by case review opposed to a precedent setting one. If one Chihuahua bites someone you wouldn't just set a precedent that all Chihuahuas will bite someone. Same thing for any other breed. Situational factors are also incredibly important, I've seen people at the dog park swing or kick at other peoples dogs because they are angry or scared (not used to larger breeds) and that is unacceptable! Provocation can be a huge factor.
- Do not enable euthanization
- The people on the tribunal are diverse and change often. They should also have people who are dog behavior experts and/or work with animals consistently on the tribunal.
- Knowledgable and fair people on tribunal no bias Situation why bite occurred should be fairly and truthfully accessed. Dog bites for a reason which must be looked at
- That the tribunal consists of past animal control personnel, professional dog handlers — police, government (NOT pet dog trainers)
- It's fair and unbiased
- Dog breed can't be considered. They must look at all the factors to decide.
- if the members of the tribunal are not biased against pit bull type dogs, are pet owners, and are educated on bsl pros and cons.. too many people are ignorant of how pit bulls are and are biased against them due to unfair misrepresentation in the media
- No breed discrimination
- it involved owners of same breed were on tribunal
- Review the actual case, not just scrutinized based on the dog being a pit bull
- Tribunal members are able to be removed from the position if they repeatedly make bad decisions (i.e., if tribunal members are continually too lenient on dogs or owners who proceed to reoffend, then the tribunal member should be deemed ineffective and removed from the position)

- The tribunal contains people who are educated in dog behavior
- The dog does not stay in a shelter. It goes home while everything gets sorted out
- That it's headed by a veterinary, trainer, or otherwise expert organization on dog behavior
- It must be fair and someone knowledgeable but third party so there is no bias towards owner dog or bylaw officers.
- No euthanasia
- Pet experts like vets and dog trainers were on the tribunal
- no clear prejudice
- The tribunal comprises professional and experienced dog behaviourist. Must be impartial. Only place recommendations
- The members of the tribunal were qualified and do not have a history of over euthanizing
- There isn't a bias against breeds
- Pitbulls are not to be judged differently from other dogs.
- Are comprised of veterinary doctors and trainers who have experience with dogs
- The tribunal was ONLY made up of dog trainers, dog rescue coordinators, and other people who directly work with dogs and KNOW what they are talking about. Absolutely no Karen's from Suzy's school just because Karen wants a say.
- educating the pet owners on proper training and socialization of their pets.
- The bully breed wouldn't be discriminated against or any breed
- Individuals qualified to assess the dog and provide education (if required).
- No biases against specific breeds of dog, only on the actions of the dog
- It's following a fair process
- Got the opinion of a professional trainer
- They do not have the authority to issue immediate kill orders.
- Dogs declared a nuisance get a second shot before being euthanized, taken away and put in the hands of a responsible dog trainer/ foster. If they are still aggressive after a time then do what's needed
- If there were more information regarding the treatment of the animal and decision making process.
- There is no breed discrimination among those on the tribunal
- They are aware of the problems in accusing "pit bulls"
- A veterinarian/animal behaviour specialist was part of the tribunal. Too many dog attacks are misunderstood and the larger dog can be blamed easily by people who do not know or understand dog behaviour and warning signs (eg: a dog that growls is not aggressive- it's telling the person/dog it's uncomfortable with the situation they are in, people often think it means the dog is bad and that dog is blamed when it is actually only doing what is normal and natural warning behaviour).
- Not breed biased

- To consult with actual dog behaviour trainers who utilize science based training methods. There need to be educated persons involved who know behaviours of dogs and why they would have happened.
- They take all factors into consideration-was the “victim” provoking the dog? Did the dog feel threatened? Was the dog protecting their owner or someone else? Were there witnesses? Etc.
- This is used for repeat offender dogs. Single incidences are not a clear indicator that an animal is aggressive.
- Absolutely no bias against the dog- this would need to be consistently demonstrated. Avoid euthanasia at all costs. And not using this procedure to rush a process through that might need time.
- That there is adequate support/defence for the dog. All reasonable measures to be taken BEFORE euthanized (such as possible relocation or mandated training for both owner and dog.)
- If it's for all dogs not just pit breeds
- As long as the tribunal includes at least one animal behaviourist that is certified as such.
- They did not discriminate based on breed. (No harsher punishments because it's a pit bull, etc).
- Had a fair judgment of the animal, no biased going into it and representation from ordinary Calgarians.
- The reviewers did not show bias to bullies/pitbulls anymore or less than other breeds. Also, provided the euthanizing dogs isn't handed out like candy.
- A genuine and unbiased opinion towards ALL breeds.
- Representatives must have unbiased opinions on “vicious” dog breeds. ie. owners of said vicious dogs and owners of opposite.
- That the tribunal representatives are professional dog trainers or vets, dog rescue management, or long-time responsible owners of these aforementioned (BSL) breeds of dogs.
- There is always a vet and/or dog trainer included in the tribunal to provide their professional insight. A city of Calgary employee or others who have an opinion, rather than an educated input, have no business being part of a tribunal.
- Determine and review restrictions placed on a dog
- Not to destroy the animal on breed alone
- dogs well being should be considered highly and euthanization should not be an option. Rather owners should be trained and go to obedience classes and if that does not work, dogs should be removed from irresponsible owners and put up for adoption for another chance.
- Must have a spokesperson for the animals a non partisan representative like a rescue -- a credible rescue like CB Rescue foundation
- To be fair and non judgemental
- Representatives need to be impartial, qualified and accountable. Their credentials and decision making should be made public record.
- Review if the other party has fault
- They are all fair towards pit bull type dogs!!
- Not based on breed.

- It is run/governed by appropriately qualified behaviour/animal behaviour experts who are entitled to an opinion on such a subject.
- Euthanasia is not a must
- Engage with animal experts for each case
- A fair panel and not one with placements of people who will decide exactly what the city wants.
- Prejudices about breed is expressly forbidden and focus is on owner, not dog.
- Having a vet be the deciding factor not a random person that doesn't know anything about dogs and behaviours
- if the animal has bitten more than once it should be taken away and euthenised
- Heavy training to ensure these cases aren't simply sent to euthanasia due to the tribunal's laziness or bias against a certain breed.
- If it had an unbiased jury based system
- Euthanasia only as a humane option where medically necessary as determined by a veterinarian
- It's an unbiased result for what should be done. Not a decision that's affected by false fear
- No layperson should decide if an animal should be euthanized. A team of 2 vets and 2 animal behaviourists should make the decision.
- Release the dog back to the owners and have it only be allowed on their property
- No prejudice towards certain breeds of dog.
- Assess whether the owner is wholly responsible for the dogs behaviour ie soending long hours alone or on chain with no cance of social interaction. I feel owner should be held more responsible
- The breed of dog is not considered during the tribunal just the actions of the dog.
- As long as dogs aren't targeted by breed and all are given a fair trial I see no issues with this, but keep in mind small dogs can be a nuisance as well.
- Bit specific to dog breed
- The tribunal had people with extensive dog behavior experience/training and were familiar with wgat dogs were bad dogs versus bad owners
- The owners have ample time to appeal while the dog is still not in a shelter
- Anyone sitting on the tribunal should be an unbiased individual, such as not being someone with a previous team am related to a vicious dog, or having a fear of dogs.
- Fair, multi faceted group consisting of vets, pet trainers, dog handlers and proffessionals that see where possible areas could be improved upon helping both owner and dog. There are no bad dogs, just bad owners.
- Proof that the Tribunal is truly unbiased.
- the tribunal
- An objective assessment without the automatic assumption of euthanasia
- As long as there are individuals who own "pit bulls" (or as you classify them) and are knowledgeable about dog behaviour are also present to help make a decision
- Members of the tribunal have the necessary qualifications to make these determinations and follow the same standards as the provincial court

- Pit bulls were treated like other dogs because it is insane you guys think pit bulls should be treated differently than any other dog... It's actually infuriatingly sad
- Different staff/stakeholder rotating through in case of bias towards specific breeds or owners
- No dumb asses allowed in it
- Multiple professional dog behaviourist are on the tribunal and people who are not biased by breed
- N/A
- They have experience with dogs
- The appeal process must not be allowed to be used as a tool to delay a ruling. Too many defendants would disrespect the tribunal in favor of an appeal in order to waste provincial resources
- It should be made up of veterinarians and dog trainers who can professionally assess the situation and the animal
- Qualified people sitting on the tribunal
- If the people on the tribunal could also identify if the animal is inhabitable even with a different owner - is it the dog or the owner. Animals shouldn't pay for the sins of the owner.
- obedience training instead of euthanasia 100%
- It was fair
- Decision to euthanize a dog should still go to provincial court
- How about listen to the owner because I guarantee they know why the dog felt they needed to protect themselves. Dogs just dont attack just because.
- The dog remains confined to the owners home awaiting the tribunal as shelters stress dogs and can cause more harm
- The members of the tribunal should have appropriate animal experience (trainers, Humane society employees, etc.)
- Dog should be euthanized if demonstrating aggressive behaviour.
- That well versed/trained persons ie dog trainers, animal behaviourists or others well trained in dog behaviours make up the tribunal
- Charge the owner for not being responsible
- No one is prejudiced against bully breeds
- several in depth investigations and home visits
- As long as they are willing to work and get the dog the right help and not just jump to putting the dog down. Also look at maybe not allowing that owner to own any dog for a certain amount of time.
- Needs to be agreed by offender and victim
- Like a jury, we're not biased to certain breeds, have a dislike of dogs, know the owner etc
- No pre-conceived bias towards certain breeds.
- A canine expert such as a trainer or veterinarian be on the panel
- The tribunal would work with the pet owner in determining the right course of action, depending on the seriousness of the case
- Had a veterinarian familiar to the dog sit on the panel, or have an animal behavioral specialist asses the dog to see if it is retrainable or if it should be taken from the owners and retrained

- Fair decision made and not make a quick, easy decision because it's less effort
- As long as it was fair and not based on erroneous information, like the fallacy that "pit bulls" have a uniquely strong force to their bites.
- They were educated in breed behaviors and the breed was not disclosed as it does not matter.
- They need all the facts and if it's a first time offence the dog shouldn't be put down but the owner fined and or the dog placed in a different home. Training could be provided as well for the dog.
- Experienced dog owners, unbiased to breed, common sense persons who have no conflict of interest, chosen as members of the tribunal.
- Tribunal must include Dog owners
- It's not based slanted biases toward ANY breed.
- I am not educated in legal procedures, but tribunal sounds like a good idea because of increased efficiency. However, this tribunal system should operate through the same procedures used by provincial court.
- Balanced representation including those without breed specific opinions/leanings.
- No euthanization
- No conflict of interest with non city representatives
- The panel includes professionals in the dog industry with no biases. The accused and victim can retain lawyers.
- Not to euthanize dogs
- The Representatives makes decisions not clouded by personal bias
- Depending on severity of attack. If attack is vicious in nature, or life threatening, dog should be euthanized.
- No bias tribunals
- The people involved in the tribunal are trained. Knowledgeable, and experienced with dogs and not just lay people.
- Decisions can be appealed in court
- Has professional animal behaviouralists who have met and assessed the animals
- Both parties have enough time and financial means of financial help to prepare for the tribunal
- I would support this option if the tribunal consists of people experienced in administrative law to reduce bias
- Take into account whether the dog was trained by the owner. If not, the owner should be held responsible. Not the dog.
- That it listen to both sides of the story. Would hate to see dogs euthanized in certain circumstances where they don't deserve it
- As long as it was a system that had representatives that didn't promote discrimination against breeds.
- We need to have people who will genuinely treat each dog differently based solely on there own circumstances and not on biased opinions based on stereotypes. Also small vicious should be treated the same as big dogs

- The representation at the tribunal is chosen through a transparent and equitable process
- The selection of the tribunal consists of a wide variety of personalities and opinions on dogs.
- Required timelines for making a decision so the dog is not kept locked up because of bureaucracy.
- The tribunal panel must be open to an appeal process (no summary executions) and outside review for bias.
- More information on time frame and process needed.
- the concept of appeals to Queen's bench, seems like a lengthy process and would lengthen or at least make the same amount of time to process as current?
- an understanding of dog behaviour and what factors contributed
- DON'T TARGET BREED SPECIFIC DOGS. Target shit owners that didn't do their research before adding a dog to their family.
- Any dog that bites a person will have restrictions applied !!! Stop talking about trauma to the dog and consider the victim of the bite.
- breed is not included
- Able to appeal to provincial court
- Done in an efficient manor
- Independent appeals process. Also if they have the power to decide on euthanization one tribunal member must have a veterinary background which would have veto powers over euthanization.
- any vicious animal who has drawn blood should be euthanized
- The owner of the dog is disciplined for being a bad pet owner
- review restrictions to abide to keep animal, depends on the owner.
- I was attacked by a goose, where can I press charges?
- As long as dog has alternative options of waiting in a kennel as this will cause more stress to the dog.
- No dog owners, vets, dog breeders or anyone connected with dogs to sit on the tribunal.
- The owner being responsible to remediate behaviour. The dog is not the problem. Responsible owners ensure good dogs.
- It was followed through accordingly
- Attempt rescue of dog and rehabilitation in a non-traumatic and safe place before considering euthanasia.
- The city tries to rehab the dog before they talk about killing it, you then charge the owner and have them pay for the rehab.
- Tribunal's priority MUST be public health and safety. It must not attempt to "balance" the public's right to safety with one individual's supposed "right" to keep their dangerous dog
- Viewing the level of knowledge and training the owner is able to successfully provide to the dog.
- First offense only.
- it should be made up of people who do not discriminate against any specific breed or person
- That the owner has the choice to bring it to court if they do not agree with the decision made.
- Need enforced

- Don't discriminate against pit bulls. A dog's behaviour is a reflection of the training and owner.
- At least 1 Dog trainer and/or specialist who understand dog behaviour should be a required seat on the tribunal. Evaluating the owner's behaviour as much as the dog's.
- Adequate time be given to the owner to prepare. Animals be provided with rehabilitation outside of the owner's control
- Dog should be released to owner as long as owner can abide by conditions and ensure dog does not escape or cause harm.
- Appropriate qualifications for those sitting on tribunal.
- Not being biased by breed
- The tribunal should include professionals such as a veterinarian, veterinary technician, Calgary humane employee, etc.
- Nice having options
- The dog remains in their home and in their yard until the court case unless muzzled and on leash in the care of someone 18 or older.
- As long as it's not a biased group
- Take pit bulls off this survey!
- The tribunal should involve dog behavior experts and a member of the veterinary community along with citizens and bylaw officers.
- As long as the non-city members were educated or experienced animal experts and not general citizens.
- They could be appealed
- Tribunal members must be certified dog trainers or have other specific expertise in assessing the animal's temperament and potential for rehabilitation/training.
- There needs to be trainers and dog behavior experts on the tribunal.
- This tribunal would have to be comprised of professionals AND who can fairly assess the circumstances surrounding the bite. Suggestions: Certified veterinary behaviourist, Certified dog trainers etc. Surrounding conditions of the bite like environmental factors need to be considered. Animals can be placed on quarantine inside the owner's home via agreement with Animal Control Officer vs in a shelter.
- If it was the dog's first bite and the situation causing the bite. Eg. Other dog comes onto property
- As long as the tribunal consisted of trained professionals i.e., vets.
- FACTS are taken into consideration and a balanced view is taken.
- People who are experts (have professional history) in related field and elected by the public.
- Dependent on the membership of the Tribunal representatives. Vets, animal caregivers involved not only City employees.
- That it is fair and equal in its tribunal selection. It needs responsible pet owners of multiple breeds, not government bureaucracy.
- I think the dog should remain in the household until a verdict is determined.

- Owners are held legally responsible for the actions of their dogs, punishments/fines etc. are too light at present.
- A professional veterinarian or dog behaviour expert be included in all tribunals
- as treated that makes it bite .
- The tribunal contains at least two registered dog trainers in that it can be impartial and It can be determined if the home is fit for the animal or if it would benefit from new ownership.
- The owner and dog have the opportunity to demonstrate their training and behaviour in an outdoor setting.
- As long as the tribunal was unbiased
- The tribunal is made up of a combination of community members- general public, vet, animal behaviourist, bylaw ext. Not just represented by a single faction
- People on the tribunal actually have knowledge of dogs (ie: vets, vet techs, dog trainers)
- If People wouldnt narrow in on a breed of animal and hopefully will realize that is not the breed of the dog its the type of it the environment and improper training they have had.
- Has trained animal behaviourists and has evidence the dog can not be rehabilitated.
- thought for rehabilitation must come prior to euthanasia.
- Members of the tribunal have veterinary representatives. Understanding of the behaviour was aggressive due to medical, behavioural or situational reasons will save animals from being euthanized from lack of training.
- Provocation must be taken into consideration. I.e. under no circumstance should kids ever be allowed to run up to a dog, hug a dog, etc. If there is any provocation the dog MUST not be euthanized
- That it was the first offence and the dog didn't have previous complaints of aggressive behaviours.
- The dog is not taken away from its owner and the situation of the dog's actions is scrutinized (eg. was the person antagonizing they animal (provoked or unprovoked)
- must have neutral parties
- They weren't against Pitbulls in any form or influenced by media against Pitbull type dogs
- Opportunities for cases to be questioned and challenged for special cases.
- I would support this, so long as there are NOT ANY political party members present in any shape or form. Animal behaviour specialists, veterinarians, and other professionals engaged in the wellbeing of animals should be, as to limit the use of the outcomes of these trials for personal gain.
- That the dog is not euthanized
- That there is a 1 strike rule for biting.
- Members of the Calgary humane society and behavior veterinarians are active participants on the tribunal. Humans are quick to judge dogs they don't like, or don't want around, but their judgement doesn't mean that dog is bad. The circumstances, human owners, conditions of incidents should all be relevant and considered in a situation of a misconduct. More often than not, it's not the dogs fault and more often than not, it's not a pit bull type, so placing judgement with bias is a very wrong approach to supporting a safe community and creation responsible pet ownership.
- Appeal process

- It included knowledgeable members (ie. senior shelter staff) with knowledge of large dog types. And in particular a balance of members for breeds like pit bulls.
- Dog kept on owners property
- Does not have authority to euthanize
- It doesn't tie up the courts for more serious offences done by people
- The tribunal must consist of individuals who are not predisposed to penalizing specific breeds.
- The tribunal must not have persons and it that have bias towards certain breeds. It should in fact have at least one or two owners of pit bull type breeds involved with it
- no breed specific legislation
- It was bi partisan and no one with an agenda can be on the committee
- It is not biased to bsl and no bsl supporters are allowed to be on a tribunal
- Judged on behaviour, not breed.
- Dogs out all size be considered equally thank you
- Tribunal members should receive training from professionals regarding animal behaviours. This will allow them to focus on specific animal behaviours and not judging by breed.
- Dog stays at owners home, not off property
- Not a pensionable position
- They could not decide if a dog should be euthanized.
- Make sure the the tribunal has at least two veterinarians (including one with additional training in veterinary behaviour and fear free certified)
- Any non city representatives would be well educated in animal behaviour & handling. Eg. trained animal behaviourist, Veterinarian etc. It should not be in the hands of just anyone to determine if a dog should be euthanized. Input should come from a trained animal care/ veterinary professional.
- It is totally unbiased. There is huge prejudice against "bully breeds" and I worry that this would just cause those dogs to be euthanized faster.
- The dog is heavily assessed to see if they are actually aggressive or vicious before euthanizing, or the owner needs to agree to not have the animal out in public again or is heavily fined. I think every situation is very different and needs to be done on a case by case basis
- The breed of dog is exempt from the description to the tribunal to prevent undue bias.
- If the tribunal contains adequate representation from an organization like the Calgary Humane Society.
- As the tribunal was filled with a fair subset of members that are knowledgeable with dogs. Not greasy politicians.
- I think dangerous dogs should be dwalt with quicklu
- The group is made up of dog experts and not just random members of the community
- Seems fair.
- As long as there is no bias regarding the breed of the dog.
- some dogs are bugged by kids or toddlers who just wants to look or touch the dog.....if the dog bites then no it should not be euthanized

- Any decision made by the tribunal must be in full agreement with the victim.
- Legal representation was included, event and character witnesses could be called, and the victim could be questioned by both the tribunal and the accused party's lawyer to ensure due process.
- It needs to be fair for ALL dogs that bite. Not just put bull-breed types.
- I would need to know how the tribunal is chosen and what they're motive for sitting in the tribunal was to ensure fairness to both parties
- Qualified experts on the tribunal who are properly trained
- No breed specific targets. The only dogs that have ever bit me were a collie and great pyrenees
- Dogs should not be euthanized!
- It would be guaranteed as fair and non biased be certain dog breeds
- Must include various groups such as purebred advocates, trainers, I.e. not like a jury stacked with animal rights advocates etc.
- I agree with the tribunal, as long as there is substantial research done on the situation. Yes I agree that there are dogs(non breed specific) that are viscous. But also there are bites caused by lack of education by the public. I myself have had people rush at my dog, just because she's cute, and grab to pet her without asking my permission. This has tramatized my dog to the point where if there are people out and about, she tries to run home. It's become quite difficult to take her for a walk. Other dogs may nip or bite out of fear or self defense. This is needs to be investigated case by case.
- That they have authority to euthanize or impose fines the same as provincial court
- As long as wait time and trauma to the dog are decreased.
- The owner and dog are given a chance to deal with the issue with training and a professional animal behaviorlist is brought to assess the animal and witness statements of the incident are taken into serious consideration of the events that took place.
- As the animal owner has an oppportunity to appeal before euthanization.
- As the animal owner has an oppportunity to appeal before euthanization.
- As the owner has an oppportunity to appeal before animal is euthanized
- NO second chances for any dog that kills another dog or other pet. NO second chance for any dog that causes severe damage. NO second chance for any dog that attacks unprovoked; I'm not talking about a warning nip. I'm talking about a full-out attack launched at a person for no reason whatsoever, where the dog clearly takes it too far. This would include scenarios where the dog may not have made contact due to the person jumping on a car etc, but it was clear that the dog intended to do as much damage as possible and could not be called off or deflected from the intended attack.
- The animal owner has an oppportunity to before being euthanized
- Who it is made up of.
- Wait on euthanization. Train the dog to be gentle,it can be done!
- As long as the representatives making tribunal decisions include a vet and specialist in dog behavior
- I wouldn't want to see the dog suffer for too long, speed up the process
- The non city member needs to be impartial.

- Two or more dog behaviourists be part of the panel, as well as two veterinarians and an expert in the breed of dog being assessed, as well as representatives of no kill rescue shelters or sanctuaries be part of the panel as well.
- As long as the tribunal is staffed by true experts and not those motivated by sentiment ie. so-called dog-rescuers and people inclined towards importing diseased, unsocialized and aggressive breeds to Canada.
- Depending on who exactly would be on tribunal
- Yes
- They do not euthanize nuisance dogs but penalize the owner
- As long as rehabilitation for the dog was offered.
- Have a member with a legal background and be unbiased as to euthanization.
- Members of the public and professional dog trainers are apart of the process
- Fair way to choose the members of the tribunal
- Limited the shelter time to max 30 or have the dog in question fostered with a registered “safe house”.
- Any dog that bites is a problem dog and specific breeds should not be labelled a problem without having shown cause ; it is the owner that raised them. One strike you're out ... even that cute little yapping poodle. perhaps ban more people from having dogs if there is a problem.
- No tribunal
- The people determining the outcome must be qualified, unbiased and dog owners. They should also be mixed genders for rounded perspective.
- Actual animal experts are the majority. Animal attacks are very seldom simple situations and many factors can play into a situation going bad. We need people with knowledge of these factors and experience dealing with them before and after.
- I think reducing wait and shelter time is important for both the victim and the animal. My concern is the breed specific breed legislation. I disagree with that.
- Consultation with certified animal Behaviourists and/or veterinary Behaviourists. Dog guardians need to have access to positive dog training classes.
- Everyone on the tribunal is correctly educated on up-to-date science re: animal behaviour and no one on the tribunal expresses any biases towards specific breeds of dogs.
- The people on the tribunal had extensive knowledge and understanding of ALL breeds and were not biased
- Animal health industry workers. People making decisions need to be knowledgeable
- Did not make a decision based on breed, but rather individual circumstance.
- Choose the member the same way as jury duty random people chosen by chance
- There were consequences if the terms were not met
- As long as it cannot be appealed in court otherwise you are just adding another layer/cost and waste of time
- Those presiding are not prejudiced against certain dog breeds

- At least one member of the tribunal is well-versed in dog behavioural issues and would be able to recommend appropriate rehabilitation/rehoming for animals who attack as a result of human abuse/neglect/
- That it would consider the rehab potential of the animal if it had the right owner
- Those on the tribunal are educated about animals specifically and meet the qualifications
- Licenced dog behaviourist and veterinary were on this tribunal at a minimum. These decisions cannot be made on emotions
- I don't agree that any animal should be taken away from their owner/home unless the animal is being abused/mistreated in the home. I also don't agree with any animal being put down.
- The dog stays in their own home and has to offend more than once.
- How many people would be in this tribunal? Who would be? I think there should be pit bull advocates on the tribunal
- Take the extra time to monitor the animals behaviours and the owners behaviour. Don't jump to conclusions and face the facts fully. If a dog is involved in an incident. Look at ALL factors leading up to it. What if the victim of the bite or attack was disrupting and pushing the animals buttons? They're just like humans. Push them long enough and they can lose their cool
- More information is necessary about what kind of people will staff this tribunal. How are these people going to be chosen? What qualifications would they have in order to ensure humane and objective decisions?
- There should be no bias in its final decision.
- There was no BSL.
- The dogs would be allowed to return to their home, if certain conditions are met. Providing the previous owner wasn't abusive
- Include dog behaviour/trainer experts in decisions. Nuisance dogs are the owners fault/lack of proper training.
- None of the chosen representatives have openly supported or opposed the pit bull issue.
- would stiff fines be in their power?
- I think a tribunal is a good idea as long as half the members are from pro dog organization like the humane society or justice for bullies(a calgary based Facebook group). Also I dont believe you need to prosecute any specific breeds harsher. It should be the owners that should be held responsible.
- the tribunal had high ranking staff member or dog behaviouralist from either AARC's, humane society, or another local animal rescue organization.
- the dogs must each get a file that is updated online to help provide stats on the types of dogs who harm/bite, as well as be able to address a dog who has been to tribunal before. It would also be important to take down owner information to see if a specific owner has a history at tribunal; if so they should not be allowed to adopt/breed/possess any kind of dog
- No euthanizing. More training required and rules followed if deemed a viscous dog. Again not breed specific
- It takes into account what provoked the dog to bite, has experienced trainers to assess the situation, and focusses on rehabilitation or what do you can do to correct the dog rather than euthanizing

- The decisions are binding if all parties agree to process the case through the tribunal. If not binding, then this seems like a costly and ineffective initiative.
- Euthanasia was absolute last resort, and mandatory training was implemented first
- If the tribunal considered opportunities for dog rehabilitation instead of euthanization- dogs who exhibit aggressive/vicious behaviour should be given an opportunity for behavioural improvement. Dogs often do not exhibit positive behaviours in confined/kennel-like environments. Assessments should consider the environment that the dog is in before presuming that they should be euthanized and that there is no hope for them.
- The owner should be VETTED, to ensure they are putting the animal into situations for their own BENEFIT!
- Mostly accredited dog training/veterinary professionals sit on it.
- Not penalizing a specific breed and only using tribunal decisions based on record, charged, dog bites.
- Dogs should stay with their owners, especially if this was a first time case. The dog may have been simply protecting himself or the owner. It would be more confusing and traumatizing for the dog to be kept in an unknown environment and therefore providing inconclusive and unjust analysis of the dogs behaviour. Can you imagine euthanizing an animal based on poor judgement? People need to be responsible, and need to be educated on how to care for their animals. Having them is a privilege. Both of my pitbulls have been attacked several times, by cocker spaniels, chihuahuas, huskies, golden retrievers and labs. Most of these are “family dogs” no? Then explain to me why the city is entertaining the idea of banning, muzzling, additional cost for insurance on dogs that have never attacked or bitten back. I’m the one spending money every month and time daily boosting their confidence back up because they’re scared, cry, and whimper when any dog approaches them now. But here we are focusing on one breed that “has a more damaging bite”. Shame on you Calgary. Your lack of education and ignorance, and support of BSL is absolutely embarrassing!!!!!! I would trust my child with my 2 pits before I put them in any other dogs care. I am disgusted that we are even ENTERTAINING this. SHAME!!!
- To not be bias based on breed and only look at the facts in each individual case leaving the breed of each dog out of it
- Providing that it is fair and UNBIASED not all bully breeds are bad and it’s usually the owner not the dogs fault
- It includes all breeds of dogs
- Paid for by owner of dog declared nuisance.
- There are an equal number of people having both for and against persuasions for such dogs on the tribunal: i.e., it cannot be one-sided.
- Any dog “convicted” of a crime whose owner wishes to appeal at the Court of Queens Bench be released back in the owner’s possession until the official court date and a final verdict reached.
- MUST include veterinarianS or veterinary technologistS on the panel. Must be held within 7 days.
- I would like to see an animal behavioral specialist or a veterinarian on the tribunal for every case to ensure no bias against the dog.

- As long as the dog doesn't get euthanized.
- Treat all dogs equally as one breed should not be subject to special orders
- The tribunal members have a good understanding of dogs and focus on the owner rather than the breed.
- No stereotypes of dog breeds
- The animal can remain with its owner. And since there is no space to add thoughts on the above questions, please stop coming for the pit bulls. Too often these dogs pay for the sins of shitty owners.
- Tribunal should be a pet owner committee so there is no biased opinions against the animal
- There is a knowledgeable team set up who can honestly and unbiased decisions can be made.
- These people must be well trained, so they don't default to putting dogs down unless it's absolutely necessary
- members of the tribunal are qualified
- The owners should face more responsibility in their dogs behavior, less focus on the dog and more focus on the owners. Dogs should still be reviewed, but more focus on the owners and how they have trained and care for their dogs.
- Using animal trainers, separately from city reps and Calgary Humane Society
- Time spent waiting dog should be educated to see how it reacts. Insurance is a joke and should not be forced unless insurance is forced to actually insure not exempt and change policy and yours doesn't count, corporate scam
- All incidents are treated equally and dog breed is not a consideration
- Tribunal should include canine behaviour experts
- .
- Depending on the situation should be either or. Would be excellent on lower level cases to keep the small stuff from the courts
- harsh punishment handed out to owner, potential referral to criminal court for proceedings.
- Animal owner to cover court costs and animals stays in custody of animals control until hearing.
- They are fair and impartial. People have such misconceptions around dogs and dog bites. Euthanasia of an animal should be a last resort. And the animal should be assessed by actual experts and trainer. Not currently bylaw officers who have no training and are biased.
- That the owner would be given opportunities to restrain or retrain the dog in some other manner.
- The process is objective and there are no breed specific restrictions. I do not support singling a particular breed.
- Members of such a tribunal should be very familiar with dogs and their behavior. Since dogs are not the problem, there should be every opportunity for the dog to be rehabilitated before being euthanized.
- The tribunal cannot be more than 3 people, and it should be disbanded if the annual cost exceeds $100,000

- They take into account situations ; if a dog bites because someone trespassed, the dog should not be euthanized. If a dog bites because it was provoked, they should take that into consideration as well
- as long as it is not breed bias.
- As long as the tribunal had the wellbeing of the dog as a high priority
- Membership was composed of highly trained dog behavioural specialists. The panel must be balanced and all bias removed.
- It was taken into consideration the dog owners ability to train the dog correctly
- Should be optional and based on the situation
- Each case has to be assessed on its merits.
- The owners have a voice
- No euthanizing.
- that if shown that a person was aggressive or taunted a dog to become vicious be held responsible for all costs of having the dog locked up at animal services
- Look at each case objectively and not just assume that a certain breed is more vicious than another
- It is not bias towards specific dog breeds and takes into consideration the individual dog.
- Is fully paid for by dog owners and not taxpayers.
- All dog breeds are treated as equal
- Qualified and knowledgeable people about pet behavior are involved
- The tribunal would be experienced and highly qualified.
- Any tribunal would need to be staffed by neutral third parties with some level of relevant qualification
- Careful and balanced representation on the tribunal. Clear conflict of interest guidelines for tribunal members.
- Yea
- Troubled dogs are not euthanized, instead they are worked with by dog training professionals
- No city staff involved, only animal experts to be panelled
- At least one dog training professional expert present.
- If a dog bites more then once and it must be proven beyond reasonable doubt which dog did the biting.
- determine and review conditions which owner would need to abide by. Better than having a bunch of "think they know it alls" deciding the future of your pet.
- I do not support euthanization. I'm sure there are other options rather than a cruel quick fix that can traumatize an owner for a long time. If we don't euthanize people for their (intensional) cruel attacks, then why do it to a dog who has proven to be more Loyal than the majority of humans.
- The tribunal has people who do not discriminate against breeds, includes trained professionals/specialists in the areas of dog behaviour (I.e trainers) to ensure animals are not judged unjustly with biases (such as what is displayed with the wording and elements of this survey- I.e anti "pitbulls" or other breed specific discrimination)
- A property check is done to the home is the animal as well

- I would want to see specific criteria about who is represented on the panel to ensure a balanced assessment (ie. - not only 'pure positive trainers as these trainers do not produce good outcomes when addressing problem behaviours. I would also want a balanced trainer represented - they get results with problem dogs.
- People unhappy with the decision can still have their day in court or some method of appeal. So many of your boards and commissions are so corrupt, I have a hard time trusting them as a final authority.
- Injury to other living being caused by the dog.
- Euthanasia is a last resort for multiple offenders
- euthanasia must not be a consideration under any standard for other than the quality of life of the dog. dogs deemed vicious in manner that control or retraining is completely inapplicable must be surrendered to a specialized care facility where they cannot hurt others and their own safety and welfare is guaranteed.
- A vet assess the or behaviour assessment on the dog
- Decision would be made without breed bias.
- That the people on the tribunal actually have dog behaviour expertise. Not people who are uneducated about animals or "pit bull" haters.
- Educated and diverse representatives in the tribunal.
- Appropriate qualifications for those sitting on the tribunal.
- It included animal behaviourists, not just community members.
- The non city representative would need to be an educated animal behaviourist
- It does not discriminate against a dog's breed and base harsher punishments on pitbulls or dogs resembling pitbulls. The only premise for quicker handling of cases should be a history of the dog being a nuisance or previous/repeated aggressive behaviour
- Members of the tribunal should be people with a history of working with dogs and they must meet an animal and interact with it before they pass a euthanasia order
- A fair set of peers to be used
- It applies equally to all breeds. Any size dog whether small or large is considered dangerous if inadequately socialized/trained. Targeting the pit bull family of dogs is highly irresponsible.
- Yes as this may speed up resolution
- Case by case
- Appropriate qualifications for those sitting on the tribunal.
- ONLY if truly competent and know leader like people are put in place for this tribunal. Cities often do not recognize dog educators and refer to veterinarians who have no education in behaviour.
- There is no breed specific element to the tribunal process. And those on the panel include dog behaviour specialists and veterinarians.
- if the owner had the choice to choose either to go to court or to use the tribunal
- Euthanasia decision can be appealed

- As long as it is not civilians making these decision. Needs to be someone who knows animal behaviour (ie. vets, dog trainers/behaviouralist, etc)
- There are no biases toward breed of the animal being judged
- The breed of dog is not disclosed to the tribunal. Breed prejudice could play a role in outcomes.
- As long as there are trained professionals (veterinarian, trainers etc)
- The breed of the dog was not mentioned and only the events of the include the so ruling were not biased against on breed over another
- Dog is kept away from people & other dogs
- as long as the information regarding the incident was collected and scrutenized case by case
- there has to be a fully qualified vet at minimum on the tribunal to avoid breed specific phobia. Often a bite is caused by someone mishandling the dog or approaching a dog incorrectly etc. A dog most often bites to protect themselves from harm not just to bite unless the owner treats them poorly.
- Increase tags price for breeders a lot, the back yard breeders should be target here. Real breeders are rare but way to many back yard breeders
- At least some of the members of the tribunal need to be certified animal behavioural specialists ex. Vet behaviourists or dog trainers
- The tribunal isn't based on BSL.
- Stayed bias and neutral like a real court.
- That it isn't a lame duck. It needs to have some sort of power in its decision making. I also feel that the owners charged and convictions need to mean something as well. (Ie...no ownership of a dog like that ever again or inability to volunteer around children or vulnerable people if the attack included one of those types of people).
- If the case was fully reviewed - why did the dog attach is it the dogs fault or is it the injured fault
- Need experts on dogs on the panel. Can't just be citizens.
- Takes victims experience and trauma into account
- That dogs not be euthenized based on breed or breed class, that all cases are looked at without bias opinion and are seen on a case by case basis instead of based on likelihood and severity of attack or media propaganda
- Making sure it consists mostly of professional dog trainers and walkers who can properly assess an animal and it's behavior.
- the tribunal is made up of fair minded and dog experienced people
- Both owner and victim have been investigated. People need to know that you just can not walk up to a dog and tease it...
- There were proper representation and non-biased members.
- Not euthanizing the dog
- Qualified, different
- I cant read the full descriptions of these on my mobile phone
- No euthanization
- A group of people that were not against "pit bulls" or big dogs.

- In the hopes the review all process is faster.
- Was there a situation that provoked the dog
- It is not based on dog breed, instead reviewed on a case to case basis
- As long as there can be an independent review board not in anyway associated with the tribunal system. This way the public is protected from apparent bias.
- A thorough investigation to make sure the dog accused is actually the animal responsible
- As long as it was based on proper fact.
- The dog be given an advocate of its own and all persons on the tribunal MUST hold a degree in animal behaviour(not all dog bites are because the dog is bad. There are stupid humans that CAUSE the dog to bite)
- That any dog that has bitten a person or another animal must automatically, with the owner attend dog behavioural retraining classes before the tribunal merits to give the animal the chance at redemption. If the owner does not comply, the animal should be seized, the owner restricted for owning another dog for five years and the seized animal placed in behavioral training at owners cost and adopted out.
- Open, transparent and tribunal is held accountable for decisions.
- I am genuinely concerned of the possible biases that could come through in a tribunal setting. Especially with this current survey being put out, many individuals see bully breeds as more of a threat and therefore more of them would be put down while a similar situation with a different breed would heed different results. Though appealing the decisions at the Court of Queen's Bench is a possibility, I believe a proper education of breeds for those who are part of the tribunal is incredibly important.
- As the tribunal is composed of extremely knowledgeable dog people. Trainers that truly understand dog behaviour. However, this is problematic as in Canada we don't have any real standards/accreditation for trainers. Any Joe Public can say they are a trainer. So I guess any tribunal would be impossible to put together without outlining some very stringent guidelines for what is required of a tribunal member, which would need to be in place 100% before even exploring the option of having a tribunal.
- Place stronger punishment on the owner rather than the dog. Enforce owner training - they are just going to get another dog.
- The incidents of dogs being euthanized does not increase.
- The animal remained in the care of its owner until the end of the hearing. Also, rehabilitation programs are offered for the dogs by experienced third party providers and re-home by dog rescue agencies. Many times it's the owner, not the dogs fault.
- All cases resulting in decision of euthanasia would automatically go to court and never be final.
- Make sure you get both sides of the story fairly. People may lie about teasing a dog before getting bit.
- If it is a severe bite not a nip the animal should be put down.
- No euthanasia rulings (but recommendation for it and then ruled at a higher court)

- As long as there is a voice for the dogs on the tribunal that has experience training bully breeds. there is no need for a bunch of Karen's or Dave's on the tribunal that couldn't care less about animals.
- Treats all breed equally and does not bully Pitbull breeds
- Where killing the dog wasn't the go to recommendation.
- Providing trained professionals (dog experts) are involved in the tribunal devious, especially the ones involving possible euthanization of the dog.
- Education is paramount. Regardless of the subject. If we did a better job shutting down BS backyard breeders then there would be less pups that have been abused and needing help both with social situations and health issues.
- There would be a court order that these dogs who are being investigated for vicious attacks remain on their property and not allowed off-leash outside of it. Obedience training should be the outcome of this as court order. Once training is completed they could be re introduced back to the dog community on-leash and then eventually off-leash
- Animals should not be euthanized for not fitting into the human society. There has to be some other solution for dogs deemed not fit for ownership or life in a house.
- It did not unfairly target Pitbulls
- More weight should be given to the humans that are meant to care for, the animal. More consideration should be give to an animal who has not been socialized with people or other animals.
- As long as it's not breed specific. No higher fines for certain breeds. Decisions must case by case not bias on breed.
- Yes
- Base decisions off of behaviour, not breed.
- Pit bulls were treated the same as any other breed
- Must not be swayed by special interest groups (ex: pit bull importers)
- It focused more on prevention for further issues, such as restrictions.
- No dogs should be euthanized, dog owners should be required to have their dog's complete obedience classes, before they can return to public parks.
- There should be a clearly defined appeal process
- Strictly judge an animal by its behavior and take into consideration if the animal was taunted into the violent reaction.
- Consistency in its rulings
- I don't agree with any breed specific legislation. Dogs are a reflection of there owners behavior not the type of breed.
- The members of the tribunal have experience with dog behaviours/ have completed a training that relates to dog behavioural patterns.
- Punish owners, not animals, and breeds should be treated equally (breed-blind decision-making)
- Dogs could stay out of shelters
- They people on the tribunal are elected, not appointed.

- Members of the tribunal must include at least one animal-friendly lawyer. Appeal should be made first to the tribunal, then to Court of Queen's Bench. Appeal to Court is extremely expensive and may be beyond the reach of the average dog owner.
- People from different walks of life need to be on this tribunal to make decisions, like veterinarians, community leaders etc.
- Must have people who love all dog breeds and judges the owner not the dog.
- Every person on the panel is qualified to properly be able to understand behavior and temperament which also includes the bylaw officers who most often than not are NOT qualified in any way to make such assessments or accurately identify breeds of dogs.
- There could not be more than ONE person on the tribunal that didn't own a dog themselves at the time they were a member; euthanization would ONLY be an option if the owner was found incompetent to properly train the dog, muzzle it in public, pay fines incurred by their dog attacking other dogs or humans, or (most importantly) causing the death of another dog or (God forbid) person.
- No euthanasia orders should come from a tribunals
- Tribunal must be made up of individuals with ongoing personal experience with the breed currently under investigation. There must be NO PERMANENT MEMBERS. Any citizen called to sit on the tribunal would be reimbursed for lost wages based on the provincial average income.
- An animal behavior specialist is a necessity on such a panel. No decisions should be made without the consultation of someone with extensive experience in dog training and behavior evaluation.
- As long as they can be appealed. I support it.
- Looks at the same things as a judge would look at and ensuring that there are no pre-existing biases to those on the tribunal.
- I would want more information before fully supporting.
- All dog types receive equal treatment, regardless of size or breed. The dog owner needs to be punished, not just the dog.
- That dog smart none aggressive people are are involved. Calgary Humane society, AARCS not members of any level of govt
- No breed bias
- I like the idea of a more efficient way to process these incidents. Would need more info on the process and how the process would work to fully support.
- Proper documentation and follow up
- That there are dog experts on the tribunal
- The people chosen for the tribunal are not prejudiced against pit bulls
- the dog is not quarantined while the owner is dealt with in court. Its not always the dogs fault that the owner has not taken the time to train them
- euthanization must take place very quickly in drastic cases
- They start with mandatory training camps for those dogs, to rehabilitate the dogs, other then jumping to euthanizing them.
- Don't bring breed into it. This should be based on severity and behaviors alone.

- The tribunal does not have the authority to order a dog euthanized
- Impartial to the breed of the dog
- Owner should be held accountable for dogs behaviour no matter what kind of breed
- Breed specific terminology and prejudice is removed from all bylaw terminology and responsibility is solely focused on ownership.
- There were extreme considerations made for dogs that were prompted to bite through being mistreated by adults OR children, as they are only using their natural means of self protection.
- It didn't single out certain breeds
- A dog should not be put down . There should be restrictions placed for a dog and their owner to protect others.
- absolutely no prejudice against any specific breeds. This is racism of the animal world and is disgusting.
- the individuals making up the tribunal must be 'qualified'. I.e veterinary professionals or certified dog trainers, etc. Not random citizens with a pet peeve or dogooders without any relevant background
- The representatives must have good knowledge of dog behaviour and any decision made by them must be open to an appeal.
- The representatives must have good knowledge of dog behaviour and any decision made by them must be open to an appeal.
- As long as the public has assurance this would be only speeding up the process and not overlooking the process.
- As long as cases are handled in a fair manner, and the owner of the animals are educated, sent for some training with they're animal or separately.
- No preemptive opinions of breedism (just because the dog is a certain breed, that does not give you the right to stereotype the animal
- Wasn't comprised of people who support BSL.
- They do not have the capacity to make decisions regarding euthanization.
- A thorough investigation, including living conditions of the offending dog, any triggers that might have instigated the attack (e.g. kids waving toys, tobogganing, in off-leash parks), and the behaviour/responsibility of the owner of the offending dog
- The tribunal can determine punishment
- If the tribunal chooses euthanization, the case proceeds to court
- No decisions should be based on the dog's breed.
- operate using a set of guidelines that is non discriminatory
- they are medium to large dog owners themselves
- The group selected to serve is not biased and equally represented the victim, dog and owner
- Fair representation on both sides.
- The tribunal must include dog trainers, animal behaviour specialists, and professionals who could fairly assess on case by case basis. It is unfair and unrealistic to set a standard such as a dog bites and is seized then euthanized.

- Should be funded, in whole or in part, by fine for convicted nuisance dog owners.
- All opinions are considered before a decision is made on the fate of dog.
- As long as they can make the same decisions as the courts and have the same options for the outcome. If it's a faster process then it might be best for all involved.
- The dog is not in a shelter longer than required.
- owner must do reactive dog training with their dog.
- Irresponsibility of the owner. Most of the problematic pet behaviours are a direct result of neglect of the owner!
- Appropriate qualifications for those sitting on the tribunal.
- Thoroughly investigate the dogs state as health problems could be the cause. As well there must be witnesses in order to even consider disciplining or euthanizing the animal. Owners and victims are just biased.
- The owner of the dog at fault bears the responsibility for inadequate training or conditions.
- obedience training the owner may try first
- The composition of the tribunal needs to include individuals who are formally trained in dog behaviour. Additionally, representatives from dog rescues should be included to ensure there is a perspective from experienced individuals.
- Rescue organizations are given opportunity to rehabilitate animals set to be euthanized.
- It is funded through additional costs to pit bull licences.
- Has an appropriate method of appeal, allows for counsel to assist people, hears from the owner, ensures there's a presumption of innocence/state burden of proof
- As long as every tribunal actually had both a vet and a dog behavioural specialist not just laypeople. Even people who work in city animal bylaw departments have no expertise in animal behaviourism.
- It truly speeds up process to avoid prolonged trauma and separation
- It includes professionals in dog behaviour (vets & trainers) and those versed in legal procedures & rights.
- LOOK AT THE INCIDENT FOR WHAT IT WAS NOT THE TYPES OF DOGS INVOLVED.
- Determine and review restrictions
- As long as the people selected for the tribunal do not have a negative bias towards dogs.
- The tribunal includes experts in the field of animal behaviour.
- Shortest possible time spent with animal away from its owners
- As long as a qualified dog trainer/behaviour professional is also involved
- The members of the tribunal include certified dog behavioural specialists who can appropriately assess the situation
- Not all dog bites are unjustified, there has to be criteria to exempt dogs who bite for justified reasons from being punished, such as defending themselves or protecting their owner, etc.
- Allow dog to stay with owner but add restrictions until a decision can be made.

- Have dog owners or the committee who own a variety of breeds to attempt to keep the tribunal unbiased towards dogs. Additionally, I don't think you should immediately have to go to a tribunal, if this was a fluke accident or first incident, it should be on a case by case basis.
- Non-city representation should include a number of people who have education to properly handle dogs (vet, vet assistance, groomers). As this would suggest that those people who are educated are perhaps more qualified in handling such dog and that perhaps it is not the dog that would always benefit from programs but the wonder himself who should go through training. By including trained dog experts it would also allow those who frequently spend more time with a variety of breeds to provide non bias and factual based data about breeds and dangerous occurrences.
- If only fair to the situation....
- Dogs should remain with the owner under conditions- I am I net of dogs for 35 years. It is possible
- Follows very strict guidelines prior to any decision is made on any animal .
- It is not biased based on breed
- We should lessen the need to use our courts if possible. The Tribunal should be non-political and be immune to any political interference.
- N/A
- Involved rehabilitation of the animal with proven rehab.
- 2nd offense only for ANY breed
- I do not believe the dogs breed should be mentioned. The size of the dog matters but it's race does not.
- As this process is fair to ALL dog breeds.
- Give the dog back, legally require them to not leave property unless for walks muzzled
- Should their assessment/ruling be euthanized it must first go before the Court of Queens Bench for a secondary review and ruling.
- if the tribunal is comprised of unbiased persons and professionals ie veterinarians
- Takes into account the history of the dog, and the situation as a whole, and not on personal prejudice.
- Euthanization was not an option. Put the demand on the owner to do better with mandatory obedience training (paid out of pocket as fine) for vicious and multiple independent witness supported dog bites.
- Agreed
- Not have the authority to order an animal's destruction that should be limited to a court of law.
- Include a behavioural expert
- No breed-specific wording, bias, or targeting
- The tribunal is educated in dog behavior and rehabilitation options for both dog and owners
- Decision principles are transparent, consistent and equitable
- The tribunal would have a vet and dog experts on the board
- Thats you assess the person that the dog attacked! AGAIN! Dogs are animals and if triggered like, humans they tend to protect themselves from any harm.

- no euthanasia
- Is able to render an unbiased judgment on whether or not the dog is in need of euthanization, restrictions, or if it was a case of an accidental bite.
- If you would reconsider euthanasia as an absolute LAST RESULT. A dog shouldn't be judged for their reactions when it is the owners fault for not properly training the dog. The dog should be allowed ample time to be properly trained to redirect their "vicious" behaviour. As they were not taught anything else. It's not their fault they don't know any better.
- As long as the members of the tribunal were not expressly anti pit bull, causing bias in decisions and sentencing dogs that could be fixed by training to death, simply due to prejudice.
- Also addressed owner history, and if there's a potential case of animal abuse in the home.
- That the owner could testify on the animal's behalf
- Issued for all breeds and owners. Eliminate poor complacent and ignorant trainers/or owners
- Thank you
- Veterinary medical professionals and human medicine professionals involved in tribunal, not just law enforcement officers.
- the people are knowledgeable about dog behaviour
- Restrictions and conditions the owner must follow. The majority of incidents with dogs are due to the owners lack of action. If a dog charges at me and my reactive boy while we are out walking and the other owner can't get a hold of their dog, and the dogs begin to fight, whose fault is it? Mine? But mine is leashed and harnessed and also wears a blindfold to help keep him calm. Or the loose dog? Am I at fault if I unhook my dog so he can protect himself from the other dog? And if the other dog gets hurt? Who is responsible then? All questions I've asked myself after every run in with loose dogs in my community. It is the owner. Unless the dog is dangerous and has attacked without provocation, there should be no need to put a dog down. Owners and people need to be more aware and alert and cautious,
- Owners be held accountable for their dogs behaviour and training
- as no more dogs need to be put down or in shelters due to overcrowding
- It doesn't blindly, and baselessly assume bully breeds are guilty. I see this as a problem seeing your previous hate mongering towards bully breeds. As a vet, I can say that there are far more popular family dog breeds that have a higher instance of biting than pit bulls.
- As long as those on this tribunal are those with sound knowledge and experience with dogs and dog behaviour.
- As long as it is to ONLY determine and review restrictions needed for owners to keep animal
- Was made up of people who do not have the obvious biases that this potential bylaw does against specific dog breeds
- tribunal should be comprised of animal experts (veterinarians, trainers, behaviouralists, etc.)
- The only way someone should be able to be a representative is if they are a dog owner
- Reviewers must remain unbiased to ALL breeds
- As long as a certified dog trainer/behaviorist is on the tribunal.

- Ensure reason for attack (for example: being taunted, being attacked/injured, etc) are taken into account
- I think the dog should be with the owner and the owner should then follow recommendations to prevent any incidents from occurring.
- Pets and owners of said pets involved in bite incidents were given fair opportunities for corrective behaviour training and reintegration if deemed safe. This training would involve both behaviour correction training for the animal and animal awareness training for the owner to help avoid situation that may stress the animal and cause aggressive behaviours.
- Was the person bit at fault, or behaving unsafely
- A panel that included a group of non biased individuals similar to the way a criminal court jury is selected. People are to be selected on a case by case basis and should include individuals who own a dog of the same or similar breed. And extensive questionnaires should be administered prior to panel selection
- Evidence that the dog owner has been neglectful and that the owner should be responsible for fines/damages/bills etc. The behavior of a dog is due to lack of owner responsibility to train dogs or obtain proper behavior help for their dogs. The owner needs to be held accountable the dog is only as good as their owner is responsible.
- The process would have to be significantly faster than the current system. I love dogs but if they have bitten someone for no apparent reason, i.e. they pass them in a park and the dog attacks, they should be euthanized ASAP to not prolong the owner's suffering over the loss. The dog may be sick or old, you never know, they are animals and act genetically on instinct.
- Dogs should NEVER be euthanized. Especially if the dog was provoked by another animal or human. All animals and humans react defensively if being harassed or abused. If need be; the dog can be enrolled in an obedience training class
- It wasn't supporting Breed Specific euthanization and had the credibility to make a FAIR judgement
- All members of the tribunal must be vetted for non bias against breeds.
- So long as the "tribunal" had adequate and proper training on dog behaviour, as well as qualifications for overseeing these reports.
- The breed of dog can't be a deciding factor in these cases
- The only people that should be on the tribunal should be veterinarians, people who are licensed dog trainers, trained mediators, trained investigators.
- Do not euthanize dogs without sufficient cause and evidence.
- Not breed specific. Animal and owner can visit, if not remain with owner. Animal is not taken by force and not without a offered "goodbye" from owner and pet can be accompanied with a toy or blanket if taken.
- During the review process the dog should be allowed to live with the other with severe guidelines in place. Ex. Cannot leave the home and/or must be on leash even in their own yard
- Euthanasia should always be the last option after retraining and new dog ownership.
- As long as the tribunals goals are to rehabilitate rather than euthanize.
- Only if the dog attacked without warning, unprovoked. (Has to be proven)

- The tribunal is recognized to be impartial and their judgements are reviewed for any bias (ie - more often they euthanize pitbulls. Or have bias towards other dogs)
- No killing of animals
- Every effort is used to help the animal with euthanization as the last resort
- The tribunal must visit the home and go on a walk (on or off leash) with the owners.
- Those involved in the tribunal are unbiased and experienced
- Tribunal members do not know breed of the dog so decision is based on the facts of the incident as well as any applicable history.
- Dog Must be kept at the owners home at all times till a decision by tribunal is made, photo proof of dog should be made at least once a day at home.
- To become a representative in the tribunal system, all representatives should: undergo training to become familiar with the behavioural patterns of dogs, have professional experience with training dogs, or be a licensed veterinarian.
- Dog behaviorists and animal shelter workers need to be part of the tribunal to offer their expertise
- I believe dogs are not vicious by nature but it is the result of the influence of the owner. Pit bulls attract a certain type of owner due to their reputation of being aggressive. I think people should be prohibited from owning dogs if one of their dogs behaves aggressively. The dog should be retrained and not euthanized.
- Non-biased representatives. Persecute the owner NOT the dog. Breed does not determine whether a dog will become a "nuisance" or not, poor training and ownership does.
- That all requirements are upheld and refusal to adhere to the conditions are taken seriously Safety at all costs especially where children are concerned
- Who ever is deciding these needs to be properly educated and informed (not breed blaming or dog blaming....it's NEVER the dogs fault....it's shitty owners who are irresponsible and often have no idea of how to train a dog).
- Euthanasia isn't the first punishment
- Individuals trained to assess dog behavior conducting the tribunal.
- N/a
- It would have to have an unbiased approach to the type of breed being judged
- It is highly unreasonable to expect the average person to pay for an appeal to QB. Consider alternative administrative review steps first (e.g. review of the decision by alternative or mediation with a dog-loving expert (one who doesn't hate pit bulls) included in the panel, with QB being a final option.
- This should not be used to determine whether a dog should be euthanized.
- Members of the tribunal must be able to deal with each case as a reflection of the dog owner, and any inciting incidents without have a breed specific bias.
- the owner and thier lifestyle were taken into consideration as well.
- No discrimination/bias towards breeds or owners
- It was handled by actual behavior specialists and veterinarians (in cases that may require medication to help the dog mentally or physically), and the dogs were assessed in an area they were the most comfortable in, as well as reviewing the entire incident and what else in the dog's life would have lead up to the bite happening at all.

- The tribunal would have to consist of individuals with animal behavior expertise. No individual with an agenda against a specific breed should be allowed on the tribunal.
- Dogs not be euthanized but rehabilitated.
- Very short timelines for resolution
- All dogs treated equally.
- As long as tribunal members are educated on responsible pet ownership
- This power should be used wisely by the city. Should not be used in a biased way towards breeds considered "pit bulls" and should be used on a case by case basis!
- Comparable to the jury selection process. Ensure that the tribunal does not lean towards one direction more than the other. Should include veterinarians, vet techs, etc.
- The animal doesn't get euthanized. There are other ways to help the animal improve before killing them.
- Those that sit on the tribunal committee include individuals that understand dog behaviour in addition to those working in government - for example a veterinarian, veterinary technician or behaviouralist.
- Thanks to the UCP government, the Court of Queen's Bench is overloaded and understaffed. The provincial government, at any level, should not have to sort out matters that should be common sense.
- Is not paid for out of tax revenue
- Breed specific is outrageous
- Unbiased judgement, unlike this survey.
- Fast resolution is better for the pet
- I want to know the experience and training of those involved in the tribunal. I wouldn't want non-animal people involved at all. Maybe include a veterinarian.
- As long as you rehabilitate dogs before you even think of putting them down
- I would support the tribunal for serious or repeated dog bites/ attacks. However I do feel the bylaws should not solely be focused on pitbulls and breeds that look similar to pitbulls. I believe the bylaws to be put in place should protect and include all breeds.
- The tribunal members are not biased against any breed of dog
- As long as the tribunal includes dog behaviour specialists
- I'd like to see the entire situation reviewed. For example, if there was a dog bite, is it because someone can onto the property when they weren't supposed to i.e. was the dog protecting the property.
- Frequent turnover to prevent bias
- Right of appeal to court.
- Dogs should remain in owner's homes until decision is reached.
- Members must be chosen for concern for animals and decisions must never be breed specific but based on the particular circumstances.

- Look into the owner they are the problem
- Retrial
- It get solved a lot quicker
- There are veterinary staff majority on the tribunal. The general public does not have breed or behaviour education. As clearly shown above with the bias toward bullie breeds
- No euthanasia
- Ther is a no destroy order in place for all animals nucence or not
- Professional arbitrators or mediators were used.
- The members of the tribunal are educated and experienced in dog ownership, care, and behaviour.
- No breed specific decisions.
- Only if tribunal members are neutral and have no bias.
- As long as the people on the Tribunal are knowledgable
- All attempts to rehabilitate an animal are made, and Euthanasia is not an option.
- An ability to take the verdict to provincial court if desired.
- Assess the behaviour of each individual dog and not sit because it looks like a “pit bull”
- This would need to a quick & fair process that involves dog experts.
- Euthanasia not included whatsoever. No animal should be euthanized for the mistakes of humans! Proper rehabilitation and training should be given
- Contains animal behaviourist personnel
- People who are unbiased based on species of dog
- Qualified individuals to be on it.. Nominated and voted on positions
- There is a clear storyline to the argument. Many bites are the result of human error and not due to the behaviour of the dog. Too many people run up and pet dogs (big and small, alike)
- Unbiased tribunal judges
- The jury should be made of people and not be full of pit bull lovers or dog lovers and people who have had a nuisance dog or a bad past can not be in it.
- Everything humanly possible was done to avoid euthanasia but instead offer rehabilitation of the animal in a safe, knowledgeable and loving environment
- I believe a dog should only be euthanized if it has a history of violence or attacks. Some children and adults could trigger the animal in many ways, dogs have personalities so especially if the animal is anxious or nervous. Sometimes people get in their faces and if they get bit that should not be on the dog.
- it is not slanted towards rushing to judgment of the pet
- ...
- Animal can not be out of the house of the owner while case is investigated
- That the tribunal contained an even split of pet owners and pet owners alike who, athe very minimum have an indeifference towards dogs. It wouldn't be fair to have a bunch of dog hating maniacs on a tribunal to decide a dogs fate.
- Opposing any measures to restrict or punish dogs based solely on their breeds

- Included some individuals who are experienced in the realm of animal behaviours.
- Members of the tribunal must be neutral and should not be allowed on tribunal panel if they exhibit prejudice or bias.
- Considered all options prior to euthanizing including rehoming if the owner is deemed irresponsible and the professional animal behaviourist believes the animal can be trained.
- It is fair and kept that way
- The animal can remain protected by either their owner at their home or a safe space with adequate care (i.e food, exercise, attention)
- the representatives consisted of animal experts (trainers, shelter personnel, etc)
- All clients were represented fairly
- I support an alternative process for dogs who have attacked other animals/pets. Dogs severely attacking a person or attacking a child in any regard should not be granted alternate process.
- that non biased people are selected just like a jury and the dog be assessed by a professional prior to final judgement
- The judgment is fair and not bias based on a specific dog breed, the attention is put on the responsibility and care of the owner based on their relationship and training of their dog
- That it is fair to the dog and that it is not a rushed situation that does not hear all the conditions under which the dog is "misbehaving".
- an effective appeals process
- Tribunal members should be limited to people with substantial training and understanding of dog behaviour (i.e. vets and vet technicians).
- I would support a tribunal as long as there is the opportunity to appeal the decision at the Court of Queen's Bench. The process should be fair, inexpensive and ensure open and transparent processes are in place for all involved. Also want to comment that it is unfair to put all dogs in a nuisance category based on their looks. Staffordshire bull terriers are considered one of the most family friendly dog breeds, are highly intelligent and easy to train. There are no bad dogs, just bad owners.
- There is an even representation of city and non-city representatives. There needs to be an agreed upon vote and it should NOT fall solely to the city to ultimately make the decision on what to do with the animal. The non-city representatives are people that understand dog behaviour (not a random Karen off the streets that hates pitbulls because she doesn't actually know what kind of dog it is but one barked at her one time so she definitely hates them).
- A veterinary behaviourist will play a major role in every tribunal
- THE OWNERS MUST GO THROUGH TRAINING ON DOG BEHAVIOUR AND PERSONALITIES!!! PUNISH THE OWNER, NOT THE ANIMAL!!
- That euthanizing a dog not be the easy way out and not used until ALL other options have been tried and tested in each case. Calgary does not have the death penalty, and applying the death penalty to a dog bite is inhumane and extremely cruel if there are other options, which there are in almost all cases. A dog bite is a dog bite regardless of the size, breed, and strength of the dog. Dogs can get rehabilitated and do all the time. Euthanizing an animal is not an appropriate response, it is a lazy response.

- Third item, review restrictions
- The committee would have to be made up of open minded individuals- trained in the animal business, and not just far left or far right believes that specific breeds would instantly be euthanized without a fair tribunal.
- People are adequately trained to properly evaluate canine Behavior.
- It doesn't discriminate against dog breeds
- IF they specifically look at the way the animal is raised and trained rather than the painting breeds as dangerous. IE focus on the bad training habits over bias on the animal.
- More education for the dog owner.
- Either a volunteer commission or a responsibility taken on by existing city of calgary employees at no cost to taxpayers
- Ensure that dog owners take training to see how THEIR BEHAVIOUR has created a nuisance dog. There are no bad dogs...only owners.
- Was not in support of breed specific regulations. As any breed can be viscous or prone to biting it is ENTIRELY based on how the dog was raised by its OWNERS.
- No unrealistic opinions or stereotypes to be held against pit bulls or nuisance dogs
- Who makes up the tribunal system? It should not be made up by other animal service members or persons that would be partial to one side or the other
- Euthanization orders were not declared at tribunals.
- It is fair.
- Training for the dogs owner should be included in this. It's 9/10 the case of being the owners or previous owners fault anyway for a dogs behavioral issues.
- As long as parties involved have fair say/representation for their cases
- The dog can live at home providing the owners have met necessary fence, gate and leashing guidelines.
- It is composed of a team of professionals educated in animal behaviour and welfare
- any declaration of euthanization by the tribunal is reviewed and approved or dismissed by the court.
- So long as it is treated as a case by case basis and not breed discrimination.
- Tribunal members had sufficient animal welfare and behaviour training.
- Rehabilitation is used primarily, and euthanization is not an option (or a last resort)
- It is paid for by increased dog licence fees
- Euthanization would not be included in their assessment
- Tribunal should include a veterinarian
- Must have members from the field of Vet, Animal abuse worker, etc not randoms
- I would support a tribunal as long as there were animal behaviour experts on the tribunal. A tribunal with bureaucrats only and no animal specialists would be useless. It would be abysmal and ignorant if the city of Calgary introduced a pit bull ban given it's the owners that produce dangerous dogs not the dogs themselves.

- Pitbulls should not be banned. The tribunal must be efficient, penalties must be adapted case by case and you should have dog experts not city employees or social groups running the tribunal
- The dog and owner must attend mandatory obedience training
- Ensure a full history of the dog was taken.. where did it come from (if he was a rescue he may just need further rehab but NOT euthanasia), is this the first attack hes been a part of? (If so , perhaps have the dog on a city watch list to keep tabs on severe behaviors like bites. I just don't want to tribunal to lead to a very black and what conclusion ...
- That the tribunal chair is trained and knowledgeable about animal behaviour, animal welfare, and that the human factors that contribute to dog bites are taken into account when reviewing cases
- No arbitrary demonizing of particular breeds of dogs. Any vicious bite, whether Golden Retriever, Labradoodle or Bulldog must be treated with the same severity.
- Tribunal members are experts in dog behavior and training
- Tribunal membership would need to be consistent to ensure equal rulings for all cases.
- I think a dog should be given every opportunity to either be re-homed or placed in a training system before euthanasia is an option.
- The decision makers would need to be very knowledgeable in animal behaviour, and have no breed biases
- I would support a tribunal as long as the panel is not made up of known pro BSL supporters
- There was no bias in the tribunal
- No euthanization without owners consent
- Understanding that in most cases dog but because they are scared or protecting their owner.
- It's non bias, fair and considers the ownership treatment of the dog, has the dog's best interest at heart, tries all other methods of treatment before even considering euthanizing the dog
- fast processing of an animal to reduce wait times in shelter
- The tribunal members do not hold bias against specific dog breeds and ultimately their goal is restorative
- If owner was not happy with decision they could still request a court case
- No government persons, animal professionals (vets, techs, trainers) and civilians should make up the tribunal. As well as it should be an option that the owner is looked at more than the animal itself. Opportunity for rescue from unfit owners and training for the animal
- That it happens speedily
- Pit bulls are not bad breeds and shouldn't be treated as such!!!!!!
- As long as the tribunal was made up with diversity of members and include more than one expert (meaning several) on dog behaviours.
- Done in a short, timely manner as to not cause further trauma to the dog
- While the decision is being made the animal should stay with the owner, and not in a shelter.
- If It isn't run by a bunch of uninformed fools

- As long as the incidents are recorded without breed specification. Rather to just use weight. This will help eliminate breed discrimination and bias.
- Only if they assess whether or not the other person was on the dogs property when bit, or if the person who was not was teasing the dog.
- The victim must be the priority, not the dog owner or the dog
- Does not cause an undue financial burden to the parties, ie higher cost than associated with the courts
- all 3 of these conditions must be thoroughly reviewed, to ensure best outcome
- Moving the process along quicker for both dog, owner and victim
- The owner is not separated from their animal.
- Only current dog owners on the tribunal
- It should not be able to circumvent the court. It should not be able to euthanize the dog before the full court process has occurred. It should be able to allow the dog to go home to its owner in a he event that it can stay there safely until the court process is complete.
- The Tribunal would be great however the people on said Tribunal would need to be from Calgary if they are going to judge Calgary cases. Additionally all Tribunal members should be dog owners with a variety of breeds between them to keep rulings fair.
- never declare pit bulls as the major problem, it should be the owners that are held accountable, if they do not properly train the dog it is not the fault of the breed
- Owners of un-trained dogs NEED to undergo training THEMSELVES. Owners of aggressive animals NEED to recognize their faults, not the animals being punished for the owners behaviour.
- the human owning the dog was a largely considered factor. Rarely is the dog the reason for it's acting out. Usually it is the owner being a poor trainer, abusive towards the dog etc. Have the tribunal look at the home situation of the dog, much like you would have a social worker look at the home situation of an unruly child
- You can not take the dog to be euthanized without a real court setting.
- Fair judgement of the case on an individual basis and allowing the dog owner a chance to take their dog through a behavioural course following an attack instead of euthanasia.
- Tribunals must be run or advised by behavioral experts that can evaluate time and cost necessary to retrain animal behavior. A panel with no advisor board would only unnecessarily put dogs to death.
- considered.
- The bylaw should inspect the dogs premises and ask for changes to fencing and gates to help avoid dogs from reoffending. On occasion owners let a small dog off leash in alleys and the dog fence fights until the captive dog gets loose.
- Proper and fair value ($ for benefit) for citizens b/c it cost $$$ to run. Proper panel - need animal educated professional(s) at minimum, not random citizens with bias
- Members of tribunal are educated or experienced on dogs (e.g. veterinarians, police K9 handlers, SPCA volunteers etc.)
- No euthanasia only further training for the vicious dog. Not leaving them in a shelter as that would mean further trauma for dog and owner

- You shouldn't be seizing people's dogs and holding them in shelters when the situation hasn't been processed. That's awful for no reason. That's guilty before it's even been assessed.
- The people hired to be a part of this tribunal must be certified dog trainers and animal behaviourists.
- Those on the tribunal MUST be as un-biased as possible. And each case must be treated individually, not comparing it to any other cases.
- The members of the tribunal consists of experts
- Tribunal should not have final say. They should be a recommendation only. Final say should be provided by at least 2 animal behavioural specialists.
- As the animal has had the opportunity to be retained or rehabilitated away from their current owners and rehomed if necessary.
- I like the idea of the tribunal but hesitate to go with that because there are various severities of dog bites...if this is the 1st offense and dog felt he was trying to protect itself etc. 2nd offence definitely with tribunal system. What about (though it's harder on system) - dog owner shows compassion and wants to fix this - give a chance. If they knew their dog was violent then they should have known better and taken steps....which perhaps leads to this - owner has to prove he's taken dog to obedience training - buys the muzzle and harness to restrain dog better and a fenced yard at the residence.
- Similar to above, a knowledgeable committee should gather to make more timely decisions rather than hold animals in shelters. Perhaps, depending on cases, a dog could be placed with experienced fosters if needed to be separated from owners while cases are processed in effort to avoid time in shelters.
- An unbiased and fair tribunal that is not discriminatory to any dog breed and is educated about proper dog handling and that poor animal behavior is not a result of the breed.
- If this would be the case for ALL breeds. Not just pitbulls and block head breeds
- Determine and review
- Often there may be civil and/or criminal claims alongside extreme incidents. The 'tribunal' concept would have to be sculpted to ensure a lack of conflict with these more important functions that involve distinct civil rights.
- The tribunal must be made up of a diverse group of adjudicators who must make an unbiased vote separate from each other. The dog attack must also have been severe enough to warrant stitches or other medical care.
- In the case where a dog was ordered to be euthanized, there must be sufficient time given to allow an appeal.
- That every other option be explored rather than ending the animals life
- Doesn't cost the taxpayers more than the current system
- An unbiased decision to be made based on the act not the breed of the dog
- Unbiased group of people, that do not have issues with certain dog breed (e.g. PITBULLS)
- If euthanizing is an option, a very professional opinion be mandatory. Killing a family member is more serious and devastating than many understand and needs to be taken very seriously and only as a last result; meaning training, etc.

- Tribunals should be staffed by individuals who have an understanding of dog behaviour, aggression, and appropriate remedies
- Applies to all breeds equally!
- Their decision is not based on breed. It is total bullshit that pitbulls are considered dangerous from birth. The way a dog is raised/trained makes it vicious, not the genes. When I was a kid this issue was with Dobermans? Which is also false.
- I do believe there are many steps to be taken before choosing to euthanize a dog and I do believe that they can be trained if put in proper care. I think everything on the tribunal is great but they need to take necessary measure before ever even considering euthanizing. I would be much more supportive of the tribunal if euthanasia was not on the table. I think euthanasia should only be an option if a human was attacked and was near death.
- Was unbiased
- Some form of the following: The dog should NOT be left to languish in a shelter without being given every possible chance to be assessed by more than one behaviourist; efforts be made to see (if it can be re)trained to sit, stay, etc., while out of the owners custody. That the dogs home environment and owners at the time of the incident, as well as possibility there may have been a previous unknown potential history of mistreatment be given thoughtful consideration. If the dog is a victim of its circumstance, owner, environment, etc. and has the potential of being rehabilitated to some degree, it be given opportunities to be placed on rescue lists
- That the bite is looked at as self defense first, before assuming that the dog is aggressive. That negligent owners are looked at before placing blame on the dog. That the person who was bit is questioned as to why they were in the space of an anxious/angry dog in the first place.
- No dogs are euthanized
- As long as it does not lengthen the process if someone were to appeal. That would defeat the whole purpose. And the tribunal must be educated and not biased towards certain dog breeds. They must look at alternatives for helping the dog such as training or socializing skills or worse case going to a farm where it can live a different lifestyle that may not stress the dog out and eliminate future issues. It is also important to strongly consider reuniting the dog with its owners.
- Not biased on breed.
- They could not determine euthanization without the support of the court
- Owners were also charged as the guilty party and the animal as the accessory, any breed of dog can be dangerous, however a "pitbull" is indeed stronger, which is why you see these dogs with drug dealers and other people who want to give off a "tough" persona. Animals are just that animals, & to many people do not abide by on leash areas and continue to allow their dogs off leash, so in this instance which happens more often than not, a responsible owner walking her pitbull, who is not dog friendly, (but owner moves out of the way of other dogs, does not stop and talk or allow her dog to run free when other dogs are present happens upon a lady with a mouthy daschound, who is off leash. Pitbull owner attempts to reign her dog in while the other owner does nothing to retrieve her little disturber, said pitbull gets ahold of the dog and injured and kills it, well now a pitbull who just doesn't like animals is facing death because of an irresponsible owner allowing her dog to wander without a leash. How is that fair or doing anyone any favors? A responsible pet owner would have their dog leashes at all times no matter what unless in an unleashed area. Pitbulls are NOT the demons of the park. There are thousands of dogs who aren't dog friendly and they all get away with bad behavior. Pitbulls deserve a break, owners need to face consequences not the dog. The dog can be rehabilitated the owner is cruel and teaching a pet anything but love is animal abuse.

- Na
- It included a representative from the Canadian Kennel Club.
- Both parties must be investigated. Instead of euthanasia to rehabilitate the animal.
- Circumstance and history of the dogs behaviour be in the forefront.
- At least one veterinarian must be part of the tribunal board along with a canine behaviourist. There should be public engagement regarding to positions on the tribunal board and positions should only be appointed when the position is unfilled.
- The investigation was based on actual truth and not based on breed of dog
- These people have education in animal training and or anatomy and behaviour as it can pertain to circumstances in which dogs behave
- As long as the representatives are people that do stuff with animals and have the animals best interest at heart and are not profit focused or malicious
- Was a loaded board and how would members be chosen for it?
- Tribunals need to be paid positions that are appointed, not elected. Appointees should include professionals with experience in veterinary and/or dog training with multiple referrals. Appointees should also include a licensed AKC breeder of a specific breed, again with multiple referrals. Appointees should not include anyone that demonstrates either in-person or online any clear bias against any specific breed. Appointees need to include dog owners.
- The dog is permitted to live with the owner under strict rules until a decision is made.
- I dont believe the aberahe citizen is capable of prescribing euthanasia as a solution. This would need to be from an animal behaviorialist trained in positive reinforcement.
- They cant decide about euthanization.
- Dog training
- No decisions based on breed of dog
- Random panel or experts from all areas of animal behaviour including bully breed advocates, small and large dog advocates, trainers, and animal behaviour specialists
- It works exactly the same as a court appearance.
- Impartial to all breed's
- There is a veterinarian or certified behaviourist on the tribunal to evaluate the dogs behaviour and future bite risk.
- That it reprimands the owner and not the dog. Euthanasia should be a last resort, and behavioural training and removal of the dog from the poor household is a better option. The dog doesn't deserve to die because it has an awful owner.
- Explore the owners to see why the dog is a nuisance
- The tribunal is made up of neutral members.

- The tribunal members are fairly chosen from people knowledgeable about dogs and dog behaviour as opposed to people who only understand dogs based on what they see in the media.
- As long as there is a panel of informed and accredited people.
- So long the owner has the option to keep the dog in their household for the time being, and/or can speak on behalf of their dog to show them what training they have done to change their behaviour(s).
- If the extreme of euthanization is on the table, then upgrade the case to the courts.
- Do not practice prejudice against pitt bulls.
- er doesn't know how to raise an dog
- All people on the Tribunal must remain unbiased in the way that they have no past trauma with the matter that could cloud their judgment.
- Dog is only euthanized if after resources for training/socialization/obedience does not help the situation. Also, a dog should never be euthanized if it was being actively provoked by the bite victim.
- Dogs demed "vicious" would be assessed by a qualified and licensed CPDT or behavioural vet. I do not however support BSL AT ALL
- Owners of all breeds including pit bulls and other so called "agressive" breeds were on said tribunal so the poor dogs that can't speak for themselves have a voice
- Are you seriously asking about a court case for dogs? How about a court case for the criminal property tax increases year after year combined with the criminal fees for bin collection, and water supply? This city is broken and is on the verge of collapse.
- Ensurance of no breed bias in voters and educated responsible voters
- The tribunal must have short deadlines for meeting and making/implementing a decision. The owner is usually the problem, not the dog so sanctions should include owner education or bans from pet ownership.
- That similar to a jury, there would be an at the not to remove biases (especially for particular breeds with stigmas attached EI: large, powerful, bully etc). Tribunal members should also be dog owners
- That the decision made by City or Non City representative is not prejudice to the breed, size of animal, etc...
- Guaranteed meeting within a time period.
- Ensure fair judgement to the animal and it's owner: ie. No benefit of doubt given to the victim except in the most serious cases
- Instead of euthanizing the dog, check how the owner treats them. Most "problem dogs" only cause problems because they're owners are too irresponsible to train their dog properly or give them enough exercise.
- Diverse group of individuals
- Breed shouldn't factor in to the final decision for penalties. If a dog attacked someone, they were not trained and raised properly. The only correlation to "violent breeds" is they have been vilified in the media and society. Any dog owner should be required to show they can handle their dog appropriately and responsibly.

- Use euthanasia as a last resort. Disobedient dogs or violent dogs are usually a product of poor training or uneducated parents. Obedience classes should be offered and education for the parents as well
- The acting members of the tribunal must be dog owners
- Tribunal must include experts from vets to trainers to people well educated in fig behavior and not the idiot down the street who stays at home with nothing better to do then pretend they're Judge Judy.
- There was public engagement over his the tribunal was formed.
- The tribunal should be comprised of certified experts in various fields of animal behaviour, training, and rehabilitation
- That all facts are documented through a ticketing system vs a he said, she said process. That a vet and a reputable shelter representative as well as a behavioural specialist be appointed to sit on the tribunal and that every avenue be looked at to get the animal assistance prior to euthanasia.
- Contained certified dog trainers and behaviouralist. Not general public or group advocates.
- It didn't cause a large amount of tax funding
- The tribunal members must be free of bias and respectful of the pet owners.
- They are dog savvy and fair. Certain criteria should be followed. House arrest for dogs that aren't the most severe cases.
- It is conducted within a few days of offenders and the offending animal is kept by the owner under strict supervision (muzzled, leashed or confined in pen outdoors (leashes no more than 6 feet), repeat offenders within that period of any sort described as nuisance means seizure by Calgary Animal Services until Tribunal Process completed.
- No predisposed bias towards pit bulls in regards to not liking the breed
- There would have to be a PANEL of representatives with pit bull owners on the board, I don't think euthanasia is the best option for any dog if the owner is working toward training! Most animals don't just bite out of no where, typically their actions are instigated by another human where they felt threatened. More training to humans should be done on the proper way to approach dogs. 100% I would need to see some representation of voting in adequate decision makers on this board to ensure adequately fair representation. I also do not support the idea of euthanasia for dogs who may have had a rough past or even made a mistake, if they are deemed a nuisance, should they not be sentenced to mandatory obedience training rather than death? Just as a human with anger management issues would be sentenced to anger management classes.
- I am not sure how this would differ from what would happen in traditional court. I am concerned about any bias members of the tribune would hold for or against dogs, and that this system wouldn't give the victim a way to get compensation. I don't know if the compensation part is a separate thing though. From the wording above I am assuming this is for cases where the owner is at fault and not say, a trespasser being bit, where the trespasser would be at fault.
- Consultation with veterinary specialists
- Those part of the tribunal are tested for biases towards certain breeds and are educated within the realm of animal behaviour.

- Dogs should not spend a long time in the shelter
- that the owners of the dogs are reprimanded in a proper method also
- Includes dog trainers and dog owners
- High level of expertise including experts on dog behaviour and dog trainers who use positive reinforcement.
- Proper follow through with incident report, ensuring that the dog was in fact in the wrong, not having been put in a threatening situation by the victim
- This would not be used to just quickly determine dog's death! Must but be used to take away owner and dog rights to rush to euthanize!!!!
- Reduction of dog stress
- Remained objective and unbiased towards specific breeds. Also, focused on dog owner education and training.
- Dog should be quarantined at home, must be spayed or neutered, if not already. Must be muzzled in public and never off lead. Euthanasia should not be considered unless the dog is a repeat offender, if the owner wants it done
- Unbiased and fair in circumstances, done as a panel
- That accredited veterinarians are involved to provide a medical opinion on the case, and have the background and knowledge to assist in decisions.
- Having members with an unbiased view who are regularly expected to research stats on breed aggression/attacks
- not make an enforceable assessment on euthanization
- Dogs have the opportunity to have proper assessments, obedience training and re homed if the owner isn't a responsible dog owner. It's the owners NOT the dogs !
- As long as does not allow dog to be exposed to public before it is determined if dog is dangerous or needs to be put down.
- As long as there is no criminal intent related to the severe bite (e.g. domestic violence, assault)
- The owner takes course on dog behavior.
- That the dogs do not have to stay in shelter as this causes more stress and trauma
- No bite no euthanasia
- appropriate qualifications for those on the tribunal (vets, animal professionals, etc.)
- Be overseen by animal professionals and not politicians.
- Not judging a dog by its breed but by that single dogs history of issues.
- back ground check on the 'owners' physical examination of the dog in question.
- It was not one sided
- As long as there were no bias' from the people on the panel
- Euthanasia only for fourth strike offenders
- Euthanization is not an option. The owners should be punished as they are directly responsible for the dogs behaviour. Improper training is what leads to these incidents. The dog shouldn't have to die for their mistakes.

- It does not distinguish by breed. Small dogs can be just as viscous as big dogs.
- Members of the tribunal are experienced with dog behavioural issues and rehabilitation
- Members of the tribunal include various dog training & behaviour experts
- It reviews each case equally and doesn't single out pitbulls
- A due process was followed
- Non biased members who review each situation on its own merit. Not compare other same type dogs, each dog is an individual and should be treated as such
- All dogs are equal.
- Rehome the dog if owner is unfit to provide training. Rehome dog if owner has violent criminal record.
- They look into why the dog bit
- Eithanization without owner consent should not be an option until the case has been completed re the dogs culpability
- That a qualified board that has a behaviouralist, a senior Veterinarian that specializes in animal behaviour as well as a qualified obedience trainer. Minimum of 5 experts.
- Breed of dog omitted from tribunal proceedings, review of evidence supported by medical and veterinary specialists.
- I actually do not support the tribunal process too much $. I think the dog should be barred from leaving the owners private property while waiting for due process. if the dog is found outside of private property during court the dog should automatically be seized and destroyed.
- At least three experienced, QUALIFIED dog behaviour consultants are on the tribunal, including the veterinary behaviourist if possible
- That the breed of the dog in question be specifically mentioned in all paperwork and filings. NO EXCEPTIONS!
- Consistent to ALL dogs complaints, bites and offended.
- If it's fair and speeds up the process
- Human takes responsibility for baiting or teasing dogs
- As an appeal process is in place
- Tribunal members must include 2 qualified/certified behaviourists and a CKC member familiar with the breed when the incidence involves a purebred dog
- At least one qualified canine behaviourist included in the tribunal representatives
- That the individuals serving on the tribunal have extensive knowledge on the animals in questions.
- They must have vets on the tribunal
- A Vicious dog is determined by a qualified dog behaviour therapist or trainer AND veterinarian to rule out any medical condition.
- The tribunal should be trained and educated and not biased to dog breed
- As long as they're non bias towards the breed and
- Dogs should not be euthanized.

- No harm for dog. Dog should be send to behaviorist. Owners should be properly teach how to train dog, what dogs behaviors mean and how to properly support dog in his-her needs.
- Tribunal to be made up of vets and animal experts / animal trainers.
- Euthanasia should not be considered a punishment for nuisance dogs - dogs should be turned over to fosters or appropriate rescues whenever necessary.
- Decision-makers understand learning theory and at a minimum have training in science-based canine ethology.
- Members with AND without dogs are put on the Tribunal.
- Careful vetting of tribunal representatives to ensure no bias.
- There are no breed-specific biases regarding the apprehended dogs
- There are no breed-specific biases against dogs, whether they are apprehended or not
- The costs for a tribunal weren't much greater than the current method (i.e., +/- 10%)
- Dogs must be assessed, at the City's expense, by a qualified and unbiased dog behaviourist.
- In the tribunal must be at least 2 veterinarians
- The members of it are professional / possess skills and knowledge related to topics that would be handled
- A professional dog trainer who has extensive experience in dealing with bully breeds, is brought in to assess the dog and assess the situation. People who don't understand dog behaviour should not be deciding on euthanasia
- The tribunal would need to be impartial and not single out specific dog breeds; individual breeds are not the issue.
- 2 and 3
- That the City and non-City representatives were ONLY animal behavioural experts, such as the trainers at the Humane Soceity, and not average citizens who can be quite biased.
- The tribunal would need to include someone who is active with behavioural training who works with all breeds and is responsible, knowledgeable within the Calgary canine community
- only with the possibility that dogs being assessed are considered for a rehabilitation or training program if possible. The well being of the animal should be strongly considered.
- Applies to all breeds
- if is a fair tribunal, including non judgement or negative mindset of any animal including pitbulls, as they seem to be the issue
- Unless it has some kind of brain condition, I would not suggest euthanizing should be any consideration unless all other training options had been exhausted.
- unbiased professional,
- We should take every precaution before euthanization - dogs can be rehabilitated... bad owners, not so much
- With the exception of euthinazation cases.
- Only able to determine restrictions on a nuisance dog, not able to decide if the dog should be euthanized

- It has diverse representation and is not chaired or governed by a white person
- No animals were euthanized
- The members of the tribunal are adequately trained or are experts in the field of animal behaviour
- That the dog was given a fair trial. Environmental, human, other dogs and the suspect dogs behavior at the time are all factors that need to be considered. Humans treating the dog poorly and/or not responding when the dog gives obvious warnings. If that's the case then the person should be held responsible for inciting and being ignorant.
- Yes
- Qualified person assessing the dog's behaviour
- As long as the tribunal members are not political appointees but people qualities to make these judgements e.g. animal trainers , vets
- It employed only people who are certified dog trainers and/or behaviourists.
- Recommend program to rehabilitate the dog, at owner cost, instead of euthanasia.
- There is an animal behaviour specialist
- The representatives are qualified to make decisions surrounding the animal, and the animal's best interests are kept in mind
- Instances of severe behaviour would result in a mandatory civil or criminal review by a court adjudicator or judge.
- The Tribunal is open to sending a dog to a rehabilitation sanctuary rather than return the dog to the irresponsible owner.
- To identify the owner of the animal and how that animal is being trained at home and the home environment. Dog owners need to be held responsible for how they train their animals and the process that goes into training such animals.
- That if it is decided by the tribunal that a dog was to be euthanized that it was reviewed by the courts
- The members were dog owners themselves
- If a dog bites or kills another dog or human and it was not the humans or the other dogs fault, it should be euthanized.
- A dog who bites isn't always the problem dog in all situations. More due care needs to be given to the dog charged
- N/a
- Those that are carrying out the tribunal would have to be assessed prior to, to determine any kind of dog discrimination or racism. ie) someone who is against pitbulls can not work this job. They have to be of sound character, mind and non-judgmental.
- If the dog receives a medical examination from a veterinarian to determine if the incident occurred due to a medical issue. An assessment of the housing situation for the animal is conducted. i
- It's not bias towards certain dog breeds. I don't want you killing a pitbull just because it's a pitbull.
- Not blaming the breed, holding the owner accountable.
- Alternatives to court for a first step seem reasonable, but I don't know enough about them to suggest conditions.

- Don't be biased against a certain breed. Bad owners make bad dogs of all breeds. My rescue pitbull is ten times better behaved than my neighbor's aggressive German Shepherd and my other neighbor's Malamut. Bad owners make bad dogs. Breed is not the issue. Bad owners are the issue.
- The decision is not final unless both parties agree to it. If one party disagrees, it gets escalated to the court system.
- As long as committee members are not slanted to breed-specific ideation.
- Clear and transparent processes are put in place for defining and declaring dogs as 'viscous' or 'nuisance'.
- Involvement of all relevant authorities AND lawyer representation for the animal. NO ANIMALS ARE TO BE PUT DOWN. NONE. END OF COMMENT. THERE IS NO EXCUSE TO KILL A DOMESTICATED ANIMAL.
- Both sides are represented
- Other nuisance dogs are all judged the same, regardless of breed
- No dog should ever be euthanized, all dogs can be trained regardless of age or breed and a vicious dog can be recovered. It is on the onus of the owner who should then pay for re-training of a "vicious" dog and should pay for all damages and trauma (including therapy for the victim) for their lack in ability of training a dog.
- The owner faces punishment for not properly training and socializing the animal.
- They did not have the power to authorize euthanization of a dog and they are composed of experts in the field (dog trainers, vets, etc)
- No discrimination based on type of dog. It is important to be aware of fair practices for all dogs.
- As long as euthanization is truly the last option. The dog should not be punished, the owner should.
- Includes dog behaviour expert with experience in rehabilitation of dogs deemed dangerous/improperly socialized or trained
- The efficacy and impact of the tribunal system is reviewed to ensure that it is meeting the original goals (reduce waiting time and reduce trauma).
- Dogs should have the ability to rehabilitate before being euthanized.
- No dogs are euthanized
- Non-bias towards pit bulls
- Breed Specific Legislation has contributed to harmful myths/stereotypes, similarly to our Judicial system this leads to harsher penalties. A tribunal should NOT have access to what "breed" a dog is when determining the severity or conditions of consequence.
- Yes they should use a tribunal
- All dog bites are treated equal, including dog maulings from police dogs/retired police dogs.
- There was no bias displayed towards certain breeds (like pit bulls).
- You do not judge based on breeds
- Proper dog training by professional
- Yes

- As long as the dogs were given a fair trial, the dogs were actually processed quicker and with less trauma, and allow owners, the bylaw officers involved, and the victims to input statements.
- No breed/animal bias for people who will be on the tribunal. This can affect their impartiality.
- Every case is looked into separately.
- The tribunal is fair and not bias. Humans are not perfect but training and love might be needed in some cases. Not all.
- More investigation into the OWNER, not the animal. Get your head out of your asses and learn more about the breed you clearly know nothing about!
- That those apart of the tribunal are educated on the irrelevance of differentiating the dangers of a dog by breed. There is no bad dog breed, there are only bad owners. Any dog can be deemed dangerous or a nuance, their breed does do not play a roll in their behaviour.
- ensurance of no tribunal bias against specific breeds
- Non city representatives should include balanced trainers
- I think the dog should be able to stay with the owner with conditions to keep everyone safe.
- Tribunal is made up of dog owners, with preference given to owners of similar breeds to the one involved.
- Costs to be covered by pet owner.
- repeat offenders must be fined and the animal euthanized
- It would depend how members of the tribunal are selected.
- Dogs would only be euthanized under extreme, and rare circumstances. All options must be explored first. If many dogs are deemed to be euthanized, an investigation into the reasoning should be conducted, and the potential for punishment to the reviewer if their decisions are made unethically. Pitbulls should not be targeted due to breed in this or any process, breed holds no bearing, only evident behavior does.
- Owners need to be required to undergo classes to understand dog management and what their behaviour or management brings out in their animals
- Tribunal officials must have expertise in animals and animal behaviours.
- All members must be assessed for any inherited biases
- I am not sure this would work that well I suspect many would still appeal and it would end up in court which causes trauma to the animal and additional costs. I think if the tribunal was made up of independent people who are not affiliated to any groups that target specific breeds and are not directly involved with the animal or animal's family.
- Dogs are a part of the family, and mean the world to so many people. I'm all for expediting the process, but you better be using experts -- not 'bylaw' officers to determine outcomes/next steps. Given what's at stake, the opinion of a vastly undereducated bylaw officer on the topic is/should be of little value.
- It doesn't cost more than apprehending and housing the animal.
- Past behaviour MUST be considered. Most dogs that bite are doing so in defence or there was a sign of aggression that was not dealt with by the owner. The dog should be offered rehabilitation without their current owner and the owner should face the fines and legal charges against dog bites. The dog does not understand why their act was not ok.

- The dogs should remain on “house arrest” until the case is settled. Removing the dog from its home only increases its trauma fear response which ultimately is setting them up to bite again.
- That you recommend Obedience training before euthanizing the dogs.
- The tribunal must include more than one reputable veterinarians and more than one obedience trainer with training experience with aggressive dogs.
- Reasonable representation for all parties involved- vet, animal behavior experts, breed experts, and support for victims
- Both dog owner and victim have equal voice in tribunal proceedings.
- breed of dog not mentioned to tribunal
- Not being breed specific, or biased towards a specific breed.
- The tribunal should be comprised of certified dog trainers, community standards representatives, and I would suggest someone from the Canine group from Calgary Police. I do not believe the general public should be allowed to be part of the panel.
- No breed specific bias!!! I've been bitten 6 times, and every time it was a small dog
- The members of the tribunal would have to have specific dog behavior training in order to be fair when understanding reactions of dogs
- That the animals are treated fairly and then underlying cause for the attack is determined. It wouldnt be fair to decide a dog has to be euthanized for a typical dog response to something that a person did.
- Many dog professionals are consulted to make sure the dog is indeed dangerous, behaviour is compromised when in shelter or stressed, the owner should be able to explain, put in place training and show he can and will make sure his dog gets help before deciding to euthanise, also if the owner is the problem, considering rescues to take in the dog and train him too. The tribunal should be fair and use dog trainer who are science based to establish if the dog is a threat. More money should be spent on making sure those dogs get the help and training they need. Hold the owner responsible. Take into consideration the environment, his life, treatment, etc.
- tribunal made up of both pet owners and non pet owners
- Look at all factors on why behaviour or bites happened. Aggression? Teasing? Bad ownership? Fear?
- Followed a similar system to the courts where in which the tribunal is a panel of peers, not an elected or volunteer group. These people would be a random sampling of an appropriately aged population.
- As long as Euthanizing the dog was a last and final resort. A three strikes your out rule. The Tribunal would also need to be made up of, Dog Trainers, Vet's, Dog behaviorist,
- Was a fair and consistent process
- That the individuals are vetted and are not found to have a bias against any type of dog, are not victims of a dog bite nor any family member has had an incident.
- These people should know and be knowledgeable in dogs and training and to enforce and support the system

- Can not read the entire drop down sentences—only the first 5 words show
- That the owner is considered. Including whether the owner has taken appropriate steps to help the dog i.e. dog training.
- Members are dog behavior experts and learn toward rehabilitation whenever possible
- Yes
- The people occupying positions on the tribunal have sufficient education and knowledge regarding animal behaviour to assist them in making the most appropriate decision for the animal and the public at large.
- NO discrimination of dog breeds. It is the owner that is responsible not the dog breed. Any breed can be aggressive if not treated or trained properly.
- Disregard breed and perform tolerance test on all and any dogs involved.
- That legal process would follow an unsatisfactory decision for the owner.
- Fine the owner. It's bad owners not bad dogs
- All members of the tribunal take bias training. Anyone who is majorly biased towards breeds (I.e. thinking all pit bulls are dangerous) should NOT be included on the tribunal. See the Harvard internal bias tests.
- Professional dog handlers and or trainers analyze the psychological profile of the dogs.
- You must understand pit bulls in order to discipline them, please take value in that. During the tribunal process the dog is held at home not a shelter and during this time is already subject to obedience training.
- Members of the tribunal should be experts (vets, etc.)
- If it were supported by animal experts, and documentation of that support were provided to the public. I don't feel informed about the issue,
- Be just as strict as court would be.
- Owners are held responsible and go through training with the dog to learn from mistakes
- If it would help speed up the process
- Needs to be decided by city officials or those who do not have bias about violence in dogs
- They consider the owners behaviour more than the breed of dog. Also consider the person bit, did they do something to instigate the incident.
- The issue was dealt with within a reasonable period. 30 days? Less?
- A fair jury to decide the dogs fate would help thin out the shelters
- Discrimination of pitbull like dogs is not used. Little dogs are quite often more vicious and should be tried more often
- Both pet owners and non pet owners were on the tribunal
- it moves the process along quicker. It still provides the best outcome for the dog and those involved.
- They cannot be biased towards one type of dog/cannot have a bad experience with a “nuisance breed”, which would then influence any future decisions regarding these breeds.
- Pit bulls should not be regulated differently from any other dog breeds.
- I support this as long as the animal is not held up in a shelter

- Dogs can not be euthanized until proven a nuisance
- Consulted DVMs professionals to reach a decision (veterinarian doctors)
- That the owner of the dog was questioned about how it's raised, it's environment and if the owner of the reason the dog is aggressive
- Very quickly this could be a one sided dominated conversation and dogs could be judged most harshly than in typical court.
- the people making the decision have a background in dog behavior so that they are judged fairly
- Unbiased towards dog breeds and examining the situation only. Violent animals have nothing to do with breed but with improper training and poor ownership.
- Persons put in this position of authority be non biased regarding pit bulls, Rottweilers, Doberman etc
- The dog and its owner is put through an assessment and training sessions with a credible trainer that specializes in problem dogs.
- So long as they don't discriminate against breeds and they look to retraining before euthanizing.
- Fair , fast and proper inquiry
- Thorough training on dog behaviors and obedience/rehabilitation training options
- Decisions would have to be based on majority vote and the pet owner having the right to know details of decisions
- That it is directed at animal owners not breed types
- The tribunal staff remain unbiased.
- included the priper no biased individuals so that dogs are not needlessly euthanized.
- Breed plays no part in decision making
- The tribunal is not full of bsl supporting lunatics. The tribunal should be filled with professional dog trainers and veterinarians and a few psychologists for the people involved. The dog isn't the problem, the owner is
- Does not have authority to recommend or enforce euthanasia.
- Tribunal cannot order euthanization, and breed of dog cannot be considered. Pit bulls are no more dangerous than Saint Bernard. It based solely on the Dog and owners behavior
- Must have private citizens who are in rescue as part of the tribunal
- Both sides of the incident MUST be reviewed. No bias.
- I like this idea as long as it does not lead to an increase in expedited decisions regarding dog attacks that results in an increased use of euthanasia and/or and increased dismissal of dog attack cases. Basically, I wouldn't want the idea of the tribunal to lead to reckless decisions that result in needless loss of animal life and/or overlooking cases with seriously dangerous dogs being allowed back onto streets. The tribunal should be making the same caliber of decision as the provincial court would but should be expediting the process to reduce the suffering of the dog, its owner, and the victim of the attack.
- that there is at least one person present that can actually discuss dog behaviour - a canine specialist perhaps
- Does not decide if a dog should be euthanized

- Humans are held accountable
- If the tribunal was made up of people with experience working with dogs and is familiar with dog behaviour. Most people misunderstand dogs unless they have extensive experience with them (which is why bites happen in the first place).
- If they were non biased and did what was best for the animals not because of dollars.
- The owner is investigated as well 9.9 times out of 10 a "vicious" dog is that way due to owner neglect and/or abuse. The dog should not suffer because their human used them for wrong doing.
- restrictions placed on a dog for being a nuisance, owner needs to abide by the restrictions for a certain time period ex: 6 months. if dog is deemed a nuisance more than 3 times then more restrictions are put in place, or time frame is extended. A dog that causes serious injury or health should undergo obedience training for a course up to a year or dog has to be surrendered.
- Included at least one expert in dog behavior/training
- There are qualified animal experts at the table.
- Unbiased and animal familiarity
- Yes
- Strong preference should be given to training and intervention over euthanasia. Killing the animal should be an absolute LAST resort.
- As long as the tribunal does not have the authority to euthanize an animal, instead power to enforce require training for pets and owners.
- It had a fair ratio of non pet owners to pet owners. It should include animal behavioural experts and also someone qualified to judge/see the victim's point of view.
- Owners should be able to see their dog during the decision making process
- The tribunal should be made up of people who have a formal background in animal behavior.
- Right to appeal euthanasia.
- That those on the tribunal be made up of professionals in relevant the fields of which they are presiding over, eg. For dog bites they would be veterinarians and dog behavioral specialists etc.
- Tribunal of veterinary behaviourists.
- No Bias against bully breeds and large breeds.
- That the non city representatives include dog behaviourist that can also assess what role human error played in the situation that led to bite.
- Dependent on how this tribunal would be appointed and the level of transparency regarding the selection/voting process and the backgrounds of the potential tribunal members.
- Representatives are educated on animal behavior and recognize that that BSL is not supported by scientific evidence.
- The members of the tribunal did not have a bias towards any dog breed and automatically blame the dog for the event just because they were breed X.
- Depending on the breed and action
- Must be staffed by animal behavioral experts
- Any recommendation for euthanasia must go to the court of queens bench.

- Serious vetting of members of involved. Bias against dogs, or certain breeds cannot exist.
- Dog should never be euthanized. Its the way its the dog was raised. Give it a chance to Rehabilitate.
- As long as courts have final say
- If there would be no breed specific legislation, or biases against pitbull breeds, particularly
- A 2nd level hearing needs to be carried out if the tribunal determined the dog needed to be euthanized.
- Dog would not bw euthanized, but i stead rehabilitated
- Some Common
- All appropriate information/documentation is reviewed appropriately and the owner is given a chance to attend obedience classes and takes all measures to ensure the animal does not re-offend.
- Please also assess the owner's ability to manage their pets - too many people neglect basic training and responsibility.
- Training comes before euthanasia
- No dogs are euthanized. Prefer if dogs are trained and returned to owners.
- It cannot order euthanasia.
- Takes place quickly
- I would accept if the tribunal kept in mind.. most often then not, it is the owner and not the dog that is at fault. The owner should be responsible for getting training on how to handle and care for their dog.
- Unbiased persons are sat in the tribunal, no one person that is know to have or outwardly dislikes ANY specific breed of dog. I believe bias against a specific breed or appearance of any living being is a form of racism and should not be tolerated, no matter the situation or form
- X
- Euthanasia is the LAST resort. It is not an option unless there are and have been several attacks at multiple times and if all other methods (training, etc..) have been tried. I do not support euthanasia as a result of a single attack.
- The owner of the dog is held responsible rather than the dog.
- Must try to rehabilitate the dog first before drastic measures are taken.
- That all parties involved were not biased toward any specific breed
- It was not discriminatory to a specific dog breed. There is no proof that put bulls are more dangerous than any other dog breed.
- ...as long as all nuisance dogs are treated the same, regardless of breed, decisions made based solely on the facts of the incident.
- As long as the dummies who run everything else in this city aren't involved.
- Vets, dog behavioural specialists, dog owners & public safety experts consulted. Judges must have experience handling dogs to understand their behaviour.
- It is analyzed as a case by case scenario and the people involved are not biased or skewed due to the dog breed or other personal biases

- Obedience classes with proof that they were taken. I don't feel pit bulls are appropriate for the City - most owners don't have the physical strength to hold them back when they get agitated.
- That animal behaviourist, board certified veterinarian, social workers, and law enforcement agencies are used to evaluate the dogs behaviour, home environment, where the incident occurred, and the potential for re-offending
- No city employees on the tribunal. Animal behaviourists and vets only that look at what caused the dog to bite.
- Properly selected representatives that do not have a given bias against pitbull breeds.
- Made up of balanced persons that are recognized professionals in dog behaviour with a basis in science and does not include dog bite victims.
- As long as the tribunal is as strict as a the court system would be and it's not a "get out of jail free" card
- It is made up of bylaw officials, dog behaviouralist and vet personnel
- No dogs be euthanized as a result of government or shelter negligence
- The dog's breed should not be part of the process. If a person colour isn't listed in an arrest, a dog's breed should not be either. It causes unneeded and unwanted bias.
- Humanity is used. NO EUTHANASIA! We're a 1st world country! This is sick
- Don't believe the dog should be euthanized. First should be given to foster and attempt made to better the dogs behaviour.
- It needs to be a fair trial. look into why it happened. sometimes the dog is just protecting its family but no one else realizes that.
- The tribunal is made up partly of people with training in dog behaviour.
- Euthanasia should not be on the table until the case is processed and the dog/owner are found guilty.
- was overlooked by third party like spca
- Depends on how members of the tribunal are selected
- Don't act based on the breed. It's never the breeds fault. A domesticated pet isn't born aggressive.
- I like the idea of dogs not waiting to be terminated. They are under stress and that's not okay.
- I would like to see stiffer penalties for owners that have aggressive or nuisance dogs, as it is rarely the dogs fault, versus the owners fault for failing to provide proper training.
- N/a
- Includes judges/lawyers on the tribunal team.
- Half of the tribunal members own large breed dogs
- Don't put down dogs for biting, it's the owners fault. The dogs just need training
- Fair representation for dog owners. Scientific evidence-responsiveness.
- If one of the members owned a "pitbull". No biased opinions!
- This shouldn't be just for pit bulls, other dogs can be harmful fault. It should never be the animals fault, bad owners = bad pets. And pit bulls are no exception.
- You look at the case by case basis and not by the breed.

- the option for the tribunal does NOT include euthanasia
- The officials should be elected and unbiased
- There should be veterinary input on the tribunal.
- Need vet &/or behaviourist on panel. Panel powers must be clearly defined.
- Dog behaviour expert should be involved
- There needs to be a fair and objective assessment performed by a licensed and certified animal behaviorist. Fair and objective is the key.
- It contained people who did not have prejudice towards certain breeds and included people from animal shelters, clinics and training facilities as they understand canine behaviour best.
- Includes members of animal shelters in order to reduce harm to animals
- there is a fair and just process to determine the tribunal and that it is monitored/assessed and reports shared publicly.
- Assessment of the actions of the human leading up to the bite, as humans are the cause of most dog bites, not the dog.
- So long as this tribunal does not become a vigilante in banning or only process those dogs directed in breed specific legislation and allows the pet owners due process with the aim of reuniting the pet and their owner.
- The tribunal could not order euthanasia. Tribunal should contain members who are responsible pet owners this should make up the majority of the tribunal. Tribunal should have members from local rescue societies and dog training facilities.
- A dog behaviour specialist makes the decisions not some random person with limited knowledge and high opinions against breeds
- A dog trainer was allowed to assess the dog and provide feedback around the incident and the likelihood of future dog behavior.
- No euthanization
- Panel of pet owners of various breeds . No major power only to suggest small fines. For a dog to be euthanized there have to be a serious track record of bad behaviour (attacks). Education or transfer of ownership should be priority.
- Pit bulls are not treated differently
- If it is a fair process for everyone. Dog owners as well as people who get hurt by dogs.
- The breed of the dog is not disclosed to allow fair and unbiased assessment.
- They would have to follow a legal mandate, being fair and unbiased. They would also have to be able to impose and enforce fines and conditions.
- Included animal- and in this case dog experts- on the tribunal
- Why the dog bit the victim is taken into account- The victim could have been harassing the dog or owner, and the dog may have been acting in defence.
- Those part of the tribunal have appropriate experience and training to appropriate decisions
- That the tribunal participants are industry professionals such as veterinarians, or certified dog trainers.

- Include non-biased veterinary professionals
- There needs to be an effective appeal system to the courts to address issues of bias or other issues of unfair decision making.
- That this applies to all dog breeds. Remember any dog will bite, and if the owner and the victim are in agreement then the animal should remain with the owner and the animal needs to be supervised when outside and kept away from people it doesn't know
- The dog is able to remain at their respective owners house under house arrest conditions. As well as taking a deeper dive into how the dog was raised, what type of dog owners are they. Ect... as more often than not, it is an owner fault rather than the dogs fault that a bite happened. Unless it's a chihuahua, they are one of the most aggressive dog breeds. Pitbulls are not aggressive by nature, I've never met a truly aggressive pitbull. Unless it was raised by an aggressive and or abusive owner.
- It has to contain people that actually understand dog behavior and not automatically blame the dog. Someone who looks at all contributing factors.
- It included professional dog trainers so the life of a dog is not taken based on opinion.. emotion ..or prejudice
- The tribunal should not be making decisions about euthanizing an animal, such cases should go to court
- Euthanization should always be off the table and rehabilitation should always be sought.
- How would the tribunal be formed? Would they hate bully breeds as much as you? How would it be fair?
- Any assessment must be done by a certified professional dog trainer with proper certification and experience. No assessment shall be done by the City. It must be from an independent party, non-related to the City.
- The dog is offered rehabilitation at owner's expense and never be euthanized
- Blah blah
- Owners are required to take obedience training or be banned from owning dogs before the animal is punished
- Appropriate qualifications for those sitting on the tribunal.
- You aren't biasing the judgements off the breed / size / look of the dog. The tribunal should make decisions without seeing the animal whatsoever.
- Dog is treated fairly, to stay on "bail" condition with owner at home until tribunal is completed
- I would support it as long as it's for all dogs, and not just one breed specifically.
- Owners of nuisance animals are required to be educated on animal care and training
- nn
- Allow the dogs to stay with their owners while waiting for the court appearance
- The dog could remain with the owner, even if it must stay on the owners property
- The tribunal would be made up of citizen experts, ie vets, dog trainers, etc.

- All tribunal decisions should be made with no breed based decision making. All dogs should be judged based on reasoning for any incident and number of incidents. The human beings should be on trial more than any dog.
- The dog should remain in the owner's home or in a trained volunteer's home under specific conditions (muzzle etc)
- That there is no prejudice against certain dogs that portrayed by media.
- Clear process for any breed with input from humane society, trainers, other. Needs to have proper assessment and understanding of the full situation. Not based on judgement.
- Destroying the dog should be a last resort. Would recommend rehousing first.
- Support for appeal
- The tribunal has strict guidelines and act as a support only (no power grabs)
- 100% completely unbiased and vetted people on are on it
- As long as the tribunal is screened and regularly reviewed
- It was unbiased in decisions made
- Only applied to dogs considered nuisances and not to pitbulls without violent offences
- That the dogs don't get put down and they get rehabilitated
- Dog behavioural experts and/or vets as part of the tribunal so the decisions are based on evidence based information and not knee jerk emotional based responses
- Qualified pet experts on the tribunal
- You have people that support the breed in question
- Includes dog specialists only
- As long as they are qualified to assess dogs
- The dog should be put through obedience training first before vicious dogs are euthanized.
- It had one peace officer on the tribunal
- Strict conditions need to be met if decision is to return the pet. People need to understand that if their pet is aggressive they need to invest in correcting their behaviour.
- The options given above are too nebulous. I support the effort to limit an animals trauma and to return them to their homes as quickly as possible however, a tribunal doesn't sound like the efficient solution that is required.
- That the dog could return home and just have to stay there, its not fair for them to be separated from their home and locked up, if anything that would cause more drama for them and encourage more bad behaviour
- the dog owner being allowed to present support such as veterinarians and witnesses who have a history with the animal as well as anyone on their side that might be part of the incident in question.
- That there be members who are also dog owners/pitbull owners
- Obedience course for the dog, warning to owner about consequences relating if obedience courses are not done or the animal becomes a 'nuisance' again. Giving the dog and owner a chance to correct the behaviour.
- That it didn't discriminate against dog breed, and would never end in the animal being put down

- The dog's welfare is foremost, followed by the owner being required to take responsible pet ownership training.
- training has been provided for both the dog and the human. As well as the breed of the dog cannot be a factor in the ruling. A dog bite is a dog bite, regardless of the breed.
- The best interest of the dog is the main reason behind this tribunal.
- The dog OWNER is held accountable. Muzzling, or that idiotic idea of house arrest, or literally killing the animal are used as last resorts and the breed of the dog is not taken into account. Again, all breeds have the potential to be aggressive, it's all in how the owner trains them
- Look into the dogs living situation. Dogs cannot be held responsible for improper training by owners
- The the individuals appointed to these tribunals represent a diverse field of experts. That both animal control officials, veterinarian, and dog rehabilitation professionals are represented among the experts.
- No more bylaws!!
- Appropriately staffed by educated people who are not all terrified of pit bulls.
- Size and type of dog are taken o to account. Pit Bulls (and the like) should be considered a public danger.
- BAD OWNERS. NOT BAD DOGS. So disgusted how this is all against pitbulls. Give your head a shake.
- Much of the results revolve around training and education on dog behaviour and training.
- The civilian volunteers need to have a background of working with dogs so they understand that one particular breed is no more vicious than another. Ex: vets, animal technicians, certified dog trainers etc.
- If it's not breed specific and the owners are held responsible not the dog
- No one can murder anyone else's dog
- Only if the tribunal is make of individuals that understand dog behaviour
- Tribunal decisions should be legally binding and registered against owners within the judicial system.
- Mandatory training with a professional trainer.
- Yes
- It should include all breeds of dogs not just pitbull type dogs
- No euthanization, as this is an owner issue and they should be held responsible.
- There was properly educated people on this tribunal that do not have bias towards certain breeds and who can properly asses and make a decision regarding this situation and those involved.
- All dogs treated as a case by case.
- It is not breed biased
- Properly mediated and advocated on both parties sides
- A higher focus on owner training and punishment. Euthanizing the pet should not be an option before jail time for incidents.

- I like the idea of a tribunal, however I dislike the idea of city officials delegating their responsibilities to non-city personnel. If the city of Calgary officials are willing to forfeit some of their decision making, they should be willing to forfeit some of their salary as well.
- The owner keeps the dogs while waiting for the assess
- Required use of experts in dog behaviour
- Dogs are not to be euthanized and sent to mandatory training. Dogs to remain with the owner during the waiting period, with conditions, unless it is determined the owner is the problem due to abuse of the animal.. Both sides of the story must be heard. I'm sure in some cases dogs are provoked and bite because they feel threatened.
- same governance experience level of people managing tribunall
- tribunal is made up of professionals such as veterinarians, dog trainers and not people inexperienced with dogs.
- As long as the victim was okay with the result
- As long as this can be challenged, discussed and appealed, and they are not given ultimate authority.
- Fair and speedy trial. No unnecessary bureaucracy and red tape.
- Similar to those voting or have say in animal by-laws, I feel a Tribunal Group must consist of only people with actual legitimate dog experience & ALL must have unbiased opinions.
- Apply statistical analysis rather than make stigmatized assumptions
- I would support a tribunal if it was in support of rehabilitating instead of straight to killing the animal. Most times it is human error in training that causes biting or attacks. Not the fault of the dog.
- The people on the tribunal would need to have extensive knowledge of dogs (including behaviors)
- No breed specific legislation
- That all factors of the situation be considered, beyond the dog's purported breed.
- That Pitbulls did not get euthanized. Better yet, penalize the owner. They're responsible for their dog. Dogs live purely off of instinct and what they are taught. A dog deemed vicious should NOT be allowed in dog parks or off leash areas. This needs to fall back on to the owner, not the dog.
- Each case must be investigated on equal terms no matter the animal.
- Review vicious dog declarations and assess if the dog should be euthanized
- At the owner's cost, they can pay for the right to get the dog out of shelter if they abide by certain restrictions (must stay on property; must be on leash outside at all times).
- Euthanizing should only be a very last resort
- it should have animal behaviourists on the panel
- The tribunal needs to be comprised of experts in dog behaviour.
- The members of the tribunal had no predisposition to specific rulings and complete transparency of their background. Also their decisions would need to be completely consistent with those passed by the Court of Queens Bench, just more efficient.
- It actually is more timely than the alternative.

- The tribunal included multiple veterinarians with a special interest in behaviour and veterinarian recommended dog trainers that specialize in fearful animals
- A thorough investigation behind why the bite occurred.
- As long not a single person on the tribunal can be biased against any breed for any reason I.e. right always saying the animal is dangerous and must be killed simply for being a pit bull. Even better if ones a Veterinarian or animal behaviorist, and one has or had a pitbull or other unfairly targeted breed
- As long as the tribunal has members of input from local rescue groups and/or a dog behaviouralist to determine what's best for the dog. Euthanasia should be the LAST option.
- The members of the tribunal are sufficiently versed in the legal aspects of animal control.
- As it was fair and not one side.
- That they understand ALL dogs are capable of biting.
- The tribunal understands that there are not bad dogs, just bad dog owners
- If they can properly train the dog and prove its trained then these rules no longer apply to the dog.
- Owner of dog pays for fees
- Must be able to appeal
- Owner needs to be held accountable, not the dog.
- The animal isn't allowed to leave owners property
- An investigation is done into the cause of a dog bite. Most dogs don't bite unless provoked. Did the victim tease, harass or otherwise abuse the dog to provoke it to bite?
- They are trained and non biases against breed and give punishment based on sitation and owner. I wouldnt want someone who is unknowledged and biases to decide what happens to my animal. Proper training and investigation should happen.
- The dog should get to stay at owners house on conditions that it doesn't leave the property.
- Not be breed biased
- Policy, standards and procedures are pre-established based on the law. Flexibility and compassion are but into system.
- Dog not to be euthanized until a second decision at court.
- It considered past issues, doesn't discriminate based on breed, no kill orders
- Experts in canine behaviour must assess dog and be part of the tribunal.
- Dog should be thoroughly assessed for danger. If rehab is truely out of the question, then euthanasia is the only option. No dead dogs.
- Please ensure that individuals with experience in this area are involved.
- That at least one member of the tribunal be an impartial lawyer with no affiliation to the City, Humane Society, rescue organization, etc.
- The right for an owner to appeal a decision made by the tribunal. At least 50% of the tribunal has training or education in animal care.
- Dogs are not judged on breed type
- Be comprised of at least one general member of the public, a vet, and a trainer.

- Do not put all dogs in the same situation.
- Needs someone with actual legal/judicial system experience heading it (ie - not a civilian City employee)
- The representatives must consist of Non-biased individuals with some having extensive expertise in animal behavior.
- As long as it is done quickly and effeciently.
- as long as those hearing the cases are unbiased
- If a dog has bitten or exhibits bad behaviour only, not breed specific
- as long as all appropriate bylaws are followed - should be overseen by a legal professional to ensure the case is looked at without bias.
- The dogs are NOT euthanized and instead receive obedience training.
- Additional training classes led by pit bull specific trainers
- The tribunal can not be a “fast lane” for euthanizing. Euthanizing should be the last possible option.
- That breed does not play a role in the determination of guilt alone. All dog behaviour should be held to the same standard in order to protect the public from dangerous and nuisance dogs of all breeds.
- Fair, unbiased and fact based
- At least one responsible owner or a “pit bull” on the team.
- If you didn't hire a bunch of Pitbull worshippers.
- As long as the tribunal is comprised of qualified, non bias individuals
- The tribunal includes a dog supporter, perhaps someone from the humane society
- Pitbull not be targeted as a nuisance dog for the sake of their breed.
- If euthanasia was the last resort. Any aggressive dogs should undergo behavioral training and assessment.
- Be actual trained experts and not politicians or otherwise motivated.
- Unbiased opinion. Review the incident on WHY the bite occurred. Often its a human getting in the way of a dog fight or even instigating the bite themselves.
- Happens in a reasonable time frame
- Only people in this tribunal should be people with deep understanding of dog training and obedience. Preferably professionals in the field.
- So long as it is fiscally responsible
- who is on the tribunal and what are the professional requirements of those people. I don't want a drama teacher making decisions on animals (or our Country)...
- Having an independent review and complaints board. All tribunal members being science-based behavioural trainers with previous experience working with high-risk animals.
- Qualified, unbiased animal behavioural experts are on the tribunal.
- The owners of the dog are responsible for payment and take a responsible pet owning class
- That it can be appealed to a higher authority.
- breed was not a factor in the decision making process

- It doesn't mean more dogs are euthanized and that people who understand dogs and dog behaviour are part of the tribunal
- As long as it is staffed with qualified and properly trained individuals in animal behavior
- The individuals sitting on the tribunal would need to be treated like a jury - screened to make sure there are no biases or conflicts of interest that would prevent an individual from making decisions based on prejudice.
- Animals are never euthanized as a result of tribunal decision. Jail time/hefty fines for owners would be fine though.
- If all avenues and reasons why the dog was biting was thoroughly investigated and that putting the dog down wasn't the first decision made.
- No breed specific legislation is allowable. All responsibility is on the owner not the dog or the breed.
- No "breed racism" against dogs. The owner raised the dog; the owner should be the one judged for bad behaviours or insufficient training.
- The costs of the tribunal are borne by dog owners and there is fee recovery against guilty owners.
- The whole situation is looked at and a fair trial is given for the dog and it's not condemned due to breed
- Both representatives from city and non city (to represent client and dog) would be present
- Qualified people need to be on this tribunal. Veterinary professionals or qualified dog behaviouralists
- If the tribunal is created and administered by Alberta Justice
- fair system that is not corrupt like many that exist now / not used to hurt people or animals
- It is the first offence (or alleged offence) for both the dog and the owner. Otherwise, the dog should be held until the owner's court case is completed.
- The people who sit on the tribunal have been proven to be fair and invested in the cause.
- Swift carriage of actions with very clear guidelines for dangerous animals
- The tribunal should include dog lovers and spca, etc. This is not a place for bureaucracy.
- Breed was not one of the factors considered when determining the fate of a dog.
- The panel included a vet
- Same rules for all breeds - small and medium dogs included.
- The tribunal representatives should not have the ultimate decision in serious cases that have the possibility to end in euthanasia.
- Representatives (both City and nonCity) should be professionally accredited and certified animal (dog) specialists. Lay people who do not have a background to understand root cause behind animal behaviours should be prohibited from sitting on the tribunal.
- The tribunal is allowed to enact strong deterrents/punishments against owners and their dangerous dogs.
- As long as there are harsh punishments. And that the tribunal members do not give favouritism to dog owners
- A dog is not taking full responsibility of an attack it should be the owner as well
- These situations should be handled quickly for the sake of the animal and everyone involved.

- This should involve a quality person from Humane Society or possibly a dog trainer
- follow a set of questions, how was the dog trained? was it trained? why would the dog attack? Find out the background of the dog? is this normal behavior? how did the owners react? Was the dog protecting a person? etc
- some dogs are enticed, some aren't
- The only determining factor is the actual incident—not breed and not anything else
- stereotyping breeds is a racist type of behaviour that the city will promote shamefully. It is NOT the breed that is the problem, it is the environment that it is raised in. For the city to utter such bigotry is disgusting! shame
- Depends on who is involved on the tribunal - should include peace officers, veterinarian doing intake of dog at shelter
- Tribunal members be informed, impartial and educated
- Training for the dog owner be considered as a requirement before considering euthanizing the animal.
- It includes experts in dog behavior/training with proven unbiased opinion towards certain breeds
- Experts need to assess this. I support your effort to reduce the suffering of these animals.
- Completely non-biased based off breed, and if the recommendation is to euthanize the dog - then it be carried through the provincial court and decided by a judge. Lastly, canine professionals must comprise of the tribunal to make fair and rightful decisions.
- Gives the owner an opportunity to address the issue by registering for training with the dog.
- If the tribunal was made of dog positive individuals with education (ie vets, trainers, etc.)
- That it has no over-reaching power and there is still the option to have council or a representative during the tribunal.
- Tribunal Members are thoroughly screened and approved by Calgary Humane Society
- C
- Option exists for a court hearing.
- No euthanization of dogs; shelters should instead be found to rehome and retrain difficult dogs.
- the person overseeing the case has no preconceived notions of a dog's "attitude" based on its breed - in other words, all dogs are capable of biting.
- Clear ground rules specified; permits the use of experts related to dog training and behaviour.
- There must be a cost recovery element. I also don't like the idea of a tribunal being able to order a dog to be euthanized.
- It depends on who will be part making the Tribunal decisions.
- non city representatives are experts in dog behaviour, SPCA Rep,
- Animal behaviour background, showing no bias towards breeds. More focus on owner and their actions or lack of.
- All parties are heard and considered. Unbiased reviewing committee.
- They do not hold prejudice against breeds. This is an owner issue not the dogs. Training should be mandatory for dogs who haven't been raised right or abused. .

- worked strictly under the by-laws put in place by the city for all adjudications.
- there needs to be responsible dog owners, and/or humane society staff.
- Dogs should not be euthanized for biting or attacking another animal or human. This is absolutely not the fault of the dog. An aggressive or dangerous incident is entirely the fault of the dog owner. Please punish the owner accordingly and NOT the dog. If the dog is taken to a no-kill shelter, I promise you that it will eventually be adopted by a loving individual or family that is able to properly care for the dog and ensure that it receives the proper training and structure in its environment that it needs. I would strongly support a tribunal if and only if the dog would never be euthanized after an attack or bite incident. Again, I must strongly reiterate that the dog or specific dog breed is not the problem. The problem is the human owner of the dog.
- The representatives would have to interact with the dog.
- Determine, and review restrictions placed on a dog, which the owner would need to abide by to keep the animal ONLY IF THIS WAS THE FIRST COURSE OF ACTION
- The decision(s) made by the tribunal cannot take effect while they are being appealed at the Court of Queen's Bench, and a sufficient period of time should be provided between when the decisions are made and when they take effect to allow for the owner to decide and begin the appeal process.
- made it VERY clear that pit bulls, etc. receive the same fair trial that something "nicer" like a labrador would. humans produce enough racism as it is.
- One of the people should be a Certified Animal Behaviourist and the other members on the board should be unbiased to breeds and understand general dog behaviour
- As long as the representatives were qualified and trained to understand pet behavior and available effective pet training options.
- They don't judge based on the breed of the dog
- The reason that the dog bit the person should be the center of the tribunal (i.e. was the animal threatened, did the "victim" invade the personal space of the dog or owner, etc)
- It is not biased to specific breeds.
- Unbiased proper trial
- Don't euthanize the dog
- If there is the ability to appeal the decision, then anytime a pet owner does not agree with Tribunal, they will appeal, which will simply drag out the process longer and defeat the whole purpose of having a tribunal to speed things up.
- Fair and not bias against any specific type of breed. The fact that one specific type of breed is singled out in the above question is appalling. Other jurisdictions that have been successful in reducing dog bites have a comprehensive understanding of the issues surrounding dog ownership and do not lay blame at the specific breed. Very disappointing to see this approach taken.
- A Bail Condition on offending Pet Owner, Will insure adherence to condition(s), and enforce the gravity of the matter, failure to comply will place pet into custody of Bylaw officers...
- As long as the breed of the dog is irrelevant, an alternative method to process these cases is acceptable. ANY and EVERY dog-bite, regardless of the breed of dog, that is severe enough to require investigation can and should be handled this way.

- The dog is not subjected to euthanization
- it seems good in theory but if it is a tribunal of people who have a prejudice against pitbulls, that's a problem. euthanizing should only be an option in extreme cases for ANY BREED or a dog that has multiple aggressive offenses. putting a dog down for biting someone trespassing into his yard is ridiculous and unfair. he is protecting his property and doing what he is supposed to do. a tribunal must be fair and just or it shouldn't exist.
- Identification of one off events vs repetitive aggressive behavior and involving a dog behaviorist to individually assess nuisance dogs. Is it the dog or the owner or the environment affecting the dog.
- both sides of the story are clearly heard. I have had people at the off leash park kick my dog because it was bigger than his small dog. My dog was wanting to meet his small dog that was on leash. Most people are the problem.
- Discriminatory practices against certain breeds is not allowed
- If this tribunal did NOT seek to prosecute owners of certain pets unfairly, and if it ensured fair conditions and FACT based evidence to assess every case.
- only if the non city representatives were non biased, if they had a dog attack trauma previously they should not be allowed to vote their opinion as it will be muddled
- No euthanasia
- I do not support euthanization of the dog. Dog should be rehabilitated and sent trained. The issue is the dog owner not the dog!
- As long as this involved in the tribunal are educated on dog psychology and behavior and are competent in what it means to be a safe dog owner
- While a tribunal system sounds more efficient, I would like to better understand the differences between the proposed tribunal system and provincial court and where the decision making power lies.
- Evaluate the owner AS WELL AS the dog. Often times dog bites/attacks are due to poor ownership and training - the dog doesn't know better!
- As long as it was reputable and knowledgeable people in the tribunal
- Dog owners pay for it, always
- That no specific breed is discriminated against just because of how it may look. That a professional behaviourist evaluate the dog and also how owner of the dog handles the dog in any situation. It is the responsibility of the owner to insure they have total control over their dog no matter what and no matter what breed the own or the size of the dog.
- Tribunal would need to be fair and in the best interest of the animal not the owner. The right representatives would need to be on the tribunal, informed, fair advocates for the animal.
- No authority to euthanize
- fairness and impartiality by neutral parties
- The tribunal has animal care/training professionals on it.
- Outlaw these dogs.
- Do not base on breed of animal. Its still rasicm!

- if it isn't biased and the tribunal has members that own dogs and understands the animal. Not people that have 0 experience with dogs and have biased opinions against certain breeds.
- The dog should go to obedient training and then be judged on how far along the dog has come
- No breed discrimination. Period
- Determining whether the dog is at fault as opposed to the human/animal who's bitten.
- No dogs euthanized. Compensatory obedience training with a professional to correct both the dog and the owner's behaviour
- if it was deemed that the dog wasn't fully at fault. Yes they have been not on a leash however there are times when a dog is defending itself
- Cases were reviewed by more than 2 city representatives
- No Euthanization.
- I support this as long as there are truly evenly weighted individuals involved. For example, perhaps include a dog trainer, a vet, dog owners from the public, non dog owners, folks who are a neutral party etc.
- Make sure that the Dog wasn't provoked or attack (by animal or human) and just defending it's self.
- Subject to a timely appeal.
- That it was not breed specific but behavioural
- the panel included experts in pet care, training, and behaviours.
- No euthanizing dogs until they see a professional trainer. Does not get left up to the city to determine.
- Done inside and outside the shelter as dogs can experience high stress in shelters and may not behave as they would if they were more comfortable.
- Multiple sources are used as character references for the animal as displays of aggression can be very circumstantial
- Owners of dogs should be required to attend a training session with the dog and be educated on handling the animal.
- Non-biased individuals should be partake in this tribunal as all dogs that have teeth have the potential to be vicious in the presence of any strangers.
- Tribunal would include a dog-behaviour expert.
- So long as due process is followed
- All non-City people are animal professionals that can share research references that help them make their decisions
- Euthanization is not an option. First offence should label the dog a nuisance causing the dog (any breed) to be muzzled in public. Owner should surrender the dog if a second offence occurs and all realistic options explored for rehoming the dog with new responsible owners
- Have people with experience in dogs (trainers, rescue organization personnel) and justice running it, not exclusively one or the other.
- It must have veterinarians and pro dog people on it - with intimate knowledge of dog behaviours

- Assessment to determine euthanasia should not use breed or any other stereotypes as determining factors. Each case should be carefully reviewed and determine first if behavioral issues can be remedied through training or rehoming the dog to a more responsible owner.
- Reviews need to be completed by a person who is aware of breed biases bias. Investigations need to be directed towards the owners handling of the dog. A relocation if the animal to trained professionals who specialize in rehabilitation of the dog should be an alternative to euthanasia. Corrective measures would need to be put in place for the owner. They should have to meet training requirements and pass a course on dog handling.
- Additional consideration is provided to the clear ability for dogs to rehabilitate, and the owners have additional onus placed on them to ensure that the dogs were not taught to act aggressively. Also that rescues and other volunteer organizations are used to retrain aggressive dogs, and killing them is not the knee jerk reaction. The unnecessary killing of dogs has happened previously and when there are willing parties asking to take the dogs and work with them, this is considered and done.
- It is still required to go to Court of Queen's Bench (not only by appeal)
- That they would not discriminate against breed, but rather look at the objective evidence that lead to the incident, in order to make an appropriate judgment
- cannot make euthanization decisions
- Only if the decision makers are highly knowledgeable in animal behaviour and are unbiased when it comes to breedism
- I think experts in dog bites and behaviour (true experts - behaviourists, veterinary behaviourists etc) need to be consulted on these cases and the tribunal should be educated too. But yes I support fast tracking this as I have first hand seen the conditions these dogs in while waiting for a court trial. It's not good welfare.
- At least one member of the tribunal is a dog behaviour specialist.
- Your survey does not provide enough information to submit an informed answer. Whoever wrote this survey needs education on how to craft an impartial survey.
- People who are not dog owners should not be allowed on the tribunal. I can just imagine some power hungry dog hater being on the tribunal with absolutely zero empathy or understanding.
- To please remember, a dog bites for a reason - human error - it is not the dogs/animals fault!
- Those on the tribunal must be balanced, reasonable and unbiased
- They are able to err on the side of caution and ensure problem owners are not able to find loops holes to use.
- As long as the owner is responsible and adheres
- The representatives in the cases were carefully hand picked/elected to avoid biases/discrimination
- As long as representatives used in the tribunal are non-discriminating against animal breeds.
- Don't euthanize the dog. If the dog is bad, it's because the owners are bad. Rehabilitate. Not murder.
- The tribunal should consist of animal behaviorist sand veterinary medical staff who are more aware of animal behavior. Pit bulls or pit bull types should not be singled out. Small dogs are more likely to bite and cause damage than a pit bull.

- The tribunal recognizes that an owner will say anything to defend/protect their pet.
- There is an unbiased jury
- It was also used to determine owner responsibility (if the dog has bad behaviour do to the household it is in)
- The euthanization of a dog be the absolute last resort. Second last being that new owners with proper training are found.
- No bias would be placed towards pit bull breeds. It would always be a fair tribunal
- any assessment or designation of a dog is done by an independent professional trainer
- if they had an impartial and un biased approach.
- The City of Calgary and those in charge of said tribunal MUST RECOGNIZE THAT NOT ALL "PITBULLS" ARE BAD! Do you? Do you recognize that?!
- I would be concerned if the tribunal was not open minded to the owner's input, under appropriate circumstances. Also, there would have to be a mechanism to recuse tribunal member(s) if by chance they knew the pet owner.
- Still reviewed in court after
- The pet and victim get through the process faster
- No euthanasia unless involving children or death.
- Dogs should not be euthanized.
- Biggest concern is bias. Nothing wrong with using a tribunal but how are members chosen to ensure that each case is assessed without bias.
- Non-bias professionals made the decisions
- A large variety of people based on race, gender, age, education, etc., so that their decisions are fair
- No euthanasia unless involving children or death.
- Euthanasia is a last resort i.e. training and rehab are the most common outcomes.
- That the tribunal has the ability to add restrictions/conditions relevant to the case so that public safety is a priority as the process continues.
- Dogs don't need a fair trial, tribunal or other legal process. If they bite a human, they should be put down immediately, and the owner charged criminally.
- Members of tribunal should have experience training dogs of all breeds and extensive knowledge of psychological behavior of dogs
- Appropriate challenge/review process available to any victims or owner.
- An unbiased system that isn't biased to any one breed
- It was treated the same as if it was a court case, with the same penalties
- If it included trainers that are recognized for their work with reactive and/or aggressive dogs or prey behaviour.
- It does not discriminate based on the breed of the dog.
- The tribunal does not have the authority to order that a dog is euthanized, they can only submit their recommendation to the Court of Queens Bench.

- That the guardian of the dog was able to defend the dogs actions. Some dogs will attack if threatened or scared.
- If the animal is a danger to people and the owner isn't taking accountability and the animal can't be rehabilitated then I would support a tribunal
- All factors were met
- There should be NO leniency for a dog that has completed enforced obedience classes and still offends obviously the help available is not helping the dog.
- Reasonable rules put into the family and the dog in question
- No euthanasia unless involving children or death.
- The panel must include someone from the Humane Society, a veterinarian, and a professional trainer.
- Good idea
- Not be breed specific but behaviour specific and take into account behaviorists thoughts on the animal.
- As long as it's an easy process for people to follow and they're not using this to target bully breeds specifically and problematic owners instead.
- The panel is made up of knowledgeable and non biased decision makers. For example, have a veterinarian, behavioural trainer, a member of the city of Calgary bylaw team, and a non-dog owner, all of whom shall be impartial or have no relation to the people involved in said case.
- Vicious dogs are considered one that "bites" more than 3 times
- Someone monitored the dog/owner to ensure that they are abiding by orders and restrictions.
- As long as it is not targeted towards pit bulls as they are some of the most gentle dogs.
- yes
- Clarification on what vicious dog declarations are (do not agree with breed characteristics being apart of this) ~~W~~. Ensuring effective reporting standards are in place for bylaw officers to ensure all the facts are gathered. Euthanasia must be a last resort, all other options must be explored before that option is to be considered (training, change in ownership, rehabilitation program, etc.)
- I agree that cases need to be heard and assessed within a reasonable period of time to minimize the time a dog spends in the shelter. This punishment will likely only make their behaviour worse.
- The dog owner would agree to use the tribunal instead of go to court.
- Tribunal decisions are made on a case by case basis and are not biased based on the breed or appearances of the dog.
- dog is considered innocent until proven guilty for a first offense
- They should not decide if the dog should be euthanized
- As long as there are no "breed specific" wording and it only deals with the exact dogs behaviours and doesn't discriminate due to breed/size.
- severity, number of cases against the dog. Also, if a dog bites someone the actions used up to the incident should be investigated for example, people or kids taunting or chasing dogs and ignoring the dogs signals of telling them they are scared or stressed.

- The dog in question stays with the owner until a decision has been made .
- Yes
- The dog owner has a say in whether the dog should be put down, all other alternative measures (such as keeping the dog at home) must be considered first
- The dog should be kept with its owners, muzzled when out of doors and the owner and dog must obtain obedience training. The dog should be removed from its owner if there is not an attempt to rehabilitate the dog.
- Nothing further
- The non city and city officials are not biased against specific breeds or have a record for advocating for all types of animals/dogs.
- The standard of evidence and rights of the owner/defendant are still respected to the same degree
- Ensure an unbiased process
- diverse animal experts on board
- If the dog stays in a foster home equipped to care for him/her while the tribunal takes place
- Transparency On all relevant information and documentation(s), “without any delays, and or systematic delays”.
- Number three
- Euthanasia should never be the outcome.
- Euthanasia was a very last resort in all cases
- Animal wellbeing specialists (vets) would need to be a part of representatives
- It is made up of a panel of impartial people with knowledge of animal behaviour - vets, canine behaviour specialists not just the SPCA or animal control
- No bias can be present against a dog on the basis of its breed. Only the behaviour and the owner’s (in)ability to control it should be considered
- Get people that love animals and actually know about the breeds like pit bulls, not people that just assume they’re all bad.
- Science based dog behaviorist is included in the panel
- fair and objective review of the case, regardless of dog breed; members of tribunal will NOT have any affiliation to any specific group that caters to any specific dog breed and must not have any animal-related violation or offences
- The best results 4 all
- The tribunal consists of individuals knowledgeable in dog behavior.
- That the tribunal included a dog behavior specialist that is independent of the city, both parties and has any specific aversion to the breed of dog in question.
- They are screened to ensure they aren't biased against pitbulls
- experts in dog behavior and training are included
- Non-city individuals should have a legal and/or background in dog behavior of some kind - trainers, vets, etc.

- As long as rehabilitation or rehoming is a choice because animals should not have to suffer for the choices of the owner
- The persons involved in the tribunal must not be biased to dog breeds and should not believe that some dog breeds are just classified as aggressive/dangerous. Completely impartial tribunal would be required which checks to ensure that it remains that way.
- every dog should be given a second chance to succeed.
- Includes dog owners of pit breeds
- That the blame lies solely on the humans involved, and not the dog who was raised incorrectly and doesn't know any better.
- That the crown prosecutor had knowledge of the breed and would not want to want to kill the breed. This would also include the Judge who should have some education in regards to the breed and not just their Bias.
