Ten days into water restrictions, Calgary is on track

It's been ten days since water restrictions began while crews work to connect the new feeder main to Calgary's water system. Water use has stayed below 500 million litres every day. Thank you, Calgary!

Please keep it up. Connection work is progressing as expected, and if everything continues to go as planned, we expect to lift water restrictions in about three weeks.

Every drop you save makes a difference

Update on feeder main connection work

Crews are connecting the new feeder main to the existing water system at three locations. Two of these work sites affect Bowness residents, and nearby homes should have received detailed notices about what to expect.

24/7 work starts this weekend at 89 Street and 33 Avenue N.W.

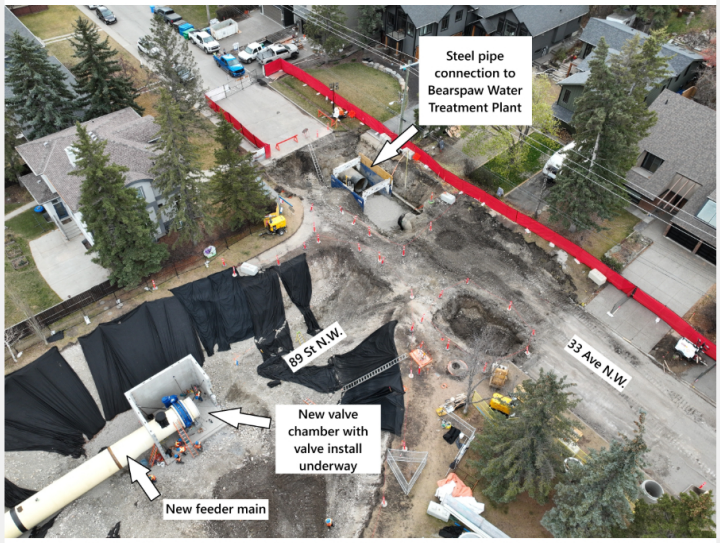

- 24/7 work is expected to start the evening of Sunday, Nov. 15 and will last approximately 2 weeks. Our team will be in touch with directly impacted residents prior to 24/7 work beginning.
- After the 24/7 work is complete, crews will return to regular construction hours, 12 hours a day, to finish community restoration, This includes road paving, sidewalks, curbs and landscaping.
- The intersection is closed. Road detours and parking restrictions are in place.

83 Street and 33/34 Avenue N.W.

- On Nov. 11, the traffic detour on 83 Street N.W. shifted from 34 Avenue N.W. to 33 Avenue N.W.
- Single-lane alternating traffic and pedestrian detours are in place. Drivers cannot turn west onto 33 Avenue N.W. from 83 Street N.W.
- Access to 34 Avenue from 83 Street will remain closed.
- A full closure of this intersection is no longer planned.

Update on Parkdale Boulevard repairs

- Construction is underway at all repair locations. Crews are excavating the sites before cutting and removing sections of the existing pipe and installing new pipe.
- Lane closures on Parkdale Boulevard will remain in place until the work is done, currently targeted for Dec. 2. Be prepared for traffic delays and consider planning an alternative route (such as 16 Avenue N) for your commute.

Support our local businesses this holiday season

Last week, Mayor Jeremy Farkas kicked off the eighth annual Support Local YYC campaign and encouraged Calgarians to shop in Bowness and Montgomery this holiday season.

Businesses in these communities have been affected by ongoing water main construction. Shopping and dining locally is a simple way to show your support while discovering unique shops, restaurants and services.

Explore the Bowness and Montgomery business directories and find a local business to support.

Resources for seniors and pet owners
