

Developing the Guidebook for Great Communities

For the past five years, citizens contributed ideas and perspectives on many planning projects. The information that we gathered helped shape the Guidebook for Great Communities. Moving forward, we will continue the conversation with citizens about planning the future of our communities. The development of the Guidebook will also continue, as we engage with more citizens on planning the future of our city.

