Verbatim Comments

Verbatim comments include all of the suggestions, comments and messages that were collected online and in-person. This document is over 1600 pages. We do not recommend printing the whole document. Please be cautious if you choose to print a portion of the document as each section is extremely long as well.

Verbatim comments from phase one of the public engagement are included here. While there are duplicate comments in this report, this did not in any way impact the themes in the What we Heard report. Offensive words and personally identifying information have been removed and replaced with either, [removed] or [personal information removed]; otherwise, verbatim comments are completely un-edited.

Comments that state 'see above' or some version of this are referencing the previous survey question that was answered. All comments were reviewed by the question that was asked. Click on any of the links below to go directly to a particular section.

What does responsible pet ownership mean to you?

- Learning and communicating through schools and communities that all creatures are equal. Teaching kindness and understanding plus information of healthy non aggressive teaching behaviours to help aid your dog. Clearing Dog mess and learning about breeds.
- To me, responsible pet ownership means everyone feels safe, comfortable, and their property is respected. Whether you own a pet or not.
- -leash your pet
-don't roam
-clean up after your pet
-minimize noise
- Ensuring your pet is not a nuisance to anyone
- Keeping control of my pets, cleaning up after them, providing for their health and welfare.
- Knows where to unleash their dogs. I think City should do better job at putting up the signs and posters for unleashed area and/ or enforce the rules and fine pet owners who unleash their dogs in open area especially around playground where small children can be playing
- It means giving any pet you own a good quality of life and ensures that all animals are treated well.
- Caring for the needs of your pet. Grooming feeding mental stimulation etc
- Keeping your dog on a leash and under control at all times. Always picking up after your pet. Not allowing pets to create excessive noise.
- Responsible pet ownership to me means that every pet owner should be taking care to ensure their pet is not a danger nor a nuisance to other Calgarians. Owners are also responsible for ensuring the safety of their owner pets. Licensing and tagging are two good minimum standards.
- Proper humane care for pets while ensuring they are not disturbing citizens/neighbourhoods
- It means caring for the pets in your home through proper vetting, appropriate food, shelter and training. It means managing them in a way that does not impact the general public while still enjoying the activities needed for an enriched life.
- Cleaning up after your pet. Taking your dog for walks. Training your pet. Knowing yours dogs limitation. Respecting other dogs limitations when their owners express them.

- There should be no pets allowed in retail or service businesses!! Owners seem to think they can bring their pets into my business (a spa). It's disgusting and other clients may have allergies...not to even mention how disgusting it is when the pet decides to piddle or poo! Rude and inconsiderate.
- Keeping an animal healthy and doing what's right for them. Picking up dog poop when on a walk and actually putting it into a garbage can. Training a dog, especially if planning on going to off leash dog park. Not letting a dog be off leash in public spaces. Properly socializing dogs.
- It means that pets are treated with respect and dignity, almost like they are your children. For dogs specifically, responsible ownership means that a dog is under owner's control at all times, even in an off-leash park where owners must be focused and proactive in conflict resolution.
- Ensuring that domestic animals and wildlife are protected, safe, healthy and able to thrive, while minimizing costs to The City.
- Picking up after dog, on leash where required, dog in control. But also having safe closed in spaces to be able to train dogs in life saving skills like recall
- Having your pet under control at all times needs enforcement with badges not pitting neighbour against neighbour over bad dog ownership. Start posting $Fees + fines at Parks. thx
- I'd consider responsible pet ownership to focus on two areas. One would be to keep your pet within yourself own property (especially cats), and the other would focus on controlling and cleaning up after your pet when visiting shared property (community spaces including parks and sidewalks).
- - Having the facilities/space to BE responsible owners and exercise/socialize our dogs. This includes indoor space for rainy or very cold days
  - Being able to bring my well-behaved, trained, leashed dog to public spaces instead of leaving them at home
  - Pets are family
- It means providing a safe and clean living environment while providing fresh food, water, shelter, exercise and up to date veterinary care. It means not owning more pets then I can reasonably provide these necessities for and severe consequences for those that refuse to provide the necessities.
- All aspects of bringing up a well socialized, healthy and behaved pet.
- Loving and caring for a pet, conscientiously for the pet's entire life, without inconveniencing or stressing others in the community.
- Providing a safe, secure, comfortable and loving home for an animal and also abiding by the animal by-laws of the applicable jurisdiction
- Ensuring the health, safety and quality of life of pets. Ensuring that pet are not a nuisance to neighbors (collecting waste, staying on top of noise). Ensuring spaces for people and animals to coexist.
- Protecting the health and wellbeing of pets.
- Appropriate animal welfare. Respectful of city space but also city space has to be provided
- Enforce the cats are not allowed to roam bylaw it's not enforced now I have at least 3 cats that wonder in my yard

- Keep only the type and number of pets for which you can provide appropriate food, water, shelter, health care and companionship.
Properly socialize and train your pet.
Recognize that pet ownership requires an investment of time and money.
Don't contribute to our nation's pet overpopulation problem
- It means having control over your pets at all times and not disturbing those that do not want pets or are allergic. I should not have to deal with cats living in my yard or dogs jumping up on me off leash. If I wanted pets, I would have them.
- Responsible pet ownership means caring for your pets to give them a great life, as well as ensuring that they are not a nuisance to others.
- not walking your damn dog offleash in leashed pet areas!!!!
- Keeping pets under supervision at all times. Not letting pet cats or dogs free roam to terrorize the neighbourhood and wildlife.
- Administering more fines to people who have their dogs unleashed in areas where a leash is required (ie, many people walk their dogs off leash, which is dangerous for drivers and the pets)
- There needs to be a rule that people must pick up dog poop in their own yard within 24 hours of it being deposited there. Mice infestations are happening because mice eat undigested food in the poop and owners are just letting their dogs poop in yards and not picking it up.
- Meeting the animals.als needs, for food water, shelter and training, and an environment free of abuse.
- Provide good health conditions , good nutrition, enough exercise to pets. And also Make sure that the pets don't bother neighbors and don't have aggressive behaviour
- Primarily Cleaning up after dogs
For dog walkers who use the park: keep dogs on leash until they've pooped, then clean up. If they can't find their dog's poop they should pick up someone else's. 12 dogs in, 12 poop bags out. "Karma poop".
- Providing food, shelter and LOVE to your animal. Picking up after them outside, abiding by the offleash areas.
Meeting all of your pets needs.
- Providing pets their best life
- Responsible pet ownership means taking care of your pet, and ensuring that it does not negatively impact your neighbors. This means no continuous noise, cleaning up your pet's poop (including cats who are allowed to roam free), and keeping dogs on a leash except in designated areas.
- Animals who are kept well, kept healthy, who don't disturb neighbours through noise or biological waste.
- Providing for the physical and mental health needs of dependant animals without impacting the peaceful enjoyment of home ownership/rental of neighbors.
- Being responsible for caring for your pet, keeping it safe and looked after. It also means that you are responsible for cleaning up after your pet. You must also ensure that if your pet is a danger to other pets that it is kept on a leash and not allowed to harm others - animals and humans.

- Following the bylaws.....but unfortunately some people just don't take the initiative to learn bylaws when they get a dog. Using school yards/sports parks as off leash areas cause they are too lazy to drive 5 minutes to a dog park. Then their dogs are so far away from them, they don't pick up poo.
- It means caring for all the needs of the pet. Food, shelter, mental/physical and vet care. It means having the animal be a part of the family and not left tethered outside for days/nights on end or roaming free around the neighborhood. It means caring full circle for all their needs.
- Food, water, medical care, shelter, on leash outdoors, feces removal/disposal, barking curbed, licensed.
- Ensuring the needs of your pet are met. Understanding that not all pets are equal. Ensuring the safety of your pet and others when in public.
- Ensuring its wellness by providing food, water, and veterinary care both annual and emergency. Not leaving your dog outside in all weather or your cat to roam the neighborhood. It means cleaning up after your pet and maintaining due care and control whether off or on leash.
- Providing love and companionship in a safe and secure environment with proper water, food, medical care, exercise, mental stimulation, training, comfort and lots of spoiling
- - Providing oversight and care of your animals
  - Ensuring positive relations and safety of your animals, as well as the people, other animals and environment they interact with
  - Being knowledgeable about regulations and understanding the risks associated with not abiding by them
- A responsible pet owner must be able to care for their pet , training , give it daily exercise, proper nutrition, vaccinations , loving home , interactive with other people & dogs
- Taking care of your pet and respecting others around you.
- Providing basic level of care (food, shelter, water, vet). Preventing uncontrolled breeding by spaying and neutering. Being aware of pet's personality, skills, and shortcomings and catering to those (e.g., don't bring an aggressive dog to an off-leash park).
- Following the rules, taking care of your pet as if they were your child, insuring your pet is safe and others around you are as well.
- -Basic obedience training; always having bags to clean up after him; regular walks; vaccinated, neutered and microchipped; ensuring litter boxes / aquariums / terrariums are cleaned regularly, proper food and water are available to the animal, regular vet check ups and grooming as required.
- Responsible pet ownership means: that an individual has control of their animal, that the animal does not threaten others safety, the owner cares for the animal in a way that is humane and is in no way cruel.
- Pet ownership is not a right that everyone is entitled to.
- Registering your pet. Updated shots. Picking up after your pet. On leash except in off lease areas. Social enough for off leash.
- Caring for the needs of your animal (preventing neglect), and ensuring your animal does not diminish the quality of life for other Calgarians.

- Taking care of your pet's physical and emotional needs while considering the quality of life of neighbours.
- Treating our pets like a member of our family, caring for them as such, and having control over their behaviour when away from the family home.
- Providing a safe, loving home for the life of the pet. Providing routine, regular vet visits. Have properly trained dogs & follow the rules of off leash & picking up after your pet. Keeping cats indoors and only outdoors when monitored or in an enclosed area. Having all licenses and vaccinations.
- Making sure that pets do not adversely affect the lives of others. Examples include: animals intentionally on the loose, poop left behind, barking outside late in the night.
- Cleaning up after your pet, not allowing pets offleash unless in marked offleash areas and only for dogs that show no aggression and owner has control at all times. Sick of my puppy being attacked for no reason and owners not taking responsibility and have no control.
- It means cleaning up after your do, only taking your dog to areas where you can trust them not to hurt themselves or others and it means obeying the rules of wherever you go. If it is an on leash area, your dog should be on leash. Always!!
- responsible pet ownership means providing the necessities of a comfortable life for any companion animal.
- Integrating a pet into your life in a way that is respectful and accommodating to the people you share your community with.
- Keeping however many and whatever type of pet(s) you desire in your household provided that they do not unduly negatively impact any other party outside of your household
- Knowing at all times where your pet is, what they are doing, and ensuring they are well taken care of and safe
- It means having healthy, happy, well adjusted dogs that are a part of our family.
- Training the animal in front of me, taking into account it's natural and genetic needs. Not treating nor considering it as a human, but respecting the qualities it presents as an animal. Providing food, shelter and enrichment to ensure its abilities are explored and if possible fulfilled.
- It means registering your pets, controlling your pet, spay and neutering your pet and being a considerate and respectful owner
- Ensuring your pet is safe and well cared for, that other animals (pets and wildlife) are safe from your pet, and your pet is neutered and not able to contribute to the homeless pet population in Alberta.
- Your pet is also a family member so treat them as one and take care of them, vaccinate and train them properly. Scoop the poop, summer and winter!! Pet peeve people not being responsible and cleaning up after doggy poops in the winter! Don't let your dog run off leash if it is not an off leash area.
- Pets are well fed, healthy, and can interact with their owners often. They are not allowed to be a nuisance to others.
- - looking after your pet in a kind and caring way.
- - cleaning up after your pet

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- not let your pet jump up on other people
- not let your pet bark aggressively at other people
- not letting your pet wander freely around the neighbourhood
- not letting your pet disturb the peace of others.
- Someone that provides appropriate training, food, and shelter for their pets. And someone that doesn't allow their pet to be a burden to others.
- Having control over your animal. Proper Outdoor housing if the pet is kept outdoors. Control barking in neighborhoods.
- Keeping your pet safe from harm, ensuring minimal disturbance of your neighbourhood, protecting others from your pet if it has the potential to cause harm
- Safety. Noise control. Respect for pets, respect for neighbours.
- Feed, water, house and walk and play with your dog. If you rescue your dog much harder to train and make the dog become a great family dog in the neighborhood.
- Dogs and cats should be licensed regardless whether or not indoor. Cats should be allowed to roam, they don't get out on walks like dogs and it is their natural behaviour. I'm good with chickens in the city. It also means cleaning up after your pets, on walks, in your yard (including chickens).
- Owners that have pets have responsibility to house and feed them properly, have regular Vet visits, license them and have them under control. If not able to care for a pet a responsible pet owner surrenders them to an animal facility where they can be re-housed.
- "Responsible pet ownership" - owners assume all stewardship for their pets, namely that they will ensure that their pets are afforded the 5 freedoms: Freedom from hunger+thirst, Freedom from pain, injury and disease, Freedom from distress, Freedom from discomfort, Freedom to express natural behavior
- Ensuring 1) the safety of my pet, and 2) my pet and I don't interfere with the lifestyle of other Calgarians.
- Responsible Pet Ownership should not be relative to each person and animal but a standard that is expected by both the public and city by-law, enforced by the city and carried out by the owner. I should not be fined for having a well trained, non aggressive dog, that is cleaned up after in public.
- It means providing for an animal, that has been domesticated in our society and therefore is not meant to be wild and roam free. It means keeping it from disturbing others in the city in the forms of noise, damage and feces. It means providing proper/safe food and shelter as if it were a child.
- Ensuring your pets are properly taken care of, receive adequate health care, are not bothersome to others in the community
- Mostly, that your pets are *your* pets. My dog stays on the leash, and urinates/deficates where I allow it to, not where it wants. Your cat is your cat, and shouldn't be in my yard. Your dog Can be out in the yard as long as it doesn't bark or escape. My dog is no longer mine if it bites. And so on.
- I shouldn't have to leash a well trained, non aggressive dog in an open public space due to someone elses fear of dogs or because of what they've read in the media. Why put in the work to train if you're only going to be lumped in with someone that has not done the work. 300 characters isn't enough
- Taking care of your pets to the best of your abilities and knowing when to stop or ask for help.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Responsible pet ownership means ensuring your pet is provided for physically and socially. It also means being responsible to society in general on behalf of your pet. ie) vaccines, picking up waste, muzzling if not socialized to people or other animals. It's about doing what's best
- Taking good care of my pets. This includes food, housing, water, exercise, love and attention. For me it also means enriching their lives with something that they love. For my one dog it means doing agility, for another she loves being close to me and doing obedience...not all are the same.
- Keeping your pet healthy, well looked after, loved, and, most importantly, under control. Having a pet should not impinge on the enjoyment of others to use public spaces or walk on the community sidewalks. Picking up after your pet and properly disposing of the bag is also important.
- getting the appropriate licensing. Taking care of your animal.
- It means being kind respectful to animals- right to warmth, food, water, freedom from violence and isolation. It means that people should be held responsible for allowing cats to suffer and run at large and that there is a body who can intervene if people choose to ill use animals and real penalty.
- That dogs are kept on a leash in residential areas outside of their yards. We live on a path system/playground in Mountain Park/McKenzie Lake and have dogs loose while our children are out. Please find a way to get dogs on leash.
- Keeping your pet secure under control and picking up their feces.
- Having a pet that is taken care of, and does not cause any negative consequences for neighbours and the community. It should complement a happy life- not cause harassment issues or decrease the safety of people in public spaces.
- Taking care of your animals
- Someone has the means and capacity to care for the lifelong well being of an animal in their care.
- It means to be keeping and maintaining full responsibility for your animal. By standards of enforcing stricter rules on free roaming cats in all communities. All birds(chicken and turkeys) to be kept outside of city limits.
- Having animals in a way which does not interfere with others in the community.
- A responsible pet owner feeds, grooms, exercises, treats the pet with respect and gives it a safe home. The owner should ALWAYS keep their pet on a leash anywhere outside the home. The owner should ALWAYS pick up the poop. I would like to see more bylaw officers around fining offenders.
- Keeping your pet safe, while keeping those around you safe as well. Cleaning up after your pet and keeping your pet on leash AT ALL TIMES when not in an off leash area. Respecting other people's rights.
- Providing good care, veterinary care and mental engagement for the animals that belong to a person.
- Treating your animals humanely, cleaning up after they defecate, control barking dogs outside, not letting them run around loose outside of property, license them, controlling them around other animals and people. Follow through by owners of proper discipline if they are harming other animals /humans

- Taking care of pet and results of pet (faeces), being considerate of neighbours (barking, not allowing to poop/pee on yard/plants)
- proper nutrition, grooming, vet care, wise spay / neuter decisions (not pediatric or arbitrary spay neuter), safe living situation relevant to the breed (ie: not mandated by external agencies without regard to the breed / family situation) - all NOT legislated or top down but through education
- Providing proper care, feeding, housing, medical care the any animals owned.
- Providing food, shelter and love for your pet from the moment you get them to the very end. Pets should be considered a member of your family and as such, you should never be allowed to get rid of them - by either give them up or leaving them in the wild alone.
- Taking responsibility for the health, safety, and training of my pet so that both they and the other people and animals that they might interact with are also safe. Also, ensuring any pet related waste is taken care of by the owner.
- Providing the best life for your pet and managing it in all aspects such as training and cleaning up after them
- Keeping your pet safe and healthy. And minimizing disruption to neighbours.
- Responsible owners should leash their dog when not on their property or in an off-leash area. They should be more respectful of other people's property. Not letting dogs urinate or defecate on someone else's yard killing grass/plants.
- Providing care and training to your pet. Being responsible means you understand the needs of that pet (each one is unique) and that you meet those needs. You also need to understand how your pet interacts with others (human and animal) and ensure that your pet does not harm others in any way.
- Caring for the physical needs of the pet (food, water, shelter, heat, sleep, exercise, medical care), social needs (pet is free from fear & feels safe and secure, interacts w/humans, interacts w/other animals), maintaining safe boundaries (enclosure/fencing/etc.), & appropriate enrichment activities.
- Obey by-laws, Respect neighbours and be kind and loving to your pets
- Clean up and pick up after your Dog!
- I believe that responsible pet ownership is defined as Being responsible for the actions of your pet. Be it picking up their poop, extensive barking, and control of your pet.
- Responsible pet owner is someone who takes care of the animals that they have on their property, maybe it is something that someone else thinks is different then a cat or a dog. As long as it isn't a nuisance to the neighbours, and the well-being of the animal is taken care of.
- Keeping ALL cats inside. Cats kill many millions of song birds in Canada every year so all cats should be kept inside, via an educational program and enforced bylaw.
- Pets are under control at all times, whether on leash or not. Animals do not roam around communities in their own. Owners are responsible to pick up and dispose of all waste. Care taken when animals are aggressive towards other animals or humans.
- MUST follow rules/regulations along with respect to their neighbors and private properties...
- Taking care of them. Cleaning up after them. Ensuring they are good canine citizens. Not roaming off lead. Not outside barking incessantly.

- Calgary bylaw need to put in
Can changed someone for stolen puppies and dogs
- Thanks
- This is stupid and a waste of time. How much is this costing the tax payer? This should be changed to: What does responsible city council mean to you.
- -No noise (barking bylaws are lax, I am a dog lover)
- -No poop or pee on neighbours property
Pee is semi acceptable if walking on sidewalk but not free range onto lawn
Poop should be discouraged and removed thoroughly
- -No farm agriculture animals disease etc (Infectious Laryngotracheitis (ILT))ON"
"no chickens or pigs farm agricultural animals
Period
Surrounding MDs (foothills) don't all chickens on lots =
- Humans must be trained prior to acquisition of dogs and cats. The human is what needs licensing, to prove capable pet ownership. Dogs further must be trained prior to being allowed in public.
- It means getting a pet to be quiet during quiet hours, same as machinery.
- Proper care of your animals and respectable behavior with regards to your neighbors.
- Ensuring that pets are well cared for, properly socialized, and that safety is ensured for the pet, the owners, and bystanders.
- It means taking care of the emotional & physical needs of your animals. Having a healthy relationship with them that is mutually beneficial is significant too. And being considerate of your neighbours, and the general public.
- I believe that responsible pet ownership means licensing my dog, cleaning up after my dog, and keeping my dog under control (i.e. leashes/barking). It also means providing proper shelter/food/medical attention. Of course, responsible owners also need to obey bylaws.
- Love animals, but you have to show kindness, respect and trust not just for the animal but the surrounding area too. There is too much neglect and disrespect going on within City of Calgary.
- taking full responsibility for the wellbeing of your pet and how it interacts with the public (if that is the case).
- That the animals are well cared for, including the right environment.
- Ensuring all pets are treated humanely, that public access is widely permitted and owners are held accountable for breaches, not penalizing the animals.
- Providing a great quality of life for our pet which includes walks, nutrition, love, and engagement. There are not enough off leash park inthe city for dogs. Why can't we consider major green spaces like Fish Creek Provincial Park to be off leash?
- Urban Agriculture: I do not want animals other than cats & dogs allowed in the city. Please do not turn our city into a farm! No chickens, no sheep, no horses or cattle, no pigeons and no bees!
I am happy with the bylaws governing the other five areas of focus
- Animals are well cared for and neighbours are unaffected, e.g. feces

Redefine the word 'pet'. Emotional support animal definition has broadened. Time to do the same for ALL Calgary's citizens.

- Taking care of your animals
- Following bylaws such as picking up after pets, noise low, pets on leash, licensed, and taking care of pets as family with due care
- Licence your pet. Train, Socialize, and Ensure proper veterinary care. Ensure all needs both nutritional, comfort and care are met. Spay or neuter your pet. Ensure your pet is not roaming free around the neighbourhood. Clean up after your pet and have your pet under control in public areas.
- People who have pets that take care of them and don't allow the pet to become a a nuisance to their neighbours via noise or property destruction for example.
- A limit on the number of animals one property can have within city limits.
- taking good care of, cleaning up after, housing them, keep others safe from them, not let them roam, not let them bother neighbors
- that no matter the pet, that I provide every comfort, care, responsibility and pet obligations towards my pet WHILE ensuring my pet is of no hazard, nuisance or able to cause negative consequences to any of my neighbors.
- Taking care of basic needs, grooming environment that they spend their time in. I believe dogs should be socialized to prevent dangerous behaviours. And maintaining a leash (big or small) for the dog no matter the breed. Offleash areas are fine however on sidewalks and in tight spaces safety is best
- Don't make your problems other people's problems
- Taking care of your pets like your children. Don't leave them outside unsupervised. Regular vaccinations and vet visit.
- To maintain the health and safety of your pet. To ensure your pet is not a danger to anyone else or any other pet. To walk your dog on a leash and not allowed to run free in the city.
- Having the time, space, and financing to take care of your pet to give them a good quality of life.
- Stop allowing cats to run at large (dogs can't so cats shouldn't be able to either). Tag or no Tag leash them. Some are vicious but you can't catch the little b***ards after they claw you for chasing them out of your garbage/yard/garden. They also kill the wild song birds.
- Responsible pet ownership is consistently providing the essentials to maintain life of the animal and ensuring the animal and the public are not effected negatively by human actions or inactions. Stronger repercussions for those that fail to do so is required as many offenders can own again.
- Exercising the right to own a pet that doesn't infringe on my neighbour's use or enjoyment of their property. Urban settings are not appropriate for livestock unless it remains indoors and is Doctor prescribed. Well trained Dogs should have more off leash areas and be allowed in more areas.
- Licensing your pet, Spaying or neutering your pet; huge problem with unwanted kittens and puppies who end up with no home. If you want a pet, go to the shelter. Animal abuse policies need to be stricter, people abandon or abuse animals, that should be on a registry and not allowed to have pets!

- Restricting the sale of intact rabbits or eliminating the ability to have them sold in pet stores at all (At least without spay/neuter). The number of dumped/feral rabbits in the city is rising because of the ease of which people can get them. Stopping the source should help.
- I think cats should be able to roam outside. This would keep the mouse population down.
- Taking good care of your pet and minimizing it's impact on your community - i.e. cleaning up after your pet, licencing it, ensuring it's not destroying others property or bothering neighbours, etc.
- Ensuring that my pets don't bother other people
- caring for the well being of an animal emotionally and physically. Cleaning up after the animal.
- Protecting, Loving, Feeding and abiding by CofC bylaws to ensure your pet/family member is licensed and not at large. Having readily available funds should your pet/family member require emergency vet care /yearly vet check ups and vaccinations are up to date. Providing Love and asafe environment
- Keeping your pet on your property and under control on your property. If they are outside your boundaries then they need to be on a leash and under control on the leash.
- If you have animals your make sure they respect everyone around you and you take care of them and your property
- As a person in a family with several pets and an owner/operator at CiTy Dogs, my focus is always the safety of my own pets and those in my care. We always work hard to be sure that our actions (at home and in the dogs parks) do not negatively impact others.
- Loving and caring for my pet(dog) to the best of my ability. Provide safe, clean environment, proper food, shelter, mental and physical engagement and health care. Force free training and reinforcement. Safe fenced and gated dog parks where all dogs can engage in doggy play and safe from roadways.
- Being aware of your animal's welfare along with your animal's impact on the community you live in.
- Ensuring your pet (e.g. dog/cat) are on a leash or contained when outside of your own home at all times, except for City designated off-leash areas. There are citizens who are scared of/allergy/dislike dogs/cats, their rights should be respected in public space just as pet owners are.
- Being able to provide for all my dogs needs; food, shelter, but also being able to take them outside and have them at off leash parks (responsibly) to interact with other dogs and run.
- Having your dog under control and within 25 meters of you if you are in off leash. Picking up after your dog. Staying on the sidewalk or boulevard and not on peoples yards. If an area is not designated off leash dogs must be on leash.
- Pets become members of my family. I know I need to provide financial, medical, and emotional support as required.
- Keeping your dog on a leash when not in a off leash area. More sign's are needed on the bike paths or walking paths saying that it is not a off leash area. People react to signs better than relying on knowledge off the law or they just claim ignorance. More bylaw patrols around Peak times of the day
- Ensuring people and pets can co-exist in our city, keeping both safe from harm. It also ensures Pet owners are responsible for minimizing any possible negative impacts on their neighbours and their neighbours' pets.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- Responsibility
- Safety and well-being of the animal as well as it relates to the public.
- Responsible pet ownership means that owners care for and maintain appropriate living conditions for their pets, while at the same time, having appropriate consideration for their neighbours. At the same time, appropriate neighbours do not overly assert their wish for a pet free society.
- An animal in full control. No barking all day. No off leash on city land. Picking up animal waste on city land. More bylaw to enforce
- Being responsible with your pets by getting them spayed and neutered, following laws about off-leash areas, picking up your animal's poops, etc.
- It means taking of physically, emotionally and medically any animal in your home or care
- Pets are well cared for, have suitable and safe outdoor access and under control when outside. Pets must be socialized for human encounters and are not a nuisance, ie: don't bark incessantly or damage property of neighbours. If wildlife comes into their yard, aren't harassed or harmed.
- Taking responsibility to train and keep a pet in order to not be a harm to others
- Providing pets with appropriate shelter, food, water, care, supervision and in the case of dogs, training and socializing.
- Being able to enjoy what the city has to offer with my dog. While also respecting municipal bylaws and other individuals respect and boundaries. I think every pet owner should have to take Canines good neighbor test if you want your dog in public. I believe retractable leashes should be banned!
- Ensures the pets are clean, cleaned up after, well-behaved, in control and not disruptive to neighbours
- Providing for your pet, vet check ups, walks, cleaning up after your pet, providing love, keeping a pet for life, they aren't disposable as they age.
- People take care of the health and wellbeing of their pets, and take precautions to keep the public and pets safe.
- Treating pets like part of your family. Providing for them and giving them a safe place to live. Loving them always.
- Looking after your pet.
- keep my dog under my control, pick up after her and making sure she is well cared for and loved
- Have a pet for your own reasons (enjoyment, emotional support, etc) without interfering with other people's life or property.
- Training your dog to be around others, walking your dog, picking up after your dog and keeping it from barking for no reason.
- I feel that homeless people should not be aloud to own or have a pet with them while they are on the street. I feel that it is very cruel to make an animal endure the harsh weather and that an animal has the right to have shelter, food and live in a happy healthy home and not on the street.
- To me this means having control over your pet at all times and cleaning up after your pet. Being responsible also means keeping your pet vaccinated, groomed and fixed.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- Registering your pet with the city. Picking up your dog poop. Keeping your pet on a leash when required. Controlling pets behavior. Muzzling aggressive dogs when out in the public.
- Owners must provide food shelter and doctor care for animals that the have in their household. No animals should ever be abused every animal should be cared for with love that as humans provide to each other. Animals provide us with unconditional love and we as must return the same.
- Spay and neutering, recognizing/understanding that not everyone is comfortable around animals and being respectful of that. Sturdy yard fencing and providing training for larger dogs.
- Keep pets and people safe, Spay and neuter.
- It means respecting the bylaws that are in place. I regularly encounter dog owners with their dogs off leash in leashed areas. I believe that the owners know that they are going against the bylaw but they don't seem to care due to lack of bylaw enforcement.
- It means cleaning up after your dog and putting it in the proper disposal bin. Keeping cats inside or on a leash when outside. Walking dogs on a leash while in a community setting. Allowing dogs off leash in proper areas. Not chaining up dogs or leaving out side unattended for long periods of time.
- Cleaning up after them, licensed, and a healthy clean environment to live in.
- Licensing pets, cleaning up after them, spay and neuter, keeping care and control of your pet on and off your property.
- Meeting the physical and emotional needs of a pet, while also limiting the negative impact such pet may have on others (people and animals) -- both at home in the neighbourhood and on outings to parks and other venues. Currently, many pet owners are not controlling their dogs or picking up feces.
- Care and control of any animal in your care.
- Keeping you dog under control, cleaning g up after it. No excessive barking, licensed & chipped. Cats inside only.
It would be nice to walk my dog without being stalked by Coyotes. What is the city doing about that?
- Giving animals the best life while having respect for your fellow citizens.
- It means updates immunization, regular grooming and ensuring good behaviours in public.
- Providing care for animals in your home or your property so that they are healthy and not a nuisance to the neighborhood.
- ensuring that your pet has a warm home to live in, is fed food and water, is provided proper training when interacting with other animals, is not left at home for long periods of time, is taken to the vet when needed, and its given at least one walk a day for at least 30 minutes
- Being accountable for the actions of your pet.
- To love And care for an animal, clean up after them, to protect them and everyone around you
- Beyond looking after basic needs, food, water, shelter & medical love and attention. Having consideration for others. .clean up your dogs mess, keep cats indoors & dogs on leashes. Off leash areas are dangerous for dogs since not all owners are responsible or provide proper training.
- I would like to see a minimum of 12 chickens allowed in any household that has a yard with in Calgary.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Following the rules
- Backyard hens should be allowed as many other very large centres already do. Calgary is behind the times in this arena. The city can ask Portland or any other center on how they manage and the rules surrounding chicken husbandry. Let's get with the times
- Dogs are part of the family and it should not be allowed that condo bylaws have dog restrictions. Some communities have ended the ability for condo bylaws to do this.
- Responsible pet ownership to me means that pet owners should be considerate and aware of both the pet(s) and the community in which they live. This includes having the financial means to properly care for that animal and ensuring the safety of nearby residents at all times.
- owners should have: licenses for pets, identity chips, animals fixed, clean up after pets, no more than 2-3 pets, not leaving pets outside alone for hours on end, not allowing pets to interfere with neighbours, animals that are not aggressive, not leaving pets alone all day in the house barking
- Dog walkers should not be allowed to have more than 3 dogs in an off leash area. They are not able to pick up poop while having 12 dogs to watch! I see several dog walkers at Sue Higgins who are looking after 10-12 dogs at a time. They often act like a pack, and a danger to other dogs.
- Way too many things for the city to be able to monitor or make a meaningful contribution to.
  - Regular check ups
  - Brush their teeth
  - Proper diet
  - Proper exercise
  - Grooming
  - Adoption only
- Provide food, shelter and medical care for pets. When pets are in public, owners should have control of their pets so they do not harm people. Owner should cleanup after their pets in public areas as well as their own property, keep their pet from disturbing others with loud and constant noise.
- Dogs, cats, conventional support animals. Proper care, with veterinary, cleanup and registration of the animals. No chickens and other non-conventional animals. System to register support animals. Too many fakes to get special treatment.
- Taking care of dogs my animals, picking up after them in public places and, not letting them harm others.
- Keeping your pets safe and healthy and not allowing them to be a bother to your neighbors (smells, noises, predators).
- Training your pet, vaccinating it and daily exercise and having it as part of your family, not roaming on other people's property or chained/kennelled or left alone outside in a dog house all the time.
- making sure that pets are not being a nuisance or a danger to the neighbors or other pets in the area. keeping the area clean and not turning the yard into a large litter box for dogs or cats.
- My husband takes our dog to AuburnBay dog park every morning and he says people constantly ignore the cleanup signs and there is always a lot of poop left laying around. Can nothing be done to enforce the need to clean up after the dog? My husband always does his part.

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Taking responsibility for the behaviour and actions of your pet (keeping it from harming itself, other pets and animals, and other people) and ensuring your pet is leading a healthy life.
- It means not having any animals U cannot control to avoid neighbours quality of life. People should train their dogs not to bark for hours on end & every time someone walks by or parks within 3 houses . We are selling our house due to 3 neighbours who refuse to learn this simple lesson.
- Vaccinations for pets, Spay and neuter, licensing. Keeping dangerous animals under control on leash or in yard. Pick up after your dog!
- Keeping my pet safe and not negatively impacting the ability of others to enjoy their lives.
- Taking ownership of your animal & not disturbing your neighbours .
- responsible pet ownership is providing high-quality care that enriches the life of the animal, enriches the life of the owner, and does not impose on others.
- It means picking up after your pet, doing your best to not allow them to chase wildlife. It means knowing dog body language and being mindful that not all dogs or people like other dogs. It means committing to taking care of them no matter the financial repercussions and the time/energy required.
- having rules to keep pet ownership and neighbours safe and copacetic
- Not only taking care of your pets' dietary needs and warm shelters (inside home during winter) but also "properly" socializing your dogs. This does not mean letting poorly trained / poorly socialized dogs to run at the off leash park to be "socialized"! My dog has been attacked by 3 vicious dogs!
- Licensing, vaccinations and respecting on leash areas and not allowing your pet to roam (dog or cat)
- Ensuring animals are under control and cleaned up after at all times. Pets should not infringe on other people's enjoyment of their environment (eg off leash dogs or cats, waste left in parks or other people's yards, dogs that bark constantly).
- Providing for the welfare of your pet and not letting it infringe on neighbour's nerves.
- At off leash parks, new signs need to be posted at every entrance saying: Absolutely no vicious dogs allowed! Cameras should be set up so that irresponsible owners can be caught and fined. If dogs have bitten another dog or person in the past they shouldn't be allowed in &no "humping" allowed either
- An owner that picks up after their dog, has taken the time to teach their dogs basic manners and basic commands, and that has a well socialized dog — not aggressive or doesn't knock people over or bite. Dogs need that structure to be good canine neighbors but it's the owners that are responsible
- Doing your best to make sure your pet does not negatively impact others - within reason, of course. Life is not a Disney movie!
- Ensuring the animals I have are trained, not a nuisance and are vaccinated on a regular basis.
- having the ability to take my trained/nonaggressive pup to areas in my own neighborhood and allow them to be off lease close to home. Right now I live in Coventry hills and have NOWHERE close to take my active dog (Australian Shepard) for a run off-leash.
- Are you out of your mind, dogs ,cats ok nothing else,you want farm animals leave the city ,another city stupid move

- Having a sense of accountability, knowing your bylaws, keeping pets and people safe.
- Taking the necessary steps to ensure the Health safety of your pet and other pets and owners around you; whether that be vaccinations, training, or simply knowing their limitations and socializing according
- Having proper licence and behavior items for dogs and cats and educating owners
- We have been interested in getting a few chickens and having a coop or bee hive in our backyard. I don't see the harm in having this ability. If the city is worried about disposing of chickens after they stop laying maybe the chickens can be put down at an animal shelter and food shared
- It means not letting your dogs off leash unless you are in an off leash park and cleaning up after them and not leaving them outside barking for hours. For cats it means not letting your cat roam freely.
- That my pet is taken care of emotionally, physically, medically and is provided a safe, fun and engaging environment. It also means that while my pet doesnt interfere with someone else's quality of life I have the right to ensure that someone else does not interfere with my pet's quality of life
- Having your pet microchipped and/or tattooed. Getting vet checks annually. Dogs on leashes or under your control; cats inside or in your own yard. Pets spayed/neutered.
- Ensuring their pet is properly trained, socialized and well taken care of.
- Being a respectful citizen who has the means to properly look after their pet and by ensuring the pet is not a nuisance to other neighbours with noise pollution eg barking dog. Ensuring pet is cared for and any mess related to pet is cleaned up
- Dog behaviours should be taken into consideration, not just weight and size. There are very loud small dogs and quiet large dogs who are more well behaved but are restricted in buildings where loud dogs are allowed. It doesn't seem fair to the well behaved large dogs and their owners.
- Responsible pet ownership means not affecting others with the animals you keep. Our current society focuses on instant gratification. Laws around urban chickens should updated allowing small flock 4-6 enough to feed a family, teaching patience and outcome awarded behavior.
- cleaning up after your pet
- Being a responsible pet owner means properly taking care of your animal (safe home/environment, proper training, exercising in a safe/healthy manner, being able to control your animal, grooming/cleaning up after your animal, taking animal in for proper vet visits). I could go on.
- It means that you are always physically in control of your pet, that you clean up after your pet and that you ensure that your pet does not damage another persons property.
- Caring for, providing for and keeping track of the pets in your household.
- Ensuring all pets get their needs met and owners enjoy having them without affecting others negatively!
- Owning animals or livestock & caring for them responsibly, including finding a balance between their quality of life & urban living.
- Picking up your dog's poo and not lot leaving poo bags on paths. Having control of your dog. Dog owners will yell, "Don't worry he's friendly as their dog jumps up on you". Dog owners frequently allow their dogs off-leash in an on-leash area. Allowing their dogs to run back & forth along the path.

- Being capable of meeting your pets needs.
Understanding the emotional, physical & financial responsibilities.
Understanding what it takes to have a happy, safe and healthy pet.
Animals need interaction, companionships and love every bit as much, if not more than food and water.
- Taking care of your pet's health and behavior in ways that help him/her to be a good citizen :)
- Someone who takes care of their pet along with the area they go in.
- Caring for the emotional and physical well being of your animal and making sure they are not a danger to themselves or other.
- Caring for your pet to the best of your ability
- Loving animals is a right. Respecting others is necessary but living next to an animal hater is hard.
- I think the Calgary bylaw is fair and comprehensive there are not many areas that need updating but I think that education is important as a lot of pet owners do not know the rules or what it means. More work on the ambassador program is a good way of getting that info out
- Proper care, training and management of any and all pets in a household ....
- Being able to provide the best food, physical and emotional health for a animal throughout its life.
- dont bring your dog to my lawn to do is business front or backyard
Dont leave your dog in your house barking all day while you are at work
- I believe Pitbull dog should not allowed as a pet.
- Obeying the law! Too many dog owners in Calgary ignore the rules when it comes to keeping dogs under control.
- Appropriate behaviour from you and your pet while enjoying the city
- Ensuring your pets are safe, provide food shelter and health care, and not bothering anyone else.
- I love animals, but in the city, I believe we need to be courteous and keep house animals arms pets. I believe cats should be kept inside for their safety. I believe that bees and chickens are NOT city animals and cause much disturbance to neighbors and our close proximity. Thank you.
- care of the pets, care for the community
- Unneutered dogs should not be allowed at the off leash parks. In addition, male dogs should not be allowed to "hump" other dogs (some immature owners just stand there and think it's funny that their dog is humping another dog!). More free run areas are needed in each area!
- Should be enforcement of dangerous and nuisance animals, but technical enforcement just for the sake of enforcement when there is no nuisance or danger being created by the pet should not be a part of the bylaw.
- Pets are adequately fed, have medical care, are not abused, are trained to live in a human world
- Taking proper care of a pet, respecting other people rights not to be "bothered " by your pet.
- By providing the necessities of life; food, water, shelter, healthcare. And owner must also provide appropriate mental and physical stimulation, companionship and affection
- Being responsible for a pet at all times, not letting the pet free roam, nor distract neighbours with noise/smell.

- Adhering to the bylaws and understanding that not everyone is or wants to be a pet owner and that that perspective needs to be respected.
- Anyone who has a pet needs to take care of it mentally and physically!! This means to me that your pets should be spayed /neutered! Only responsible breeders should be allowed to have intact dogs.
- Registered with the city with tags, microchipped, cleaning up after your pet, not leaving them outside 24/7, spayed/neutered to help population control, yearly vet checkups, de-worming medication especially during summer months
- Taking care of your pet(s), providing adequate food, shelter, support and care. Doing your best to keep your pet safe from harm, but also keeping others safe from harm due to your pet(s).
- Animal safety
- Your pet is taken care of, registered with city if required, regular food, exercise, vet, healthy; owner look after their pet and ensures it doesn't bother neighbours, pick up after your pet
- Caring for you pet, to ensure both the pet's and the community's health.
- Not letting your pet roam, making sure vaccines are up to date and ensuring your pet goes to the vet if they are sick. Making a pet part of your family.
Anyone who lets an animal suffer sickness I abuse should be fined heavily, hailed in some cases and be banned from having any pet.
- Clean up after your pet. Ensure they are not neglected or treated poorly. I believe leashes should be optional if your dog is well trained and heels beside you.
- I am responsible for my pet and its actions
- It means that an animal is being fed daily with fresh water. They are not left outside without shelter, or long periods of time. They need to be taken to the vet in emergency situations. Also spay/ neutered is a must! There should be a 5 pet limit per household. That includes bunnies, reptiles etc.
- Making sure your pets don't affect other people or wildlife.
- Citizens should be responsible for their pets, bees and chickens. The city should allow responsible ownership to occur rather than have antiquated ideas regarding chickens. If I pay taxes, I should be able to do as I please on my property. & stop the parks poop education program, stupid waste money.
- Being respectful of the city we share with others and my relationship with my dog
- Taking care of your pet
- Providing care to animals in your home.
- Spay and neuter your pets , keep them and others safe,
- Caring for pets, cleaning up after them in public places (including neighbour lawns!), ensuring they are not too noise or disturbing neighbours, ensuring they are safe to be around public if you have them in public areas/around people
- Caring for an animal in a way that cares for the animals needs while not decreasing the quality of life of others.
- Mandatory pet insurance.

- making sure your dog is healthy and well behaved - not harming or damaging people/property. Picking up after your dog and respecting other people and dogs around you.
- Your pet does not impact other people in any way.
- Providing appropriate and safe (fenced) off leash area in north calgary. Sue Higgins park in the south is amazing. North residents do not have a similar location. It is needed. I am tired of irresponsible owners letting dogs run at large in the field behind my home!
- It means licensing your animals and being in control of them at all times. Picking up after them and be courteous to other people
- Pet ownership is a privilege not a right. Pet must be physically and emotionally nourished.
- People who follow bylaw's. Keep pets on a leash or property and clean up after them. Don't abuse or neglect their pets.
- Pet owners keep their pets off MY property. Pet owners clean up after their pets on THEIR property. Pet owners ensure that their pets DO NOT become a nuisance in the neighbourhood. And finally, all animals MUST be treated humanely.
- Responsible breeding, first and foremost. Mandatory training
- Our neighbor has three medium sized dogs. When outside their bark is very annoying early AM, when she gets home from work and again in the evening. If she leaves them out all day it spoils the enjoyment of my outdoor and indoor solitude. Only one dog should be allowed.
- Raising and caring for animal in responsible fashion with same care and attention a reasonable adult would show a human child
- Providing your pet with food and water, safe shelter, and medical care when needed.
- Taking care of your animals for their benefit and your neighbours
- Taking care of your animal and not creating a nuisance
- People keeping their pets on their property, and not letting their cats roam the neighborhood. Dog owners picking up after their dog.
- It's multi faceted, including health, welfare, socialization, walks/exercise, training, obedience, Respect and love for the pet. Many humans don't deserve the pet in their custody.
- Ensuring you have full control of your pet at all times, clean up after them and ensure your pet is well cared for and treated like a member of the family.
- Having safe outdoor spaces to bring your animals to play, have resources available for their health, a lot of time spent with them, access to clean water and food daily, dogs should be safe in common areas for dogs
- Healthy animals. Have enough space for the # of pets on property. registered
- Being responsible for the care and behaviour of your pet. Cleaning up after and ensuring your pet is not a nuisance to neighbors.
- Owning appropriate pets for the style of home you reside in (eg. Large dogs in apartments should not be allowed), picking up dog poop, only domesticated pets in city limits, proper training for your pet, aggressive dog breeds should be banned.

- Being a responsible pet owner or pet parent means providing for the animal's basic needs. That means food, water, shelter, social interaction and growth.
- Looking after the mental and physical wellbeing of my pets. Making sure they are properly vetted, socialised, and are well behaved citizens.
- Paying a one time registration fee instead of yearly. City can do a poll at the beginning of each year (like census) to know if our pet is still alive.
- giving animals a loving, healthy home. Providing all the necessities to maintain their health and socialize to ensure a well rounded personality. Taking full responsibility for your animals no matter what
- Taking care if your pets licenseing them and clean after them. Making there contolled and there safe around people.Taking care of them on a everyday basis.
- Polite and courteous as best you can. Not allowing cats to roam, and not owning too many pets in one house. It's cruel.
- A better way to license cats so they don't have to wear a collar, and risk getting caught on something and getting strangled to death. A spay a neuter program in place for dog and cat owners, alot of people don't get it done due to the price alone. More support for those individuals would be amazing
- Training dogs to be good citizens. Picking up after them in yard or public, respecting your neighbours and not letting them bark howl growl or act aggressive to anyone at any time, proper socialization, respecting the bylaws of on/off leash areas and not letting your dog just run up to strange dogs!
- Proper feeding, veterinary and psychological care (affection, toys/environment, non-abuse, etc.). Responsible breeding, where applicable.
Keeping pets & companion/support animals that do not bother your neighbours/communities.
Responsible Pet Ownership DOES include care & regulation of support anima
- Doing your research to learn how to properly care for that pet before deciding to bring one home. Providing the necessities of life such as food, water, shelter and medical care. Cleaning up after your dog, minimizing excessive noise and ensure your pet is not a danger to people or other pets.
- That you are responsible for your dog behaviour
- Provide a warm / cool shelter , food, care , training and absolute unconditional love
- Keeping our pets safe from cruel humans, poison, cars and taking care of their medical needs.
- Consistently caring for the animals health- physical, mental and emotional. Providing a safe home. Ensuring that guests are safe when around the animal. Dogs and cats are cleaned up after dedicating and the waste is properly disposed of.
- Ensuring your pets are licensed and trained
- Responsible pet ownership means to be in control of your dog at all times on or offleash as well as to properly train, feed and clean up after pets daily. As well as getting medical attention when necessary as well having as many dogs as you can properly maintain and care for fairly.
- Take responsibility for your pet. Don't let the cat out to roam around and licence your dog. Make sure their shots are up to date. A person is responsible for the health and wellbeing of their pets as well as cleaning up after them.

- What pet a person owns doesn't really matter. However, it must be contained within reasonable regulations strong noise and health. Chickens, for example, are very noisy, stink and have habitats that easily cause disease (if their defecation isn't regularly clean). By laws most take this into account
- 1. Healthy happy dog
- 2. Control over your own dog
- 3 . Responsible for all damage messes caused by dog and removal of all fecal matter leaving your dogs butt cheeks
- 4. Mindfulness of other dogs and people - being considerate .
- The proper care and training of your pet. Being familiar with and following bylaws within your area. Microchipping your pet and having pet ID. Responsible breeding, no backyard breeding.
- Responsible pet ownership means spaying or neutering your pet. It means ensuring you have the funds necessary to provide food and veterinary care for your pets. It means having your pets microchipped and/or tattooed in case they are lost. It also means giving your pets a home for life.
- Means animals are safe, controlled, maintained and not a nuisance to those around them. That they live in an environment that allows them to be happy and safe.
- For Dog Owners: picking up the poop and bark control (banning surgeries cutting vocal cords!!) For Cat Owners: keeping them on a leash (it can be done) and keeping them indoors! Spay and neuter for both.
- Picking up after your dog. Staying close by to supervise your dog especially if there is an issue.
- Animals are well taken care of, receive training, vet care, exercise and mental stimulation.
- Being knowledgeable about your pet and knowing, while enjoying your time with them, making sure other people can enjoy their time too.
  - picking up their pop
  - LEASHING YOUR DOG
- Being provided affordable spay and neuter
- Spaying/neutering/proper vet care; not allowing disturbances - noise, smell, danger - to others; proper safety precautions in your yard; cleaning up excrement while on walks; proper licensing.
- Responsible pet owners take care of all facets of pet ownership, including providing adequate shelter and food, being responsible for any damages caused by their animal, keeping their pets under control (including off their property) and taking the necessary steps to address problem behavior
- Spaying and neutering, pet insurance, force free training, providing mental enrichment and healthy food, caring for an animal to the standard you would treat a human child but species appropriate care. Knowing your dog and keeping them and others safe if utilizing dog parks.
- I have been a responsible owner of 4 dogs and 3 cats during the past 30 years in Calgary. Our family always tried to abide with the appropriate City bylaws concerning our pets. I am generally not in favour of expanding the description of "pets" under the bylaws to include "farm animals".

- Training the pet and it's owners in good behaviours and safety of the pet and handling. Cleaning the pet and cleaning up after the pet. Providing the best life for the pet, making decisions that improve its overall life.
- Making a commitment to an animal for the life of the animal to care for it's physical and emotional needs. This includes such examples as feeding a healthy diet, clean water, vet care
- Pets should be controlled if presenting an obvious safety issue, but the mitigation of stray cat populations within the city has allowed rodent infestations to rise and become an issue. I frequently find mice and their damages in businesses and homes, and it's easily prevented this way.
- Not letting them roam, providing them with a safe and loving home.
- Exactly as it sounds, taking full responsibility for owning a pet.
- It means being able to have a companion that enriches your life and possibly the lives of others. The animal needs to be respectful to ones around it and that can only be taught to it by us if at all. Pets need not encroach on anyone else's life without their willingness.
- Owning an animal, taking proper care of it, and taking responsibility for its behaviour in the community.
- Putting your pet before yourself
- That your dog is properly housed, exercised, fed & vetted. Is well trained and can be trusted with strangers.
- With the ever changing environment and demise of bees globally we need to rethink our strategy for urban agriculture. Our neighboring cities have allowed chicken and goats amongst to promote urban agriculture, why are we so behind???
- Dealing with my pet, making sure they are healthy, fed and taken care of, and making sure all the city guidelines are followed.
- Care, courtesy, and safety
- Going beyond the min standards of conduct (by laws) by educating oneself in the animal's body language, care and needs (including nutritional) and offering a socially, physically and mentally enriched life for the animal.
- Properly looking after your animal. Caring for it. Protecting it. And preventing accidents/injury
- Having my dog license and fixed as well as taking care of their overall health.
- Being able to care for yourself and a animal with same regard for how would care for members of your family
- It means that you are capable and prepared to continuously focus on what is required to provide for a pet, including ensuring the animal does not impose a nuisance or danger to others.
- Enjoy your pet but ensure that it does not negatively impact the rights and lifestyle of others in your surrounding community.
- Being able to care properly for animals in a clean safe environment
- The pets are well cared for and receive appropriate care from a veterinarian. They do not roam the streets unaccompanied and the owner respects on and off-leash areas.

- Someone who cares for their animals as well as the impact the animals have on people around them. So, for example, if people are walking their dogs off leash in a regular neighbourhood, that is not responsible ownership!
- Keeping cats inside and not roaming and doing their business in other neighbours yards. Controlling dogs on the street and not harassing people walking on the street. Limiting number of pets in a household.
- Providing appropriate nutrition, water, housing, exercise.
- Responsible pet ownership means respecting public spaces and making sure your pet is not a nuisance to fellow citizens. Good animal husbandry practices regarding the care for your animal should also be maintained.
- Providing a safe and caring environment so pets are healthy and happy. Being aware of one's pets impacts on the community. Clean up messes and not allowing pets to wander unattended or disturb others
- Realizing pets can be at risk if let out to roam and being respectful of others with respect to barking, pooping and other behaviors.
- Making sure you take care of your animals. Keeping them in your yard and not wandering around the neighbourhood.
- Being responsible for everything my dog does - including barking pooping scaring people or biting
- Not owning a pit bull. They should be banned.
- Taking care and provide for your pet while at the same time not causing any harm to others and the area that we share. Obey the bylaws.
- Licensing animals, not owning more animals than can be properly cared for (without a breeding license), only breeding purebred, CKC registered and health tested dogs. No backyard breeding. Spaying/neutering.
- It means dogs or cats. No livestock. No pigs or chickens. If you need a comfort animal, get a dog or cat. Clean up after them and don't make them a nuisance to your neighbours.
- For me it's all about quality of life. Do you look after them by not just doing the basics but do you give them what they need such as attention. Or if it's a cat letting them go out occasionally. Especially when they are crying at the door to be let out.
- Ensuring dogs are trained and have completed training. Ensuring training facilities have adequate licensing. Ensuring owners pick up after their dogs, obey leashed area signage, and enroll reactive dogs into courses regardless of size or breed of dog.
- Licensed, desexed, microchipped, proper housing, proper socialization. A cat which does not roam. A dog which can be taken into public without incident. Knowing what your dog can and cannot handle and acting appropriately. And finally, obeying leash laws throughout the city.
- We have a dog. Pet ownership is animals who are companions and where the animal is controlled and not "livestock" or a direct or indirect commercial enterprise, and will not become a nuisance or worse for neighbours or the community.
- Being educated and studious about the well being of both my pets and the public. Engaging in training and diligence with my dog's behavior as well as supporting and educating the public and those around me of canine behavior. (leash reactivity) Respecting species and their innate natural tendencies.

- Pets are family members for life so are the responsibility of the 'owner' for physical and emotional well being.
- Enjoying the company of companion animals. Providing for their physical and mental well being including behavioural training when required. Promoting the preservation of healthy well-being bred dogs. Allowing dogs to work to their potential.
- Having an animal that is well cared for, trained, and is safe to have in the city.
- Care and responsibility for the life and well being of an animal
  - 1.) Having your furbabies vaccines upto date
  - 2.) Des
    - 2.) Add more off leash parks for furbabies is a must to give them good exercise and burn some energy to roam and be free
    - 3.) Microchip is a must.

- Controlling your pet in public spaces so that other citizens or their property are not impacted. I.e. on many occasions a walk/hike in public parks can be disrupted due to out of control pets jumping all over you.
Another major issue is ensuring the pet owners clean up after their pet.
- Taking proper care of your pet physically, ensuring you pet is not a threat to people or other animals, cleaning up after your pet, not acquiring pets that are unsuitable for your accomodations, or that you are not knowledgeable on, providing medical attention when necessary NOT ABUSING YOUR ANIMAL.
- Proper care of the pets in your household and respect towards other people (ie. keeping pets quiet at home, properly trained in public, keeping cats inside, etc.).
- Providing an animal the necessaries for life.
- Give my pet the good life they deserve
- Caring for your pets physical and emotion health and respecting your community. For example dogs should live inside with us, loved fed and protected from weather extremes, trained and socialized. They should be on leash when outside except in a designated off leash area, and poop picked up always.
- Someone who licenses their pet. Picks up after their pet. Trains their pet in appropriate behaviours. Takes their pet to the vet on a regular basis for shots.
- Ensuring the health and safety of your pet while making sure that your having one doesn't infringe on others. Keep the bylaw against free roaming cats and dogs and beef up enforcement. I hate seeing cats kill wild birds.

- Licensed. Quiet. Able to live indoors. No noise or smell impacting others. No barnyard “comfort “ animals in the city. Only registered service animals that have been fully trained.
- It means to take care of your pet, no matter the species, with care, love, compassion and kindness....to ensure it is healthy and loved. It also means to follow and respect the laws of the city/town where you live, which often means licensing your pet, picking up after your pet, etc.
- Taking care of your pets and ensuring their safety and well-being.
- This is what I would like to see change. Remove pet restrictions on housing and also the nonrefundable pet cleaning fee for rentals. Ontario allows all housing regardless of renting/owning to have a pet. If there is no damage caused by my pet why should I pay more?
- It means taking care of your animals and being courteous to neighbors, others and the environment you are in with you pets.
- Keeping your pet on a leash and picking up their waste.
- Keep the animal on your own property and quiet and clean up after it.
- License your pet, regular vet visits, take care of health and well-being of pet, compassion for the pet, normal grooming,
- Purchase from an ethical, responsible, REGISTERED breeder or rescue. Provide healthy nutrition & breed appropriate mental and physical exercise. Give all basic medical care (vaccines, deworming, neuter, etc) on schedule. Get immediate medical care for emergencies. Get training. Keep pet for life.
- Not allowing your dog to be outside barking for 15 minutes every night at supper time. Be aware that your neighbours do not appreciate this. The City should also do something about it rather than tell me to fill out paperwork so they can send a letter to the owner.
- It means looking after your pet and ensuring it doesn't bother neighbors ect
- Providing a balance between good neighbours and safety and health of pets
- Providing food, shelter, and love to your pet. Domesticated animals should be kept indoors for their safety and the safety of others, including cats. Leaving pets outside for extended periods of time is NEGLECT.
- Main concern is people not cleaning up after pets, both on property and on public land. Believe there should be penalties for not cleaning up after pets. Also, if you have no intention of breeding your pet (primarily dogs and cats), then you should be required or incentivized to neuter or spay.
- Owners maintain the health of the animal. When animal is not on owner's property, animal is leashed (unless in designated area).
- In my experience, neighbours are only somewhat concerned about looking after animals on their property. On our street, domestic rabbits have escaped and are now multiplying rapidly. The population of another neighbour's pigeons quadrupled in two weeks. Bad idea - no effective recourse if this happens
- No barking, no off leash, no pit bull like dogs, no agriculture animals in city for any reason.
- Caring for the social, emotional and physical well-being of all animals in your care while also ensuring the safety of your neighbours and broader community.

- 1) Pet owners keeping their pets healthy (regular vet visits enforced by city)
- 2) Keeping their pets on their properties (no free running around)
- 3) More stringent enforcement and high fines for letting pets loose in the neighbourhood. The ability to sue pet owners for damages created by their pets.
- Maintaining property by cleaning up after pets, licensed and mandatory owner chips for all pets including bunnies, no 'farm' animals in city limits. Strong penalties for vicious dogs. Dogs in dog park should be kept under control. Leave the wildlife alone, except if they become aggressive.
- Securing your animals, I.e. leashing in public. Spaying and neutering animals to avoid unwanted breeding, limit the number of animals in your home to what is manageable for you, having safe interactions with your dog and the public (I.e. people and other dogs)
- Means keeping your pet happy and healthy by taking care of their basic dietary, medical, physical, and psychological needs. It also means monitoring their behavior and environmental impact in public spaces so that you and your pooch are good members of your community.
- - not bringing a leashes dog to an offleash park- not only does it cause tension at the offleash the dog on leash feels trapped and can't defend himself.
- - picking up after your pet
- - watching your dog play and stepping in when they get to excited/too dominant.
- Not allowing your dog to bark every time it thinks it sees or hears something - I'd like to be able to enjoy my backyard without being constantly barked at - current bylaws only apply during the night but I want to enjoy my yard during the day. Stop cats from roaming & pooping in gardens.
- Cleaning up after your dog. The state of "off leash areas" all over the city is disgusting and embarrassing. Dog owners need to be held accountable
- Responsible pet ownership means: Not forcing your pets on people that do not like pets or more important have health issues with pets of any kind .
Also, people STILL let their cats run all over the streets & into people's private property.
Also have issues with the number of pets some people own.
- Picking up after your animal. Listening to the community who call out bad animal owners (behavior, picking up after them, off-leash). Responsible pet owners look after their animals, do not let them loose in neighbourhoods and pick up after them.
- Being the guardian of an animal, keeping the animal safe and happy and keeping others safe from your animal.
- To me, pet ownership means adequately meeting the needs of the animals under your care. It means strictly enforced animal rights, and support systems that reflect a city that prioritizes animal welfare.
- Ensuring the health & safety of your pet and minimizing any disruption to your neighbours and community.
- Caring for and giving them health, love, exercise and the attention and needs, putting them first when they need it.
- DOGS IN PROHIBITED AREAS

- Non predatory pets from bees to pot belly pigs should be allowed, but cats should kept indoors unless they are harnessed with cow bells. A bit strong, but gardeners and bird lovers will agree that the mousers are terrors if left to roam. Licensing, forced neutering might help.
- Having control of your pet at all times so they are not a danger to themselves or other pets / people. Caring for the pet with proper foot, shelter, and veterinary care. Ensuring the pet is not a nuisance to others (e.g. constantly barking dogs, roaming cats, etc.)
- Clean up after your dog and keep it on a leash unless in an offleash area. Provide for the animal's needs and treat it well.
- It means providing the necessities of life to your pet which includes management, supervision and training as well as food, shelter, medical care and water.
- Knowing you have the time and resources to care for a pet before acquiring one, understanding it's requirements for love, food, exercise, grooming etc, keeping it under control (leashed) at all times, owning and removing its waste from public and private property.
- Pets should mean cats and dogs only. No backyard chickens pigs or even bees. When one has dogs and cats , they must be treated properly , fed and kept warm in cold weather. They are a member of your family. Treat them like that!!!
- Where the welfare of domesticated animals is a priority and the people responsible for them are held accountable to provide for them in a manner that aligns with having all basic needs met and is safe from harm.
- If you have an aggressive animal it is taking the necessary precautions to protect it from other animals. Having had a dog that would be picked on by the aggressive ones at dogs parks made us avoid parks at certain times of the day because we didn't want to risk our dogs well-being.
- It means that your animal(s) are spayed/neutered, provided with permanent ID in the form of a Tattoo or a microchip and that your animal is provided with enrichment and a good quality of life"not left out in the yard all day/night, or left out on a chain"
- Taking care of the needs of the animal while being respectful to neighbors and the community
- Taking medical care of pets, ensuring they are not causing property damage, population control
- Not having the city interfere with my business. I have two animals that I do not pay for registration for. I do not need another tax in my life. My pets are safe in my home, vaccinated, and well trained. Heck off I don't need no government telling me what to do.
- A leashed pet, picking up pet waste - every time
- Providing for the health and happiness of our pets for their full lives, including housing them indoors, never leaving them unattended outdoors, promptly picking up their waste on and off your property, regular exercise, and accessing behavioral training as needed to promote good canine citizenship.
- Keeping animals healthy, spayed/neutered, properly socialized, and knowing the characteristics of your breed.

- Control of your pet and pick up waste
- It means taking care of your pets needs including health, exercise, socialization as well as making sure they are not bothering anyone else (i.e. barking) and also cleaning up after them.
- That the pet owner takes all steps necessary to ensure their pet(s) are safe in all respects: that they are provided with appropriate food, fresh water, shelter, veterinary care, love and companionship. Also that their pet is not an on-going nuisance to any of their neighbours.
- Do not leave dogs outside if they're barking non stop. This negatively impacts the psychological well being of neighbors.
- Being able to care for (financially, physically and emotionally) for the pets that you own.
- Responsible pet ownership means taking care of your pet, picking up after them and ensure that they do not infringe on others
- Someone that understands the needs of their pets and is in good control of that pet. They have their safety in mind as well as balancing their needs with the publics.
- Has their pets spayed/neutered, microchipped & licensed with the city. Appropriately exercises their pets & cleans up after them (in public and in their yard). Has trained their dog & always keeps them in sight & under control when at the dog park. Doesn't have 2 many pets for the size of their home
- Caring for your animals, containing your animals, providing necessary veterinary care for your animals, and managing their interactions with and within the community.
- Put a proper comprehensive survey for Calgary can really have a meaningful measure on this issue.
- City should limit the number of dogs and cats in a home to 5 each or 8 all together. City should be more strict on dog owners for having their dogs off leash on sidewalks, paths etc.
- Backyard chickens should be allowed! They're a clean animal when properly cared for, fantastic way to provide fresh eggs for the family, as well as fresh fertilizer for the garden.
- Providing food, water, exercise and companionship to your pet
- Cleaning up after your pet and not having dangerous animals in common public areas.
- Not letting pets of-leash Especially in public narrow spaces e.g,bridges, staircases,& elevators.As much as we love dogs,some people might have been attacked by them in their childhood and are to this day scared of them.Dogs getting close to them causes fatal injuries by them trying to escape.
- It means being respectful to your neighbours.
- Control of your pet - giving your pet exercise and making them part of the family outings
- Providing the necessities for your pet: food, water, shelter, medical treatment, exercise, love etc. Following the by laws and keeping your pet on leash where required, inside your house/yard where required. Making sure that your pet doesn't cause trouble for others, ie constant barking, odor, etc
- providing shelter and care for an animal without forcing your neighbours to address it
- Cleaning up after your pets and consequences for those that don't.
- Taking care of animals and giving them a healthy playful clean life.
- Providing water, food, shelter, cleanliness, stimulation, love and the willingness to spend the money needed to care for an animal. Food and vet bills can be expensive!
- Keeping animals safe and healthy while respecting your neighbours and their animals

- It means your pet ownership does not affect other members of the community. Your pet's mess should always be cleaned up so it doesn't bother anyone. Your pet should always be under your control, whether on or off leash so it does not bother other people's pets or other people.
- Keep your pets indoors on a leash while in public space, unless you enjoy paying monster fines. The city milks drivers for minor infractions but allows pet owners to get away with letting fluffy roam all over the place killing birds and crapping on my lawn. Bust out the big fines.
- To actually follow the laws, too many people have their dogs off leash everywhere, with the "it's ok they are friendly" excuse. Actually enforcing the laws that exist would be a great improvement. Not all people or dogs want to meet everyone's off leash dog, on walkways parks etc. enforce the laws
- Being aware of your dog's behaviour and doing what is required to keep everyone comfortable - keep your dog on a leash, stop your dog from jumping on people, stop excessive barking, pick up your dog's poop(!) in your yard and out on a walk, get vaccines and get help if dog is aggressive.
- Keeping your pets safe, healthy and living lives that are as stress free as possible. Buying responsibly from non-mills, keeping cats inside and licencing and microchipping of pets.
- It means healthy pets that aren't a nuisance.
- a person who takes good care of their animals. and contributes to them having a good quality of life
- Maintaining safety for our pets, other animals and humans in public areas. Providing adequate shelter, nutrition, veterinary care and exercise for our pets.
- Cleaning up after your dog. City needs more enforcement, get bylaw out into the parks and fining people leaving shit everywhere.
- Having control of your pet at all times, licencing and vaccinating on time. Spaying and neutering your pets!
- Keeping your dog on a leash in public when they are aggressive
Not bringing aggressive dogs to dog parks
Not waiting in your vehicle while your dog is at the dog park
Cleaning up after your pet with city provided bags
City maintained water fountains for dogs
Not inbreeding animals for sale
- Ensuring the animals in my care are well cared for, live a healthy life with enrichment and that they do not cause damage or issues to neighbours or people, property outside of my direct reach.
- Knowing the laws, knowing where you can take your reactive dog (NOT AN OFFLEASH DOG PARK), owning up to your animals actions and not running away when their dog attacks another. Willing to work out solutions to problems, yearly vaccinations when needed, registration, knowing behaviors of your animal
- Pick up after your pets! Do not let your dogs off leash in areas that require leashes! (Especially dangerous breeds like pitbulls!)
- They don't allow their pets to roam alone outside.
They walk dog and pick up poo and throw away in garbage and not leave bag on ground.
They don't leave dog barking outdoors.
- It means picking up after your pet which many people don't bother doing. Stiffer fines may help.

- Ensuring that the animals are healthy and living in a clean environment and not negatively impacting their neighbors.
- Caring for the animals' needs, lots of opportunity for off leash play for dogs, keeping outdoor cats on property, recognizing your dog's weaknesses and getting help from a professional
- Owning a pet responsibly should mean that your pet ownership doesn't have any adverse effect on your surroundings. Unfortunately as increased density takes place there is more and more frequency of occurrences with pet owners that are irresponsible and ruin it for the good pet owners.
- Maintaining control of your dog in public. A dog should not be off-leash, except in specified off-leash areas.
Owners MUST pick up after their dog or be penalized.
- Pets are well cared for, and housed in a manner that minimizes the impacts to the surrounding neighbours and wildlife/environment.
- Taking care of your pet within your area and ensuring that they are cleaned up after. In off leash dog areas, picking up your poop, managing them in case they are bothering other dogs or people to ensure everyone is safe. Also being wary of noise bylaws and not leaving your animal out all day.
- Caring for your pet in a humane way which minimizes impact on others
- Having control over your pet on and off leash, cleaning up after them, spray and neuter
- I agree with Licensing your pets and being responsible for what ever your pet does and ensure you always have control of your animal even in off leash areas. My biggest peeve is with cats that are allowed to roam freely mess up my yard but I cannot do anything about it except trap them at my expense
- no farm type animals in city limits- such as chickens, pigs, cows, ponies... they are noisy, smelly and can cause issues if not managed properly.
- Animals should be licensed, trained (dogs), and physical and mental care a top priority. Owners must clean up after their pets. Owners must ensure dogs aren't barking all day. Owners should keep cats indoors unless they are rural barn cats.
- To me it means that only people who can financially afford pets, have the time to look after them and provide their needs, and look after them 100% properly by ensuring they are well trained and cleaned up after should be able to have pets.
- Ensuring your pet is safe and cared for. Ensuring your pet does not create risk or discomfort for other people. Ensure you are cleaning up after your pet.
- That an owner cares for and meets the physical and emotional needs of an animal.
- I think we should look at changes to section 23 regarding noise...define a threshold for unacceptable noise that disturbs others, you can't just say no noise. Dogs bark, cats meow, both can be mitigated but not eliminated. Also define what adequate grounds for complaint might be.
- Being responsible when owning a pet.
- Taking care of a pet in order that the pet's needs for food shelter and companionship are met, and that the pet is not a nuisance or danger to other people or itself.

- Responsible pet ownership means that people take responsibility for the thoughtful management and actions of their animals. I absolutely support allowing urban hens in Calgary. Citizens should be allowed to responsibly keep them on their property, as with any other pet.
- The animal gets vet visits with yearly vaccinations, don't have more than the by-law allows, dogs get at least some basic command training, pick up after dogs, dogs get some exercise a few times a week, don't leave them outside (dogs mostly) in inclement weather or overnight, etc.... ran out of roo
- Being able to maintain a safe environment for my pet and neighbours
- Allowing urban livestock is completely irresponsible and a terrible, short-sighted idea. Look at what's occurring around the globe with coronavirus. There is a huge risk to allowing more animals to be raised within urban centers. Horrible, risky, irresponsible and potentially dangerous idea.
- Responsible means accountable. We let so many owners get away with not being accountable.
- providing a good quality of life for my pet and my neighbours
- The tag system for the city should have a multi-year option. If your pet dies you can donate the rest to the off-leash park system or to the SPCA (IE Pet memorial fund). Car license plates should be tied to dog tags for dog attacks so the owners can be traced.
- Proper care and treatment of any pet you own.
But I'm here about Chickens. Just make it legal, every other Canadian city has. Also I've lived in Calgary since 2000, we had chickens for 10 years. All the neighbors knew, we had no issues.
- It means ensuring your pet's needs are met mentally and physically so they can have the best life possible. This includes providing enrichment, veterinary care, training, and most importantly time. Your pet should never impact negatively upon other people, as your pet is your responsibility.
- Means ensuring that all pets are safe
- Aggressive dogs shouldn't be allowed in the city. I am a 100% supporter for a pitbull ban. I've seen way too many pitbulls attacking people & dogs!
- To look after your pet and keep it in good health. Make sure the pet you have will not cause the neighbours any problems. Must be respectful of neighbours.
- Having healthy, happy pets and taking care of them properly while being respectful to our neighbours.
- Picking up after your dog. Keeping animal noise to a minimum. Restraining dangerous dogs - ie never off leash - ever.
- Taking care of your animals needs (feeding,medical,training). Picking up after your per
- Following the bylaws and keeping our animals (and humans around them) safe at all times.
- Taking care of your pet. Being responsible for your pet.
- Providing a safe, healthy and positive environment for your animal while respecting the community
- Having your animals cared for, vaccinated, well trained and within your control when in public, not allowing your animals to roam around unsupervised and cleaning up after your pet in public spaces people are able to tell whether or not the pet is attacking them which could lead to injury on either side

- Adhering to bylaws. I live in Bridgeland, and there are many roaming cats in my neighbourhood. I regularly clean cat feces from my front porch, and throughout my backyard. Its a a health and safety issue for my children as well as myself. Would trap, but due to health issues cannot transport in car.
- 1) Providing for your pet's health and safety needs with compassion
2) Working to reduce the impact of your pets on your neighbours to zero (it's your pet, not theirs)
3) Ensuring your pet cannot negatively affect the flora and fauna where you live
- Kindly looking after ALL of the needs of an animal companion and family member.
- Keeping cats indoors, dogs on a leash except for off leash areas. Also registering the animal, spaying or neutering the animal. Proper feeding, grooming and vet visits. Training and obedience school.
- It means happy, healthy animals (whether family pets or livestock) that are a treasured part of our families and our community, supported by local services, said services being paid for (through licensing?) by the owners of these pets and livestock.
- As with the cat bylaw the city should put many more bylaws on the books that they do not bother to enforce. Currently licensing fees by responsible pet owners contributes a disproportionate amount to the cost of animal services
- It means my neighbour's pets stay on their property and They are not overly loud or smelly. It means being able to own animals (eg. Chickens) but these animals don't put undue stress on others. It also means sharing- like sharing eggs with your neighbours
- It means respecting leash laws. Picking up after your pet everywhere (including backyards). Not letting dogs bark non-stop. Muzzling certain dogs and respecting that muzzles are a tool and not a sign of a bad dog. Respecting some dogs do not like other dogs. Having verbal control at the park.
- Caring for (food, shelter, medical care, love) and custodial care and control (picking up all waste, proper leashes, crates in back of pick ups, safe fencing, no roaming at large and NO FLEXI LEADS)
- Responsible pet ownership outlines everything included in the current bylaw. I also believe proper vaccination etc is important if the animal is to be out with others. People need to be smart about the breed of dog, it's characteristics, and what it could mean for owners, public, other animals
- To have a well trained animal that is exercised, socialized and does not wonder the streets. It is also very important to clean up after your pet so bacteria etc. is not spread around.
- It means that I choose to open my house and make them part of my family. It means that I protect them, feed them, love them, register them, train them, take them to the vet, don't leave them outside to bark, microchip them and keep them in a safe/fenced yard.
- Livestock are not pets so livestock such as chickens, ducks, goats, sheep, pigs, horses, cows, turkeys should not be allowed to be kept within city limits on residential or commercial property. Responsible pet ownership means licensing, vet care, vaccination, spaying, neutering, training, leashing.

- Giving a pet a loving home and provide for them physically and mentally. For dogs giving them daily exercise, cleaning up after them, socializing them and providing them with good quality food and vet care.
- I do not own a pet
  1. Pets defecate on their own property, not in our city parks and natural spaces!
  2. Pets on lease on regional pathway, lead to be on the outside of the sidewalk, away from oncoming foot traffic.
  3. Do not assume everyone wants to greet your pet.
- licensed. vet/health checked rescues. breeder responsibility in pet placements.
- You are responsible for meeting all your pets needs (basic needs such as food/shelter/health/grooming/dental, physical needs such as exercise/walking, emotional needs such as playtime/engaging activities. You're also responsible for your pets actions and behaviours towards people/animals/property.
  - Providing appropriate care for the animal
  - Keeping animals on-leash unless in a designated off-leash area
  - Cleaning up animal defecation immediately and appropriately
  - Ensuring animals are not a noise nuisance
- Making sure your pet doesn't effect anyone else. Not letting it pee in others peoples lawns, cleaning up the poop, not leaving it to bark and disturb you neighborhood. Keeping you cat indoors. Generally making sure your decision to own a pet doesn't effect anyone else's enjoyment.
- It means that cats are not allowed to freely roam my garden. It is fully organic and cat feces is toxic. Every year a part of my garden patch is ruined for consumption. I also think there needs to be updates to bird feeders - no peanuts. They attract the squirrels who then pull up my garden
- Vaccinating, spaying and neutering, access time food and water, keeping the animal indoors at night and in from the cold or extreme hot, loving home free from abuse and exercise. Taking them to the vet when they require medical care.
- Please send me an email to send a pdf regarding pet behaviour that I was given by BC Provincial Parks. [personal information removed]
- Picking up after your own pet/s.
- Caring for animals
- Providing a safe, happy environment for my pets. Ensuring their health and vet needs are attended to promptly. They are valued members of my home.
- Cleaning up after your pet and making sure it has good manners in social situations
- Making sure your pet is not a harm or threat to anyone, nor other animals. Caring for the pet and giving it the best life possible. Protecting the pet and keeping it safe.
- Not allowing a dog to bark in the back yard for hours on end
- Caring for an animal or creature with diligence and respect. Pets can include animals that provide clean, stable food security in the form of eggs. Knowing that wild pigeons may be captured and eaten within the city seems to compliment the responsible ownership of pets that can produce eggs.

- Providing care for your pets, no matter how many or how few you have. Keeping pets controlled in public situations, and ensuring the health and safety of your pets, other animals, your family, and the public.
- To me it means making sure that your pet is safe, healthy and not being a nuisance to others
- Responsible pet ownership entails keeping your pets on leash and under control in public spaces, keeping your cats on your own property, picking up your dog waste from private and public places and not disturbing neighbors with your dog's barking.
- First off. Owners being held accountable for the actions of there pets. Stiffer penalties for animal abuse and lack of control over their animals. Also being able to keep animals of our choice for me it's chickens. Of course with that don't disrupt neighbors.
- Ensuring the health and safety of our pets and community, and being an ambassador for those values.
- Taking care of a pet physically and emotionally. Making sure that my pet is a "good citizen" as it lives in a community
- I have many pets, responsible pet ownership means caring for them and living peaceably in my community so as not to impact my neighbors or city systems.
- To be able to care for the pets needs 100%. Cats should always be left inside the house unless on a leash, too many outdoor cats being hit or eaten by animals or attacked. Don't get an animal for children just cuz they are a baby animal.
- Taking care of your pet, all-encompassing care. Providing the environment they need and more.
- Taking ownership for your pets actions. Cats put out doors kill city wild life and defecate where ever they please detractong from others enjoyment of our city. Dog owners must be licensed and the funds generated support city functions such as the animal shelter. All pets should be licensed.
- The biggest issue I have is off leash dogs in non off leash areas.
I believe there needs to be harsher punishment and stricter enforcement of this.
My spouse and our two dogs have been charged more times than I can count - there is zero reason this should happen with the amount of O/L we have.
- Please revise the bylaw applying to leashed dogs being walked/jogged while their handler is on wheels ( rollerblades, bicycle etc)on pathways and allow for this to be acceptable.
- Pet ownership that prioritizes the physical and mental/social needs of the animal as an individual creature, as well as ensuring no negative impacts to others (i.e. animal is controlled while in public, picking up after waste, etc)
- I don't think number of pets has anything to do with responsibility. If you can feed them, house them, keep them healthy and CLEAN, not be disruptive to neighbors, and give them love (the pets not the neighbors) then you should be able to have as many as you like. Thank you.
- Being fully committed to care and safety of the animal throughout their life. What ever it takes. Same as having a child.
- When people follow the rules caring for, walking and interacting with their pets and other people.
- That my pets, and everyone pets, are kept as safe as I am.

- Being responsible means knowing the rules laid out for your pets and knowing how to apply them respectfully. It also means knowing your pet's needs and being able to provide them. It also means caring for the pet at all times.
- Please make those extenda leashes against the law! People have yes control over their dogs with them and let them come running up into my dogs' faces yelling it's ok they are friendly. My dog doesn't like other dogs so i keep her on leash and don't go to dog parks. And they are dangerous to human
- Individuals and families who choose to include reciprocal care for animals in their lifestyle. Responsible to the welfare of the animal and a compassionate awareness of effect to nearby residents
- Happy and healthy animals
- Actually having your dog on leash in communities.
- Providing food, shelter, water, mental stimulation, training (more for dogs), appropriate socialization and love to any animals in care - recognizing them as individual beings and that they each have different needs.
- pets live in harmony with their humans
- Providing appropriate care for and reasonable control of your pets, regardless of the number you might have.
- Providing adequate care for your pets, taking responsibility for their medical care and their whereabouts.
- If you cannot afford the ancillary costs of owning a pet (spay and neuter, licensing etc) you don't need one. Costs include non monetary considerations like picking up after them (ie excrement) and exercise.
- It means ensuring the health and happiness of your pet. It also means enjoying public spaces with them, without affecting others enjoyment of the space. This means cleaning up feces, not allowing them to enter someone's personal space without permission (jumping on them), etc.
- Providing a high quality of life for the pet, physically (exercise, diet, socialization, shelter from the elements) and emotionally (receiving affection and compassion). Ensuring the pet does not (from lack of oversight by its owner) damage property, people or other animals.
- Keeping you pet in good health, loved and well cared for and not allowing them to be a nuisance to others while still abiding by the rules of pet ownership put into place by the city or town in which you live.
- Knowing your pets' behaviors, social limitations, and understanding how that can affect other people and animals, as well as cleaning up after your pet.
- As a responsible rental housing provider, we understand that importance of having a home that meets our tenant's needs. We always ensure that as long as our tenants are responsible for their furry friends, we always welcome them in our homes.
- Cats being kept indoors. Dogs not fence fighting with other dogs in yards. Dogs always under voice control if off lead.

- Having control of your pet. Having the awareness to have the best for a pet by, not leaving them outside at night or hours on end. For people that act in a manner that is not reflective of fairness for an animal should be met with questions of their actions including those of further pet ownership.
- All pets are licensed and their health, social and exercise needs are taken care of
- As someone who walks into strangers houses all the time I can honestly say that I have far more safety issues with small breeds such as chihuahuas and dachshunds as compared to large breeds such as a Rottweiler and pit bulls. I am able to get large breeds to like me quickly and small breeds wont
- Responsible Pet Ownership means taking responsibility for your pets anywhere you have them. An off leash park does not mean you have the right to let an aggressive dog run free, your dogs must be under control no matter where you are!! ☐!! ☐
- Picking up after your pet, following leash laws and ensuring owners are aware of what pets are doing and remain close enough to stop unwanted/negative behaviour. Too many owners are unaware of what their dogs are doing in off leash parks and are blasé regarding control/waste management of their pets
- Pets must be cared for medically as well as physically. Proof of vaccination should be mandatory. Cats need to be kept to their own property period. Dogs on leash unless in a designated offleash. Dogs under control at all times. Dogs kept in yards should have proper shelter water food.
- Responsible pet ownership needs to be enforced by the city of Calgary. With regards to dogs this should be about preventing bites from happening. Be proactive, don't wait and only react when a bite occurs.
- I believe I means residents should have the right to own pets of their choosing so long as they are taken care of properly and there is little or no impact to neighbours. This includes laying hens.
- Responsible pet owner ship is making sure your pets are taken care of and are not disturbing others around you. Picking up and cleaning after them. Restraining them in the proper occasions. Keep a pet is like a family member you need to care for them and not harm them in anyway.
- Being able to look after my pet and give it all the essentials,
- Appropriate care for pets (e.g. vet, food, exercise), licensing, obeying leashed/unleashed areas, not allowing your pet to wander, financially responsible if your animal harms another. Clean up after pet (including cats allowed outdoors if your neighbour requests cat crap cleanup).
- No free running, CLEAN UP, respect personal property/yards, shots, spaying, barking!!!! My yard and garbage not your [removed] recepticles, keep cats out of yard and using garden as litter box
- ... means keeping your pets under your control, on your property, or in designated areas, such that they do not interfere with others' enjoyment of their property, or public areas, and that the pets do not harass wildlife.
- To me this means providing safety, shelter, food, health care, exercise and love for any pets of which I take ownership and responsibility.
- An owner who provides for the health and safety of their pet and helps protect the community from aggressive pets by putting a muzzle only dogs with a history of aggression and not specific breeds.

- Abiding by all current laws set out for animal ownership regardless of the personality or character of your pet.
- Ensuring you have a safe and well cared for home, and ensuring that you are not creating any work for any other person in regards to the cleanup after your pet. Last but not least ensuring that your pet is not a treat to any other person or animal in any situation.
- Responsible for my pets activities, ensuring they are safe and healthy and minimal impact to the neighbors and neighborhood. My pets a all been microchipped for safety, I do not let them out loose, they are licensed, I monitor their noise level ie: no barking outside.
- Lifelong care of the pet, ensuring your pet is happy and healthy and safe. Ensuring you clean up after your pet, and your pet is never in a position to harm itself or others. Know your pet's limitations/personality so they are successful and don't bite/harm other animals or people.
- We NEED “no dogs signs” in school fields. We live on a school field and constantly have dogs off leash being walked by owners. There NEEDS to be more signage for “no dog” Areas. Small children play there and it’s being over run with dogs (Hidden Valley School and Valley Creek School Field)
- Free / Low cost spay and neutering for all of pets licensed in Calgary.
- Stiffer penalties for pets off leash. This includes cats. Cats should not be able to roam free.
- Licensing them, spay/neuter, tatto/chip, not allowing them to free roam, cleaning up after them, providing adequate care.
- Responsible pet ownership is ensuring the health and safety of your pets.
- Taking care of an animal and providing it with a safe and healthy home. Also respecting your community and the people and other animals you share it with.
- Your animal should be treated well, and not let loose to roam the streets.
- having suitable coverage for pets (an outdoor house or such) if leaving pets outside on a leash for hours at a time
- Providing your pet with a healthy, safe and fulfilled life, while allow other pet owners to do the same. Participating in training and healthy forms of socialization whilst not interfering with others (ie no off leash dogs in areas with leash laws, limited barking, dog is under control in public)
- Taking the steps to make sure your pets are not a nuisance to others while also being a good pet owner in general.
- Caring for the pets in your home. This includes vet care, positive training, and ensuring the safety of your pets and those that interact with your pets.
- Taking good care of the animal without bothering neighbors. Small number of pets allowed. Higher fines for those who break bylaws.
- Looking after your pet and not allowing it to annoy other people
- taking responsibility for your pet's health and behaviour and being a good neighbour/citizen
- Consistently picking up after your dog, not letting your dog pee on other people's property, respecting on-leash areas like bike paths, respecting other's personal space.

- Owners are the sole caregivers of these beloved fur babies, they need to act as such. This does not just mean throwing food at them. Walking pets regularly, NOT leaving them outside all day, picking up after them and ONLY using APPROVED off leash areas for their SOCIALIZED pets.
- Being accountable for the health AND wellbeing of any animals in your care, including ensuring they are able to have positive relationships with their environment and neighbors.
- Responsible pet ownership means spaying or neutering all pets unless they are breeding animals and you vow to find homes for the offspring, keeping pets indoors or on harness and leash under full supervision and providing the pet with the best life including paying for all medical bills.
- be able to train, provide and care for your furry friend
- Looking after your animals in a responsible way for the pet and society.
- Keeping your cats inside at all times. Registering all animals so they can be returned if they go missing. Picking up after your dog. Ensuring your dog is trained, both on and offleash, so it's safe around other people. Ensuring your dog has a good recall command.
- Stricter & actually enforced not picking up after your dog, as well as only using designated off leash areas. I constantly see people using school fields as off leash dog areas. I have had countless encounters with off leash dogs approaching my leashed dog while walking.
- License your pet, keep them indoors and have them vaccinated.
- Spaying/ neutering. Licensing, caring for, and being in control of your animal
- Taking good care of your pets in particular feeding, cleaning, walking (as required) and maybe a limit to the number of animals a person is permitted to have. Responsible pet ownership also means consideration of how your pet will interact with or influence the world around them (eg badly trained do
- Taking good care of your pets and ensure that they are not a danger to others.
- Ensuring that you, your pet, other animals, and citizens can get along
- Walking daily, good recall, PICKING UP POOP!!
- Finding the right balance between pet owners enjoying the company of their pets within the city limits and non-pet owners with concerns.
- Making sure that animals are leashes at all times when not in an off leash area. Making sure that pets are picked up after. I back onto green space and ask owners Countlessly to put a leash on and pick up after them. Not everyone enjoys dogs
- Cleaning up after your pets both out in public and within the home owners yard. And quiet animals.
- Ensuring that pet owners keep their pets under control at all times. This includes under leash at all times, dealing with their pets feces properly. This is one reason I think off leash areas need to be patrolled more diligently. Too much feces not recovered by pet owners.
- Taking care of your pet in all areas to ensure its well being. Food, water, shelter, health care, etc need to be taken care of for each animal in our care.
- Caring for a pets health and safety.

- Willing and able to care for your pet, provide routine medical care incl vaccines and deworming to also protect pets they may come in contact with, exercise, emotional stability, ensure not a nuisance to neighbours and properties, cleaning up after them, license in case lost, etc.
- Being responsible and accountable for all animals that you own. Feeding, TRAINING, damages, Li's ending and common sense.
Bylaw needs to actually do their job. Go to dog parks and monitor behaviour. Go to parks and FINE people who are not obeying the bylaws.
Use common sense w: support animal
- Responsible pet ownership is about providing proper care (food, water, vet care) to the animals, ensuring they are not a nuisance to others (free roaming unless where designated, leaving waste) and ensuring they are spayed/neutered. It's not about the number of animals but how they are looked after.
- Maintaining a quality standard of life for animals, improving one's quality of life, while also being a responsible neighbour and citizen.
- Well trained dog who is under control while on walks and at home. When walking all dog poop is scooped up by the person walking the dog. As well as regular veterinary check ups and vaccinations.
- Picking up after your pet. Taking proper care of your pet and being respectful in regards to your neighbors and your pets
- Following the bylaws in place to make sure all people and pets are safe. Way too many offleash dogs in neighborhoods!
- It means knowing the bylaws first and foremost.
Keeping your pets on leash unless it is a designated off leash area - it doesn't matter how well trained your own pet is.
Picking up your pet's waste is also a huge issue in the city.
Ensuring your dog is up to snuff with anything medical related.
- Responsible pet ownership to me means that if you cannot control you dog psychologically then you need to control it physically. Meaning not to let your dog run free at the dog park if it doesn't understand recall.
- I love the idea of having my own chickens on my property as an ethical and sustainable way to harvest eggs. So long as roosters aren't waking everyone up early every morning I don't see an issue with this. Living in Crescent Heights I'm always looking to find ways live more sustainably.
- To be responsible for your pet in every way. To provide a good quality of life that includes vetting, exercise, training and socialization.
- Always know where your dog/cat is. Make sure it's properly taken care of...keep it licensed and up to date on all vaccinations.
- Happy pets, owners, and their neighbors.
- Taking care of my pet; giving it walks and picking up after my pet.
- Taking care of your pet's needs, food, health, safety. Ensuring you pet is safe in the community and under control.

- Providing a safe and secure home for the animals I choose to have as a part of my life, while ensuring that said animals are not causing damage to any public property or causing harm to anyone.
- Not leaving your dogs out in the cold all night and day.
- Being a caretaker for an animal, enduring the animal has proper food/shelter/and enrichment. Maintaining a relationship that is beneficial for you, the animal and the world around you. I have had chickens in the past, and would love to have them again!!
- That you provide a loving & caring home for the pet(s) you have. That includes quality food, sufficient exercise & enrichment. Pet owners should also obey all pet related laws - especially picking up their waste.
- Keeping your pets under control at all times, not allowing them to roam free.
- being responsible for your pets safety and safety of others and their pets. Picking up after your dog . Making sure that your dog is not disturbing anyone. re: barking.. Being a good neighbour.
- Responsible pet ownership means:
Picking up after you dog
Dogs leashed in areas that are not off leash
Allowing dogs to be attached to a bike with an attachment made for dogs and not with a leash hand held by the owner
- Pets are increasingly becoming important social partners for people, and this needs to be recognized. I would like to see pets be able to share more of the public space, but there also needs to be accountability for waste, noise and behavior.
- Providing for the needs of an animal so that they may have a fulfilling life with you.
- Keeping your pets healthy, happy, and safe while ensuring the health and happiness, and safety of those around you. Keeping pets contained, up to date on vaccines, spayed/neutered, and reasonably quiet are all qualities of responsible pet ownership.
- I provide food, shelter, exercise for my pet. I pick up after my dog even if out walking around the neighbourhood. I never let my dog run loose in the streets even if I am with it.
- Taking care of your pets emotional and physical well being at all times. Training and socializing them to their surroundings and ensuring your pet isn't affecting others with their noise, feces, etc.
- Owners take care of their pets while considering the welfare of neighbors and other people/animals.
- Able to properly care for and treat an animal, and in a manner respectful and considerate of the community and others in that community.
- taking responsibility for your pet's actions as the owner of the pet.
- Respecting people's properties and the noise bylaw; that means do not use other people's properties as a toilet, nor does it mean you and your pet can trespass on other peoples' properties, and do not let your dog out past 10:00 PM to bark.

- Adequately caring for and providing and enriching life for a pet while providing training so that their pet can functionally live among neighbors in accordance to where they live and creates a controlled environment where the dog is not causing or does not experience harm.
- Being able to care, provide and keep the animal safe, even if asking for help for those provided needs. Be willing to keep the animal long term like a child and give it the needs it requires and be able to obtain help if needed.
- To provide proper diet, coat care, physical and mental exercises.
- Caring for animals in a way that promotes and protects their health, safety and wellbeing as well as the health, safety and wellbeing of other animals and humans around them.
- Looking after your pet so that it has the best life possible. Picking up after your pet and making sure that your pet is not disturbing those around you. Obeying the laws as to where dogs can be off leash and respecting on leash areas.
- I'm not sure what the need is for a new by-law. The existing by-law has been used as a standard across Canada. However, the enforcement and public education has totally been lost in administrative change with retirements. Particularly the retirement of Bill Bruce.
- Providing a safe, healthy and engaging environment for the animal to live in.
- Pick up after your pets. Have poop all over the lawn with lazy neighbors not picking up. Also, enforce pets off leash and running around. Owners say the pets are friendly... As if you want to take a chance with your kids!
- People taking care of their pets and interacting with the community in a responsible way
- Following the laws set forth for that animal, cleaning up after them, not letting them roam unattended, providing good food, water and shelter (daily) and loving them. Larger animals (namely dogs) should be walked daily.
- To me it means ensuring my pets are not a nuisance to anyone.
For my cat, it means he's an indoor cat.
For my dogs it means they are trained, they are brought inside as soon as they bark, I pick up after them, and they are never left unattended except in the house.
- Keeping pet in my own yard and not walking pet on sidewalks/lawns with 20 foot leashes and doing their business everywhere but at their owners property. There are parks especially for this purpose.
- Provide a safe loving environment for your pets. Observe all City Bylaws and rules outlined in any residential leases, if any. Limit pet ownership to a number fitting residence space. Provide a safe and loving environment for your pet.
- Doing the best thing for your animal and other animals not in your care.
- Being responsible for pets well-being, behaviour and keeping the environment clean.
- Having a pet that is controlled, as well as controllable. One that can walk off leash and has good recall. That will not harm others or other animals
- Providing welfare based on Maslow's hierarchy. Science based training. Taking responsibility and accountability for your dog and behavior, good and bad. Registering your dog with the city. Cleaning up after your dog. Making sure your dog is safe for the public

- Taking care of and cleaning up after your pet. Ensuring interactions between your pet and other pets and people are safe and enjoyable.
- Don't interfere with your neighbours' and other fellow citizens' enjoyment of their own property or shared spaces
- Taking care of your pet (food, water, shelter, vet care), taking responsibility for your pet and its actions
- Properly caring for your animals so they are healthy, happy and not a nuisance to others.
- People taking responsibility for the training of their animal
- It means that your pet are not a nuisance to your neighbors. No stench, no noise, no poop on public property. The pets are healthy, happy and well taken care of. I support Calgarians having the right to have chickens as pets.
- The owner should take care of the pet in a responsible manner that has as little as possible negative effects on the environment and neighbours
- Having control is of your dog at the park
Licensing companies who use public property to make a profit and have a limited number of dogs
- Taking care of your pets not only within the house hold but in public. It's taking responsible for their behaviours.
It's ensuring that they have access to good food/Heath care and are treated respectfully and trained through positive reinforcement
- Understanding your species and breed, so you can commit to appropriate care, training, and support. A pet should fit comfortably into your lifestyle without posing a danger or major inconvenience to others.
- Only committing to a pet if you can afford to. Being able to provide for it and ensure it has a healthy & happy life. Being mindful of others.
- Providing total care for a pet- proper training and obedience for dogs, ensuring vaccinations are up to date, spaying/neutering, and other vet care, licensing, ensuring your pets are safe, well fed and cared for along with providing mental/physical stimulation.
- Keeping your dog on a leash, microchipping, keeping your cats inside or on a leash while outside, registering your pet with city, ensuring your pet has the proper vaccinations. Know you dog if they have behavioural issues. Pick up after your dog. Not every park is an off leash.
- Making sure my pets are licensed, seen by a veterinarian annually (and additionally for other concerns), have access to proper food, clean water, a place to go to the bathroom, are exercised and played with and have a warm, dry place to sleep.
- The well-being of animals in your care is a priority. Animals have access to medical care, are kept in safe secure spaces and have a minimum of their basic needs met. An animals social/ emotional, nutritional, environmental and medical needs must all be met.
- It means a well controlled, well trained and quiet pet. A pet that can be enjoyed by the owner but not noticed by anyone else, unless they want to notice the pet. It is also extremely important owners clean up after their pets.

- I think being a responsible animal guardian is taking care of them, proper food, water, healthcare, etc. I also think there shouldn't be a limit. I have worked in rescue for a long time & many of my friends have about 10 animals & they all take care of them wonderfully.
- Taking care of the emotional and physical well-being of an animal. Putting in the time to appropriately train your animal so that it is not a danger of itself or others.
- Taking care of an animal properly. Following leash and waste pick up laws. Not letting your dog chase wildlife. (Nosehill leash laws are impossible for owners to follow (how do dogs know to stay off the path?nose hill should just be all leashed).
- Dog owners keeping their dogs on a leash in ALL ON LEASH areas and OUT of school grounds
- Having healthy pets that don't bother others
- Providing necessities of life including proper food, water, shelter, healthcare and safety. Taking ownership of pets actions. Ensuring proper training to prevent harm to other animals or people.
- Spaying and neuturing
- Having pet insurance
- Keeping up with vaccinations and anti-parasite treatment
- Feeding correct, nutritious diet
- Adequate exercise for dogs and cats
- Don't let your pet bother or impact anyone one else in any way
- It is exactly what every city needs. There shouldn't be any BSL. Toronto should get it together as Calgary does. After many years hopefully they will follow our lead.
- Being totally responsible for all aspects of having a pet.
- Making sure your pet has food, water and shelter and does not interfere with or disturb neighbours. Always having control over your pet when they are outside your home and making sure they are wearing tags and/or are microchipped in the even that they are lost.
- Having a licensed, healthy and cared for pet who has its shots and is trained (responds to requests), especially if it's taken to public spaces. Not having more than two pets per home, large dogs in small spaces, unsupervised for hours at a time, barking all the time, especially in condensed housing
- It means respecting other dogs and owners by keeping your dog on leash if he/she is aggressive, pick up after your dog when needed. Treating your dog with the love and respect as any other family member.
- It means looking after your pets, providing basic husbandry and seeing a veterinarian as needed. Having respect for other people and animals. Cleaning up after your animal and not allowing him to be a nuisance to other people and animals.
- It means ensuring that I'm keeping my dogs healthy, happy, engaged and under control. Part of that is expectation that other owners are responsible for properly controlling their own dogs.
- Responsible pet owners ensure their pets do not inconvenience others.
- Training first and foremost— NOT MORE LEASH LAWS AND MISPLACED REGULATIONS THAT AFFECT RESPONSIBLE OWNERS WITH WELL TRAINED DOGS.
Understanding that aversive tools and balanced training absolutely HAVE a place in a well rounded, effective, and stable dog/owner relationship.

- Trained and obedient dogs or leashed and controlled. Not all pets should be forced to be on leashes because of irresponsible dog owners. If the dog is properly trained & listens it should be allowed to walk off leash. Fines should be based on behavior not mitigation methods. Training is more effective.
- Respect and understanding.
- I don't see an area for responsible pet owner for dogs off leash in "on leash areas" Residential areas, play parks/fields, sidewalks, alleys owners have their dogs running at large off leash. This is a big issue & should be noted as one of your focus areas, not just off leash park behaviour.
- Responsible pet ownership to me is having respect for your dog and other people's dog. I frickin hate it when people walk their dogs with out a leash and their all in my face. Responsible dog ownership is also picking up their poop. The most important thing tho is positive reinforcement only
- Respectful ownership means keeping your pet healthy, safe and happy while respecting your environment. This means that pet owners respect others using the same public spaces so that others are not affected by messes on pathways or excessive aggression or noise from pets.
- Not having pets locked in kennels for 10 hours a day and then let outside just to go to the bathroom ...I see it everyday with my neighbour and his two dogs
- Responsible pet ownership means being responsible for your pet actions and doing what is required as a result. Spaying and neutering, picking up waste, regular vet check ups, vaccinations, keeping the pet(s) healthy, feeding them healthy food and not letting them roam free.
- Pick up poop. Have control of pet at all times. I don't know your pet and don't need it jumping on me, chasing me or running up to smell me in off leash areas. When I'm playing soccer with my family it's not "cute" to have your dog chasing the ball too. Don't have off leash parks next to playgrounds
- Avoiding idiots that don't understand dog behaviour or how their acts cause problems for myself and my dogs - even other dog owners.
- Picking up your pet's poop!
- Keeping your pets healthy. Not disrupting your neighbors with your pets
- Keeping your pets safe and healthy while respecting your community and neighbours.
- Someone who takes responsibility for their animals. Someone who not only follows the rules but respects them. "If you see something say something". It means you spay and neuter your animals, license them, and keep them up to date on shots. Last but not least, PICK UP YOUR ANIMALS POO!!!
- Following the rules even if you don't like them. Regardless of if you agree the law is the law.
- Safety to pets and people is number 1. Leashed dogs unless in a designated off leash area and heavier fines for infractions
- Giving dogs what they need, training your dog to respect other dogs and humans by keeping a safe distance. So many bite incidents seem to stem from someone offleash when not suppose to, or people not taking responsibility for their dogs. Pointing fingers to the humans always.
- Ethically caring for your pet, providing safe, loving homes.
- Having a pet who is cared for and exercises daily and who is not a problem for people around us

- Ensuring pets are very well cared for by providing health care, nutrition and appropriate activities and social interaction. Also ensuring that pets do not annoy or endanger humans. And no barking!
- It means the individual owning the animal keeps it on a leash, doesn't dogs bark endlessly, trains their animal, keeps it in good health, licenses their animal, doesn't not allow the animal to vex or harm others-and doesn't let it damage other people's properties.
- Giving your pet attention, exercise , food and love. Training it properly and being respectful of others.
- We treat our dog fairly as a family member, although we have final decisions. We also ensure she treats other people and animals fairly.
- A healthy and happy pet
- Keeping your pet safe, well cared for and free from harm. Also keeping your pet under control at all times as to not harass wildlife. Leaving a pet outside in the winter should be illegal.
- Taking care of and cleaning up after your pet.
- healthy companions that don't affect wildlife
- Ensure healthy pets that do not damage propoerty or inhibit other people's enjoyment.
- A neighbour who does not irritate their other neighbours by allowing it's dog to consistently bark outdoors while in its yard. Some people do not realize or perhaps care how annoying their dog can be by allowing it to bark non-stop.
- Treating your pet like family. Keeping them indoors, not living outside. Keeping your pet safe and healthy. Treating them with respect.
- Cleaning up after your dog.. sue Higgins park
- to me, it means simply trying to keep pets under control and not disturb others. it does not mean put all sorts of regulations in place to make peoples life more difficult because of disgruntled people that have nothing better to do in life than to complain about things.
- It means I am caring for my pet's health happiness and well being. I don't allow it to frustrate or upset my neighbors. I budget for vet bills and ensure the best life possible.
- Responsible pet ownership means taking responsibility for not only the care and safety of your pet but also the care and safety of the spaces your pet uses. You should have control over your pet whether at the dog park, while out walking or around your yard so they don't harm other people/animals.
- Keeping a pet safe, fed, and happy. Not putting other pets in danger.
- It means providing care to the animals you own regardless of how many. 1 dog in a back yard unattended can be more disruptive than 20 that are well mannered and trained.
- Not just providing food, but also exercise, shelter, companionship. People should have to provide all 3 to social animals. Some pets have mental health too.
- Keeping your pet healthy with a healthy diet and regular vet check up's. Also picking up after your pet!

- It means to provide for all pet necessities. It means to remain vigilant regarding the pet's health and also having consideration on how the pet behaviour may affect other people around and take proactive steps in case pet behaviour causes damage to others.
- Responsible pet ownership means limiting the number of animals in your home to an amount that you can routinely provide proper vet care to and a healthy diet. Back yard breeding as well as not sterilizing your family pets is irresponsible when so many animals already need homes.
- Ethically treating animals and caring for them
- It means providing for a pet in the best way possible, providing appropriate positive training and keeping your pet out of harm and from being a nuisance to other people or pets.
- Cleaning up after them. Being responsible and having control over their behaviour (noise & interactions to name two) keeping them in a fenced yard. Leashing them when off home property or in public. Paying a license when required.
- Why don't you review the bicycle bylaws. People are not following the rules when riding their bikes on the public trails and last summer I was hit twice by cyclists.
- All pets that have the ability of escaping from a home/yard must be licensed. All dogs must be on a leash if outside, other than in a off leash dog area.
- Taking care of your pet needs.
Clean after your pet.
Following the rules.
Use dog parks responsibly.
Respect others and be responsible for your pet's behaviour.
- The care and maintenance of your pet that ensures it does not impede on others ie. pick up after your pet, not running at large, not dangerous or viscous, barking or noise (whining all day) does not bother others ie neighbors
- Well trained dogs, cats remain inside, clean yard and household, proper food and nutrition, Licensing and know where a dog can be off leash.
- For me responsible pet ownership means supervising your pet at all times when they are outdoors. Ensuring the safety of your pet is so important.
- Not letting your cats roam around the neighbourhood pooping in peoples yards and gardens. I have contacted bylaw several times and nothing ever gets done. Everyday there are cats roaming around Acadia. The last last time I called, the bylaw officer didn't even return my voicemail. It is a shame
- I have dogs and would love more dog parks through nature. Sue higgins park is getting too busy on weekends.
In the past, i kept bantam hens. I loved them as outdoor pets that laid eggs for my family. I truly believe that 3-4 hens in a heated garage and outdoor coop should be allowed.
- Providing the necessities of care from food, warmth a good home and vet care regardless of the number of animals in the home.
- Being educated in your species of animal, neutering, and being respectful of others and environment around you. Dogs on a leash. Cats always indoors (or a catio), never free outside. Finally, cat licensing is a money grab, but need more characters to explain. Fining bad owners is better than that.

- Responsible pet ownership means that an animal has it's physical (health, food/water, exercise, safety, etc.) and mental (emotional bonding, recreational, security, etc.) needs consistently met by it's owner. These needs are met without detriment to other parties or structures of the city.
- Being able to provide safety, shelter, food, vet care, love, and life time family to an animal.
- Monitoring and having control over your animal when in a public space, being cognizant and sensitive to how your pet is doing in the space. If they are uncomfortable or making other pets/people uncomfortable it is your responsibility to act accordingly to neutralize the situation.
- That pets have all of their needs met according to set, rather than arbitrary & subjective, standards. All cats must be indoors or on a leash, minimum shelter requirements, for example.
- First, responsible pet ownership means taking care of your pets basic needs. This includes quality food, clean water, and quality shelter. Pet owners need to take care of spaying or neutering, veterinary care and costs, supplements and medications. Training, pet and people safety, giving LOVE.
- People should be able to live self-sustaining lifestyles provided that their "pets" are not a nuisance to the community.
- It means that cat owners should not be allowed to let cats roam around the neighborhood, defecating onto others' properties. Cats that are caught, owners should be fined
- A responsible pet owner should take good care of their pets. Giving them lots of love and attention, feeding them good food, regular vet visits to keep them healthy and giving them regular exercise, like daily dog walks. Training and socializing your dog so they will behave and not harm others.
- I want legislation around animals OTHER than cats and dogs. Birds, especially large parrots are often mistreated. The humane society doesnt seem to care about the wellbeing of reptiles at all. please, PLEASE do something about the domestic rabbits that were released even if its trap neuter return.
- Responsible pet ownership to me means that no matter how many animals you have that you take care of them, that you pick up after them and you treat them like family. Number shouldn't matter because one person that has one dog could treat them horrible while one person has a pack treats them amazing
- Balancing the needs of you and your pet with the community around you.
- Having the ability to tell landlords what your dog is like and having them take it into consideration when trying to find an apartment with breeds such as bully breeds, rotties or Dobermans.
- Making sure that your pets do not interrupt other peoples of enjoyment of outdoor places.
- Keep clean, good feeding and training pet.
Keep all the community free of poop.
Always keep the pet on leash or inside your property if is unleash.
Respect the space of non pet persons, specifically kids parks, school areas.
Please respect the amount of pets considered space and time available.
- Registering my pet annually & keeping her safe

- Being in control of your animal at all times (i.e not able to roam the neighbourhood). Treating the animal humanely. Ensuring the animal does not bark and disturb neighbours. Clean up waste from parks.
- Providing your pet with the adequate needs for a good quality of life such as food, water, shelter, love, health needs and appropriate exercise.
- Providing care, and respect to animals in a responsible manner in your community
- Looking after the well-being of your pet, while coexisting with the surrounding area and public.
- -owners follow by-laws and there is some enforcement by by-law officers, such as dogs off leash on pathways when they are supposed to be on leash on the pathways. And dog crap is cleaned up and not just sitting in a bag on the side of the trail. Or I can enjoy Nose Hill
- Balancing public safety with the needs of your pet. Public safety takes priority.
- Be responsible with your pet like if you are outside bring a bag for grabbing the poop, if you are in a store be aware of your dog behavior, keep them close to you, not everybody likes dogs
- I think we need more strict laws on dog walkers . One person can't be responsible for 10 or more dogs off leash. There needs to be rules on number of dogs these people can actually control. They cause a majority of the issues at off leash parks due to no control.cant be as many as they want.
- Putting the time and effort into having a well behaved pet and caring for that pet for their entire lifetime.
- To be accountable that their pets are trained, well looked after in every way like a person. Not to have their dog's leash too long that they will get into my lawn pee or pooped!!!!
- Your pet isn't at large. Your pet doesn't annoy or threaten the public. You pick or clean up after your pet - example dog feces. Don't leave your pet outside in the cold. Don't leave your pet in a hot car. Your pet is fixed. Your pets shots are up to date. Pets are tatood or microchipped.
- Doing your best to care for your animal and minimize its impact on your neighbours and the ecosystem
- Being able and willing to provide the right support that is required for an animals health and well being. Obligated to Utilize programs to help them live a positive life. Education so that they can coexist with positive outcomes. owner receiving all penalties for animal conflict that are preventabl
- Being mindful of your dog for his own sake as well as for others. Ensuring he is well behaved and under control when in public places, especially when off leash.
- Providing a safe environment for your pet, including shelter, food, and health - and understanding what that entails, and doing it properly.
- Happy healthy pets in caring homes
- Taking good care of your pet, feeding and keeping them healthy. Asking for help in difficult economic or other personal struggles.Cleaning after them and avoiding being a nuisance to neighbours
- As a cat owner- I feel like keeping my cat indoors (Or on a leash when outdoors) is the most responsible way to care for our cat. Our neighborhood has many free roaming cats and I worry that if my cat were to escape, no one would stop to check on him assuming he is an outdoor cat.

- Responsible pet ownership means ensuring your pet has everything they need as far as training, a good relationship with their humans, understanding body language and your specific pet's needs, etc it also means ensuring your pet is a well adjusted member of society
- Pick up !
- Providing all the needs and safety for your pet(s) including but not limited to food, shelter, healthcare, vaccination, and attention, for the duration of the pets natural life. Being vigilant to ensure your pet(s) does no harm to others and their property. Pet(s) harmoniously cohabitating with us.
- Owning a pet of any kind, within the rules set out by the city.
- Responsible pet ownership means providing a safe clean and in crowded residence for your animal of choice. Animals should never be subjected to living outside even if there is shelter present. Animals should never be left chained outdoors.pet ownership is a lifetime commitment no exceptions
- ensuring the pet's physical, mental, and emotional well-being without disrupting the environment, wildlife, or other people.
- Picking up after your dog, keeping your dog on leash unless in an off leash area
- Ensuring your pets are not a nuisance to your neighbours, abiding by city by-laws, licensing your pets, providing necessary veterinary care when needed, keeping your pets groomed and providing a nurturing, loving home for your fur kids
- Making sure your pet and others are always safe
- Responsible pet ownership means being responsible for your pet at all times and understanding your pets behavioral limits. If you're pet is friendly, then off leash parks and pet friendly patios are a go! If your pet is not friendly than you must take the proper precautions in public spaces.
- Animal is in good health and owner is responsible for any bad behaviour.
- Spay/neuter your pets. Vet care. Food. Proper behaviour and training. Well behaved at off leash parks.
I believe that cats that roam keep the mouse population down (always had mice infestation growing up in Bowness).
- People cleaning up after their pets. Also, ensuring that they have a name tag on them.
- Looking after your furry family members while picking up after them, following the bylaws and reporting animal cruelty. Sick and tired of peoples letting their Dogs running in our community park off leash! It is not a off leash area and I have ever right to walk my dogs in peace !
- Picking up after your dog
- Responsible pet owners meet their pet's needs (love, compassion, shelter, clean water, quality food, healthy exercise, social playtime, medical care); respect their community, the environment, neighbours, ensure they & their pet are assets to their city. They have well mannered pets, they clean up!
- Would be nice to have more fields to go to
- Pet owners should be accountable and humane as well as respectful of their community or neighbors.

- it means keeping your pet off your neighbour's property. it mean not ignoring your dog barking in the back yard. it means training your dog to defecate on your own property, not the neighbour's front yard (even if you do collect the waste). Most dog owners simply do not train their dogs enough.
- It means keeping pets on a leash when off the property, if they poop when off property you clean it up. It means keeping your own animals (including chickens and bees) in a way that there are no major negative impacts on neighbours. Chickens are fine - we allow dogs that bark much louder.
- Not letting pets roam unattended and cleaning up after them. There is a terrible problem of cats running wild in my neighborhood. It is so bad I had to put chicken wire fencing around my tomato beds as I was sick and tired of cleaning up other people's cats' feces. In my front yard no less.
- Provide everything a pet need to be healthy and happy, behave well and don't bother the neighborhood.
- To me responsible pet ownership means treating your pets as a part of the family. This means keeping them warm on our cold days, feeding them appropriately, providing mental and physical exercise, cleaning up after them and seeing to their medical requirements.
- No backyard livestock farming - no to bees, no to chickens (they stink to high heaven - anyone from a real farm knows this). Keep things in a crowded city simple - cats and dogs are ok, emotional support animals that are not cats or dogs need to be banned.
- Looking after your pet, abiding by and fully understand ALL the current bylaws with pet association. ie NOT letting your cat roam, dogs on leash, picking up after them, not dumping waste directly into a bin without a bag RESPONSIBLE pet ownership needs to be enforced with education and fines.
- Being cognizant of neighbours and children when choosing to have pets. Keeping dogs under control and following rules of keeping dogs on-leash in designated areas, as well as cleaning up after your dog. For fowl, researching how to keep them safe and healthy as well as clean.
- Taking care of pets for the health of the animal and the community.
- Actions taken to ensure the safety, care and happiness of our pets within the home, community and society.
- It means guardianship and taking care to ensure my pet are licensed and vaccinated as well as protected from people who may harm or steal them.
- 1. The pet is treated humanely and is well cared for.
  2. The pet is not a danger to other animals or people.
  3. The pet is not doing damage to property or depriving other people from enjoying their own property.
  4. The owner takes responsibility for cleaning up after their pet.
- More off leash areas for dogs! Quit blaming dog owners for littering! I agree everyone should pick up their dog poop but those signs focus on dog owners being the ones who litter and that is not the case!!! Replace those signs and make them focus on LITTER! It is worse than poop!!!!
- Pet owners being respectful community members and caring responsibly for their pets.
- It means ensuring that you have the money, time, and capacity to care for the animal(s) in your home. It means spaying or neutering. It means keeping cats indoors and dogs on a leash.

- Making sure owner and pet are equally safe at all times. As much control as possible in every situation and being aware of signals
- Make sure your dogs don't bother your neighbours by barking or making uncomfortable to be in their yard. Keeping your yard clean.
- Ensuring pets are immunized, well behaved (in your control), licensed and that you clean up after them. They do not run at large. If you walk your dog in an off leash area this is their time, get off your phone and pay attention to them and clean up after them!
- A pet that's appropriate for climate, accommodations and urban living. Control, respect, hygiene, financial, size and exercise needs...
- safety, care and cleanliness of the animals, and the people and spaces around them
- Ensuring that the animals within an individual's care has all of its needs met (nutritional, shelter, enrichment, exercise and medical). Ensuring the animal is free from suffering, both physical and mental. Ensuring those around you are unaffected and safe.
- Healthy animals that are well-controlled
- Ensuring that your pets are reasonably fed, vaccinated, exercised, under the owners control and not creating a risk or nuisance to others.
- A responsible pet owner is someone who provides a good quality of life for an animal. Invests the proper time and care to ensure all the necessities of life are provided. Well trained and sociable functioning animal when in public. Makes sure animal is safe in the home, travel and public.
- Allowing Calgarians who have better lives with pets, to live with pets; for Calgarians who choose not to live with pets, they may live without negative influences from pets.
- An owner who keeps animals and people safe and avoids becoming a nuisance to others.
- Ensuring a pet has all the basics of life like food, shelter, healthcare, attention
- It means having the ability and resources to fully care for an animal's welfare which includes proper housing, food, stimulation, and environmental enrichment.
- Providing appropriate environment for your pets and don't allow them to interfere with the enjoyment of any neighbouring properties
- Keeping a leash on a dog and not using the neighbourhood as a toilet in academia
- taking good care of your pets without disrupting anyone else.
- Not in possession of an exotic animal or an animal associated with agriculture within city limits.
I've taken a course in bacteriology and virology.
Have concrete dog runs that are tied to sewage system.
Cats confined to indoors or leashed in yard.
No pets in multiple family dwellings.
IQ > 99
- Enjoyable life with my pet with minimal impact on other people
- Under control at all times even when off leash, not to cause a nuisance (noise - barking, cats not wandering neighbourhood attacking birds and leaving feces in gardens), picking up after pet.

- Ensuring that all Calgarians are free to move around both indoor and outdoor spaces without fear of being accosted by other people's pets. As a senior with mobility issues I am often forced to walk off the sidewalk while a pet-lover stops to admire someone's pet. Both humans oblivious to my needs.
- Following the bylaws (i.e making sure my dog is on leash in the appropriate areas ,picking of after my dog)
- Being a caregiver to an animal in a way that promotes and protects the health of your animal(s), yourself, the people in your house, and members of your community.
- Responsible pet ownership means that animals in ones care are well-taken care (physically, emotionally and mentally) and well-behaved as to not interfere in a negative way toward others.
- It is ownership of property, first and foremost. Since the property happens to be a living creature, certain additional responsibilities arise that do not normally concern non-living property.
- Pet owners have control of their animals and ensure they do not create a nuisance to others including having them on leash except in designated areas, picking up after them, training them not bark, and politely responding to individual requests for them to control their animals
- keeping your dog in your house and not barking outside for hours. making sure your pet does not encroach on your neighbors
- - caring for your pet(s)
  - respecting your neighbours' homes and privacy by keeping your pet under control at all times in non-offleash areas (all pets, not just dogs -- cats allowed to wander the neighbourhood without restriction can devastate bird populations)
- Keeping pets in a way that:
  - the pet is well cared for (health and emotional needs met);
  - neighbours are not caused any trouble or bothered (at least those with reasonable sensibilities are not bothered); and,
  - when the pet is outside of the owner's residence, it leaves no trace (owner cleans up).
- Managing your pet in a manner that doesn't impact other residents. In other words, no offensive odours, no excessive noise during quiet hours, no feces left for others to deal with, and keeping pets under control.
- providing safe and healthy environment for the pet you chose to own, ensuring that your pet is not an issue to other people or your community by obeying the laws, cleaning up after your pet and ensuring your pet is not a danger to others.
- Not inconveniencing neighbors in any way. This includes sights, sounds smell and any other possible complications. I would not be happy if an incompetent beekeeper creates a situation where a hive invades my house/shed or if it constantly smells and sounds like I am living next to a chicken farm.
- Providing for and creating a peaceful environment
- It means taking accountability for your pet. Choosing to obtain your pet from an ethical source, ensuring bylaws are followed, providing adequate vet care (and general care, of course), and being a strong advocate for your companion animal.

- It means that you have no more animals than you can afford to keep healthy and care for including keeping them clean and picking up after them and ensuring they do not bother others with noise, smell, danger or abundance.
- Cleaning after your dog, not letting your cats out when they go and dig people gardens and use kids sandbox as their litter box. Also, not allowing your dog bark outside half the nights or early mornings. If your dog is a barker don't leave him in backyard and go shopping.
- Caring for an animal while respecting your neighbours and public spaces
- Someone who provides health care, food, shelter and clean water for their pets and treats them with kindness and compassion. Treat them like another member of your family.
- Understanding and following bylaws, respecting off leash areas, and having good control over your pet when in public. Know your pet and put it only in situations that they can thrive and you can control.
- To me, responsible pet ownership means keeping your pet happy and healthy, cleaning up after your pet and making sure your pet does not infringe on the rights of others either with regards to their safety or the enjoyment of public property or their own private property.
- registering, feeding your pet, picking up after it, walking it and loving it
- It means having full control of your pet at all times. If you have a puppy they are still learning obviously. If you have a dog, they should be properly trained to listen to you if they are off leash and on leash. If your dog is aggressive take the right matters into your hands.
- Calgarians should be allowed to have chickens in their backyards.
- A small number of animals. Max of 2 per household.
- Being in control of your animal and obeying the rules. Leash laws NEED to be followed AND enforced. Off leash dogs in parks, particularly those with playgrounds or near schools are a safety hazard. My child should not be afraid to go to the park because of pet owners not following the laws.
- Ensuring the health and wellbeing of your pet as well as taking responsibility for the interactions and impacts your pet has in the community.
- Ensuring that your animal is vaccinated, licensed, well-taken care, not allowed to roam freely
- The owner in question provides sufficient food, water, and shelter/warmth to the pet, exercise and care as necessary for the pet, and does not cause them undue physical or mental stress. Provides medical care when necessary.
- Responsible pet ownership to me would mean enjoying the companionship of a pet or pets while respecting Neighbor and community standards. 8 dogs living behind me in Tuscany is not what i would call meeting anybody's standards.
- Responsible pet ownership means making sure your dogs get enough exercise and stimulation of their mind each day. Of course picking up their shit helps. I don't really think there is a problem with that.
- Chickens, sheep, goats, pigs and other farmstock type animals need to be kept out of our urban/suburban communities and remain on acreages and farms. Pets need to be narrowly defined to be safe and non-disruptive to neighbours and communities.

- No Chickens or livestock of any kind. Improper care of these animals lead to diseases, also there is the noise and smell. Houses are very close together and provide no privacy. No Bee keeping due to swarming and stinging risk.
- The pet is not a danger to its self or other. The pet is not a nuisance or disruptive to the owner property and neighboring properties.
- Responsible pet ownership means taking proper care of your pets while ensuring the impact on others in the community is reasonable.
- Responsible pet owners don't allow their pets (cats) to roam the neighborhood and bother and wreck peoples property and gardens.
- Not disturbing your neighbours with your pets, either by their noise or their mess. Enjoy them for yourself but do not provoke disagreements over noise, cleaning up after them or letting them run wild.
- Owning a pet in a manner that is healthy, safe, and comfortable for both yourself, your pet, and others in the community.
- not allowing your pet to bother other people and do damage
- Taking great care of your pet. Not letting it become a nuisance to others. Picking up after your pet.
- Taking excellent care of animals while respecting neighbours and other community members
- Providing safe housing and sufficient nourishment for your pet. Providing emotional care to your pets, as these is a need of all species.
- That people are able to meet the physical AND mental needs of all animals in their care as they relate to husbandry, veterinary care, mental enrichment, physical exercise, and humane training methods (i.e. positive reinforcement/force-free), and do not allow an animal to suffer.
- Personal as well as Financial responsibility
- Providing quality care for your pet. Do not become a nuisance to neighbors. Does not create a safety hazard to family or public. Not having too many pets. Always and immediately cleaning up after your pet, including on your private property not fenced off from the public (i.e. front yards).
- Ensuring that your pets don't detract from other's quality of life. I'm regularly negatively affected by noise, smells, and out of control pets. I wish the city would do more to restrict pet ownership and give me tools to report and enforce those rules.
- The animal(s) are cared for, receiving proper socialization, food, exercise, housing, and medical care. That the animals do not negatively impact the community, and that the owner is responsible for the acts of the animal - including damage to property or person.
- I would like to see more public education campaigns at dog parks and the like talking about responsible pet ownership, including on/off leash, cleaning up after your pet, interacting with problem pets/people, etc. Regarding chickens and bees (and say pigeons) let's set a standard and make a plan.
- People need to take responsibility for their pets. They require time, training and appropriate health care. Also it's the municipality's responsibility to put forward clear rules, monitoring, and penalties for the owner. Never blame breed it's always the person who's responsible for bad behaviour.

- Ensuring your pet is well behaved and gentle in public places
- It means providing a safe and secure environment for the pet(s) as well as financial and emotional support for the animal(s).
- Providing humane care to animals and being a good neighbor by accommodating reasonable needs.
- It means educating yourself on the proper care AND TRAINING for your pets. Dog owners specifically should be required to undergo training if they want to buy a dog license and introduce their pet to the general public.
- Owning a couple of hens in my backyard is something I'd like to do. As long as they are kept in coops, hens should be fine. Number allowed should be kept to a minimum.
- Pets and owners who do not intrude, impact or harm their neighbors
- Owning and caring for animals that you can keep happy without making your neighbourhood unhappy.
- The city should post information about when warnings, charges and convictions are given to pet owners so neighbours can be informed, and this would discourage owner from doing the behavior again.
- It means being aware of my ethical and legal responsibilities as a pet owner. These includes the City bylaws that specify the requirements and privileges my pet and I should be aware of especially when using public spaces such as on leash and off leash parks, sidewalks.

- Simply means that pet owners take care of their pets so they don't bother anyone else.
- Ensuring the health, safety and wellness of animals in a way that does not detrimentally affect others.
- When one gets an animal, it is kept safe, healthy and loved for its whole life. Best way to save a life, is to keep the pet you have. As another measure, it would be helpful to put a photo on the website of animals who are licensed. So much better than a vague description.
- Being kind and good to your pet and those around you. This means taking care of them without impacting your neighbors quality of life.
- Dog owners have forgotten that off-leash are not dog parks but park for everyone where dogs have the PRIVILEGE to go off leash if they are supervised, specifically with Rotary Park the actions of dog owners have made the park unpleasant for kids who also have the same privilege to run free as well
- Caring for an animal that enhances their life while not infringing on your neighbours or general public right to privacy, safety and enjoyment of their property and public spaces.
- Keeping your pet in a way so that other people are not bothered/disturbed by it.
- One of my biggest issues, cats in my yard damaging property, hunting birds, being a nuisance. Dogs barking at the moon or whatever, way too much of that.
- Responsible pet ownership means taking care of those animals you have to the best of your ability and recognizing when you are no longer capable of caring for them and finding them new homes. It also means not adopting/owning pets when you are not capable of doing so in the first place.
- Healthy pet, happier, healthier owner (mentally and physically) and safe neighbours.
- The care and wellbeing of all animals living within your household. So that is adequate food/water, space to run/play, responsible waste disposal, and no disruptions to your neighbours (smells, excessive noise, etc)
- A healthy, active pet in my household. A community with room for wildlife. Use of my community without threat from vicious animals.
Respect your neighbours by controlling annoying pets
- Pick up after your pet
Keep vaccinations up to date
Be a loving and caring pet owner
- Following the rules and taking care of your pets.
- Observing and obeying the by laws. Keeping your animal under control both in public Training your pet. Cleaning up after your pet. Ensuring your pet is not annoying to neighbor (who may not like animals). Ensuring your pet is healthy.
- Responsible pet ownership to me is ensuring your pets do not directly or adversely impact the rights of others. It also means that your pets are well cared for and not subject to any undue harm. Owning a pet means that you are responsible for its well being no matter what the situation.

- Taking care of animals in your care through basic necessities such as food and water and vet care for regular checkups
- There is no incentive to register your animal. If you register and then forget to renew you get huge fines. If you don't register to begin with there is no impact. And the tags always fall off anyway. There's a slim chance your dog runs away and you get fined at that point.
- Taking care of your pets to keep them healthy and to not affect those living around you. Neighbours should be able to use their property as they'd like to without being bothered by the pet owner.
- pet is being taking care of and don't become a nuisance to others.
- Providing love, food, safety and shelter to your pet. Ensuring you can afford a pet before getting one. Encouraging adoption and neutering. Cleaning up after your pet in off leash areas, etc.
- Pick up after your dog, make sure your dog will not hurt other dogs, make sure if that happens you take responsibility.
- Caring for your pet(s) and ensuring it/they do not bother other people.
- Proper care including feeding, regular medical care, and decent housing (i.e. shelter provided.) Keeping pets under control so that they cannot do damage or harm to people, other animals or property. Ensuring that pets are not a nuisance in terms of noise, etc.
- Meeting your pets' specific needs (ie. walks or no walks as medically/behaviourally needed and capable, veterinary care - both as needed and routinely, participating in activities with your pet that they enjoy) while also ensuring that you are not a nuisance to neighbours/the community.
- Owning a pet that does not injure or frighten people. Ensuring that pets are adequately supplied with the necessities of life. Having minimal impact on the environment (clean parks, barking, killing wildlife).
- Sustainable means being able to grow your own food. Cleanliness has to be maintained and it can't be too loud but it should be allowed. I mean backyard hens should be allowed. Other farm animals maybe not.
- Taking ownership for training your pet and picking up after it, practicing courtesy for others
- Responsible pet ownership is the maintenance of the physical and mental welfare of the pets. This includes providing feed, water, shelter, opportunities for natural behaviours, and preventing fear and stress.
- Clean, polite animals that disturb no one.
- keeping your animals under control
- It means caring for your pet in a way that is respectful to the pet in terms of providing the necessities of life and respect for others in the community in regards to cleanliness, safety, noise.
- Picking up poop, controlling your dog, not being abusive should be obvious but in case it's not, dogs should not be left alone outdoors for hours, fed and kept in appropriately clean condition.
- having pets that you have chosen to own be kept in a safe environment for the animal(s) and for the people in the community.

- Mental, physical, and emotional care of an animal for their lifetime, wand/or while they are in your care.
- Not hoarding cats and dogs. A house should have no more than 4 dogs. Or no more than 3 cats. Walking dogs should be limited to TWO dogs per person at anytime. Aversive training and tools like shock collars, prong collars, electric fences, etc should be BANNED.
- Taking care of your animals like kids, being respectful of neighbors, under control
- Responsible pet ownership means that others around you are not impacted in any way. This means - your dog doesn't bark unnecessarily, your cat doesn't howl or use others backyards as the litter box, we don't smell or see unsightly remnants that pets can bring. We don't hear pets at all hours.
- Training, care, being mindful of the community. Unfortunately not why my neighbors think. I am a non pet owner, tortured by neighbours Pets.
- Responsible pet ownership is keeping and maintaining a cat, dog or small "in-house" animal in such a manner that is respects the animal and the feelings/rights of the people that come in contact with the pet - i.e. family, neighbours, etc. It does not include farm animals such as hens and birds.
- It means keeping pets and/or livestock in such a way as to not endanger or inconvenience the neighbors.
- Being responsible 24 hours for the pet. Having the financial means for licensing, vet bills, all shots up to date, food and cleaning up after the pet in public and in private. It is like a child and if your not willing to take this full responsibility, then don't get a pet and make the pet suffer.
- -having an appropriate number of pets that you can care for well in terms of diet, exercise, vaccinations, health care, grooming, and backyard cleanliness and that don't infringe on the rights of neighbours.
- To keep animals in a safe and compassionate environment whilst not disrupting/negatively impacting the community.
- Ensuring animals are safe and cared for.
- any animal not being a nuisance to their neighbours or the community
- Ensuring that these "dog owners" clean up their dog's fecal matter daily in their backyards! We have a neighbor who's backyard is blanketed stem to stern with poop, and ByLaw does NOTHING about it! We have to put up with the stink and health hazard! SOMEBODY! Please address THIS!
- Not disturbing neighbours with smells or noise. No livestock.
Animals are well cared for and not abused.
People do not assume that everyone loves pets and that pets should be allowed everywhere.

- I believe that this should include ducks and chickens in the backyard of people's homes for the purpose of providing eggs, and helping to control pests in a organic way in backyard gardens as well. So long as the animals are well cared for, and are not an incessant nuisance.
- Picking up your poop, even in the winter time.
- Ensuring your pets health, comfort and happiness. Providing them with a warm and safe home, access to healthy food that will prolong their lives and ensuring they have water and any other necessities. Making sure you animals are happy and stimulated. Never abandoning them for any reason!!
- Owner is educated in and mindful of the needs of the pet, and should not have negative impact on neighbors.
- Responsible pet ownership means that pets do not negatively impact anyone else.
- 1. Know your pet
- 2. Know how to meet the pets needs
- 3. Engagement with neighbors
- 4. Handling expertise through available education and certification when necessary.
- Care about your pet - feed it properly, pick up after it, watch it, monitor its health, make sure it does not bother your neighbors etc etc
- make sure you have the time to spend with your pet, take for a walk ( if need to) and that you have the right space in your house for the pet.
- providing proper care, including medical and mental. being responsible with licensing and following bylaws. ownership is a privilege and having too many pets means each animal is not getting the care needed.
- RESPECT do not infringe on your neighbors right to peace quiet the pleasure and enjoyment of his property. Do not bring disease! Or discomfort in any way shape or form. Respect individual property rights. Respect seniors!
- off lease areas mean multi-use parks. A pet does not have more value in an off lease park than a human. Mental stress and anxiety is inflicted when a pet charges or chases a human. Even if your pet is "friendly" not everyone wants to engage contact when a pet initiates interaction in off lease
- Dog and Cat owners and those in care and control of animals being held accountable
- Providing the necessary level of care for the pet, e.g. adequate food, clean water, sanitation, regular & incidental vet care, shelter, kindness, training, etc., as well as being responsible to others by ensuring that your pet's behavior is not allowed to affect them adversely - follow bylaws.
- It means providing a level of care for your pets that is full of compassion for the animal and free of mistreatment. It means respecting everyone in your community by following all rules associated with pet ownership - leashing, cleaning up poop, registration etc...
- Providing for the health safety and security of my pet
- Taking care of them, cleaning up after them
- Caring for a pets health. Most importantly, not allowing the pet (whatever it may be) to become a nuisance to neighbours. i.e. dogs left outside barking for extended lengths of time. Also not picking after pet.

- nonaggressive dog's, that come when they are called.
- Doesn't mean a lot !! half of the people out there are not taking their responsibilities seriously at all. we need to have somebody watching what is happening in Calgary. pet owners are lazy and disgusting and what about non pet owners we have no rights seeing dogs in public now ??? So wrong
- Safe and caring environment (basic needs, sense of belonging)
Appropriate vaccines, medications , and vet appointments
Avoiding anthropomorphism of pets and animals
Contribute to improving surrounding home and community
- Keeping my pet safe and content without bothering neighbors. As usual, most people are already doing this but the few ruin it by not caring or are in it for the money.
- It means caring for your pet, giving them all the needs in life and making sure they are safe and feel safe.
- Caring for, protecting and providing my pet with the safest and best possible life.
- It means that pets are well taken care of. They have the basic necessities of life as well as the training and attention required to be a good pet citizen in the city.
- you should be up to date with all vaccinations and the best care possible for your pet day to day.
- Caring for your pet and not letting it disturb or hurt others
- Owning a happy healthy pet in a way that doesn't interfere with their quality of life. Providing a benefit through any interaction with the pet to both parties
- It means no farm livestock in city limits...chickens...pigs...etc.
Corona Virus should make it clear people and animals should not be living in close proximity. This would DESTROY PROPERTY VALUES.
- picking up after your pet, feeding, watering and sheltering them. Love and care that they deserve!
Leashing pets and keeping them off of non leash areas. Loose cats are a nuisance, spray dog houses and litter in flowerbeds.
- Taking care of your pet. Keeping up with vaccinations and not letting them roam unattended.
- Picking up after your animal, register animals, ensuring all pets are spayed/neutered,
- Being able to care for pets adequately.
- Cleaning up after your pet, keeping your pets on a leash in all areas except for designated off leash areas, and being able to keep your pets under control
- Having the freedom, choice, and responsibility to own a pet.
- ensuring the health and safety of your pet and ensuring the health of the public
- To provide a caring home for another creature. A safe and sanitary location for the animal, the owner, and those in the area or neighborhood. Free from physical abuse and provides positive mental stimulation for that animal.
- Being able to provide all aspects of care for my animal. Attending to its safety at all times and ensuring it does not encroach on neighbours rights.

- Having trained owners and trained pets! there should be a minimum requirement that in order to own a dog you MUST attend formal training and learn how to properly care for, train and exist with your pet. Owners should also have to do yearly updates on training, and dogs with complaints every 3 months
- Caring for your pets, and ensuring they do not cause physical or environmental damage. The number of pets in a household is less important than how those pets are cared for and handled.
- Taking care of an animal with respect to their health and care. Without impinging on the health or freedom to enjoy other citizens have.
- Ethical care and taking accountability for animals in your household.
- Spaying, neutering, picking up after them. Being friendly and approachable when out with your pet. Watching out for signs of neglect and abuse of animals. Keeping our off leash spaces clean and keeping dogs that can't handle them out of them
- Taking care of your pets in a fashion that does not intrude on anyone else's quality of life especially related to noise and smell.
- Caring for animals in a humane and community conscious way
- It means to me that we are safe with our pets. Not letting I'll trained or aggressive dogs at dog parks, cleaning up after themselves WHENEVER A D WHEREVER your animal makes a mess. Respecting others with barking, manners and vaccination /titre testing. Bigger fines for repeat bad owners
- Use a leash when required ... pick up after your pet ... control the noise ... no aggressive breeds ... farm animals are not pets ... take pets for walks and talk with the neighbours ...
- Providing a healthy setting for animals to live along side humans and in their care. These needs vary widely between species and should be adapted depending on the case.
- Responsible pet ownership means abiding by bylaws set by the city and being able to afford the care that each pet requires from the time you bring your pet home for the first time through to their death. If you cannot be a responsible pet owner, in my mind, you should not own a pet.
- It means to properly care for your animal, ensuring that they are safe and healthy, while respecting the other people around you.
- Responsible pet ownership means owning a pet that you pay attention to, take care of, and are responsible for. "Being personally responsible for them" sums it up perfectly.
- Ensuring pet owners know their pets. The on leash rule is really for those who are not responsible and pets with behavioral issues, pets who are well behaved and properly trained shouldn't be restricted to a leash all the time. Also pet owners who are responsible use critical thinking.
- Understanding that your animal's behavior is ultimately your responsibility. Teaching your animal respect and manners is key, just like teaching human children. Domestic animals spread disease to people, and this must also be understood by pet owners.
- It means taking great care of your pets and investing time and money (if needed) to solve pet behavioural problems that make pets and neighbours alike unhappy (e.g., leaving an anxious dog alone for long periods in a yard can cause them to bark a lot). Owners should be considerate of the community.

- The ability of an owner to physically, emotionally and financially provide the appropriate care and lodging for the animal(s) in accordance with accountability and respect for bylaws, neighbours and the community at large. The owner shall ensure that pets do not negatively impact the community.
- Owning pets means that you are taking responsibility for providing a safe home, license fee, and being accountable for their actions outside of the home. I do take time to work on training with my dog, I pick up after my pet and walk her on leash and make sure she acts appropriately at off leash area
- Responsible pet ownership means that a pet owner has made themselves accountable for their family pet within their own household and outside of their household. Every pet is licensed so that they can be safely returned to their owners in a timely manner if lost or stolen. Lost pets would go home.
- Making sure my pet's license is current, that I clean up after it and have it under control whether off or on leash and that it is not a nuisance to my neighbors
- More than this leading survey does. You want input but use leading questions and limit characters for explanations. It also means having a fair bylaw that takes into account the facts of when a dog bite occurs rather than being draconian and punishing animals that do not deserve it.
- Under control, clean up poop
- keeping a leash on your dog all the times Dogs should be destroyed on the first bite no exceptions and the owner face a 50 thousand dollar fine and mandatory jail sentence and banned for life from having a dog
- Providing for your pet in a way that meets their physical and emotional needs.
- Individuals having the freedom to have healthy and cared for companion animals in their home while respecting the needs and well being of the community as a whole. This requires financial and behavioral responsibility by the owners. We also need to respect the indigenous species in our community.
- Amendment to noise = people have varying tolerances to barking. I believe that the noise bylaw, should be changed to a time. If there is noise between 10 pm and 6 am then sure. During daylight hours dogs get excited seeing people. If it is prolonged ie more than 10-15 minutes then sure, complain.
- For starters... How about stop letting research companies buy unwanted dogs/cats from our municipal pounds and use them for research.
Second, stop exporting horses to Japan for slaughter and abolish horse slaughter entirely.
Third, stop letting people capture city pigeons and breed them for food
- Yes to have hens in backyard with proper size.
- It means that you know you dog and don't put them in situations that could harm them or other animals.
- Chickens and bee hives please
- 1. Make sure your pet is quiet and does not disturb neighbours day or night.
2. Clean up after your pet. Pet waste can be odorous and unsightly.

3. Ensure your pet does not roam. This places a burden on neighbours to 'bring him home' or take him to a vet. There may also be a risk of harm to others.

- People who have invested the time into their pets to keep them quiet, keep them on leash in public residences, who have respect for those around them. Owners who walk their dogs and keep them on the sidewalk and not allow them to walk all over other people's yards and property.
- Own a reasonable number of pets and ensure they are properly cared for and do not disrupt neighbors.
- It means that people know, understand, and love their pets. They understand it is their responsibility to keep their yards and public spaces clean of feces. But it also means that people understand how their pet behaves whether that's timid, aggressive, friendly, etc.
- Taking care of the wellbeing of one's animal while also ensuring that said animal does not become a nuisance to others.
- Providing the best level of care for our pets, ensuring their health, safety and best quality of life
- Pet owners meet or exceed physical and emotional needs of their pets, and doing so in a way that does not negatively impact other citizens, public and private property.
- Licensing, neutering, care and comfort of the animal, picking up animal feces, proper socialization of the animal.
- Take care and responsibility for the health and welfare of your pets, and their impacts on other people.
- Not everyone should have a pet if they want one. It is a lot of responsibility and cost for feed. The pound and rescue agencies are at capacity already. Leave the chickens on farms where they belong. They are a lot of work. Carry disease, mites, lice and not to mention if the coop is not cleaned?
- Unless designated otherwise, owners have all pets on leash at all times. Owners spay and neuter or keep them completely separate from other dogs (meaning no dog parks), their dogs are registered, and dogs are treated equally regardless of breed. Backyard breeding/puppy mills would be eradicated.
- Care and control of pets within the capabilities of providing adequate resources for their safety, health and comfort, while not negatively impacting the health, safety or comfort of the surrounding community.
- To really care about pets as members of the family and be responsible for their wellbeing.
- Provide food & water all the time. Not leaving pets unattended for long periods no matter if on or off private property even if house hold has cameras. Should not be left out in extreme weather regardless of breed. By-lawd need to be strictly enforced & taken very literally.
- It means dogs and cats ...not hippie farms with chickens etc.
- Taking responsibility for the actions and impacts your pet has on others and your community.
- Being in control of your pet at all times and providing the necessities, love and care required for an animal
- Overseeing the animal's health including regular exercise, feeding, and socialization.
- Being allowed to have chickens inside city limits.

Be able to keep bee's within city limits.

- Having only a reasonable number of pets taking in to account ability to care for them, keep them and public / neighbors safe and free from nuisance of noise, barking etc. Pets housed indoors and not outdoors. No wildlife (eg chickens, ducks etc)
- Not having more animals then you can afford and dedicated time to. Also means fixing cats and dogs so they are not reproducing. It does not mean Breed-bans. as there a no bad dogs just owners.
- Besides the obvious, living and caring for your pet, all dogs should be on leashes, no matter how big or small they are. Nobody wants the guilt of accidentally hitting an uncontrolled dog. Also clean up after your pet and dispose of the bag responsibly!! Too much poop on our boulevards!!
- People should not be aloud to take there dogs to the dog park if they don't have control over them.
- Managing a pet for both its safety and the safety of its family/community.
- Responsible Pet ownership means giving your pet the best life while not damaging property or other persons. They need to be indoor animals and are given water, food, activity, love and medical checkups and treatments.
- Combining all of the following:
  1. Ensuring physical and mental well-being of my pet
  2. Ensuring physical and mental well-being of any other living being, human or animal, that might get in contact with my pet. Exception would be only and attack from another pet due to his owner's neglect.
- Keep my pets safe. Not allowing my pets to bother the neighbours
- Responsibly licensing animals, obeying bylaws, carry liability insurance for dangerous breeds, and paying large fines if you don't do any of the proceeding.
- Responsible pet ownership means having pets under full control, clean (both the animal and the animal's space), healthy, vaccinated, spayed and neutered, quiet, unable to disturb others
- Spaying/neutering, well cared for pets, keeping cats indoors, understanding dog behaviour, picking up your dogs waste always, bringing animals inside when very cold
- Being responsible with your pets.
- Responsible pet ownership means taking full responsibility for my pets actions and well being.
- It means properly caring for any animals kept or owned, and ensuring they don't cause a nuisance, public safety risk, or risk to the economy
  1. Having your dog come when called or don't let them off the leash.
  2. Knowing how to read your dogs body language and others to prevent issues.
  3. Picking up after your dog.
  4. Realizing that although your dog is 'friendly' not all dogs are, that's why some are not let off leash.
- As a pet owner, it's very important to me because I want to make sure I'm following the rules.
- Creating a safe and healthy space for my pet while minimizing any negative impacts of my pet on my neighbors and community.
- It is a responsibility and a commitment that should not be taken lightly. You are responsible for your pet 24/7 and if it is home causing trouble while you are at work, it is definitely NOT "out of sight, out of mind". This needs to be realized when one adopts a pet.

- Research how to take care of your pet properly depending on breed. Have enough money to care for those needs including vet bills. Have your pet spay or neutered. DO NOT allow your pet to be a nuisance to others! License according to law!
- Respect for your pet and its environment. Love. Care. Responsibility for a live and loved pet. Safety. Discipline.
- Taking care of your pet, treating them properly, causing no harm. Respecting your neighbours by keeping your pet restrained from their yard. teaching your pet behavior that does not threaten others.
- Providing a safe home for the pet, taking care of the pet, and making sure that it doesn't disturb neighbours.
- Keeping your pet inside your house and never allowing your pet on someone else's property. Also, never allowing your pet's feces to remain on your property or on other property.
- Respecting and abiding by off leash park rules.
Pets should always be within distance where a leash can be out back on quickly if need be.
If pets become aggressive towards others (ie. People or pets) owners should actively step in to remove their pet on a leash, not calling them from a distance
- Bee Keeping in the city (no more than 2 hives as that is responsible mgmt on a city lot)
- Enjoying companion animals. Providing for their physical and mental well being. Promoting well bred dogs.
- It means caring for your pet's social, emotional and physical wellbeing and also ensuring that your pet is a good community citizen.
- To take on full responsibility of mental and physical needs of the animal.
- An owner must ensure the health and safety of a pet(s) at all times. Proper nutritional, physical activity (as required by breed/species) and health (vet care) to be provided for the life of the pet. To ensure the safety of the public/neighbours at all times. To control noise and movement of pets
- Making sure safe community and that all citizens can have quiet enjoyment at home. Pets should be looked after.
- Thinking of your pet, yourself and your community, including how having a pet impacts others.
- Following city by-laws
- Keeping pets and people Safe
- I'd like there to be
A ban on property owners having no pet rentals. Or having to get special allergy rental approvals.
Because I'd I realize people have allergies but other wise our shelters are over flowing and so many more people would adopt if the city property rentals were pet friendly
- Remove breed bans from properties!
It's the owner not the breed. And it's time we updated this out dated rule.
- Taking full responsibility for you pet, their wellbeing, health and the environmental impact of ownership.

- Ensuring both your animal is safe while preventing it from becoming a risk or nuisance to others.
- You're responsible for the animal and the behavior of that animal. As well as, being liable for them and their actions.
- Caring for pets whilst not impacting neighbours/others
- Providing your pet with the proper care they need to stay healthy. Do not allow them to trespass on other people's property. If they are a danger to people or other pets they should not be allowed of the owners property at all.
- Ensuring the pet has a happy healthy life, and ensuring that it doesn't encroach on the wellbeing of neighbors.
- providing the pet with the best life while not being a nuisance to those around you
- Having pets that you ensure receive proper care and attention and that do not annoy neighbours in any way....that being noise, smell etc.
- A response since pet owner not only meets the basic needs of their pets but also follows the laws and standards set by society to fulfill these obligations with compassion towards the animal.
- Keeping your pet under control, on-leash where required, picking up after your pet always.
- Ensuring that all efforts are made by the pet owner the ensure the safety of people - this means especially that dogs are Always on a leash outside one's property (except offleash areas) & for dogs that are considered dangerous or have any history of aggression a muzzle is worn as well.
- It means your animal is fully in control in public and cleaning up after their bathroom breaks in public. I also believe it means treating your animal as you would a child ie. not roaming the streets, not left out in bad weather or left alone for extend periods of time(Over 9hr) even if sheltered
- Providing a healthy life for pets whilst ensuring that neighbors are not unduly negatively affected by the pets
- Ensuring the health and safety of our animals and the wellbeing of neighbours.

- To me, a responsible cleans up after their pets no matter if the pet is within homeowners property or in public. They watch their pet and take precautions so their pets don't escape. They abide by and know bylaws.
- Look after your pets to keep them healthy and happy, and don't let them bother your neighbours.
- It is to be a good pet citizen. Pets have lots of value for their owners, but that should not be at the expense of other citizens, their pets or the natural environment. These factors have to be balanced by policy.
- Caring for the needs of the pet and trying to keep them happy and healthy, and cleaning up after them, and ensuring they are trained well enough to interact appropriately with those they come into contact with.
- Cleaning up after your pet, providing exercise and training, socializing, and offering positive animal experiences to non pet owners.
- Do NOT let your animal loose outside of your property.
Only exception is off leash dog parks when you know your dog will come when called.
- Well trained pets, caring owners - spayed/neutered, up to date on vaccines, and are able to afford the animal through its entire life.
- It means assuring your pet has appropriate care; food, water, shelter, and care. It means assuring you clean up after your pet, have access to both on and off leash areas, and provide adequate transport (not in the back of a flat bed)
- Not allowing your dog off-leash unless in a designated off-leash area.
Not leaving your dog outside unattended.
Being reactive to excessive barking.
Picking up after your dog.
Registering your dog with the city.
Annual wellness exams and being compliant with vaccination schedules.
- Owners need to remove all pet poop from any public area. The city needs to enforce their existing bylaws. Some of our city parks are ruined with dog poop, especially when the snow melts. I should not have to clean someone's pet poop off my lawn.
- It means looking after the animals properly and keeping animals and people safe, happy and healthy
- Someone who understands the responsibilities of what come with owning a pet. This includes knowing the costs, time commitments, respectful treat and providing it a loving and safe environment free from abuse. Some who is being respectful of the community and their pets behaviour.
- Respectful ownership and management of any pets 24x7. Licensing any/all pets with COC and complying with all bylaws and regulations. Provide all pets with sanitation diligence exactly as the general population abides by. Keeping all pets under constant present control. Increase penalties.
- Caring for your pet, ensuring safe interactions with those around you and the natural environment.
- Understand and meeting the needs of your pets. This means that proper care be given by means of food, water, shelter and enrichment. In environments where pets congregate with other pets and humans, ensure all can take advantage of safely without fear of negative and harmful interactions.

- Being able to care for the pets you have, and knowing the resources to help you out when you can't.
- Someone who focuses on the outmost care for their pets. Ensuring they are well cared for physically and emotionally.
- Having leashed dogs, unless in an off leash dog park. Which includes driveways of homes, sidewalks and open spaces.
- Caring for and ensuring the needs of the animals you are a custodian of are being met.
- Caring for your animals in a kind and humane way.
- Responsible pet ownership is being respectful of your neighbors, care of your pets with excellent nutrition, shelter, veterinary care when appropriate, proper socialization. Being a responsible pet owner also means proper and regular clean up of your own yard all year long!
- The owner is responsible for the care and health of their pet. Should not infringe on others with undue noise, unpleasant smells or pet poop. Always clean up immediately. Provide a safe, stimulating environment for the pet. Provide health care for their pet.
- a person who knows that if their dog is barking they control and teach their dog, a person who owns a dog knows that they have to educate their dog with other dogs when their dog show aggressive behavior, someone who will vaccinate their dog, register their dog, feed, walk regularly their dog
- Means no barnyard animals in backyards. No chickens allowed please!
- Responsible pet owners do not leave their dogs outside to bark. Ownership does not include bees, pigs, chickens, sheep or any other farm animals.
- Fully being responsible for said pet, veterinary needs, training, proper disposal of waste and providing a loving home. Knowing your pet enough to know if it's in a danger situation weather it's the danger or it's in danger.
Being able to enjoy the furry, scaley or feathered critters on earth.
- Someone who has empathy for and provides proper food, exercise, housing, training, medical care (vaccinations) and necessary groomingfor their animal while ensuring it and their home is not a nuisance.
- Not dumping yOur pet, taking care of them like you would your child
- Keeping in mind the temperaments and needs of other dogs. This is a huge thing we struggle with when we have dogs with certain temperaments and other people assume interactions will be "fine" because their dog is "friendly"
- Responsible pet ownership to me, means that the pet owner is capable of taking care of the animal. This means not neglecting the pet, regular vet check ups, grooming, and proper obedience training. If I pet owner knows they can be unfriendly, it is on the own to properly train and care for that pet
- Reasonable number of animals, not overly loud or disease causing.
- CALGARY NEEDS TO ALLOW URBAN CHICKENS LIKE MANY OTHER MODERN CITIES DO!!!

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

NOT ALLOWING URBAN CHICKENS ONLY LEADS TO ""SECRET"" OWNERSHIP AND MAKES NO SENSE. CHICKENS ARE QUIETER AND MUCH CLEANER THAN DOGS (DON'T POOP ON STREETS ON OTHER PEOPLES PROPERTY. WE HAD THEM FOR 8 YEARS, NO SMELL, NO COMPLAINT

- Ensuring that your pet is healthy, happy, cared for, and not a problem or danger for others.
- Feeding, spaying, loving and taking care of your pet. If an outdoor cat then ensure its let out and brought in quickly especially during cold weather. Let it do its business, then right back in the house.
- How many letters have been written to mayor Nenshi about selling animals in pet stores like [removed] & it has fallen on deaf ears! Then he lied for re-election! BAN SELLING PETS in pet stores & BAN BACKYARD BREEDERS! Also ALL dogs on harnesses when walked or dog park & no chokers-they KILL dogs!
- Clean, well cared for animals. If you limit the number I can have I will leave the city.
- That animals have proper housing, food, water, medical care and comforts.
- Providing pets with proper care while respecting other people and animals in your community.
- Adhering to the community rules like the Community Standards Act and Pet By Laws, including providing ones pet with appropriate care (all pets have unique needs so not overly prescribed), abiding by criminal laws around cruelty, and not allowing ones pets to injure humans or other pets.
- Not letting your pet infringe on the rights of others ie, your barking dog shouldn't bother the neighbours or make your kids fee unsafe. And clean up pet feces. Everyone has the right to fee safe.
- It means that a person's choice to have a pet should not impact any other person. Thus, your dog's barking should not keep the neighbours awake, your cat should not be running all over the neighbourhood, your chicken poop should not cause stink or cause mice infestation in my yard, etc.
- Treating animals under your responsibility with love and compassion while making sure all of their needs (physically, emotionally and mentally) are met and will continue to be met for the duration of their lives.
- Providing food, water shelter and love to an animal that you adopt. Also making sure that your animal(s) brings no harm to itself, you, others, or other animals.
- It means caring for an animals needs and also not affecting people around you negatively.
- People with animals mind their own business and are aware of any behavioural issues their animals may have
- Responsible pet ownership to mean is making sincere efforts to minimize pet ownership on those who are not owners, while allowing for inclusiveness for what who considers what a pet. Mostly I think of people needing to pick up their dog poop and keeping dogs on leash in on leash areas.
- Taking responsibility for your pet's health and well-being, and ensuring your pet does not intrude on, impact / affect any one outside your household.
- Caring about you dog and it's impact on the environment and society
- Someone who has the proper means and space to care for the physical and emotional wellbeing of a pet(s). Also taking care to train and socialize dogs so that they can be positive members of our communities. This includes eliminating things like excessive barking and aggression.

- It means the pet is healthy and well adjusted to living in an urban environment. It is not aggressive, obeys its owner and has no negative impacts on humans or the environment. The owner follows all laws and respects the rights of other people
- Providing adequate housing, food, and veterinary care including vaccinations. Walking dogs daily. Not allowing your pets to be a nuisance to people around you, eg. stray cats and barking dogs.
- That pets are well treated, up to date on vaccinations, cared for, not left outdoors unattended, and where the owners have the best interest of the pet in mind.
- Consideration of others
- Being a responsible owner
- The animals health and wellbeing comes first, which includes cleaning, feeding, and love in general. It is also important to be conscious and respectful of your neighbours and community.
- Pet ownership means having pets that are properly trained. Pet owners should keep pets in control and clean up after them. Dog walkers should be allowed to walk not more than 3 dogs at one time. How can they possibly keep more than that under control. Pets are pets- not people.
- Living in a inter-species household (human-pet species household). It means providing proper care for the animal. The animal provide emotional comfort and support to the humans. In turn the humans provide emotional comfort and support to the animal. Also, the animal should not bother neighbours.
- Ensuring domestic animals are safe, well cared for medically, emotionally and behaviourally. Ensuring communities are safe and clean as well. Ie. leash laws, waste pickup
- Cleaning up after a pet defecates
- Pets are properly licensed, owners provide appropriate training for their pet(s), provide proper care, nutrition, health care and exercise, they pick up after their animals, they have FULL control of their dogs at off leash parks, they do not leave dogs outside to bark and annoy neighbors.
- Having a pet or livestock that do not interfere with the ability of others to enjoy their property or shared common spaces. It means dogs don't bark at night and cats don't wander onto my property and eat the birds I am feeding. Both happen in my neighbourhood.
- Making sure animals are healthy, clean and happy. Housed indoors. Waste picked up when you take your pets for a walk. Do your best to stop constant barking etc. Basically making sure your animal is well take care of and not a nuisance to others.
- The ability to properly house and care for an animal and exceed care requirements whenever possible
- Responsible pt ownership means you provide the basics of life ,food shelter,walk your animal regularly, pick up their poop, and able to control them at all times . Besides being a part of our family.
- It means I should be able to keep a hen, bees and even a goat or something on my property as long as it is properly taken care of and doesn't disturbe the neighbours. Let's make sustainable living a reality in Calgary and put ourselves on the map!!!!
- Having your dog on lease and under control at all times. Some people in Christie Park walk their dogs off lease in the park. There are no signs posted to indicate that dogs must be on a leash. The City needs to post signs in all leash parks that clearly indicates that all dogs must be on a leash.

- Freedom to exercise your pet. Ensuring your pet doesn't hurt anyone or other animal. Ensuring that pet waste doesn't impact the environment.
- providing care to the pets that results in a high quality of life for them. Making sure that the choice to have pets does not diminish the quality of life of any other people in the community (cleaning up after them, noise control, walking control). a
- I make it my business as a responsible dog owner to no the bylaw rules. In my opinion most people don't no the laws about off leash area so we must have signs too educate owners and signs people are more likely to obey. I can't walk on path ways because off ignorance as my dog is difficult I'm alert
- The ability to provide good care for the pet whilst not adversely affecting neighbors with respect to noise and odour.
- Means having the freedom to have a companion that fits one's needs as long as it doesn't compromise others.
- Taking care of the animal, and being responsible to the community.
- Pets are treated well, kept healthy, and properly trained and socialized. Responsible owners should also clean up after their pets in public and keep a clean house.
- Being a positive and my pets being a positive part of our community. That they-we are controlled, respectful on leash and in public spaces and picking up after ourselves. Twice in the last week my small dog has been attacked, ticketing for unruly dogs and owners who disregard it would be good.
- No pets should be running at large. Offleash should ONLY be allowed if the animal is under control and has perfect recall. I know it's hard to police, but people should be fined for not picking up after their pet. Pets should not be allowed on soccer and baseball fields, again policing is an issue.
- It means fully providing for a pet's medical, social, behavioural, & physical needs. It also means being socially responsible to the community the pet lives in in making sure the pet's presence has a positive or neutral impact upon the community.
- Safe and respectful treatment of all pets, keeping all pets contained, cleaning up after your pet on public or private property.
- Considering the needs of their neighbours, being able to live in my house without their dog non-stop barking!
- Firstly, that pets' needs for health, nutrition and psychology are being met. Also, that pets, their owners and non-pet owners can share public space peacefully and respectfully (which I also expect of groups humans with or without pets).
- Having a well trained and cared for animal that can interact with the community.
- taking full responsibility for your pets behavior instead of blaming the pet and/or people who complain about the pet
- Cats licensed and not permitted to run free. Stiffer penalties & monitoring for not picking up poop. Penalties for people with out of control dogs at off leash parks. More fenced off leash parks. No sale of dogs or cats at pet stores. Purchase direct from ethical breeders & rescue only.

- This means caring for one's pet(s) in all manners to ensure they are healthy and happy, but also making sure that they are neither nuisances or threats to the rest of society. If at any time the owner is unable to manage or care for their pet(s), they ought to seek out services to help get on track.
- Taking the animals needs and putting them as a family priority. Health, food, shelter, water, LOVE, humane treatment.
- Owners are responsible for the wellbeing of their pets and the wellbeing of their neighbors. This means noise and feces are non-existent outside the pet owners home.
- Using leash except in off leash areas and then only if the dog is in control. Pick up pet waste. Manage barking.
- Safe and Caring home. NO riding in back of trucks, No leaving them outside in freezing weather. Licensed Breeders (NO puppy mills) Huge fines for dog arenas. Investigations into Animal abuse. Stricter rules for those that do not pick up after there pets. Cats at large. Funding help for Rescue site
- Keeping pets under your control. Ensuring there is no impact on the local parks, gardens, playgrounds and pathways from pet defecation. Being responsible for keeping pets healthy so they cannot spread disease.
- It means taking good care of my pet and not allowing the pet to bother reasonable neighbours with behaviour. I would like the "keep cats indoors" part of the bylaw dropped, as cats are naturally predatory. Our cats have always been allowed outside, keep the rodent greatly reduced in our 'hood!
- People respect their neighbors and follow bylaws regarding whatever pet they have.
- Paying for the yearly licensing, picking up after your pet. Not allowing your pets to run free and all over everyones property
- Responsible pet ownership means having pets under command and control and pets that are not dangerous or bothersome to others. For example excessive parking, excessive odor due to poor maintenance of yard
- Pets are the responsibility of their owners, but also deserve respect from others to the same degree as one would respect their owners. Being neighbourly includes pets in both regards.
- You take the best care of your pet (vet care annually, vaccines, well mannered pet, picking up after, grooming) anything you need to do for a pet you do. If your dog isn't nice don't take it to a off leash park.
- Having responsibility for the care, feeding, exercise of your pet. Ability to provide food, medical, take outside, clean up after, train to be safe around others, spay or neuter.
- Looking after your pet's safety and health while obeying our bylaws.
- To do no harm, keep up preventive care provide enrichment and basically ensure they're happy and healthy.
- Ensuring a dog is taken care of from various aspects (medical, food, exercise) while still being a good member of the community.

- Ensuring you have the means to provide appropriate resources for your pet in terms of veterinary care/health care, appropriate socialization for species that require it, meeting proper nutritional requirements and exercise requirements along with following city bylaws in regards to owning pets
- We need more off leash parks. Calgary is growing exponentially and the lack of off leash parks is evidenced by how busy Sue Higgins dog park is all the time. Licensing is a questionable and continued endeavor and should be instituted only for owners of dogs who have aggressed toward people.
- Pets are animals kept in close proximity for the enjoyment of people. Pets should be fed, watered, sheltered, and protected. In addition, pets should receive basic veterinary care to ensure health and pain-free existence. A responsible owner ensures these things occur.
- It means providing Ensuring pet owners provide medical care to their pets when needed. Just as you'd be responsible leaving your child suffering you should also be responsible for leaving your pets suffering. Also pick up your dog poop
- Being wise in controlling population and ensuring that pets live in peace with others, both harmony and wildlife.
- Ensuring pets in the community are able to enjoy the spaces available to them, and advocating for behaviours that benefit the community as a whole.
- It means having animals that contribute to healthy eating and healthy earth. Please add bees and chickens to the list.
- Responsible pet ownership is understanding the needs of your pets and the pets of others. Pet owners and non-pet owners should be accountable for their actions. Care and respect for the animals well-being should be of the utmost importance when considering responsible pet ownership.
- Everything that is alive and is possible in roaming the street, and owners making sure their pets are safe and do not cause harm to others or other animals.
- Providing care and a safe home for an animal; including safety from overpopulation by sterilizing all animals not specifically planned/licences for breeding.
- understanding the responsibility it takes to properly care for a pet, for the entirety of it's life. costs, proper medical care, respecting our off leash parks and removing feces. Having more protocol in place for adoption to avoid rehoming.
- Caring for both my dog and the city. I feed my dog high quality food and take him to the vet for vaccines and check ups. I care for the city paying my taxes and picking up after my dog. Also, being kind to other dogs and dog owners.
- It means providing a safe, comfortable environment for your animal. Cleaning up after them is huge and something not enough people do.

- Pass a quick test on licensing: Human behaviour is the problem - On leash in on leash areas, keep the dog on your right (outside), no flexi-leads, ask permission to greet, pick up after your pet.
- Having pet that do not bother others
- responsible pet ownership means have there dog licensed and shots up to date. carry poop bags with them and clean up there dogs poop. have there dog socialized so it gets a long with the other dogs. if the dog is aggressive keep them on lease or leave the dog park.
- Excercising your dogs appropriately. This doesn't just mean sending him to doggy daycare, but spending an hour a day walking, playing. Picking up after your dog's on your walks. Keeping your yard tidy regardless of how many dogs you have. Your dog is trained/socialized to be a good example.
- Clean, quiet, contained,and no odors. All with in your yard with no outdoor chicken coops, snake dens, rabbit cages, etc. No eyesores. All in back yard only
- Taking good care of your pets by keeping them and the community safe with training
- Don't bring aggressive dogs to the dog parks.
Do pick up dog feces.
- Cats that cannot wonder in the neighborhood and Bylaw does nothing
- Licensed animals, clean property maintained, animals trained to be quiet & under control
- Ensuring pets are looked after and kept safe for their own health as well as others.
- Licensed pets, spay/neuter dogs only in off leash, dog walker permits similar to Toronto, limit dog walkers to how many they're allowed off leash to help with park cleanliness and their responsibility for the dogs themselves. Properly behaved dogs, trained, in off leash areas
- Taking care of the pets that you have, ensuring that you are cleaning up after them in and out of your yard and higher fines for people not cleaning up after them. Let cats roam. 100% for urban agriculture. I would own chickens if I could!!!
- I'm a pet owner, and my idea of responsible pet ownership means when you choose to own a pet, you take 100% of the responsibilities of that pet -cleaning up after them, feeding, vet visits, ensuring their safety.
- Providing food and shelter appropriate for your pet. Providing caring home. Ensuring your pet is safe and that you provide essentials to their quality of life.
- Keeping your dog on a leash unless otherwise indicated, cleaning up after them, regular vet attention for any and all pets, keeping them licensed.
- Bylaws around leash length should be more strict and actually enforced. Flexi leads extend past the legal length and are a risk to runners, bikers, rollerbladers & other dogs. Fenced dog parks should NOT allow people to bike, scooter, sled, skateboard etc. Because it is dangerous to dogs & people
- Training/socializing, cleaning up after them, licensing, caring for them
- Pet owners being respectful of wildlife, humans, and other pets. Not self centred on what their pet needs. Choosing the right space for interaction and having a well trained and responsive pet. Picking up waste. Choosing wildlife first in wild spaces.

Clean up after pets, keep them under control when in public.
- Looking after basic needs of that animal (vet care; exercise, enrichment, training, licensing, food, water, shelter).
- Have control over your animal. Do not let it inconvenience others
- A name tag on my dog with his name and my telephone number. A city dog tag is an unnecessary tax.
- Pets have secure food and shelter, free from abuse and neglect.
- Responsible pet ownership means treating the animal in your care with respect, love and prompt and appropriate veterinary care when needed. Pets should receive proper care, nutrition, water and shelter and exercised as needed and appropriate to the breed. Pets should never be abandoned.
- respecting the rules with leash and behaviour in public areas. dont let your animals roam onto other peoples private property.
- Everytime a new dog owner registers a dog they must take basic obedience and dog etiquette classes.
- Specifically at off leash parks. Dog must come when called otherwise pet is not allowed off!
Number of dogs one person is allowed to take to off leashe park. I have seen dog walkers with 8-12 dogs with one person. There should be a maximum number of dogs a person can handle at one time! Maybe 7
- Pets should not be left outside all day during winter
- Responsible as in their dog takes at least basic training or is able to show basic obedience. Allowing fir overweight dogs should be considered abuse, especially if the dog can hardly walk or breathe.
- Responsible owners should be allowed to use whatever training tools best suit their dog, as long as they are used properly. Proper training or research should be done before use. Would love to see only trainers sell all training tools instead of stores.
- People that clean up after their pets. People that humanely treat their and other's animals.
People keep their animals under control in public.
- In some other provinces there's a law that states landlords may refuse to rent to someone with a pet, but they can not evict them for getting one during the duration of the lease. I wish they had this law in Alberta.
- Caring for my animals, ensuring they are safe and healthy. Protecting them from anything outdoors.
- The ability to pick up their dog's poop and throw it out. Would love to see more garbage in the city and the City of Calgary actually maintain these garbages
- Being able to adequately care for one or more pets, emotionally, financially and physically. Treating pets as members of the family. Obeying all regulations and bylaws regarding your pets.
- Well trained animal that will not harm others, cleaning up after your pet, you have the right animal that fits your lifestyle

- Humans managing their pets in a safe way for all - including the owner, pet & all other human/animals. The animal must. Be cared for appropriately & others humans/animals not be at risk. Pet owners need to be committed to the care of their pet - healthy living environment, food, water, shelter & safe
- Licensed, well trained, well behaved dog. Making sure your dog has good behaviour in public and in your home/yard. Able to easily control your dog in off leash parks. Providing shelter, food and water if dog is outside and making sure it doesn't bark a lot and annoy neighbours.
- Not being a dick and teaching your pet not to be a dick.
- Ensuring your pets aren't a nuisance to others
- If people are going to have a companion in their life spay/neuter is relevant. Minimizing breeding as shelters are full, low cost spaying etc helps. exotic animals should be banned, pet stores need to be responsible. Micro chipping should be mandatory where possible. Licensing cats is ridiculous.
- Keeping a pet under control, teaching them appropriate behaviours/ training them, being responsible for their behaviour at all times, and picking up after them.
- Pet in control, pick up after pet joyful enjoyment of spaces available
- register your pet (micro-chip)/ picking up dog poop/ if purchasing a dog, give information on finding responsible and registered breeders certified by CKC or AKC, and discourage pet-shop style pet sales/ enforce vaccination requirements for all pets
- 1) Ensure appropriate care/food/shelter
- 2) For dogs to be leashed in public
- 3) for cats to be licensed and not freely roaming streets or yards and should be fined similarly to that of dogs for doing so.
- 4) More supervision by owners at off leash areas/parks
- 1) maintaining the health and safety of your pet (spay/neuter, health treatments, safe space to live, no neglect)
- 2) providing an enriching or acceptable environment for your pet
- 3) cleaning up your pets poop in private or public spaces
- 4) ensure the safety of others
- Being a responsible human being / parent to your pet just like uyour child making sure their needs are met
- MORE OFF LEASH SPACES
- It means being truly able to care for your animal as you should. Clean up after your pet. If your dog is grouchy, or more aggressive leash him up at dog park. Caring for animal and community.
- Clean, healthy, fed & watered, sheltered.
- Providing the basic needs to the pets. Most regulations in regards to pets are unnecessary.
- Taking good care of your pet so that it is healthy and content, and so that you and your pet interact with your neighborhood in a way that is not harmful or a nuisance to other people, pets, or wildlife.

-it should be illegal for landlords to deny pets. If we are rescuing animals, It is RESPONSIBLE that owners are able to find a decent place to live...

- Responsible pet ownership does not involve more rules - it involves ensuring people train their pets properly and therefore don't need more rules. Regulating people and animals to death is no use. When we lived in Europe we could bring our well trained animal everywhere something yyc is missing
- Pets should have mandatory neutering. There is a huge problem with homeless animals and the average joe breeding dogs for profit without giving proper care. Animal abuse NEEDS harsher penalties.
- As a dog lover I believe responsible pet owner provides: Nurturing, socializing, training, picking up after your animal and disposing in the numerous garbage cans. Having areas where our dogs can run leash free in the parks. Dog training is a must. Health testing before purebred breeding is ideal.
- Licensing
  - Keeping indoor pets indoors, not letting them wander into neighbours yards
  - Keeping your pet healthy and well cared for, including physically active
  - Not having a pet if you can't financially take care of it or you don't have the time
- Providing a safe and happy environment for any animal in your home.
- Pets should be spayed and neutered, identified with a microchip, provided with not only food, water and shelter, but loving care and human companionship and all necessary veterinary care for their entire life.
- It mean having proper care and control of your pet. Keeping them healthy and picking up after them. I also believe pets should be on leash unless in a designated off leash area. There should not be more than 3 pets per home unless on an acreage. Dog Walkers packs should only be a maximum of 4 to 6.
- No cats roaming outdoors, no off leash dogs except in fenced (have yet to meet a dog under owner control), poor owner judgment: if your dog jumps at pedestrians when walking on the sidewalk; move away when you are coming up to and passing a pedestrian. Cleanup your dog (and cat! ) excrement
- Providing the best life possible to any animal in your ownership. Meeting all the animal's needs - physical, emotional, social. Using force free methods only.
- No use unless you have enough bylaw officers boots on the ground, to many dog owners have respect for private property
- Caring for an animal in a way that enriches their lives, and is respectful to your neighbours
- Keep dog on leash in public spaces, clean up in public spaces, keep dog quiet in backyard, have animal neutered
- Responsible pet ownership means you are able to provide financially and emotionally for this new or existing member of your family. It means providing shelter, food, and necessary veterinarian care within your financial means and committing to that animal.
- Being in control of your pet. Also not allowing dog walking companies fo have MULTIPLE dogs off leash at one time. Restricting that number down significantly for the safety of everyone.

- When taking on a pet you are now responsible for the health and safety of that pet. Responsible pet owners should LOVE them, feed their pet, pick up after their pet, keep their pet safe from other pets, keep their pets healthy with vaccinations and keep them safe, warm and comfortable in their home!
- Held accountable for your pets actions and behavior. It is not the animals fault of it is defending itself you as an owner need to teach him the correct behavior. If you as an owner fail you will be put down just as recent animals have had to die because of your irresponsible actions as a pet owner
- Caring for your animal in a manner that keeps it healthy and safe while not allowing it to infringe on the rights and enjoyment of neighbours and others who may not love your pet like you do.
- As per chickens, I don't think new backyards are big enough for chickens not to bother neighbours who don't want chickens. Smell and noise alone would be a nuisance to home owners that don't want chickens around their house.
- It means nothing because police can come in and kill my dog anytime for any reason. We need responsible policing first. Where we dont have cowards afraid of dogs carrying guns.
- Get rid of the offleash on pathways. Literally zero percent of people control their dogs when off leash. For a Cory of a over a million people it's a ridiculous by law to have.
- Taking responsibility for your pet and its behavior.
- I believe taking care of your animals Where they are supported, fed, and health and wellness is taken account for consistently while providing for the owners is essential.
- - the pet is provided with adequate food, water and shelter.
- - the owner provides daily exercise, socializing and continuous control over the pet such that other pets or persons are not impacted by the pets behaviour.
- Dog owners must pick up dog poop, no off lease in the community-which happens often in Sunalta
- Calgary does pretty good, but we need to get rid of the [personal information removed]. It encourages backyard breeders, and sells to uninformed people at exorbitant prices. It literally makes calgary worse.
- cat owners should be held to the same standard as dog owners- my flower beds have now been destroyed because the neighbors cat uses them as a toilet. Why are they allowed to roam free?? It means doing something about the coyotes so my dog and kids can play without fear. Fines for leaving dog poop
- It means loving and caring for pets that live IN your home. This means feeding and providing a warm and safe place for animals to reside. It also means affording to pay for vet bills, food, housing and care of the animals. It means providing pets with the exercise and attention they require for life
- Keeping animal healthy and happy (mentally and physically), taking to vet when needed, providing mental stimulation, healthy diet, FOLLOWING LEASH LAWS!!!, keeping them contained, licensing them
- Owners of pets should be responsible for the actions of their pets, including ensuring that their pets do not negatively interfere with others and their property.
- Not having your dog bark or whining as early as 4:30am for several hours, disturbing & waking up the neighborhood. Not Leaving the dog outside in winter for hours. Picking up their dog's poop on sidewalks and parks. Not taking the dog out for walks or letting it outside in back yard ever or rarely.

- Everything!
- Taking care of a pet requires us to provide for its needs and keep it safe from harm. We also understand not everyone enjoys pets, and we need to respect their property and needs as well. Communities are for everyone, and it takes everyone to make it a safe and pleasant place to live.
- First, consider your future plans and then do research on the animal to consider if this is the right time and type of pet to get. Realize having a pet requires lifelong commitment, time and money to provide proper food, shelter, care, training, and attention.
An animal is never to be abandoned.
- On leash pick up after. Signs in open areas indicating not an off leash park, ie Riverstone of Cranston where dogs run free always.
- Having a dog on a leash when not in an off leash area. I Live in Cranston Riverstone and people are constantly letting their dogs off leash and ignoring the feces their dogs leave behind. It would be nice if there was some sort of officer patrolled that would come out and actually ticket.
- Keep your dog on leash in areas that are not off leash areas , also picking up after them
- Nasic needs, proper health care and adequate training to ensure a happy, healthy pet.
- No one is asking the tire industry to revisit the possibility of making them square instead of round so why does the city need to waste all kinds of money revising laws that do not need revision just because they are twelve years old. Leave it alone.
- Ensuring the pets have access to sufficient space and their needs are met. Well fed, clean grated with respect. Not noisy
- Spade and neutered, licensed, cleaning up after your dogs, breeding restrictions
- Cleaning up after your pet, respectful behaviour in off leash parks, keeping your dog on leash in designated areas
- Being responsible in cleaning up after your pet, as well as keeping them under control.
- Owners that keep their pets in good health and follow all bylaws.
- Where pet ownership doesn't impact others, where one takes care of all of the pets' needs
- Taking 100 % care of your dog and it's needs. This includes up to date vaccines and proper training. Teaching your dog to be respectful to other dogs and people. Anyone who does not have complete control over their dog should not be at the Calgary Dog parks . Microchip in case your dog gets los.
- Dog owners need to train their dogs better, people with no dogs should not have to endure barking dogs. We should be able to enjoy our backyards without dogs from neighbors barking at us. The City needs to implement better rules regarding barking.
- Picking up poop! The city needs to do a better job of policing off leash parks.
Professional dog walkers need to be held accountable for not picking up after the dogs in their care.
The city needs to monitor and penalize these people; they are damaging off leash areas.

- Having--and fully utilizing--the physical, financial and emotional capacities to fully provide for an animal's complete wellness.
- Making sure you understand your dog, understand his signs and his body language he's giving out. Also not putting an aggressive dog on a retractable leash and don't bring an aggressive dog to off leash dog parks. Picking up your dogs poop and not leaving it in the middle of the path MORE GARBAGECANS
- take responsibility for your pet & don't have them annoy or worse other people. There is a black cat that is in Montgomery who is supposed to be kept inside but isn't. Dogs that bark constantly in my apt building & the management get complaints constantly about them. City laws have to be stricter.
- Cleaning your own animal poop and disposing of it properly. Teaching and educating other pet owners. Stopping back yard and un needed breeders. STOP BRINGING IN STRAY ANIMALS FROM OTHER COUNTRIES
- It means to have an animal you're able to financially and emotionally support throughout its life.
- I think this definition will vary greatly but I am the owner of a hunting dog (springer spaniel) and my definition would be a person who cares for and trains their dog and can anticipate and correct actions before they occur.
- I have a pet and appreciate having a say in how they are treated and how they should be handled
- I have two cats, so it means keeping them inside and licensing them. I think for dogs it means cleaning up after them, keeping them on leash unless in an off-leash area, and providing training for them.
- This means being able to control your animal. This means understanding that I may be able to control my dog with voice commands and other may need a leash. It also means all pets and people are not the same. It also means we shouldn't all be lumped into the same basket. Don't punish good pet owners.
- Knowing your dogs limits and stressors and acting accordingly.
- Provide shelter, food, training, exercise and mental stimulation for our pets. Cleaning after your pet waste is important, at home and in public places. Dog Parks in each community to socialize.
- To me it means a community that values animal care and welfare issues. These issues are important enough to the community to advocate for responsible behaviors for members of the community who own or care for animals, providing guidance and in some cases regulations.
- Keeps their dog under control.
Does not take their dog off leash in an on leash only area.
Does not let their dog bark at all hours.
Picks up after their dog.
- The City's Killarney Aquatic Centre sits across the street in a park on 30 St and 17 Ave SW. Dog defecation and urine is so great that the park reeks when the snow melts.
- Clean up after your pet, leash dog when when in community, learn to manage and care for pet
- Putting your pet first in vulnerable situations and providing more than just the necessities of life. It also means knowing the requirements of pet ownership, such as picking up feces on private and public property.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- A pet/homeowner who owns pets/livestock that do not infringe on neighbors quality of life. A responsible pet/livestock owner keeps their pets activities to their property and does not allow said pet to defecate on neighbors property nor cause unwanted intrusion.
- Responsible pet owner is someone who realizes that they took on an animal and are responsible for it like a child. Which means regular vet visits, proper food, showing it love and taking care of it. Cleaning up after it and giving it a comfortable living environment for the length of its life.
- Looking after your pet whether that is for the safety of them or people around you.
- It means that my dogs vaccines are 100% up to date. It means that I can reasonably expect my dog to always be in my control in public. It means that my dogs have access to warm shelter 24/7. It means that neighbours do not have to hear my dog bark nonstop
- Having complete control of your pet at all times and picking up after them ALWAYS . Also ensuring that your pet is always safe, secure and fed.
- Canadian statistics are extremely incorrect on pet ownership since pet owners don't accurately report the number of pets they have and vets don't report regularly to the Canadian Veterinary Assoc. In the U.S., 67% of households have pets. The number is higher in Canada, especially in Calgary.
- It means keeping your dogs healthy (good walks), being a good neighbour (picking up after your dog, not allowing excessive barking), respecting on leash rules (avoid those very long leashes as well). Just considering the comfort and needs of those around you.
- Responsible pet ownership is taking care of your pet and following rules and bylaws so your pet does not disturb or bother anyone around you
- You are a guardian for your pet. Same rules apply should it have been a child. Proper and adequate shelter food water. Taking care of needs etc.
- Clean up after your pets. Pay attention to them, not your phone or someone you're walking with. Control them, think about what you are doing
- It means immunizing and spaying or neutering pets. licencing fee's are high and should be reduced. City of Calgary should offer preferred vets and insurance companies that are reasonably priced for these services. animal waste pick up should be enforced in a more visible manor to deter waste.
- providing the necessaries for your pet to be happy, healthy, safe around others- people and other pets alike. Giving that pet training, attention, love, exercise and stimulation to be a well behaved member of your home and community.
- Keeping your pets safe and providing for their needs
Keeping them safe means keeping them on leash
We really need to work on off leash issue it is becoming a nightmare with people in private property and in green spaces around Calgary
The cost to private property and wild life is out of contro
- It means that you take all and every measure to ensure that your pet is comfortable and safe. There needs to be stronger "consequences for people who do not take care of animals. This includes not walking your pet daily, as well as leaving animals outside in freezing weather.
- Being responsible for a sentient individual that needs care and love for their entire life.

- Providing the animal's needs as far as food, shelter and caring but also being responsible that their animal does not impact neighbours in a negative way. Excessive noise or being loose on others property is the responsibility of the owner. Having a well-trained animal.
  - Only owning pets that you want to care for their whole life, and are able to and can afford to care for their whole life.
  - Taking care of the animals that take care of us.
  - Ensuring safe environments for people, pets, owners and wildlife.
  - Pets up to date on shots and tags. Also people in off leash areas who know their dogs could pose a problem to take precautions .
- Also I think cat licensing is not exactly fair if you have pets that never go out.
- Providing care and love to your animal to enrich their life while being considerate of neighbours. Picking up after then off property. Not allowing dogs to bark outdoors as to disrupt neighbours.
  - Cleaning up after yourself. Knowing and controlling your pet if need be
  - It means taking care of your pet with regards to good health, vaccinations and socialization.
  - Ensuring your pet is up to date on shots, ensuring your pet can handle both being on leash and off leash, and being respectful that the animals don't behave like humans. What we think is aggression in an animal is the animal dominance and just being loud; also small animal owners being respectful
  - Someone who is capable of providing the needs specific to their pet. Feeds them, walks them, grooms them, if they're out in public they're trained or on a leash. The owner picks up after their pet weather in their own yard or not.
  - People licensing their pets, keeping their cats indoors (big issue in new Brighton.), people keeping their pets on a leash on the streets ect But mostly the cat issue is the big one I see. One terrorizes my dog every summer.
  - Caring for your pets and providing them with a healthy full life without infringing on others.
  - Cleaning up after your pet, keeping your pet in your own yard, using a leash where instructed or if being off-leash isn't safe for your dog, other dogs, yourself, and other people.
  - Picking up after your pets. As well, keeping your dogs on a leash at all times unless in an off leash area.
  - Responsible pet ownership means caring for a pet with love and respect. It means ensuring that it is fed, watered, medically cared for, licensed and neutered, and ideally trained in some manner.
  - Cats should no longer be allowed to roam outside. They are toppling the ecosystem by decimating the bird population and are destructive to personal property. There are no direct benefits to allowing cats outside. A law should be implemented that prevents cat owners from letting their pets roam free
  - I want dog owners to obey ALL leash laws ALL the time. I would like the City to take more responsibility enforcing leash laws.. I want dog owners responsible for picking up their dog's waste everywhere!
  - Having a pet that you treat like part of the family and not having them and, by association you, treated like a criminal when you are out and about, if you are not following, to the letter, all the laws owners have to follow. People should be responsible for their pets and should be to do so.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- It means taking care of the animals you own and respecting nature.
- Picking up after your pets and keeping them on leash! Bylaw is basically inept at enforcing any complaints. Need better mechanism for reporting (i.e. photo evidence is sufficient) and harsher fines. I hate feeling my children and I are unsafe because of irresponsible dog owners.
- Ensuring your pet is provided a safe, stable environment, given the proper love, housing and diet. That the owner takes every reasonable step to ensure their pet is properly trained and socialized. The owner will take all measure to clean up after and control their pet.
- Providing love and care to an animal you choose as a pet, while keeping other people and animals safe from potential disease and injury from your animal.
- That pets are treated and cared for correctly
- Keeping an eye on your pet and adhering to the laws.
- Not letting your dog off leash in on leash area just because your dog is nice to everyone. Pet owners are idiots and need to start being he's accountable for their own stupidity. Dogs aren't the problem.
- Not bringing aggressive dogs to off leash areas.
- Making sure your pets are healthy, loved and not a effecting anyone else
- The owners of the pets have the resources to provide for basic needs such as food and veterinary care. The animals need training and human interaction that supports a pet that is not problematic to the neighbours including regular exercise and mental stimulation for dogs and containment for cats.
- We need more funding to follow up on animal welfare complaints. We also need more funding to amend laws that are out of date with respect to animal cruelty, so that prosecution can occur more reliably and more in line with the public's views.
- Cleaning up dog feces. Woodbine and Fish Creek Park are covered in dig crap.
- Loving, caring and maintaining the health and wellbeing of the animals we take under our care. Being aware of their limits and providing excersise and stimulation based on the capacity they exhibit in friendliness and coexistence. Ownership means being responsible for all aspects of pet behavior etc
- Responsible pet ownership starts with following the by-laws that are in place. This presently does not happen There are no way to identify those who are not following the by-laws and thus no way to enforce them.
Even if the offenders could be identified, the city has a very small by-law team.
- Well-cared for pets that are exercised and waste picked up after. Dog friendly trails and parks
- Providing your pet with medical care, daily exercise, grooming, a clean and warm home, and assuring they are trained so they can be calm and balanced. Be sure to follow the common sense laws so my pet is kept safe. Example being keeping cats indoors and lashing your dogs when in off leash areas.
- Making sure your pet is happy, well-trained and well-cared for. Not allowing your pets to negatively impact other people or pets, and not allowing other people or pets to negatively impact your pet.
- not letting your dog bark outside for ANY length of time after 11:00pm

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Getting an animal to care for it long term. Feeding, exercising and grooming it properly and only getting it if you have the time to properly care for it.
- Ensuring that all the physical, psychological, and mental needs of your pet are met. Maintaining a reasonable amount of control dependent on the age, breed, and species of your pet in public, and taking responsibility for the actions of your pet (ie. cleaning up after your pet defecates).
- It means having control of your animal and treating it well. This includes not leaving them alone for long periods of time.
- My pets are my children. They are family. I love them. To be a responsible pet owner, you must clean up after them, feed them, care for them, take them to the vet for their health, and most importantly love them and teach them manners. Never hurting them or abusing them. Also never neglecting them.
- To me it means that your pet is licensed properly, and that you are following city by laws. You are able to provide the necessities of life for your pet(s) including food, and proper shelter. And that your pet has adequate training that it needs.
- Keep my pets healthy, happy, and not a nuisance to others. Licence and register your furry's. Need more strict guidelines for people who don't licence and register, I have neighbours with a mean unregistered dog who has (unproven) Killed neighbourhood stray cats and we can't do anything about it.
- Understanding a pet's needs and what you are capable of providing for them. If you can't afford food and or provide enough care then limit your number of pets or reconsider the type of pet.
- To be able to provide adequate care for any animal as their guardian.
- This means taking care of your pet and ensuring that it doesn't impact other people, pets (on leash unless in a designated area for all pets), or property (clean up after them)
- I think responsible ownership is having cats licenses for those whose cat roam outside. Cats can cause a lot of trouble like a dog and actually can cause quite a bit of ecological damages because they are unsupervised outside.
Also I'm all for bee keeping and chicken keeping as long as it's clean.
- Making sure my pet is in a safe place for themselves and other it may come into contact with.
- Aging choices for your pet so they are always set up to succeed.
- Taking care of my pets. Ensuring that they are kept safe and not jeopardizing themselves or others. Cats should be indoors or outdoors in spaces where they are supervised. Dogs should be on a leash and in control. Unless they are in a designated off leash area.
- Cats should be treated the same as dogs. A loose "house cat" came into my yard multiple times last year and attacked my dog on my own property. For everyone's safety, including the cats, the bylaw stating cats should remain on their own property should be more strictly enforced.
- Training and paying attention to your pet and respecting the rules and other people.
- I would like to set dogs on leash. I have 2 small children and I am really annoyed by dogs running around off leash and using public spaces as their toilets. It's disgusting enough to have them pee everywhere. In addition most people don't pick up poop either
- Following local rules and regulations

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Animal welfare first, less regulation.
- Looking after your pets and respecting your neighbours and neighbourhood. Keeping pets under control and not allowing them to bother others while keeping your pets active and cared for
- Take care of your pet and do not be a problems for others
- making sure you animal is provided for, kept safe and contolled
- Taking care of your pet and not infringing on those who do not have pets.
- Housing happy, healthy, socially appropriate dogs and cats.
- It means taking care of your animal and training it properly.
- Pet owners following current bylaws and rules.
- Making sure your pet does not affect others, ie excessive barking, not cleaning up after your dog
- Housing happy, healthy, socially appropriate dogs and cats. I live in a multi dwelling condo complex with large dogs. The new bylaw should limit the size of dogs allowed in apartment complexes. Almost all the large dogs are reactive and have the tendency to be aggressive to both people and other dog
- Follow City Bylaws and provide ness
Follow Cit Bylaws and provide care and food like you would to any of family member. Only have pets you can afford and give time, affection and attention. Be able to own Hens, small goat and pony's. Vicious breeds of dogs should be banned and stay outside city
- Not only providing the minimum level of care to our pets but providing what they need to live meaningful healthy happy lives
- Most important is to have pets under control at all times. Obey the existing leash laws for both dogs and cats. Many neighbors are not considerate allowing their dogs to bark loudly in the yards for often hours. Responsible pet owners should quiet them down.
- Taking responsibility for your animal such the safety of your pet and the communities you visit with your pet. Also the community you live within is comfortable with your pet and not bothered by your pet. It means cleaning up after your pet, and managing interactions with other animals.
- Picking up after your pet. Having your pet on leash at ALL times unless in a designated dog park. As a dog owner I am tired of asking other pet owners to put their dogs on leash and pick up after them. Penalties should be stiffer and more staff to enforce it.
- Providing the best care and environment for your pets are raising them responsibly to coexist with others.
- cleaning up for pet. making sure it is well looked after and cared for. making sure it isnt a problem for neighbours
- Abiding by the rules set out for ownership of an animal, as well as the care and well being of the animal.
- Framework to ensure the right owners, have the right animals (and number of animals), In the right places (mastiff in a studio apartment not great) and that behaviours of pet and owner do not negatively effect those around them.

- Knowing your own dogs limits. Is the dog park right for your dog. Do you have a recall before taking off leash? Does your dog like other people and dogs ? Haveing respect for other people and there dogs. Do you have poo bags. Having good communication with other dog owners
- It means that people don't have a zoo at home that runs into everybody's backyard. Because not all people have same common sense , amount pets per household should be restricted and for sure , no birds or such allowed.
- It means being responsible for making sure my dog is under control (does not mean on a leash) when other people or animals are around. It means picking up and disposing of dog poop. I strongly believe there should be more tolerance for dogs being allowed off-leash in all parks for dogs in control
- Exercising pets (dogs) with their safety in mind, which ideally ensures safety of others. Off-leash areas with trails to explore. Plenty of garbage cans throughout a dog-friendly area, not just at entrances. City knowing the usage of an area before putting up restricting signage.
- Care and compassion and proper education on breed responsibility. It also means having accessible spaces for dogs to be off leash all over the city. Also, more pet friendly options and mandates in apartments and bylaws. This city is crazy anti-dog.
- Providing a suitable home for pets with adequate basic needs which does not infringe on others property.
- well behaved licensed healthy safe dogs should be granted access to more places so owners can take with them, i really appreciate that dogs are allowed on public transit! maybe can work towards more type of places/business allowing dogs while making public more comfortable with dogs around
- A happy, healthy and safe pet. I'm responsible for all of the before mentioned.
- Being responsible means not letting your cats roam free to poop in my yard,kill the birds that feed in my yard,and torment my dogs.it means licensing your pet,chipping or tattooing your pet and not letting your dog roam free if your not in an unleashed area.
- Being able to command your dog and have it respond. Picking up after your dog. Making sure your pet is healthy. Having space in ur home for them. Afford them too.
- Providing a loving, safe and enriched environment for your animal.
- To me it means that people have been screened for pet ownership and educated properly on proper and more ethical ownership. For ex. pet stores not just selling to anyone but making sure they have proper education for the pet they are selling. Especially for dogs and the issues with backyard breeding
- People with animals are responsible to control them in public at all times. I don't like dogs coming up to me in stores/ people putting them in shopping carts & then I happen to use the same cart with all their fur in it because I am very allergic to animals with hair/fur.No animals in public stores
- First of all, PETS! NOT livestock, not camels, not coyotes, nor elk, pigs or humpback whales.
- Person that respects other people's property & space when having a pet. What you do with your pet on your property is up to you, but get off mine. Take your animal to the park, and obey leash laws on the way! Too many dogs running free around the owners. Control your animals people!
- Giving your furbabies yearly vaccines

Exercise daily by going to dog parks

Proper tagging and updated info

- Enjoying your pet but not annoying the neighbors excessively.
- Dogs on leash when walking, pickup poop, and control your pet. No chickens or farm animals in city!
- Responsible Pet Ownership to me means, providing an animal with food, shelter, veterinary care, and love.
- Spay and neutering your pet, training and caring for it for its whole life. Picking up after it on walks, under control. Being quick to report if it's lost and trying to find it.
animals not left unattended or tied and if it has been aggressive, seek a behaviourist or use a muzzle when away
- Drug dealers don't get to train dogs to be violent anymore. That's a life sentence for that animal.
Dog owners do a better job of cleaning up their feces.
Not trying to pass pets off as support animals.
Lower fines and fees for pet and lost pet issues from the City / Humane Society.
- You pick up the pets poop, you bring them in when it's cold outside, you make sure that you are providing the animal with what they need. You make sure the pet feels happy, comfortable and loved.
- Taking care of your pet(s) in every aspect
- It means providing for the health and safety of the pet in your care and ensuring your pet does not cause damage or distress to any other person or property.
- You have a conditions to treat nice your pets and provide what they need and most important understanding that a pet is not a toy so we can not let behind.
- People who look after and clean up after their animals in public spaces, and train them sufficiently to not cause problems for others.
- Training, leading and living with animals respectfully for everyone.
- WeNeedToChangeTheLegalLanguageRegardingDomesticPetsFromAn"Ownership"OrientationToA"Guardianship"Relationship.PetsShouldNotBeIdentifiedAsProperty;RatherTheyShouldBeLegallyRecognizedAsSentientBeingsAndTreatedUnderTheLawAsSuchToImproveHowSocietyInteractsWithThemInBothPositiveAndNegativeSituations.
- Having pets does not disrupt neighbors' lives i.e. number of dogs should be limited, cats not running loose, picking up after dogs, keeping dogs on leash except in designated areas - not park/playground areas, not letting pets chase wildlife..
- as a dog owner, it means having a well-behaved, under-control dog in your own yard, when on walks either on or off leash. This includes picking up waste and understanding bad dog behaviour. I find too many owners downplay aggressive and dominant behaviours.
- Pets are like furry, four-legged children. If everyone who has pets looked at themselves as "Pet Parents" instead of just owners, their fur babies would have all the love & attention they need.
- A healthy and happy animal that is getting the care it requires as well as respectful of public places
- Knowing the rules, bylaws and holding those that break them responsible (owner not pet)

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- The pet is happy healthy and the family/person can provide for it
- Responsible pet ownership means that inam responsible for the health and welfare of my pets.
- providing proper care for a pet (proper diet, medical care, exercise, training); making sure your pet does not disturb others (minimize barking, keep dog onleash and under control at all times); know and respect the bylaw (keep pets away from prohibited areas - schools, sports fields, playgrounds..)
- To own a pet (one or two or more) and to be responsible for their needs and their interaction with other pets, humans and the environment with no need for fees or regulations. Anything besides that means that we are politicians' pets under government vision.
- Responsible pet ownership means understanding and adhering to the rules set out in the by-laws. It means being respectful that others may be afraid of your pet even if it is "friendly". Understanding that wildlife in the city takes precedence over your need to let your pet wander or be off-leash.
- responsible pet ownership, is not letting your cat roam the neighbourhood leaving presents for your neighbours. ensuring your animals are taken care of and not bothering the neighbours barking or feces from all animals is cleaned up, reducing smells. I am not a robot 4 times so far
- Understanding the rules, and following them.
- Ensuring that Pets, Owners and the public are all represented and treated fairly
- Obeying the laws and bylaws surrounding pets. Like have them on leash in off leash areas. Cleaning up after them on walks and when off leash. Making sure they are not put in harm or anyone else's pet or any person is ever put in harm's way either.
- Just like being a parent. Need to always be res[ponsible
- Keeping your pet safe from others. Keeping others safe from your pet. Cleaning up after your pet. Catering for your pet.
- Reducing stray and homeless animals and having all animals be vaccinated to prevent the spread of disease.
- Taking good care of the physical and emotional needs of your pet while being considerate of the people and other animals in your vicinity.
- PROBLEM: Dog walkers not in control of their charges. Maybe up to 8 dogs but chatting on cell phone and not picking up (or not seeing it). Licensing - permit - bonding - taxes paid....not in many cases! Also some larger breeds should not be off leash period.
- Pets are provided adequate nutrition, kept on owner's property and don't make excessive noise (dogs in a yard barking at everyone who walks by is excessive, or that regularly make loud noises in offense of noise bylaw are a problem)
- Responsible pet ownership means that I take responsibility for my pet/s health and well being as well as their behaviour toward/affecting others, their pets (if they have them), and people's property or space. (e.g. no wandering pets)
- When you take on adopting an animal, he/she is now part of your family and must be taken care of and loved as your own flesh and blood. Too many irresponsible persons are adopting and surrendering at the first chance when behaviour training or spaying/neutering or house breaking becomes inconvenient

- Rules that are enforced, with fines that are actually given to pet owners who do not follow the laws. If not enforced, people will continue to do what they want knowing there is no consequence. Roaming cats, not cleaning up after their dogs and barking dogs.
- 1. Caring for the physical and emotional well-being of your pet (training, environment, food, medical attention, enrichment, exercise, attention).
2. Being responsible for your pet (picking up poop, training to ensure pet is safe to be around if you are taking them into public spaces).
- Keeping out pets under control while respecting our neighbors and property when we are out and about.
- Everyone is responsible for his/her own pets i.e. cleaning up after them, making sure they are always under control. And not ignoring the animal who needs company e.g. turning dog loose in off-leash park and then sticking nose into cell phone!!!
- In addition to all my responses, I believe all Off-Leash dog areas should be fenced.
- That I take good care of my pet - see that it goes to the vet regularly, is up to date on vaccinations and, make the difficult choice when the time comes to have it euthanized rather than suffer.
- Loving and caring for your pet as though it is a family member. Providing all the necessities of life for your pet & abiding by the City regulations.
- Licensing our dogs, cleaning up after them and keeping them under control and leashed
- Caring for your pet, ensuring they have proper health, diet, exercise, love and support. Ensure you do what is right for them instead of what the norm is, we shouldn't be sheep and just follow the pack. Be smart, and make good choices for both you and your pet.
- Pets - incl cats on leashes
People clean up after their pet
Barking animals are to be controlled
Maximum number of dogs/cats per household
- Engaged ownership considerate of all citizens of Calgary while providing the best experience for your pet and others enjoying our outdoor spaces.
- Your animal is always under your control, not wandering loose, and part of the family.
- Pets on leashes in all areas except dog parks. Fines for those that allow pets off leash and do not pick up after them
- Treating your pet like a family member. Ensuring the impact on your neighbors and community is positive and never intrudes on their rights.
- It means caring for my pet while following all bylaws about on leash areas, picking up his poop, etc, and also understanding that there are people who do not wish to be greeted by my dog.
- Owners owning their pet actions.
- Owning a pet is a privilege. Pet owners must ensure ALL pets are licensed, under control at all times and not be allowed to negatively impact other people, animals and the environment.
- A pet owner who looks after their pet inside and outside of the residence.

- Spaying and neutering your pets, only owning as many as are within your means. I have multiple pets and care for them extremely well, yet someone can have just one and be a terrible, irresponsible owner. Responsible is seeking medical care when required. It's not letting your indoor cat outside.
- Keeping animals that do no harm to other people or their property.
- Controlling the pet so that it does not negatively impact other Calgarians or our City wildlife and botany. e.g. Clean up dog feces, keep dogs under control when outside the home, keep cats on property.
- Owners have personal control over their pet, pick up after their pet (including cats), animals are leashed in all areas (except off-leash areas). It also means that a person is mentally and physically equipped to care for the animal, and perhaps even trained to handle a difficult breed (dog)
- Having the right to take my dog to city of Calgary facilities like soccer centers. The city shouldnt punish people for having dogs by banning them from publicly funded spaces.
- Making sure that your pet has a valid licence, regular vet check ups, and is kept in a fenced back yard. Picking up after your dog when it messes in someone's front yard. If you have a particularly loud dog, not letting them stay outside and bark if you're not home. Not letting cats roam!
- Taking care of your pets. Giving them a good quality of life. Respecting your neighbours in regards to your pets.
- Leashing your pup in all areas that are not "offleash". Picking up after your pets. More garbages in our cities parks and fish creek park would help with this issue.
- 1. picking up your dogs poop. 2. having control of your dog 3. well trained 4. listening to other owners about their dog personalities (ex: my dog is nervous around people. Please don't pet my dog. response: it's okay, all dogs love me)
- Being able to provide a safe and healthy environment for pets, owners and others who might have interactions. Pets in public need to be under control at all times, either through proper training, leash control or containment. Cleaning up after the pets and noise control is a requirement.
- Someone that takes care of the mental and physical needs of their pet while adhering to applicable legislation.
- Properly taking care of your animals by licensing them, providing care , being able to financially take care of them and ensuring they have space
- Taking care of my dog to the best of my abilities as well as giving her the best experience she can have
- I think responsible pet ownership is tending to the behavior and health needs of your dog at all times. Making sure you follow the bi-laws, keeping your dog on a leash where applicable, getting your dog licensed, up to date on vaccines and vet visits. You should treat your dog like a family member.
- It means taking care to be thoughtful, to plan, to commit to training good citizen behaviour (canines) and respecting others property (canines and felines), to follow all norms and bylaws in good faith and above all to care for and nurture the pets who cannot speak for themselves.

- Being aware of your pets health, behaviour and social-emotional-physical well being. As a pet owner it is imperative that I know what my dog is capable of and the environment she is in - I am trusting fellow pet owners are doing the same and never putting my dog at any risk.
- Being accountable and aware of your pet at all times. Caring for your pet to the best of your abilities and seeking supports if needed. Always acting in the best interest of your pet.
- It means understanding that we all live together in this city and that both my pet and me can impact others as others and their pets impact me
- An animal is being taken care of in a loving home. Fully licensed and vetted. Functioning as respectful citizens.
- To me it means total care. Licensing, exercise, affection, training, grooming, socialization.
- Trained, well-controlled pets sharing public environments. Always being proactive in cleaning up after pets and being aware of hazards for your pet and others.
- People taking care of their pet and following rules. There is no need to implement licensing as it will add to administrative cost without much benefit. I see most pet owners follow rules. There should be tickets for those who violate rules. Bad vicious breeds.
- Providing food, shelter, exercise, companionship and training so my pet is well mannered and social
- Taking responsibility when your pet does something they shouldn't- biting, destroying property, etc. Also picking up after your pet, and keeping them on a leash when outside.
- Looking after your pet and not allowing it to be roaming around the neighborhood
- Pet ownership means everything to me/us. Our two little dogs are our babies and we love them ever so much and don't know what we'd do without them. Being responsible means raising healthy pets and cleaning up after them, like we were never there.
- I am a dog owner. To me, dog ownership means give my dog proper training, and register my dog (should be mandatory). Clean up after my dog public, keep my dog away from dogs that appear aggressive.
- "pick up poop.
- Ask if it's ok for a dog to approach you or your dog when in leash areas.
- Keep off leash areas they are the best.
- Make sure people have a basic knowledge of how dogs tell Other dogs they don't like Something. E.g growling. Growling is ok - it's a warning for them to stop."
- not letting your dog defecate on your neighbors lawn to kill the grass they work hard to keep looking nice. Also dispose of your dogs feces in your own garbage bin, not your neighbors to smell when they open it
- Rich people think they don't need to pick up dog poop.
- dogs should not be allowed to pee on neighbors grass
- Proper shelter food exercise socialization Affordable Veterinary bills. No licensing for responsible owners who microchip spay and neuter. Living with Wildlife, as Calgary Council continues to not listen to build up but to expand and take away the wildlife habitats. Limit number of pets per househo

- Caring for your pet humanely.
- It means having a trained and socialized dog who is licensed and free of communicable diseases. It means owners who take ownership seriously by having full control of their dog; leashing; and picking up after their pet. It means that I wouldn't see so many cats illegally running around.
- Keeping you pet healthy and friendly. And picking up your dog shit.
- Ability to adequately feed, care, exercise, provide shelter & seek appropriate vet advice for the animals in your care
- Ensuring the animal is well cared for, all medical needs & sustenance needs are met and the animal is not encroaching on others space.
- Adequate care for the physical and emotional well-being of pets. Keeping a clean and safe environment for the pet and community. Keeping pets reasonably quiet, well-socialized, on-leash where needed.
- Ensuring the welfare and safety of a an inclusive list of animal species and the community that encounters them.
- It means that a pet owner should control their pet at all times. Also aggressive dogs at an off leash dog park should be not allowed and a phone number to report them easily visible .Also I think that there should be doggie poop bags available at the parks and disposal sites along sidewalks .
- That the person/people who own the pet can 1. Afford it 2. Mature enough to ensure proper training is provided 3. Ensure that the well being of the animal is met 4. Clean up after them
- I would LOVE to have a law that one person cannot walk more than 4 dogs at one time. It is dangerous to both the dogs and people. There are many, many reasons why this would be a logical and important law. Please consider
- Responsible pet owner ship means that you take proper care of your animals with food, affection and veterinary care. It also means your pet does no harm to others. Responsible pet ownership also means cleaning up after your pet and controlling your pet. No overbreeding.
- " - Taking responsibility for the actions of your pet i.e. pick up poop
- - Ensuring that your pet is provided with proper health care, i.e. food, water, shelter, appropriate level of exercise, regular visits to the veterinarian, vaccinations (or titers)"
- Being allowed to own one or more of a variety of animals while providing them with adequate food, shelter and care. It also goes hand in hand with being a responsible neighbor and ensuring there is limited impact to neighbors for having that animal.
- Pet of your choice and raise it ethically & responsibly. Dog, cat, hamster, hen... stop discriminating against pets.
- Keeping your pet on a leash and under your control. Pick up after your pet
- Dog and owner able to follow the ten skills of the canine good citizen as outlined by the American kennel association
- Putting the interests of your animal ahead of your own. Taking care to ensure you act responsibly with your animal so that they have the best life and health possible. Accepting them in public spaces and knowing animals will leave a mark but that the positive benefits far outweigh the small cost.

- Responsible pet ownership is taking responsibility for your pet because they depend on you for everything. It is making sure you don't put them in compromising situations and doing all that you can to keep them safe and healthy
- Dog that is trained and listens well to owner.
- Responsible pet ownership to me means people being in control and aware of their pets at all times, on leash, off leash, at home or anywhere you take your pet, as if they were your own children, which they basically are.
- Take care of your pet, clean up after your pet, train
- Urban bee keeping
- People who take proper care of their animals, including how their animal impacts others (picking up waste, limiting unnecessary noise, and ensuring safety of others).
- Pets live with people who care and love them. They have manners and enhance family harmony.
- Spay/neuter your pets, ability to care and provide high quality of life, taking care and responsibility for pet and their actions, training pets, picking up after them
- Ensuring my dog is up to date on vaccinations, neutering/spaying my dog, picking up after my dog. Walking my dog on leash for his safety and others.
- People taking responsibility for their pets welfare and wild life being looked after as well.
- Ensuring the health, wellness, and safety of pets, and those who come in contact with them.
- It doesn't matter how many you own as long as they are kept healthy and in an environment safe for their needs.
- Making sure the needs of the pet are met, physically and emotionally. Being caring and unharmed towards a pet/any animal
- "knowing yr pets instinctual behaviour, breed behaviour., Then personality behaviour.
- water food love, not left for too long. not left outside. taking time to teach yr dog good behavior."
- Not letting your cat roam free through your neighborhood. Keeping your dog on a leash, cleaning up after both your cat and your dog, not tossing your dog waste in other people's black bins (unless it's getting picked up that day)
- "expect pet owners to take a three hour online course covering the basics On community parks etiquette
- Responsibility for your animal
- Continue to offer a spay and neuter program to low income families
- Having a pet is awesome however they must be social and securely monitored"
- Having pets taking care of them picking up after them making sure they are not a nuisance to neighbors. Keeping them from excessive barking or howling (cats). I am fine with dogs outside as long as they have appropriate shelter and water. Some dogs do not like being in house. Licensing fees fair
- I think this means when pets and people live together and we are respectful of all of our needs.

- being an active participant with your pet, that includes walking, jogging, biking, skijoring, sledding, rollerblading, carting. We all try to live a more active healthy lifestyle and having our best friends (pets) being part of that is not only a healthy alternate but can build a stronger bond.
- Better Mental Health, Meeting people and neighbours, exercise, living outside
- The city needs to deal with cats and rabbits throughout the city. Also 311 needs better training
- Cleaning up after your pet and being aware of your surroundings while out with your pet. And providing unconditional love :)
- Other than the providing love, attention and the necessities for life, it means cleaning up after your pet, keeping control of your pet and respecting those around you.
- Being a responsible pet owner means setting your pet up for success. This includes providing structure, training and food for your pets.
- Taking responsibility for the well being of the animal. Providing the animal with the proper necessities at all times.
- Farm animals do not belong in calgary and number of dogs and cats should be limited
- It involves educating non pet owners about the importance of ensuring the needs and requirements for pets to exercise, and have social interactions with other pets and the important role that parks, and open spaces throughout the city plays in the physical and mental well being of urban pets.
- Being a responsible pet owner while making sure that pet does not infringe on neighbours standard of living.
- People need to keep their dogs are under control at off leash parks, and they should be walking their dogs on leash when outside of off leash areas. Owners should pick up after their pets; the city NEEDS to enforce this better! I often have to clean up dog poop on my lawn due to lazy pet owners.
- It means financially, mentally and physically taking care of your pet. Providing a good safe home, giving them love and attention, food/water and medical care if needed.
- Taking care of the animals needs first and being able to provide a safe, healthy, and loving home.
- "clean up behind your pets -even in dog parks
- be in control of your dog at all times even in dog parks - dogs must not jump against other users of park and dogs certainly should not bite or nip other users- got bitten the other day. Improve surveillance of off-leash parks and issue fines."
- "Responsible pet ownership means:
  - - dogs are trained and follow obedience commands in real life scenarios
  - - pets are kept in good health and show no signs of abuse
  - - pets are cleaned up after including at home/yards
  - - pets will not harm humans
  - - pets are not a threat to other pets and wildlife"
- Means pet owners respect others in the way they do not leave their dog(s) in the yard barking all hours of the day. And letting their felines roam around the neighbour in people's backyard, into flowers bed, chasing birds etc.

- Providing a safe and happy environment for a pet to live in- adequate socialization, medical care & being responsible for the actions of your pet. This means cleaning up after your pet & ensuring it is safe around people & other animals. I think bylaw officers need more presence at off leash parks.
- Keeping your animal safe and cared for - regardless of behaviour and where you live
- Taking good care of any animal, providing food & warm accommodation on your own property. This includes picking up feces on your own property & when out walking in public areas.
- I prefer to use guardian and companion over the word "PET". i am my dogs guardian, ownership implies we can do whatever we want to the animal including mistreatment. I am responsible for giving my dog the best care and medical and live in my home as part of the family.
- Providing for the welfare of the animal. Minimizing the animal's impact on those around you (noise, smell, hygiene, etc.)
- "It means :
- -picking up after your pet
- -not leaving your pet unsupervised for long periods of time outside
- - only socializing your pet should they have received training for proper behaviour (I.e don't take an aggressive dog to the dog park).
- -staying up to date with all vaccinations"
- Taking care of your pet, and being a good neighbour
- Pickup the poops of the dogs even in winter time.
- I 100% agree with the 5 principles of the responsible pet ownership bylaws. To me it comes down to how well the animals are cared for physically, mentally, and legally. A responsible owner does not leave poop everywhere, let their animals kill wildlife, produce unwanted babies, etc.
- Being responsible in caring for your pet. Keeping cats indoors, spay/neutering your animals. Having well behaved dogs under your control at all times.
- Picking up after your pet to keep public areas clean. Making sure your pet is as well cared for as the rest of your family, if not better because they can't speak for themselves. Keeping pets leashed at all times unless in an off leash area. Being accountable for your pets actions towards others.
- It means: cleaning up after your dog while walking them. It means keeping them under control in the yard or on walks, so short leash if they want to dart out to another dog, or they go uts when they see another dog. Keeping the barking outside to a minimum. Not locked in a hot or freezing car.
- Pet owners that respect Animal Rights, follows the City of Calgary Bylaws and takes ownership of the animals actions.
- Cleaning up after them. Making sure my pet is fed and exercised and has a good life
- "It would be nice to see people getting a fine for not picking up their pets waste.
- My neighborhood is covered in feces"
- It means that owners assume social and financial responsibility for their pet in public locations the same way they would be responsible for a minor child's behaviour.
- Giving pets the same care and consideration you would give to any valued part of the family. Doing as much as possible to ensuring that your pet is not a negative impact on others.

- " -Citizens acting as stewards of the lives in our care.
- -Supporting pet owners so that they can provide for the physical and emotional needs of animals in urban spaces
- -Supporting healthy pet ownership for renters, unhoused populations and low SES groups not just homeowners"
- It means following the animal by-laws, respecting other's property when out with your pet in the community, and in general being accountable for the behavior and health and well being of your pet.
- "Keeping your pets safe and following the bylaws in place by the city.
- Dogs have to remain in the house or yard at all times and are not to roam free. If the city picks them up there is a significant fine. The same should be followed for cat owners. There are way more cats running free than dogs."
- Responsible ownership is three fold, what is good for the owner, the community and the dog. Unfortunately, many people think responsible has to do with the number of animals or the breed of animal. Responsible ownership starts with education
- Providing a safe and loving home. Responsible pet parents
- Looking after care, health and nourishment.
- it means taking good care of the pet, including feeding it properly, taking it to veterinary if it is sick or injured and not bothering other people.
- Treatment of animals and your community.
- I believe apartments should allow tenants to have pet cats as they are important for the well being of many people particularly seniors . Cats should be spayed or neutered regardless or the type of home they live in.
- Keeping your pets safe and properly cared for.
- Maintaining and promoting healthy and well balanced companion animals that integrate well into the community
- "Train dogs to not bark, not jump on people, keep dogs away from others as not everyone likes your pet even if it is friendly. Pick up your pets waste. Keep dogs on a leash.
- Barking dogs are the biggest annoyance."
- Not the government's business
- Common sense and courtesy! I see owner leave their dogs off leash all the time, thinking they are above the rules and they have the best trained dogs. Keep your dogs on leashes unless otherwise posted. The other obvious problem is not picking up after your dog in public parks.
- Taking care of any pet, providing them with love, food, shelter. Making sure they don't hurt/bite anyone, keeping them on a leash when not in an off leash area. Also picking up their feces and keeping a valid city license.
- I do not want to see pigeons and chickens all over the place. Bees ok, but only if they are well cared for and not affected with any type of hive diseases. I don't mind coyotes and bobcats being around. I wish Rottweilers and other dangerous dogs were not allowed in the city.
- Ensuring your pet is safe as well as other animals and people are kept safe.

- A responsible pet owner is someone who ensures that the health, feeding and adequate shelter of their pet is provided. They will not abuse or hoards pets. They will respect others. in regards to managing pet behaviour such as soiling in other yards, running loose, barking or threatening behaviour.
- A). Heavy fines for people NOT picking up after their dogs. In the off leash in Woodbine it is disgusting and it is not little dogs- more like elephants! You cannot miss big dog poop! NO bicycles through off leash- they won't go slow and are so rude and abusive
- Ensuring my pet does not interfere with other people or their animals. Cats should not be allowed to roam freely outside and aggressive dogs should be tethered and completely under control
- Ensure the pet does not run free except in designated pet areas. Owner cleans up after the animal & pets do not allow pets to defecate on private property. Ensure animals are licensed, inoculated & trained to interact with other animals. Owners need to be educated on appropriate animal ownership.
- If you are a pet owner, you need to be as physically fit as your pet breed requires. It's not ok to let your dog run beside the car while you drive on the outskirts of the city or beside a park!
- Keeping animals in a way that doesn't cause harm to them, people, other creatures, or the spaces they use.
- Responsible pet ownership to me means that individuals are able to ensure that they are able to care and have control of their animal in a manner that does not cause others concern or issues. This is in their residence as well as open areas.
- Taking responsibility for their behavior and their mess.
- Caring for an animal in a responsible and respectful way within the community
- I WOULD LIKE TO SEE CAT OWNERS HELD MORE RESPONSIBLE WHEN THIER PETS ROAM OUT OF THIER YARD. THEY DEFICATE IN FLOWER BEDS AND VEGTABLE GARDENS, AS WELL AS COME INTO MY YARD AND DISTURB MY DOGS CAUSING THEM TO BARK AND BE STRESSED. I WOULD LIKE OPTIONS TO DEAL WITH A WANDERING CAT ON MY PROPERTY.
- "pets contained on owners property securely and safely or leashed in public
- owners should be responsible for the waste their pets produce, Damage done properties RE: repay/fix. No owner should have more than two pets at a time to prevent hording. Neutering/,spaying adoptions should not be so costly"
- Providing adequate housing and food. Fixing or preventing accidental babies. Making sure the pet is safe and safe to others. Providing love and affection for the pet
- Enjoying and caring for another sentient being as part of ones family. Ensuring that all needs of the pet are looked after, nourishment attention, training and doing so with attention and care for our neighbours.
- Not allowing their cats to roam around the neighbourhood and poop in my yard.
- Caring for pets, to keep them healthy asks safe, while also keeping people and other animals that come into contact with my pets safe.

- No tethering. Mandatory microchipping and licensing of dogs and cat. The city to provide filled doggie waste bag dispensers and garbage cans at all dog parks. Extremely tough fines or jail for animal abuse. Investigate and enforce prolonged or excessive barking.
- Providing a safe and caring environment to a pet where it can thrive in all manners. To ensure that your pet is also not a nuisance to others in any way - noise, cleaning up after it etc...
- Keep dogs on leash at all times, except in designated off leash areas. This will ensure the safety of you, your dog, and others nearby.
- Not chaining pet up but keeping on the property. Have hours within dogs can bark without owners worrying about the city coming.
- Boyh animal and human having their needs met while being able to peacefully co-exist with neighbours. Cleaning up after pets is essential.
- Off leash areas should not be directly beside playgrounds. Dog feces on bike paths, side walks, and off leash areas should be picked up. Dogs that run up to children and challenge them should not be allowed in the park.
- It means that when irresponsible pet owners break laws...we do not need MORE laws. Those same people will not obey the new laws that every one that is responsible now have follow. Responsible pet owner means look after your animal and all that it does outside of your house.
- Being responsible for your pet's behavior; i.e., making sure your pet is not disturbing others, such as excessive barking, meowing, jumping on other people. Ensure you clean up your pet's waste and that they are on a leash in areas that are not designated off leash.
- Providing food, shelter, and medical care for your pet. Keeping your animals safe and keeping others safe from your animals
- Adequate food, water, bedding, toilet area obedience training, exercise, (1-2 daily walks) indoor play & handling, minimal barking (5 - 10 min. max ) indoors or outdoors
- Caring for their needs and keeping them healthy and safe, spay/neuter, ensuring they are not causing problems for others.
- I do not agree with "outdoor cats". If they are your pet, they live in your home. If you let them out to do as they please, they are a strange animal that you have befriended and you might as well domesticate a skunk, beaver or coyote since there is such an increase in the wild population.
- Licensing pets is good. Continue with accessible training and focus on educating PEOPLE. Calgary should be MORE pet friendly. Pets are some considered children to some and they should have more opportunities to bring them out. More public areas should allow dogs.
- All I am going to say is this province is a scam allowing renters to charge fees because someone owns a pet. Disgusting.
- "Keeps their pet in their house if it makes noise - ie. does not leave it outside to bark, wail, screech..."
- Keeps their pet secured IN their yard (cats are the number one reason many natural and important wild birds are becoming endangered) (Vicious attack dogs in cages in yard) All dogs on leash."
- Care and commitment to your animals

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Knowing that just because your dog is "friendly", doesn't mean it can be off-leash in a leashed area. This causes a problem for other responsible owners. Owners need to be responsible for abiding by the laws.
- Responsibility and care for your animals. Making them part of your life.
- Not allowing your dog to hurt others. To protect your dog, cat, etc. from danger, knowing your surroundings. Not allowing pets to chase, attack, kill wildlife. Not dumping them, abandoning them and picking up after them. Know your surroundings and respect the natural areas by having them on-leash.
- Choosing the right animal for your lifestyle. Providing for all your pet's needs. Respecting other animals and people in public places (e.g. on-leash, in control, clean up after, )
- It means keeping off-leash areas clean and safe. Dog walkers should not be allowed to bring more than FOUR dogs off-leash unless licensed to do so. Individual citizens pay taxes AND keep parks clean and safe. Dog walking services do neither.
- That all pets in a household are looked after, have clean bedding and fed a healthy diet in addition to regular vet checks to ensure health.
- First than anything being responsible with my pet!
- A commitment to care for the needs of the pet for the length of its natural life. Ensuring your pet does not interfere with the normal enjoyment of life of others.
- I'd like to see fines enforced for people who purposely let their cats outside. My neighbour doesn't care. I told her we have a bylaw. So her cat goes all over my flower bed and around the outside. Also I'd like to see more from the city to enforce owners to get a pet license for cats.
- Providing a good quality of life and care to your pet while taking reasonable actions to minimize their impact on others.
- Taking responsibility for my animals that they are well cared for and not a nuisance to my neighbors.
- Proper and responsible care of your pet while obeying city bylaws.
- It means I can access on-leash parks and off-leash areas, following the rules, and there is infrastructure to support these activities. For example, in both types of areas, the City would provide garbage cans to make it easy to dispose of dog poop.
- understanding the behaviour patterns that dogs have and learning to live with your dog. Sharing space with others that do or don't have dogs.
- Ensuring my pet has food, water, shelter and love as well as following current city bylaws, respecting fellow pet owners and those who are not fond of animals.
- Don't see anywhere else to put this, but dogs off-leash in non off-leash areas needs to be addressed. I have a dog that was attacked while on-leash in an on-leash area by a dog that was off-leash. This has changed her and now she is fearful reactive which is different than aggressive/vicious.
- It means treat your pets like family. Take care of both their physical and mental health. It means a lot of time outdoors on walks, keeping them under control and away from any circumstances where they could be harmed or cause harm. And most importantly, pick up the poop!
- "Keeping pets under control at all times.

- Cleaning up after your pet
- Keeping your pet healthy with access to food, water and shelter
- Not allowing dogs to be kept outside, barking and disturbing others. Not matter the time of day."
- The owner of three dogs off-leash attacked me in Edworthy Park, which is connected to an off-leash area. Dogs should not be allowed in City parks to defecate and urinate where kids play. Owners are NOT cleaning up after their dogs.
- Owner behaviour: keeping dogs on leash, picking up droppings and PROPERLY disposing of them, eliminate ALL off-leash areas in public parks (owners don't obey signage) especially in Nose Hill Park. I have not visited that park in two years due to free-running dogs and dog crap on the walkways.
- Pet ownership to me means taking every available step to ensure the pet is happy and healthy. That means taking into serious consideration whether you are financially and logistically prepared for a pet, and extends to everything including behavior classes if necessary, good food, and vet care
- It means that I don't have to listen to others dogs barking all night and I am free from the smell of a kennel or run. It also means that the owners of pets control the numbers involved. Maintaining a good understanding of their neighbours feelings
- That your dog is under control at all times. You always pick up after your dog. you train your dog to be friendly. you respect the environment in which you walk your dog, you keep your dog inoculated against the common diseases.
- Caring for your pet; meeting veterinary, dietary and mental enrichment needs. Reducing human and pet negative interactions. Having pet under your control.
- Taking care of your pet to make sure their needs are met while also leaving your environment the way you found it.
- Family, responsibility, happiness, pride, and environmental stewardship.
- Doing what is good for your animals health and well being while being considerate of others
- Responsible pet ownership is someone who does activities with their dogs in a responsible way, ensuring their dog gets enough mental and physical enrichment, picking up after their dogs, taking them for continued education, and keeping them safe and not loose.
- You are "Liable", rather than guidance
- Providing a safe, nurturing home for your pet. Up to date vaccinations. Clean up after them when on a walk or in the dog park. Fenced yard if you let them out.
- Ensuring that the pet is well taken care of, and that the pet doesn't negatively impact anyone
- We do not believe that retail establishments should sell pets that have been bred for re-sale. Pet-related stores should partner with registered not-for-profit organizations to host rescued animals currently up for adoption. This would benefit the business and the organization.
- Having a companion and ensuring proper care for them
- This means that the pet is part of your family and enjoys all the benefits that entails. Warmth, love, food, medical needs, stability, old age care and responsible life decisions. It is a commitment and a privilege to have a pet.

- 3
- Taking care of your pet and ensuring the health, comfort, and happiness of your pet as well as safety of the public.
- Animals, not matter the number, are well looked after, loved, provided clean and safe environment. All animals be registered with the city.
- Being a proper parent is expected, whether animal or human. Understandably, not every parent is competent, and such bylaws need to be in place, but bylaw officers need to exercise greater tolerance for responsible owners who are not causing anyone issues, aka, chasing someone down for petty ticket
- Making sure your animal has proper living conditions and following the bylaws set in place. ( also picking up after your dog whenever walking)
- Love, care, security. Groomed, fed, trained. Shelter, exercise, socialized.
- It means NOT!!!! Putting a cap on responsible dog owners that is just stupid don't do it
- Providing food, water, safety, shelter and LOVE.
- "Leashing your dog when appropriate. Picking up and disposing of dog waste no matter where you are (off leash and on leash areas). Announcing to on comers with dogs if your dog is friendly or not, especially in off leash areas.
- Having more off leash areas in NW ."
- Picking up after your pet, not abandoning your pet, not letting it roam the neighbourhood.
- Responsible pet ownership means caring for my animals, keeping them safe on a leash out in public and completely under control at dog parks.
- Having a loving and safe home for the animal(s)
- Someone who has control or their pets and is able to provide for them all that they need. Proper food shelter and the ability to cover vet bills
- The same as having children, be it one or 12. No 2 owner is the same and the good pet owners should not be penalized for the bad ones.
- That pet behavior is controlled by the pet owner such that they are not dangerous or disruptive to the quality of life of their neighbours or fellow Calgarians.
- Always cleaning up after your pet, and not letting them jump up on or bother others. Essentially having no negative impact on your community.
- Feeding and caring for the pet to ensure it's health and happiness and to control the pet from disturbing others as much as possible.
- Meaning kept in good health, annual checkups, well exercised and registered with the city!
- " -pick up after your pet, unless the pet has a diarrhea, but don't punish the owner if it's impossible to clean it all.
- -it is ok for a dog to bark if someone approaches your property.
- -If kids can scream for hours playing in the backyard (YES, it happens), why can't a dog bark occasionally?"

- Having the financial, physical and emotional stability to safely care for animals on a day to day basis . Providing them with all of the basic necessities and more, while not being intrusive or bothersome to neighbors and the community.
- It's means not buying pets from retail shops or breeders. There's so many animals at the humane society/ AARCS that you can rescue. Breeders should be shut down and made illegal. Let's adopt the animals that need a home first.
- Walking your dogs on a leash. A lot of people walk their dogs off leash in Dover making an excuses that it's okay because their dog is friendly. My dog is reactive and i have a hard time taking her for a walk because of this. Also, picking up your dogs poop.
- When walking pets on-leash or off, they must be controlled. Responsible pet owners remove their pets' waste and dispose of it properly.
- Having friendly animals that are well behaved. I'm good with a dog being off leash as it is well behaved.
- Taking care of the animal and making sure your pet doesn't disturb people or other animals (including wildlife)
- "Retail establishments should not be allowed to sell pets that have been bred for re-sale.
- Rabbits, Cats, and dogs should not be allowed to roam around without supervision."
- Providing an animal with the best care possible, free from harm and pain as well as keeping those interacting with the animal safe.
- preventative actions and care to animals in the owners care that provides safety and health for the animals, owners and general public.
- To me responsible pet ownership means providing a safe and happy home for your pet, taking nessecary measures to ensure their health and safety. For dogs, having a properly maintained fence so the dog can't escape, proper training so they don't jump up on strangers. For cats, keeping them indoors.
- Owners that provide all basic needs for their pets (Food, Shelter, Water, emotional support/training/wellbeing), and ensure their pets are good pet-citizens.
- "Meeting the 5 freedoms:
- Freedom from hunger and thirst (food and water) All animals deserve access to clean water and a well-balanced, nutritious diet. ...
- Freedom from discomfort (shelter) ...
- Freedom from pain, injury and disease (medical care) ...
- Freedom to express normal behaviour (exercise) ."
- I agree with the way it is currently worded in the bylaw.
- "Picking up after your dog, not letting cats roam off your property.
- Not letting dogs bark all day/ night.
- Keeping dogs on a leash in areas that are not designated off leash."

- Be careful putting too many rules in place because of a vocal minority. Would you rather have animals sitting at home lonely all day without interaction, because you have put too many rules on dog walkers and their business.
- Meeting the five freedoms for your pets
- Being a responsible pet owner means one has done their research into the animal, understands their needs, and has made a time and financial commitment. Commitment to providing the best home environment, structure and discipline, and overall health and well-being. Discipline, exercise, and love.
- Feral cats should be acknowledged. We should support T-N-R (trap-neuter-return) initiatives to humanely manage feral cat populations. Also do not believe that retail establishments should sell pets that have been bred for re-sale. Also should be options for low income to get animals fixed.
- Providing for all of your pets needs and safety for the duration. If it's life.
- Taking proper care of your pets. Take to vets and do everything required to ensure their well being.
- Educating yourself on how to best care for and train your animal, interact appropriately and respectfully with fellow owners
- Ensuring your pets are properly looked after and are loved, and that you are also mindful of other's around you. Cleaning up after your pet always, not just on walks. Your neighbors don't like seeing or smelling yards full of poop. Not allowing your dogs to bark constantly and indoor cats only.
- "License and register your pets
- Permanent identification
- Encourage spay and neuter for all dogs who are not involved in an ethical/reputable and responsible breeding program.
- Savings plans, or pet insurance as a backup plan for pet emergencies
- Train dogs using humane methods"
- Owners who take responsibility for the physical and mental wellbeing for both their pets and other people's pets who might interact with them
- I want stiffer penalties for not picking up dog poop. If you're too lazy to do that, I think you shouldn't own a dog. But removing dogs from lazy owners aside, something needs to be done about all the dog crap I am forced to deal with. (I work outdoors)
- Responsible pet ownership means taking care that your animals do not interfere with other's enjoyment of life, including picking up their poo, not letting them bark too much, etc. Also keeping your pet safe for their own enjoyment of life, ie keeping them safe within your yard or on leash.
- Responsible pet ownership to me means treating your animals as family. As you would for your children, you care for them in all aspects from feeding, to exercising, to cleaning up after them, to loving them and providing them with a safe and secure home life. Registering them and respecting the law.
- People that care for their animals financially, and those who recognize which pets are good with others and provide safe environment for their pet as well as others
- having safe, respectful animals who can co-exist with humans in an urban setting.

- Providing the best possible living conditions for your animals, and be attentive to their physical and emotional needs.
- I think responsible pet ownership means all animals on the property are properly fed, cleaned up after and free from illness, or the illness is being treated.
- "It means caring for your pet emotionally and financially.
- I can have 1 pet and not provide the above. Or I can have 10 and do it."
- Ensuring your pet has food, clean water and a happy healthy environment. Picking up after them and disposing of waste properly. Proper training so that there are no unnecessary accidents, ie; getting out of the yard/running away, friendly encounters with others while out for walks, etc.
- It means making sure that we humanely treat animals, provide clean enclosures/yards, access to high-quality food and water, and that they have shelter, shade, or heat in different weather conditions.
- Good training, respecting others, picking up after your pet
- A person who genuinely cares for their animals. Provides food, shelter, exercise, a clean comfortable living environment, medical care and does not allow animals to be a nuisance to the neighbors with noise or smell.
- A responsible pet owner is someone who treats their pets humanely and lovingly and provides them with proper care. They also ensure that their pets are not a disturbance or a danger to other people.
- Two things. Acting responsibly towards your pet and providing for its physical and emotional needs including getting it fixed and vaccinated and ensuring it cannot leave your property unless on a leash. Secondly, not causing a nuisance to neighbours such as having a barking or aggressive dog.
- Owning a pet that is licensed or microchipped, up to date on shots, well trained and taking responsibility for the pet's behaviour and cleaning up after it.
- Nuisance barking rules should be vastly strengthened similar to other jurisdictions. Our neighbourhood is being ruined by an owner whose dogs bark frequently throughout the day. When politely asked to quiet the dogs the owner said "What are you going to do about it? Huh? What?".
- Taking responsibility for all care and training of your pets
- Nuisance barking rules should be based on unambiguous testable criteria. This lets owners clearly know what's expected of them, and lets annoyed neighbours know their rights. This would prevent conflicts before they occur and make our residential areas more livable.
- Nuisance barking should be defined as more than 10 minutes continuously, or 15 minutes cumulatively within a one hour period, anytime, affecting multiple neighbours. And any barking between 10 PM and 7 AM, even for a few seconds, is an unacceptable nuisance (same as a lawnmower at 2:30 AM!).
- People caring for their animals providing food, water, shelter, training. Cleaning up after their dogs and ensuring good recall in all situations. Not allowing dogs to harass people or wildlife.
- Providing our companions with the care and support needed to have healthy happy lives
- It means that pet owners understand bylaws and adhere to them. That they maintain all yearly vaccinations, sterilize their pets, provide parasitic medication, use positive reinforcement force free trainers and walks and use equipment that doesn't hurt their animals!

- Making sure that the pets, and all the people and property they come into contact with are safe, happy, and healthy.
- Owners that look after their dogs by exercising them everyday, picking up their dogs waste when walking them, and making sure if their dog is aggressive they muzzle the dog when on walks or at dog parks
- No pet or pet owner should negatively impact any other person. This means through noise (barking dogs, roosters), safety (dogs off lease running towards you), annoyance (pigeons next door) or any other impact. An owner can have a pet, but only if it doesn't affect anyone else.
- Providing a caring home for a pet. Ensuring a safe environment for a pet. Cleaning up after pets (dogs on walks etc)
- Cleaning up after all pets. Keeping them safe. Cats stay inside.
- Providing a caring home for the pet. Ensuring a safe environment for the pet. Cleaning up after the pet (dogs on walks etc).
- Responsible pet ownership means that a person takes on the responsibility to meet the needs of the dogs they have just as you would for children. They need to be properly fed, bathed, trained and socialized.
- Always have good shelter, food and water available. Not acquire a pet if you can't afford basic spay/neuter and vet care, emergent care if needed. Have enough time to spend with the pet. Not leaving it alone for long periods of time. Protect the pet and other people from each other.
- That pets are for life and should not be treated as disposable.
- "Non dog owners do not feel threatened by off leash dogs. An off leash dog running up to someone and making contact with them should not be allowed.
- There needs to be a limit to the number of dogs allowed off leash at any time (2)
- There are too many off leash areas in the city."
- Cleaning up after your animals, not letting them free roam, providing proper care (food and vet)
- Caring for the needs of my animal, food, water, shelter, medical, spay or neuter, walk on leash for public safety and clean up after it for public health.
- Picking up feces. Ensuring my dogs recall is good so he doesn't chase bikes or wildlife Yearly vaccinations Walks daily.
- Respect for both the household pet and the guardians of the same. Household pets require a guardian and never an owner!
- Dogs who behave that is owner's have them PROPERLY trained...no jumping, growling,etc to strangers. Pet dogs should not be permitted to be the alpha dog in a household. Pet owners MUST clean up after their pets... even in their own yards... max 1 dog per household...we have too many animals
- Not owning a pitbull
- Cleaning up after your pets, cleaning up after your pets, and cleaning up after your pets! Not leaving messes in the middle of sidewalks. Not allowing them to destroy others' property. Not buying a pet "because they're cute" and then failing to train and care for them properly.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Caring, responsible, understanding towards pets
- Loving and taking care of your pets, which includes feeding, exercising and cleaning up after them.
- Having the time and financial ability to care for animals that provides them a safe, loving and healthy home. Having a pet that does not negatively affect others who live near the pet either by animals vocalizing, excrement or unleashed behavior.
- We have a dog walker, and that service is essential to having a happy relaxed pet. She walks around 8 dogs and always is responsible with them. If the city decreases the number of dogs that can be walked by one person, she will not be able to afford providing this service. I support dog walkers!
- Care of pet proper feeding, water, vet care, walking, picking up after pet. Taking care the pet does not adversely affect others by barking, urinating (cat) on others property. Having control of pet, if prone to jump or bite (muzzle).
- Making sure your pets are licensed and well taken care of
- It is not a term that can be applied to many pet owners. Seeing and experiencing more dogs and cats running free, excrement in parks and private property and way more people owning dogs. Without enforcement or deterrents problems will keep getting worse.
- Providing an appropriate level of care, which includes not only food and shelter, but mental fulfillment and companionship, where applicable, to any and all non-human beings under one's care. Consideration for the community and nearby residents should also be taken into account.
- What it means to me to be a responsible pet owner is providing food, love and any/ all medical needs for your pet. They need a loving home that provides all these things but not only these things. They need walks, car rides, vet visits, family bonding, cozy beds, toys and much much more.
- It means someone who licenses, loves, walks and takes care of their animals. Someone who teaches them patience and calm and knows what their pet needs
- Not allowing your cat to roam the neighborhood. Domestic cats are responsible for decimating our bird populations. City needs to enforce the rules on this.
- Having your dog licences fixed trained and well cared for
- Having safe space for my dog to run around and exercise. However this city has no off leash parks in the south which makes it very impossible to properly exercise your dog when you don't have car access. I do drive and find it very difficult, expensive, & time consuming to have to drive to Southland
- Love and family
- Properly caring for your animals/meeting their needs and respecting your neighbours/neighbourhood
- Cleaning up after your dog. Auburn Bay dog park is bad. I've watched owners watch their dogs poop and just walk away. Street Lights would also be nice in dog parks due to winter darkness. Licensing for animals should be the same no matter animals age,sex or reproduction status. Licensing for sellers
- keep dogs on leash when off your property and keep cats on your property
- As long as the owner/guardian of the pets is capable of feeding, grooming, walking and being responsible for their healthcare it shouldn't matter how many pets are in the home.

- "If the two neighbours on each side of permission in writing, any Calgarian should be allowed 2 chickens, within 500 feet - 4 chickens, within 1000 feet - 6 chickens but no roosters. A volunteer committee that has chickens should handle complaints from others.
- Kill all magpies by any means."
- Ensuring your pets are loved and cared for. Meeting their needs and providing them with positive interactions. Ensuring pets who interact with other pets or frequent public areas are spayed and neutered.
- Attending to the care of your animals, not neglecting your commitment to keep them safe, healthy, and thriving, for the ultimate benefit of animals and others in the community.
- Not having your pet interfere with my space. I don't enjoy hearing dogs barking at any time continuously, nor letting your dog crap and you not picking up after it. Pet ownership should not mean that my quality of life is negatively effected. Sorry very disheartening , I love animals not the owners.
- The complete care of a pet that you choose to bring into your family. Food, water, love, care, attention, proper licensing, adequate living areas, grooming, training, and more.
- That you are responsible for your dogs actions.
- A person who licenses their dogs and cats, and has enough resources to give those and any other pets adequate food, shelter, attention and basic health care.
- A responsible pet owner cares for their pet at every stage. Food, shelter, basic vet care (shots, annuals, preventative medications) and emergency care as is affordable for the owner. It means providing the best life and ending for your pet. It means ensuring the safety for your pet and others.
- No free roaming, as it is unsafe. Not supporting breeders. Providing the best care, no matter the cost. Never abandoning a pet. Not taking on a pet if you cannot afford quality food, vet checkups, spaying/neutering, & medical costs if they arise. No abuse or neglect. Loving/treating them like family
- Pets who are licensed, exercised, well taken care of, sociable, and healthy.
- Providing care and love to our pets. Making sure they have everything they need and treat them with respect and love
- "Having your animal fixed before the age of 2.5. Cleaning up
- It's messes in public spaces. Showing respect to other animal owners who may have a different opinion than you."
- The bylaw needs to be more strict. The fines need to be higher for everyone, especially for barking dogs. All need to be spayed and neutered except for breeding purposes. If a dog or cat attacks & causes irreparable harm, they should be put down.
- safety of the animal and other people. Vaccinate you petr and keep them healthy. Make sure they don't invade other people's property.
- Getting dogs trained, not lwavng poop on the side of the trails. Take good care of your pets.
- "Shots, licensed, neutered, food water. It depends. Take them to the vet, mandatory checkups.
- Price of licensing shots, vets is a big barrier.

- There should be a law about people that abuse their animals - there should be more of a punishment."
- Common sense. With the bylaw, try taking tagged dogs home if they are caught in their community.
- It took a long time to get in the building. I'm in and they don't allow pets.
- Taking care of pets. Owners should know what their responsibilities are so others are safe.
- Good life for people and pets. If you have a pet, you have to be more alert.
- You should know how to take care of the animal, and to love it. If you have it. Also, cats are the dangerous animal, it can kill the man. It can eat birds, snakes, etc.
- Like it when authorities rescue mistreated animals. Good to educate people about taking care of animals.
- Were not allowed to have pets in harm reduction housing. I think it might help people deal with their addictions to have pets. But it might be tough for some people to take care of them.
- When businesses or people dispose of dog food, make sure it's not done in a public space that would encourage lots of dogs to congregate in the area as this is intimidating
- Follow the rules of the city. Pick up after your dog. It was good that they helped me license my cat through affordable housing, Sometimes it's too expensive.
- "- Taking care of the health and well being of your pet
  - - shots/physical activity/fed & watered/exercise
  - - responsible for poop
  - - knowledge of rules and bylaws"
- "Dogs.
  - - picking up after dogs. Give out tickets.
  - - Some dogs need muzzles, pitbulls.
  - - children are in danger from this type of dog"
  - - only have birds in registered bird feeders. So you know where they are, and where other animals may be attracted
- Walking & feeding them. To watch them. Give them attention & train them.
- "- All dogs should be supervised even in the backyard
  - - not let dogs bark constantly in the backyard for no reason or state the length, time of day
  - - dogs should not charge people from behind the fence
  - - Dog that didn't bite but is vicious should be muzzled"
- I think of a person that treats their pet well and lets their pet out instead of it being inside watching TV. Respecting its space. Take the dog outside so it doesn't pee in the house because it's not the dog's fault
- "Duties - Take care of pet, teach it to not attack, pick up after pets
- Love your pet - don't treat bad
- Get tag (license) - microchip tattoo - if lost try to find"
- cleaning after your pet. making sure your pet is on leash in required areas. being aware of the bylaws regarding pet ownership.

- I honestly think that there should be a limit on how many dogs one person can have in the city as are they getting the proper care? Exercise or coupled up because one person can't physically have the time and money to properly care for a bunch of dogs, just my opinion
- Providing appropriate food, shelter, medical care and love. It shouldn't matter how many pets in household as long as they are well cared for. Having pets microchipped and registered, making sure any lost pet can be easily returned.
- The current "Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw" needs to have added how to safely transport your pet as per Canadian Veterinary Association policy as well as how to safely use off-leash parks.
- Being responsible for all aspects of pet care and safety. This includes both inside and outside the home.
- Clean, well kept yards and houses. No animals left outside to fend for themselves. No barking dogs at 3am because you think they should be left out.
- Responsible pet ownership means no animals are allowed to wander at random (must be in a fenced yard or on a leash if outside). Your animal's feces should be picked up (even a cat's) and if an animal is outside and yowling constantly and the owner isn't home then if complaints received a fine issued.
- Caring for, and loving whatever animals you choose to have.
- Providing a safe, healthy environment for a pet to thrive with quality of life.
- Taking care of the health and welfare of your animal, and ensuring you abide by city bylaws (i.e. not allowing your animals to run loose).
- Providing a loving safe home for my pets. Training my pet so that he/she can be around others safely and educate people on proper ways to approach pets.
- Being able to humanly care for and love the animals you own while having minimal or no negative impact on others
- Being educated on the animal you own. Respecting other pet owners. following the rules.
- Responsible pet ownership is about providing appropriate care, love, compassion and supervision for our beloved companion animals. One person could be an irresponsible pet owner with a single pet and another person could be a responsible owner with 5+ pets. !! ☐ An animal limit bylaw won't prev
- Taking care of an animal's needs - physically, mentally - and being a considerate neighbor and community member.
- Pets are cared for and are impact neighbours as little as realistically possible (ie: it is not realistic that a dog will never bark but constant barking when left alone is not responsible). The same rules should go for urban beekeeping and small scale operations of chickens.
- Responsible pet ownership means living in harmony with nature and your neighbors. However, there should still be off-leash areas (dogs must have a space to run) and opportunities for raising one or two female only chickens.
- Cleaning up poo in the parks and keeping your dogs away from leashed animals

- I look after and control my pet so that it is not a danger to itself or other animals or people. I always pick up after my pet and dispose of the waste. I use dog parks to walk my pet off leash when in the city. I provide a safe and secure yard and house where my pet can live.
- Pick up after your animal, keep on leash except in off leash areas. No wandering cats. Acceptable minimum behavior in off leash areas, no attacks, promiscuity, wandering out of touch with owner.
- Respect the animals in public spaces. Provide a safe environment to care for them. Pet Owners need to respect other pet owners.
- That animals are fed, watered, have a clean, safe home and are loved and cared for. In the case where animals require exercise, to ensure they receive same. Licensing and medical care include vaccines and other shots, as well as spay/neuter when required.
- Responsible pet ownership means your pet is family for their life, and should be treated as such. Taken care of, fed, not left outside, not allowed to get sick and not treated or old and abandoned. Loved and treated as you would any other members of your family.
- Ensuring dogs are always on a leash when in public areas, animals are always cleaned up after and cats are not allowed to roam free. Ensuring your animals vaccinations are always up to date and dealing with any known behaviour issues either through training or avoiding problem situations.
- Enjoying your pet, keeping it healthy and safe, and not imposing on other people.
- "Pick up & dispose of poop
- Keep on leash even in their own yard if it is not fenced
- Ensure your dog will not bite/injure/threaten/attack anyone/animal anywhere including in their own unfenced property
- Ensure your dog does not bark/disturb anyone"
- Being responsible for the care, wellbeing and safety of your animal (and others) for the duration of its life and abiding by all related bylaws/rules related to the ownership of that animal.
- It means meeting all of the needs of your pet such as food, water, exercise, love, respect, feeling safe and having a comfortable sleeping spot. It also means training and socializing your pet so they are great around people, other animals and a joy to be in the neighborhood.
- Having a dog on leash on residential sidewalks, cleaning up after your dog, and knowing your dog well enough if you should cross the street if another dog or small child is walking towards you on the same side.
- "Pet owners taking good care of their pets without causing problems for their neighbors. A reasonably sized city department to catch and work with lost / abandoned animals.
- What does it not mean? The city charging more fees - i.e. licencing cats that are exclusively indoor cats."
- Let pet lead a human & quality life & access medical care when needed. Don't leave pet alone at home for very long period of time for causing stress & anxiety and doing something unpredictable. Understand the ownership is the pet's whole world. Without owner, the pet losses all, even his/her life.

- Providing a healthy and safe environment for your pet. Making sure you tend to your pets health and nutrition needs. Having a way to identify your pet if it goes missing so that it can be returned. Making sure you have control of your pet when it goes outdoors for exercise - does not harm anyone.
- Responsible pet ownership means dedication towards those animals, accountability, ensuring you put the effort in to train the animal, cleaning up after your pet and respecting bylaws
- Taking care of your pet by keeping it indoors, leashed or monitored if it is outdoors. Cats should not be outside unattended.
- "Taking care of the animal first-vaccinations, check-ups with vets, proper nutrition.
- Being good neighbours and not letting your pet wander, bark too much, etc."
- Providing a physical and mentally good lifestyle for dogs. Making choices to care for them, they are my property but also part of my family. I am responsible for keeping them healthy, working on their behaviors to be safe canines interacting with society.
- They should pick up feces when the pet is let out in the back yard immediately and not just once a day. Also they should take dogs for walks or to a off lease area so that they get exercise not kept in the house. There should be a limit of one dog per house and not used for breeding in residence.
- Picking up after your dog & not leaving bags on the ground(bikers) .keeping control of your dogs ,especially little yappers . I feel the dog waste is from people who just drive up in their cars (silver springs)
- It means providing a safe, secure, happy home to animals that are legally allowed in Calgary. It means providing mental stimulation as well as physical stimulation/exercise to your pet, in order to fulfill their needs, based on what type of pet they are.
- Respecting others so your pet doesn't impact them - clean up after your pet and don't let them jump up on, or otherwise interfere with others.
- Being responsible for the mental and physical wellbeing of your pet.
- Someone who feeds, loves, exercises and provides all the basic needs a pet needs
- People cleaning up after their dogs. Dogs on leash. In Silverado, a lot of people leave them off-leash on the walkway beside the environmental reserve
- Looking after pets in humane manner with safety to public, owner and pets (in this order) of utmost consideration
- "Caring for your pet inc.
- Including food, housing, vet visiting"
- Like one of your family members
- Being the best and most loving parent to my fur baby. Taking care of them to the best of my abilities and affordability. Making sure they have a good life by taking them to dog parks and ensure they are safe there. Treating them as an integral part of the family. All the love and cuddles!
- Not be allowed to let pets urinate on front steps in both summer & winter. The yellow snow at my front steps looks disgusting & in the summer do not want to be walking on it & bringing it into my house. Not be allowed to dump poop bags in my garbage bin or left on my steps or thrown over fence.

- providing adequate nutritional, medical and emotional care to the pet while obeying laws and respecting the varied feelings toward animals by neighbours and the general public
- taking measures and owning responsibility for ensuring pets are managed, however there needs to be appropriate dialogue allowed and sharing of information so the owner can address issues appropriately
- I believe it means to care and provide for your pets properly, to give them a great quality of life, keep them safe, and prevent them from causing problems for other people and animals
- Good neighbors, not leaving a dog outside barking, cleaning up after pooping, respecting non-dog parks, recreational fields
- Providing a safe and happy life for a domesticated animal while not inconveniencing your neighbours.
- Ensuring your pet does not infringe on another persons life. Keeping your animal away from others, keeping your animal quiet and clean.
- Cats and dogs ONLY
- Responsible pet ownership to me looks similar to having children, you would need to provide all the necessities of life as well as be responsible for their actions. I don't understand how I would get a ticket walking my well behaved dog off leash under supervision but people can have their cats run
- Providing all the necessities of life (and some) such as food, water, shelter, vet care, grooming, etc. Fixing at an appropriate age. Not allowing pets to become obese.
- Pet owners are not policing their pets or following the bylaws ie. many times dogs are out unleashed, cats are spraying in my yard, and dog poop is still left on my lawn and in the kiddie park!! Owners need to realize not everyone likes dogs and cats. And bylaws are LAWS, not suggestions.
- owner understands the care needed to to keep their pets healthy and happy. Included vaccination, walks, toys, whatever is needed. It is also understanding the nature of their pets and ensuring they are keeping people and other pets safe. Large or small.
- It means taking care of my pet. Someone who wants and cares what happens to then. It means not locking them up because some people complain. Allowing them to be what they are with in reason. Responsible people license their pets.
- Someone taking responsibility or an act of ownership over there own dog e.i fed, taken care of, health wise and physical wise.
- "Do not live in multi level dwellings with furry pets when the laundry is shared. Keep all pet food in sealed containers and litter boxes cleaned and disposed properly in sealed bags in large garbage bins.
- Do not use your neighbors yard as a litter box. Walk all dogs daily and twice daily"
- Being considerate of the impact of your pet onto others in the community and their property. Not imposing fear into those who's path you cross, noise from barking, and pet waste (including urine) onto private property.
- Being accountable for your pet's actions and behaviors. Having your pet under control at all times (on a leash when not in an off-leash park), cleaning up after your pet, ensuring dogs are not threatening to people (growling, even when on the owners property; barking).

- You should allow cats to roam free to cut down the over population of mice voles and other vermin. As spring arrives the mice come out and there,s lots of them. So use commonsense and allow cats to roam, in London Englind it is against the law not to allow cats to roam as they keep the vermin down!!
- Providing, food, shelter and healthcare for pets. Providing love, gentleness and understanding of who and what felines are and what their purpose is for. We all know that felines catch vermin, they are plague preventers therefore common sense dictates that they should be unencumbered and outside.
- Dog owners knowing the Dog Owner Bylaws and needing to sign affidavit to agreement before new dog licence granted!
- This means not letting your cat run at large, cleaning up after your dog on public or private property, training your animal and making sure they are neutered or spayed.
- ensuring that your pets are properly cared for/looked after. This includes proper training and making sure they are safe. They should not be allowed to roam freely to cause damage to property or people. Dogs can not be required to be silent, but they should not be allowed to bark for long periods
- Making sure your pets are cared for and that they don't negatively impact people, other animals or the environment.
- Both taking care of your pet by practising common sense and by treating the areas you walk your pet with respect. Unfortunately too many Calgarians do not pick up after their dogs.
- Providing adequate food, water, shelter, human companionship, exercise, medical/dental care and keeping one's pet safe from harm by not putting them in situations that put them in jeopardy of getting injured/killed or under stress that may cause them to inflict injury/death.
- "Caring for your animal's needs. Preventing damage or other problems on neighbours' properties.
- Protecting people and wildlife from your pets. Cleaning up after your pet. Responding to concerns about noise complaints (e.g. barking)."
- Responsible pet ownership to me means keeping dogs on leashes especially near playgrounds, schools and pathways. It also means cleaning up after your animals, pet off leash does not mean you don't clean up. If you have a dangerous or aggressive breed then it should always be on a leash.
- Holding dog owners responsible for their own dogs. Stop punishing the responsible law abiding dog owners to appease the minority. The only input you need or require is from not dog owners, not citizens who do not own them!
- Doing everything to ensure that animals and humans coexist in a positive way that is equally beneficial to people and the animals.
- All your activities as a pet owner should be focused on the health and well being of your pet.
- Treating ALL your pets as if they are part of your family, and not allowing them to be unsupervised out of your yard/property, and to not allow them to be a nuisance or their waste a nuisance.
- Being legally responsible to provide pets needs and safety. Ensuring all pets are leashed when not on your property. Protecting feral cats but making sure cat owners do not let their cats roam free. Increasing fines to 'irresponsible' owners. Easier to call in stray cats (by name, not address).

- "Spat or neuter your pet.
- Pets on leash in leash zone, and under control.
- Tags for pets"
- License for all pets,Picking up after your pets in your yard and else where.
- NOT LEAVING THEM OUT IN THE COLD ALL WINTER . AND CLEANING UP AFTER DAMN DOGS . Respecting animals like people becaus epeople keel abuseing them and putting then in dumpsters . And the poulce DO NOTHING. REALSE THESE NAMES OF ABUSERS TO THE PUBLIC.
- Loving your pet and providing them with food, exercise and support. Picking up their poop and NOT allowing cats to roam outside.
- Taking care of your pet according to the law
- Taking excellent care of the animals that are dependent on you, as if they were your children.
- "Being responsible for the pets.
- Ensure: people pick up after theor dog. dog don't bite/ run at large/chase people or other things.
- Being responsible for their care, food, shelter, medical care etc.
- Being responsible and know how many dogs can be affordable, financially and house space and medical."
- Owning and raising animals responsibly
- It means looking after the health and well being of the animals in your care and ensuring they are not a nuisance to anyone.
- ensuring that your pet is safe at all times. This means that you are not walking a dog off-leash that could be reactive or does not have proper recall. It also means that you are picking up after them and making sure they have a chip or tattoo and also is registered with the city
- I think there needs a limit on how many dogs a person can have. For example our neighbor has 8 dogs in a tiny 2 bedroom apartment. I think somebody with the bylaw should always be present at off and on leash parks, that way we can limit dog fights and/or negligent owners.
- Providing essentials for pets and following bylaws.
- having your dog or dogs licensed, loved,well taken care of.
- Taking steps to make sure that pets and owners are safe.
- Ensuring that your pet is compliment and not a burden to the community.
- "Loving your animals with all your heart.
- Giving them a home, food, exercise and medical needs.
- If you have the space, money and time for your pets there SHOULD NOT be a limit of amount you can have.
- If I had an acreage and money I would have plenty!! I should be allowed to!!"
- Caring for their well being, providing food and shelter and a safe environment for them and being considerate of others when out of the home with them.
- Having your pet registered. Having a safe environment at dog parks. And cleaning up after your dogs in public

- Caring for your pet & ensuing you're a considerate neighbour.
- It means to care for an animal(s) in the right manner . To take care of your animal , and have the proper necessities to care for it. To give that animal all the love that you can give it and make sure you can accommodate the needs of said animal(s). To make sure they are always well fed and cared
- When outside, Keeping your dog/s under control and Cleaning up poop. The pet owner must ensure each pet gets love and individual attention, and sanitary living conditions I.e. no hoarding of pets. Pets are sterilized. Cats are kept indoors or allowed in outdoor catios, not free roaming.
- Caring for my pet in a way that positively impacts the community.
- As a non-pet owner living in Garrison Woods, I have about 40-60 dogs a day doing their business on my lawn. I spend on average $100/year reseeding my lawn. My wish would be that dog owners are not allowed to use other people's lawns/yards to do their business.
- When you adopt a pet, you commit to loving, caring and being responsible for it's health and welfare for it's entire natural life.
- Tending to all the needs of your pets in a safe and secure manner
- Respecting the animals life and health, respecting other's pets, knowing, following and abiding by the bylaws, respecting neighbors' areas and public areas, reporting mistreated animals, reporting people who are not following bylaws
- To not allow a dog to be off-lease in an on-lease area. Many times I have seen people go to school grounds & allow their dogs to run free. Not fair to us who abide by the law and never allow a dog to go off lease in an on-lease area.
- A responsible pet owner is some whom exercises their dog and follows the rules of off leash and on leash areas. A responsible dog owner loves their dog like it's family, because they are.
- Responsible Pet Ownership is providing at a minimum the appropriate level of care for that particular animal. This includes food, shelter, veterinary care as well as not allowing the animal to be a nuisance to the neighbourhood and wild areas/wildlife.
- Ensuring the health and safety of your pet, and also cleaning up after it
- Getting the poop cleaned up in your yard and making sure your dogs don't bark as much outside and making sure your dogs are feed and loved
- "license pet
- train pet
- pick up after pet
- take care of pets needs responsibly (food, health & medical, grooming, etc.)
- socialise pet
- ensure safety of pet & of people and other animals exposed to pet
- city/province fine & jail people and confiscate animals who are abused
- limit # of animals in the home"

- Spay/Neuter, licensed, microchipped, not a nuisance to people in public areas, not at large (people let their cats out to roam neighborhoods), dogs under handler control at all times whether on leash or off leash, picking up after one's dog/dogs.
- I agree with the City's responsible pet ownership 5 principles. I believe we should be allowed some farm type animals such as Pot Belly Pigs, and chickens - max 12. Dogs should be limited to 4 or 6 with no tolerance for barking. Cats same 4-6 and not free roaming although that is hard to do!
- Having your animal happy and healthy. Not being a nuisance to others.
- Investment in my mental health
- Ensuring the safety of my pets and the community when we are out around the city
- Why is there no focus area on city dwellers having livestock in their back yard such as chickens? The last three international viruses started with livestock (pigs), birds (SARS), MERS and now COVID19. No livestock (pigs, chickens, horses, "pets" or egg production where large populations exist
- Providing food, shelter and love to your pet. Making sure your pet is not aggressive and harm others.
- meet your pets medial needs, keep them safe by keeping them in their yards not running the streets, have them chipped and feed good wholesome food, get pets neutered and spayed, and have a city license.
- It means having "control" of your animal at all times. I have had unfortunate encounters in "Off leash" zones being harassed by larger off leash dogs and the owners are so far away or are just unable to control it. "Off Leash" should only be allowed in designated off leash parks, and no where else.
- Taking good care of pets while also respecting neighbours and property
- Taking full accountability for your dog and anything associated with your dog. Disposing of waste, training, being considerate neighbours, feeding properly, caring properly, not allowing the dog to be unattended outside all day long.
- Dogs are intrusive, messy, and come breeds can be dangerous if not controlled. Cats I have no issue with. They are unobtrusive when let outside on their own and can help to keep rodent populations in check.
- Keeping your pet and the public safe
- Exactly what it says - the owner being responsible. Some owners spend more time on their cell phones than they do watching their dog pooping on my front lawn.
- A pet owner who is taking well care of it's pets and their pets are not problem for others around.
- Being aware of where your animals are, keeping them healthy and fed
- working in the best interests of the animal and the humans among whom it lives
- Ensuring pet owners have appropriate and active licenses for their animals. Ensuring pet owners are capable (proof of appropriate living/property standards) for the species as well as the number of species on within a person's possession and property at any given time. Courtesy to neighbours.
- When you take an animal into your household, you have to take care of - feed, house, vet, exercise - and value the animal. Since we live in a city, the animal should be a good citizen.

- personal accountability for training and controlling your animal regardless of breed and size. picking up after your pet and not placing your waste in other peoples bins. prioritizing your pets health and safety at home and in public.
- 1) taking care of physical needs: food, shelter, exercise. 2) taking care of exercise needs as well as picking up poo after them, 3) controlling behaviour...so if you have a dangerous breed dog...muzzling them when out in public, keeping all dogs on leash, not letting your cats wander etc.
- Following bylaws and ensuring a happy, health pet
- It means that you are responsible to feed and care for the animal. To clean up after it. If it is sick you take it to the vet. Keep its shots up to date. To keep its licence up to date in case it happens to get out.
- "NOT these things:
- We are distressed daily by barking dogs from across the street. Requests for consideration are ignored.
- When I am out walking and am rushed at, barked at and attacked by dogs, while their owners call uselessly or say ""he is friendly, he won't hurt you"" I am deeply disturbed."
- Means being responsible just like you would for a child. A roof over their head, food, love, training to ensure the are the best pet they can be. Pick up after them, don't let them run loose and be all round good pet citizens. If you limit , yiu need to grandfather pets that are already well cared f
- Properly taking care of the basic needs of a pet including food, shelter and veterinary care. Also, respecting public and private spaces with regards to your pet. Cleaning up after them in public, keeping dogs on leash in wildlife sensitive areas, not letting your cat roam or kill wildlife.
- That those who take on pet ownership accept the responsibility to care for, feed, exercise and socialize their pet(s).
- Ensuring the City of Calgary is actually enforcing the responsible pet ownership bylaw.
- Keeping my animal within my yard/home, and not allowed to roam free. Training animal where possible for good behaviors.
- Responsible pet ownership to me, means the ability to care for domesticated pets, safely and in a loving home with their owners and in harmony with neighbors. Responsible pet ownership means the ability to licence your pet, spay & neuter, prevent your pets from running at large or being a nuisance
- Licensed pet, always on a leash, always picked up after, never allowed in play parks or near schools, owner knows the laws for where pets can be, take into consideration that many of us do not like dogs or are afraid of dogs and do not like to have them near us in stores.
- Have loving kind animals on your family
- Keeping pets heathy, safe, happy and fulfilled.
- People are responsible for proper care and understanding your pets needs. To ensure they are met to the best of your ability. To be respectful of others who may not feel the same passion for animals by cleaning up after your pet; ensuring that your pet is not disturbing anyone.

- That all animals in a persons care are provided with adequate food, water and INDOOR shelter. Animals should not be forced to live outside. Pets should be provided with adequate exercise and mental stimulation as well as regular veterinary care.
- Keeping control of your pet at all times. Providing safe and warm/ cool space in the home as a part of the family. Providing proper food and medical attention for the pet and not allowing the pet to disturb neighbours.
- Caring for your pet properly. Making sure your pet is properly trained & socialized so it doesn't become a nuisance. Making sure your pet is safe and healthy with regular vet visits and adequate exercise. Licensing & microchipping your pet. Spay & neuter.
- Taking care of all your pets needs, food, exercise, healthcare. Proper stimulation, keeping them safe. They must have access to food and shelter at all times and keep the area they play in clean. Provide them with love and attention.
- To care for your animal(s) with proper nutrition, Training to be a Good Neighbor to People and Dogs and to clean up after them.
- Responsible pet ownership means control. Whether that's controlling the animals verbal behaviors, roaming, or sexual behaviors. Its all about the person having control over their pet. Numbers don't matter if control, and of course proper care are taken care of.
- Tax pet owners. $400 a year, per pet dog. $100 year per pet cat. The dog urine in my local public park is disgusting! You can't walk 10 ft, without piss everywhere! People do not need pets. It's a city luxury.
- Properly caring for your pet and cleaning up after them, particularly in public spaces. Not allowing them to bark for hours, at any time of day. Calgarians have become very inconsiderate of their neighbors.
- That you have the sufficient time and resources to take care of your animal so their health and standard of life is secured. All pets have different needs and it's the owners obligation to research if the pet is a good fit for its family BEFORE buying it!
- Providing care for your pet while respecting others
- Ensuring that your pet is happy, healthy and safe at all times. I also believe that all owners need to pass a basic training before owning an animal and then proceed to special training WITH their animal. I recognize that the majority of "incidents" are caused by ignorant pet owners.
- Ensuring that pets are well taken care of, and that they are a welcome part of the community.
- Always taking care of your pet(s) and making them a priority
- Picking up after dog's poop, keeping dog/cat out of neighbors' yards. Keeping dog on leash around others who don't have pets.
- Responsible pet ownership is the oversight and healthy care (ie physical, emotional, etc) for an animal(s) in an individual'a care.
- managing pets in the city, including cats and dogs
- It means being respectful of your neighbour in terms of noise and smell. It means if you are in public spaces you pick up after your dog. It means that your pet is under control at all times, it is well trained and has "good manners".

- Responsible pet ownership means following the rules outside of the home. Keep you dog on a leash in leashed areas, clean up the poop (especially on sidewalks), when you let the dog outside the house, do not let it bark incessantly! (This is a big pet peeve), let people know if you can pet them.
- Making sure pet owners keep their pets safe as well as others. Respecting non pet owners and city parks
- Not impinging on the rights, quiet, peace and privacy of neighbors. Also owners must pick up and clean up the feces of their pets instead of leaving it laying on the boulevards, sidewalks and trails with better enforcement and greater penalties for those who do not clean up after their pets.
- Being responsible for what your pet does, controlling their behavior and picking up their POOP!!
- Being aware and responsible to your pet, your neighbours, and the environment.
- Caring for dog or cat family members. Ensuring safety of pet as well as health needs. Save home for them.
- Responsible pet owners take their own means and capabilities (time, financial, future plans etc.) into consideration before ever taking on an animal. After that, they ensure their pet is vaccinated, chipped and fixed. They will do all they can to give them a happy, healthy and secure life.
- Provide fully for the animals in your care while being a responsible neighbor, citizen, etc. Meaning cleaning up after the pet, limited barking and nuisance behaviors, controlling odors and pests, not allowing them to run at large, providing proper vet care, etc
- Providing the necessary care to a pet's health and well-being ie neutering, vaccinations and caring for them when they are sick. Providing a safe and proper environment for an animal taking into consideration the specific and natural needs of an animal & not modifying a pet to suit human needs.
- It means to be responsible and preserving nature. I like people who cares for bees and putting their time and money towards all wellbeing of neighbors and nature around. They making our planet healthy and beautiful.
- I am a pet owner and animal lover. Responsible pet ownership means taking care of the animals and also respecting your neighbours right not to be negatively impacted by my choices to keep animals.
- It means keeping pets safe, happy, and from disturbing others. Dog owners need to keep dogs under control so they don't threaten pedestrians. There should be a mandatory course on obedience training for dog owners so they can control their pets.
- Caring for your pet in a way that doesn't interfere with other people.
- Having your pet licensed, tattooed and if it is a cat, keep them indoors where they are safe.
- Taking great care of the animals in your home.
- Creating a safe, healthy, and stimulating environment for your pet.
- "Responsible Pet ownership means a pet owner who is committed to three things.
  - 1. the care and well being of their pet,
  - 2. the consideration of our neighbours, both pet and non pet owners

- 3. civic responsibility to respect and care take the facilities provided for the enjoyment of pet ownership."
- I don't currently have a cat, but a cat license for an indoor cat is just a cash grab. The odds of my indoor cat imposing itself on anyone is near zero, and I shouldn't have to pay a fee just to have a cat. Responsible ownership is indoor/leashed, neutered, well fed, vet care, and loved.
- Keeping your cat in it's own yard. Keeping your dog in control on a leash everywhere unless posted as off leash. Not allowing your dog to bark for more than 5 minutes when outside.
- taking good care of your pet and making sure your dog is well behaved with people and other animals.
- Providing food, shelter, training, exercise and love
- Providing a safe and healthy environment that provides your pet the love and care of your pets.
- Licensing, vetting and assuming responsibility for your pet including respecting the off leash and on leash rules. If you have an aggressive dog take necessary precautions to monitor the dog, provide a safe environment where the dog can't escape.
- Cleaning up after your dog in public places, not letting your dog rush up to other dogs, respecting leash-only areas. Keeping cats on your own property, not putting poison out for rodents. Also, not letting your dog bark and bark and bark. Understanding pet bylaws such as leash laws on pathways.
- Owners should keep their pets under control. Even in off-leash areas, owners are responsible for the actions of their pets.
- Being a responsible pet owner means your providing a loving, healthy home. Up to date on vaccines, registered, fed, exercised, trained
- A pet is any animals a person chooses to own. Responsible is being knowledgeable and providing the necessary requirement for the pet/s to live a long, full, happy, healthy life with their human.
- It means not leaving your dog outside to bark yap and howl to its hearts content at anything that moves. Dog disturbance is the number one noise pollutant on this city. But we seem more concerned about cats having licences.
- "Providing safe loving homes for dogs and cats and other companion animals. Affordable veterinary care (spay and neuter) Lost animals ( strays) given a chance to reunite with owners.
- Suitable homes for rescues..trap and neuter programs"
- It means proper care and training of one's pet. Obligation of pet owner to educate themselves and understand "control". It does NOT mean dogs can't bark and act like dogs. Care includes proper grooming and veterinary care as to not incur pain or suffering on the pet.
- # 1 on my list would have to be spay or neuter your animals .
- Pets are taken care of. People clean up after them. People protect others from their dogs.
- Means providing care for pets of my choice.
- Your pet will not bother other residents near by. Things like barking etc will be controlled and trained. If you own a dog you will train it properly to respond to commands etc.

- Have those using the off leash parks pay a fee to do so. The parks are disgusting. The fee can cover cleanup costs etc. Build it into the dog licensing fee.
- Keeping your pet safe and well cared for as well as happy and well loved. I do not think it is responsible to crate an animal unless it is a VERY minimal amount of time and for good reason such as travel. Also not allowing the pet to disturb or harm neighbours.
- Providing the basic essentials necessary for life including access to ample fresh food and water, shelter and exercise on a daily basis. It means a minimum standard of training to allow for safe, controlled interactions with other people/animals in outdoor spaces. No pets roaming unsupervised.
- Providing a loving home, appropriate exercise (i.e. taking a dog out for walks and not just leaving them in a backyard), socialization training for good behaviour, and ensuring your dog(s) are not a noise nuisance. Keeping your dogs healthy and regularly vaccinated, dewormed, etc.
- As pet owners our responsibilities are twofold: to provide a safe, enriching life to our animals and to respect and keep safe our neighbours.
- "Dogs on leash when off property.
- Constant continuous barking controlled by owner or LARGE fine.
- Dogs not left out all night"
- I just want to say I understand why people said not to bother with this and they were right. It is only a way to see how to increase revenue and that's it. Maybe changing some by-laws like cats can save money compared to complaints and hours wasted. I know you will just increase things instead.
- Stop lying. Your 'so-called' experts that testified backyard chickens cause Avian Flu were WRONG. The WHO said there has never been one case of the virus from backyard chickens, only factory farm chickens. Can send the response from WHO if the facts are needed.
- Keeping your pet healthy, safe and loved as well as being mindful of the health and safety of other people and pets.
- Do not allow your pet to disturb your neighbours or neighbourhood. Do not leave droppings behind in public places. Control your pet's noise and aggression. Do not let pets wander while unattended. Have pets neutered. If you can't manage these simple things, you should not have a pet in the City.
- It means caring for your dogs, as if it were your own child, such as feeding, grooming, exercising. making sure your dog is healthy and cared for physically and emotionally, that they are vet checked and, making sure their vaccines are up to date. As well as licensing your dog with the city.
- Pet owners that love their animal in all aspects including providing food, water, shelter, healthcare. Owners that clean up after their dogs and abide by Calgary's bylaws.
- I feel that Responsible pet ownership means to have the homes pets licensed, well fed, safe environment, humans being able to understand body language, and not in danger. I also feel that there should not be a limitation on how many (dogs) owned, but some regulations like home checks done by city.
- It means the animal is properly cared for meaning health care, grooming, not neglected, loved, fed, housed. Just like a responsible parent would care for a child.

- A person who provides a safe and loving home for a pet. The pet relies on you 100% for food, water and a safe and comfortable place to live, and you must provide all of that without question. Without your support that pet will not survive.
- In my opinion, responsible pet ownership means following city by-laws regarding pets and providing them with all the necessities like food, water, shelter, medical care and ensuring their wellbeing and safety.
- Taking care of my pets so that they have food and shelter along with attention, exercise and regular vet care.
- providing proper love, food, water, shelter, enrichment and quality of life for any creature in your care
- Taking care of pet and making sure it is safe.
- The City of Calgary enforcing it's own by-laws and not having their 311 operators go off a phone script. It's a shame the people pay for this service through licensing fees, yet Animals Services and phone operators pass the buck to other agencies. Please train your staff accordingly.
- "Taking ownership and responsibility for the actions of your pet.
- Before acquiring a pet, realize the life span of the pet and be committed and capable of financially responsible for that pet for its life time."
- It's means taking care of them, keeping track of them and cleaning up after them at all times. Just like having a child.
- Providing for the physical, mental & medical needs of our companions, with as little negative impact to our neighbours & their pets as possible.
- looking after the dog , so the dog is enjoying a good life and behaves very well.
- Including your pet in a happy and healthy lifestyle that provides physical and emotional benefits to both owners and pets. Providing the necessities for healthy life of the pet.
- Follow bylaws and care for your pet
- Have your dog decently trained, ensure your dog is well socialised, ALWAYS pick up after your dog, have your dog on a leash at all times (except in officially designated offleash areas), treat your dog with respect , keep him well, healthy and loved.
- Providing pets with the means to meet their needs and thrive.
- number of large dogs in a tiny yard and never cleaning the yard or stopping the constant whining and barking. The owners consider the dogs well looked after but leave dogs out and then go to work for the day. Discussed with owner and get nowhere as they are "allowed" to have dogs.
- Responsible pet ownership means to me- picking up after your pet, Obeying on leash park and playground rules for pets. Would love to have small off leash dog parks as well. (under 30 pounds).
- Dogs on leash unless in dog park, scoop it everywhere, increase fines for infractions, cats inside only
- It means being responsible, and being an adult. It means taking the best possible care of the creatures you have. And if you can't take proper care of them, then you need to take the necessary measures to ensure they are well taken care of - even if it's not by you.

- Stiffer fines for dog attacks, and owners who dont pick up their pets shit. The registration fee's are ridiculously high and because of that I refuse to register my dog. Not paying 70 dollars a year, and thus I havent paid a single penny in 7 years. If it was 10-15 dollars I would pay.
- Keeping dogs quiet clean and indoors well fed and taken care of
- It means following the cities bylaws when caring for your animals. Also ensuring that before getting any animals you fully understand what is required to care for them well (walks, food, following bylaws, pick up poop, vaccines, grooming etc).
- To me, it means: taking care of the physical & Mental wellbeing of the pet,ensuring the pet is trained,well exercised & healthy. When out in public, the properly tagged pet is under the control of the owner (on/off leash) & the owner picks up after their pets. S/he is fully responsible for the pet.
- All of Calgary's off leash parks make it incredibly easy to follow and abide by the Pet Ownership Bylaw. It is fantastic how many off leash parks the city has.
- Responsible pet ownership - take responsibility for your pet; including behaviour, socialization, leashed at all times when not at off leash parks, clean up after your pet - even in laneways and particularly on other persons lawns, lastly - proper edict and behaviour of pets at off leash parks.
- It means having a limited number of pets in your home (perhaps max of 3 or 4) unless you are a licensed breeder. Our neighbour has 13 dogs in a small home/yard & ALSO illegally breeds puppies. Court twice and no change! Impacts everyone who has to smell & listen to these poor dogs bark & cry.
- There are people in my vicinity that leave their dog out most days and into the late evening. The dog barks at every car or passer by. This noise impacts hundreds if not thousands of homes in the area. I believe you should not be able to leave your dog outside barking in this manner.
- Keeping pets and people safe.
- It means that pet owners actually/know and follow the bylaws concerning pet ownership. I would like to see pet owners keep their animals within their own yards and not allow or put them out to roam neighbourhoods. I find it abhorrent that owner's allow their pets to use my yard as their toilets.
- cleaning up after your dog makes a mess, keeping animals on leashes.
- Responsible pet ownership means that in addition to meeting a pets basic needs the pets are also well socialized and have basic obedience skills.
- Not leaving your dog outside to bark at every moving thing for hours during the day - 10 to twelve barks every few minutes every hour as someone or a vehicle passes AND NOT TELLING THE DOG TO BE QUIET.
- Responsible pet ownership means that a person is in control of their animal at all times. Provides proper training when needed. Cleans up after their animal. Provides proper care and attention for their animals well being.
- It means picking up after your dog on walks and in the dog parks. It means controlling your dog at all times and if you know it is aggressive either keeping it on a leash or muzzling it.
- Of the five principles listed 1, 3, and 4 are important. Forcing people to spay or neuter pets is cruel and barbaric this needs to be the owners decision and not be the basis for increased or decreased licence fees. Cats roaming at large creating a nuisance need to have far stiffer penalties!!!

- To love and protect pets. When it is very hot or cold, allow us to bring our pets into stores, buildings and restaurant patios so we can do errands -otherwise we can't because we can't leave pets in cars. Allowing pets more access gives people more enjoyment & they can be our companions more.
- Take your neighbours into account. They have a right to the quiet enjoyment of their property too. Ownership of any farm animals should require a process similar to a development permit, with adjacent neighbours needing to be consulted (What if there are allergies or fears of specific animals)
- "Keeping a pet in a manner that keeps the pet healthy and safe while respecting the rights of both pet owners and non pet people.
- I expect owners to license their animals and clean up after them. If their animals are aggressive, they should not be allowed into an off leash area. Limit dogs to 6."
- The ability to provide a pet with a good life, where they are cared for and provided all the necessities of life including food, shelter, medical attention and appropriate exercise.
- kjshfkjshfkjdsfjk
- Being a responsible pet owner means that you need to provide things for your pets, like neuter or spay, giving your pets animal tags or keeping them up to date on their vet visits. You should also make sure that if you have a vicious or unfriendly dog, you shouldn't take them to social areas.
- Taking care of animals. Making a connection with them and giving them a home
- It means that you care for your pet, Feed, Let outside, give attention, etc.
- Responsible pet ownership mean to me. It means to me that you care for your pets. You give them food. Pick up after them and give them tages.
- on how to treat you pets
- Im Not Really a pet fan but if i got one, where would it go if it got lost
- walks the dog,picks up there STINKY WET TASTY poop.
- taking good care of them and make sure that they are happy and healthy
- That you care for your pet, Love your pet and would care if they ran away, it means that you take full ownership if your pet does something bad.
- do not let ur dogs out with out a leash unless in a backyard with tall fence.
- Responsible ownership means to me that we all need to keep our dogs and pets on their leash, and pick up after their pets.
- ensuring the health and wellbeing of animals in your care while enjoying the benefits of animal ownership on your property, ensuring animals in my care do not negatively impact the wellbeing of others (cleaning up waste/mitigate odour), not limit others' ability to enjoy public spaces we all share.
- I think it means to me that people should unleash there pets sometimes to let them roam around far to tun around more then just going around there owner
- It means the utmost consideration for the health and safety of your pet. I'm particularly passionate about keeping cats indoors. It's already bylaw but more people need to understand how irresponsible it is to allow their cats to free roam.

- Always keeping your pet in control when walking your dog, so if your dog should be on leash and if at a off leash park you should know you dog is safe to be off leash and able to control with commands.
- It means creating a life for your pet that fulfills them mentally and physically with high quality food and proper training to promote a calm and balanced animal while being respectful of other pet owners and their varying needs.
- Addition to family.
- - picking up after your dog, walking your dog. if you have a dog walking company- 8-10 dog max per walk. I have seen dog walkers have 14 dogs in one walk with a baby in a stroller, no problem. what happens if 1/14 dogs get in a fight. How are you going to control 13 other dogs w/ a stroller & baby?
- Cleaning up after your animal and taking care of their needs - not leaving them in a yard/tied up all the time. Behaviour/manners training if you're letting them in off leash parks. Using the color coded leashes if they do have behaviour problems. Keeping shots up to date.
- it means you dont go out and get a pitbull type dog and bring it to a residential neighborhood.
- License, training, taking responsibility for the pet's behaviour and getting training/help before and after issues arise
- Caring for a pet in a manner that has the best interests of that animal at heart. This would incl diet, housing etc. Also involves respecting other people and their safety and themselves and their pets as well.
- Taking proper care of your animals and with due consideration of your neighbors
- Not leaving your dogs out barking for hours on end.
- "Ensuring your pets are spayed or neutered and vaccinated and licensed.
- Ensuring your pets are properly socialized and trained.
- Ensuring you only keep pets that you can actually afford to care for with food, water and vet care etc. People are adopting pets and not able to pay their vet bills."
- Dogs don't lunge onto strangers. Some dont train big dogs and then these big dogs lunge ansmd scare the passerbys. That is very scary for others nearby and could result in injury for elderly and children.
- Treating animals with dignity and respect. Doing all one can to make sure they are taken care of to the best of their ability.
- Never allowing your pets to infringe on your neighbours rights to peace and quiet. No barking dogs in particular. Penalties for barking or biting should be more significant
- Ensuring your pet is healthy, safe and cared for.
- Responsible pet ownership means caring about your pets, feeding them, walking them, not letting them out during -30C and not letting them pee or poo on (and damage) your neighbours' (private) lawn.
- Responsible pet ownership means a lot of things to me. Such as: Being able to financially afford the pet including insurance and additional pet care if needed, having the time to spend with a pet, having the space for a pet, having a safe environment, loving the pet and taking the pet to the vet.

- Having your pet vaccinated. Cared for. Licensed.
- Caring for them. Training them. Cleaning up after them.
- Someone who has a pet, and provides the basic necessities to keep the pet healthy and taken care of.
- Keeping pets healthy which includes not having too many, having them sterilized, taking them to the vet for regular check ups, and keeping them indoors or under the control of the owner/handler (ie: dog walker). Training from an early age.
- No dogs in green spaces. They pee through my chain link fence and poop 1 foot away. Cochrane limits distance to property to 5 meters. I want to feel comfortable in my back yard and house and not look out my window, while eating, and see a dog turn his butt around and poop. Birds are chased away.
- Training your pet well. Meeting it's every needs. Taking care of that pet even if it has special needs. Ensuring you do not abandon it somewhere. Ensuring the pet could never get lost. Ensuring a space in which the pet cannot be harmed. Ensuring the pet has the necessary space. Etc.
- We have a bike path running between the backyards of houses. Children use this path to get to school buses, seniors from the home for exercise and many people use the path for walking (including dogs). There are 4 yards with dogs that charge and bark at everyone. This is not responsible ownership.
- "Not allowing your cat to roam the neighbourhood. Like dogs, cats need to be leashed and with their owners.
- Cats or dogs, owners need to clean up after their pets. While out on walks, but also in their own yards. Don't leave poop sitting for days/weeks/months. Clean it up!"
- Responsible pet owners live with their animals. They enjoy the interaction and company all the time not just when it is convenient. They feed them well clean up after them at home in the yard and out in public. they enjoy them to the limit
- Paying licensing, yearly vet checks and immunizations, extra visits if required.
- mostly the 5 areas you have already got. I live in Riverbend where there are multiple dogs (I have 4) I am amazed of how many people walk the streets and the parks with their dogs and don't pick up their mess. I also have a good relationship with my neighbours to ensure mine are not annoying them.
- Keeping pets from disturbing others. That means keeping cats out of others gardens, keeping dogs from barking (excessively - we have a neighbour with a non-stop barker). I means keeping pets under control when walking and cleaning up after them, And zero tolerance for running loose.
- Keeping our pets healthy and working with the behavior so they can co-exist with other pets and people in our neighborhood. Obtaining pets from local rescues who need homes rather than purchasing pets from unsanctioned pet breeding businesses.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Responsible pet ownership means protecting and maintaining the physical and psychological well-being of your pet. This means ensuring your pet is safe, under your control, registered if necessary and not at risk of harming itself or harming/disturbing other people and their property.
- to provide a healthy happy environment for all your pets.
- Finished the questionnaire but no place for input???? Off leashes are fine but do not need more policies. One thing that can be done if there is an incident ( exchange pet licence tag numbers and call the city and the city can evaluate the incident)
- Maintaining control over your animal while out in public, looking after their wellbeing and cleaning up after them.
- meeting the needs of your pet. no pets should be allowed to be left outside for extended amounts of time.
- To care for the pets needs while not impacting the natural environment. Cats should not be allowed to roam free.
- Following the Bylaws and training your pet to listen and obey your commands
- Responsible pet ownership to me means: 1) picking up after your dog, 2) don't let your dog chase other people, cyclists and wildlife, 3) not walking more than 2 dogs, (I've been chased a cyclist, harassed by dogs as a pedestrian. I am terrified that I will get hurt one of these days.) senior citizen
- Owning and appropriately caring for a pet that is suited to my lifestyle and living environment. Providing quality food, shelter, training, attention and exercise in safe and stimulating spaces.
- Obeying bylaw regarding leashes. Having respect for your neighbours in regard to barking dogs.the shoreline along the bow river is not off leash everywhere. Off leash areas should be outlined when purchasing license
- Doing the right thing so pets, people and wildlife are safe.
- Not letting the purple elephant and the awful city counsel go on a POWER TRIP and try to limit how many dogs people can have.
- Responsible pet ownership means that I take full responsibility for the actions of my dog and how they effect others..
- Keeping ALL dogs on leashes unless in an off-leash park, pick up after your dog, and please, please please, do something about barking dogs...This is one area that dog owners have little regard for, when their dogs bark all day when left alone, or early in the morning and late at night.
- It means taking the responsibility for the life of a living, breathing creature. You need to provide the best possible life for an animal in your care.
- "The Laws as they stand are not ensuring pets are taken care of responsibly. Instead, they seem to seek to punish animals for their natural behaviour. I have emailed the city about this previously and I expect to see more moral laws.
- Language such as nuisance animals is barbaric!"
- Taking the time to educate yourself on animal behaviour and pet owner responsibilities before getting a pet (or immediately after).
- Ensuring your pet is in good health and has a safe environment to live in.

- Ensure that the pet is provided with a safe, prosocial, and happy home
- Responsible pet owners license their dogs. Vet checks, exercise, grooming, nutrition are all important.
- Pick up after your pet. Having your pet on a leash at all times unless in a designated off-leash area. Have your pet under control when in public areas. Dogs should not be allowed in playground areas or school fields. Pets should be licensed, socialized, spayed/neutered & receive appropriate care.
- To not have loud barking dogs left unattended outside
- keeping your animal under control, within your property limits if unaccompanied, all shots, pick-up after your pet (dog or cat).
- Spay/neuter should be mandatory for registered pets! Retail establishments should not be able to sell animals! They should partner with shelters and rescues to host adoptable animals. Feral cats should be acknowledged and protected - The City should support Trap Neuter Release initiatives.
- The commitment and accountability to take good care of one's pet, including provision of shelter, food, healthcare, training, exercise, and love.
- "Common sense and courtesy.
- Spay / neuter
- Regular vet visits for health
- ID tags, obedience training
- Make your home pet proof to keep pets safe and feed them properly (weight control)
- Regular exercise, but pick up after your pooch
- Socialize them so they don't scare people/other pets"
- "1. Owners of all dogs should be required to take them on a 12 hour socialization course at a registered humane society (or similar). This should be recorded as a part of their licence process.
- 2. There should be a way of uploading photographs of dogs who are not on leash to report their owners"
- It means enjoying your pet and caring for its health without causing harm to other people or pets or to the natural environment
- Cleaning up after your pet; not letting pets roam freely (including cats); train pets; regular vet visits to ensure health.
- Owners being responsible for their pet, but also communities taking collective responsibility for our animals and our public spaces (for example, off leash areas) and interactions with wildlife. I appreciate the city has a strong reputation for responsible pet ownership.
- Understand all municipal bylaws BEFORE owning a pet then following the bylaws, cleaning up after the pet in public areas, researching the right pet before purchasing, being mature enough to understand when they are unable to care properly for the pet and to turn it over so no harm is done.
- Following the bylaws. Too many times I witness irresponsible pet owners leaving dog feces behind. Dogs in parks, dogs on pathways. Enforce the damn bylaws already
- I think it's well past time that cats be licenced and not allowed to roam freely. I think cats should be governed exactly the same as dogs.

- protecting your pet and also protecting people from your pet - if it's aggressive. Also - being responsible to clean up after your dog and not bother others with your pet
- Sticking up for your family members when their city places unfair and bias restrictions based on other's dislike of our chosen family.
- Picking up after your dog on your property and when taking it for a walk. Keep cats in your yard and not letting it roam everywhere. Bring your pets indoors during the winter and at night. Limit barking. Press charges for those that cause animal cruelty of any kind including keeping the pets outside
- It means that pet owners ensure their pets are cared for in the best possible way. It also means that they obey all city bylaws relating to pet ownership.
- Ensure you animals are in good mental and body health or are being treated for any issues . Pets are out of harms ways, exercised , loved , cared for and is treated as the dogs wish to.. so run if they want to run sleep if they want to . but always in a safe caring environment.
- Caring for the pets you have, keeping them healthy and safe.
- Making sure your pet is under control and that you are picking up after it.
- As a responsible dog owner I have noticed a huge increase in the number of people NOT picking up after their pet. Often times pet owners will bag their dogs poop and leave it off the path. We have had to stop walking in many off leash areas because of this. I think more enforcement is needed.
- To me, responsible pet ownership means having your dog under control, especially on the walking and bike pathways. There is nothing worse than dogs jumping on you, running in front of you, or nipping at you while walking, running, or cycling. Dog owners need to understand dogs need to be in control
- Clean up after your pet; keep dogs on leash when walking on bike paths; dogs with any history of aggressive behaviour toward other dogs or people must be kept on leash
- We have seen over the last decades that animals in China that live in residents backyards and market have transported deadly diseases to humans. Therefore we should only allow pets in Calgary to be dogs and cats. I moved to the city to get away from other animals. Don't allow other pets. Also Noise
- "Keeping control of your dog. I have been attacked 3 times while riding my bike on Nose Hill Park over the last few years, totally unacceptable.
- Owners still not picking up dog waste."
- It means the onus of the pet, and its behaviour, is ultimately on the owner.
- Let us have chickens and bees within the city limits, please!
- It means that pets are trained and not taken advantage of. People should be required to train their dogs if they are going to own one and shouldn't be allowed to leave their cats outside due to the amount of birds and other wildlife they kill.
- I am a foster parent at the Calgary Humane Society. All animals should be registered at the day they are purchased, force to be chipped or tattooed. This way when the animal (f.ex.bunny) gets abandoned/ lost it is easy to find the owner and either penalize or safely return. PENALTIES and FEES!!!
- of neighbors and fellow residents.

- "Licensing your pets and ensuring proper vaccines are maintained.
- I also think the City should not mix offleash parks with bicycle paths. It's dangerous for everyone. Bikes often go too fast and animals can't get out of the way in time"
- picking up your dog's poop. There is too much dog poop on the empty lot directly across from my residence of 4315-75 St. NW, Calgary, AB (Bowness) left by people littering, thinking the lot is owned by City of Calgary and these people are negligent and hazardous.
- " -caring for the emotional and physical needs of an animal in your care
- - making sure your pet is not interfering with others freedom to move around the community/not interfering with others
- - ensuring you have the resources to care for the animal
- - cleaning up behind your pet"
- It means ensuring safety for your dog and other dogs as well as making sure people around your pet are safe.
- It means meeting the social, emotional, and physical needs of my pet while ensuring that they are not creating problems for anyone else.
- Taking care of the animal(s) in your care and being held responsible/accountable for the impact the animal(s) have on other people, animals, and the environment.
- Keeping your pet healthy and physically active (off leash dog parks are great for this) while ensuring every person and domesticated animal is safe with my pet's interactions with them.
- It means that if you exercise your right to owning a pet that you will also exercise all of the responsibilities. Failure to be responsible must be treated as abuse."
- "Following the rules and regulations, having control of my pet at all times, picking up after it
- Responsible pet ownership is a stewardship by ALL residents in a city of more dependent species. Though some may choose to take on this stewardship personally (the pet owners), all contribute to creating a healthy & peaceful environment (re cleanliness and designation of parks, interaction).
- Keeping the number of pets in a household to a manageable level (2 max); keeping pets under control - no barking, always on a leash, and adhering to bylaws that prohibit dogs from school yards, sports fields, playgrounds, etc. in order to keep those spaces safe for children.
- Taking care of your pet by providing necessities of life, comfort and respect while respecting those around you by allowing neighbours/ strangers/ visitors to live and move about unaffected by your pet.
- Monitoring and recognizing when animals are having behavior issues. In off-leash dog parks, I see owners let their dogs be aggressive towards other dogs and do not remove them from the situation. Or if the dog is nervous, the owners get upset at other owners when the other dogs are simply playing.
- A responsible pet owner is one that looks after the welfare of the pet(s) providing a comfortable quality of life, while also respecting neighbors, public population and property. This respect includes pet noise, smell, waste, trespassing, and use on public/private property.

- I took the time to read the "responsible pet ownership bylaw", it sound pretty good to me. The only thing I wish is that more of the "off leash" areas were totally fence. Dogs are like little children when they are playing. I get it, with the economy the way it is, put it on a list for the future
- Doing what is required to give you pet a happy, healthy life, while limiting impacts to fellow Calgarians.
- People with pets enjoy them and people without pets don't need to deal with them; ie no need to clean up after them or chase them out of my yard.
- Caring for your pets, ensuring your pets are fully vetted, ensuring your pets are licensed, and sharing your pets are happy
- People properly caring for and providing for their pets
- Any noise or smell that my pet makes will not leave my space (rented or owned) & create a nuisance for my neighbors. My pet will never run at large. I will not keep a pet that shows aggression towards people or other pets. I will license, micro-chip, & vaccinate my pet, & produce evidence of same
- As I understand, pets should be owned by individuals who are engaged and fully committed to train their pets to be an asset to pet ownership and and not reflect negative influences and/ or hostile attitudes instilled by pet owners on their pets. Often, pets take the blame for pet owners' motives.
- Keeping my animals healthy and happy
- To me, it's holding one self accountable for the care and wellbeing of pet, providing enrichment/positive quality of life for pet, proper training for positive behaviors and preventing any disturbances/damages pet may cause. And to be respectful as a person in general, clean up after pet.
- Providing for the needs of the pet ( food, love, vet, training ) and proper socialization. Respectful of people and other animals in public spaces and parks, by picking up after your dog and good recall.
- It means everything as a pet owner myself.
- Allow chickens!
- "If you dog shows ANY signs of running up to people or aggression to other dogs they should not be allowed off leash in any park/pathway, whether is on leash or off.
- I have a dog and don't go to specific locations because of a few inconsiderate dog owners."
- "Providing adequate food, water, shelter for the pet. As well as providing health care (vet visits etc...) and grooming to make sure pets are clean and healthy.
- When letting pets stay outside, making sure there is appropriate shelter provided."
- Provide animal with good quality of life and health standards.
- My pets are licensed, vaccinated and always under my care and control. This keeps my pets, others' pets, and the community safe.
- "A responsible owner must understand that animals are not accessories and sentient beings.
- That giving up your companion is not ok under any circumstances cause they made a commitment to them."

- Caring for pets by giving them all the necessities of life: food, appropriate shelter, protection from extreme weather, water, love. In addition. "responsible" means being accountable for your pet when you're in the community: cleaning up after your dog, keeping them on leash where appropriate, etc.
- "Housed
- Fed
- Loved - walks, family
- Not chained outside
- Clean"
- Accountability, safety of pets and the public, responsibility
- Pets are fully cared for, including food, shelter, veterinary care, training. Pets are not left outdoors or confined for extended periods of time, especially in extreme weather. Pets are picked up after ALWAYS. Owners understand their pets limits, especially at off leash parks regarding recall.
- It means you treat and care for you pet like it is your child, including taking responsibility for its actions and behaviours.
- Keeping your pet(s) safe healthy and we'll loved.
- Spayed/neuter animals that have recieved postive rienforcement training and can afford food, shelter and vet care on a regular basis and familiar with all city animal bylaws
- It means doing the right thing to ensure your pet's safety and happiness. It means cleaning up after your pet and making sure it behaves properly, receives mandatory shots, and be trained sufficiently. It is making sure they have what they need including food, water, shelter etc. for survival.
- Addressing and being responsible for your pets and all aspects of their care and wellbeing, while still being a good neighbor and citizen
- Well cared for, safe animals and people.
- Accountability for the overall well-being and safety of an animal in my care.
- taking care of any animals we may own humanly and in a way so they dont cause excessive disruption to neighbours
- Proving a safe, loving, nurturing home that meets all of the dogs basic needs such as food, water and shelter.
- An owner is provide the necessities including food and water, and also mental stimulation, protection from harm, warmth, security, care at all stages of life and at all times (24 hr care), indoor living, provide medical care in all stages of life
- Onus to provide a reasonable level of care and control of owned animals, regardless of species, for the welfare of the animals and the safety of the community.
- Financial means to care for your pet, vetting, grooming, feeding, vaccinations, spay/neuter, licensing, abiding by animal bylaws, training, and cleaning up dog poop in your yard.
- Being respectful of other people regardless if they have a dog or not and being responsible for the pets you have its not my responsibility to keep an unleashed dog in a leashed area away from me no matter how many times the owner says its ok
- "A responsible pet owner picks up after their pet.

- Also, I would like to see cat on a leash or at home rather than roaming through people's yards."
- RPO will not be achieved until all levels of government work together. Animals should be considered sentient beings & not property & subjected to cruelty such as abandonment leading to the overpopulation. Need to work with rescues & use all pet license revenue strictly for cat spay/neuter programs.
- Making sure all of your animals needs are meet
- Loving, caring for and being able to provide the necessities for your pet, including regular vet visits. Training and socializing your pet. Not leaving your pet in the car. Picking up after your pet and disposing in the garbage. Making sure your pet is safe and secure in the car, backyard etc.
- "Responsible pet ownership means:
- -providing the appropriate health care, vaccinations, food, water, shelter
- -spay/neuter
- -having control of dogs, carrying poop bags, cleaning up poop at off leash areas
- -being educated before you add a pet to your family
- -following laws created to protect pets"
- Responsible pet ownership means to me..making sure you pick a breed that is suited to you. Such as amount of exercise , stimulation required. Also spaying and neutering your pet. Exercising your pet regularly, picking up any poop , in your yard or in public, dog park. Providing proper food .
- respecting the pet , your neighbours and the community . This means pet on leash- dogs and cats alike. Training your pet responsibly. Picking up waste after your pet in compostable bags and depositing it into appropriate waste bins. Caring for pet, not leaving barking dogs outside.
- It means being in control of my pet and my's interactions with the city, but it's my responsibility to ensure the wellbeing and proper interaction of my pet. We are responsible pet owners with high levels of training for our pets, our pets can have more leeway accessing public spaces(eg.restaurants)
- I believe responsible pet ownership means treating your animal with respect. Also, having the dog on a leash at a public park. If a dog is on the grass at a public park, are you required to have it on a leash? Are there any pet bylaws regarding dogs and wildlife? ( Such as chasing ducks or geese. )
- Healthy and safe environments for all pets. Keeping your animals under control and cleaning up after them on your own and public property. Having an appropriate number of Pets per household.
- I think of pet owners who respect city bylaws designed to protect people, natural spaces and wildlife. Unfortunately, I have encountered an increasing number of dog owners in recent years who do not respect posted regulations and seem unconcerned when aggressive dogs threaten people and animals.
- Pet owners need to have 100% control over their pets at all times. ie, no dogs off leash except in one of Calgary's 150 designated off leash areas. And cats shouldn't be allowed to roam around, pooping in people yards or digging in gardens.
- Pet ownership means lifelong care of pet. This means committing to the relationship for your pet's entire life. It also mean that recognizing that owning a pet requires an investment of time and money.

- I've already completed your online survey. I'm hoping someone sees this. Your process is flawed. [personal information removed] Your March 2020 - Phase 2 Research focus group discussions never happened. 311 had little if any knowledge about this.
- I think more focus on spay and neutering and mandatory training of dogs. No more back yard breeders who lie about vaccinations and volunteer rescues have to donate millions of their own time and money to clean up the mess no government takes seriously.
- To me it means, once you adopt a pet, it's yours for the rest of that pet's life. Not dumping it off because your lifestyle outgrew it. Also choosing the pet that best suits your household and educate yourself on the animal's needs before making the commitment.
- Safety for both the community and the pets we own.
- Respecting your neighbors. No dogs barking even 1 time in the mornings! That's all it takes to wake us up, which is usually around 5:00am, ridiculous. We don't all have your schedule, some of us need to sleep till 9:00 or whatever. Quick killing our shrubs, our city is now a dog urinal!
- There needs to be added responsibility to dog owners when their backyard backs onto a public space, soccer fields, bike paths, walking paths, etc. People using/walking in these public spaces should be able to do so without being harassed by barking or aggressive animals.
- Being respectful and showing empathy to individuals who are out for a walk or run by putting your dog on a leash! Especially when you have been attacked recently. Some dog owners just defend their dog vs people. Bad neighborhoods - Valley Ridge, NW Valley Ridge Golf Course and Cresmont!
- Pets are taken care of. A suggestion: please make the ID smaller/ create a licence card that we can carry in case we left the pet ID at home. The metal is heavy for my teacup puppy and most of the time I don't put it on her.
- Providing a reasonable amount of care and companionship to animals, regardless of species.
- Owners that take care of their pets, i.e. train them, provide food, shelter, exercise, pick up their feces and don't let them be a bother to neighbors, example left alone in the yard to bark. Either the owners leave them in the yard when they are gone or don't bother to quiet them.
- Providing your pet with the 5 freedoms, ensuring they are safe as well as the public is safe as well.
- I really want people to control their dogs at the park and pick up their poo
- Having your dogs not urinate or defecate on community facilities such as skating rinks, picnic tables and park benches
- You need to provide a stricter framework for dogs barking and being left outside alone. Streamline the complaint process and tackle the issue quicker. Noise is an issue and vicious dogs too.
- Responsible pet ownership is being able to learn and train your pet to compliment neighborhoods by
- Following all bylaws while in leashed and off-leash areas. Caring properly for your animals with all vaccinations up to date. Regularly exercising to keep them healthy, and social interaction with other animals to develop social skills to avoid aggression.

- Being aware of local laws. Appropriately managing interactions between your pet and humans, other pets and wild animals. Picking up dog poop and ensuring your dog doesn't destroy or damage personal property.
- Treating animals with respect, following the laws, cleaning up after them, treating aggression.
- The onus to provide a reasonable level of care & control of owned animals, regardless of species, for the welfare of the animals & the safety of the community.
- "Ensuring that the pet is well socialized, for example one's dog should be ""good"" with other people and other dogs (off-leash dog parks are a great help with this).
- Picking up and properly disposing of poop.
- Keeping the pet under control. (Easier said than done!)"
- The biggest issue I see with non-responsible pet ownership is dog owners not picking up dog poo. It is disgusting and a pet and human safety issue.
- Being able to provide a healthy, safe, home for an animal that neither bothers or is bothered by other animals/wildlife. Importantly (to me) this includes safe areas to exercise/socialize them which offers small dog (eg.
- "Pets should be under the control of owners at all times.
- Specifically, a dog that is not on its own property & that bites a person on that person's property or on public property should be seized by the City & quarantined & returned to the owner only if identified as vicious & kept muzzled."
- Understanding that animals, especially dogs, may not always behave perfectly, especially if they have been rescued and had a traumatic life. Understanding that, although your big dog may seem playful to you, it should not chase smaller dogs out of the park. owning as many animals as can be cared for
- Ensuring your pets are well cared for, and have plenty of freedom
- It includes making sure that your pets are not a nuisance to other animals and people. For dogs, it means being in control so that they don't jump up on other people when out for a walk. For cats, it means that they stay on your own property and don't disturb other cats who are indoors.
- Everyone should be able to enjoy their home whether they want to plant a garden, have a dog or have a beehive. Their enjoyment of their property with a pet or bees should not impact the enjoyment of your property. Ie: my neighbour's dog never shuts up and uses my front lawn as a toilet.
- Caring for your pet or pets and making sure you are considerate of your neighbours. People before pets.
- As long as the pet is treated as a being and the neighbors with the same respect you are expecting to be treated I think that is responsible enough.
- I believe it means creating an environment for your pet where they are fed, mentally satisfied and safe from abuse or irresponsible breeding. I also believe owners should be accountable for providing medical care and behavioural training when needed.
- "Having your pets licensed, whether cats or dogs. Not having animals running through neighbourhoods unsupervised.

- For dog owners, whether runners, walkers, or people cycling with their dogs, they pick up waste. For dogs that have a history of aggression, muzzled in off-leash zones."
- Providing a reasonable level of care and control over pets, regardless of species, for the welfare of the animals and the safety of the community
- Spay, neuter your pets. Ensure roaming cats don't create a nuisance. I consider letting your cat go outside to be responsible pet ownership. No other major city in Canada requires you to keep your cat inside or only on your property. Let's get in line with other Canadian communities.
- Pets should not impact other people in any negative way. Live and let live is important too, people should be allowed to have pets that don't cause other people grief or frustration.
- As someone who likes animals, but has no pets, the essence of responsible pet ownership is understanding that your pets are precious to you, but not necessarily to others. This means enjoying your pets while keeping them close and quiet, respecting on-leash areas and cleaning up after them.
- Control of barking dogs inside properties. This is a major disruption for young and growing families with children who sleep during the day, for shift workers who sleep during the day, for people who work from home, and for peace of mind for residents in proximity to households with barking dogs.
- "Responsible pet owner", as "Calgary bylaw enforcement", means to me mostly a contradiction in terms. Dogs still attacking children, parks & streets glisten with excrement, unleashed dogs in restricted areas, barking dogs abound. You would know this if you investigated complaints & did your job.
- For me, responsible pet ownership is two things: 1) your pets are not disruptive, burdensome, problematic or pose any risk whatsoever to others, and 2) your pet is safe and cared for.
- Responsible pet ownership means being considerate of your community while caring for an animal in a respectful manner. Leaving your dog(s) tied up in your yard all day for it to bark at everything that moves is a disservice to both parties.
- Responsible pet ownership is the ability of an owner to maintain a good environment for the pet, monitor the pet and limit disruptive behaviours of such pets.
- Take care if it's sick; pick up waste; correct food; have someone take care of dog if you leave; leash; don't hurt; don't forget; clean litter box; daily exercise; keep healthy and happy; clean cage; don't scare; give attention; vaccines; good environment (dog needs to run)

Cats

Roaming Cats

- My indoor cat is a ninja at getting outside despite my best efforts. Consider selling "cat-ios" at cost to the public to help owners contain the roaming.
- I don't believe cats should roam free unless they are in a rural area. Cats are a leading cause in bird population declines and if they are to be left outside it should be mandatory to have a bell.
- Stray cats could be taken care of (i.e., fed and provided veterinary care) at stations around the city and fixed. Alternatively, a comprehensive system of foster care w/ an adoption program should be implemented. Implement an education program to have 'owned' cats remain indoors.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Cats should not be allowed to roam free. Feral ones should at least be caught and spayed, stray but domesticated should be rehomed.
- There are people who feel it would be ok to poison them. Cats should not be forced to stay inside all their lives - perhaps providing incentives for cat owners to build/buy catios - allows cats to be outside but in a protected environment
- 1st of all you should adopt programs as in some US cities where they recognize the value of feral cats to control vermin and thus catch the females and spay them and release them again. Fines for those who let their cats roam free.
- Humans should not let their cats roam free. Stray cats must be rescued and placed in shelters or foster homes until they are adopted, and should be spayed or neutered.
- Owned cats should not be roaming within city limits. Stray cats should be taken in and adopted.
- The safety of these cats. Too many pet owners allow their indoor/outdoor cats to roam their neighbourhoods unsupervised. Putting them at risk of being hit by cars or injured by other animals or wildlife. There should be greater emphasis on allowing controlled outdoor access only.
- I have no problems with roaming cats, and judging by the number I see in my neighbourhood, few of my neighbours do either. The current by-law seems very difficult to enforce. Perhaps the focus should be shifted to specific cats that cause problems.
- I think cats should not be allowed to roam free - they get hit by cars, get into neighbour's gardens and sandboxes, and kill far too many birds. They should be allowed to enjoy the outdoors, but not unsupervised.
- If they are owned the owners should be fined. If they are feral, initiative to TNR and create community feeding programs should be implemented.
- Responsible cat ownership means making cats indoor animals. Feral cats should be rehomed as well as strays.
- My main concern is the safety of the cat. If it roams in a relatively quiet area and has a home it can return to when it wants that's ok. Cats roaming around busy streets can easily be run over by cars and hence should be humanely caught and taken to safety.
- At first people followed ruling, but last 2 years I have seen cats wandering regularly and have my front door regularly fouled by someone's cat. Tougher fines and more advertising cat bylaws are needed.
- I agree that cats should not be allowed to roam free, however I understand that it can be extremely difficult to keep a cat confined and that doesn't contribute to their quality of life. I think 'catios' or cat proofing a yard might be a good way to combat this.
- They kill the bird population, ruin landscaping and I have seen cases of attack. They need to be managed better.
- None really but I suppose I don't see it often so it doesn't occur to me to be concerned. As long as cats have bells on so they don't massacre birds, I think it's not a huge deal.
- As a modern society & a compassionate city, we should strive to have NO homeless animals on our streets. We should be a No Kill city. They are sentient creatures & we as a society should be actively working to have them cared for. Minimally a TNR program in place.

- "1.Garden digging,we use garden soil that is harmful to cats
- 2.People who own them take no responsibility for them
- 3.Getting harmed by dogs in their own yard,if they(cat) gets hurt or killed,why should the dog owners be responsible for vet bills etc"
- Cats must be treated the same as dogs from a guardianship point of view. Cat guardians must have the same responsibilities (care, management, costs) as dog guardians. Cat fees must be brought level with dog fees. End the cat subsidization for guardians who are less responsible than dog guardians.
- Feral or lost cats should be picked up and handled by the humane society.
- The danger is that they will suffer incredibly. As previously mentioned pets should be licensed tattooed and or microchipped. The owner who then released them are fined. The animals are put up again for re-adoption.
- Pet cats should be kept indoors for their own safety. Healthy stray cats should be sheltered and adopted out. Cats that are too ill or injured for adoption should be treated or euthanized if rehab is not possible.
- most people don't know the calgary bylaws in regards to outdoor cats, and they often get hit by cars, or eaten by coyotes. I've personally known many people who were completely unaware that it is against calgary bylaws to have an outdoor cat. Perhaps a reduced spay/neuter cost will help, and a PSA
- They should be sterilized, vaccinated, treated for parasites, provided with permanent ID and released back to where they came from provided they are provided with necessities and monitored. It's inevitable that there will be feral cats and maintaining a healthy stable population should be a goal.
- Cats destroy property, leave feces In yards that are not their own, ruin flower beds, bother other people when allowed to roam free.
- I have 0 issues with it unless they are not fixed. I actually think the city should just accept that some owners let their cats out and sell a specific license for a roaming cat that costs more and can't be obtained unless the cat is fixed and vaccinated. If owners submit yearly vaccinations
- "- Shouldn't be allowed to roam free.
- - Same rules as dogs.
- - Stay on a leash.
- - Should be allowed outside on own property. "
- "- Dog eating it
- - Feces all over property
- - Same rule as dogs, needs to be enforced
- - Cats should be allowed to go out, but needs proper fencing"
- "- Shouldn't be allowed
- -Dog eating it
- -Feces

- -Same rules as dogs
- -Cold weather
- -Allowed to go out, but not roam
- -Fence"
- Yes, they wreck gardens. They poop in gardens and dig up plants. It's a concern for pregnant women. They should have the same rules as dogs. You can walk your cat on a leash. You can have a cat offleash area (like a caged in kids play area). What I really worry about is a cat coming into my yard, and my dog attacking it or even killing it.
- We are very concerned about the health & safety of roaming cats. We would like more education of the public to how detrimental it is for the cats. Cat traps should be easier & cheaper to rent.
- What concerns me is I have neighbours that like to shoot these poor animals. I believe they deserve better, we need a free of charge spay and neuter program provided and to push adoption programs. We have so many cats/ animals that need homes to be off the streets. A catch spay neuter adoption/teac
- The human who lets them roam free is irresponsible. Cats do not need to be outside unless they are restrained (leash or cat run)
- There needs to be lost cost spay neuter clinics to reduce litters. More needs to be done to tell the public how many cats even dogs are euthanized so people understand the problem. The city could build a large cat shelter and allow rescues to use it to help their cats find homes manned by volunteers
- Crapping in flower beds. Home owner is responsible for picking up trap to catch roaming cats and taking to pound. Bylaw should provide this service.
- I foster dogs and some have reactive tendencies with cats. When on walks I can control them but can't control cats in my yard or on my front deck or digging in my flower beds or under the deck etc. I would receive a fine for a dog off leash cats should be the same
- They will be eaten by our wild life. They will freeze to death in the winter. Why can't people take them to the humane society instead of letting them go free.
- The damage they cause to our gardens, they can be aggressive which prevents my children from being able to enjoy our backyard when one gets in. People should not be allowed to let their cats roam - the same rules should apply to cats that apply to other pets.
- I prefer people to look after their cats but I know as a. At owner it is sometimes difficult to keep them in. Our one escapes no matter what we have done to stop it. It's not ideal but respect from individuals is needed towards the roaming cats. They do help to keep mouse populations down.
- Use all pet license revenue to alter & reduce cats that will lower animal control costs. Work with all levels of gov't for stronger legislation; as abandonment leads to overpopulation. The cat crisis causes anguish amongst those at rescues, kill shelters & vet clinics who destroy healthy cats.
- Mainly their propensity to "litter" at the neighbors. Unclear how to stop them. Also concerned about their impact on the bird populations. Require them to be "belled"?
- The biggest concern with outdoor cats is that they kill billions of birds every year. Bird numbers are in steep decline due to cats, habitat destruction and a host of other problems. Cats are not native species; they have been introduced. The City of Calgary needs stiff fines for people allowing their cats to run free and it should not be up to neighbours to trap their neighbour's cats in order to have something done about them. There are options for allowing cats outside, such as having an enclosed space outside for the cat so it isn't roaming around. More education about this would be helpful.

Feral Cats

- They are dangerous. I don't know that I've encountered a feral cat. But I believe they should be contained and relocated or euthanized.
- That old ideas such as cats are a pet to be dumped, non neutered or homed properly, can lead to domestic cats having babies. Humans are the issue. Natural wild cats evolved because of the environment and serve a purpose, catch rats and pests.
- That they might not get enough to eat
- That the cats may be hit by vehicles, which is hard for everyone involved. There may be cat fights, which can seriously hurt cats. There may be spread of disease. Also, I worry about feral cats' health, ability to find enough food and water, and a good shelter - their quality of life.
- Disease
- How quickly cats reproduce ie the fact that they're probably not fixed.
- see number 1
- I think there should be a program to capture and rehome them to get them off the streets.
- Breeding mostly and their lack of needs being met
- Try to rehome or foster whenever possible!
- Not much personal concern though I recognize it may be a concern for others.
- Only concern is breeding. Animal rescue groups, or the city, can catch/spay or neuter/and release.
- Feral cats may enter a private yard and harm pets.
- I have seen literally zero feral cats in the city. There are so few, it is not a current concern, so whatever is being done is working in my opinion. Keep doing that.
- They should be relocated with the aid of barn cat programs. Feral cats have no place in the city and are not a native species to Alberta. They were at one point owned cats that have been abandoned and left to reproduce in huge numbers.
- Risk to domestic cats, cost to city, risk to birds and other wildlife, proliferation of cats and kittens in shelters.
- I don't have any concerns except if they are sick and start acting weird. As long as the public is informed on what to do in such situations, I am ok with feral cats.
- Further reproducing. Not sure how that can be handled.
- they can be hit by vehicles and attacked by animals. they crap everywhere
- none
- deceases
- Unvaccinated but otherwise no issue
- Same as above

- Not enough resources to make sure they are properly vaccinated and spay and neutered.
- Disease and quality of life.
- Because they are not vaccinated they spread disease. Toxoplasmosis spread by cats feces is dangerous to babies, immunocompromised people, or pregnant women. Cats dedicating in gardens and around homes could potentially spread this parasite and other diseases.
- Starving freezing having kittens
- I don't see them much, but I know they are a big problem in rural areas and shelters are over full. I think TNR is the only way that makes sense.
- diseases they may be carrying
- none, they are wildlife in my opinion
- We have a couple that come around and they're really mean and fight with other cats. There is one that if you get too close it starts hissing at you. 311 had no suggestions other than trapping and calling a foundation. Meow Foundation suggested I feed them and help them out. Brutal advice.
- detriment to wildlife, death and injury to domestic cats, injury to self
- Same as above.
- Destruction of native species such as birds. They attract predators such as coyotes and are also vulnerable to being hit by a car as well as death and disease from malnutrition, illness or due to being exposed to elements.
- As responsible citizens we should help to get them to shelters
- Feral cats may have diseases that will spread to stray cats.
- Just being a general pest, pooping in garden, yard etc.
- That they are well taken care of. Spay and neuter and return keeps the population from growing. They also need access to shelter and food water.
- None.
- Feces. Wild birds are killed. Draw coyotes in to urban areas as a good source.
- As mentioned above, plus uncontrolled reproduction.
- None
- People doing harm to them.
- Still destructive to the environment.
- No specific concerns
- Same as for cats roaming free.
- Feral cats also draw in larger predators like Bobcats and Coyotes, putting the animal and small children at risk.
- Population control, spreading disease (public/animal health), conflicts with public/other animals, animal welfare, negative impact on native wildlife
- They urinate and spread feces around my property.
- Numbers getting out of hand

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Animal messes that are left for someone else to clean up; uncontrolled breeding; disease spreading; risk of emotional damage caused by accidentally running over an animal that shouldn't be on the road.
- No concerns but they should be observed for disease.
- They are a risk to struggling bird populations, and some other animals as well (endangered squirrels etc.). Not to mention we get cats wandering into our yard with dogs who are unfriendly with them. It should not be on us if our dogs kill or severely injure a cat that we did not want in our yard.
- Above noted.
- It's sad. But they aren't aggressive.
- Adding to the feral population & living a hard life subject to sickness & injury. No vaccinations perhaps spreading illness.
- N/A
- I like the TNR (trap neuter release) programs provided by MEOW and others. It would be good for the City to provide a program like this to reduce the feral cat population.
- my concern is for their welfare and the trouble they have in obtaining food and shelter
- Chances are they have not been spayed or neutered so will keep procreating and causing a greater issue with their Feral babies.
- Disease and injury.
- Same as above, there should be more emphasis on getting them off the streets for all
- Feral cats can be left alone.
- They might carry diseases.
- I have never seen a feral cat.
- Just too many babies, a cruel existence. In Istanbul, they used to (maybe still do) round up feral dogs and cats who the people fed, would spay or neuter, then return to the neighbourhood that took care of them.
- Constantly breeding increasing numbers. Spreading disease.
- None
- Nothing. They probably clean the mice pop
- Disease vector, loss of indigenous species
- The same concern re: stray cats. I'm not worried about human:feral cat interaction, but domestic cat:feral cat issues. Our cats should be able to enjoy OUR backyard.
- poop.
- Don't want them crapping in my garden
- that they are starving and being abused because they have no owner
- In addition to the problems with stray cats, feral cats are more likely to spread disease and act more aggressively to other wildlife and humans.
- Disease
- There are none in my area and I do not have a cat that roams at large so for me I do not have any concerns. However any animal that is not vaccinated can pose certain risks others.

- Have not been an issue for me.
- Feral cats are there due to human stupidity largely. They lead a miserable short life scrounging for food, freezing in winter, females always pregnant. It is cruel and every year hundreds more spread and fight and suffer.
- The fact that some are not neutered and that feral cat populations are reaching spikes and causing an unnecessary strain on resources that Calgary provides, as well the damage they cause to property-the accidents they're involved in. It's all so unnecessary and ignored.
- fighting with house cats. attracting coyotes to an area
- The people who keep dumping cats causing this to be a challenge.
- should be fixed
- Have not encountered feral cats, have all belonged to neighbours.
- The issue with feral (and stray) cats is mainly toward impacts to pets and small children in yards, playgrounds etc.
- None
- Feral cats add to the population of animals requiring homes in the city, and have the potential to harm other animals which is worrisome.
- feral cats must be trapped if they're a neighborhood issue..spay/neuter/euthanize should be options..HIGH STIFF for people who feed or leave out food for them...they can catch mice/gophers for foods...
- See above
- Cats hurting themselves or other animals - uncontrolled reproducing. We don't need anymore animals. Too many in shelters.
- Zero. They're wild. Let them live how they are living and surviving. I've also never seen one personally in 35 years, or know anyone that has ever, in Calgary
- Feral cats have the same concerns as free roaming cats, except in the case of free roaming cat the cats owner is allowing such behavior. Feral cat populations should be properly managed and controlled.
- Feral cats are just as bad as a sick raccoon. They have a high birthing rate, are more dangerous to humans due to their aggressive nature and contact with bacteria and disease. They should be culled from cities.
- In barns, shops or acreages they have a place otherwise I think they should be caught and brought to the city or humane society.
- They need to be neutered!
- That they are contributing to the stray/homeless pet population, and they they are suffering/cold/hungry/ect.
- Huge loss of songbirds
- Not an issue in my area.
- They can be aggressive and who knows what diseases they may carry.
- They're great.

- Concerns: Feral cats may have rabies, worms, or other diseases that can be transmitted to other animals or humans; they can reproduce without limits leading to overpopulation; they are not socialized and may attack other animals or children.
- Disease, Potential for roaming cats to injure other animals that may not be loose, potential for human injury, out of control population.
- Their reproduction. Disease.
- For the most part, I don't think this is an issue, at least not that I see.
- So long as they don't attack people or pets, I have no concerns.
- They need to be spayed and neutered to manage the population.
- Their health
- Not a large concern that I know of in my area. Most are owned cats.
- They are impacting the environment by killing native species.
- Not sure I have seen feral cats within my area, see roaming cats, can't say for sure if they are feral or not, but do know not all I see are feral as some appear to be too friendly.
- Their damage to small wild animals as well as damage to people's property and belongings. Incredibly frustrating to deal with.
- Feral cats can carry communicable diseases and pose a threat to the stray cats. They can also be aggressive and a nuisance. They are also not likely to be neutered/spayed so can contribute to a higher than necessary population.
- "1. Lack of adequate food shelter and safety for the animal.
- 2. Birds become a main staple food source for feral cats. Song birds have plummeting numbers and as a result we see implications in our urban ecosystems.
- 3. Reproducing in mass number of kittens due to not being spayed/neutered."
- they should be caught and fixed
- These also crap in my yard and need to be rounded up.
- They multiply
- Feral cats should be taken to farms.
- Harrassing my indoor pets, spraying and pooping on my property, parasites.
- Feral cats if caught should be spayed or neutered and then set free. They are wild treat them like a wild animal. They do not adapt to home life after being feral.
- Numerous litters increasing the feral population.
- They should be captured and put to sleep. Feral cats are strays and offspring of strays. They would not be there is original owners kept their cats or took them to shelters instead of leaving them to run.
- Mostly the possibility of diseases they could spread. They are also another source of food for wildlife.
- Their well being. They need care too. Extra shelters outside in the winter
- No concerns unless they are aggressive or spread disease. They control mice and other rodents in areas naturally. If they become too numerous trapping and relocating or killing the animal would be acceptable.

- They may carry disease. They may attack if cornered. A nuisance if they are digging up gardens, killing birds, going through garbage.
- None
- Breeding, pooping and peeing in my flower beds and yard
- Simply put I feel sorry for them. They are NOT protected, safe nor do they feel constant Love and support from a human. They may contain disease due to non routine vaccinations but ultimately they NEED to be respected and protected by mean people. Citizens should be able to call for pick up
- Should be relocated, if possible to farm land.
- None
- Some one needs to feed and do catch and release to colony sterilization maybe paid for by city . Never have I noticed feral cats in Calgary though
- That they dont get enough to eat .
- The same as stray cats
- Disease, sickness. Potential for contact with humans.
- Spread of disease and Contamination of Gardens with faecal material.
- They need to be caught. They make coyotes stay in the area
- None.
- Reproduction and health in general.
- Feral cats can spread disease to people and pets, resulting in their own demise as they often need to be euthanized if disease is found.
- Feral cats do not have maintained health and well-being and can be the carrier of disease such as toxoplasmosis and feline leukemia, which can be passed to other animals and in some cases humans.
- Being killed by people who don't care for them or see them as pests
- None in terms of them living on their own terms. Help them with feed and illness. And monitor. I agree with TNR.
- They can be a danger to humans and other animals.
- Same.
- Same as above, plus they climb on porch railings, jump/climb onto the roof chasing squirrel's, birds (which I love) dig up flowers, grass to urinate/spray, scat which allows other cats to do the same. I've tried every thing from auto sprinklers to wire barrier fencing to little or no avail.
- I have no experience with feral cats to speak of
- Similar to concerns above. They kill native wild life, can carry diseases, and can mess in gardens.
- Attacking domestic cats
- none
- They are hard to catch or know where the owners live. My neighbor saved a feral cat that roams free. How do I catch it as it's feral.

- Feral and at large house cats kill millions of song birds a year.
- KEEP ANY AND ALL CATS OFF THE STREETS PERIOD.
- I think the number of stray cats should be controlled
- They are not usually spayed or neutered and increase the feral population.
- That they don't have a home especially in the winter.
- No comment as have no experience with them
- Unsanitary, unsafe, messy and noisy.
- They carry horrific disease!! Cat feces is very dangerous to children and pregnant women, we need to destroy feral cats, it would be terrible to end up like Florida where a person cannot even use the grass on lawns ect because of feral cat feces, never mind rabbis, worms, etc. etc.
- Same as above....that they are not hurt...hungry or cold
- They could carry disease. They can be aggressive and harm small children or small pets.
- I have welfare concerns with feral cats and exploding population problems. I'm not sure what the city does now but should consider trap-neuter-return programs to manage feral populations.
- " -It may be difficult to know for sure that a cat is feral and not stray
- -feral cats should be left in the wild unless In danger or unhealthy / or trained to be comfortable around people, other cats, and with being indoors before being adopted/ or spayed or neutered before returning outdoors"
- Diseases, feral cat fights, shelter
- Feral cats reproduce rapidly and are not native predators. They are an unnatural introduced species that should be eliminated.
- Should do our best to trap them and reduce the feral population.
- I haven't seen any.
- As above -- disease transmission from feces and songbird.

- Disease.
- "I actually adopted a captured feral cat - and have no regrets in that regard, though definitely not an experience that appeals to everyone - and NOT an experience for the first time cat owner.
- Mostly shitting in play areas/gardens, and the whole ""quality of life"" ethics concern."
- Population control. Catch, spay and release opportunities for cat rescuers should be encouraged and promoted. Those deemed adoptable, can and should be re-established for domestication.
- That feral cats are just the result of humans who let their cats out unfixed/unspayed to get pregnant and have kittens. Education to the public is necessary to get away from the old cat culture of cats should be roaming. these situations would be better reported + helped if everyone knew it's not ok
- That they are not vaccinated or spayed /neutered and could multiply very quickly leaving little to no food to sustain a colony or transmit worms and disease.
- They could harm children and leave their poop in kids sandbox. They are at risk of being hit by cars, killed by wildlife.
- Have not encountered any that are truly feral, with the exception at animals shelters. Stray cats brought into CHS that are feral or than often euthanized due to lack of socialization and non adopt ability. Can these animals rather be fixed and then released back into the city?
- Cat feces are dangerous to children and can often be found places where children play such as sandboxes, backyards and playgrounds. Feral cats also have not had veterinary care so they may carry and spread disease.
- I think TNR should be undertaken and medical care offered when needed. And they should be in safe place with access to food, water, and shelter and left to live their life.
- The city is doing nothing about them
- I think there should be a spay/neuter and release. I hate to see them out there but they don't do well in care b
- Rabies or other diseases. Also many are frostbitten and starving which is cruel.
- Feral cats are just 'doing their thing' - humans don't value animals (cats especially). It is unfair to them. My concerns are for their safety and well-being.
- That the city does not make spay and neutering free or near free. Too high of costs in vet community causes a direct affect on those who cannot afford it. Thus a population explosion. Poor people do better with a pet. Not enough programs. Needs to be city wide @ the cheapest cost possible!!!
- Same as point 1, and they are also a little more unpredictable
- Quick rise in MORE feral cats with no spaying/neutering; getting into garbage.
- Same as above
- Same as above, over population, spreading disease.

- Disease spreading
- As for owned cats, my main concern is the killing of birds.
- "DO NOT KILL THEM IT DOESN'T WORK
- The neuter spay release program is the only effective solution invest more in those programs"
- Cats could significantly reduce bird populations, add claw marks to wooden fences and could mate en mass. Maybe only spayed and neutered cats should get a special collar and tag to identify them as being permitted outdoors?
- Sad to see them without shelter but cats are incredibly saavy
- That they a spayed/neutered. Cats shouldn't start life feral.
- Potential for attacking children not all feral cats react same I have dealt with feral cats where they were friendly and eventually able to house and than their ones who can be way more dangerous than adult tigers or lions approaching with individual basis to identify where new animals apply
- Feral cats, and rabbits, should be eradicated.
- My concern is for the cats rather than for the community. These cats must have a very hard life in Calgary and should be helped if possible.
- Need to be caught n spayed
- Same as above
- Unfortunately, they should be caught and neutered or put down.
- Haven't come across feral cats

- I don't see any
- The same as above.
- Potentially unsterilized, unvaccinated, FeLV/FIV positive. Cat fights. Hit by car. People abusing free roaming cats. Coyote attacks, bird attacks.
- Feral cats are a major problem from a humane perspective. They often live short, malnourished, difficult lives and have the capacity to breed rapidly and spike the population far beyond what is sustainable.
- Unsafe for themselves

- I just feel bad for them honestly.
- carry disease, destroy gardens. should not be allowed
- The city should make it illegal to in any way sell or adopt an animal that isn't not fixed without a breeding licence. Do not leave it up to individual owners to decide if animals are spayed or neutered.
- The same as above, but also the fact that they do not survive long. They also continue to bred which adds to the problem.
- None. i have never encountered one.
- They Increase the population
- If a feral cat is bothersome, it should be caught and put down.
- None
- They carry disease and it's an unhealthy life. Populations can sky rocket so they must be controlled even if that means euthanasia.
- They provide prey for predators which can cause predators to come into contact with humans.
- Mainly the health of the cats. they didn't ask to be feral or to have to live outside in our winter conditions. More often than not they have been dumped, then reproduce, and have no choice.
- I am concerned about their health and ability to spread disease. That said, they keep down the population of many nuisance species.
- Breeding. How do we control having more feral cats.
- Same as above and the fact that they can cause harm to reproduce with other cats. No control of the cat population.
- Safety issue
- Danger to small children and other small pets within ones own property.
- feral cats should be dealt with by a trap, neuter, return program
- They can be aggressive
- they can die from hunger, disease or hit by a vehicle and end up dead somewhere
- Should they not be trapped & dealt with ?
- They will always exist but I think better cat bylaws will help
- Safety of other animals and people. Feral cats should be rescued and fostered/adopted.
- Feral cats can be a threat to domesticated cats and spread disease.
- Unintentional breedings and disease. Also harm to birds.
- Diseases, killing birds, making a mess.
- Health issues passed on to other stray animals, or possibly children.
- Worried about their well-being, plus damage to the eco-system and property damage
- I don't think there are feral. I think the cat is owned but by someone who doesn't care for the animal or others. Any cat roaming should be removed. Cats are becoming a huge issue as owners say cats need to roam or they destroy. Wrong they still destroy our roaming, just other people's stuff
- Cat feces and wildlife predation - especially birds.
- None really within city limits.
- You don't know which ones are feral and which aren't.

- Same as for domestic cats - You don't know what contaminants they leave in garden beds.
- Disease mostly, and over population
- These cats are more likely to find themselves in a difficult situation, whether it be facing harsh weather conditions or injured/killed.
- I never see them but if they're roaming too I'd be worried they may hurt my cats (who are tied up when outside). Perhaps diseases too but I know most can be dealt with.
- Only that they should be neutered and released to help ensure a limited population. How are feral cats different than bobcats?
- None - I've not seen any in Calgary, and most strays would be picked up by animal rescues.
- No concern, I will be only concerned when the city gets involved between neighbours..it makes it more complicated
- The potential for population increase, and attracting wildlife that prey on cats (like, coyotes).
- Carry disease.
- Impact on wildlife, ie. birds and injuries to the cats themselves from vehicle impact and abuse.
- None, except for how owned-cats being let loose when they are not spayed or neutered may contribute to the feral population. But really, I'd rather cats than mice or other small, invasive, critters.
- Feral cats should be collected, neutered and released in a wilderness park.
- Rabies and procreation.
- I feel that feral cats need to be supported through proper comprehensive spay /neuter ID release and care programs. There are many reputable organizations in the province that would be willing to support the city with such initiatives.
- None. All of the ones in my area are owned.
- No concerns; not aware this is an issue in Calgary?
- Concerned for wildlife such as birds and squirrels. Population control is also an issue
- They are not being cared for.
- the safety of the cat is primary, that the cats don't have medical and safe support and food as needed.
- All of the above issues (spread of disease, property damage, harm local bird population, dangerous for cat due to cars and urban wildlife). Cats also rapidly reproduce so feral populations can grow quickly.
- Re home if able to fix if not
- I haven't seen any in my area and don't have concerns about the existing population of feral cats, but I believe all domestic cats should have to be spayed/neutered to reduce future populations of feral animals.
- Harder to manage than cats owned by people who are allowed to roam free, but I think the TNR programs already in place are the best option we have, but possibly with more funding to be able to do more
- They should be controlled.

- None other than population control. They are essentially a wild animal too and so the same rules should apply to these cats as they do to mice/pigeons/coyotes etc.
- None as I never see any.
- Removal is paramount.
- Disease
- None
- Disease transmission, property damage.
- Feral cats are frustrating but are more hazardous to my compost bin than to humans - generally. Again I'd be mostly concerned about other animals - like hens and ducks becoming prey.
- None, any more than lynx or bob cats. They avoid me and mine
- Danger on roads- attract wildlife closer to homes
- None
- They can contract diseases that can spread to the pet population and to humans. They can also be a danger to the public due to their lack of socialization as well as to the wildlife population as they need to hunt for food. Populations can become out of control if there is no sterilization.
- None. How can they be domestic if they are not owned? They're wild. Let them be, they control the mouse, rat and vole populations. Believe what you want, there's no way alberta is 'rat' free, just go watch a council meeting!
- Attacking pets, children and caring disease that can be spread to pet cats. Life of feral cats are hard in Calgary.
- cars running them over or wildlife getting to them
- Again, haven't seen any stray cats in years.
- None really... never encountered one. Potentially the same problem as roaming cats i.e. upsetting our cats.
- Zero
- The only concern I have is for reproduction. Ideally it would be great to spay and/or neuter feral cats to help control the population.
- We don't have a feral cat problem. We have a coyote problem. A skunk problem.
- diseases and reproducing
- spreading disease, uncontrolled population, enticing predators into urban areas.
- Same as above, disease
- Unpayed/neutered and breeding which aggravates the cat overpopulation. They may be sick or hurt with no medical attention. They can be aggressive.
- Their health and safety and possibility that their population can greatly increase without veterinary care or intervention.
- Over population
- None. I doubt there are many, not a concern.
- No concerns, just humans being stupid.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Feral cats should not be removed from their environment unless injured, sick, or otherwise unhealthy. Feral cats who are brought into the animal shelter should be spayed or neutered before returning outside. Cat's who are determined unfit to live in the wild should be domesticated and adopted.
- Need to consider spay and neuter
- Feral cats are a threat to birds, a nuisance to homeowners, and are in danger from dogs and vehicles.
- I am concerned about population control with feral cats. While their health and safety is important to me realistically these cats aren't ideally suited for domestic life. I'd like to see trap and release programs implemented or barn cat rehoming programs
- I don't see many of these in my community so do not have concerns. If any are reported the City should try to pick them up and adopt them out if possible.
- Ditto above, minus the whiners. Untagged cats should be captured, and adopted out, or destroyed if not possible. An invasive species is an invasive species, regardless of whether they were once domestic.
- Trap them.
- Threat to wildlife
- Feral cats destroy property - flower beds, fences, grass - they should not be allowed to roam whatsoever within urban centers. They also can cause dogs (on leashes) to try to chase them into traffic, so it causes a real danger.
- Don't have any because we never saw one in our neighbourhood in the 10 years since we moved in bridlewood.
- TNR program support
- Continued spread of FIV & FeLV, parasites, and fleas to domestic cats, preying on native birds and other wildlife, cat waste hazardous to humans and pets.
- Their vaccine status, specifically Rabies, and if they are breeding.
- They can be unhealthy and spread disease to other animals and possibly humans who are unwise enough to approach them.
- Further prevention needs to be in place to prevent cats from getting into this situation.
- As long as they are altered and in reasonable health, none. I would love to see more support for feral cats including feeding stations, shelters, etc.
- I don't believe we have many in our community (evergreen) as the majority we have seen roaming have collars.
- City should trap and spay neuter..release or adopt to barn cat. Rescue
- rabies, typhus, and toxoplasmosis
- Pee, poo, unchecked breeding. Feral cats should be trapped.
- They can be unhealthy and can transmit diseases/pests to other animals and humans.
- Attacks on other animals or people, disruption caused by hunting
- None

- None that are specific to feral rather than strays or roaming.
- Overpopulation and uncontrolled reproduction.
- The lack of resources/help when trying to remove feral cat populations from residential areas
- They live shorter more painful lives due to predators, cars, and the elements. They cause destruction to native animal populations and are harming the environment.
- Life as a feral cat is “nasty, brutish, and short”. I have seen evidence of feral, stray, or roaming cats killed by vehicles. I have heard of feral, stray, or roaming cats being taken by urban wildlife.
- The suffering of those animals.
- General Health concerns, going through garbage and upsetting my dog when he’s “safe” in my backyard.
- safety of those cats is paramount and their ability to survive, unrestricted reproduction, safety of wildlife they may encounter, destruction of property
- have never seen a feral cat. Big concern regarding birds - they need to eat and birds are easy/delicious prey! Feral cats should euthanized - there are SO many unwanted cats already - sad but true and it is the fault of irresponsible humans :(
- No real problem with feral cats as the often are part of the solution to increased population of rats, mice, pigeons etc.
- Would like to see them helped
- They are mean and do the same annoying things that free roaming cats do.
- How are residents supposed to distinguish between feral, stray and roaming cats? Problems with all are the same
- None
- Are they not wild cats? I have no concerns with them if they're wild. They cause no issues and keep the rodent and hare population in check!
- They keep mice and vermin populations down and population can be managed by extreme cold and predators. Leave them alone or find a job for them (ie relocate to high vermin areas)
- We do not have this issue in our area on Beddington, I don't think. All of the cats I see have tags. We do have Bobcats though...
- Feral cats can be unpredictable if they feel threatened. If they can't be taken off the street and domesticated they should be caught, fixed and vaccinated, and released. This way they can't make more cats or get any others sick.
- Spreading disease, breeding uncontrolled. Get into fights.
- Disease and reproduction
- none
- Same as above. Feral cats kill wildlife, damage property and it is a horrible, dangerous life for the cats.
- These animals needs systems to help them live and be safe. Spay and neuter programs are essential. Community health of these animals needs to be addressed to.

- There are lots of feral cats in calgary and not enough resources for people who want to help with catch and release programs.
- Feral cats create the same type of issues that stray cats create but also spread more disease.
- They can have health issues and cause concern for pets. They prey on songbirds. They should be either trapped, neutered and released, adopted into homes if possible, or have a "safe haven" colony established.
- There should be a trap/neuter/release program in place for feral cats.
- Same as above
- increase in numbers
- Are they over breeding? Maybe i have not seen evidence. There are places that to catch neuter and release for feral if population gets out of control
- Same as above
- Their quality of life being out in the cold
- Same as above, however increased chance of wildlife impact via hunting and transmitting preventable diseases to owned cats
- Same as above, but with nobody to bring them back to if they're caught. Also, do they tend to roam/escape if they get adopted?
- Harsh winters.
- Over population. If they're sterilized and have a primary caregiver, put them back into the neighborhood!!!
- Passing infections or diseases to healthy cats with owners. I'm also sad that they don't have a home.
- Population control.
- The lack of support for TNR programs for these types of cats in the City. I believe this is the best way to get control of these populations and there is a huge cat crisis across the province as we don't seem to value cats as much as dogs.
- None as long as they are not rabid.
- They should be removed, there are enough cats everywhere already.
- Overpopulation. They need to be spayed and neutered, eventually moved to acreages or elsewhere.
- Just need to be able to recognize which cats are feral vs. roaming cats that are owned by someone.
- I don't have concerns except that there could be a TNR program in place to manage identified colonies. See the success at tinykittens.com. They can sometimes be rehomed. It would be very unique for a municipality to have a program like this.
- That feral cats are misunderstood, should be TNR'd and returned to their colony, not attempted to be adopted.
- Feral cats should be fixed and put up for adoption to avoid their spread. There should be a rule that if a cat has a collar / tag / license they should be left alone. There needs to be a hard and fast definition of "feral" so that the city isn't abducting cats that are minding their own business.

- I don't see feral cats in my neighbourhood. To be honest I think they are less of a problem because of their wild side they stay away from people. I only have a problem with roaming cats that are people's pets in the neighbourhood
- Cats not getting vet care, breeding freely and not getting proper food and attention. Cats outdoors are always in danger from wildlife and cars. They are also dangerous to local wildlife
- We need to put in efforts to have them spayed or neutered to keep the population under control and minimize their impact on other wildlife.
- No concerns, if they are found they should be spayed/neutered, if young enough for adoption that is great.
- Not spayed, disease, attraction for bigger carnivores and allergic reactions, outdoor litter box challenges.
- Feral cats tend to be better hunters, making them more dangerous to wildlife, and they do not have any vaccinations, making them more dangerous to cats with homes.
- That they will not be safe or they will be taken from their environments and euthanized.
- Same as above
- short life span and their presence can draw in wildlife ie: bobcats
- Significant concerns particularly the impact on native wildlife (#1 cause of death for birds in North America). Risk also to human health and safety. Waste in gardens - disease for people.
- I don't really except if we could increase the spay/neuter release program in order to help the numbers be reduced.
- The cats are still at grave danger for getting hit by cars, eaten by wildlife, harassed by people, or injured and left disabled due to lack of care and veterinary contact.
- None
- carrying diseases, them pooping in my yard, multiplying in numbers, killing birds
- They poop in our gardens, and our animals get very upset when a stranger is on our property.
- They can become aggressive and carry diseases.
- they are an invasive species and can harm local native species
- None.
- none.
- Same as for free roaming cats (environmental destruction, road hazard) plus the added component of disease spreading.
- Same as above.
- They are a potential hazard to drivers; they are a potential hazard to other pets or people if they get in to someone's yard or if they have contact with other people's pets
- They do not have adequate food or shelter
- I haven't experienced any issues with them.
- I have no concerns regarding feral cats, they should be able to live their best life out on the streets instead of being euthanized for not being friendly enough. People should care for them and provide food and water and shelter.

- they are likely to die prematurely, they need to be cared for and spayed/neutered
- I've never had an issue with a feral cat in Calgary.
- They will likely not be vaccinated and overly aggressive cats attacking could cause transfer of disease.
- Same as above
- That they won't be spayed/neutered and will be making more cats that won't have a good quality of life.
- Accidents on the road, un-spayed or neutered cats reproducing, cats preying on local bird populations.
- They should be euthanized
- Not much
- Not really. Not sure i would know the difference between a feral cat and a lost pet
- " -unaltered cats breed indiscriminately
- -spread disease by using gardens and playgrounds as litter boxes
- -decimate the songbird population"
- They could be dangerous
- That they are not spayed or neutered. That they are exposed to the elements and do not have necessary food, water or vet care
- In addition to possible danger to children these animals could be carrying diseases that could pose health problems to people.
- Breeding more. Feral cats are fine but they should be spayed/neutered then let loose again
- Could be carriers of disease for domestic or stray cats, kill a lot of migratory nesting birds
- Killing/safety of birds and kids. Destruction to flowerbeds and gardens
- That they are unchecked. They go unspayed, spread illness and impact wildlife. That said, the burden of care is difficult. Perhaps spay/neuter programs and medical treatments for feral cats could be offered without needing to rehome them. Vancouver has similar programs.
- They should be spayed and neutered and rehomed or given to rescues to be rehomed as barn cats or to monitored colonies.
- Over population. Injuries and accidents. Weather
- We need to rescue these cats and try to rehabilitate them to be adopted
- Disease
- None
- Potential to spread disease is the main concern, followed by risk of overpopulation. Feral cats tend to avoid populated areas and instinctively curb their own pops; but, a trap-neuter-release program that includes vaccines could provide great benefit to both human and feral populations.
- That there is funding to support them when it's cold.
- They may prey on song birds, may carry diseases
- They can get rabies
- Injury to other animals

- Feral cats are dangerous to other animals (cats, dogs, kids) and should be eliminated
- None
- Possible disease, with transference to domestic cats. Damage to property. Exploding feral populations
- They predate on birds that bring joy to our garden.
- never encountered any
- All the same as above except no I did responsible for them. As much as I love animals and own cats of my own the best course of action is trapping and humane euthanasia.
- N/A
- Feral cats may help keep mice, voles, etc. under control. Is there a possibility of spreading disease???
- I wasn't aware that there were lots in the city. I suppose they should be rehomed as barn cats as they most likely would not enjoy being a house pet.
- Feral cats have more feral cats. At what point is the feral population too much? Will they end up like feral rabbits when all of a sudden something has to be done to reduce the population?
- Disease
- they can potentially be dangerous if you encounter them by accident, someone might get hurt or get infected by it.
- They need space and freedom to roam without the fear of people
- "Harming other animals that might be in the backyard.
- When calling 311 to report strays, you should be able to provide a PHONE NUMBER OR address. I only had owners phone number and 311 wouldn't do anything! So no consequences for owners who don't register AND let their cats roam freely! Ridiculous!"
- Their health. Their ability to transmit diseases to pet cats. Will they try attacking my pet bunny rabbit if she is out in our yard? Will a feral cat attack my kids if they go to pet it?
- None.
- That they are not getting the support they truly need, some cats need vet care and they are left to fend for themselves.
- Hard to tell which are Feral and which are lost- thus using up volunteers to attempt to catch and reunite to owners. Also they would be attracting bigger wildlife like coyotes
- None
- Despoiling my garden with excrement
- Their safety and health. Small children being exposed to their feces in backyards
- They are fine but it would be nice to make sure they get fixed.
- If they are truly un-owned cats I would like to see the city collect them.

- I think all the cats in my yard are owned not feral so don't have an issue with feral cats.
- Reproduction, impacts on ecosystem, pathogen transmission
- Same as above
- How does a domestic cat live outdoors? They just didn't drop from the sky, we are responsible in putting them there
- Potential for them to injure people who frequent areas they live.
- Same as above.
- Spreading of disease to non-feral roaming cats. Wild bird population in decline.
- I have not seen this in our community. There need to be a city initiative to have a spay/neuter clinic for feral colonies. As long as these cats are fed and ALTERED they are great at keeping rodents away.
- Same as roaming cats. And they get hurt when it's cold and they don't have homes.
- "Increased breeding.
- Cat fights.
- Disease."
- The city should have a TNR program in place and a Barn buddy program as well.
- To keep the population under control, all cats should be spayed or neutered, including feral colonies.
- We need to adopt a "fix and free" program. Some rescues already do this. Trap feral cats, neuter/spay them, and return them back to their area. This will help prevent breeding which just leads to more feral cats.
- Efforts to cull would be supported
- none unless they show aggressive behaviour and then they should be captured and put down
- None, there are no bother in our neighbourhood
- Annoying for neighbourhood should be taken in by city.
- None, never seen one in Calgary
- That they will breed and young kittens pay the price of fighting the elements
- Negative effects on native wildlife (birds, etc).
- Unneutered cats roaming free can cause more, they can be a nuisance, they can be exposed to disease and then spread it. I haven't had experience with feral cats outside of a farm, just owners who allow their pets to roam and those who have abandoned their pets leaving the city to deal with them.
- The same as above plus overpopulation and the needless suffering it causes
- Feeding stations around the city and a capture/release program to fix them and prevent overpopulation.
- These need to be caught and fixed and rehomed. I think there needs to be more of a push to catch all these loose cats.

- Feral kids need to be managed through rescue efforts and spay and neuter programs.
- None
- I believe that having colonies of some feral cats that have been trapped, neutered and released does in fact help the control of the overall feral cat population.
- Disease, aggression
- Feral cats should be caught and sterilized to limit their breeding. Ones that seem fit for domesticating should be caught and adopted. Population of feral cats allows for the flux of predators in the urban space.
- Dying kitten
- Just animal feces in my gardens and excessive breeding.
- Disease but they are actually no different than squirrels and other wildlife.
- They should be caught and spayed and neutered and if possible either socialized to become adopted or given to farmers for their barn cat population.
- They should be gathered and put up for adoption.
- Any Feral cats who are not in a home at some point during the week should be taken to the shelter offered to farmers for dirt cheap after they are fixed
- Unwanted kittens, lack of: food water shelter compassionate care
- That they may hurt other people's pets
- No help is available. People expect rescues to handle ferals, which they're willing to do but are under-resourced. Put some money into TNR programs and more into SNAP! Spay and neuter should be free.
- These cats are going to suffer, they need shelter and food as well as neuter/ spaying. TNR is not enough in our climate.
- It is unsafe and unhealthy for them and others. They should be caught and, of possible, be adjusted to humans and adopted out.
- Spread of disease and un neutered cats having litters
- Eat songbirds. Diseased. Hard and terrible life for an animal to be outdoors in minus thirty weather.
- A concern I have is that they can create many more cats because they breed and procreate at very high rates.
- We feed and water neighbourhood feral cats by agreement with the Meow Foundation. I would not like to see indiscriminate euthanizing of otherwise healthy cats which are unadoptable.
- It's cruel and could be prevented if every cat was spayed nurtured. We could put much more effort into control by compulsory l'd. chips. I think our officers will never catch up to their work load.
- Their health and wellness. Spaying/neutering as well.
- Their health and well being.

- Current bylaws do not allow for responsible TNR communities, which makes it difficult to care for this population.
- They cause issues in neighborhoods such as fights, reproducing, etc in addition to end up ring killed by cars and wildlife
- None in the city.
- Disease and mess making
- The same as above but they are possibly more aggressive than domesticated cats
- Feral cats spread disease and unbalance the local ecosystem. They need to be trapped and euthanized or rehomed.
- That they be handled appropriately with trap, alter, & release and not left to endlessly reproduce. Ideally, they would also have a community guardian(s) keeping watch.
- Limited ability to sterilize and control population
- Get rid of them
- Never see a feral cat. Wondering if they can survive the extreme cold weather.
- They should be safely neutered or spayed and Released or put into the adoption program.
- I believe that people should be able to leave out food and fresh water for them and even set up warm spots for them to sleep. The city should also make sure some warm spots are set up for them.
- I don't come into contact with feral cats but imagine Calgary would be a tough place for them. Considering their impact on the bird population. I believe there should be a catch and neuter or spade program with the goal of refund the population of feral cats down to zero.
- Disease. Food for bobcats or coyotes, so they stay in the area. Spraying urine near homes and areas where children play.
- We should work with rescue organizations to TNR any feral cats so that the population doesn't grow out of control.
- None
- Finding them safe shelters to survive the weather.
- Danger to wildlife, uncontrolled breeding
- Start a spay and neuter program where they are trapped and released back after. They will continue to live the life they know, but cannot expand the populations. Sadly there is no demand for feral cats, so they will remain the neglected, but there is hope that they can live the life they have.
- Cats are mean. Often swatting, taking ownership of neighbouring property
- Disease, predation birds, injury and harm, stressing indoor animals, population control
- Disease
- Just that they could get hurt mostly at the hands of humans
- Trap Spay neuter release. No kill. They are loose / born due to humans being irresponsible.

- They kill birds, dedicate in flower beds, and will multiply with kittens if not nurtured or spade. They can carry diseases. and could make meowed in the night.
- Not many. As long as there's access to trap neuter return programs.
- It's unfortunate for them, and the concerns I have are mostly things such as safety (cars, salt on roads, etc), resources (food, water, shelter from elements, etc), and being unfixed and breeding. But, feral is feral, and at some point they're no different than any wild animal.
- None - I have never seen one and I am third generation Calgarian. I'm sure there are some in the downtown core, in Ward 1 we have coyotes
- Again, I don't want our city to be overrun with cats...
- No concerns. I do not know of any feral cat in the neighbourhood
- Diseases and they threaten our cats safety. He is very afraid and anxious when there are cats outside. (He is always indoors)
- My biggest concern is for the safety & well being of the ferral cat, & I don't want their population multiplying. They need to be fixed, but NOT euthanized! I don't think they pose much danger to people, like bats & wasps do!
- I don't.
- Concern-Killing birds. Solution-eliminate feral, stray and roaming cats.
- Possible property damage
- None
- Cats decimate local bird populations. Feral colonies breed rapidly, leading to strain on both the environment as well as animal shelters, which then have to either euthanize or turn away found animals.
- Animal care and welfare.
- Poop in my garden.
- Health and safety of feral cat.
- No concerns. TNR and leave them be.
- None. They keep the rodent population down.
- Feral cats should not be in a city setting just because of overpopulation concerns, but are very useful in rural areas like farms, however there population is kept down because of predators in these areas.
- risk to wildlife, human health risk and concern for the health of the animals
- None
- The only adequate way to deal with feral cats is to catch, sterilize and release. Their numbers will then eventually go down. Instead of relying on non-profits, I'd like to see the City take an active role in this process.
- They kill birds
- I'm sure there are some but in my neighborhood (mount pleasant) I recognize most of the cats and they are domestic cats with homes. Feral cats can cause a lot of damage too so also a concern.

- feces, spraying, mating & fighting noises, constantly going into peoples yards, gardens, flower beds etc. Also concerns with children outside coming across these cats. Diseases from these cats that you could get. Killing of birds & leaving them where children could get them. etc.
- Killing local wildlife
- The lack of coordinated plans to control the population. The municipal government doesn't have a plan or partnership with a rescue to provide SNR in the City to minimize damage and population.
- They should be captured spayed or neutered and if possible adopted. Otherwise send them back to the colony. Also find people who abandon their cats and fine them heavily.
- Very few.
- People find them "cute" and leave for food them. They might wander into yards for food and water and attack those who try to approach.
- They can be aggressive.
- same as above
- Feral cats are not spayed or neutered and can lead to a population explosion. This is bad for the cats and others alike.
- Damage to wild life and gardens.
- Just that the city is working to reduce the feral cat population
- Are they spayed/neutered? Controlling the population in a humane way is the best method to caring for the feral cat population. Additionally, I believe it can help reduce song bird predation.
- None, don't think I've ever seen one here in the SE.
- They leave feces in food gardens and cause damage to outdoor furniture, and they kill birds.
- They're often not sterilized, which tends to result in more feral cats.
- Same as roaming, though feral cats have more street smarts that a house tabby.
- None, I don't see them
- feral cats can carry disease and kill birds, create issues for dogs in back yards and their population cannot be easily controlled.

- They reproduce at a very quick rate and populations could explode. As they are feral they cannot be easily caught and converted into pets. Feral cats need to be trapped and spayed/neutered before being released back into the wild.
- Free-roaming house cats can behave like feral cats due to fear, so I do believe they should still be trapped and assessed. CHS has a great barn/shop cat program for these cats.
- None
- Some feral can never be rehabilitated or captures for sterilization.
- The well being of the cats, I have seen one hit by a car in the road of our residential street and see them digging in Garbage's
- My concerns for these cats are the weather conditions in winter and the risk of being killed by the wildlife in our area.
- As above.
- Disease, cats fighting.
- Same as above, as well as attacking people or other animals.
- Not being spade or neutered
- Feral cats can be quite mean so they could be caught and given a chance to be domesticated
- I have no experience with them
- See above. It shouldn't be on small charities to take care of the problem. The city should have a solid TNR program like many other cities do and expand their low in income pay and neuter assistance program.
- Feral cats can become aggressive, especially if they have kittens, and can attack small dogs, children and sometimes even adults. They need to be caught and removed.
- Feral cats should be trapped, spayed/neutered and returned to their colony. It's a no brainer. Talk to or partner with AARCS or ASNTF to get a program up and running.
- Feral cats spread disease and over populate quickly.
- Really don't have an answer other than they can't be allowed to roam free. And thus creating a bigger problem as they reproduce.
- They need to be captured and put down. Having been to other country that have allowed feral cats populations, the populations have soars and the city is inundated with cats
- That they bite someone, start reproducing, cause any damages to houses and be Disease carrier
- The feral cats get into my beautiful gardens and wreck the plants. They will spray on walls fences also. The smell is very hard to remove. I love cats but this is a big problem in my neighbourhood.
- The high volume of feral cats that end up in local animal shelters that are very hard to domesticate and place into homes.
- Same as for domestic cats, plus they should be spayed and neutered so feral populations don't increaae
- They don't seem to bother me. Maybe allow people to kill them if they are a nuisance.

- Again, human beings are the worst. I like feral cats, their colonies do need to be managed - spay/neuter, for illness, and food provided - but they provide a service in that even if there is food they keep vermin down - mice, voles, etc.
- Feral cats are not native to Calgary and compete for food and habitat resources with natural wildlife.
- Feral cats should be euthanized sad but true.
- Same concerns as with roaming pet cats.
- That they are continuing to breed/reproduce and lead to similar problems as with roaming cats. Sterilization programs would be a positive way of mitigating this
- None
- Bird predation.
- They need to be removed from the landscape humanely. There are a number of Calgary based rescues that can be involved in this process!
- The inevitable need to capture and euthanize cats who have been left to breed unchecked, and who suffer due to our inclement winter weather.
- attacks or diseases
- Feral cats can have adverse affects on their local ecosystem. A predator species, they quickly overwhelm the prey species, throwing the ecosystem out of balance. They are also a prey species to other predators higher up the chain such as Coyotes who hunt farther into our communities to find them.
- Should be trapped/caught and contained or put up for adoption/rescue.
- Same as above.
- Sadness that they don't have a loving home.
- I don't ever see any feral ones
- disease, other animal deaths, their population being unchecked.
- Spread of disease
- They kill too many birds and defecate in gardens.
- None
- None
- they have no one look after them if they get sick or hurt. More food shelters and shelters to help protect from weather should be provided
- Provide support for organizations like the Meow Foundation handle it. The city cannot or will not do it.
- Feeling sorry for cold and hungry animal
- In our area, not an issue, just the domestic ones.
- I have never seen any within the city. I see far more feral bunnies.
- same as free-roaming cats, poop, fights, noise.
- I think feral cats have a difficult life trying to survive.
- Not sure if cats become rabid but issues should be dealt with on a case by case basis.
- If their health is not an issue they're not an issue

- Feral cats should be trapped and spayed/neutered so we can reduce the feral cat population over time. Then released back to the colony to live out their existence. Otherwise they should be left alone
- N/A never saw one
- None. The bobcats are in our area sometimes, and they generally stay away.
- spay/neuter, kittens can be rehomed through rescue
- Same as above
- Territorial disputes between toms and impregnating more domesticated cats
- -Same as above
- Populations generally stay low without intervention, in my 15 years in my neighborhood the strays come and go but never an over abundance. Helps keep rodent population down where Coyotes are not present.
- The cats could be spreading disease and impregnating other cats.
- *Your definition doesn't include what you mean by stray cat. Feral cats can be vicious and kill birds.
- As said, catch females, spay and release again. In cities in the Us they see the value of feral cats to keep down vermin.
- Same as above but also including attacks on domestic animals and spread of rabies.
- The biggest concern with feral cats is overpopulation. I'd support a program where feral cats are trapped, neutered, then released.
- They are often sick, hurt and suffering.
- These feral cats have an impact on wildlife health and population.
- Spread of disease.
- They kill native birds and raid nests. They also urinate in the same spots over and over and poop in gardens.
- they spray outside the houses, are aggressive or spread illness to leashed pets.
- Feral cats should be caught and euthanized.
- Breeding and a general problem
- I have no concerns about feral cats. Live and let live.
- Impact on urban wildlife, especially birds; transfer of disease to owned cats. Horrible life for these animals.
- Could carry disease
- Attracts wildlife ie: coyotes. Potential Disease issues to all other city wide pets.
- Health and safety, spay/neuter status.tra
- These will populate with other cats and produce more unwanted cats.
- Their proliferation
- breeding, carrying disease
- None at all. They avoid others mostly.
- My concerns are because of how many domesticated cats are roaming free in our community, further adding to the feral cat population.

- I feel sorry for them and have taken a few to the Vet.
- "bird loss - cats kill approximating 2.4 billion per year.
- Outdoor cats can be hosts to fleas, ticks, ear mites, tapeworms, roundworms, hookworms, and heart-worms. While rare, fleas can infect your cat (public) with tapeworms. Ticks often carry Lyme Disease and Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever."
- Poor dears
- I support a capture, spay, and release program
- The same as with roaming cats. But if no one owns them, the population isn't being managed. Un-fixed cats just create more cats.
- Weren't these cats homeowners cats at one time that they just ignored and let go their way I'd say any pet owner meet reminders every year of the rules put in place when you decided to have a pet and make the fines harsh
- Same concerns as above
- reproducing, attracting coyotes (predatory animals) to the community
- it is sad that we have this situations and it puts other animal at risk of possible diseases.
- Their living conditions, we should follow the best policy to ensure that we are treating them as humanely as possible
- None.
- Wildlife sustainability and vehicle hazards
- The animal needs to be Spayed or Neutered.
- Improper human interaction with feral cats. eg Bobcats/Lynx. We invaded their home. Educate the public for safety and co-existence.
- It has not been a big problem, but the things about roaming cats that bugs me are: crap in my vegetable garden, hunting at my bird feeder.
- They should be put down
- Safety for the feral cats, shelter, food. It is a brutal world out there.
- Health and Safety of the cats and the people living around them. Cold weather care and coyotes etc
- I do not see feral cats in my neighbourhood.
- I can't actually say that I've encountered a feral cat. The ones I see are well taken care of. They just like to get outside and explore, it's their nature.
- No concerns as long as they avoid contact ...
- Same as roaming cats (see #1), but these animals are at a higher risk of acquiring diseases and spreading them to pets and humans.
- I have no concerns as they keep the rodent population down.
- We should be reducing feral cats by spaying/neutering them and stopping the dumping of cats into the wild.

- A certain number of feral cats are good to help control the population of mice and other vermin. I prefer a "neuter and release" policy.
- I just worry that they are cold
- Reproduction again. I was recently in Istanbul and feral and stray cats are captured, spayed/neutered and vaccinated before being released again. The top of one ear was docked to show that this had happened.
- None
- I have concerns about cat feces, and them digging in my garden or child's sandbox
- Feral cats can be dangerous and can carry disease - they need to be humanely captured and taken out of our neighborhoods.
- Same as in 1) above with the added safety risk for interactions with persons and domesticated animals as feral cats are not socialized to manage these encounters.
- Let them roam, coyotes will keep them in check
- Non sterilized animals causing the population to explode (similar to the bunny problem near the 39th Ave CTrain Station)
- Their health and well being (preventing zoonotic disease transmissions) and keeping their populations under control through trapping, vaccinating and spaying or neutering.
- " - Roaming cats kills birds
- - They are traffic hazards.
- - They spread disease and parasites.
- - They provide no benefit to society."
- zero concerns. they keep mice and vole populations down
- My primary concern is their safety. Secondly exposure to extreme winter conditions, and last their unfettered reproduction rates.
- Their safety, they avoid human contact for a reason
- I do not feel the city of Calgary has a feral cat issue
- They make a huge amount of noise with their fighting and they leave fecal matter on my property where my children play.
- As above
- Reducing the amount of feral cats by continuing to support spay/neuter programs is the best way.
- Feral cats kill song birds. They should be caught, neutered, and re-homed.

- Over breeding as is not in the cats interest or the humans.
- My concern with feral cats is that they are not neutered. Calgary is a very hostile environment for these cats who live short sad lives and breed more kittens to have the same type of life.
- My concern is that they are uncared for and suffer unnecessarily from disease and climate.
- If we don't want to have a cat explosion in the city the feral cats should be taken care of!
- They do not have consistent access to water, food, housing, warmth or protection from other animals. They deserve a better life. They also are not spayed or neutered or vaccinated.
- Diseases, killing birds, breeding.
- I think these animals should not be left free on the neighborhoods.
- As above also disease
- They use people's property for a washroom, they dig up people's property, they chase and kill wild birds (I have no issue with them chasing and killing mice or squirrels), they fight with other cats, they have unwanted kittens, they may be sick,
- Eating birds and other wildlifes. Destroying my garden.
- none controlled cat population leading to unhealthy cats and impact to local wildlife such as birds.
- They can multiply quickly and live much shorter lives
- Spread of disease.
- Feral cats can be useful in keeping rodent populations down. Perhaps tagged and fixed feral cats can be left for vermin control
- " - Uncontrolled population growth
- - Welfare of the cats
- - All the issues from #1"
- Cats are not a native species and shouldn't be in the environment.
- 1. My concern is their health and safety.
- My concerns are for the cats. They were originally pets whose owners abandoned. Again, they are not a problem in my neighborhood.
- That they could be carrying diseases that could be transmitted to other roaming cats.
- As above.
- Sadly these cats have no proper care and should be humanely euthanized. I understand the logistics are difficult. Who will catch them and pay to euthanize? Perhaps they are a food source for hawks and eagles ? I do not know, but if their numbers are a problem, then it needs to be addressed.
- I don't believe in TNR in residential areas as it causes conflict with neighbours. Stray cats need to be trapped.
- These poor cats were someones pet at one time and were abandoned. They should be treated decently, microchipped if possible and given a proper home to live their years.
- Rabies. Eating garbage.
- I don't know of any in Calgary. I am sure they exist but I am unaware.

- They suffer as are not intended to live in our climate, they can spread disease to pets and harm wildlife.
- As above
- Potentially more dangerous & aggressive - impact on native wildlife - should be captured & destroyed
- Same as above. Concern for their health.
- Before the climate crisis, I worried about winter kill but now I mostly worry that they are sick or injured and might be suffering.
- possible attacks
- They do what they gotta do to survive . Hard to control them once they are feral.
- "Feral cat populations are known to get out of control fast due to the number of litters an animal can have annually.
- These cats can be a nuisance to society, spread parasites and diseases. Affect the balance of wild species."
- They stalk my yard and aggravate my dog and no-one is responsible for them.
- Not many. They are unlikely to approach people & while I don't want them in my yard, there may be areas in which they help keep rodent populations down
- Revolting cat droppings
- My concern again is for the animal. But so many people have farm cats out of the city and on reserves that they don't spay/neuter I believe that's where they come from. But if they're within the city, they should be helped!
- None
- Same as above . They MUST be culled or you will have a similar problem to the bunnies in Canmore or all the feral cats in some European countries. Also very unsanitary
- TNR programs do good work. Keep supporting them.
- The animals safety. Especially in the cold winter months
- None - I'm unaware of any in the neighbourhood where I live.
- They can pose a danger to people and pets especially when they have offspring and when they are hungry.
- None other than they also deserve to receive the Five Freedoms. The city of Calgary has been recognized as a leader in their companion animal programs. There is an opportunity to continue this in developing a sustainable, compassionate feral cat program.
- Doesn't bother me.
- Refer to #1
- Most feral cats came from a domestic cat that was abandoned but survived and gave birth. There should be a greater push to spay/neuter all pets. The feral cats I've encountered aren't dangerous and can be co-habited with.

- Nothing. They are important members of the community that control the mice population and cause no harm. They all need to be spayed or neutered to control the population though, and vaccinated which can be done through the MEOW foundation.
- I am concerned about them attacking other animals
- Disease, clean up of garden beds. Will animal services take them when I trap them? They can eat the mice but they will get the birds!
- I don't really have any concerns as they rarely come into contact with humans
- Need spay neuter and release programs.
- I do not see feral cats in my area.
- I have never see feral cats.
- Same as roaming but more public safety issue. Overpopulation and infestation are a big concern.
- Feral cats spread disease and should be rehabed if possible and rehomed.
- They pee on my door mat as they smell my indoor cats, they crap in my flower beds and try to eat & catch the wild birds I feed
- City should spay and neuter then if possible. Realisw there are budget issues here though.
- The transfer of disease to pets
- No issues really, just dont want them to get hurt.
- They should be caught, spayed/ neutered and released.
- My concern is that the city does not have a Trap neuter release program. Studies show that feral cat numbers will never decrease unless we are using sterilization to limit them. These cats should be managed, not ignored or euthanized as you are currently doing.
- They reproduce uncontrollably and are not well cared for, often have injuries or diseases and low quality of life.
- That they might have corona virus
- That they are not spayed or neutered and have not had their shots.
- Feral cats should be caught and spayed or neutered to help control populations.
- Safety. All animals in the wild should be able to stay safe.
- No concerns with true feral cats (not cats that were dumped), but believe the city needs a better trap and spay/neutered program. This is the only way to control the population.
- I have not experienced a feral cat problem in my area
- My main concern is that these cats are safe and have access to food, water, and shelter in cold weather. If they do not they might be better off caught and taken to shelter.
- Getting into fights with domestic cats and potentially spreading disease
- Not enough focus on TNR programs or domestication.
- I only hope they are being taken care of by local TRN groups. And given support in colder months with food and shelter .

- Feces on my property.
- Never seen any so not concerned
- I have not encountered a feral cat in this city.
- They fight with resulting wounds that get infected, breed indiscriminently, are noisy when mating or fighting.
- noone
- These cats should have a safe place to go, regardless if they don't want human contact. I think they should be brought to a facility where they are safe from the cold and predators outside.
- if they are feral they may be not neutered or spayed resulting in more off spring on the loose
- Same as free roaming cats
- No feral cats.
- Feral cats should be left alone or offered to farmers. The city would have to ensure the feral cat is going to a legitimate farmer and not someone who will abuse or torture or use as bait!
- Diseases
- Similar concerns, but I also feel population control would be beneficial
- Killong native birds. Spreading pests. Noisy when fighting others for territory and in heat. Defecate in gardens and foodsources in gardens.
- I think that cats have the ability to multiply very quickly, and if the city does not support spay/neuter programs then feral cat populations can get out of hand. This can have significant impacts on bird populations.
- They can become a huge and potentially dangerous issue. When I was in Europe, some cities were overrun with feral cats. It was very nerve-wracking. Let's not allow this to happen here.
- I worry about the feral cats finding enough to eat in the winter. I think that feral cats could be a factor in the wildlife predators spending more time in the city, due to the abundant, easier to catch prey.
- Again none, except for their contribution to bird population decline
- All cats that are on the loose whether owned or not should be collected in live traps and the owners fined. The Derek ones either adopted or euthanized.
- Also none
- None
- Not spayed or neutered. Possible population problems. They have a high probability of survival after birth.
- Hard to control the population. They aren't neutered or spayed.

- Population control. Feral/community cats can assist with nuisance wildlife control. But they must be controlled with a TNR program.
- Feral cats should be captured and either domesticated or placed in cat shelters. Feral cats suffer in our winter climate.
- If we are to protect song bird populations, feral cat communities need to be culled. TNR programs are misguided at best.
- That they don't have a home or family to love them.
- That they are not taken care of, are not fixed and reproduce and enlarge the feral population. I feel bad for them.
- I worry about impact on local wildlife, and risk of them interacting with indoor/outdoor pets. I would also love to see a spay/neuter program to manage this population and prevent growth.

- Population control and injuries to cats from cars or fighting with other cats
- I do not think that there are any feral cats in my neighborhood. I understand a lot of cities (or agencies that look out for animals) have decided years ago that the best thing to do with feral cats was to have them spayed/neutered and returned to hold their territory and keep down the vermin pop.

- None except the fact that I feel sorry for them
- Spreading disease, digging in garbage. Killing songbirds.
- Spread of disease
- As above. If no owners identified euthanized 48 hours
- Illness, dead felines, cats getting into garbage and therefore attracting other things
- They need to be helped
- Reproduction
- That they could disease or injure humans and pets.
- That they will freeze, starve and reproduce kittens who will freeze or starve
- None but population control
- Spaying and neutering must be funded municipally.
- I do not notice an issue with this
- More funding should be provided by the city to help trap-neuter-release programs and rescue shelters control feral populations.
- The unlikeliness of vaccination status in regards to if a owned cat got out or is a roaming cat and they get into a cat fight. They are increasing that risk of disease and illness. Not enough awareness of the MEOW foundation in regards to doing TNR for the extremely Feral cats.
- Overpopulation due to unmonitored breeding, health of the cats, cats passing disease onto domestic/ pet health
- I have not seen feral cats in our neighborhood.
- Only if they are intact
- That they will freeze and not have enough safe foods.
- These cats should be spayed/neutered through trap and release programs, as well as vet checked, vaccinated and provided with shelter and food.
- That they're safe and not getting hurt if hurting other things
- I am concerned for the health of the cat
- That they will be hit by a car or eaten by a coyote.

- These cats may become emaciated and struggle to survive throughout the winter months. Members of the public may look down on them, associating them with disease, and thus they may not be treated humanely.
- They should have loving homes too. Also they tend to fight with other cats and have higher risk of transmitting diseases to house cats.
- Not many. They hide, stay away, and remove the mouse population. They stay away from my yard as I have a dog.
- They are like stray dogs, both shouldn't be out on thier own because they are technically an invasive species and they can cause trouble.
- None, leave them alone unless they need medical attention
- None
- animals have no protection in the weather and no food
- That they will injure roaming cats
- No experience with them
- Over population, illness, lack of food
- Nothing. They tend to leave people alone.
- no Concerns, part of life I guess.
- We should control their numbers
- None. I have never seen one to my knowledge.
- Should aim to have less of them, but in my eyes no different than a bobcat, as long as avoiding human interaction our only concern should be preventing further breeding.
- Coming on to my property and using it as a litter box. Breeding
- Aggressive cats, cats carrying disease, or cat that aren't spade or neutered.
- I have never seen a feral cat in my community and don't see an issue with them in the city.
- The idea that they can increase their population quickly. The risk of spreading disease amongst their population.
- Feral cats, unless they are under the care of a responsible person, who is feeding and providing shelter, should be trapped and euthanized. They, like the bunnies, attract larger predators.
- Concerns are with the diseases they carry. They tend to use garden beds as they litter and that can be bad
- Not all being spayed and neutered, even with the programs in place
- They will, if they survive, find their place in the food chain.
- I have never seen a feral cat is Calgary and I have lived here over 30 years. If they avoid humans I don't think they are a problem
- The City could advise Calgarians that there are TNR programs to help feral cats, live out their natural lives outdoors. TNR programs, neuter/spay, vet check, provide winter housing, and have a responsible person to feed them. ie MEOW Foundation
- None
- That they aren't being trapped and fixed.

- My concern is about their safety, I have never experienced any or seen them as a nuisance.
- I don't see that Calgary has a feral cat problem; I think probably our winters help to manage that
- n/a
- Same as above.
- Not much we can do cost-effectively to help feral cats. Leave them be; they typically avoid human contact and help to manage vermin in the environment.
- same as the above, also the risk of disease transmission to domestic animals
- city should get more involved in spay/neuter, trap and adopt out kittens.
- Aggressive
- not sure
- Same as above
- only that they are not vaccinated most feral cats can be tamed and at the very least neutered to prevent over population
- They kill wildlife. They are introduced into this environment and wouldn't be here without humans.
- contact with young kids
- Animal services likely has a role in controlling the feral cat population.
- Mostly that they will be killed by my dogs or hurt someone that comes across them
- Safety of the cat
- These poor animals were abandoned and had to fend for themselves. If possible they should be caught, neutered and released but in a safe location.
- none at all
- Reduce them. Nueter and release
- that they have a horrible life
- Provided they aren't behaving in a manner that affects my ability to use outdoor spaces I have no concerns
- diseases they carry worry me the most.
- Over-population from breeding, source of food for drawing wild predators into the city, possible disease transmission to household cats/animals.
- Roaming cats are a problem period, feral or not. Spaying/neutering programs are key. Perhaps stricter rules around purchasing a cat would help.
- I struggle with the City of Calgary's mandate not to allow trap and release in our city. If we could move to a system of trap and release it would help lessen the amount of feral and stray cats over time. This has been a successful initiative in many cities.
- Same, along with spreading disease.
- Not a problem in my area, but sadly I think they should be captured and euthenized (as it it my opinion that cats are a dime a dozen and we do not need to overwhelm cat shelters)
- N/A. Feral cats tend to avoid humans, and I don't have any concerns.

- I support the catch-neuter-release approach to feral cats. I support the Humane Society neutering all cats before they are adopted. I believe that we need to monitor the feral populations - provide food, shelter in harsh climate conditions. I know they cannot be adopted easily.
- I have been a TNR caregiver for about 10 years (near Chinook). I do this because I cannot bear to see feral cats suffering. I am constantly shocked by how irresponsible & cruel Calgarians are towards animals.
- I don't notice a lot of feral cats, but would support a trap/neuter/return program.
- We have no feral cats in the neighborhood.
- Same as #1.
- I never see these in my community.
- Feral cats can be caught and euthanized.
- Not many. I don't see many in the city
- None. Doesn't seem to be a problem where we are.
- Should have a program to catch, spay/neuter and release (ottawa has done it).
- Potential for disease, killing local wildlife, aggressive towards smaller pets
- Defecating and spraying on my property. Are we able to catch, spay/neuter, and release so that the population doesn't increase?
- Violence towards other animals. Breeding and exploding population.
- It is not a problem in yyc
- No concern
- Cats that I have come across have all had collars so I can't speak to that in my neighbourhood
- None
- Haven't seen any in my neighbourhood
- See above
- uncontrolled population, transfer of diseases to domesticated cats.
- They cause so much damage to personal property, fighting, spraying and digging up flower beds!! They cause issues with indoor cats by teasing them. The back lane cat fights are ridiculous and very annoying!!!
- Feral cats can cause nuisance issues with spraying and digging on property and could be a health issue to other pets or people if they come in contact with anyone as they are unvaccinated and possibly carrying disease.
- I think that will become a bigger problem if left unchecked. I had seen a program where feral cats are caught, spayed and neutered and released to live out their lives, or adopted out if adoptable.
- None
- Breeding. Capture spay or neuter release. If they're super feral adult cats they're probably fine living on their own for the most part and kill nasty ass mice
- I believe the humans created the problem in the City by abandoning them, not having affordable spaying and neutering. People have the right to pets but most can't afford the vet fees in this city. The Pharaohs that are here should definitely stay but the situation does have to get under control

- None
- None
- I am concerned for the same reason as free-roam, as they kill wildlife BUT overall I'm less concerned because then they are part of the wildlife, as opposed to cats being fed at home then going to kill animals to fulfill their instincts. If these cats are actually eating to survive, I don't care.
- None. My cats have all of their shots.
- Feral cats can hurt humans and domestic pets if there's a conflict, and don't have a human to be responsible for their actions if they're being aggressive or causing property damage in the community. Feral cats in Calgary need to be eliminated and people who release their cats should be fined.
- Feral cats are vulnerable and at risk of passing diseases; attracting wildlife like coyotes; becoming vicious or starving. I understand the barrier to remove feral cats requires more resources and
- Same as above.
- There should be a capture, spay and neuter, and release program to keep their numbers down
- That they can negatively impact bird and other native wildlife in the city, and potentially impact the natural migration of birds and other wildlife through the city.
- No concerns, if I was aware of any I would probably phone the city to have them picked up if I thought they were in danger.
- Disease, aggression
- I believe it should be illegal for people to trap them. The city should work with spay and neuter clinics to spay and release them back to control population and they should be humanely trapped by professionals only when needed
- I have no concerns with feral cats. If a cat is hanging around our place, we trap it and take it to Animal Services. The feral cats do not return, the cats living in the community do return as the owners just allow them to roam free again and again. Stiffer fines are probably needed.
- None, see no feral cars downtown ever.
- The killing of song birds and small mammals. Also, of course winters are a concern as I don't wish the cats to experience the low winter temperatures.
- Breeding and kittens being born in unclean and unsafe conditions.
- Out of control breeding. In turn the colonies are out of control and most of these poor animals starve or die of illness.
- They may spread infections to other pets.
- I've never seen any so I have no comment.
- Constant exposure to untreated injuries, diseases and weather. Access to food, water and shelter. Increase population if not spayed or neutered.
- No concerns other than their safety, getting hit by cars etc. Want them to be safe.
- More education... I suspect they are not safe, they are not healthy, they are not built to live free. They kill birds.

- I've never seen any (that I know of) in Calgary. I don't think a feral cat population should be allowed to established, both for human health and safety and for the sake of local wildlife and other pets
- "Breeding & fights
- Lack of vet care
- Injuries"
- That they started as abandoned animals and are now trying to survive. Stop them having litters
- They are a 'wild' animal, as a mom with young kids I do not one of these animals close to my children and even though they 'avoid' human contact - living within city limits this is not an easy task. Also these small animals also attack coyotes.
- Again, I think we need to control the population. I do not mind feral cats so long as they not harming or destroying people or property.
- Coming onto my property and pooping and peeing on my porch and in my gardens
- Same as above
- Same as above: getting in my yard, opening compost bags, attacking my cat through the screen door, cat poop in my garden, attracting predators to the area
- I didn't really even know we had a feral cat problem. But I am guessing it exists because people let their unfixed cats roam. This also means that the problem will continue to increase because feral cats are not fixed.
- That are not spayed or neutered which causes an over populated community. That don't have their vaccinations which can spread disease and feline HIV. They don't have regular meals or a warm shelter.
- The fact that none are spayed or neutered and the population keeps increasing.
- They may not be spayed or neutered
- "reproducing at rapid rates creating imbalance
- - bird and other wildlife safety"
- Do not see in my neighbourhood. If there are any controlled by coyotes.
- All of the same points I've made above, as well as the spreading of feline illnesses to pet cats.
- Mostly concerned about diseases and negative interactions with people, particularly children.
- Disease, upsetting my indoor cat (I live main floor of an apartment complex so she sits in the patio window a lot and sees all of the cats outside), injury to other animals or children.
- Too much random procreation and spreading of trash in the search for food as well as damage to domesticated animals.
- I don't have any concerns I haven't seen any
- I am concerned about the potential spread of disease and pests (fleas, ticks) if they come in contact with domesticated pets.
- The well-being of the cats themselves. Access to food, warmth, water. Bites
- Same as above
- Feral cats spreading illness to domesticated cats. However, I do not feel that this is a significant concern.

- A community may have a need to control a feral cat population if over-run.
- Rabies.
- Them harming other animals
- They can be carriers of disease and can cause injuries to other animals
- None I have never had a problem with any feral cat
- They can be a danger for young children especially if they are in heat.
- None
- Same as other cats roaming free above but would add that I would have concerns about feral cats having a litter of kittens in my yard.
- Absolutely none. Let me run until every block has 1 or 2. Hopefully they'll get poached or picked up by crazy cat ladies.
- Feral cats have to make a living just like the rest of us. Unfortunately they are known to kill songbirds to do this.
- I don't have a concern with feral cats.
- none
- Haven't seen any, not sure what could be done about them.
- Concerned for their lives & ALL the hazards they face on the street .
- I've never encountered these type of cats....most cats are owned in my neighbourhood. Cats keep the mouse and vermin population in check. My cats have a bell on their collar to alert birds.
- My concern is still the animal's safety, for the same reasons as above, but with feral cats, very cold weather is also a danger.
- Transfer of disease. Increasing population. Altercations with other pets
- I haven't encountered any where I live.
- Round them up to spay/neuter then release them again
- are they collected and humanely housed, health checked and re-adopted
- We should endeavour to have them picked up spayed or neutered, recognizing that cost is a problem. As much as we love cats a great many fall by the wayside and are not adoptable, we know that many are euthanized.
- Capture and euthanize them.
- Trap, neuter, release is what I prefer. Trapping and removing them to Animal Services just guarantees they'll be killed. The MEOW Foundation's TNR program to community caregivers makes sure they are fed, sheltered, and can't reproduce. Ferals are a result of irresponsible humans.
- Feral cats are wild animals. If they lose a threat to people, they should be moved.
- Feral cats are in danger from the elements. They should be rounded up sterilized tattooed or microchipped immediately after they are put up for adoption. It is the only solution to controlling the numbers.
- Theyre an invasive species and damage local ecosystems, also they poop in my yard and kill birds. I'm concerned about disease/parasites that have the potential to spread to humans or domesticated cats the escape

- Proud owner of 4 once feral cats."
- Since feral cats have little to no chance of being domesticated, they should be almost treated like wildlife. More Spay/neuter and release programs should be initiated to help keep populations down. Feral kittens and young cats will adapt to the idea of being a pet.
- That they are not sterilized or vaccinated.
- I feel feral cats should be put down right away
- I want to see them have good long lives.
- that populations are controlled.
- They kill wildlife, they multiply, they are often fearful of people
- I do not have concerns with feral cats in the city.
- None, I've never seen any in Calgary
- Feral cats cause animal populations to increase and kittens then have to be picked up by the SPCA etc. Cat overpopulation isn't a problem here but in other countries it is a problem. TNR programs would help cat populations while still allowing them to live outdoors.
- My primary concern is that they should all be spayed/neutered, especially the feral cats! Rescue shelters like AARCS have extensive spay/neuter/return programs that can help curb the feral cat population. They are perfectly capable of surviving on their own, and great for keeping mice at bay.
- Disease..
- I do not have a concern with feral cats unless they are physically harming someone.
- They could have rabies
- Only concerned if they are a nuisance. If there are one or two in an alley and they don't bother anyone then maybe it's not of concern.
- How they survive through the winter without adequate housing and food. If they are fixed and not adding to the growing population. The way they are treated as vermin and disposable by some humans.
- Again, for the safety, health, and quality of life for the feral cats.
- It's a rotten life for a feral cat in this climate, and a poor outlook for their kittens.
- None
- Feral cats spread disease and continue to breed
- Safety of people or animals that encounter them
- Health and safety of the cats, sanitation issues, exposure to toxoplasmosis and reproductive harm, safety of children and other pets who want to play, damage to personal property (gardens, scratching things) traffic inconveniences
- Getting into my yard with my dogs and overpopulation.
- Don't have those in my area.
- They can become aggressive

- They should be sterilized
- Most of the reasons above: cat feces in my kid's sandbox; bird kills in my yard; cat spray/markings on my property; cats in heat making noise and disturbing me while I'm trying to sleep with my windows open.
- Disease. Population control. Attracting predators to city.
- Uncontrolled population increase by intact roaming cats.
- The only thing that bothers me is the humans that try to kill or hurt these innocent creatures just trying to survive.
- That they may come to harm through human cruelty and ignorance. They may also negatively impact native wildlife when they are allowed to breed unchecked. When there are feral colonies I would hope there would be TNR & education programs among the community members indicating modern means of helping.
- I think feral cats need to be trapped, fixed and relocated. I don't think having colonies of feral cats is ok in city limits at all. They can carry disease and cause overpopulations and usually suffer from injuries and illness.
- Never seen any in my neighbourhood.
- Same as above, however the ones destroying my gardens are our neighbours. They don't care!
- None; having lived in our neighbourhood for eight years, we have only encountered one once.
- Only concern is if they have food and shelter when cold and if they are fixed. Information about how neighborhoods can provide support to coexist
- None
- Feral cats should be caught and put in a shelter
- None, they would be extremely stressed to transition to living in a house.
- Disease
- That they don't have access to food, and they are not usually spayed/neutered
- Constant breeding leading to more cats
- That these animals aren't harmed
- A cat's purpose in our society is to be a mouser or a companion. If they are doing neither, they should be put down. It sounds cruel, but I think our money should be spent on people not cats.
- No one is taking care of them.
- I have not seen any feral cats in my area of Tuxedo.
- Feral cats, knock on wood, are not a problem. The cats that roam in our area, live in the area and have homes with irresponsible owners that let them roam free.
- The city of Calgary needs to support neuter-trap-return programs to keep the cat population down. The cycle of feral cats needs to end.
- Overpopulation
- Getting sick or injured and repopulating to over max use of resources, not having their needs attended to with proper shelter, food, or medical attention, lack of knowledge for public on engagement of how to address ferals

- That they will attack humans and pets.
- The population can quickly get out of hand if cats remain unaltered, increasing the risk of diseases (ie rabies). These cats are often mistreated, as people don't feel they have many options to reduce the populations.
- Would say the same....however don't believe there are many in my area
- Require a neuter/spay program to keep population reasonable

- Over population; at the very least they need to be trapped, neutered and released. Feral cats exist due to strays/wandering cats that have procreated and their owners have not been able to take on that responsibility.
- Over-population. Work with local rescues to support organized TNR programs within the city. Control the population.
- That no one/org is monitoring them- reproduction, disease etc. Community cat programs could be implemented to ensure these cats are fixed, have had one round of shots , are being fed- look up cat colonies ( loads of successful projects in Asia)
- I am concerned for the health and safety of these animals. A spay ,neuter, release program could be implemented by the city in conjunction with rescue associations.

- I feel sorry for them, but not a problem, where I live.
- If they ended up sick and then had interaction with one of my children. At least owned cats usually go home regularly for food and their owners would be able to recognize if they were acting strange or needed help.

- part of the problem is people don't register their cats not just to save money but if they get caught they don't have to acknowledge that they own them and pay fines. If people could register them and have a way to get pets fixed for a reasonable price may help.
- They can carry and spread disease. Probably should be eliminated to prevent such.
- They need to be spayed or neutered to control populations and the barn cat program needs to continue.
- They kill birds and squirrels, and spread disease.
- We do not have a feral cat problem in our area but we do have a domestic cat problem which are owned by our irresponsible neighbours.
- They can spread disease to other cats bite small children and be eaten by predators.
- Their survival rate is low and they need protection.
- They need to be picked up to prevent further breeding and prevent any issues with people. They cause damage and can be aggressive.
- I have concerns about feral cats being able to survive severe winter conditions. what supports are put into place to help them.
- Never see them
- That they can transmit disease, and that they are, in most cases, living desperate lives.
- No experience with feral cats as they are typically skittish. The concerns include injury to other pets, nuisance in yard but the likelihood is very small.
- That we do not have a TNR program for feral cats - trap, spay/neuter and re-release would not be a terrible idea in areas that have a high population of feral cats that would not interact well with humans. I believe Ottawa has/had a program like this (parliament cats).

- I would like to see them rescued and if possible rehabilitated. I understand this can be difficult so I would hope a happy medium can be reached. Maybe a spay and neuter program to stop them from breeding.
- Why are they allowed when the bylaw says they are breaking the law
- No problem with truly feral "community" cats that are TNRed and hopefully have someone looking out for them, augmenting food, providing shelter. These cats very rarely make good candidates for adoption and it's only fair to let them live out their lives in their own environment.
- Not many, I just hope to see these cats get their shots and get neutered/spayed in a humane manner to be re-released in their neighbourhood as it is stressful for cats to be taken away from their homelands.
- I don't find there is many
- Same as above, but no suggestions as to how to control the existing population other than capture, sterilization, and release.
- None
- They have enough to eat.
- I always have concerns in the winter time. These cats end up with major frostbite injuries or death
- They should be treated like stray dogs.
- I worry about the spread of disease by these cats as well as their impact on the environment as they are not a native species of Calgary.
- Education, trapping assistance with spay/neuter being paramount. Ferals are usually in clusters or colonies, they need to be cared for and kept healthy.
- Their safety and the safety of other cats
- "build a spay/neuter program - vets in training could do as a learning tool and help cut down the feral numbers. Think of incentives for vets to take on the program to give back to the city.
- <https://www.alleycat.org/resources/why-trap-neuter-return-feral-cats-the-case-for-tnr/>
- I am concerned for their welfare but don't have other issues with them.
- Breeding, health of the animals. Why does Calgary not have TNR programs. Cats should not be killed just because people abandon cats, do not spay/neuter and allow cat colonies to begin.,
- Feral cats are destroying natural songbird populations. They need to be eliminated as they are not part of the natural environment and are threatening native species of birds and mammals.
- None
- Safety, shelter, food, potential for disease transmission
- see above. Also, anything that may affect children and vulnerable people who don't realise it's important to leave a feral cat alone rather than chasing it. A fearful cat can cause a lot of damage.
- Disease, unwanted litters, rooting through garbages
- Their welfare concerns me, but I have no problem with TNRs and think nature will take its course as long as they are fixed.
- Only that they may not be neutered.

- Feral cats can be a nuisance as, ultimately, they have nowhere to call home. Also, they may not be 'fixed', adding to feral cat population issues.
- I don't know of any in the community
- I have no concern as I have not had any exposure to these in my neighbourhood. I feel they should be captured if not licensed - as they probably carry disease that could be passed onto domestic cats
- No concerns in urban areas
- none
- Illness and disease, kittens
- Not sure about the size of the problem - is there one? Need more information to respond. I haven't run into any feral cats on my many walks in our neighborhood and Nose Hill. Most stray cats seem friendly so wouldn't be feral.
- I have concerns for our wildlife (songbirds) but also the health & welfare of the cat itself (cars, coyotes, etc.). I'm also not fond of having to clean cat poop out of my flowerbeds. These animals often lead a short hard life. They could be managed with a spay/neuter release program to limit
- I would hope that we could work with the rescues in Calgary to have feral feeding stations, TNR projects. Help fund current people looking after feral colonies.
- Mostly kittens, and more feral cats.
- They are a danger to wild bird populations, and their populations can grow pretty quickly if they aren't neutered.
- Luckily I have seen more feral domesticated rabbits than cats. Both are a bit scary.
- The unchecked population boom that can potentially occur. Disease transmission within the feral cat population and any cats roaming outside
- There are great non-profit organizations working to spay/neuter to help reduce their populations while providing health care and food for them. The city as far as I know doesn't do any of this. The city could provide support to monitor these populations.
- Pooping in my yard and garden
- Concern the City of Calgary has no plan in place to deal with them.
- As long as they are spayed or neutered, they keep mice and vermin populations down but they get loud when fighting and aggravate our dogs
- None
- I wish there was a way to sterilize them and put them back out it is the only way to control the population.
- My kids getting attacked
- they need to be dealt with. they are a huge pain
- They should be trapped and neutered then either put up for adoption or released back to their territory.
- Feral cats are not spayed or neutered so could repopulate very quickly. They have no protection from wildlife, disease or the cold and could potentially suffer.

- I've not encountered a feral cat in my neighbourhood.
- This is something that animal control should deal with though I've never had any problems with this.
- Carrying disease, attack, will come into my yard and wreck my garden.
- Would be worried they may not be living a safe life.
- Not a problem
- None
- None.
- None
- Mostly the same, just more risk of harm or diseases.
- No concerns.
- Spread of Disease ( health of cat)
- they pose a safety risk to people and other animals
- They can be vicious and harm other animals and people. But they do help with mice control!
- The existence of feral cats and the amount of birds they kill at a time when many songbird species are in decline. I think feral cats should be removed.
- "Disease.
- Population control"
- Damage and nuisance they cause, destruction of local bird stocks
- Their safety
- Relocate outside of city limits.
- Exposure to dangers such as harsh elements and traffic can be detrimental if there are not members of the community looking out for them. Public ignorance can also lead them to harm these animals. By educating members of the public, we can reinforce the idea that these animals are not a nuisance.
- I haven't experienced any obviously feral cats in Calgary and support programs to get them into safer habitats like Barn Buddies
- Growing population, if that is the case. Would like more information to better understand where the problems exist currently , options and costs to address the problem.
- As above.
- maybe disease and aggression from them in the wrong situation?
- It's more the neighbours' cats who we know are owned and cared for but migrate all over the neighbourhood eating birds and using other yards as toilets. It feels wrong that as responsible pet owners (cat indoors, fixed, licensed) that this isn't enforced or perhaps the education piece is missing...
- Feral cats damage bird populations and should be controlled within the city.
- Over population and diseases they can carry. They cause concerns for bringing in the coyotes.
- Disease, that they will become victims of abuse / torture , and that they are an easy food source for wildlife. They can easily pass disease onto other pets. There are some very sick individuals in our society and my worry is that they might trap them and torture them for personal satisfaction

- none
- None.
- we are feeding the cats as agreed to with the memow foundation
- Same as previous answer.
- That they are not neutered and so they create more homeless cats. Also that they are not well and suffering.
- There should be a city-wide feral cat neutering program established where residents can bring in feral cats to be neutered for free, given shots and released.
- These are a health and safety issue and should be removed.
- Feral cats are not spayed and neutered, which means increased amounts of kitties. This is over running a lot of rescue foundations and can be costly on society.
- None. As long as they aren't starting up fight clubs, I have no problem with them. Hoping spay and neuter task forces will help control the population by sterilization.
- No concerns
- I have not encountered feral cats, but I hope that there is a Trap, Spay, Neuter program for them.
- Feral cats need to have safe TNR sites that provide food and shelter. Rescue organizations that support these programs should receive funding from the City to help safeguard these cats.
- Birds being killed, spraying, perhaps spread of disease should there be an outbreak of something.
- They can spread disease and produce too many more.
- I am concerned about them becoming aggressive, possibly spreading disease, and the amount of offspring they can have.
- I'm not impacted by feral cats and never have been living in Calgary so far so I feel the same way about them as I do about stray cats.
- rabies, preying on wild birds

- My concern is with their well-being but that goes for all cats. A neuter spay program would be good.
- I believe feral cats should be trapped and, if possible, rehabilitated.
- Catch and euthanize only when presenting a problem.
- If they are on a rural property, they don't bother me. But they should not be allowed within city limits as they can carry diseases and parasites.
- I am concerned about their health and safety. I am also concerned that without ownership they will not have their vaccinations.
- making sure they are spayed/neutered to prevent more feral cats
- None.
- same answer as above but they can also carry disease as they are not seen by a vet for a check up.
- I am concerned that they will damage native bird populations

- They prey on wildlife impacting normal population levels. Untreated feral cats can carry issues that can be passed onto other animals.
- That eventually they could go crazy if they stay out long enough and could end up injuring other pets or even humans.
- they can wreck property
- They are a danger to pedestrians(attack, vicious)
- Aggressive, Not Spayed.
- Feral cats can attack people, which is bad, I believe someone should go around capturing the cats to find them a home, or to find their owner (if they have one) if they attack people I believe they should somehow be trained not to attack people.
- waste in yards/public spaces uncontrolled leading to unpleasant odours and health concerns for children and the public, feral cat health and wellbeing
- They should be euthanized if they can't be rehabbed to be a house cat. I know that's an unpopular opinion, but they're a destructive invasive species.
- I don't know much difference other than these are more likely to fight with other pets.
- Also health. They are also hungry and unpredictable.
- Hum, I just don't know. Put out food, water and bedding for them - - entice them to shelter.

- Endangering wild birds, transmitting illness between cats and other animals, providing a food source to wildlife

- Reproduction and disease
- Disease, dangerous if accidentally cornered or spooked
- Great keeps rodents down, move them all to abandoned areas of town.

- Breeding multiple generations of strays that cause a hazard on the road, to wildlife, and spread disease. They also help our coyote and bobcat population be a bit too healthy.
- Attacking other pets and being a nuisance.
- none
- they are hit by cars or killed by coyotes
- Uncontrolled breeding can easily get out of hand. Spread of diseases.
- i have not seen any feral cats in Calgary. the concern, if there were feral cats, would be breeding.
- All feral animal populations require some level eternal population mitigation. This includes feral rabbits.
- Killing birds
- They fit in the ecosystem with the wildlife - predators prey on them and they prey on small rodents like mice.
- Feral cats should be trapped and relocated by the city if reported.
- That despicable idiots will try to harm or poison them (or even the possibility of the animal inadvertently encountering these circumstances accidentally - i.e. getting into chemicals that were note stored properly or getting struck by a car).
- I am not really familiar with this issue - mostly only see collared cats outside.
- Feral cats nedd trapping and fixing TNR
- Unowned by anyone they can pose a threat to owned cats by passing on disease. They can breed and become a nuisance. Impact on birds and other wildlife.
- That they are in even more danger than roaming cats. I am concerned that people may hurt them or not take them to a safe place when found.

- The potential for feral cats to spread illness or disease. Certainly the population control as Gerald are unlikely to be spayed or neutered
- Feral cats can be difficult to deal with but they should also be treated with compassion. They should be taken in and they should be rehabilitated by an animal behaviourist. These animals can be rehabilitated and adopted with kindness, compassion, and education.
- "Impact on wildlife
- Overbreeding

- attract wildlife into residential areas who prey on them, some carry sickness, hard to remove if they settle in
- I've never really considered feral cats, but I would still have concerns about birds falling prey to cats.
- Population management. Ensuring the population does not get too large and unmanageable. I worry these cats end up being brought in to shelter and euthanized (or shelter-lifers) because they cannot be domesticated. Quality of life.
- I think we should care for them if they are truly feral. I volunteer for the meow foundation and help to domesticate feral kittens.
- I believe our city should have a Community Cat program. These Trap-Neuter-Return programs work to help reduce the population of feral cats. They are out there, they didn't ask for this life and we must help them where we can.

- They are neglected, without food and basic care and treated terribly by some. There is a place for a feral cat such as a barn buddy program for rodent control etc to allow them to live (vaccinated, spayed/neutered and sheltered). I have also seen feral cats do just fine after some time in a home.
- They need to be caught and altered so they don't create a bigger problem
- I have not seen many feral cats.
- Propagation. I would like to see a humane catch, neuter/spay, and release program such as the one they have in Toronto.
- Not concerned. They are not causing trouble to humans. I like animals. It enriches neighbourhood life. The neighbourhood is boring without animals.
- We should catch wild cats and put them in the zoo. The show outside the people, you will get money. People will be get happy. How to taking care of you should know animal. It doesn't matter wild or non-wild.
- They might spread disease if they aren't healthy
- Usually they're in particular area of the city. Maybe there should be some areas of the city allocated to them to fundraise, bring food and volunteer. They're not huge disease spreaders.
- Cost of the problem ie. Agencies and services that exist to manage
- I don't really see any

- "risk to welfare of cats, heightened concern for quality of life
- safety risk to public"
- The public needs to know there is a cat overpopulation crisis & be made aware of the number of cats in shelters & the number euthanized in kill shelters. Killing is ineffective & costly and the city needs to support TNR Programs.
- The safety of the cats, access to medical care, food, water, and shelter, and their overpopulation.
- Need to be spay/neutered to mitigate population explosions. Could make good barn cats.
- None
- Spay and release program.
- I can't say that we have feral cats in our community. Those I've seen are well fed and seem to belong to someone.
- Living in Calgary I have not seen them.
- Feral cats exercise their survival instincts which unfortunately create challenges to other species. A balance needs to be struck between a true feral cat and a stray that has gone rogue.
- Feral cats reproduce unchecked, harbour disease and spread disease.
- Disease, population control, public safety risk.
- I don't have any concerns around feral cats.
- They may be breeding and increasing the problem.
- How to manage the health of feral cats
- Population growth
- That they are also not spayed or neutered so the population of feral cats increases and impacts the populations of wild birds. Unvaccinated cats can also spread diseases to pets.
- Risk to welfare of feral cats - concerns over their quality of life; safety risk to public
- Same as domestic free-ranging cats: they kill birds.
- That they haven't been spayed or neutered and producing offspring.
- Mainly their propensity to "litter" at the neighbors and also their impact on bird populations. I am not sure if they are carriers of certain pathogens for people? If yes, trap and euthanize them.
- Feral Cats are technically invasive pests that live their lives consuming species that have no natural protection against them. Although many are supported by an ad-hoc community of carers in the community, along with the local strays, it is avoiding the solution to continued environmental impact.
- Safety of small children and other small pets
- Shit, disease, parasites, bird depletion, aggravation
- I don't have a lot of experience with feral cats.
- We don't seem to have a problem with feral cats.
- The only concern I would have is if there became a notable problem with vicious cats that attacked other animals and/or instigated the spread of diseases. No one wants to pay for a vet visit.
- As these cats are afraid of humans, generally not an issue unless they are ill or in distress.
- The biggest concern with outdoor cats of any kind is that they kill billions of birds every year. Bird numbers are in steep decline due to outdoor cats, habitat destruction and a host of other problems.

Cats are not native species; they have been introduced. I know it is the current thinking to trap and neuter stray cats and put them back where they came from but this, to me, is not a solution and does nothing to save birds.

Expectations of City

- That I can report one to the city if I encounter one and that the city will capture it and handle it accordingly, with heavy fines for owners to deter them from this practice.
- To bring education and ideas in to 2020. We are far behind. I'm part Brit and the UK surge ahead with kindness to species, research and ideas. I enjoy evolutionary biology and Calgary must strive if it's to do better.
- I would like to see that license cats are ok to be outside. I have a cat and lots of kids sometimes my cat sneaks out threw a door or window then I have a neighbor pounding on my door threatening to call bylaw cause my cat happened to escape . City shouldn't give out 150 dollar tickets cause a cat.
- Capture and locating owners or re-homing, or homing on a farm if feral. Perhaps feral cat colonies, if there are any in Calgary, should be spayed/neutered, vaccinated and released. Education about the dangers of roaming, and fines for offences.
- Kill them all, just like they do in Australia
- Harsher punishments for cat owners who let their cats roam free.
- respond to calls, capture the animals rather than the present practice of making it the responsibility of the tax payes to trap and transport the animals to the appropriate shelter.
- If The City is not able to help get the feral/stray cats off the streets then it would be good to do a capture/sterilize program to reduce the ongoing number of unwanted kittens which contribute to continuing the population.
- Capture and find who let them free and fine the hell out of them
- I would imagine that stray and roaming cats should be treated the same as dogs, though I can imagine they would be much more difficult to catch. In terms of feral cats, I would imagine that these could be treated the same as wildlife.
- I feel the City has more pressing issues (animal hoarding, neglect and abuse, vicious animals) than feral, stray and roaming cats, especially with licensed cats.
- Bigger penalties/fines for cat owners that let their cats run free outdoors.
- Expect them to be caught. Owners should face large fines.
- Try to find their owners. Keep track of cats that are being brought to you multiple times. Adopt out friendly strays when possible.
- I expect that they act like they do for roaming dogs. They should come out and capture, hold and manage the cat problem in this city. I am shocked that as a home owner I have to pay to rent a trap and trap other people's pets myself to bring to the city.
- "Charging fines to citizens who do not have their cats licensed and allow their cat to roam.
- Collaboration with local agencies to spay/neuter, treat and adopt feral and stray cats.
- Assistance for owners and neighbours when a cat is hit by a car."

- Educate the public about the benefits of outdoor cats to avoid panic and negative sentiment. Cats are awesome and people should be able to enjoy them, regardless if they own one or not.
- Cats who are outdoors should have a licence but not all do
- trap and fine owners where possible, control population of feral colonies with Spay/neuter and move out of city into farms where possible
- none
- bring them in get there vet check & shots and try to re-home them if possible
- Responsible pet owners should not be allowed to have their animal roam free for the safety of people AND the cat
- Control
- That they provide funding for properly taking care of feral cats and give strict fines for roaming cats and help teach the public that domestic cats should remain indoors.
- Continue to actively to work with teh Meow Foundation to capture, spay and neuter, socialize and rehome to consciencious cat owners, while educating the general public about responsible ownership and the benifits of spaying and neutering cats (but all pets).
- I think that the bylaws surrounding cat trapping can be clearer and more streamlined. As it is, it is a long and difficult process to trap and bring a nuisance cat to animal control. I would also like the city to give more fines and more strictly enforce the bylaws against having roaming cats.
- Fine owners ,deal with owners properly feral and strays should be put down way too many cats wandering around
- More funding for TNR programs. In an ideal world there would be fines for letting un-neutered cats roam as well.
- that they are placed in an adoption program and are spayed/neutered
- Fine cat owners who let their cats roam, catch stray cats. educated people on responsible cat ownership.
- If I know who that cats belong to and they don't comply with letter warnings, it should not be a neighbor problem. They are violating the bylaw and it should be enforced. All of the warnings instead of fines when trapped are ridiculous. These are not my pets and I don't want them in my gated yard.
- euthanasia program for feral colonies, indoor cat laws for domestics (no "outdoor cats" allowed)
- They need to capture and euthanize. Currently, nothing is done with regard to roaming.
- Each cat needs to be licensed with the City, and these rules need to be strictly enforced. More education of the public, and stiffer fines for owners who are caught letting their cats roam. Maybe hire a bylaw officer or a team who would deal exclusively with trapping feral, stray and roaming cats.
- Spay them when they are caught work closely with organizations that take in stray cats.
- No change from current policy, which is to capture them when people complain.
- Pick them up, bring them to a shelter, rehome them.
- Frankly, I think you should follow the methodology aarcs and meow use
- Provide traps to citizens to trap. Divert cats to Humane Society if possible. Euthanize when necessary.

- Capture them for distribution to new homes or euthanatia.
- As I indicated above, cat owners need to be more responsible. They need to license their cats and those fees pay for collars with transmitters that sound alarms when the cats leave their properties and only stop when they return home. Steep fines should be placed on owners of roaming cats.
- None
- Programs for trap and spay and neuter of feral cats, fines and education for owners who let their cats roam.
- Reduce the destruction of natural habitats by taking these cats off the streets.
- No specific concerns
- Set and enforce policy and regulations.
- I expect higher fines for those that have 'outside cats' as the current fines are not a deterrent, and i expect those fines to be levied against the owners so that it drives the message home that free roaming cats are a violation of the bylaw.
- Cats should not be allowed to be outdoors unless leashed and supervised by the owner at all times. Owners should be fined whenever possible. Encourage public to report stray/feral cats for pickup/trapping by city bylaw.
- I expect that they catch the cats and fine any of the owners that allow their cats to roam off of their property.
- Catch stray and ferel cats. Leave roaming cats alone.
- Removal of animals. An inexpensive/free program so people can spay/neuter their cats and prevent uncontrolled breeding.
- If they are not in danger or dangerous, let them be.
- I expect the fine to be the same as with dogs, as well as registration. Education for cat owners!
- More education on how roaming cats is not responsible pet ownership.
- I would love the City to be able to capture the ferals & strays and make sure they are spayed/neutered and safe. Roaming cats that are licensed and returned to owners should be fined
- As a tax payer, I expect the bylaw dept to enforce the bylaws. When a cat owner is a chronic offender & ignores the bylaws, the city should deal with it. ...i.e. remove the cat, issue a fine each time the animal is caught roaming, etc.... There seems to be no consequences so bylaws aren't followed
- "The city doesn't seem to put any effort into enforcing the cat bylaws. Cats free roam and owners have no fear of being caught or fined.
- It would be great to capture stray cats and put them up for adoption through the city if the owners can't be found. See above question re: feral cats."
- Deal with them humanely and try to obtain homes for the feral cats. Leave the roaming cats (cats that go outdoors) alone. They help to clear up the mice
- If contacted the City Bylaw dept should give traps to concerned people..and not have it weather dependent. We had a feral here this winter and we could not get a trap because it was too cold!! Call back in the spring they said. Be proactive..set a trap and come back to check it :)

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- Feral and stray cats need eradicated from the city by whatever means the city deems humane (which could include adoption)
- TS&N where possible. Treat them with respect.
- i expect them to be treated the same as a stray dog
- I expect cats to be trapped and returned to owners if they have them.
- Feral: Trap, neuter, and release. Stray and roaming: Trapped and if no owner can be found, put up for adoption.
- I don't know... more reminders to pet owners to keep their cats on a leash or indoors. Higher fines for roaming cats? Everyone seems to ignore it because they know that no one is going to do anything about it, and their cat's need to go outside is more of a demand on them than the city's bylaw.
- as above
- Owners of roaming cats should be subjected to fines
- To make sure there are not problem cats multiplying, lets get them into the spaye or neuter clinic at the university.
- Trap, spay/neuter, and rehome or humanely euthanize ALL cats that are taken in. Including free-roaming. Leniency if cat is reported missing by owners (it's just a lost cat, not free-roaming, so strict repercussions seem unnecessary)
- They should be left alone unless causing a safety issue with people or domestic, properly managed pets.
- Stepping in to control if the city becomes over-run with cats.
- To remove them when asked and put them to sleep if they are unclaimed. In general too many people become owners of pets and give up on them or just let them go because they realize they are expensive and a nuisance or a lot of work. If we keep allowing just anyone to own pets it'll keep happening
- I would hope the city would do a quarterly round up of any "roaming cat" and those who have licenses get fined
- Ratchet up the fines for subsequent offenders. Refuse licenses to repeat offenders. And, as unfortunate as it is, provide a system where neighbours can report ownership (of all pets) by address and report poor owner behaviour.
- Pick-up and destroy feral cats, look for owners of strays and roamers and fine the owners for letting them run loose.
- None, other than perhaps providing a humane trap for a citizen that is concerned to capture the offending feline.
- Enforce licensing and bylaw against letting your cat run loose.
- I think the City of Calgary should expect neutering and spaying, every intact animal they acquire must be fixed and that for their own protection regular trapping of roaming animals should take place. Better euthanized than neutered/ spayed and be left out to suffer.. mandatory spay/Neu

- To pick them up upon any inquiry made by a Calgarian. I know that it will probably never happen but to be at least more adamant and on top of things. Maybe start issuing out fines to those who choose not to comply and risk everyone else's safety. There have been 15 accidents on my block. It's ridiculous.
- minimize the numbers best as they can. no key measure to follow. as long as there is no mass concentration in one quadrant or Neighbourhood.
- That bylaw enforces the law that owners cats must stay in their own yards.
- If The City of Calgary receives a call, I believe they instruct the caller to capture or trap the cat in order to be picked up by animal control? If The City could instead call or send a notice to the offender which ensures the caller's identity is kept anonymous.
- I don't honestly know what could or should be done about feral and stray cats other than capture and euthanization. For roaming cats - why can't I take a picture of the offending cat on my property and report it and have the city require the owners to keep their cat at home. Big fines for repeats.
- None
- "When it comes to feral cats, attempt to rehome at barns or within a rescue that is willing to train the animal if possible
- For roaming cats, I feel like there needs to be stricter laws. Higher fines/ animal being taken away from the owner."
- we are not so much concerned about roaming cats as feral cats..people can always humanely trap them & bring into the pound..owners must be fined a large amount to deter owners..the pocket book is always where it stings for the owners...
- Feral, stray and roaming cats should be impounded.
- As long as they aren't doing any harm ( and as long as they are fixed), I don't really see them as too big of a problem. It would be a shame if one was hit by car because they weren't kept inside like they should be.
- If they are destructive take it up. If roaming, make neighbours be grown ups. Maybe a three strikes rule. But you have to show N to N attempt at resolution first.
- Disallow cat owners to knowingly free roam their cats. Cats allowed outside should be kept on the owner's property at all times unless leashed, similar to dogs.
- Outdoor cats are a major issue for most Canadian cities (I used to manage the the City Pound of Nova Scotia). They source only issues to cities, with no benefit. They should be culled by DNR or Animal Services.
- If they are being a nuisance call 311 and a cat trap should be placed to humanely capture. Most cats have a home, bigger fines for repeat offenders?
- Neuter them and put them up for adoption
- collect the cats, increase the fines for cat owners.
- I would support the City to trap, neuter and release, or engage pet rescues that can accommodate feral cat. For strays, I would want the City to work with humane society and other pet rescues to help find homes.
- The City should be capturing and euthanizing to keep them from getting out of control.

- Charge owners if found.
- Unfortunately I think spaying or neutering is out of the question because who's going to pay for that? Possibly euthanize them to get the population under control.
- Re-unification of cats with tags yes please. Collect approachable strays for possible rescue and/or re-unification. Ignore feral cats, and encourage coyote populations by unilaterally allowing unrestricted backyard chickens. Coyotes will solve any feral cat problems in a heartbeat.
- Trap & assess any reported problem cats that are roaming. For feral: spay/neuter & release if possible or euthanize if necessary. For stray: attempt to contact owner & return pet, or spay/neuter & re-home. Returning strays: provide info for first 2 instances, then increasing fines, up to losing pet.
- That they are captured and when there is an owner, that the owner is fined.
- Trap/release programs. Disease monitoring.
- I would like the City to pick them up, the same way that they pick up dogs that are roaming freely.
- Please let cats roam free, it reduces the time, money, and energy I have to spend when dealing with rodents
- Added resources, personnel, facilities.... These animals are not meant to live in such harsh climates and its sad to see them struggling, fighting for territory and food, and battling injury and disease alone.
- Support our shelters and free licences for senior to encourage older people to adopt more cats. Cats are less maintenance than dogs and will improve health in older people. Win win for both let's not put $$ above love.
- Consider offering free neutering for cats a couple of times a year!
- For feral not much you can do except try to catch them if known to be problematic in some areas. Spay and neuter. Stray and roaming cats: would like more initiative or deterrent for individuals to not let their cats roam free in the city.
- Culling would be appropriate. TNR at the very least.
- All cats licensed and microchipped, all cats contained (kennels, leash etc.) no exceptions.
- Catch them (then adopt or euthanize them), heavily fine the owners that let their cats outside. Provide people with resources to catch and or deter nuisance cats that are damaging their property.
- There needs to be stronger enforcement of the current bylaws. Especially for those who leave food out for their cats who roam. It is attracting nuisance animals ( magpies, skunks, nice..etc)
- "How would you treat a feral dog? How would treat a roaming dog?"
- Why is the responsibility of pet owners minimized only when you have a cat? If my dog continually defecated in your back garden, threatened the safety of your baby and elderly in your home? How would you want it dealt with? Do that."
- they should all be caught fixed and rehomed
- Reminder notices in Enmax bills first...then trap them.
- The city should support trap, neuter, return programs with pet license fees
- Cats should also be licensed just like dogs

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

June 29, 2020

- To be more strict about roaming cats. The bylaw should be enforced more. I abide by the rules and lazy owners' cats harrass me and mine on my property (I am a cat lover by the way).
- Feral cats need to be spayed or neutered if caught stray or roaming cats should be sent to the pound and the owners contacted if they can be found.
- Fines for owners, ensure they are cared for and for feral cats having them spayed/neutered and adopted out as barn cats.
- Clean them up. Fine owners.
- Trap, rehabilitation if possible.
- I would like to see outdoor shelters in the city. Maybe even on private properties to those who are willing.
- As long as private property rights are maintained the next issue would be destructive behaviour of stray or feral cats. I expect the city to deal with the issue through licensing and enforcement issues. Officers can deal with aggressive cats on an as needed basis.
- If a cat is aggressive the City should come out or if someone feels the cat is a stray and in danger. Otherwise cats usually find their way home. They love to roam and hunt.
- Trap, catch and take them to shelters like the Meow Foundation.
- They need to be catching feral and stray and spay or neuter them to prevent the population from exploding, also mandatory chips in domestic cats so they can be reunited with owners.
- To trap and assess whether can be adopted or is best sited today live as a mouser on a farm or humanely euthenized. The feral/stray cat has done NOTHING wrong as ultimately it was a human who was irresponsible in letting these feral/stray cats and it is them who suffer not the human
- Unsure at this time exactly what should be done. But new rules possibly? For roaming cats.
- The City should provide education and fines for roaming cats.
- Feed and sterilize and release feral cats to colony. Stray roaming cats leave them alone
- Trying to catch the feral cats and obviously stray cats . Let the licensed cats with tags micro chip be aloud outside
- To trap, sterilize, and home as many as possible, and assist people attempting to do so as much as possible.
- Bylaws should be enforced and these animals need to be picked up and dealt with appropriately.
- To pick them
- They be neutered.
- Feral and stray cats should be de sexed. Roaming cats are a challenge as people let their cats...be cats...and that infringes on other people and causes distress. Keep them on your property or leash them like we have to do with dogs. So fines I guess.
- Hmmm, I'm not sure about feral cats, but The City should manage stray and roaming cats through education and ultimately fines.
- City of Calgary should respond to complaints when feral, stray and roaming cats are made. Staff should attempt to capture, quarantine and identify the cats as appropriate and contact pet owners if possible.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Set up a sanctuary for all stray, feral cats so they can be cared for.
- All cats must be licensed. Period, end of conversation.
- I'm very happy that Calgary got rid of its kill policy. Perhaps more education on raising a cat or kitten? Perhaps teaching how to take a walk with your cat. Cat parks? Understanding cat behaviour has come a long way. Yet, still not enough when I watch cute cat videos and so many cats are stressed
- "Feral cat should be treated like a coyote
- Stray cat should be treated like a rescues"
- "Roaming cats should incur a small fine on return of animal to owner.
- That's about it"
- Felines are ABUSED by owners that do not maintain care of their pets. Humanely put them down /or charge owners with abuse, not to own any more; when they pick up their pet the FIRST TIME, only to be re-released back to start the same cycle over again. It's a shame cats need to suffer neglect abuse.
- I expect that stray and roaming cats will be picked up and dealt with accordingly. Owners should be fined if they are repeat offenders.
- Feral stray cats should be put down, licensed roaming cats should be returned to owners.
- Increase fines for cats caught outside and more public information ads in the media informing people about the by-law.
- Take a bigger role in catching them. Don't leave it up to neighbors of offending animal and owner
- To make sur they can keep the strays and all cats have a licence.
- Catching, returning to owner, depopulation
- Stricter fines for dumping cats or allowing them to roam
- That the cat be collected and the owner given a large fine.
- do a licence blitz and issue fines... all have a anonymous call in line to report roaming cats an actually have bylaw do something... LOL this will never happen stop with the so called education of owners and start fining people and large enough so people wont take the risk of ignoring the bylaws!!
- Cats should be required to be either strictly indoor or confined to ones property, perhaps via leash or similar. Stray and feral should be treated by the task forces and adopted when suitable
- To offer free traps and collection of the cats
- Better response time
- Follow through with trapping and fining like you do with dogs totally a double standard.
- My only expectation is that the city consistently fines pet owners who let their cats roam, which will hopefully encourage the mentality that it's unacceptable to allow their animals to be outside their control.
- Roaming cats should be trapped and impounded if not wearing collars, identification, immunization tags and city registration. Outdoor cats should be spayed/neutered.
- Catch feral and stray. Spay/neuter and release and no kill humane society

- That they are captured and dealt with (either rehoming or else).
- I expect the city to assist with feral cats. Leave roaming or stray alone and do not fine! I have a cat that escapes on us no matter what. It's hard to keep tracking her down and picking her up when she's been picked up; and the expense! Harder for people to keep animals.
- Trap, spay or neuter and adopt.
- KEEP ANY AND ALL CATS OFF THE STREETS PERIOD.
- I think the city should be able to control the number of strays.
- The city collects stray cats and I think it would be awesome if they spayed or neutered and vaccinated all cats before their owners could collect them at the owners expense.
- "Try to find them a home. If they are feral take to humane society
- Contact owners if a complaint is made
- Demand chips on all pets large and small...charge ALL costs related to management, rescue, administrative, and vets, etc back to owner. ABSOLUTELY NO COST TO taxes residents!!
- I do not feel cat owners are fined for their cats roaming and these animals should be destroyed if they cannot be re-homed. Same rules as dogs!!
- If feral or stray to be caught and if possible be put up for adoption. Roaming cats if caught to be micro chipped and returned to owner with a small fee
- To remove them from the area. If feral maybe euthanize. Maybe try to have them adopted. Relocate wild animals to the country.
- I expect the City of Calgary to have a no-kill policy at the shelter, educate Calgarians on what it means to be a responsible pet owner, and prioritize being exceptionally humane in its handling of the cats.
- Staff to set traps through 311 complaints, educate Calgarians regarding the harm that can lead to the feral cats. Over population of cats, not being spayed or neutered.
- To capture, rehome or euthanize them.
- Not much.
- Fine people who consistently let their cats roam free.
- Easier and quicker availability of humane traps. In our case, we purchased a trap, but had to drive a long distance to have it registered at Animal Services.
- "Stray and roaming.....impound and fine the owner.
- Feral cats, catch, spay/neuter and release to control vermin."
- Most citizens do Not understand that Cats are NOT supposed to roam. More information about that with ads and adverts about education.
- It would be best if the city was involved in these cases. Many people still allow cats to roam. Significant fines or removal of pets from irresponsible pets should be in place.
- Pick them up and enforce the rules, fines for owners who allow their cats to get out.
- If we could rescue strays to reunite them with their owners or adopt them to new loving homes that would be good. Owners of roaming cats posing an issue in the neighbourhood should be penalized. Trap, sterilize and release the feral colonies, it is unlikely these cats will ever be happy in a home.

- I would hope they would trap, sterilize and rehome or release the feral strays.
- More enforcement and capture of roaming cats in parks and other areas
- None should be allowed. Does the City allow Feral, stray roaming dogs? NO!
- Feral cats should be TNR'd. My hope is that stray cats are brought to the city where they will be reunited with their people. If they don't have people, then I hope they will be adopted out. If scared/shy, I hope that volunteers will work with them to become more comfortable/confident.
- For the safety of the cat and to ensure coyote activity is not encouraged cats should remain indoors at all times
- They should be euthanized.
- To make it easy for citizens to log complaints with the City and not be subject to harassment from neighbours for doing so. I don't know if the City would even come out for a cat roaming.
- An active TNR program to keep these cats from continuing to breed.
- Make the penalties stiffer for roaming cats that are caught and brought to Animal Services...repeat offenders should be fined more.
- Act on complaints immediately, rehabilitating if possible then putting up for adoption
- "Feral cats-to be captured & "fixed" & homed, if possible.
- Stray cats-to be captured & returned to their owners through having the cats registered
- Roaming cats - that they are registered"
- "Stray or owned cats (if owners are found, should be ticketed they should not be allowed to roam free, dog owners are ticketed when ""at large"" same should go for cats.
- Feral cats should be caught and adopted out for barn cats, also mandatory spay/neuter."
- None
- I would expect the city to manage the population of feral cats and take stray and roaming cats for rehoming or to a shelter.
- Do something that doesn't put all the responsibility on home owners. Require all pets to be tagged or chipped . Frequent violators should be fined and have not allow to get another pet for a certain time
- Capture and rehome
- "Roaming cats- owners warned, then fined and possibly cat seized if non compliance.
- Stray- pick up, check for identifications today find previous owners, if unsuccessful the. spay/neuter, microchip, and rehome.
- Feral- unsure, large scale spay/neuters but probably unrealistic. Monitoring of knowns?"
- Catch stray and roaming cats. Possibly adopt them out to recoup some of the costs of catching them, and to ensure lax owners who repeatedly allow their cats to wander to rethink their "outdoor" cat ways.
- Support more spay and neuter programs.
- Responsive to complaints, educate pet owners (city staff were very good when we contacted them a few years ago)
- Fine owners, make licensing cheaper

- " -more vigorous population control of feral cats
- -better efforts in finding owners of strays
- -actually follow through on fines and penalties for people who actively allow their cats to roam"
- I would hope there would be some assistance to concerned citizens when feral/stray cats are an issue.
- Conduct targeted problem area catches/collections where there are colonies of cats, and unfortunately quickly and humanely euthanize.
- To monitor and neuter the population.
- Capture.
- Take a stand. It's called Animal Control for a reason. I want the choice of not living among the beasts. That's one of the reasons I live in an urban centre.
- I expect the city to do more. Too many cats are euthanized in Calgary each year. We should aim to have the same rate as dogs. Start a spay and neuter program. And petition the Provincial Government to do more. Create tougher penalties for animal abusers.
- If they are a nuisance to get rid of them
- The city should do whatever is needed to have owners adhere to the rules. Feral cats should be caught and domesticated
- They should be captured and killed.
- Let them be unless they have become a bother
- The city told me they would not help me deal with the cats in my yard in any way, and being allergic, I can't trap them myself and bring them to a shelter. I want the city to deal with these cats and pass the actual costs plus penalties on to the irresponsible owners.
- None
- Care and concern for starters. I've called the city for help for catching stray cats and the individuals made it clear that the city won't help. The city could aid in providing humane traps for civilians to set, the city could also provide lessons in setting the traps, pick up animals too.
- Enforce the bylaws. Start ramping up patrols to catch cats and start fining owners. Cats owners seem to get a free pass on having what they call "outdoor cats". Fine them the first time and make them license them. 3-4 time Repeat offenders should get charged with neglect and forbidden to have pets
- Support groups that support and tend to feral colonies. Support catch, spay, re-release programs. Cheap spay programs for pets to help curtail unwanted litters
- They should be caught and given to a humane service who can determine the best course of action. If they are not controlled they will populate to larger numbers.
- Trap and try and adopt them out. If not spay/neuter and release.
- Feral should be left alone, stray and roaming should be picked up by animal services and brought to a shelter if they are being a nuisance in the neighborhood
- "A website to report feral and stray cat populations so that an entity (city of Calgary or third party animal rescue ) can come a deal with it

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Not allow roaming cats at all"
- Pick them up like you do dogs.
- If captured they are cared for
- Ticketing owners who do not look after or care for their pets. As a multiple dog owner, the expectations for cats should be the same (licensing, picking up after them, etc).
- If these cats pose danger to humans or other animals then the City should have a policy to prevent that. But as far as I know they pose no danger. Although a cat pooping in another's yard is an inconvenience, many dog owners allow the same thing to happen. I think cats should be allowed to roam.
- "Roaming cats are returned to their owner along with a fine for allowing it to roam.
- Feral - relocate if possible, outside city limits
- Stray- if no microchip or tattoo, have vet checked and sheltered for adoption."
- I don't see cats as a problem and I wouldn't waste a phone call to report it, therefore I have no expectations on the city dealing with feral or roaming cats.
- They should be trapped when possible and the owners fined for roaming. More food for the coyotes.
- Capture and euthanize
- I expect the city to smarten up and understand that cats are different from dogs! I HAVE TONS OF DOG CRAP IN MY YARD ALL YEAR, BUT NO CAT POOP! Stop being racist against cats!
- Keep the program to provide traps
- Coordinate with rescues and vet clinics to do capture and release spay and neuter operations on feral cats and enforce a no roaming policy on pet cats. Property bound felines are fine, but if they're left to wander neighborhoods they should be treated like anyone would a stray dog.
- Leave em alone, preferably.
- To limit the number
- Make it easier for anonymous complaints. Like through dming.
- catch and release altering, feeding stations, medical care
- You can't always get every cat, cat boxes (these are little insulated ins or boxes to sleep in) for those you miss would be amazing.
- If they are left to be feral, the population of cats would obviously dramatically increase numbers which increases disease and strain on shelters and finances to house them. Catch and spay/neuter release all roaming, stray and feral cats. Owners should be heavily fined for roaming nuisance cats.
- Continue to fine/educate for roaming, attempt to trap/adopt strays & ferals - work with and support the existing non-profit orgs (MEOW Foundation, ARF etc.) - improve support for, even.
- Common sense with Roamers as is with dogs....educate, investigate potential abuse or neglectful homes and act on those suspicions. Ensure ALL pets have licenses, fine those who dont. Should be treated no different than loose dogs...bring them in and if not reunited after X days sent to a shelter.
- people need to be EDUCATED. See a cat outdoors? pick it up + bring to the vet. never assume a cat is a stray, they're either lost or abandoned. better ads/info from CAS on licensing/chipping/neutering deals to the public. Cat owners need to start keeping cats indoors. Dogs are helped, Y not cats here

- To have plans put in place to vaccinate, neuter/spay feral or stray cats as well as microchip them all and to allow temporary winter cat houses to keep them safe in the winter. I also feel every owner of any animal should have them microchipped so making microchipping mandatory.
- The roaming and feral cats should be caught. The owner should be fined. The feral cats should be domesticated and homed. All cats should be tattooed.
- My expectation is on the owner to spay/neuter their pet. Would be great to see the city have a capture/fix/release program to help manage cat populations.
- This bylaw is currently widely disregarded and not well enforced. I expect the city of calgary to enforce this law with stiffer penalties and trapping policies.
- I expect the City of Calgary to TNR feral cats and make sure if a colony is found, that they have access to food, water, and shelter. Stray and roaming cats should be taken in and adopted out, if owners cannot be found.
- city should deal with exact same as it does dogs
- I think owners who let their cats run free should be ticketed.
- Catch and rehome if possible
- I expect the animals to be treated humanely and fairly. I expect the humans who allow their cats to roam and/or become feral to be help accountable for their actions. Providing inexpensive options to keeping cats on their property would also be beneficial.
- Unless they are causing a problem, or are to numerous. Nothing
- I want them to TNR!!! Cats will die out naturally in any given group! It's been proven and it works! And it will be cheaper for Calgarians in the long term. This is the absolute best thing for all cats - feral and domestic!!
- Education of public, address appropriate citizen complaints.
- Something needs to be done about roaming cats. In both neighborhoods I have lived in roaming cats have been a problem. I have been told that we have to lay out traps to catch any cats. I think the city should be the ones responsible for this, you collect the license fees.
- Animal control should be picking them up. Heavy fines for roaming cat owners to offset costs for putting down feral and stray cats (whose owners can't be found)
- "I dont see the.city doing anything about them
- The only resource or response I have seem is a rental program for cant traps"
- Capture as many as possible, and put down.
- Controlling fertility cat population. Heavier fines, more rules for domestic cat owners.
- "Ideally there should be a trap/neuter/release program in conjunction with feral cat colonies to address feral cat populations
- Roaming cats, if owned, should be reunited with their owners if possible."
- Not sure. Euthanization seems extreme, perhaps vet school vasectomies if they are feral/stray? Pet cats with tags need to be returned, maybe with a fine and a warning.

- Roaming: serious fine for owner/ ie "contribution" to local spca; encourage microchips to help with relocation; licensing. No kill for strays/ferals/roamers. Rehome - seniors facilities, acreages, etc. wherever possible. Many groups do excellent work (including City) - financial support.
- Wrangle the troublemakers and let the others be.
- The city should stay out of it, but support citizens/businesses/organizations that wish to do something about it.
- Feral should be euthanized
- When reported, I'd like the city either to set traps, or provide traps to residents (& pick up captured cats).
- "DO NOT KILL THEM IT DOESN'T WORK"
- The neuter spay release program is the only effective solution invest more in those programs
- Please I beg you to invest in more programs that catch, neuter and rerelease the cats where they were found"
- If the cats are safety issues then the city should apprehend them.
- Help them or leave them be
- I would like to see feral cats caught and fixed, adopted if possible (barn cats). Stray should be caught, try to find owner and returned. Owners should pay a fine.
- Trying to locate the owner's for roaming before pound is used permanently and as suggested last answer categorize feral cats for how they behave whether they're not open to humans period or if they have curious to test their limits so maybe see less cats die because of euthanasia
- Capture and eradicate the animals. Also maintain strong penalties and enforcement so that people do not abandon animals. This may include requiring every pet cat, rabbit and similar animals to have a identification chip.
- Put more onus on the owners of cats to act responsibly by paying the same license fee as dog owners and paying fines if their cats are consistently allowed to roam and contaminate community and personal property. Treat all animals humanely and assist those in need of help.
- Call 311 and animal control can take the animal in
- Should be the same as other pets. Fine the owners and pick the animals up. If feral, then euthanize them.
- Higher fines for roaming cats and catching and dealing with them and feral cats.
- I would hope they would leave them alone.
- Stray and roaming cats a much larger problem than feral cats in the city. The city should have a pro-active role in fining owners of roaming cats.
- Fines to owners if owner is known. Trap and euthanize feral animals if required.
- To have them destroyed if no owner can be located. Animal control of number of animals roaming needs to be controlled.
- Faster response to complains
- None
- Calgary should work with cat rescue agencies

- Catch, rehabilitate and adopt out I suppose
- To deal with them. Trapping and fines for pets. Euthanization for feral strays.
- Dont turn a blind eye. There are 5 to 8 cats in riverbend that are always free. Maybe come by once in awhile and let the owners know the laws
- Pick them up and take them to a shelter. Deal with them the way stray dogs are dealt with
- Catch them and send them to the SPCA. Euthanize feral cats that cannot be rehabilitated.
- Work with the community members to trap them, spay them, and have them adopted and re homed as often as possible.
- TNR, or if they are social, adopting out, or sending to another rescue.
- I would like the city to fund spay/neuter/return programs to deal with feral cats. I would also like the city to ban owners from allowing their cats to roam free, and establish a warning/fine/animal confiscation program in order to enforce this ban.
- Not much - they aren't dangerous animals and owners need to be mindful roaming cats may not return home
- Let them be if they're not causing a problem
- Let them be, unless they are creating a real disturbance in the community.
- There are 3 different questions here. I have no issue with roaming Spayed or Neutered cats. I like them, I can deal with them pooping in my gardens and I believe they assist in managing rodent populations. I am more concerned with the abomination and abuse that is declawing and would like it banned.
- I would like for roaming cats to have to remain in their owners yards. It would be nice for stray cats to find homes.
- Catch them and put down if not adoptable
- Treat them as humanly as possible. Those that cannot or will not be cared for need to be put down. However, the complete reduction of non altered animals would be the best option.
- To safely trap them and hopefully return roaming cats and finding barn cat programs for the feral cats. Also, the City should help with the spaying/neutering of these cats. There should also be substantial fines for roaming cats.
- I think stray cats should be taken to the Humane Society for re-unification with the owner (hopefully) or adoption. Feral cats I am not sure - I have heard of organizations that deal with these animals. Roaming animals - not much.
- Capture and take to SPCA.
- No leniency. It should not be up to the home owners being bothered by someone else's cat to have to "talk" to the owners, or set up traps. The city should be setting up the traps and then taking them to the pound.
- Impound them.
- I had to try to trap the feral/roamer that was pooping and digging in my garden beds and stalking birds in my yard. I never could but caught someone's lost pet and a skunk instead. Animal services not being open til 10 is inconvenient if you've trapped a cat overnight and need to take in before work

- More aggressive action should be taken to reduce the amount of prey available to wild predators to reduce the chance of interaction with predators
- More education on how to prevent this in the first place. More options for people to help capture them.
- If it is apparent that a cat is owned (collar etc) or stray then perhaps they should be taken to Animal Services and the owners found for the animal to be returned or put up for adoption in the case of a stray. Feral cats do serve a purpose so I'm unsure.
- That they attempt to capture and regimie if possible, but at a minimum spay or neuter
- More education and notices given to cat owners. Nothing has been done in regards to my neighbors. I was told I could rent a cat trap but on my money.
- Feral cats should be put down, roaming cat owners fined.
- Not sure about feral and stray cats, but owners could be fined for allowing roaming cats.
- not much, would be nice to see existing tnr programs supported and expanded, and penalties for roaming cats to keep pets indoors
- Catch them and impound them
- Pick them up and take them to their animal shelter; allow rescue agencies to re-home them.
- Euthanasia may be a good plan instead of re-homing all of these strays back to people who let them out in the first place.
- Collect and spay/ neuter..rehabilitate if possible
- Rescue and foster/adopt.
- Remove them from city limits if at all possible
- All cats should require a microchip. Roaming cats should be picked up and owners fined.
- Fines for owners that allow their cats to roam. Prompt response to reports of roaming cats.
- Capture. They have to be captured.
- Trap and get rid of them.
- Hard law enforcement, First warning, second offence pet removed from household, returned after high fine paid.
- I love cats and I would like all outdoor cats to be picked up and taken to a centralized shelter. It is literally impossible to tell which cats are supposed to be outside and which are not, which are owned and which are not, and who they belong to. It must be enforced to have an impact.
- They should start removing them all and making owners of these cats start being responsible for the damage their cats are causing. Cats should be as regulated as dogs
- Cats should not be allowed to roam free. The City should enforce a bylaw regarding this.
- Higher level of enforcement for managing feral, stray and roaming cats.
- Owned roaming cats needs to stop. Higher fines maybe. I don't know. But this definitely bothers us.
- I believe the city should just spay and neuter them and return them to the area they found them. They kill a lot of mice around the houses and don't do a lot of damage.

- Responding to complaints more quickly - Maybe leaving/sending a notice to the home resident if the address is known that their cats need to be restrained.
- Spay and neuter clinics
- We need funding to support spay/neuter programs to prevent this problem from growing, and legislation that deters individuals from allowing their cats to roam at will.
- If one is being a nuisance, a true nuisance, then maybe helping capture and release to organizations to rehome or rehab them.
- None.
- Calgary Humane society should work with other organizations to collect, shelter, and re-home strays if possible. Those not suitable for residential settings could be given to local farms or acreages, where they would be cared for.
- As above, no concern. The city is looking how to make money from us
- Trap, neuter, return programs tend to work well. Running these programs or supporting organizations which run these programs effectively. The support could be financial, but also data (location and population).
- Collect them just as they would canine.
- Culls don't work and they are cruel and inhumane. I support TNR programs, which have shown to be effective in humanely reducing populations thereby reducing the impact on wildlife such as birds as there will not be as many cats to hunt them. Feeding programs to reduce hunting of wildlife.
- Population control is always a concern, but my biggest expectation is around how the city handles owned-cats roaming free. They should have the same restrictions as dogs. If we are making bylaws about keeping cats indoors and licensed, there should be an active campaign to enforce this.
- Keep the peace and neuter roaming cats. If they're licensed bill the owner for the cost.
- They should all be spayed/neutered and vaccinated for rabies.
- We know that by simply removing feral cats does not work as new cats typically move in, therefore I worry by trading and rehoming/euthanasia of any unknown feral cats is not helping the situation. Again we need to look at TNR programs that have proven to be effective.
- To treat them as they would dogs. If my dog is roaming, the city is called and they come and pick up my dog. If there is a cat roaming, the city should pick it up, and the owner should have to pay a fine to get their cat back. I should not have to trap the cat and drive it to the bylaw office myself
- For strays and roaming, pick-up or trapping of strays and roaming cats, with fines to cat owners for letting their animals off of their properties without a leash. This is a real annoyance and a double standard.
- Trap, fine owners and euthanize feral cats
- Safety of cats, spread of disease should be a priority. Higher licensing fees, stiffer fines. Questions on licencing applications & renewals as to cat containment in their homes & yards should be required to be answered. If their cats are allowed to roam or they give false info charges should apply.
- Nothing.

- first, for the city to widespread promote and educate responsible ownership. to make available free or greatly reduced cost for spay and neutering, and vet services. and to fine not responsible owners.
- Owners of free roaming cats should receive increasing fines for repeat offenses. Free roaming cats should not be permitted within city limits. Feral and stray cats should be rehabilitated for adoption, or euthanized if they are critically ill or unable to be adopted/rescued/relocated.
- I think if a cat is picked up more then 3 times there should be a 1000$ fine and it should be made easier to get cat traps.
- They should be sterilized. If a stray/roaming cat is an issue there should be a warning and then it should be removed from the owner/re-homed.
- Harsher fines for owners of cats who allow them to roam free
- Enforce fines for roaming cats
- Higher penalties for people with "outdoor cats" it's BS. And it costs about $200 to build a catio if you insist on not restraining or supervising your cat while it is outside.
- Pick up stray/roaming cats that have been taken to a vet clinic, treat & re-home as needed via the CHS. The TNR program is great for population control.
- Destroy humanely.
- If they are just an owned, roaming cat, leave them be. Feral cats probably pose the risk of reproducing more feral cats so maybe they should be spayed, neutered?
- None
- Fine the owners, and capture and rehome strays.
- Collecting the ones that are causing problems and leaving those that aren't.
- That you help any feral cat in need, then release it back into the wild. That you apprehend stray/roaming cats and put the strays up for adoption/heavily fine the owners of roaming cats.
- Increased fines for roaming cats- increased way for residents to trap feral/ roaming cats
- None
- I don't know that there is much more you can do. Just fines for people you know have outdoor cats
- Manage feral populations by TNR and providing medical intervention when needed. Roaming cats should be collected and fines placed on the owner. Pet cats should have the same requirements as dogs regarding off property roaming.
- None. They're no harm to anyone.
- Fine owners who let their cats roam on a regular basis.
- More education and 'teeth' to deal with pet owners who let their cats roam free. What can I do, as my neighbors do not keep their cats inside and have had a lot of cats go missing over the years and they keep adopting cats.
- cats get out sometimes they can be very sneaky. i think unless someone complains i don't expect much from the city of calgary
- That they would be humanely trapped and taken to the SPCA for a second chance. But I know from experience the city does nothing. It's up to the homeowner to deal with a stray cat.

- Prevent them. Catch them. Do more to discourage owners from allowing their cats to roam... bigger fines required?
- Little. Provide a trap if its reoccurring and can be dealt with.
- Heavy fines for owners. Pick up pets. Although if it is a one time event that cat got out by accident then that is different.
- While it would be nice to try to control the pet population I also understand that it is complicated and expensive. Realistically I am happy as long as the animals are not killed on purpose.
- Leave them alone. You can't complain about the wildlife being in the area, leave the cats. If you can leave the skunks and coyotes you can leave the cats. Guaranteed they are just domestic cats that are independent. Stop using cats as a cash grab and focus on the predator animals
- to come pick them up when they are spotted and reported and to fine the owners whos cats are running stray
- Founding up and neutering.
- If possible to catch and return to owners with orders to keep inside. Rehome feral cats if possible
- Capture, desex and release if feral. Capture, desex and attempt to reunite with owner if stray or roaming...give fine if owner does not demonstrate a reasonable attempt to keep their cat from roaming. Adopt out if cannot find owner within a reasonable time frame.
- Work to ensure there are resources available to provide care and potential re-homing for these cats. Clear communication to Calgarians on what to do if they have a concern about these cats.
- Trap them and for roaming ones make the owners responsible by paying a bigger fine.
- Crack down on people letting their cats out if you dont allow it, OR allow it.
- To stop being stupid and making money, stressing the cats out etc. If they are roaming look at it from an animal's perspective rather than a human who is uneducated and will only think about their self.
- I expect the city of Calgary to make the well-being of the cats a priority. There should be a no-kill policy, and exceptionally humane practices. The City should ensure that road-kill or deceased pets are handled as quickly as possibly, and make more of an effort to contact the pet owner afterwards.
- The bylaw needs to be adjusted to allow for trap, neuter and release programs for feral and stray cats.
- None
- implement trap and release programs or barn cat rehoming programs. Better public education on why you shouldn't let you cat roam. Tougher penalties for re-offending owners that let their cats roam. Education on resources /steps to take to deal with a roaming cat so people don't go straight poisonin
- As above, capture, then return to owner, adopt out, or destroy in that order.
- It's part of the municipal government's jobs. Educate people as to why cats should remain inside. Provide traps for people with cat problems. Trap feral cats. Do your job.
- Spay/neuter releAse program does feral (if no possibility of domestication). Rehoming of stray cats, capture and fines for roaming cats

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- I expect the City to confine that cats and remove them. They are a nuisance, carry diseases, cause danger within traffic and destroy property.
- Big fines for stray cats owners. Keep your animal inside if they can't help but roaming.
- provide more budget for spay neuter
- Restrictions that pet cats must be kept indoors, for their safety and that of the environment. Increased funding for trapping of feral cats, rehabilitation of those suitable to be pets, & humane euthanasia of those too feral to live with humans. More funding for free & low cost spay/neuter programs
- Controlling the population
- I have no concerns about roaming cats. They have homes to go to and do so. Feral/stray cats should be treated as other wildlife -- if we control coyotes (which the city does badly), we should control feral cats the same way.
- exactly the same as dogs loose they should be fined and taken into custody
- More enforcement on licensing and owner that allow their cats to roam free, more education around spay/neuter programs and increase support for low income Calgarians
- Feral cats should be altered and returned. All non feral cats should be picked up / reunified / adopted out.
- I would hope they collect them to their shelter and/or enlist the assistance of volunteer associations (ie Meow Foundation) to spay/neuter and find them homes.
- Fix them. Itsxhumans who let them down
- Capture, re-home or as a absolute last resort, euthanize.
- Catch them and sterilize them
- The city should help citizens by providing rental traps and the ability to drop off a trapped cat at Animal Services.
- Leave roaming cats alone and, if the strays and feral cats are aggressive, deal with them as you do any other wildlife. Since the city doesn't seem to do anything about coyotes or bobcats, I assume this means they will do nothing.
- When dealing with cats the owners should face the same fines as a dog owner.
- Trap & spay programs, attempts at adoption if the animal is suitable
- None. They are good pest control and not dangerous to humans. Let them be
- Trapping, rehiring, vet care.
- Roaming cat owners should be fined or penalized. Stray cats should be rehomed when possible and feral cats should be trapped/spayed/neutered/released.
- More support on complaints of problem free roaming cats, not leave it up to person making the complaint to get a cat trap to catch the cat.
- Ferals and strays should be caught and spayed/neutered. Any of these feral or free roaming cats that can be adopted out should be. Any that cannot should be humanely euthanized.
- "City support for rescue organizations who can capture and either safely house or adopt out feral cats.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Public understanding through education is key to reduce the numbers of cats that end up as feral, stray, or roaming.
- Financial incentives through reduced licensing costs for responsible owners."
- Ban on roaming owned cats, more programs in place to rehab and rehome feral cats, mandatory microchipping to ensure strays return to owner.
- I would expect a prompt response and action as needed of any issues that I report through 311.
- I don't feel bylaw enforces the rules for roaming cats as they would for a roaming dog. Cats can cause a lot of property damage and are "allowed" freedom to come and go as they please. Bylaw is very fast to come capture a roaming dog, yet a cat is simply left alone.
- Catch them, increase fines to owners and euthanize as needed. As well as killing birds, cats poo in OTHER people's yards because they don't like to go in their own - that is why many owners let their cats roam. Most cat owners don't care about keeping their cats on their property. Increase fines!
- Expect the city to enforce the bylaws regarding people who let their cats roam about freely.
- Help return roaming cats without shaming owners
- That they will be collected by bylaw and that the owners will be fined
- Either enforce the bylaws or scrap them
- Help them
- Bylaw should deal with it on a case-by-case basis. I once had a lost cat living under our porch and we were asked to capture it and get a trap. Should be the other way around, bylaw should have come out to try and capture it and see if it had tags or drop it off to correct organization.
- If they're feral, don't hurt them. If they are owned, fine the owner. If they are stray, start your own cat Cafe and adopt them out at a reasonable cost. Regal has proved effective.
- To capture the cats and fine owners heavily for their return.
- There is a great number of stray and feral cats in the city. Certainly it is not an easy job to find and capture each one. All I expect is that a valid, and humane, effort is made to reduce the number of cats on the street.
- Stray and roaming cats should be picked up, ensure they are licensed and vaccinated, returned to owner with warning to keep them at home. Ferals should at least be collected and fixed, possibly handed over to a charity that tries to home them.
- I would like to see cats free to roam providing that they are licensed and spayed or neutered.
- Pick the cats up, fine the owners, spay or neuter the cats, and try to find homes for them.
- Spay, neuter and health check programs. Responsible animal trapping and rehoming.
- There should be more effort put into catch and release programs and providing people with the necessary equipment for it
- The City of Calgary should create stricter bylaws and increase penalties for owners who allow their cats to roam outside their own property.
- Work with a qualified, humane rescue organization to trap, neuter and release, or rescue, or set up a safe haven colony with a rescue group to monitor and administer.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- There should be a trap/neuter/release program in place for feral cats. Strays and roaming cats should be collected and efforts made to return to their owners, or rehomed.
- To catch them themselves and charge the owners big time for it. If it was an escapee cat, I understand. But I've had 2 roaming cats in my yard and I called bylaw and I was told to catch them myself.
- Encourage catch, spay, neuter and release. Education of public.
- Notify pet owner where there is one. If is an overpopulation of feral capture spay and release
- Unclaimed or unadoptable cats should be humanely put down.
- Owners of roaming cats should be held to account (i.e. bylaws enforced). Because cats are not easily contained by most standard fences, the bylaw should be amended to be more stringent about the requirements for control.
- Capture, evaluate and either rehabilitate or euthanize
- To rehire them even if it is as barn cats for feral cats.
- Spay neuter return where possible with feral/stray cat populations, and legislation requiring owned cats do not free roam. Require leashes similar to dog licensing.
- I have called 311 to report a stray cat with tags. I was told cats don't get picked up. I would expect the City to at least come and record the owner information and enforce the bylaws. I do not feel safe picking up an unfamiliar cat.
- Capture them to see if they are someone's pet. If not let them go.
- "I think there are bigger issues to deal with. Cats are quiet and not much of a threat. Would much rather see the city focus on getting entitled dog owners and their ""babies"" under control. Dogs are animals 1st and need to be given some respect. We expect them to be furry children
- It's embarrassing."
- Provisions for capturing animals in need and adoption availability after capture. Vaccination and health care.
- Spay and neuter programs with rehabilitation if possible. No-kill shelters.
- To provide funding for TNR programs for feral cats, to respond to complaints and pick up "friendly" stray/roaming cats.
- Nothing
- Cats that are found roaming around should be dealt with like any other "lost" pet: if it's chipped, find the owner, if not, take it to a shelter. No one ignores a roaming dog.... why is it ok to let cats out?? My cat stays in my house, happily.
- They should be doing something about it. Give it tickets, enforce existing bylaws, make the rules more strict for people who let their cats out and have kittens that just add to over population
- To educate cat owners and whoever is dealing with cats, and to support animal rescue organizations that rescue, spay and neuter these cats.
- We do not feel that feral cats are a nuisance in our neighbourhoods. I think a concern that I have is if they could potentially carry some sort of disease that are uncommon for humans (i.e. rabies)

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

June 29, 2020

- It seems that the homeowner is left to deal with any issues. Bylaw isn't proactive about it, but they likely don't receive the required support from Council.
- To aid TNR programs and provide funding and support for organizations working to help deal with feral cat colonies.
- I'm not sure about feral, but strays should be taken to a shelter and pets caught roaming should be punished accordingly.
- Feral and stray cats should be put up for adoption. Roaming cats should be left alone.
- They need to be caught/trapped. If pets, there should be an immediate fine to owner. A large one. If unlicensed fine should be doubled. If a complaint is filed with city and owner is known, i expect it be followed through. Fines are appropriate if warning is not adhered to - Provide funding that will enable society to minimalize their population and potential diseases. Increase taxes if you must!
- Try to reunite owners with lost strays. Educate owners of roaming cats, then punish them since it is not acceptable behaviour. Spay/neuter ferals if practical but there do not seem to be very many around in my experience.
- Pick up and take to animal services. Feral- stray should be spayed. Heavy fines for owners - this is trespassing if I someone's yards.
- I expect that The City of Calgary respond to citizen complaints about free roaming cats, and to capture and control them. Or, if a citizen has captured a free roaming cat, City animal control officers take possession of it.
- TNR
- I don't want the city taking it upon themselves to destroy these animals. TNR programs and fining owners is more than enough.
- "Roaming cats: fine owners; awareness campaigns
- Stray/feral: ensure safe capture and care from vets and available rescue shelters"
- none
- All should be trapped. If tagged, to the SPCA and high fine for roaming free (unless the owner had already contacted the city that their cat got out by accident). If not tagged (stray or feral), hold for specified period, make available to foster or rehabilitation society, otherwise euthanize.
- "Ferals - spay/neuter release
- Strays - catch and rehome as they are usually lost or abandoned pets and that is why they interact with people
- Roaming cats - fine the owners."
- People should be reprimanded for allowing their cats to roam freely. Feral and stray cats should be fixed and vaccinated, and potentially be put in shelters permitting space as it is unreasonable to put every stray in a shelter due to capacity.
- To treat them well and if trapped, when possible transfer the cats to organizations that will handle the feral cats better than the city.
- catch them, sterilize them, adopt them out if possible. fine owners for letting them run free

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Remove them, and fine the owners - remind the owners that cats are not allowed to roam freely.
- My dogs have to be licensed and maintained on my property or on a leash, I expect the same of roaming cats, might decrease the amount of feral and strays if cat owners were held to the same standard as dog owners.
- I would hope that they can be captured. Returned to their owners if possible, or put up for adoption. Though unpleasant I understand some would need to be destroyed or at the very least sterilized.
- I just want them to be reasonable.
- If there are a lot, take them to the SPCA or maybe euthanize them. The city if they ever have a mouse problem in their buildings could use them to control the pests much as they have done for years in different areas like the Hermitage in St. Petersburg. Put them to work.
- Feral cats should be dealt with in a humane manner, but they should be removed.
- I expect a trap-neuter-release program to be in place. I don't expect the City to attempt to adopt these cats out as they are not fit for a pet home. Short of culling, population control through spay/neuter of feral cats is all that can be done.
- There should be some attempt to capture said cats; especially if they are reported and known to be pets that are being allowed out!
- Have them fixed and providing caregivers for them.
- This is a tough one. I suppose I would like to see the bylaws enforced and people held responsible for letting their cat outside.
- The City should be supporting TNR programs run through Animal shelters and also running their own TNR program to help out people dealing with feral and stray cats. They should enforce their indoor bylaws and should have more spay/ neuter assistance and programs.
- They should be collected by animal services. Feral and stray cats, should be spayed/neutered, dewormed, & vaccinated, before being adopted to appropriate homes. Roaming cats should be seized and their owners heavily fined. Repeat offenders should be banned from owning pets.
- work with spay/neuter and rescue programs
- It would be ideal to see campaigns where the city reminds people that letting their cats outside without a tether is illegal. Not everyone likes animals.
- Any actions taken should be as humane as possible and every effort should be taken to rehabilitate problem animals.
- Animal Services should be aggressively targeting people who let cats roam, and should be handled similar to dog at large complaints
- Trap, Neuter and Release programs
- Wherever possible, capture, spay/neuter, and relocate the cat with a shelter/rescue.
- Stray and roaming cats shouldn't be allowed. Just like dogs. Feral cats should be euthanized
- Stray need to be picked up and brought to the shelter, as their health and safety is at risk if they were previously domesticated.
- Make sure they are kept safe. Neuter males if necessary
- " -all stray, feral and roaming cats should be captured and altered

- -owners receive a fine and the bill for the spay/neutering
- -license reductions for microchipped cats as well as altered cats"
- Feral and stray cats should not be roaming around. Roaming cats usually do so at night and aren't a problem.
- TNR programs. Low cost/subsidies for spay and neutering
- These animals are dangerous. While not a popular position to take I think they should be trapped and humanly euthanized.
- FINE MORE PEOPLE WHO DONT FOLLOW THE LAWS OF OUTDOOR CATS. Dont euthanize the cat [removed], fine the [removed] owner
- Remove and destroy
- Round them up and fine owners
- That they set clear, but reasonable regulations while also providing support and access to pet owners who struggle to comply. Less fines, more help solving the issues, whether that means providing more services/info, or rehoming animals from repeat offenders
- Little.
- Trap, neuter, and release for feral/strays. If animals is able to be socialized or already domesticated, adopted out would be ideal. If roaming cats have identification, owners contacted
- Cats need to be licensed and if they are not when they are found roaming then they need to be captured and adopted out if not claimed.
- Round them up
- If they arent being a nuisance let them be
- Cats should be indoors or supervised on owners property. But cats are escape artists so ensuring ID (microchip AND tag), plus education for ALL citizens on what to do if they find a cat. Fines for offences should be tiered, as 1 or 2 escapes is not necessarily irresponsible, but multiple are.
- I understand that it is not normal practise to check cats picked up by, or handed into, the city pound for tattoos or more importantly, a microchip. This is appalling and pets are being euthanized without due diligence.
- If these cats are causing trouble they should be trapped- otherwise they might be helpful to keep mice under control.
- Catch, neuter/spay and adopt them out
- Trap and deliver to the humane society
- The city should eliminate the feral cats and put stray and roaming cats in the pound. If repeated offences and fines dont make the owners more responsible, then the cats should be given to other homes
- None
- "Feral cats: trap, spay, neuter, release. Has been show to be effective as a means of allowing these cats to remain outdoors without the increase in population
- Stray and roaming cats I think are being handled well by the city"

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Remove them. Fine owners for roaming cats.
- owners of roaming cats should be fined. I should be allowed to trap them and take them to the pound
- I believe cats should be contained in the same way dogs are expected to be. I think cracking down on people who ignore the bylaws and let their cats be outdoor cats should be penalized if and when caught.
- N/A
- Feral cats are treated like any other kind of wildlife in the city. Domestic cats need to be contained to their own homes and licensed like dogs. (Not a cat owner so I don't know if this is already done.)
- Decide whether enforcement and mitigation of attacks to birds or keep it illegal to have cats roaming. Feral and strays should be rehomed. Living in other countries where there are lots of strays I would say it is not a beneficial situation for cats nor people.
- Control the feral population. Stray and roaming cats should be caught, spayed or neutered. Stray cats should go to shelter. Roaming cats - owners give one more chance. If cat is caught again then cat is taken away.
- Stop them.
- should be controlled per siting report to eliminate future encounters and apprehended
- No harm causing, and to neuter/spay as many as possible to keep the population low for their safety
- Want city to pick up strays. Also want owners fined (increasing amount) if they continue to let their cat run wild. I have an extremely vocal cat who constantly wants to go out so I've harnessed and leashed him. If my cat can do it, others can too! Fines for non-licensing too. Follow rules or no pet
- I would like to have someone from the city come to relocate cats who are causing problems in a neighbourhood.
- I would like to see zero tolerance for allowing cats to roam, along with much stiffer fines. I have an indoor cat and he's happy and healthy. There is no need for people to allow their cats to roam. It's definitely a problem in Glenbrook/Glendale and they're a real nuisance.
- Capture those cats that can be re-homed and make it illegal to euthanize ANY healthy animal.
- Be more strict on roaming cats- fines may help.
- Lack of enforcement, not enough bylaw officers and exceedingly infrequent patrols
- Trap cats. Fine owners
- Support catch, spay/neuter, release/rehome projects, like those run by the Meow Foundation
- Easy to find and use Trap Neuter Return program for feral cats, and enforcement of owners not allowing cats to free roam.
- I have an expectation that the city would fine people with roaming cats and treat those owners just as they would treat a dog owner that let their dog run around the streets freely. When I have contacted the city for help they said they couldn't do anything. That is not okay!
- It is a never-ending situation. People seem to find it easy to dispose of cats. Live catch. Spay & neuter every cat you find. Give negligent pet owners a fine.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Cat owners should be held just as responsible for cleaning up after their pets as dog owners. People would find it VERY concerning if random dogs were found in or pooping in their yard. This is how I feel about cats. Right now it is onerous to try and do something about stray cats. It needs to be easier
- Continue to use current methods to control population
- I don't know who owns all the cats that are in my yard. I wish the city would be more proactive in enforcing the by-laws.
- Feral: catch, spay/neuter and release. Stray: catch, spay/neuter and re-home. Roaming: accountability of owner.
- I haven't had any dealings
- Get stricter with pet ownership and clamp down on illegal breeding
- If feral cats live there; post a sign alerting community members, when stray or roaming pick up and notify owners
- Trap, fix, rehome where possible. If not, especially, feral, put them back into the neighborhood they were picked up from
- These animals need to be either rescued and rehabilitated or if their recovery and health is not possible they should be euthanized.
- Work with groups and provide a spay/neuter clinic for feral colonies
- Bigger fines for owners? Tattoo/chip all cats? Spay/neuter all cats that come through bylaw?
- All "found" roaming cats should be spayed/neutered upon capture, regardless if they have homes or not.
- The city needs to pick up stray cats, TNR feral cats and introduce a Barn a Buddy program.
- The city should offer free or low cost TNR programs and encourage organizations that help feral and stray cats.
- Fine owners whose house cats roam free and use those dollars for the "fix and free" program.
- Capture and cull as required. Dog owners held to far higher standard than cat owners.
- I don't want to see them or have to deal with them
- Spend money on something else
- Owners should not be allowed to let them roam free.
- Continuing to educate the public and enforce requirements for owners to be responsible
- I hope that as many as possible are saved, spayed and found homes. Or euthanised if they are very ill or can't be adopted
- Round up ferals and strays— euthanize ferals and strays that cannot be put up for adoption. Leave roaming cats be.
- Free-roaming cats shouldn't be allowed. There should be a penalty to discourage owners from letting their cats loose.
- I would hope that they would be trapped and the owners warned and fined. I have tried posting the city bylaw in our mailbox but it has not helped. I feel a fine or 'missing' cat might make these owners more responsible.

- If the cats were licensed hopefully the owners would be tracked down and expected to pay for the expense/cost of whatever care was needed. Likely this is not the case, Is there someone to call if animals are an issue so the city can deal with them. Fine owners not abiding bylaws?
- TNR for ferals
- Be empathetic and humane regarding their health and welfare and become a "cat friendly" city! How about legalizing and encouraging things like cat adoption cafes and other kinds of innovative adoption programs?
- I don't feel that there is enough work being done to catch the stray cats, the longer they are left the more there will be.
- humane society or animal rescue organization can try to assist feral/stray and roaming cat bylaw should be enforced.
- Live and let live
- I hope the city helps to keep numbers at a manageable through through humane and reasonable efforts.
- Stray cats should be picked up by the city, roaming cats should not be picked up unless they do not have proper identification on them (I.e. tags and chipped)
- Capture, Neuter, release.
- Balance
- Reported stray and roaming cats should be caught and if microchipped returned to the owner with the cost of capture and transport being billed to the owner. Cats with no owner should be sterilized and domesticated and given up for adoption when deemed appropriate.
- Spay and neutered!
- Catch them, spay or neuter them and put them up for adoption. When numbers become too great, euthanization as a last resort.
- Cats that are owned should be chipped by law.
- I believe they should be trapped and the owners found and fined. Feral cats Sterilized and returned to the wild.
- Take them to a rescue foundation where they are properly dealt with.
- Adoption if able and culling if necessary.
- Give them a chance.
- Educate and do more TNR
- To house them at least temporarily
- Pay the non profits who are providing your city a service and make bylaws reasonable so they can actually do their work here.
- Cooperation with rescues and volunteers, support for sanctuaries for ferals and cats who are not rehomed.
- It is hard to get a cat trap and all the laws seem to favor the cat owner. It is not even safe for the cats as I have seen ones that have been killed by cars.
- None

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Pick them up see if they have owners. If not try to get them adopted. Fine owners that let their cats roam. Spay the cats if they are not and charge the owner's. Might have to resort to euthanizing them which is so painful to acknowledge as possibly necessary for control
- To enforce the bylaw.
- I think the city should have a trap, neuter, release program for feral cats to reduce the ability for feral cat colonies to grow. I think the city should also provide more information for owners about bylaws around outdoor cats in the city.
- Set realistic expectations with some possibility of enforcement. Support programs for humane trapping, neutering, treating, adopting if possible, supporting in the wild if healthy but not adoptable, euthanizing as a last resort.
- I think there are way too many enforcement officers wasting their time over this issue. I would encourage people to report anonymously a person who has kittens. A visit and a fine for breeding without a permit, which I think should be purchased by people who intentionally or unintentionally breed.
- To keep them safe and hold owners accountable. We don't allow people's human kids to roam freely without supervision and we should not allow this of animals that are the responsibility of a human owner. If you cannot care for an animal, don't own one.
- Trapping and homing them.
- Neuter or spay them. Then release.
- nothing. just leave them alone.
- Bylaws to ensure people are responsible with their animals and cats are not left to roam free, ensuring the pick up and care of feral or stray cats - delivering them to appropriate care facilities
- I hope the city would try to keep the numbers of feral down and try to rehome stray cats.
- Work better with rescues and caregivers to allow for well maintained TNR colonies to help reduce breeding, disease transmission and suffering of otherwise uncared for ferals.
- Catch strays and enforce laws when people let their cats roam.
- That stray cats will be taken to a rescue organization. Feral cat colonies can be put through TNR programs. Roaming cats are tough, but all pets should be microchipped so contacting their owners if found roaming.
- That the city strives to ensure there are few if any feral cats, catch what is possible and rehome them.
- Be more active in removing cats if called by homeowners. None of my neighbours seem to care or change their behaviour with regards to their free roaming cats. They don't seem to think there are any consequences.
- I think stray or roaming cats should be picked up for retrieval by owners or rehoming if possible but if they are not causing trouble, leave them where they are. Feral cats can't be domesticated unless they are very young
- They need to apply the law and give tickets where warranted

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Get the public educated & enforce the bylaws more effectively. People think the city does nothing about this issue & therefore don't care that they cause problems for their own cats or other people. Every neighbourhood has cats roaming at large & people who believe that it is acceptable.
- Fines for people who allow their animals to roam unchecked and well as trap and release programs to sterilize feral cats
- If an owner allows their cat to roam and it gets caught by a neighbor or city the owner needs to be fined a lot.
- Cats abandoned by human should be rescued and rehome. Before owning a pet, potential owner shall send application to city and go through all responsibilities to reduce abandon later and reduce pressure on human society. In case, something happens, people know where to surrender.
- The city should be enforcing pet ownership bylaws and prosecuting those in blatant violation of those laws
- "Feral cats should have access to food and water.
- Stray cats should be trapped and attempts to locate owners and unsuccessful, adoption.
- Owners who allow roaming cats should be fined."
- Feral -help reduce population to zero with a catch, neuter/spade, release plan. Strays- find owners or a new home. Roaming- educate owners on the benefit of keeping cats indoors & provide free or inexpensive classes or some other kind of help to support owners with transitioning their cat indoors.
- If they have a license, tattoo or are microchipped, find the owners and fine them. Adopt out the ones you can, the rest should be euthanized.
- It would be great to see stiffer penalties handed out to those who let their cats roam free. Especially those who have not spayed or neutered their cat. They are contributing to the growing problem of stray/feral cats in our city.
- Making sure these animals get home safely or providing sterilization and release program for feral cats.
- Help to do vet care. Although stray they are helping keep mice and other rodent populations at bay which also help in our own health care with rodents not spreading diseases.
- Remove all cats should they be reported wandering, set humane traps in key areas
- Feral and roaming are two different types. Ferals only know that way of life and sadly should be left to it, but neutered as mentioned before. On the other side are lazy owners who let their "family members" free roam. That is inexcusable and those cats should not be outdoors unless on a leash.
- Higher fines for roaming cats. Taking away of cats that require numerous warnings and fines
- All family pets must be kept indoors. No such thing as roaming or strays. Feral cats are all neutered and have caregivers.
- None unless there is abuse, neglect or distress
- See above
- Roaming cats should be trapped and taken into custody by the city - euthanized after a 2 or 3 week period.
- "It's shouldn't be allowed at all.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- If dogs are not allowed to be off leash in all areas, either should cats."
- To find an appropriate barn home for feral cats, or a rescue or society that could try to get them to trust humans. For stray and roaming cats, taking them to a safe place, a warning for owners if they can be found, a fine if it happens again, and rehoming opportunities if needed
- enforce the by-laws and have some sort of reporting system for people to report cats crapping in their gardens/yard
- If the cat is registered, or has been claimed to have the owner fined
- More fines to owners of cats let out, allow for people to prove a cat was off its owner's property without having to trap it. Have traps that can be used year-round, do TNR programs.
- To catch them and place them to the shelters.
- A clearer process for getting any of the above picked up if necessary
- "Feral - treat them as any other wildlife.
- Roaming - fine or jail the hell out of anyone who lets their cats outdoors. Confiscate the cats and other pets in the household. If the owners care so little for their cats that they let them outside, they clearly do not care enough to deserve them."
- I need context - quantity of feral cats dealt with annually, # of man hours, $ approximate cost. Since I don't experience the problem, I have no expectations
- If cats are spotted and can be caught and taken to either a vet or animal services, then that should be done. (Pretty sure that's what happens now, anyway)
- Tolerance
- I would love the city to collect them all. And if an owner is found negligent, they should be fined heavily or denied the right to own a cat.
- For strays, the city needs to try & find their owner, & if can't then fix & adopt out. For ferrals, catch, spay or neuter, then release. For roaming cats, find the owners, that is why you have us license them.
- I don't call the city o leave them be.
- If it has a collar, try and find owner, keep for xx number of days, euthanize
- Enforce bylaws regarding these issues
- Provide funding for Trap Neuter Return programs to reduce feral populations. Use pet registration fees to reunite found pets with owners as soon as possible. Fine owners who knowingly allow their pet cats to roam. Encourage use of harnesses or "catios" for pet cats instead.
- Humane care. Public education around animal cruelty and welfare.
- Removal and fining owners (if an owner is applicable). Ie. make sure owners abide by the rules.
- Making it more known for people to report potential feral cats.
- Provide some winter shelter in form of insulated boxes or something. Fund TNR.
- Spay / neuter
- I believe that cats owned by people should be licensed and kept indoors, and if they are not, the city should fine them. The city should make every effort to reduce the number of roaming and stray cats
- education and enforcement. I'd like to see a lot more enforcement

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Leave them alone
- Solution re feral cats answered in #2; tougher penalties for repeat offenders of roaming cats, licensing requirements for all cats should quickly allow pet owners to locate their strays
- For roaming cats, to enforce high fines for second offences and publicize it alongside education.
- Higher fines, more enforcement, anything to deter irresponsible pet owners.
- "Fining and educating irresponsible pet owners.
- Feral cats must be captured, given medical attention, and hopefully domesticated and adopted out. Outdoor feeding programs just hurt wildlife as even fed cats still hunt and kill wildlife. especially birds."
- To respond to complaints & help mitigate the situation if someone is not following the bylaw or if their cat is a nuisance. Remove problematic feral cats
- I think cats should continue to be licensed and fines should be given for stray cats. Maybe the city should add family pets to the city census.
- They should be trapped
- Humane population control and ensuring identified colonies are healthy and protected because they play a role in the ecosystem. Helps keep us rat free. Also protecting them from animal abuse.
- Car management.
- If a cat is abandoned, especially in winter, with evidence, I expect the city to investigate and charge for animal neglect. This has not happened and very irresponsible pet owners are able to support, and neglect, more pets. Animals suffer at the hands of irresponsible adults with no consequences.
- Catch them and bring them to CHS.
- Catching these cats & if they have an owner charge them & do not return the cat to them if they catch them. As well cats if outside should have to be put on a leash (like dogs) & kept on the owners property. Not charge other people for catch crates to catch a cat that is roaming.
- For stray and roaming cats, they should be captured and taken to the pound. Feral cats may be best handled in co-operation with specialist groups; the city should sponsor a TNR (Trap-Neuter-Return) program to humanely lower the population of feral cat clusters.
- I would prefer if the bylaw allowed for roaming cats in a reasonable manner. Having a bylaw that says cats must stay in the yard is unreasonable, as cats are not containable in the same way as dogs. Chaining cats can be very dangerous due to their climbing nature and they can climb fences easy.
- To act in good faith and with reasonable compassion. Create a SNR trap-return plan with a few rescue partners and implement it to reduce and control the population in a reasonable manner and timeline.
- Capture, spay and neuter and adopt all that can.
- TREAT COMPLAINTS SERIOUSLY. We've been told that we pretty much have to catch the cat in the act...and yet, even if we do, the officers say they can't do anything. Visit the offending houses, set up traps in the neighborhood. DO something.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- When city captures strays and ferals they should be euthanized or used for vet or medical studies. Untagged roamers should be euthanized, too. Identified cats' owners to be contacted and can pick up for a fee, and hefty fines if cats aren't licensed.
- I would like the city to fund shelters and have programs to mitigate this issue. For example a program to fix feral cats to prevent more from being born. Working with cat owners to transition cats to being indoor.
- Clear guidelines with enforceable consequences, transparency around how complaints are resolved, consideration for cat safety and overall wellness
- Ensuring that only spayed or neutered cats roam will reduce the feral cat population.
- If the owner can be found, fine them. Otherwise.... oie... the hard call. Euthanize.
- To capture or take in the animals and return them home, find a new home, or euthanasia for the ones who should not be homed(extremely sick) also the collection of deceased cats with the photo book for owners is a great service.
- Funding for spay and neuter clinics; continuing to promote responsible pet ownership by requiring roaming cats to have tags; rehoming services for found stray cats.
- Maybe harsher penalties if you're cat is found to be roaming. Having the availability to respond to roaming or feral cat complaints would also help.
- There are such little bylaw resources (available officers) that enforcement measures are virtually non existent. By the time the assistance is available the problem is no longer trackable.
- There's quite a number of NGOs interested in tackling these issues; the City should partner with them.
- I'm a HUGE supporter of the system of humanely catching, neuter/spay, and rerelease. Red Deer has a program like this.
- What is done now is sufficient
- - feral cat populations need to be vigorously controlled, coupled with an extensive education campaign to help people understand why it is necessary
- stronger enforcement in trapping. Ensure cats are licensed and fixed. All cats caught should be fixed and the cost included in the cost of cat licensing.
- Chip pet cats, fine owners when cats are found roaming. Ensure ALL cats are spayed and neutered. I don't support euthanasia of any animal when dealing with animal control.
- Trap, assess, and turn over to CHS.
- Capture, spay and neuter program. Ticketing irresponsible pet owners
- I expect the City of Calgary to be able to capture and sterilize roaming cats. If they are rehabilitated then allow them to be adopted responsibly.
- I would expect the city to fine people who are not looking after their pets or to collect them and put them up for adoption.
- Bigger fines/consequences for cat owners who allow their cats to roam onto other properties.
- Concerned about cost to the tax payer about control efforts.
- Where possible cats are caught and neutered and rehome if suitable.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Education to pet owners about risks. Feral cats could be spayed/neutered and released near areas with rodent populations, or offered to businesses who have rodent problems.
- If they are aware of the animal, trapping and transferring to a shelter (where they would be domesticated or put down if health issues offer no other alternative).
- If not licenced then euthanize
- The same as when there are loose dogs, catch them, give the owners of the *stray* (usually the owners let them out) a fine and an at large fine. Cats should be treated exactly the same as dogs
- They should be picked up and removed from streets and owners fined
- See above
- Animal services should assist in catching, removing and ultimately dealing with feral or stray cats. There needs to be more severe penalties for people who allow their cats to roam free as it's not safe for the cat and is a nuisance for neighbours.
- Hard to say. It's not really a problem that's the City's responsibility, but someone has to show leadership.
- The City should increase the fine for stray cats and should have a spay/neuter catch release program to control numbers.
- Better reproductive control via ensuring there are no feral, stray or owned cats roaming free.
- capture and put down or owner fined
- "Regarding feral cats, they should be captured and released on the wild.
- Regarding the other cats, they should be taken to a place where they could be adopted, such as ARCS and Calgary Humane Society"
- "The owners of the roaming cats should be fined for the disturbances they cause.
- Feral cats trapped and if possible rehabbed and adopted out to responsible pet owners."
- Humane trapping, attending calls about feral cats, ensuring that if they find a litter of kittens that they WAIT for the mother to return so they can all be brought into a shelter together.
- Owners should be fined for their roaming cats. Feral and stray cats should be spayed and neutered.
- Let people take care of the problems. Make the rules very clear about how residents are allowed to deal with unwanted stray cats on their property.
- Support to rescues who care for these animals, protection for these animals in the form of prosecution for abusing or poisoning them, actually protecting them, not just saying there's a law against it then ignoring the problem because it's too much work.
- These cats must not be allowed to roam free in Calgary and should be addressed quickly when spotted and before they roam on to a new area. Cull feral cats and donate the meat to qualified wildlife rehabilitation centres.
- Strays need to be licenced , fixed and kept until owners found feral are a huge problem and could really get out of hand they need to be euthanized sadly.
- That licensing and other bylaws are enforced.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- I want to see more action on cat owners being fined for allowing their cats to roam. Better education as well as enforcement of fines (steeper fines as well?) for any cats that end up at Calgary animal services. Bylaw could set/rent out traps in areas where they have been notified of a nuisance cat?
- Trap if a nuisance
- Domestic cats are an invasive species that take a massive toll on native bird populations. They should be treated as such. They're cute and fuzzy, but still highly effective predators.
- Given the risk they pose to wildlife and residents, it's the city's responsibility to control them, either directly with animal services or by getting help from animal rescue groups.
- It would be nice if the city could capture and spay or neuter feral cats but in a city this size it's probably financially impossible. Cats who are pets will escape their owners and the city should ensure thru identification that such cats are returned to their owners with a hefty fine.
- Roaming cats should be returned to their homes, and if the roaming continues the owners should be fined. Stray cats should be adopted out, and more aggressive efforts to do so should be made by the city. Unfortunately, feral cats need to be put down.
- Traps could be made available for no charge (as are now) so citizens can contain problem animals and deliver to animal services
- Cull them.
- Pickup and rehome, not murder them!
- Feral cats should be caught and sterilized then returned to the street. Stray/roaming cats should be caught and either returned to owners or re-homed.
- feral cats- round up and rehome or euthanize. strays/roaming- attempt to find their home, fines to owners who let them roam. euthanize if not claimed/rehomed.
- Destroy these animals. They are not natural wild animals.
- The city should trap and destroy them. They're an invasive species.
- Leave them alone
Keeping your car on your property is ridiculous
It's not a good life to be in a house your whole life
- None, simply leave them alone.
- that they treat them with respect. It isn't the animals fault....it's the owners
- See answers for 1) and 2).
- Help with rescue of kittens.
- Appears to be my problem. I am not going to spend money or time to deal with the cats, city won't do anything.
- Little to none. If a cat is somehow identified as very problematic (aggressive, injured) then perhaps capturing them and "helping" them.
- Catch them, stop expecting people to deal with the nuisance themselves by paying for traps and doing bylaw's job. Put the cost on the negligent owners.
- To care for these animals in a kind, humane way.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- They should catch them and if not tagged then euthanized. Or make sure the predator population is sufficient.
- Monitor for disease
- The City should do a spray/neuter program with feral cats as we should reduce those populations. Strays should be trapped and brought to shelters to be adopted. Roaming cats are fine.
- no opinion
- Feral? Help homeowners remove them if they are nesting in their yard. Stray and roaming? Let homeowners trap them and take them to a shelter. More convenient shelters and more awareness about proper trapping would help.
- spay/neuter the feral cats, work with rescues to find homes for the young kittens, provide vet care to the sick
- Pick them up as they do with dogs or provide free traps for the home owners to be returned after animals are caught
- Make sure they are checked for health concerns and make sure they have tracking to make sure they can find the cat if need be to do the health checkup
- To provide citizens with humane traps so the cats can safely be contained and taken to the shelter.
- They are doing fine as is.
- I would hope that they could be rescued and hopefully rehabilitated in order to be adopted into a loving home. I would hate to think that these cats are being destroyed if they do not have owners to speak on their behalf.
- City can't deal with everything, but it would be great if the City had/continued their programs to collect feral cats for shelters or destroy them if necessary.
- Catch females, spay and release. They are terrific in keeping vermin populations down. Done in US cities.
- Removing and destroying any wandering cat.
- I'd expect the city to be involved in a trap, neuter and release program for feral cats. Stray and roaming cats should be caught and returned to their homes or rehomed when possible.
- We built an outdoor enclosure so our cats could still enjoy the outdoors, but be safe and not bother anyone. Cats that are allowed to roam, get hurt or into trouble. If cats have no trace back to an owner, then I guess the local shelters do their best. OFFER A LOW COST YEARLY SPAY/NEUTER CLINIC
- I expect the city to control the feral cat population and to enforce the licencing bylaws in the city. Too often do cats roam the city and the owners believe that this is acceptable. It is not and bylaw officers need to enforce this.
- Trap, spay/neuter and release for feral cats. Roaming cats should be picked up and the owners fined. Stray cats should go to the Humane Society where awesome people can adopt them.
- I hope the city will do more to combat this issue.
- The City does not help with feral cats or stray cats in any way unless you catch it and bring it in. Even if you know the who the owner is and where the cat lives.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Bylaw Officers should be dealing with these animals.
- All animals at large should be captured and the owners fined. Cat owners let their cats out at night, when there are no bylaw officers at work.
- I think The City of Calgary should stop restricting the movement of cats entirely. Registered and collared for owner cats, yes. But no restriction on movement at all. It's unhealthy to the animal to be cooped up inside or put into a leash. They are not dangerous in any way.
- They should be taken to shelters. If they are licensed the cat owner should be contacted and fined to get their cat back and given a warning they will charge with cruelty to animals for a second offense. Shelters should assess if the feral cats are adoptable and try to adopt them out.
- Fines for owner who allow pets to roam.
- If the cat has a license/chip go to the homeowner ie: applicable by-laws. If the cat does not have license/chip, take it to the shelter and see if it is suitable for possible or eventual adoption. Otherwise as sad as it is, follow with the usual policies for cats that are in place at the shelter.
- An effective trap/neuter/release program.
- I am not sure if you have a no kill policy at the shelter or what you do with stray cats but it isn't the tax payers responsibility to pay for these stray animals.
- No expectation from the city.
- Needs to be more stringent to change attitudes. Too many people believe the term "outdoor cat" is valid.
- Feral: trap and spay/neuter or euthanize
Stray and roaming: owner fine, if the cat is identified and you can find the owner
Capture and place for adoption if appropriate
Messaging about what to do if you are concerned about these cats.
- Perhaps spaying and neutering any cats that aren't meant to be bred so we don't have an influx of stray cats.
- Enforcement. Plain and simple, people will not alter their behaviors regarding letting their cats outside unless there are proper and regular patrols as well and issuing and tickets to those who don't follow the bylaws.
- provide assistance to organizations who are providing spay and neuter services for feral cats. Stray cats should be rescued and placed. Individuals who are responsible for roaming cats should be fined for each instance that their cat is found roaming to support the other two programs.
- - Screen the animals to make sure they do not pose a risk to owned animals.
- I think that The City needs to support the groups dealing with feral cats in dollars and in kind and make this approach a City policy.
- none
- That they fine the homeowner and advise that cats should stay indoors.
- Feral cats should be scooped, fixed and returned. Roaming and stray cats should be licensed so they can be returned home.
- Should be removed and destroyed.

- Capture them humanely, take to Animal Control or other animal welfare agencies, to be rehomed (and neutered), if the owners are not found. People, unfortunately, often treat cats as replaceable. Relying on people to come get their animals, with a fine, does not work. (Dogs seem to fare better.
- I think feral cats should be managed in the same way any other wildlife is managed in Calgary. I think that owners of roaming cats should be fined and I think stray cats should be re-homed.
- The city has a responsibility to work with the SPCA and other organizations to catch them and ensure they are not diseased and that strays are returned to their homes or adopted if they are abandoned. Pet owners should be fined if they abandon their animals. Roaming animals are fine.
- Engage MEOW Foundation re. dealing with feral cats. Enforce the bylaws re. roaming cats. I see the Calgary Animal Services now has a Facebook page to try to reunite captured strays with owners - a good move. Educate the public on hazards of allowing cats to roam; info on building catios.
- Should be regarded the same way as feral, stray, and roaming dogs.
- Trap them or allow the neighborhood to trap them. Humanely of course.
- The city should euthanize feral cats. Stray and roaming cats should be spayed/neutered and only returned to owners upon payment of fine and cost of medical procedures. If not paid, then adopted out.
- capture & destroy if no licence
- Roaming cats should at the very least be required to wear a bell, and at best, kept on a leash. Stray cats should be humanely captured and rehomed if possible. Stray cats should be humanely captured and put down, or maybe be relocated to become barn cats.
- These cats need help and should be assisted with the help of calgarians.
- My only concern has to do with the well-being of these animals. If they are not in distress, leave them alone, as we would any other "wild animals" in the city.
- I think the City of Calgary should work more closely with organizations providing TNR programs and advertise the option to become a TNR caregiver so these organizations can ensure that when they trap ferals that cannot be rehabilitated that they will have a safe place to return with food and shelter
- If the stray or feral animal is injured, is suffering, starving, or is a danger to the public, the city should remove the animal.
- None. Seems like a waste of money.
- For ferals, provide/promote TNR. Stray/roaming cats need to be returned to their owners.
- It would be good if somehow the City could get the people to quit letting their cats roam freely. I know it would be extremely hard to do but if they could fine people as they do with dogs if they see a cat not licensed or just roaming about.
- Catch them
- Educate people about what to do with all of them.
- I do not know what the answer is ... capture and spay?
- The City should - capture, and fine owners who do not keep cats indoors and are not responsible pet owners
- To work with shelters

- More than making me rent a cat trap and do all the work.
- Capture, spay and release programs for feral cat colonies
- I would hope that strays can get re-united with their families and feral cats populations can be managed.
- There's so many I would imagine that the city is doing their best I think again you have to make it harder on pet owners to have a pet
- I think they should be captured and returned to owners with warnings of keeping pets indoors, feral cats should be fixed, and be put up for adoptions.
- provide traps assist the public in capture and management
- they should be caught but our shelters are another major concern. (way over cap.) a way bigger issue.
- Stray cats should be neutered/spayed through a City-wide program. This will help to keep populations down.
- I once got a cat trap from Animal Services but was not successful in catching a problem cat in my garden. About a week after I returned the trap, I caught it. Animal Service and the Humane Society would not accept it because it was not caught in a proper trap. So how do we address this problem?
- None.
- Owners should be penalized (small fine?) for repeat offences of cats roaming. Something helpful might be an app where you can report either if your pet accidentally got out/lost or if you have seen a pet that may be lost? (upload photo/location, etc)
- If an animal does not have a City of Calgary registration tag, the animal should be brought to the City of Calgary SPCA
- Leave the indigenous feral cats alone. Stray and roaming cats should be picked up and sent to SPCA like dogs are/or used to be done. For clearly domesticated, no euthanasia.
- Trapping in response to complaints.
- Feral- put down
Stray/roaming give a healthy ticket to the owners
- There needs to be higher fines for people who constantly allow their cats outdoors to roam free. Have a catch neuter release program that can help more animal's health and the population.
- Support trap, spay/neuter and release programs. Work with existing agencies. If there a a feral cat colony, there is likely a food source.
- When the cat becomes a problem that the city picks it up.
- 1. Supporting/funding TNR programs for feral cats.
2. Enforcing rules when roaming cats are off the owner's property without supervision. I.e. fines for owners.
- I think the City of Calgary should only intervene if a feral cat looks to be starving or injured.
- If they become a nuisance ... trap and eliminate ...

- I expect them to be examined by a veterinarian, vaccinated, treated for illness, and spayed/neutered when they are caught. There should be no exceptions to the spay/neuter (even for roaming cats), unless the health of the animal prohibits the procedure. Stray and feral cats can be let free again.
- If home owners feel they are a nuisance, capture them, health check them at a vet and release them in a different area or return them to their owners.
- Roaming cats at the very least need to be collared and microshipped. Stray cats should not be euthanized. Feral cats should be spayed and there should be checks on their welfare.
- If feral cats become a threat to humans or small pets in populated areas they may have to be euthanized.
- The animals should be treated humanely at all costs. Actions should only be taken when specific animals are causing genuine problems.
- Cats that are clearly homeless should be homed.
- I would love to see Istanbul's approach used in Calgary. Don't euthanize the cats, simply sterilize, vaccinate, dock the ear and release again. I saw that when stray cats were treated this way, the locals were extremely friendly towards them as well. It saves so much cost on sheltering them.
- Only deal with rare problem cases.
- I feel that the city bylaw employees should help capture and deal with feral and roaming cats.
- I have had feral cats and the City provided traps for the capture of these animals - we were expected to ensure they had water and food and shelter until they were picked up by the city - it was very effective.
- Trapping stray and roaming cats and return to owner (if marked) with penalty including non-compliance registry. Otherwise holding for limited period, followed by elimination. In dealing with feral cats, elimination seems to be the best option.
- None, other than enforcing licensing requirements
- To try and find an owner, provide spay/neuter surgeries.
- Their health and well being (preventing zoonotic disease transmissions) and keeping their populations under control through trapping, vaccinating and spaying or neutering.
- I expect feral cats to be managed with the same severity as feral dogs or rats.
- I expect the city to not waste money on it
- Work with rescue partners to spay and relocate, i.e. barn buddy programs.
- to give them a fair chance at a good life
- Administering fines to owners of stray cats, and running catch, spay and release programs for feral cats to reduce their population.
- Spay/Neuter release, or barn cat programs
- That if there is a stray or roaming cat, officers will come and try to catch it. Then the owners (especially repeat offenders) should be fined.
- Sadly these animals need impounding, attempt to regime, and if not rehomed after a set time, euthanized

- Providing programs that reduce the amount of reproduction is the best way to reduce uncared for animals.
- That they actively patrol, catch, neuter, and re-home stray and feral cats.
- 1. Live trap all roaming cats
- 2. Fine owners for license/by law infractions
- 3. Euthanize unclaimed animals
- To make sure they find their family ,to be compassionate, to not euthanize.
- Trap and kill
- They need to be picked up.
- Enable spay and neutering at affordable rates
- They should be caught whenever possible. Animals being adopted out should be indoor only.
- see #1
- That they are carefully and respectfully collected by skilled professionals and taken to no kill shelters
- I expect support and approval for Trap-Neuter-Return, or "TNR," efforts.
- I expect the city to work with rescue organizations to deal with humane ways to deal with feral cats and to hold owners responsible where they can. Too often the cats pay the price and the owners just go on with no consequence to their irresponsible behavior.
- Improve process to match lost cats with owners. The city should provide the owner's contact info to the person who finds the cat directly without the cat being picked up by animal services. Or the person who finds the cat should be able to consent to the City giving their contact info to the owner
- The City should leave it up to organizations such as Humane Society and AARCS to rescue and help them. The City should NOT be in the animal business.
- I think the city has a responsibility to uphold their bylaws...
- I think they need to be caught, spayed/neutered, given medical treatment and rehomed
- Unlicensed cats should be removed to shelters and euthanized
- The city should collect them if they are interfering with humans. If a home can not be found, then they should be killed.
- They should be captured and brought to Calgary Humane Society -spayed or neutered and homed.
- Catch them and deal with them. They shouldn't be able to roam free all over the place. If they have an owner & can't be returned or they have no owner & can't be adopted, as sad as it is, they either need to be kept in shelters or put down. They are not wild animals and shouldn't be treated as such
- Neutering and spaying program for feral cats. Heavy fines for free range outdoor cats.
- public education regarding strays. Capture programs for feral/stray sightings and/or provide public with tools such as cages and info to capture/recapture cats.
- To identify the difference between the 3 and work with neighbours having problems so everyone can coexist peacefully while still allowing cats to live a more natural life rather than being cooped up indoors 24/7
- That they be dealt with humanely. Re-uniting stray and roaming cats with their owners should be a priority.

- If you see a cat, take it to the pound
- - To have an overall plan on how to address growing feral/stray cat populations based on science, best practices and animal welfare
  - Appropriate enforcement of bylaws and holding cat owners responsible for their behaviour
- I would expect that the city would be collecting any roaming cats and notifying the owners for a charge. I don't believe the city would allow dogs to be roaming around neighborhoods. Beddington Heights by nose hill has a problem with animals roaming loose.
- Round them all up, please, and take them to shelters.
- Treat them like dogs. Impound, charge owners if they are off property. Try to find homes for them. Enforce the licensing law.
- Take them to the SPCA and either try to contact the owner or put them up for adoption if possible.
- I'd expect the city to eliminate the problem.
- If stray cats are not licensed and returned to owners through that program, they need to be adopted or euthanized. Feral cats I have not experience with. Roaming cats will be a problem for all of time. The city is too large and cat owners don't care, just as long as the kitty comes home. GRRR
- Continue enforcement and trapping
- Treat them, give them a home - a decent home.
- Try to rehabilitate or euthanize
- Roaming and stray - continue to work with SPCA and try to rehome them or reunite them with their owners. I think you do a good job of this
- They need to be captured and rehabilitated and found homes.
- Catch, rehabilitation
- Respond to nuisance cats, follow up with owner &/or destroy
- Look to reduce population through education on pet ownership. Fund and promote spay and neutering programs. Catch, sterilize and release.
- The city should help fund all the organizations that are contributing to society by dealing with these cats.
- deal with them when/if they become a nuisance
- I guess if they are a bother, they should be trapped and either given to humane society or put down if necessary
- Increase fines and have strict policies regarding owner roaming cats. Particularly cats that are picked up unaltered, not dewormed and not up to date on vaccines. Feral cats should be trapped and at the very least altered and vaccinated. Ideally domesticated and regimes.
- I expect more than a letter to the owner not following the bylaw. We have kept endless records of the neighbors cat who roams into our yard, deck, hangs from our screens terrorizing our cat indoors. We have gotten no where with the neighbor nor with bylaw services. Why have laws if they do nothing!!

- Keep feral populations at a healthy level with spay/neuter. Roaming cats - seriously punish those irresponsible owners so they keep their cats indoors.
- Get rid of them
- I expect them to be properly vetted and fed and either adopted out after minimum 1 week or given to a rescue to properly care for adopt out. None should ever be killed unless medically necessary .
- Catch them and fine owners
- Cull them, you did it with beaver and Canada geese and this is an even worse problem. Introduction of a non native species with devastating consequences to native species.
- Invest in TNR programs! They work well, keep cat populations under control.
- That the city can try to help these animals. Especially as the weather starts to get colder. It feels as if the city doesnt care much for animals and does not want to help animals unless they have owners they can bill
- They should be trapped and sent to the pound like any other unwanted/problem species.
- Stray and roaming cats should treated the same way stray and roaming dogs are treated. Feral cats should be dealt with on an individual case basis.
- I expect the city of Calgary to develop a program and determine a budget to care for these cats in a manner best for them.
- Ownerless cats should be captured and removed. Cats should be licenced and owners of roaming cats should be fined.
- Leave roaming cats alone to do their thing. Put more responsibility however on the owner that abandoned their pet to allow them to become full strays.
- I expect the city to ensure the ferals are altered to keep the population manageable but to keep the ferals in their home communities where they have a registered community care giver which again can be done through the MEOW foundation. Stray cats should be adopted out and roaming cats = home & fine
- I expect them to limit but not eliminate feral cats. I expect stray and roaming cats to be chipped and if they become feral to fine the past owners.
- Cats must be licensed. Owners fined if cat caught outside. All household cats should be neutered/spayed. I trap them....you take them.
- I don't have any concerns with roaming cats providing they are not causing any harm or danger to the public. Stray cats should be taken to a veterinary practice to see if the are chipped and if not taken to an animal shelter.
- None. Found them to be useless. The rescues do more with no government funding
- The City of Calgary should be making efforts to attempt to capture the cats.
- I expect that feral cats be spayed or neutered and adopted (if possible, even a barn cat program) or released if not.
- Euthanize feral cats. They are not needed and are a strain on the system. Deal with at large roaming cats as complaints come in. No change needed. Eliminate the 1 warning per year in the bylaw.
- -they uphold the bylaws when someone complains about nuisance cats

- Cats should be treated the same as feral and stray dogs.
- ALL should be picked up and removed from the area
- Keeping public (children especially) safe.
- Humane treatment of animals even in euthanasia program.
- To identify the different types and treat them properly. Re-homing where possible and treating for diseases. Putting unsalable animals down
- Licensing of owned cats with identification when outside. How are feral cats different from wildlife? Deal with them the same?
- I have no problem with responsible owners allowing cats outside for pest control
- Make bylaw so anyone poisoning cats gets charged a fine. Roaming cats should be allowed to roam the neighborhood, cats are smart, keep to themselves and kill mice for us. Roaming cats can climb fences, trees, get through small spaces and if they're tied up outside, they still get out of the harness.
- Institute a tnr program and have colony care takers for the cats to ensure they are healthy. This would reduce disease risks to other cats and help the bird populations
- Cats should be taken in, neutered and spayed and injuries/illnesses should be treated. Feral cats should be homed with knowledgeable people. They don't always make good pets.
- Idk man like [removed] cats going to do what cats going to do I just don't want corona virus or poo in my backyard.
- Cat owners should be expected to keep their animals on their property or risk a fine
- Make owners of roaming cats pay a high fine and if they are a repeat offender then increase fines.
- Support and ensure that cats are spayed and neutered.
- Help with spaying and neutering programs. Prevention is better then playing catch up.
- Trap, spay and neuter is key. Other cities have successfully done this feral cat colonies.
- Find stray owners and if not found, all cats should be spayed and neutered and adopted out so that they stop reproducing and contributing to the overpopulation of cats problem.
- Acting in the best interest of the cat. Even indoor cats escape sometimes so I don't think punishing owners whose cats are out is a good plan. Humanely catch cats that are roaming in unsafe places and scan for microchips & return to owners when owner is know.
- Higher fines, responsibility on the city to catch feral cats rather than on the home owner
- Engage with partners in TNR. Make it easier for citizens to participate in TNR programs. If a cat is caught roaming, give the owner a grace period and make reasonable contact before a fine.
- To ensure local animal shelters have running TRN programs for ferals and that they are being kept out of shelters and saved from euthinasia.
- Being humane. Finding their homes.
- Get rescues more involved and help fund spay and neuter programs to prevent overpopulation in a humane manner. For roaming cats, fine owners.
- Potential of offering live cat traps to people that are having problems with these cats.
- Catch and spay/neuter them.

- None doing a great job.
- Feral cats should be trapped and euthanized if need be. Stray cats should be picked up and put up for adoption. Roaming cats should be returned to thier owners with a hefty fine.
- Put them down, they are suffering and will be extremely hard to domesticate. The shelters are already full of unwanted domesticated cats.
- Helping animals in distress
- I believe that if someone takes a roaming cat to the City of Calgary that the owner should be immediately fined and they should not be allowed to have the animal back. But only if it is a repeat offence, fine the first time, give the animal back. Stray and feral should have a safe place to go.
- not sure as i hate to see any animal put to death.
- Trap, fine owners of roaming cats including prohibitions for repeat offenders. Ferals are a tougher subject but medical care and spay/neuter/release programs are a start.
- There should be no charge to the cat owner when an indoor cat accidentally escapes and is returned to the owner providing that the cat is licensed, identifiable by tattoo, identification chip or cat licence.
- Euthanizing is not ok. The city doesn't need to do much - citizens often bring cats in and help find their homes. I've never even seen a feral cat here in 14 years so it really can't be a huge issue!
- Capture...
- I haven't had much
- Keep petowners responsible for their animals at all times; cull feral cats and allow landowners to trap and kill feral and domestic cats on their property.
- The city of Calgary should invest in humane spay/neuter TNR programs and rehome any feral cats that may be suitable as barn cats. I would love to see the city allow people to build or alter fencing to allow cats to have outdoor time in their backyards without escaping.
- Strict enforcement of bylaws. Unfortunately, I know this is a big city and there are not enough bylaw officers to deal with all of the cats running loose.
- I think the current system seems to be working ok. I think they should keep the law of cats not leaving the owner's property.
- catch, Spay/neuter and release would be my expectation of the city for dealing with feral cats. Stray cats should not be picked up by animal services, it's one of the stupidest bylaws this city has. You can't keep a cat on a leash, and I don't understand why Calgary is the only city requiring this.
- I expect some realistic and measured change to the management of this scenario as well as the guidelines enforced. Cats breed fast and shouldn't be left to populate. They are responsible for many bird deaths in a year.
- Let them be unless they are reported by an individual to be pestering a domestic animal
- None
- Response to complaints with live traps. If licensed return to owner, If not adoption
- As same treatment as with a dog.

- Cats should be registered. Feral or loose cats need to be caught and impounded. Owners should be required to pay a fine equal to the costs of capturing and housing their pet. Require all cats to be spayed or neutered unless owned by a registered breeder. Euthanasiation is sad but necessary.
- Help return them to their families. For feral cats, continue with TNR.
- Compassion. Above all, kindness to the animals. Intervene if a cat is in distress or is being destructive to someone's property.
- I would like the city to fund spay neuter programs for feral and stray cats.
- none. Just leave them be. If people don't want to lose their cats they will keep them inside
- That I am allowed to safely and humanely live-trap and submit to animal bylaw officers any feral, stray or roaming cat in my yard. That I do not have to wait for/drive distance to obtain city-approved trap or transport such an animal in my own vehicle. Card box with air-holes and water will suffice.
- Feral or stray cats should be brought in for spaying/neutering. Feral cats should be released and stray cats should be found suitable homes. Roaming cats should be captured and owners fined.
- come pick them up or set a trap. Don't make me drive and get one, and then have to take it back. I don't want to have to deal with a cat, wild or not.
- Tickets being issued. Monitoring Facebook groups for people that blatantly let their animals out. Having programs on how to retrain owners about keeping your cats inside (they claim that they can't train the cats, we should train the owners on how to then). More adoption (no kill) for the ones found
- No kill shelters and ensuring proper education to owners on the dangers of roaming cats to the environment and animal itself
- The City should implement and enforce much stricter fines as a deterrent.
- I would expect the city to help return cats to their owners. Feral cats should be spayed/neutered
- Large fines for cat owners. Eradication of feral cats.
- Allow public to capture (City to rent live traps), trapped animals to be 'donated' to City for 'relocation'.
- Same as dogs. Collect and take to the impound. Cats and dogs should be treated the same.
- They should be captured, treated, spayed and rehomed.
- Support a subsidized spay and neuter program. Subsidized program to provide food and shelter to feral cats that have been spayed or neutered and released.
- It's a pretty complex problem and the city doesn't have the manpower to fix it. I'm not sure you could do anything different.
- Trap them, and fine the owners, if they are feral then spay and neuter and put up for adoption.
- I expect feral cats to be treated humanly in trap/neuter/return programs. I expect stray and roaming cats to be taken to shelters and then reunited with families.
- Catching such cats
- None, let em roam.
- trap and fine owners - same as dogs
- Capture and rehabilitate. Fine owners.
- I think if the city finds a cat is consistently allowed to roam free, there should be more repercussions for the owner.

- I hope they will continue to do as they have been doing.
- Round them up and put them up for adoption
- Pick them up and if the owner comes in to take them back charge them/fine them
- Calgary should monitor feral cat populations and increase enforcement for free-roaming cats.
- Impound. Fine owners of stray and roaming cats.
- Apply the bylaws and fines to repeat offenders instead of continually trying to "educate" them.
- To ensure their safety.
- I expect them to be humanely captured. If there is an owner they should have to pay a fine for having their cat loose. If there is no owner, then the cat can be put up for adoption. If it is a feral cat that cannot be adopted, I expect it to be fixed, vaccinated and ideally opted out to rural areas.
- Roaming: please return the cat(s) to their owners.
- Roaming cats should be returned to their owners and fines placed. It is unacceptable for dogs to roam free, the same should be for cats.
- there should be a mandatory spay/neuter policy for owned, roaming cats. There could be a fine if one is found, not spayed/neutered and returned to a household.
- Proper care, reigning or relocating.
Spay/neuter.
- I would like to see a trap, neuter and release program. Studies have shown time and again that it helps reduce feral population, and disease. Trapping and moving them or having them go to rescues to be euthanized only allows new cats to move into the area
- Feral/community cats should be sterilized and returned to their community. Roaming cats treated as roaming dogs.
- I expect more from the city. There should always be a 24 hour location to drop off feral, stray, or roaming cats.
- Humane treatment.
- This is too broad a question. Stray/feral cats and wandering owned cats are two different things. Cats without homes should be picked up and cared for.
- Capture and neuter/spay and rehome- maybe as barn cats if they aren't able to tame them.
- Bylaws that lead to consequences for pet owners allowing un-spayed or un-neutered cats to roam as well as subsidized spay/neuter services if this is happening due to financial barriers from owners. A plan to manage feral and stray cat population size without killing/harming them.
- To remove them when they are causing problems for people.
- Work with local animal rescue organizations and a single shared data base as a mechanism for reporting lost, stolen, feral animals to assist in homing. Many citizens could also volunteer. Animal lovers step up when a call to action is needed. Utilize that - They should be impounded. Owners should have to pay to get them back. If they don't have an owner, they should be adopted out. If they are not adoptable, they should be put down.
- Catch, rehab, rehome

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

June 29, 2020

- I feel the bylaw against letting cats out is shortsighted. Yes they do poop in peoples flower beds, but also kill a lot of mice/eat flies, etc. Cats do not pose the same dangers that loose dogs do.
- I simply expect that they deal with these unfortunate animals humanely. They are at great risk if inhumane treatment if they enter the wrong properties around town.
- Limiting or banning roaming cats after dark and during winter. Or during rush hour. Observing population and doing checks to see if a disease is spreading or population curb measures need to be taken.
- Provide humane traps to catch the cats then spay/neuter and adopt.
- Enforce the bylaws and increase the penalties for non-compliance and don't rely on people making complaints first (be proactive and get the city people out in the neighbourhoods looking for problems and fixing them - residents should not be doing this work - it's your job).
- That they be picked up and if it happens twice with the same cat they are NOT returned to the owner. I should not be responsible for "housing" a stray while I wait hours for bylaw to show up!
- My expectation is the entire feral cat colony is trapped, spayed or neutered, and then returned (TNR) to their colony location. I expect the city to not euthanize feral cats unless they are very diseased or sick and it is the humane thing to do.
- Same with dogs, take them to the pound. If cats are not for pets than euthanize them.
- Rescue stray and feral cats and relocate them to a more appropriate home
- Feral and stray should be brought into the city but roaming cats should be aloud.
- Use live traps to round them up and follow present protocol to deal with them.
- Rehabilitation and adoption of these animals should be available.
- Harsher fines for people who just let their cats outside.
Feral cats either TNR or euthanize because most of them have zero socialization and want nothing to do with people and are honestly just pests who kill excessive amount of wildlife.
- Control the cats, and if the owner can be identified fine them for allowing their animals free to molest wildlife.
- Enforce licensing, fines for roaming cats
- I would expect the city to follow other major urban areas lead. Lots of places have feral cats.
- I expect the city to enforce bylaws without the redtape and hassle being placed on complainants. Ticket offending cat owners. Require all cats to be altered and licensed. Enforce bylaws with fines
- Take the roaming cats to the SPCA, etc. to be rehomed. Do not return the animal to the owner
- I think feral, stray and roaming cats should be picked up and removed from the urban setting. Let unchecked these potentially wild animals could breed out of control and cause nuisance.
- continue program for spay neutered of feral cats and return them to the area found.
- I think the city does a fairly good job of managing feral and stray cats but should do more with respect to cat license enforcement for roaming cats.
- Educating cat owners that roaming cats are illegal, and must be licensed, spayed/neutered to control population.
- I think the city has an adequate system in place for dealing with cats.

- Pick them up, neuter/spay, find owners or adopt out if possible.
- Respond to calls about and trap and impound roaming and stray cats, enforcing the licensing bylaw
- Not much
- To trap them and charge the owners a fine when they get picked up. After three fines the cats should be forfeit to owners who will be responsible for them.
- see 2) above
- At least do capture, neuter and release if our shelters are really full, that way their population can't multiply as fast.
- between april-october nothing, in the winter time cats need help to be warming
- Have owners be just as responsible for their cats as I need to be with my dogs.
- Feral=Extermination
stray=fine non compliant or seisure sterilization and or extermination, disease control.
- Irresponsible cat owners need to have the same rights and responsibilities as dog owners. Fines for being roaming, pooping in neighbourhood yards.
- As much as possible, cats should be kept indoors. Stray and feral cats should be caught, given veterinary care, and placed in homes through foster it adoption programs as much as possible. Maybe a contained sanctuary for feral cats that can't live in a house.
- The city should be setting clear expectations for residents and enforcing the bylaws.
- If momma has feral kittens, kittens can be adopted. Check for microchips and tags to return to owner.
- Feral cats should be spayed and neutered but left to live their lives the same way other urban wildlife are. Strays and roaming cats should be found homes. I don't believe in allowing cats to roam. My cats go outside only when supervised and on harnesses.
- Try to reunite stray or roaming cats and failing that have available to be rehomed. . Rehab ferals if possible or euthanize them.
- Make it easier for people to catch the animals. Have more locations where traps are available for pick up.
- The city should support stray and roaming cats through rescue and adoption or transfer to other agencies to achieve the same. Feral cats should be part of a TNR program wherever possible & not euthanized. City recognizes MEOW's TNR program - this supports Calgary's role as leader in animal welfare.
- Now I want to he city to catch cats they get multiple complaints about. To put this on the neighbours is not right.
- Trapping, big fines for known owners, property and veterinarian fees retribution, removal and rehoming of at-large animals, banned ownership for offenders.
- I think the city of Calgary should capture all stray and feral cats, hold the owners responsible by issuing fines and spaying/neutering cats at the owners expense.
- People who are found to have failed to license their cat(s) should be fined. Calgarians should be required to spay/neuter all cats, unless there is a medical reason not to

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- I have no expectations as I don't think the City is doing anything. The City doesn't do anything about dogs attacking people and dogs, so what's the concern about roaming cats? If people don't take responsibility for their cats, there are consequences - usually death.
- I think the city licensing program is a good idea IF the cats are aloud outdoors, otherwise it seems like a money grab to license an indoor cat. Again, allowing cats to hunt, as is in their nature, without fear of being ostracized or fined would allow many more stray cats to be homed.
- Pick them up!! Take them away don't let them just roam free
- Capture and put up for adoption, if not claimed within specified time, euthanize
- Fines and penalties for roaming cats should be equally severe as it is for dogs.
- Mobile spay and neuter services
- Making it a bigger offense to let your cats roam.
- Trap, neuter, release. Contact owners where possible.
- Cats should all be neutered or fixed. Too many litters then the rescues are inundated with kittens and adults for adoption.
- Stray cats get a chance to be rescued and adopted.
- I expect you to do something about it, not tell me to 'try talking to them' when I call 311 to complain. The lack of enforcement is what causes ppl to do stupid things, and then [removed] in the neighbourhood. Like always Cory of Calgary- just do something for once
- The capture and spay/neuter of all Feral and strays. Larger fines for those who continue to let cats roam. Maybe a sliding scale for repeat offenders?
- Mandatory spaying and neutering of cats.
- Keep the numbers of such cats reasonable.
- Collect and get rid of. Nobody uses licenses on stray cats, fines.
- I expect them to enforce the existing bylaw if there is a problem. I do not believe we will be able to eliminate them.
- All of above trying to catch the animals and charging those who let their animals roam get charged for it.
- If someone reports a feral or stray cat (no collar or microchip) the city should try to capture them, ensure a vet check, rehab them and then rehome them.
- For feral and stray, humanity trap and neuter/spay before finding them a loving home. If they are aggressive and can't be rehabilitated, unfortunately I would euthanize. For roaming, huge fees to owners who are repeat offenders and a registered list made public.
- Purposely letting a vicious animal loose without supervision, is not just irresponsible, and illegal, but it is narcissistic and malicious. A dog cannot just roam free, vicious or not, but vicious cats can? Because its name is pickles? Stop returning them to bad owners. Trap and relocate to forest
- Give negligent cat owners an educational pamphlet and a couple of warnings before giving a fine. Work with MEOW foundation or other experienced cat rescue groups to find the owners or possible new homes, euthanasia should be a very last resort. There should be severe fines for people who abandon.

- Fine owners who do not follow the laws. Trap, spay +neuter feral cats.
- Pick them up, increase licences for cats to be par with dogs. My dogs do not roam free in this city!, I pick up after my dogs. Yet they are terrorized by these cats I now have a young charging my fence because my neighbors cats are in my yard or on fence teasing.
- Put feral cats down
- I would love to see a TNR program developed for ferals. For strays and roaming cats, further public education and increasing fines for those who allow their cats to roam.
- That it is enforced
- Enforce where possible.
- Just do the best you can.
- To do their job,especially when it comes to dealing with the cat owners,fines are a must,the warnings do nothing,we have had constant trouble with a cat,no matter how many times we complain nothing gets done,other then telling to keep the cat in their yard,how many chances does one get???
- make the laws stiffer for cat owners that allow their cats to roam free. Use the cat bylaw you put in place. Treat them the same as dogs.
- Stray and roaming cats make a mess all over properties that are not their own. They sit on my doorstep and tease the dogs. They are often left out and when the weather turns extreme they are not able to get back inside.
- That action is taken, when this is called in. I have heard excuses that the city has far too many complaints to deal with. City should request for photographic evidence and have a high fine to owners. Also, have a limit on how many pets owners can have.
- To take a leadership role. Have programs/partnerships with other agencies to help address the issues.
- Bylaw officers can trap any roaming cat. Also fine irresponsible pet owners when a verified complaint is made.
- If cat has owner, per tag, chip, or tattoo, then owner to be fined. If third offence, or if fine not paid, then cat to be adopted or euthanized. If no chip, tattoo, or license, then consider as feral cat.
- The City should strongly enforce bylaws against them, fining owners, and capturing feral and stray cats, destroying them if they can't be rehabilitated or homes can't be found. They're doing a lot of damage to native species that are hard-pressed by habitat loss and other human impacts.
- None
- To do the humane thing to prevent this and overpopulation of either type. Offer help to the public with education on this, or perhaps volunteer program using youth and adult voluteers to help with this project if there is not one already.
- Feral cats should be taken in by the city vet checked and immunized and then placed up for adoption because every cat deserves a loving home
- Get them off the streets.

- Help humanely capture a problem cat if reported. Encourage owners to spay and neuter. Otherwise leave them be.
- There should be massive fines for owners allowing their cats to roam free.
- As above
- To help when needed but to also assess the situation appropriately, some cats are happier outdoors and as long as their needs are being met, why is this a problem?
- I expect some kind of way I can complain atm 311 is useless they say there is nothing they can do unless it gets picked up. SO COME GET IT!
- Humane treatment
- Spay or neuter and release.
- Keep them safe
- I have no problem with fixed roaming cats some cats it's nearly impossible to keep them inside. However feral cats are different we need to round the up fix them and find them homes
- Actually not much, if they come into contact with people then action can be taken.
- Funding ethical management of feral animals. If they must be slaughtered it must be ethical and we should consider using cat meat for protein composting and possible animal and or human feed after research and testing.
- If they become an issue I expect the city of Calgary to reduce the amount
- Provide funding to animal organizations and rescues to ethically control the growth of feral populations with trap neuter release programs or animal adoption.
- Have a bigger disciplinary action, in order to minimize roaming cats from being accidentally killed or chosen as prey, or simply them being reowned. As simple as if it was manditory to microchip your cats and dogs to minimize the animals staying in shelter for so long
- Set up humane trapping options and let it be known to the public so cat owners think twice about letting their cats roam freely.
- TNR for feral cats. Pickup and At Large fines for owned free roaming cats.
- That the cats are being caught and brought to a safe place. Owners are trying to find. Have pet owners get their cats microchipped at an affordable price.
- To support rescues who help the feral cat population. To increase consequences for owners who purposefully let their cats roam and break the bylaw. To pick up cats found roaming the streets.
- A spay/ neuter and release program for feral cat would be nice. Stop them from breeding and keep the numbers down
- I expect the city to make sure all animals, including cats, should be provided with medical needs and should have a program to adopt them out
- I think that cats that are in danger outside should be taken into custody and kept safe until their owners are found.
- Ensure that all cats are treated humanely and are having basic needs met (if a cat is emaciated or diseased, the city should ensure the animal has access to the care it requires). Owned cats should be limited to staying within the owners property, or be under control in public areas.

- No expectations. Just if you do catch them, they are not Euthanized unless due to health reasons.
- There needs to be a focus on cat owners who let their cats at large. We are on a busy street and we have found a few deceased pet kitties on the road. You can only do so much for strays. But we need to work on bad cat owners.
- Ticketing owners of cats that are roaming.
- I think the city is doing a good job with feral cats keeping them safe by finding them appropriate homes.
I think if people allow thier cats to roam they need to have a form of identification. And should also be licensed if roaming to account for protiental damages. It's just responsible.
- None
- None
- there need to be an easy way to collect and possibly rehouse
- To keep the cats safe and not hurt them
- Not sure
- Feral cats should be caught and euthanasized. Roaming cat owners should be fined the same as dogs at large
- I think that owners of cats should have to license them and I think that other than that they should be free to roam...if they get hurt that's on the owner.
- Roaming cats should be captured, attempt for owners to be found and fined
- More and stronger enforcement.
- With all the coyotes around I think this would self regulate.
- Roaming - hold owners accountable
Stray - inhibit breeding, re-home
Feral - inhibit breeding, limit population.
- Have owner abide by the rules.
- stray and roaming cats should be sheltered and adopted out if not claimed. It is not easy to try and contain a cat in your yard as they are known to escape. There should not be penalties for roaming cats found and claimed if the owner can show that they have containment set up in their yard.
- Prevention and education in prevention of this population.
- The city should deal with reported feral cats by asking folks in the neighborhood Who, if anyone, is caring for them.
Stray cats should be take to the Humane Society for rehoming.
And neighborhood cats should not be allowed to roam, period. allowed to roam
- Be more strict on picking them up
- Offer communities information on where to help in problem areas providing tote bins with insulation for the cats to stay warm in the winters with.
- None.
- I think the city should leave them alone

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- None, our neighbors are responsible thankfully but in Royal Oak, we had cats pooping in the garden all the time.
- Feral: educate the public, do TNR. Stray: rescue and adopt out, Roaming: warnings to owners, lower penalties/fines as some people would rather surrender their cat, then to pay the fee. Or be able to afford the fee.
- None, we have bob cats, squirrels, skunks, owls hawks ets and it is natures cycle. Owls eat skunk, bobcats eat squirrels, cats kill mice, birds kills other birds.
- Doesn't seem like they are being brought in unless the public takes the initiative to trap
- I expect them to be reasonable and understand that cats are pets. It is also not possible to contain a cat who is allowed to go outside. Don't even talk to me about a leash. Please consider the way other municipalities operate . Calgary is backwards on this.
- Treat them the same way you would treat any other animal, ie: if they're being a nuisance then manage it. By nuisance though, I don't mean people complaining about their gardens being dug up - those people need better things to do with their time.
- Roaming- taken to SPCA/humane society, if owners found then fined.
Ferral- perhaps a program offering them to farms for barns/rodents etc as they might not be appropriate for homes
- capture and set for adoption/
- That they be picked up and reunited with owners or help them become domestic if possible.
- The city must employ knowledgeable, animal-aware and trained-in-animal-behaviour staff at all levels of city interaction with dogs and cats. We've had too many conversations with city staff (especially by-law officers, but not limited to them) who are completely ignorant of the most basic facts.
- I would say the City should pick them up/collect them; work with non-profit agencies for sterilization clinics (even if they are just released afterward).
- spay/neuter, trap, adopt out kittens
- Nothing
- education and if/when that doesn't work enforcement
- That homes are attempted to be found
- I expect the city to be utilizing TNR programs and making sure the feral and stray cat population are looked after.. leave collared owned cats alone.
- If it's an owned cat - a big fine for the owner. It's the only way that they will understand. If it happens more than 3 times then it's time to re-home the cat. Stray and feral cats need to be re-homed, if that's not possible then they at least need to be spayed.
- that if roaming cats come into backyards when they are not invited that they be asked my owners to become indoor cats. A dog would never be allowed to roam free and many kids are allergic.
- That feral cats are controlled.
- Education for pet owners, free trapping and neuter/spay, cats must be fixed to roam
- provide free traps to home owners and city pick up of the cat once trapped

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- I think if a stray or feral cat is causing problems then animal control should be called to come deal with it before it hurt someone. Owned cats that roam need to have harsher laws surrounding that. My dog has to be under control and on leash so why doesn't your cat?
- Catch them if they know one is in the area. Roaming cats owners need to be fined
- I have lived at this location for over 20 years and have yet to see an animal by law officer. I have no expectations as the City is cutting back on manpower.
- none at all
- Reduce them
- I have few expectations for the City at the best of times.
- I would like to see the city remove cats that become a nuisance, due to noise, aggressiveness, or causing damage
- Unsure of the expectations, as I don't quite fully understand how the process works now.
- Ensure animals are spayed or neutered. Roaming cats should have identification.
- Stricter rules for cat owners are necessary. Cats need to be housebound or on a leash, period. It is in the nature of cats to wander, a common fact.
Stricter rules around purchasing a cat may help.
- That they would be dealt with humanely. Or returned to their owners. Roaming are their owners responsibility.
- They should enforce the bylaws. As an innocent neighbor trying to look after their own yard, it should not be my responsibility to get a cage, trap and take the cat in. It belongs to someone and a complaint has been made, a cage should be placed and the homeowner who owns the cat should be billed.
- I expect that the City would introduce and trap and release program. Furthermore, if you're going to farm out your work of roaming animals to other organizations (such as the Humane Society, AARCS, MEOW Foundation) you should provide them with funding to care for these animals.
- Fines for owners that are not in control or allow their cats to roam.
- see above
- The City should fine pet owners who let their cats out to roam unattended and without a leash.
- Get rid of the bylaw requiring cats to be kept indoors. That is not consistent with their nature. Do insist all cats be licensed/tagged in some way so if they are in fact strays, they can be reunited with their owners. See comments re; feral cats above
- The City does a wonderful job, but the task is so HUGE. All animals should be spayed or neutered. TNR is good, too. Far more low-cost or free spaying/neutering would help with the problem.
- I wish there were stricter penalties for roaming cats. Owners are putting their animals in danger (no one lets a dog roam free?!?) and they cause a lot of destruction to property and song birds.
- Higher fines for the cat owners.
- More support so homeowners can trap and handover nuisance cats would be appreciated.
- That they be treated with kindness, rehomed when appropriate, or humanely put to sleep.
- Have animal control staff put out traps and use licence dollars collected to euthanize the animal.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- I hope that they will pick them up and provide a safe space for them with the possibility of adoption
- Roaming cats should be picked up and owners fined.
- Leave owned outdoor cats alone. Help strays get spayed/neutered and adopted. Spay/neuter and release feral cats.
- Feral cats: kill if reports of concern
Stray/roaming cats: collect and send to SPCA for owners to collect (after paying a fine)
- If a cat is identified as coming from a particular home, and a complaint is filed, Bylaw Officers should visit the property and issue a fine. Stray animals should be caught and hopefully adopted out. Feral cats should be trapped, spay/neuter, and identified if they can be homed
- Capture and find pet owners whose cats are roaming free.
- To be responsible to owners
- Depending on their size, If it's just a small cat who cares but if it's a lynx I would like you to prevent them from eating cats/dogs/people please. But let them go somewhere else- no need to kill anything
- It would be nice if we had a way to submit complaints for roaming cats if we could describe them. I know that at least one is the pet of a very close neighbour.
- People should not be allowed to have roaming cats.
- 1. fine owners
- same fees as picking up stray dogs for the owners
- -support trapping of feral and strays in safe way
-promoting having roaming cats chipped or tattooed so if trapped can be returned to owner with fine.
-continue to have adoption and update website for animals and promote adoption
- Hmmm. I expect something to be done but it's not the feral cats' fault. It's the people who get kittens then decide they don't want them and let them go, they breed and more kittens are born to fend for themselves! If cats were licensed, the city would have recourse to fine bad pet owners
- They city needs to act to trap these cats and enforce the no roaming bylaw that is place.
Responsible pet ownership and following the current bylaws is essential to good neighbor relations and safety for the cats themselves and others.
- Free to roam
- Fines for owners of roaming pets, cats or others. Trap nuisance cats, If pet owners really love their pets they would not let them roam free due to injury and possibly being preyed upon.
- Not much they do far more good than harm. The concern is no access to a spay/neuter program
- Oh god these all felt like the same question .see above
- There should be appropriate feeding stations and proper shelters. The city should spay and neuter and microchip to keep more accurate records of where the cats are coming from and what areas have the highest population
- More bylaw, trap them!
- Only pick up cats that are sick or hurt
- Fines for roaming cats. Spay and release feral cats.

- More cat trap or similar device availability, harsher punishments or fines on owners who let their cats free roam. Stricter rules on adoption of cats or mandatory spaying/neutering by all cat selling establishments.
- The responsibility really is up to the owners. Stray cats - it would be nice if the city could spay/neuter them & have a farm program to send them off to. If not, let them loose again. They kill mice, gophers & even rabbits. Let's not talk about the birds.....
- Collect the cat - determine whether it is a domestic or non-domestic cat, and then either return it to the owners (with a fine when appropriate), put it up for adoption, or partner with an organization that cares for stray/feral/outside cats who cant suitably become inside cats for adoption.
- Improved management of feral cats requires more resources - shelter and enforcement. I do not think pet issues are a current priority for city council.
- Humanely euthanize sick feral cats, tag, spay, provide shelters and some food in populated areas. Strays should be photographed and kept for a few weeks to help find homes.
- Controlling the number of feral or un-owned cats in a humane way such as rehabilitation or sanctuaries and ensuring they are spayed/neutered. Roaming cats should be reunited with their owners or, if they can't be located, given to the Humane Society or similar organization to be fostered or re-homed
- If the cat has become a nuisance and the owner isn't willing to keep the cat within the boundary of their property, then the owner should be fined. But "nuisance" would need to be defined since not everyone will have the same level of tolerance for cats.
- Give a reasonable amount of time for animal to be claimed, then euthanize if not suitable for adoption.
- Feral and stray cats should be treated humanely. They are often fearful and stressed by humans. Roaming cats should be returned to owners and their owners should be fined(exceptions would obviously be allowed for cats who escape, etc)
- Enforce the bylaws.
- Partner with a shelter to provide options for the cats safety such as barn cat adoption program for example.
- I expect owners of roaming cats to be ticketed when cats are found. As far as feral and stray, when found taken to a shelter.
- Trapping, neutering, and rehoming or releasing where appropriate
- We need more funding for feral TNR programs. I think hefty fines for owners allowing cats to roam is a fair penalty. Too many cats are dying outdoors.
- Ensuring they do not have infection and wouldn't harm other pet cats or dogs
- I think if they are informed of a home that allows their car to roam, that home should be fined. Feral and stray cats should be captured.
- TNR programs for feral. Public feeding and water stations in high density areas. Permanent outdoor shelter in high density areas.
For stray and roaming, pick up and try to notify owner where possible. Find new homes. Education on risks for outdoor cats.

- Leave roaming cats alone. Help cats out that are feral or stray.
- Pick them up and try to find their owners. If they are feral, maybe find a farm for them???
- I wish the city would collect the roaming cats in my neighborhood. I'm tired of chasing them out of my yard and cleaning up after them when they use my yard as a toilet. I'm not even sure who on my street they belong to, all I know is they have collard but they never let me get close enough to check
- All need to be micro chipped as kittens
so they are easily identified
Provide services for spay neuter program
License and renewal should be manitory
Educate yourself and others
- Continue with current process. Pick up cats when there are complaints. Not every cat is a nuisance.
- Spay and release
- The city does not deal with them and pass the buck such as telling callers to call the CHS and say the cat is abandoned when in fact it is a stray.
- remove feral cats, and chat with neighbors and owners about stray/roaming cats.
- I expect the city to ensure that all cats are spayed and neutered to prevent unwanted litters
- Fining owners caught letting their cats roam free, catch and spay and neuter feral cats.
- I expect the city to work with vet clinics and rescues to find the cats owners or find them a home. I expect the city to work with rescues on the feral cats to find the best option for the cat
- Should have traps easily accessible so I can trap the neighbours cat when it comes on my property. The city could come pick it up
- The city should take roaming cats to the pound (as they do with dogs) and fine the owners. I think the city should also take more care to ensure people are licensing their cats.
- I would like to see them all trapped and brought to shelters that can decide if they are feral...that they go to a feral community. If they are domesticated then spayed/neutered, vaccinated and medically cleared for adoption. If they have an owner they are fined,educated and responsible for all cost
- It would be great to give some aid to be able to catch, spay/neuter, then release again. Feral cats are happier without people, i dont know if itd help them to rehome them. The stray/roamers should be rehomed.
- Collection and then re-homing or euthanizing the cat
- Owners should have their feline stay in their own property, should not let them out to roam the neighborhood.
- - attempt to find the animals home
- fine owners
- Trap feral or stray. Roaming cats owners need to be fined and ensure they are licensed. Work with vets to ensure they are licensed
- I believe strongly in spay/neuter/vaccinate-release programs for truly feral cats who will never become pets, as this will diminish their numbers humanely over time by nature. Strays should be taken in and rehomed. Roaming cats should be confiscated from their irresponsible owners and rehomed.

- If the city is contacted, I would expect them to try to catch these animals, fine owners (where they are known), and find humane solutions to any growing feral population.
- treat them differently - no problem with roaming cats, but strays should be reunited with family or rehomed, and feral cats should be left alone
- I would hope that all cats with homes are kept inside. I understand sometimes they escape but if they are allowed out all the time, that's an issue. If owners are caught with multiple offences, they should be fined and I think it should be hefty enough that people just keep their cats inside.
- More collection of all for safety and population control, and stronger penalties for reclaiming pets.
- If the cat is in harm then they should help it
- Fines for owners, I shouldn't have to trap and bring in their cat for them
- I expect domesticated animals that have lived in a home to be sheltered and put up for adoption. I expect feral animals to be spayed or neutered and offered as "barn animals" if possible. Otherwise, they should be put down in a humane way.
- Feral- protocol for people who come across them
Stray- Strong support for adoption/fostering initiatives
Roaming- Cat-ID so that owners can be easily reached and the cat can be retrieved within 1 hour
- Honestly, not a lot.
- The City of Calgary could attempt to spay or neuter stray cats to keep them from putting a strain on the cities shelters.
- Clear guidelines, solutions for communities to control feral cat overpopulation
- Collection. Reunite with owner when possible. Feral cats should be put down.
- I think the city should support (both in the bylaws and financially) TNR programs.
- That if a cat is found that is registered owners should pay to have them back
- To treat them the same as they do dogs.
- Feral and strays should be caught and domesticated. Roaming cats should be caught and owners should be informed and fined if not compliant
- If they are fixed who cares the coyotes will get them. I have more problems with coyotes in the city than cats
- The city needs to fine cat owners and if the cats are feral they should be put down.
- To leave roaming cats alone. Stray cats should be placed in a shelter neutered and place for adoption. They should never be euthanized unless they are suffering from incurable disease
- I would like to continue to have opportunity to bring free roaming cats into the city facilities, I would like to be able to borrow a trap as needed.
- None. I want you to leave them alone. If owners care enough about their cats, they'll have them registered so they can be returned like lost car keys through the War Amps.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

June 29, 2020

- I believe that all cats in the city should be identified as household pet (tattoo). If they are not a pet they should first be put up for adoption and tattooed (at a cost to the new owner) before owning the animal.
- I think the by-law for not allowing cats to roam is good. I think paying yearly for a cat license is too expensive for responsible pet owners who don't let their cats roam. Stray and feral cats should be picked up and assessed if they are healthy enough to be adopted.
- spay and neuter them.
- Enforce the bylaw about keeping cats inside or on leash. Night time patrolling neighborhoods (not every night) I'm sure would find quite a few roaming cats.
- That they EDUCATE people, act upon complaints humanely, EDUCATE, punish those who disregard bylaws & abuse cats (and dogs) EDUCATE, allocate resources to rescue ferals/strays and NOT kill them. Private rescue organizations are always overloaded & underfunded, the City & the CHS need to step up.
- Cats should be allowed to roam during day light hours..I have more concerns about bobcats lynx's, coyotes hunting in neighbourhoods and skunks. Outdoor cats should be allowed to roam, be licensed and wear bells to help birds and should be inside at night.
- Catching them and returning them to their owners is important, whenever possible.
- Capture and put up for adoption to responsible home. Put down if required
- Stray and roaming are a concern.
- None really
- that owners keep the cats in doors , if not they should be charged for letting them regularly roam free
- Humane treatment, attempts to find and return cats to responsible pet owners. Our cats female have largely stayed close bt the back yard, encouraging enclosures or containment systems for pets might help owners keep pets close to home.
- Dogs have to be on leashes when they are outdoors. I strongly believe that cats need to also be on leashes when they are outside. I don't have problems with the dog owners in the neighbourhood as they keep their dogs on leashes and their dogs don't jump over my fence and poop in my backyard.
- Continue to lend traps to those wish to become feral community caregivers
- To do due diligence to ensure pets are returned to owners, strays are cared for, and feral cats are relocated when possible.
- I expect the city to enforce fines and or jail if there is animal abuse whether feral or domestic animals. I expect the city to offer reduced sterilization fees.
- there doesnt seem to be much enforcement of bylaws about keeping cats on your property :(
- Cats should be kept indoors or outdoors on leash
- Fines for owners who allow their cats to roam.
- Catch and neuter.
- Respond to animal control calls. Do their best to make sure cats are actually strays and not pets. Humanely euthanize diseased animals. Support spay/neuter programs
- Would like a spay/neuter and return program if one is not already in place

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Capture and spay at the very least.
- Make people accountable with heavier fines.
- Owners are warned and then fined if the cat is catches again.
- owners should face fines/penalties when they allow their cats to roam free. The city should better enforce the regulations because people don't understand the impacts their cats are having on songbird populations
- None...
- Unless there's a mass issue with them .. catch what you can and help find them a loving home
- The city should ensure feral cats are treated humanely. Heavy fines should be levied against pet owners who allow their pets to roam free, in order that they not become feral. A capture spay/neuter and release program fund by the city should be seriously considered
- Little to no expectations. Feral cats are wild animals and generally do not need human intervention. If I'm going to let me cat roam free I'm accepting full responsibility that it may never return or be killed.
- To pick them up just like we do with dogs, it is harder but possible with cat traps and monitoring.
- I am not overly concerned with roaming cats.
- I don't have any expectations.
- The city needs to crack down on owners not registering their cats/ letting them roam free - bigger fines. I'm tired of cats using my garden as their toilet.
- Education! Cost microchipping, spay/neuter clinics.
- I feel the city should help a little bit more with cat complaints - maybe warning for owners who have roaming cats - and have they're own trap/catch system for these cats
- Nothing!! unless one is injured let them be.
- these are not naturally wild animals. they are more like an invasive species. if they are cited as a problem, eliminate them. They kill large numbers of song birds.
- Every person (including the city as our representatives) is responsible for helping domesticated species whether they are owned pets or community cats.
- Impose harsh penalties on owners who let cats run free
- Humane solutions, including live trapping if necessary, domestication if possible.
- The City should have a process in which they can be trapped and put down in a humane way..
- As above control when diseased or overly populated
- stray and roaming cats should be returned to the owners free maybe up to 2 times a year. There is the chance that even to best owner has a time when they get out and you dont want a fine to make the person just leave them in the shelter. after than a fine like for parking
- None, focus on skunks and coyotes, cats are harmless
- If the cat is feral they should be PTS, a stray should be caught and rehomed, and roaming cats should be caught, returned to owners and fined - if the owner can not keep their cat contained after x amount of warning. Cat should be rehomed.

- They should be controlled by holding the owners responsible for the roaming ones, insisting on sterilization of all pet cats, euthanizing the feral cats. Cats should have to be licensed the same as dogs so the city will have an idea of the numbers.
- I want people to face fines if they repeatedly let their cats roam free.
- I expect that feral and stray cats are picked up and taken off the streets to shelters for rehabilitation and hopefully adoption. I expect that roaming cats be allowed outside as research has shown that cats do better outside (I feel very strongly about this).
- Provide more funding from licensing to spaying or neutering cats. Unless the owner is a breeder they should be altered. Cats are easy to obtain but many cannot afford vet costs for fixing.
- Feral cats should be acknowledged as a reality in our community and need protection. We believe our City should support T-N-R (trap-neuter-return) initiatives to humanely manage feral cat populations.
- Some of these feral cats can be domesticated, some cannot. Capture them and spay and neuter them and then see if some can be adopted out to farms where they would be happier.
- I feel the city should advertise more about the responsibilities of owning animals and the city by-laws. I'm pretty sure people aren't aware of the fines for letting their cats run free, or they just don't care cause they don't get caught.
- To make sure owners do not let their cats out
- Rehome.
- Support TNR programs!
- As long as they are being monitored and not spreading anything they are valuable
- I expect them to be humanely trapped, vaccinated, fixed, loved, fostered and when ready - put for adoption.
- Unsure.
- Pick them up and bring them to a shelter where they can be properly fed, given proper shelter and where families can find them if they got out of the house and/or adopt them
- The city should assist home owners in trapping cats and ticketing owners if cat not licensed and caught it does not go back to the owner. If they cared about cat they would have it licensed
- Penalize the owners
- I would expect cats to be caught and attempted to reunite with owners. Feral cat could be neutered and returned to where they were caught from or put in areas needing pest control
- Trap and hand out big fines to owners if they are repeat offenders.
- If it's a stray, maybe captured then release fixed! If it's an owner's cat that is not fixed, they should be fined by the city!
- Put them to sleep / get rid of them!!
- Maybe trap spay release
- I expect the city to fine owners who allow their cats to roam and if one owner incurs multiple penalties that the animal be taken from them as they have shown that they are not a responsible pet owner.

- They should be caught, spayed neutered and checked for disease
- With stray or feral cats I do think that the city should trap them and have them spayed or neutered to prevent more stray cats. If roaming cats are being a nuisance to the neighbors then yes they should also be trapped and make the owners pay to get them out of the pound.
- No responsibility.
- I expect the city to enforce the existing bylaws regarding animal control. I have spoken to some of my neighbours about their cats defecating in my garden and they have done nothing about it. There should be stiff penalties for roaming pets.
- capturing them, microchipping them or tattooing them, spay/neuter them, vaccinate and if possible get the animal re-home
- Eliminate them
- If cats are truly feral, then trap, neuter, and release. Stray cats should be returned to their owners or rehomed. Owners should be seriously punished for letting their cats roam free (not applicable to lost cats)
- Ensuring spays and neuters to avoid more cats. Other than that, its hard on cats to force them to stay indoors.
- The city needs to do more about cats at large complaints. A neighborhood has been warned multiple time by bylaw, yet continues to allow his cat out. This cat causes alot of issues locally. I believe heavy fines should be implemented for secondary and subsequent offences.
- If there are problem cats, I would expect the city to capture and turnover to SPCA for adoption. Or raise funds to cover costs of spay/neuter program
- Humane treatment of the animals.
- Feral cats - maybe a sterilization program can be put in place, They should not be killed. Stray cats - should be taken in by bylaw and re-homed/provided to other animal rescue centres to be rehomed. Roaming cats are the largest issue, owners should be fined if cat roams, more enforcement needed.
- Help find them homes, work with other agencies,
- Public service announcements on calgarys bylaws and responsible cat ownership. Maybe a frequently updated lost pet website. Outdoor cats should be on leashes. Reduced spay/neuter costs. There is currently nothing regulating/stopping people from breeding and selling kittens(they sell them on kijiji
- To provide education about not releasing pet cats, providing an effective high volume spa/neuter program and supporting TNR.
- Feral cats- euthanised right away stray/roaming cats- Owners should be charged a fine for not containing their cat and another fee if they are not licensed, up to date on vaccines
- To spay and nuder them to control numbers.
- that they are scanned for owners infomation so that they can be returned to owners if applicap=ble.
- Spay and Neuter, Trap and release if unadaptable. If aggressive humane euthanasia

- For stray and feral cats, working with local shelters to SAFELY trap them and help them find homes. Feral cats can make great barn cats.
For roaming cats, stricter fines for the owners. Cats shouldn't roam when they are owned, it is unsafe for them and becomes a nuisance for others.
- None
- Information about spay and neuter programs to prevent unwanted kittens from roaming cats (owned or feral). Assistance to low income families to help with spay neuter programs.
- I expect the City not to confiscate or pick up domesticated cats that clearly have owners, unless they are in distress. I also encourage the City to make use of incredibly helpful spay/neuter programs for feral cats!
- I expect them to deal with cats as they do dogs- tolerance zero for multiple infractions
- That every effort is made to contact the owners of the cat, for a reasonable amount of time, at least two weeks. If owner isn't found they should be placed in a no-kill pet shelter or foster home.
- I have no expectations of them.
- Feral, and stray cats should try and be adopted/rescued. Roaming cat owners should be fined if their cat gets recovered
- Picked up and relocated (as appropriate) if a nuisance or attempt to see if behaviour modification is appropriate so they can be adopted out. Euthanasia should be the last resort!
- Feral - TNR programs.
Stray and roaming cats - stricter policies and penalties. Change the bylaw from "Confined to owner's property" to indoor cats only since a cat's territory can be 500 meters. If the owner can't comply to this then they shouldn't own a cat and/or have the pet taken away.
- I would love to see a trap, neuter/spay and return program to manage the population. Spay and neuter is the only way to really and truly deal with an over population challenge.
- Roaming cats - locate owners and spell out bylaws, maybe educate on cat-proof fencing for their yard. For strays, trap and make every effort to locate owner - someone probably loves and misses them. For ferals, TNR to reduce the number of cats and kittens living short, miserable lives outdoors
- Feral cats - little chance of finding them a home. Too much expense to neuter and get shots. Send them immediately to a cat rescue group or euthanize. Strays - keep and try to find them a home. Roaming - severe fines when returning them to owners.
- If a cat is sent to the pound it should be neutered before being adopted out. Should make it easier if trapping a cat. I have a car and I am nit putting a cat in it to take to the pound incase it sprays
- Assisted spay and neuter programs and a tnr program
- Stray and roaming cats should be caught and impounded juSt like dogs
- Get rid of them. Give to spca or other animal shelter.
- Remove them and place in rescue.
- Fine owners if their pets are causing a problem.
- Fine the owners

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- I expect that cats that are owned should be returned to owners. Feral or roaming cats should be re-homed if possible. I think spay and neuter clinics are also important to limit the number of unowned/uncared for cats
- Educate citizens on bylaws and enforce the bylaw more visibly (fining owners of roaming cats).
- Reminding cat owners of the damage to birds and yards caused by roaming cats, and reminding them this isn't allowed.
- Eliminate them.
- As long as it's not being a nuisance none. I think if it becomes destructive or causing a problem that is another issue.
- Bylaw should ensure owners keep their cats on their property. As for feral, trap and put up for adoption as complaints are received. What else can you do? We don't need a Feral Kitty Police.
- Capture and destroy, rehome, or fine owners.
- support of spay/neuter programs for strays, ticketing owners for allowing intact cats to roam
- Be nice. They're scared. Show them care. Find them a forever home or let them live their lives on their own. Cats are smart they know how to take care of themselves
- (1) Respond to concerns on the phone or in person (2) React with the most modern, compassionate approaches to set the highest socially-humane example. (3) Work in partnership with organizations that practice TNR, feral-socialization, and re-homing programs that put no-kill values first.
- My expectation is that they require try to find their owners if possible, if not that the cat is fixed, medical treatment given and re-homed, moved to acreages for feral cats
- Be fair and judge by the case.
- I would like to see heavier fines for cat owners. Not just a warning either! Make them think twice about letting their cat outside! I called about getting a cat trap but couldn't afford the insane amount to get one! Make it free. Why are responsible pet owners paying for irresponsible pet owners!?
- More support for those dealing with roaming cats is necessary. I've used the cat trap available several times, but it's a hassle picking it up, baiting it, checking it regularly, and then delivering a cat to Animal Services. Sporadic or threatened action similar to this by officers would help.
- I think people who let their cats wander should be fined
- Deal with complaints only. Provide education to communities with known feral cats ( wild animal) and how communities coexist
- Trap, remove, and fine repeat offending owners.
- All should be caught and be brought to a shelter. Ones that have owners should be ticked.
- To intervene where required to ensure the health and safety of cats.
- For the City to recognize that cats roam by nature and are not trainable the same way as dogs and do not pose a threat to public and therefore should be allowed to roam out of the home
- Feral needs sterilization...roaming cats are harmless
- To monitor the situation and identify a threshold that will require intervention .
- I would hope that they are not being harmed.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Support for TNR programs as this is the only effective and humane way to control feral cat populations.
- Trap, spay/neuter and release.
- Due to concerns for their safety, the health of our environment and belief in personal responsibility for the animals we choose to keep, I believe that cats should be kept inside or on a leash outside. Change the law.
Also, put down feral cats that have no people skills.
- Encourage people to be responsible pet owners.
- Look to other cities to see what works to keep the population low. Discourage people from feeding them.
- I feel that heavier fines for irresponsible cat owners might deter them from letting their pests roam free. Unfortunately, I cannot afford the renting fee for a cat trap so I just let it go. I talk to my neighbours about the bi-law but they could care less, sadly.
- the city of Calgary needs to support neuter-trap-return programs to keep the cat population down. Feral, stray , and roaming cats are a problem to wildlife
- Implement stricter bylaws reducing amount of returns of cats to repeat offenders who allow thier cats to roam, all existing clinics/petstores to house cats until rehomed
Do not allow pet stores to buy/sell from breeders
Volunteers for identified feral communities in all quadrants
- I expect them not to be put down! I expect stray/roaming cats to either get help to get back home, or be adopted out. Ferals should be trapped, fixed, then released.
- Enforce bylaw for stray cats
Educatee people who take care of feral cats
- - Capture them
- Good job
- Education
- Not seeing them as a nuisance
- Attacks wildlife
- Some communities
- Not seen
- Feral Cats - if you've got cats who aren't being looked after and may be carrying disease. If they're not managed, could they become like rats? Could be a big cost. I expect the city to control feral cats
- That the city will treat these animals with compassion. We should co exist with these animals.
- Appropriate Trap Neuter Return programs should be made available to ensure that feral colony sizes can be controlled. Any friendly stray cats should be sent to a shelter to be rehomed. Roaming cats bylaws should be that cats MUST be contained within owners property.
- It would be the same as dogs...collect them (fine owner, if applicable)
- Spay/neuter, disease control by having vaccinations program for feral colonies, fines for owners who let animals intentionally roam without proper vaccinations/sterilized sexually.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- I think that the city should impound stray, feral and roaming cats. If the cat is proven to be part of a colony that coexist with the community, alter their sex and return to that colony.
- Actually enforce the bylaw. There is no consequence for ignorant owners who break the bylaws. Add more cat traps to city's lending program-have been on list 2 summers without getting one. Tie complaints (whether or not fine resulted) to licensing fee.
- Licensing cats seems to have made owners more diligent about keeping their pet inside and hidden from bylaw. Dogs are always top priority. More affordable sterilization
- Trap, neuter, and return feral cats to their colonies. Catch strays and try to rehome them. Trap and fine the owners of roaming cats - they are a huge nuisance to responsible cat owners.
- Don't want them to suffer so would like people to help care fore them. Would like spay neuter programs
- Help find the owners and if non help find proper homes.
- Be humane. Attempt to find owners of stray and roaming cats, possible fines for roaming cats that haven't been neutered. Return feral cats to the wild if possible.
- An increase in by-law officers would help.
- TNR
- Feral cats should be acknowledged as a reality in our community and need protection. I believe our City should support T-N-R (trap-neuter-return) initiatives to humanely manage feral cat populations.
- Continue the programs in place to encourage spaying and neutering of pet cats. Keep rules that cats stay on property and the few that live as feral are not a huge issue.
- I would like the current bylaws enforced more actively, and for cat owners to be made aware (educated) on the impacts that roaming cats have on wildlife.
I would also like the city to consider a mandatory spay and neuter program for ALL cats in the city.
We do not more more cats.
- I don't expect anything. There are plenty of agencies that accept cats to rehome. Stay out of it.
Always about the money
- More effort to rehabilitate/re-home captured animals, more effort to educate the dangers of roaming animals
- set out traps when requested, if it is a bylaw it should be treated as such, and not told 'nothing to do about it' when calling to complain about the cats on the streets
- -Ensure rules are followed/enforce
-capture as required
-spay and neuter those captured
- Complaint based service is best.
- Cats should be subject to licencing and rules the same as dogs.
- Spay or neuter. Any animal that is a descendant of a domestic animal should be spayed or neutered if they are going to be outside. Obviously we can't round up all the ferals or strays and do this, but as they are collected it could be an option.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- None - the cat bylaw has not been well advertised or enforced. My neighbors almost all let their cats roam free.
- We need to provide a free of charge spay and neuter/ education programs. Catch and release or adoption to good homes to stop this cycle of people breeding cats or letting there cats outside to get pregnant, have kittens, give them away, and repeat. To many need homes.
- owners that let their cats roaming at large should be fined.
- The fines/punishment to the owners of roaming cats needs to be increased/harsher. This has been a regular discussion on my community FB page with several owners of roaming cats expressing that they don't care about the bylaw or their neighbours and will continue to let their cat roam regardless.
- I think feral and stray cats should be taken to animal shelters. I think the city of Calgary needs to do a better job of educating cat owners to not let their cats roam. Fines should be tougher.
- TNR, provide food and care/housing for them.
- Respond to nuisance reports, educate owners on the rules around roaming cats.
- If the animal is not causing any problems, or not in distress, leave them alone.
- Stray or roaming, if an owner is identified, should be educated and/or fined. They should also be spayed or neutered if not already. Feral cats should be spayed/neutered and released to a safe environment.
- Educate and hold owners accountable. Nuisance feral cats should be trapped, spay/neuter and transferred to rescues for farm mousers.
- TNR when able, help owners afford spay neuter programs ; especially if cats have been picked up stray, but also do everything possible to get that cat home again so it doesn't need a new owner.
- All cats must be contained in people's home. If they are roaming around - they should be picked up by animal control or significant fine should be given.
- Be a vocal leader to educate citizens. Be an active, supportive partner to rescue orgs
- Work with reputable animal welfare orgs
- The City needs to have a proper program for each of these specific categories. Volunteers would easily be found tp help.
- they are spayed or neutered and they have had their shots and vaccines before being released
- The City needs to fine more owners that allow their cats to roam. As far as stray and feral cats, that's a tough one as there are so many, and to spay/neuter them would be costly!
- feral cats = X
stray cats = catch and fine owners unless local neighbourhood agrees to cat roaming...special licence?
- An example is on my block, alone, there are 3 homes, where they allow their cats to roam. I reported one of them Animal Svcs, they sent a letter to the Owners, but, they Owners totally ignored it. Animal Svcs will not go an speak to the Owners and I think they should.
- Continue to bring them in to spay/neuter, feed and adopt out. Education is critical. My cat does not go out and he seems fine with it although he sees the dogs go out he doesn't try to escape.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- The city should treat free-roaming cats the same way as they would treat free-roaming dogs. It's unsafe for the cats to roam free, and it sends a message that cats are not as valued if they are not treated the same way as dogs. An exception to be made for well-managed colonies of feral cats
- This should not be on home owners to trap and deliver cats to bylaw. Fines for cat owners who allow cats to roam free. This could be warning first with escalating fines.
- Bring them back to their owners if possible, educate the owners of these cats and if not a fine that can increase for each mounting case.
- I would like to see the City put in bylaws that would not allow pet owners to let their cats roam free.
- Roaming cats should be treated like roaming dogs and picked up and the owners fined for letting their cats out. They will then say they escaped but again proper pet ownership and the would be a rare occasion
- Roaming cats should be treated like roaming dogs and picked up and the owners fined for letting their cats out. They will then say they escaped but again proper pet ownership and the would be a rare occasion
- I've had a few officers come about my cat that gets out. Some are reasonable and some are just on a power trip and are rude and unreasonable. Maybe a better screening process for these people?
- Trying to contact their owners if needed. Picking up any reported sick or injured cats and assessing them.
- NA
- I would like the city to let them be. Cats are not meant to be house cats. If people knew how much of a difference they make (catching mice) some would think differently. I would like to see some kind of program in general to help control the pet population
- Should be destroyed if they are too plentiful and out of control.
- I feel that it needs to be stressed that owners need to do everything they can to keep cats inside. Having a cat that would "dart" out was very frustrating for me as a cat owner, but I never let mine out. I've built cat runs. Feral cats should be spayed and released in a barn program where possible.
- Impound them and fine the owners.
- We would hope that the City could take measures to curtail the behaviour of irresponsible cat owners not to allow their animals to roam from dawn to dusk thereby allowing the animals to behave in an unsociable manner which can be detrimental to local wild life i.e. birds
- I guess the only thing the city can do is catch them and give them to the humane society to domesticate with a new and living home. Easier said than done though.
- I don't believe that the City should be held responsible, but they should respond to complaints.
- I would expect the city to be collecting these cats and dealing with them. Feral cats have come from people setting cats free. There is no reason those of us who do not own cats should have to contend with the damage or an aggressive cat in our fenced yards.
- Re-homing, and bylaws requiring spay and neutering if no proof of intentions to breed.
- Use city money other places.
- Not sure. Likely support and work with existing NPOs and Charities to help deal with them.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Stray cats with owners should be fined and removed from owners after repetitive offenses for risking their safety and well-being. City should allow people to report stray cats with owners by owner name, not only an address. currently it's too lenient and easily avoids fines. TNR support for Ferals.
- animal services does a good job of trying to reunite owners with their animals; owners that let their cats out need to follow the rules, but when they are broken, enforcement of rules needs to be a priority for the safety of the birds/wildlife and the cat;
- I expect them to be treated kindly and not just put down.
- Treat them as you would a dog
- The city should provide or supplement TNR programs for ferals, and promote better education on keeping "owned" cats from roaming.
- We need the City of Calgary to neuter/spay our stray/feral cats to aid the over population problem and the effects it has on our ecosystem. I would also like for more action in regards to cat owners allowing their cats to free roam, especially when they are not sterile/vaccinated.
- Patrol the streets and pick up any cats you see
- Try to assist if you can
- I support tnr programs to reduce the population of feral cats.
- Possible solutions would be a spay neuter and release program for feral cats.
- Same bylaws as dogs, no exceptions. Hold cat owners to account for their pets.
- I would like them to provide methods for capturing these animals to keep everyone, including the cats, safe.
- Calgary should have better low/no cost spay and neuter programs separate from vet offices, shouldn't matter what your income level is. It's the only way to deal with stray and feral issues.
- To work with local rescue agencies to help find them adoptable homes
- It's not their fault they are homeless it ultimately was a 'human' that put them in that position in the first place and then multiplies from there. Set up a program partner with Vets educate people, stiffer fines with mandatory lessons on caring for pets; psych evals for animal abusers.
- Humans need to take responsibility for their owned cats and not allow them to roam. Unfortunately we can't count on people doing this, so The City should place the same restrictions as they do for dogs.
- Education and penalties for owners of free roaming cats. Mandatory spay neuter for ALL owned cats unless medical reason or special license to breed. More access to affordable spay/neuter programs. TNR programs, education and compassion for ferals. Definitely NOT kill them!!!!
- The City needs to toughen the existing bylaw and enforce it! The City needs to collect stray, free-roaming and feral cats and deal with them humanely to ensure that native songbird and mammal populations are protected.
- Nothing
- Trapping and taking to the shelter for adoption after they are spayed/neutered, vet checked and vaccinated
- see above. Also, continue programs to spay/neuter feral cats; re-homing kittens if possible

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Humane practices - humane cat traps, spay/neuter, 1-chance-only warning to owners before levying a hefty fine
- I expect them to fund or at least offer support to TNR programs. I'd love for them to control people letting their cats roam too but I don't see how that's possible.
- Only to ensure they are neutered and if stray / feral, picked up when seen and dropped off at shelter
- capture nature, spayed and return to the outdoors
- Collect and assist feral and stray cats. Allow tagged/tattooed/chipped cats their freedom outdoors.
- Roaming cats are fine. Feral and stray ones may need to be cared for in a different environment
- The City of Calgary should concentrate efforts on dealing with feral and stray cats if they are causing issue in neighbourhoods. If the cat is licensed there should not be all the effort put into fining owners etc. because the cat is controlling mice populations and is not a threat to a human
- Owners of Stray and Roaming cats should be fined
- Owners of stray and roaming cats should be fined
- Not much
- Help citizens understand their responsibilities when it comes to dealing with any of these types of cats. Particularly the cats that are pets.
- With stray and roaming, I think they should be managed like any stray or roaming dog. Strays taken in and found homes if possible & roaming having owners fined. Feral are a different story and difficult to manage but spay/neuter program with an adoption option for those suitable can help manage.
- My expectations is to have the city work with rescues and feral colony providers to make sure all are TNR and kept healthy to live out their lives. Perhaps help find other feral colony providers so more colonies are TNR
- I'd like to see the city partner with rescue organizations and invest in trap/neuter/return programs to prevent the growth of feral cat colonies.
- No idea. With the feral rabbits maybe use a chemical contraceptive, same for cats.
- Feral -offer spray and neutering to control population growth. Roaming - offer better deterrents (ie higher fines) Stray - expand facilities to deal with the expanding numbers
- Every effort is made to reconnect stray animals with their owners. That non-profits working in animals welfare are supported through the city so they can work to manage these populations as well.
- Tag them and monitor them? Return to owner? Shelters cannot be overloaded either...
- To pick up the animals, or give guidance to individuals dealing with them. NOT to pass it along to another organization.
- All cats must be 'fixed' before being adopted out.
- Spay & neuter and perform health checks if possible. Keep feral cat numbers low in residential areas. I don't mind them, just don't want their populations to become an issue
- Use common sense

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- We need low cost spay and neuter clinics add less to the population and the feral and strays will decrease.
- Mandatory license and spay/neuter.....if none then euthanize
- i think that the city needs to pick them up. If they can be gathered, fix them and relocate them - or if there is a chance they can be adopted then even better
- Trapping and neutering. Fining owners.
- I don't have any ideas about how the city should deal with this.
- Stray cats should be picked up and rehomed when possible, roaming cats should be picked up and returned home, but repeat offenders should be subject to high fines or possibly removal of the pet from their care.
- Stop wasting time and money with roaming cats and help rehome stray cats.
- If the cat is seen and phoned in, it should be brought to animal shelter. If not phoned in, just left alone.
- Would hope the City would trap and try to help these Cats. Many of the rescues do trap and help these cats.
- None
- Perhaps only trap them if they are "caught in the act" of raiding a bird's nest. Otherwise let them hunt mice, gophers and (possibly) rats.
- Stray should be caught and owners fined
- I don't know what I should expect.
- continue with not permitting cats to roam free - it is safer for the cats and citizens.
- Provide more support to control the amount of cats roaming
- Given the numbers of free roaming cats in my neighbourhood over many years, I have low expectations the City of Calgary will do anything to deal with roaming cats
- Trap and euthanasia's.
- Trapping and re-housing with spay and neuter
- Attempt to capture and rehome, at least capture and spay/neuter
- Take control and enforce.
- A fully-funded Trap Neuter Return program for feral cats. They should make every effort to reunite owners with roaming pets where possible. The enforcement of strict penalties for allowing cats to roam/ abandoning an animal.
- I expect the city to keep picking up caught cats and giving them proper care and into responsible homes. One of our pets was a very injured cat that Animal Control captured and offered vet care to. He has been a wonderful addition, and given the serious nature of his injuries, wouldn't have survived
- Focus resources and processes on animals in need and addressing feral cat populations.
- Please catch and (re)home stray and roaming cats. Sterilization programs for feral cats have worked well in other municipalities and could be tried here if needed. Please don't kill feral cats.
- Euthanize nuisance cats that can not be traced to an owner.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Feral and stray would need to be contained by the city but a roaming cat would be the responsibility of the owner
- Stricter requirements about outside cats which first step would be more education. Education that helps pet owners understand the rules and commit to following them (easier said than done, we know). That will help their pets safe and content - and keep others' pets safe and content.
- Do something ? Do more
- It seems that the onus is on the public to capture these cats and then turn them in to the City of Calgary.
- Ticket offenders and provide traps where needed.
- Encourage the public, lending of traps and taking the cats once trapped. I think the city has a responsibility to euthanize any unadoptables and adopt the rest out. It's not good enough to sterilize and release them. They're still a vessel for sick individuals to torture. And, a predatorfood source
- Feral and stray should be caught, vetted and rehomed if possible. Roaming cats should have owners having more accountability to keep them inside and safe. Too many cat owners act arrogant about this. Licensing a cat and following laws should be equal to a dog owner.
- TNR including educating public
- All cats should be scanned for any ID, or have thier tattoos checked. If they pop up, those people should face a fee. If it happens often, the animal should be taken away. Stray cats should be taken to shelters.
- Don't classify them all as feral..some are displaced or abandoned..no fault of their own ..help find safe homes
- They enforce the rules and do not wimp out when talking to the owner. They also take the person making the complaint at face value.
- These are still living creatures no matter what the city thinks of them, so they need to be treated kindly and gently by qualified workers no matter what.
- if they do have ownes it would be great for you to get them back
- They should be removed and either rehoused or kindly euthanazed
- I like a catch and release spay/neuter program.
- I'd like to see a municipal campaign to identify & treat feral cats at least once a year across the city...a 'save-a-cat weekend' all Calgarians can participate in.
- City bylaws must strongly encourage greater control by the owners of free-roaming cats.
- I expect the people who own cats that are permitted to roan free or go and leave their kitties because "they are no longer cute" to get fined, and even not be permitted to own a cat after X # of infractions. I am not sure what to do about the feral population...
- If they are healthy, DO NOT euthanize them. Either fix them and let them free again, or find them warm and healthy homes or farms.
- No expectations
- I expect that stray and roaming cats will be picked up for their own safety, and that feral cats can be relocated. Owners of roaming cats should be fined.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- The City should enforce the by-laws regarding roaming cats, provide shelter until adoption for stray cats and support TNR programs for feral cats.
  - Cats must be treated humanely and given every opportunity to be returned to owner, rehomed or surrendered to a cat rescue if possible (preferably spayed/neutered). Owners found to have abandoned the cats need to face heavy fines.
  - Many places have catch, neuter and release programs that work.
  - I think the city should be working with rescues to ensure stray and feral cats can be worked into adoptions or barn cat programs. Pet owners should have penalties that go up based on repeat offenses. It should be stressed that outdoor cats and nuisances and cats should be indoors if not on a leash.
  - I'm not sure what exactly can be done but I feel like it should be taken care of.
  - trap them
  - at least spay/neuter them. if not feral should attempt to adopt. feral could maybe be returned once spayed/neutered
  - Mandatory spay and neuter of all cats
  - I expect them to pick the cats up and return them to in pound where they can be assessed and moved on from there.
  - capture and deal with
  - Stray/roaming cats are at risk from urban wildlife and people. More consequences for owners who do not properly care for their pet should be considered. Not spaying/neutering is a big issue with cats (and letting them roam) - I love cats but I don't love irresponsible pet owners.
  - I appreciate the service provided, when my cat accidently got out I was relieved that there was a safe place for him to go if found. Fortunately for me he came home on his own and all was well.
  - capture and cull, or allow citizen to
  - Unsure as I am not completely sure what they do now.
  - There should be higher penalties for roaming cats. There should also be more awareness for the cat bylaws.
  - Keep the feral population under control, continue providing compassionate care and adoption services to stray and roaming cats. I think The City is doing a fantastic job!
  - Hopefully a rigorous spay/neuter program will bring these populations under control
  - Catch and euthanize only when presenting a problem.
  - Pick them up as soon as possible.
- Everyone knows cats are not allowed outside of their owner's property. A steep fine should be issued for the cat owners who consciously make the decision to let their cats roam the neighborhood.
- I would hope that the city would incorporate this into the bylaws, educate the public that feral, stray and roaming cats is against the bylaw and then enforce the bylaw for the protection of the public and the health and safety of the cats.
  - enforcing the bylaw for cats to be on the owner's property

- Feral cats - trap, neuter/spay and release. Stray/Roaming - if reported more than once, capture, read microchip and contact owner of record. If no owner, spay/neuter and adopt out.
- these cats should be taken to adoption etc.
- I expect that they will deal with these issues humanely, with things like TNR programs.
- None
- To rehome feral cats, Fine the owners of stray or roaming cats with fines that would prevent this action in the future. Stronger enforcement abilities for peace officers that have been informed of pets about. I knew a guy that would get a small fine for his 3 cats and laugh it off as a joke.
- Make a law that if you let your cat roam free people can press charges if anything damage or eaten. To suggest to leave the cat on the leash so no damage is done but they can still be outside.
- take them to a pound
- sAVe ThEm
- To have animal control and be able to put them in shelters
- To help them get a home if they're not feral.
- manage the health and wellbeing of public and public spaces, control feral cat populations
- I'm not too sure how the city does it now, but fort mcmurrays animal control will pick up any cats left roaming and release them with a fine. The same should be done here maybe
- they should be collecting them up for owners to collect from pound
- The cats will be removed. If they can be re homed that would be fantastic.
- None -establish a few areas to provide food/shelter/water and I bet they would gather in those places. People could watch. There must be some semblance of oversight re: disease control which would be easier if they congregated a few areas. The water could have medicine added. Calgary can be a leader!
- Trap, euthanize as necessary, attempt to return tagged pets to owners and warn or fine them
- I wish there was a program to spay/neuter and vaccinate feral cats but I do realize the cost would be very high. I'm not sure what the answer is because they just keep breeding.
- Capture, spay or neuter then attempt to rehome
- Heavier fines, euthanasia of feral cats
- If anyone complains then collect the animal, otherwise leave it alone.
- Leave roaming cats alone. Help reunite strays with their owners.
- Unless the cat is problematic, nothing. I also think people shouldn't care so much simply that a cat has walked across their property.
- Assume every cat brought in is an indoor cat who escaped. Get 1 "get out of jail free" pass along with educational materials on indoor vs outdoor cats and spay/neuter stats, require microchip to go home, if the City ever gets that cat back fine the crap out of their owners.
- I don't know what the best approach here is. Ferals need to be sterilized. Strays ideally would be trapped and put into rescue programs for rehoming. Roaming cats trapped and owners fined.
- Animal rescue
- More needs to be done

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- I expect the bylaws to be enforced, and would like to not have to deal with cats of any kind on my property.
- Nothing
- Catch and alter, then look for homes.
- Harsher or at least uphold the same policies you have for roaming dogs that you do for cats
- Feral cats should be humanely euthanized. Fines for stray & roaming cats should sky rocket, as that's the only way to get through to ignorant people.
- To handle them in a humane way.
- the City should bugged off and worry about getting spending under control
- Mandatory sterilization and tattoo/microchip of cats brought in to Animal Services before returning to owners.
- Don't allow people to have outdoor cats.
- They need to ticket owners of roaming cats - my neighbor has 3 alone.
- roaming cats should not be permitted
- handled humanely
- Trap and neuter programs. Fines for owners of cats found to be roaming and can be traced to a specific household.
- enforcing bylaw to cat owners. assistance with animal pickup, if a stray cat is reported. feral cats could be treated as general wildlife or control breeding, if possible.
- Support from The City when dealing with them on private property.
- They should be collected by a bylaw officer
- Trap neuter clip release
- The same rules should apply to cat owners as dog owners. Issue fines as necessary.
- It is impossible to restrain cats to your home or property if they came from the streets, they should be allowed to roam.
- We should be able to call the city and have them trap the cats. If it turns out the cat is a stray or roaming, then the owner should be required to pay a fine before getting their cat back. If they are not claimed, then they could be adopted and if that are not adopted, they should be euthanized.
- Compassion and human decency. Leave them be or humanly capture them and provide care and re-homing services
- I m not sure - people who let their cats roam probably don't care because they know they will likely never get in trouble for it. Maybe more City places cat traps in areas that are of concern - or I assume home owners can place cat trap on their property so would make that easy to fo
- I expect the city to continue becoming like a jail
- Spay and neuter feral cats. Rehome or return home if possible.
- I expect the city to support groups like the meow foundation and ensure that those who adopt animals understand the responsibilities that come with it. I expect the city to discourage if not punish animal abuse.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- I would like the city to educate people about spay / neuter. Offer discounts / funding for spay / neuter. Or make spay / neuter mandatory without some sort of breeding license. Have trap, spay / neuter & release program for feral cats. Significant penalties for abandoning an animal.
- The city takes reasonable care dealing with roaming and stray cats, and attempts to home (if possible) feral cats.
- Licensed or microchipped cats should be returned to the owner with fees incurred if there are successive captures of the same animal. Strays and feral cats rescued, assessed for health, spayed or neutered. Feral cats would make excellent farm/barn cats
- I expect the city of Calgary to set an example to Calgarians that animals must be treated with respect and compassion. It increases my confidence in a city that treats animals well and shows a high ethical standard.
- Capture
  - Spay and neuter
  - Try to adopt out
  - Euthanize only when necessary
  - Make proof of spay and neuter a necessity of pet ownership
- Trap, spay/neuter, adopt. Humanely euthanize those animals that cannot be put through that process.
- That the Bylaw Office can discuss the issue of a roaming cat with the pet owner, as appropriate.
- Levy fines to irresponsible cat owners who allow their cats to roam to deter them from this behaviour.
  - Cull feral and stray cats to prevent wild cat populations from growing.
- Spay? Place in parks to control pests? Rehome to farms, acreages as pest control?
- They should be caught and euthanized humanely at once unless an owner can be determined. If an owner can be found, they should be fined for allowing the cat to roam. Fines for repeat offenders should be sufficiently high (and sufficiently well communicated) to deter irresponsible ownership.
- As sad as it is to say feral cats ought to be put down.
  - Stray cats need to be adopted if possible, if possible returned to owner and owner fined if necessary
  - owners of roaming cats need heftier fines. Mandatory microchipping at owner expense and education of risks when the pet roams free
- As pets have to be licensed I would expect the City to enforce bylaws related to cats more stringently. Additionally more strong regulations related to spaying and neutering pets. While your pet should be confined to your yard, if it gets out and is able to procreate, it just exacerbates the problem
- Strong partnerships with local animal organizations to engage in evidence-based treatment. For example, TNR, contraceptive and feeding programs etc. Strong public education surrounding feral cats
- I think people who let their cats roam should get fines. Or not be pet owners.
- I believe our city should have a Community Cat program. In no way, shape or form should they be trapped and euthanized!

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Owners must neuter their cats and keep them from roaming freely. Stop people from breeding their pets by implementing a license program and limiting how many cats may be breed.
- Pick them up to rehome as needed
- Catch and vaccinate, spay/neuter.
- Strict enforcement of city By-laws and providing of readily available and return of animal traps. Also removal from By- laws of the REDICULOUS onus on aggrieved neighbours of having to go door knocking with the aim of identifyin scofflaw owners and having to face them in court if they are prosecuted
- If I know where the cat lives and the home owner continues to let their cats out after I have spoken with them, then I would hope an officer could attend and speak with the owners.
- You should not be allowed to have your cat in the city roam outdoors.
- I had big issues a few years ago with stray and feral cats in my yard. I was surprised that the City wanted me to catch them myself, put them in MY car, and bring them to the shelter. I would never do this. The city should trap them.
- None. Perhaps if there was an issue with population control but I do not believe that is an issue at this time for the City of Calgary.
- The city of calgary should fine the owners if they can find them.
- Fines to owners who allow their cats to roam free.
- make the owners responsible in whatever way you may and can.
- Respect, kindness and ensuring the animals do not suffer emotionally or physically handle with kindness not rough or harsh as I have seen. Try to re-home. Don't people to trap cats as some then leaving them to dehydrate, starve or exposed to die, ban trapping by residents.
- There is a huge difference between a feral, stray and roaming cat!!! Most house hold pets won't run from humans and should be left alone. Strays and feral cats need to be altered to keep population down.
I actually think all cats should be altered unless they are being bred.
- People who let their cats roam should have a stiff fine and if not licensed perhaps have the cat taken away. It is hard to trap these cats and also the feral cats and many cat owners do not believe the cats should be kept indoors. When a complaint is made for roaming cats I believe the owners pay
- I expect that Animal Services would provide me with a trap if a feral cat were entering my yard, and that I could be confident that the animal would be spayed or neutered and then set free to live what would likely be a fairly short life.
- Educate owners to love animals say they are a part of us . Animals are not a nuisance.
- People should call in feral cats more, and be more aware of what they're seeing
- Maybe the city should designate land to animals. It seems like the governemtn puts more and more responsibility on people to volunteer. It would be great if the city could give some money for animal charities
- Uinsure. Not really the city's problem
- I think you should heavily fine the owners & seize the animals

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Owners should be fined. More staff should be provided from city to fund it.
- When they get the cats off the street and treat them/their infections etc. instead of leaving them how they were found sick
- - Trap and spay & neuter and try to find homes.
- - Trap and put them in a shelter
- Have the city of Calgary have traps and then trap them and spay or neuter.
Trap and take them to a shelter, no kill
- To deal with the problem, to help find them homes reduce population.
- Feral cats should be part of the trap and release programs.
- Leave em alone. They help control the rodent population.
- They should be picked up and put in an animal shelter or destroyed
- That they will not euthanize them.
- None.
- Providing cat traps to home owners.
- They should be TNR and provided with food and shelter and necessary vet care
- Ownera of roaming cats fined.
Strays caught and rehomed.
Truly feral see above
- Trap, spay/neuter, attempt to find home
- spay/neuter, vaccinate them when you spay/neuter them, kittens can be trapped, spay/neuter vaccine and adopted out
- Not sure what to add here, I just would like to see more cats kept indoors or on harness then I do see. I can't walk my cat on leash without being harassed by free roaming neighborhood cats.
- Pick them up the street, spay/neuter, adopt them out if non-aggressive.
- I would love to see a trap, spay or neuter, and release program for freaks. For strays, continue to adopt out adoptable cats. For roaming, owned cats, fine the owners. Increase fine for subsequent offences. Continue to require licensing of cats.
- Catch and rehabilitate whenever possible. If rehabilitation is not possible, then neuter/spay and release back to their colony while ensuring there are adequate protections in the community so they have appropriate shelter and food in winter. You can work with communities on this.
- The city should be showing up to deal with strays, find the resources and do not push the burden on to other agencies
- I expect the city to enforce stricter bylaws surrounding these concerns and educating the importance of safety for cats and appropriate indoor stimulation to the public. I expect the city to use all resources from the humane society, aarcs, meow etc. Expansion of city animal services is needed!
- Respond to feral or suspect stray
If id then contact owner. If repeat Rainer/stray - nothing as if you fine people they will not pick up their animals
- To capture, rehabilitate as necessary and find homes for them.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- More patrols to pick up cats and to ticket owners who let their cats live outside
- Manage them. Might be tough to get them all. Like the cat traps available currently from bylaw.
- I would love to see the city implant a TNR (trap neuter and release program) instead of the destruction of these cats. It is not their fault humans have been irresponsible about spaying and neutering their pets which has heightened the situation
- Consult with strategic stakeholders for public messaging on link to wildlife
Pick up service similar to stray dogs
- The city should have more trapping efforts and higher fines for offenders.
- To make sure they are placed somewhere safe (Shelter) and to make an effort to contact the owner if possible.
- TNR program for feral cats, low cost spay/neuter for families that need it.
Returning roaming or stray cats to owners, providing permanent ID (tattoo or microchip) if they do not already have it in order to increase chances of reuniting with owners if cats get out again.
- I expect feral, stray, and roaming cats to be treated the same as loose dogs. They should be collected by the city to ensure their safety. The city should provide traps to help citizens to trap a loose cat.
- Feel City of Calgary should step in when requested. The "ideal" response of us contacting/communicating with neighbour about incident isn't realistic. Will create bad blood, have already tried this. won't again, but every request made to C.o.C. personel is met with essentially deal w it yourself.
- If they are feral then for human reasons they must be put down.
- To enforce the bylaws & fine offenders
To educate to ensure the animals are properly cared for
To educate on bylaws
To manage the licensing/fines which should cover the cost of the program.
- To inform owners of their responsibilities when it comes to roaming cats and then to enforce rules through ticketing
- Unfortunately, no alternative but to destroy them. A cat owner who truly loved their cat, would keep it in the house and not roam around.
- Trap and adopt out cats. Don't tell citizens to do it themselves, have the animal bylaw officers help with the problem.
- consult with strategic stakeholders for public messaging on link to wildlife
pickup service similar to stray dogs
- Use all pet license revenue to alter & reduce cats and will lower animal control costs. Work with all levels of gov't for stronger legislation; as abandonment leads to overpopulation. The cat crisis causes anguish amongst those at rescues, kill shelters & vet clinics who destroy healthy cats.
- For ferals - A humane, sustainable approach to reducing the feral cat population through TNR and providing vet care, food and water, and shelter.
For strays and roaming cats - educate pet owners about cat care and things like catios and be tougher about neglect and roaming.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- All need to be spay/neutered to control the numbers. Treat strays and roaming cats same as dogs.
- None. Let people allow their cats to go outside.
- Give all an equal chance to be homed.
- I would like the bylaw to stay the same, which is that they cannot roam free.
- Start ticketing roaming cats/owners
- Ideally, feral cats should be tracked or at least tagged by the city in the event one animal is creating a host of issues. Stray and roaming cats should not be tolerated and fined just as a roaming dog would be.
- Cats must remain indoors or be humanely euthanized.
- Pick up service similar to stray dogs.
Consult with strategic stakeholders for public messaging.
- The City should offer more help to residents who see neighbourhood cats that are roaming free. Some cat owners do not understand the rules. Printing the rules in community newsletters or in City mailings to communities would help.
- I would like by-laws to be enforced for stray and roaming cats.
- I have a problem with a cat for 3 years. I have tried to trap it with sardines but the cat is too well feed. I expect the City to catch the darn thing and then bill the owner for the expenses.
- Gather and re-home where possible
- I have seen an automatic spay/neuter process in other parts of the world that works quite well. Would like to see a similar policy in Calgary
- I would like to see more animals, with and without owners, spayed and neutered.
- Consult with strategic stakeholders for public messaging on link to wildlife; Pick-up stray service should be provided by City similar to stray dog program.
- Periodic catching of feral cat population. Spay/neuter any cat found roaming/stray, and place for adoption if possible. Euthanize those not able to be adopted.
- I expect that the City of Calgary does not over enforce bylaws against cat owners. I expect that there be clear, transparent guidelines on good reasons on when to call bylaw regarding a roaming cat to avoid petty complaints.
- They should be picked up. Cats should be licensed and chipped and when not either, a fine should be issued to the owner. If they haven't been spayed or neutered, then an additional fine issued that will be removed if the pet gets the surgery.
- Roaming cats probably captured if they are causing a problem and take them to Humane Society and try to re-unite with owner. Feral/stray cats could do the trapping but then what? Not easy (or desirable?) to try and find a home for them, hard to rehabilitate, especially when there are lots of cats.
- Trap-Spay-Release programs seem to have been designed to help reduce shelter numbers without attracting the negative attention associated with culls or euthanasia. To properly deal with the problem of invasive, feral and stray cats, cats destined for re-release into communities should be put down.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Keep the city streets tidy and safe.
- Wishful expectation: Enact law limiting pets to 2 and enforce bylaws. Eliminate feral cats. Actual expectation supported by personal experience: Nothing
- Honestly, there's not much you can do - It's just an ignorant, but very common mindset amongst cat owners. Somehow they seem to justify allowing my yard to be used as their litter box.
- Feral cats can not be adopted out, so a catch and release spay/neuter clinic can help decrease the population. Stray or roaming cats need to be picked up and owners penalized. More education is required so people understand you must register your cat, and the benefits of spay/neuter
- Neighbours have tried talking to cat owners about problems but are told it's too inconvenient for them to keep their cats in. They know the rules. They don't need education about the rules. They need consequences. Enforce the bylaws. Trap cats. Ticket owners when address is known / photo/proof.
- I suppose the expectation would depend upon the number/subject of complaints that are received in a given community. If there is an excess combination of cats roaming about where it starts messing with the bird population (except for nuisance birds) then an effort should be made to control the cats.
- How much money would be spent for this issue? Don't see the point, since for every dollar the city spends is translated to ten or a hundred times the real cost due to a top-heavy extremely expensive bureaucracy and ineffective city council.
- There needs to be stiff fines for people allowing their cats to run free and it should not be up to neighbours to trap their neighbour's cats in order to have something done about them. I don't know what the solution is for stray and feral cats, because people get so upset when there is any talk of removing these animals.

Wildlife

Co-exist

- Increased public education about urban wildlife and how to coexist with them and what to do when you encounter them.
- Education. All wildlife serves a need. Some species carry seeds and populate areas with free trees and shrubs, some eat ticks, which can kill humans. Don't encourage huge human population thus forcing species to scavenge from humans. Laws and education MUST change. This pest ideology is outdated.
- First of all, remove the designation of 'nuisance' from wildlife. Attitude changes are a good place to start when wanting to co-exist with anything, including wildlife. Then practical information and strategies on how to co-exist better should be communicated by the City.
- Kill them all
- Harsher punishments for people feeding city wildlife
- A better understanding of who to call with concerns and which group would be responsible for addressing each type of wild animal. Minimum regulations to ensure that wild animals are not being lured into urban settings posing a danger to pets, citizens and the wildlife

- Wildlife fences on major highways and roads, especially in areas known for deer, like in Ogden by the train yard, and Deer Run.
Some kind of wasp control program. Never in my life have I lived in a city with so many wasps! And they're MEAN here. People have serious allergies to wasps!
- More information about how to co-exist with various types of wildlife. There is information about bobcats and coyotes online but people do not really know about the prevalence or behaviours of most of these creatures.
- I am not so sure as I love to see diversity in the city and there are typically no concerns regarding wildlife in our city, except for coyotes that sometime attack dogs, and aggressive magpies and crows that nest in spring. For both of those wildlife animals the city should post more warning signs.
- Education of the public. Knowing when breeding seasons are etc. Who to call. Non use of poison as that enters the ecosystem.
- Education.
- Mandatory supervision of pets at all times- such as watching dogs in backyards and offleash parks, and keeping cats indoors or on a leash. Off leash unsupervised pets can agitate and injure wildlife, or become harmed themselves. They also could draw wildlife deeper into the city as they prey on pets
- We live so close to the mountains that this is just excepted, what everyone seems to forget is that the animals were here long before Calgary was.
- Magpies, mice, skunks, Wasps
- Calgarians need to respect wildlife. We are on THEIR land. Unless it is an invasive species I think it is pet owner's responsibility to be watching their pets and not the city's job to deal with any "nuisance" animal.
- Co-existing with wildlife would be easier if neighbors would take care of their property, including limiting places for wildlife to nest or providing resources such as food to wildlife. This is a responsibility for every Calgarian to participate in.
- We need to encourage more wild areas. Encourage Calgarians to cohabitate with these animals.
- MAYBE NOT BUILDING ON EVERY AVAILABLE PIECE OF LAND SO THAT WILDLIFE ARE NOT PUSHED INTO THE SUBURBS
- More funding and expansion of Wildlife Rehabilitation Center. More information about it circulated in the media, more engagement regarding the work they do. This will in turn drive more funding!
- Education for people. We moved into the animals territory, not the other way around.
- So tough, it's great we live in a city where large wildlife can exist.
Wasps/pigeons are a different story, feeding birds should not be permitted in urban settings, just feeding the bloody pigeons. Wasps are getting quite bad and I don't have answers to that.
- Bats should not be considered nuisance animals. Bats should be encouraged as a healthy and at-risk part of the ecosystem.
- Education about food wastage storage and impact of feeding or interacting with wildlife.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- Education of residents on how to deal with wildlife. I think there is a big disconnect between people and the right of way/space wildlife requires. Not feeding them and disposing of garbage responsibly is a big thing. Banff/Canmore is a good example of food/disposal control.
- People need to learn to co-exist with these, so called, nuisance wildlife. Can anyone say we have more right to exist than these critters? People need to be educated on how to keep their homes protected from wildlife "infestations" and their pets safe from attack by wildlife.
- I have no issues with any of these except for wasps and squirrels. People should be encouraged not to feed wild animals, as this makes them more likely to come closer to human habitation.
- More information on how to/how not to act towards these animals and how to peacefully live in unison with them.
- People need to realize that we have encroached on THEIR area and be more understanding, and smarter about where we walk and more humane.
- Educating people. That is the main source of issues with the wildlife we have in Calgary
- Animals that are a threat to human life should be relocated, for their safety not ours. The rest, leave them alone.
- Bats are Not a nuisance animal. They are major pollinators and aid in the fight against mosquitoes.
- Tracking the more common species that result in public conflicts and then using this information to identify if there are practices that can be implemented to minimize conflict. Working with wildlife organizations to develop educational guides to help citizens identify ways to minimize conflicts.
- Stop building in their habitats. Maintain large green spaces and corridors. Coexist.
- I believe that if people were more educated on the habits, needs and instincts regarding these animals, they may have more understanding for them. Fear and irritability are derived from ignorance.
- Public education about the dangers of feeding wild animals and consequence if found doing so (e.g., mandatory education program), as well as education about what to do when encountering wildlife. Enforcement of garbage pickup and property cleanliness (e.g., skunks go where there is garbage to eat).
- Education!! The animals were here first.
- the more the merrier. Calgary should have more intertwined greenspaces to allow wildlife to flourish and move freely. Nature will police itself.
- Our sprawl has led to increased conflict with so called "nuisance" fauna. Education is always a useful tool...
- To a large extent their populations within city limits needs to be controlled. For instance, if city living causes a particular population to be greater than it naturally would, the city needs to take measures to control that population (either directly or by addressing the underlying causal factor)
- more naturalized green spaces. More human education. Signage to not interact / feed wildlife in parks.
- Education. Teach the kids safety. Skunks and wasps have no place in the city and cause more harm than the other creatures in the list.

- Propoer park maintenance (cleaning up garbage and pathways)
- I think the City should be responsible for trapping and removing skunks.
- A culling of the magpies! They harass the smaller song birds.
- Skunks in Canyon Meadows was non existent 4 years ago, now they are everywhere, i think a controlled removal of them would be a great help to people and pets in the communities
- Proper understanding that we must co exist
- Keeping dogs on leash in natural areas, and cat indoors will help prevent unwanted pet-wildlife interactions. Calgarians need to shift their perspective, and realize that we do not need to control wildlife, but shift our behaviors to coexist without conflict. Healthy wildlife = healthy ecosystems.
- Humans quit leaving out trash that attracts wildlife into their yards. Most of these animals are NOT nuisances.
- I think more education is needed. People see them as pests but there are many ways we can learn to respect these animals
- Education - especially regarding coyotes - for people with cats and small dogs
- Honestly let them live their lives, we're in their home more than they are in ours.
- Leave them alone!!! Educate yourself, be vigilant and stop trying to destroy any of them. We lost the gophers behind my house for years due to eradication programs, they are just coming back. All animals deserve to live their lives with minimal human contact or interference.
- Acknowledging that we live in a shared environment, and that we can not mold the environment to just encourage human habitation. Our world will be more healthy if we can coexist with wildlife.
- Have city services provide removal or relocation of these creatures and their dens/nests if on a person's property or allow the property owner to do so.
- Education. we can co-exist but have to respect that they are wild animals.
- I think a lot of the problem is man-made due to the inappropriate storage of items that animals sense as food. Most of the animals listed are of an "ignore them and they'll ignore you" variety. Pets can be a "pinch-point" of trouble, as coyotes and bobcats would view them as prey.
- We only hear about these animals when there is a problem, A commercial ad like the one the city has for recycling would be great for people to know when these animals are most active and where.
- allow them to be. just that simple. proper containment of citizen's garbage to keep them out of yards etc. would help a lot.
- For a start, not labelling them as nuisance. For example, magpies eat dead squirrel carcasses, coyotes control the jackrabbit population, etc. Clearly there is a need to identify the values these species provide. Bobcats have nursed their young in my backyard with no issue. Nuisance?
- Only allow off-leash dogs in very specific and totally fenced in areas. Also do not allow any cats outside. This is where so many problems come from!
- Education yearly about migration and animal traits. What can one do to co exist with this particular species. Who to call if you feel the animal might be in distress.

- Education to adjust expectations is needed. It is not desirable to eradicate wildlife from the city. However, we need to take action when significant risks are present such as coyotes denning under the deck of a house or under rocks at a playground.
- I find Calgarians need to be educated on wildlife via commercials, Emax inserts & Calgary Newsroom, is the way go..the education should state what to do with each wildlife, what is considered a pest so as to exterminate them humanely & whom to contact/ph#..these commercials should be always ongoing..
- The city should provide homeowners with information as well as where to purchase or rent traps. They should have a list of reputable companies that deal with nuisance wildlife.
- People need to realize we live with these animals, and make adjustments to their own lives to accommodate. Don't leave food eat, don't go near wild animals. Maybe more workshops would help.
- I think Calgary currently does a good job at co-existing with wildlife. I think to be safe, it is necessary to keep an eye on small dogs and cats, even if they are in a fenced yard. The city can only do some much and their needs to be responsibility on the owner to ensure the animal is safe.
- How to deal with each species safely and how to minimize associated risk
- Education. Most people don't know anything about these creatures. Just leave them alone!
- It would be great if there were bylaws put in place to stop people from FEEDING these types of wildlife. The rabbits in Ertlton are out of control, digging under houses and porches, and people in the area still put food out for them. It's infuriating!!
- Many of these wildlife species become issues because people do not take care of their home and yard. Homeowners leave garbage exposed outside that attracts wildlife. Issues with wildlife would decrease if better bylaws existed for property care.
- A better policy. We cannot expect to live wildlife free within the city. However, if destructive the city should have a plan to step in and relocate the animal and their family, safely for the animal.
- 1)A bylaw on homeowners to keep their properties free of garbage that may attract wildlife.
2)Have lids closed on garbage containers.
3)If yards are attracting wildlife, neighbors can call into 311 and anonymously report
- Provide a species-specific resource document for each urban wildlife animal, similar to the current "Urban Coyotes" page, so Calgarians have tips on preventing conflict, keeping pets safe, and discouraging unwanted wildlife visits for these species; and highlighting the benefits of these animals.
- Calgarians should not be forced to "co-exist" with animals that are dangerous and spread disease. We don't live in the woods.
- Leaving wildlife alone, giving them as much space as possible and not having wildlife officers involved. Also keeping our pets on leashes and under control.
- Training for humans. Animals would greatly prefer to live in peace. We can live peacefully with all of them, but many humans need re-training, and re-exposure to nature. Also build urban natural environments supportive of animals, with clear signage for foolish humans.
- Education on how to properly coexist, with respect to keeping areas clean, personal space, and natural wildlife Behavior.

- While I do not believe that mice have any purpose in this world, I do understand that they are food for other species. We need to educate people (I know the City hates this approach) on how to deal with wildlife. Alberta Wildlife needs to be called when there are problem animals
- Less fear, more basic information & education.
- Something needs to be done about the green bins because it is a 24/7 salad bar for raccoons. Now I have raccoons, which are impossible to get rid of and the city won't remove them but it am not allowed to harm them.
- I admire how much green space Calgary has, and think that it is very important to keep up the per capita ratio for green space. I think more wild/ungroomed areas (like nose hill) will allow for nuisance wildlife to have their own space. I don't think there should be culls.
- Hopefully better knowledge about the roles they play in the ecosystem and the consequences of culling them.
- education
- It would be good to do some Humane birth control for certain species. Assistance relocating coyote dens so they don't get too comfy in yards Otherwise I don't have issues.
- Natural green space habitat where they can live in peace. Stop suburban sprawl
- I think we're doing well for the most part, but wasps and magpies could be dealt with more frequently.
- Allow the wildlife to come and go as they need. Make it punishable and harsher penalties for people who attack or try to disturb wildlife.
- Educate people so they understand when a wild animal is a nuisance or when they are just acting normal. Educate people to keep their pets by their side and not running loose in the Parks where they can fall prey to wild animals.
- There needs to be a culling of the coyotes. They have proliferated in the last few years and have moved into very urban areas. People should not have to worry about their pets in their own back yards and at off leash parks and pathways. Trapping and relocating of skunks
- Stop letting cats roam and ruin our ecosystems by destroying the bird population. Hold owners accountable for their cats killing/injuring wildlife like you would if a dog harassed the wildlife. You are doing Calgary's wildlife a disservice by allowing this to occur with out repercussion for owners.
- Being provided with a means to protect themselves and families, pets etc from being harassed by wildlife. Permit higher fences, links on installation of coyote rollers on fences. Look for ways to prevent denning in yards/under steps.
- More awareness campaigns. To have the city remove problem animals like skunks/racoons. Otherwise people take it into their own hands to kill/injure from lack of knowledge/hatred. To enforce the bylaw about keeping pet cats and dogs indoors/not to feed them outdoors.
- Relocation and removal of coyotes. Allow trapping of squirrels and rabbits. City could treat certain urban areas for mice and rats. Allowing trapping of gophers and killing after review. Wasps can be killed but bees should not be harmed.
- make fines for people that antagonize in anyway.

most of the pigeons are not wild. they are pets or flocks that people owned that have let them free. they breed and take over shitting on the community. Catch and dispose.

- Making sure roads and communities are clean, monitoring communities and possibly relocating wildlife what are close to homes
- Keeping Garbage picked up. Picking up dog poop. Being mindful of community alerts of wildlife in the area. Keeping areas cleaned up so there aren't any food sources. The wild rabbits everywhere are the bigger problem and they attract the bobcats and coyotes.
- Stop approving new communities - animals are coming into urban areas because they have no where else to go. Also you need to deal with situations like coyotes coming into in residential areas - once they attack a pet, something needs to be done because a human is next.
- Education on these specific rodents and animals. I think with better knowledge people would be able to better cope and interact.
- We need to get a solution for the coyotes in the city, too many of them are roaming free and you are hearing more and more reports of attacks on domestic pets.
- Quit ruining wildlife corridors! i.e. urban sprawl is impinging on these
- To enact LAW ASAP for the protection of all wildlife in Calgary. To NOT allow residents of Calgary to harm nor trap wild animals around their house. This is APPALLING as the animals were there prior to you moving in and it is the humans who are invading & destroying wildlife habitats for new areas
- I would like to say the skunk issue deal with the most and they are the most annoying
- Education is key to understanding the wildlife and co-existing with them. Many people over react to wildlife and put themselves and the wildlife at risk.
- Pushing predators like coyotes and Bobcats back to the outskirts of the city would help pet owners with yards feel more comfortable letting them outside without supervision.
- Making sure our garbage is all picked up . Weekly pick up of black bins for people who need it large family
- Education on how to co-exist without creating issues. Many people still don't understand about feeding wildlife, what to do and what not to do. Also providing information on how to discourage pests and deal with pests in a humane and sustainable way.
- Monitor coyotes.
- Stop expanding the city and taking their homes.
- Rabbit population in hawkwood is out of control. We have to deal with
- Rabbit population in hawkwood is out of control. Rabbits poop in the same area and is a health hazard. Eat flowers in garden I. Front yard
- Please work on pushing the coyotes out from the inner city. Too many pets and people are being attacked.
- Naturalize all municipal land, increasing hanitats. Develop property tax credit for those with naturalized yards. Start a massive levy new suburban homes; kill suburban expansion to reduce encroachment into ecosystems. Leave "nuisance animals" alone, give them habitat, Biodiversity is the answer.

- better Trapping and moving of creatures. Especially coyotes and skunks, sadly we are moving into their native areas but they do carry diseases and aren't very neighbor friendly.
- Leave them alone
- These are not nuisance wildlife, people need to exist with natural wildlife and not be the problem. Examples like the City of Calgary's green cart program has created an human caused food source for most wildlife. The smells from the program will attract more wildlife into the city
- Learn that we don't want to live in a perfect concrete box...education, appreciation, even wasps are helpful. Keep cats in at night and they won't get eaten!
- Hawks should be added to this list. Having to deal with them for roughly the past 4 years, it is frustrating that they are more important than our pets. We have a small dog and one summer we had to constantly go out with him in our yard with a bat for his protection. They are not endangered!
- Maybe some direction or even help from bylaw services. We have had skunks burrow in our foundation and needed help trying to get rid, even advice but we're told they were pests and I needed an exterminator.
- Fines for individuals feeding these animals that then leads to more problem interactions
- Education about the ecosystem, and the ability to relocate the animals if need be.
- I dont mind bats,skunks, raccoons etc. I RESENT THE HELL OUT OF THE FACT THAT THE CITY DOES NOTHING ABOUT COYOTES ATTACKING, & KILLING PETS IN 6 FOOT FENCED BACK YARDS. I'M EVEN MORE IRATE THAT NOTHING IS DONE ABOUT PACKS CIRCLING AND STALKING PEOPLE IN THIS NEIGHBOURHOOD. SERIOUSLY. DO SOMETHING!
- These are part of our biodiversity and shouldn't be called 'nuisance'. Change the language. We often create the niche where they then fit into. Or, they find our environment attractive as there is less pressure for good or carnivores.
- Skunk removal I'd badly needed in the north east.
- Gophers moles skunks wasps coyotes are animals that should not be within the city and should be removed. There have been to many cases of damage or harm to the animals and ppl
- wildlife/vermin/pests on private property should fall in the city responsibility. I have called about pests infestation (pigeons) on a neighbours vacant property and was told the city would not do anything because it was private property. Unacceptable because it impacts the whole neighbourhood.
- Keep corridors for wildlife. Education on wildlife and co-existence.
- better management of domestic pets
why are predators (coyotes, bob cats) moving into my neighbourhood? ?We have lived here for 21 years, lots of deer bunnies and quail first year predators magpies are terrible have chased robins and pecked fatally in our yard and garage
- Less encroaching on their habits. We have plenty of the above "pests" near us, but because they have a green space (near carburn park), we are able to cohabitate the area.
- STOP building where the wildlife live!! Educate owners buying where wildlife exists BEFORE they buy!!

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Quit allowing golf courses to be sold to developers and push more wildlife into residential areas. Residents shouldn't have to pay to trap skunks / other animals to have them located. The city should take care of it (especially when neighbours leave dog food and garbage outside to attract wildlife)
- Stop approving building permits which sub-divide properties when these subdivisions remove all green space from the property. When the city destroys wildlife habitats with a ring road, take that square footage and designate new parks in its place.
- I think people need to be better educated on how to react when they encounter wild life.
- Fines for feeding wildlife that bring "dangerous" predators i.e feeding the 'cute' bunnies and the then wanting the city to kill the coyotes that come to eat the rabbits because the coyotes or "dangerous". DO NOT FEED THE RABBITS!!( and leave the food out all over the lawns!!
- I have had no problems with wildlife.
- Quit building new neighborhoods on the outskirts of the city.
- less encroaching on wildlife space
- Calgarians need more education on how to coexist!! I have worked in wildlife rehab in Calgary for over five years, and the public does not have the information they need. Wildlife bylaws need to be taken more seriously by the public.
- Education and responsible waste disposal would go a long way. It was their land first.
- Mice and moles can be reduced in Calgary if we had everyone maintain their yards and not provide a haven for them. They attract predators, so if you don't want them in your backyard, keep it clean.
- Do not feed them or leave anything in your yard that would attract them
- Unsure
- Just advise the public to be aware of wildlife.
Gophers/mice...poison to control the population
- these animals become a nuisance when people don't clean up there yards and leave junk and garbage around to make it prime habitat for them to live in the city! I had a severe mouse problem due to my neighbor, not keeping his yard clean. called the city and they came in and cleaned part of it up!
- Education about how to coexist with different species. Safety information about what to do with encounters.
- An understanding of the positive impact all these animals have on our eco system. Calgary is a great city with many natural spaces at our doorstep, we need to protect these wild animals in order to keep the delicate balance in tact. Education is key.
- How about the ever increasing duck and goose populations? How about an open hunting season after the migratory birds have gone for the season. The rest of the animals you list can be dealt with on an as needed basis by someone in your office who has the ability to do so.
- Not providing human food and not to feed wildlife
- Education to the public. Public should not be feeding wildlife.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

June 29, 2020

- Some people can co-exist peacefully with wildlife and some people can't and never will. Unfortunately the wildlife will inevitably lose as we keep taking over and destroying their habitat. Kind of don't like the idea of calling all these species nuisances.
- Stop encroaching on the territories of wildlife. It's disgusting to see the sprawl of Calgary into areas that were once wild. If people choose to live in areas that belonged to the wildlife, they should be prepared for wildlife encounters. Kill the wasps though.
- Quit building new housing and other buildings in wildlife corridors.
- Leave green spaces alone
- Coyotes are here to stay, allow populations to grow old and we can adapt together. An older population should create less problems for us. Rabbits are over populated, we should allow more predation in our city.
- Humans need to chill out—their wild animals who lived here long before we did. We need to conduct ourselves in a manner that doesn't cause upset to wildlife (Eg, providing sources of food to wildlife, intentionally or unintentionally, staying away from denning areas, etc)
- Increasing the green spaces and encouraging wildlife corridors for the animals to go in and out.
- I often wonder about having areas or sanctuaries they could go to. Insects are also important wildlife.
Having wildflower meadows instead on grass in many places and growing more forests, food forests to feed all.
- Better education
- education and strategies, killing wildlife is not the answer.
- Quit over developing and chasing the animals out of their natural habitat. More education for people on how to coexist.
- We need to respect what wildlife lives in our city. We are in their space. We moved in their territory. We need to respect and love the nature that we infringed on. Please keep the space abs respect for the wildlife. Allowing farm animals in backyards is a big problem.
- Population control. Predator animals are getting out of control in this city. As the natural food sources become scarce the predators are turning to domestic pets for food. They are no longer afraid of humans and see us only as the holder of their lunch. I no longer walk my dogs as I dont feel saf
- Preservation of habitat, education
- Physically constructed barriers should be the only permitted control method to control/block access to areas where their presence is not preferred. No chemical control should be permitted.
- 311 assistance with advice for dealing with these creatures.
- Stop destroying their habitats and forcing them into the city.
- More compassion
- Have a better plan of action for coyotes
- A biodiverse and balanced ecosystem.
- Learning to live with them

- Clearly posted warning signs when danger exists in an area that is open to dogs both on and off leash
- That the city would help remove wild from residents home and relocate them safely
- Removing these animals from the city.
- In general not overly concerned. The city should control if they become too numerous and aggressive. If there is a big wasp outbreak please spray.
- City/bylaw needs to mobilize and be willing to remove skunks, coyotes, wasps, bobcats, etc. animals that are dangerous to family members (small children and pets) must be dealt with. Community members should not be afraid to go outside (walk/backyard) because of these animals in our communities!
- Less intrusion and use of wild spaces by people
- Most of these animals are only found in small numbers and can safely be ignored. Rabbits are however out of control and a plan needs to be put in place to address them.
- Coyote's seem to be more rampant and getting accustomed to humans. They are starting to stalk people walking their pets. My wife had one stalking her and my dog the other week in quarry park by the river.
- Cleaning of trash, mowing greenways will help with unwanted wildlife in mmost of the residential areas.
- Information packages on the animals and their roles in the ecosystem. Education should help us coexist.
- I feel since as humans we are intruding on their territory. Our homes/yards should be as nature friendly as possible without put ourselves or the wildlife at risk. There are things we can do to safely deter wildlife from taking up residence in our homes/yards. We need to educate ourselves!!!!
- Deter them from coming into neighbourhoods but allow them to live in non populated areas such as Fish Creek, Nose Hill Park etc. Education informing people to not leave garbage, food, seeds etc out to attract animals. When one animal increases its predators are sure to follow
- Education forums about how to live with these animals and re program people to see them as a valued part of the ecosystem and not pests. It also seems that reports of these animals that are causing problems do not get taken seriously which further angers people
- Let them exist. Home and pet owners should be aware
- Stop building into their territory. Set up more parks.
- Residents need to take better care of their surroundings...don't leave food out etc . Residents need to understand their surroundings and take adequate steps to co-exist without detriment to wildlife
- Calgarians need to realize that the animals were here first, we stole their homes and land. Be aware, ensure pets and small children are close.
Animals are more scared of humans, keep your distance and humans and animals can live in peace.
- Deers are also a nuisance, and they should not be fed by public. Wee live near Fishcreek park and the number of deers roamong in gardens and street is too high for the surface, and this is caused by the feeding by humans. It is an issue for gardeners and a traffic hazard.

- Stop destroying natural watering areas and forested areas for development- we have too many dwellings dittingh empty already.
- City is overrun with feral rabbits. thousands around cemetery at MacLeod trail and 34th. Auburn bay over run ... these populations need to be drastically reduced or eliminated.... not native to AB. Wild hare pop can stay...
- Wasp nests should be eradicated when found near public parks and playgrounds, aphids should be treated to limit attracting wasps. Wasps are the largest nuisance our family experiences in Calgary
- I'm not certain. As an owner of a 23lb min dog that frequents off leash parks I'm concerned about the increased sightings and aggressive behavior of coyotes
- More education about the animals, the dangers, but also the benefits they may provide. For example bats aren't nuisances unless they get stuck indoors. They provide natural insect control and are not likely to interact with people or their animals during the day.
- Understanding they were here first and we need to live with them...they have a right to live to
- Coyote control. There are way too many of them in residential area and they are aggressive and dangerous. I have been actively chased by coyotes in multiple different areas of the city while walking on paved pathways. Too many Bobcats now too. Both dangerous and too many around.
- Not enough garbage cans in Midnapore. Food waste is attractive to wildlife.
- More city trash cans cleaned more often wasps scare the heck out of me. A warning system of sorts for bobcats so people know to keep pets indoors. Bat boxes they provide excellent pest control! A city supported system for pigeons so they don't roost in weird places and poop everywhere.
- Information on how to proceed/act in different situations involving wildlife.
- Let em do their thing. Remove problem animals from the population as the need arises. Murder all skunks as they like to chase me.
- To stay away from the animal call animal wildlife for assistance
- Education that coyotes are dangerous. Keep kids and pets away
- education
- Exterminate the Mice, Magpies, Coyotes, Wasps & feral Rabbits.
Remove the Skunks.
The rest of the list are not a problem.
- I think when these animals impact quality of life city officers should intervene. Ie a large magpie nest causing havoc in yard
- Education about their habits and habitats
- Parks and education. But quality of life is key for the community. The ones that are deemed to impact quality of life should be relocated
- Stop robbing the animals of their habitat without giving them an alternative - like 'wildlife corridors'; realize that they were here first and are not on the loose' in a neighbourhood. Offer FREE informational sessions on the habits of the animals so people can learn how to relate to them.
- Ticket people who litter, feed or harass the wildlife.
- Provide education to the public on how to interact or avoid nuisance wildlife.

- People keeping smaller pets indoors or in super cages (allows movement and observation of nature in a safe cage space. ) if you choose to live near wildlife be smart and live WITH nature. Be responsible to the animals who used to live where your house is now!!
- I don't believe any wildlife should be considered a nuisance. Proper signage in areas where wildlife is spotted. Instruction for pet owners on how to keep their cats and dogs safe and what to do in the event of an encounter. Maybe literature on safe ways to interact. I am not sure.
- Better pest control measures (specifically magpies and squirrels) to keep the populations in check
- Please, please do something about the feral bunnies in Erlton, they are everywhere, hundreds of them, and they are absolutely ruining everything. These are domestic bunnies, not jack rabbits
- To stop the sprawl of Calgary. Calgary can grow up, and develop more within the borders we already have. We don't need to grow out abs take up more wildlife land.
- First and foremost these animals are not a nuisance. Treat them with respect. Educating people about how to and how not to interact with these animals is the first thing to be done.
- More fenced urban dog parks so you can go play without worry of having a coyote attack
- Providing education when animals are reported in an area, and as much as possible, leaving wildlife alone. Only taking action if the wildlife is an active threat - not merely by its presence (such as coyotes along roadsides, this does not call for action).
- More sanctuary spaces for these animals to safely exist or hide out in
No killing of them
Implementing things like bat houses or bird houses etc
Monitoring them from a distance
- More staff to respond to problems with wildlife.
- Balance with nature. An equilibrium of predators and prey to control populations. I think younger people have an easier time coexisting g than older generations that seem to want to shoot all wildlife in the city.
- Remove coyotes from the nuisance list. Coyotes eat small rodents and help us control rodent population. We can easily co-exist with coyotes by following leash laws, keeping cats indoors and cleaning up after ourselves by not leaving garbage out. How sad coyotes are on your list.
- an appreciation that we share our living spaces with other creatures and that these creatures improve our lives
- Suggestions would be to maybe start with slowing down expansion of neighborhoods without before examining areas to see if better off left as is
- More spraying for mosquitoes and wasps. They need to be killed to reduce their numbers. There's a rule to not kill magpies especially during mating season. Yet they can have eggs right where theres shops and schools. If one attacks me im attacking back. You cannot place a birds life above a humans
- Education improves our ability to co-exist. However moles, pigeons, and raccoons are invasive and should be eradicated.
- Learn to appreciate that Calgary is still a location where wildlife can find habitat and raise offspring. I cannot imagine a community devoid of the animals described in the above list.

- Tolerance for wildlife. They are not a nuisance humans are ignorant.
- More information and consistent messages about how to live with them. We have bats, coyotes, porcupines, beavers, deer, etc in our neighbourhood and we need to understand how to live safely with these wildlife.
- I object to the statement above:naturally occurring wild life is certainly not a nuisance and perhaps the problem starts with the city labelling animals as such.Bats a nuisance?All of these animals play a part in the natural ecosystem with the exception of (introduced species) pigeons. Education pls
- May be some dedicated wildlife only areas?
- To understand that most of these animals belong here and we should learn to live along side them
- The ability for homeowners and the city to be able to deal with nuisance wildlife, including removal and euthanization is critical. I point to the situation of the rabbits in Canmore and the racoons in Toronto, where the well being of citizens is being severely impacted due to inadequate control.
- They don't mention beavers that are taking down trees and growing exponentially. There are fines of people remove any park trees. We need to do more population control
- There is no place for nuisance wildlife in an urban setting. The health and safety of citizens, especially children is #1 priority. With increased pandemic concerns we cannot allow wild life that spreads disease and harms people. Coyotes and bobcats are becoming more aggressive and pose a risk.
- This wildlife is not “nuisance” wildlife. As our city expands and the move in on their habitat we are bound to have more encounters. Keep as many park spaces and natural land for them as possible and realize that we are the cause of this problem
- More focus on wildlife corridors through the City.
- city needs to do more about the coyote population. Coyotes are starting to infiltrate urban areas, and making it unsafe for people to walk their pets or have them outside. It is to be expected if you live near a wild area, but having packs of coyotes stroll through residential neighborhoods is bad.
- Stop building outwards, start building upwards. Education. Continue notices of breeding seasons.. Obeying leash laws.....
- Ability to discourage habitation in or near homes - capture dead or alive as they can pose a lot of issues - noise feces infestation home resale problems destructive behaviour towards home exterior n attic etc
- Providing more appropriate homes in park space for these animals, so they less often create homes on property. Not sure if this is realistic, I am thinking specifically of skunks and their love of creating homes under balconies.
- For coyotes specifically, we need a public education objective to teach us what to do when faced with them. What do I do when they approach my dog or myself in a park? what do I do when there is 3 of them? How dangerous are they?
- Respect. They're wild
- pest animals such as skunks and coyotes should be put down in residential areas

- Many of these animals become problems simply from garbage building up in alleyways. More steps need to be taken to remove these problem and toxic food sources. More suitable habitats that will provide escapes for wildlife.
- People need to stop feeding wildlife as it encourages the animals to stay as close as possible to our homes. People also need to stop littering as this encourages wildlife to see our homes as feeding stations.
- Education for people on how to avoid, respect, and if needed, safely interact with wildlife in the city.
- People need to be educated about the wildlife in Calgary. Understanding is key to co-existence. We are encroaching on their habitat and we have to accommodate their existence and right to life. We need keep our pets on a leash when outdoors or inside in areas where/when predators are present.
- Give wildlife lots of room if you see them. Do not feed wildlife. Keeps pets under control at all times
- Wild animals that present a danger to humans and licensed pets should be relocated or destroyed. That includes skunks. Magpies and rabbits are out of control in some areas and need to be destroyed.
- More information provided to residents about the native wildlife in the city.
- Nuisance wildlife should be removed at not cost to the homeowners. There is no place for skunks, coyotes, gophers, bats porcupines in a residential neighbourhood.
- Have more respect for wildlife because after all, they were here first. Build our communities with more green space and if there are certain species in an area, to inform those who live there to expect interactions as part of daily life. We need to protect our ecosystems and show we are caretakers.
- Education is key ie: bats eat so many mosquitos, skunks eat mice and wasps and will leave you alone, some animals that are considered "nuisances" are protected species.
- Coyotes, skunks and Bobcats should not be allowed to live in parks, they should be removed or killed as it is a public safety issue.
- More education to the population. We all need to co-exist. More signage for areas known to have such wildlife.
- better education as none of these creatures are inherently a nuisance.
- Education and empathy. Humans are more of a nuisance to the planet. Most do not want to co-exist with many of those mentioned in the above list and think they should be controlled or eliminated. We have all of these in our community and we get along just fine. Respect your neighbours. All of them.
- People leaving them alone
- The city needs to have some kind of resources to help the homeowner get rid of these unwanted pests.
- Do not allow people to feed rabbits in the City. This helps grow the population which in turn brings in more predators. Deal with the coyote problem with more than a fence and a note in a neighbourhood.
- Cooperation from the city and or fish and wildlife to help the homeowner get rid of these pests at no cost to the homeowner

- EDUCATION! Educate people about each species. Maybe more web articles shared across social media. Fun family-friendly or adult-only education nights and events. Fundraisers for awareness and donations to protect these species.
- I think it's nice that you are asking for public opinion, but the public at large is not educated in these matters. Please consult wildlife experts about this one, Veterinarians about Viscous Dogs, Ferals, Strays etc. People's opinions, thoughts and feelings should not trump science in any of these.
- Effective measures to trap and exterminate pigeons, large magpie flocks, domestic rabbits that have gone feral.
- I would like there to be a centralized source of information on sightings of potentially dangerous wildlife by area.
- Increased enforcement against individuals who harass wildlife. We are in a shared environment where it is possible to coexist.
- Attempt to keep populations under control by determining viability and survivability of the species.
- Coyotes are a problem in the SW due to fish creek but are increasingly moving into residential areas causing a huge risk to having your dog in your backyard. Or even going for a walk before work.
- Greater education on how to co-exist with the animals we share our space with. No wildlife should be considered a nuisance.
- Education
- Leave them alone, control overly aggressive wildlife.
- Culling of coyotes & skunks in areas where they have frequently caused problems and their numbers exceed one the area can safely sustain without being a nuisance.
- Some animals, such as raccoons are pests which can (and will cause significant damage) and need to be destroyed. Others such as rabbits can multiply to the point where they also cause damage. We live in an urban environment and aggressive animals must be destroyed. Balance is required.
- Awareness. Keeping cats and other small animals indoors.
- Stop expanding the city into their areas and destroying their homes. Educate people better, city people seem to have unnecessary fear of a lot of these animals. Some for sure one needs to be wary. We need to share sightings more we can take precautions for ourselves and our animals.
- Education and actually imposing fines when laws are broken. I am so tired of seeing off leash dogs chase coyotes and other wildlife or people complaining when coyote visits their neighbourhood drawn in by unkempt garbage. We need all these animals for a healthy environment.
- Stop feeding wildlife.
- When your yard is invaded by one or more of these animals, and you have pets, there are surprisingly few (none) resources to help you protect your pets and yard. Animals on the area are great, but we have to have resources when personal property is adversely affected.
- in our neighbourhood I find we co-exist well. I find the problem wildlife is Wasps, and I really hope we can keep Raccoons from getting a foot hold here as they will upset the eco balance. they are not natural to Calgary.

- There needs to be more education surrounding the importance and the role these animals play in the ecosystem and how to co-exist. We need to look at humane solution versus trapping/poison or culling.
- Knowledge of how to interact with them, and preventative measures (quickly removing 'roadkill' so it doesn't attract more animals), good garbage removal. Except for wasps - they're jerks - removal of nests when found is definitely a bonus.
- Give wildlife space , dont feed wildlife.
- RABBITS ARE NOT NUISANCE ANIMALS!                      Calgarians' must learn to coexist with all animals that call Calgary home.    If they wish to deter them from their household area then they must be educated on HUMANE and NON LETHAL ways
- KNOWLEDGE! Calgarians need to be aware of the role of these animals in the ecosystem and the common behaviours these animals exhibit. We are infringing on their habitat. We live near Fish Creek and have many of the “nuisance” animals come through our yard with no negative consequences.
- If the sign says 'coyote den stay away' people should stay away. If they get too close and the coyote attacks them or their dog, the coyote should not be destroyed. It was the humans fault and 100% preventable. This was their lands first and we invaded them, just like the First Nations.
- Better education, and website information on what to do if you are affected negatively by any of these. I haven't had any problems, but presuming one can always call 311.
- More signs if there has been an issue and other then that leave the wild life wild.
- Stop continually expanding the city limits & encroaching into their space. Harsh punishment for people that feed wildlife/leave garbage that attracts them. Relocation/culls of wildlife if necessary to control if they are truly a nuisance.
- Coyote are a pack hunter and pose a danger to small children and pets, city should be removing them to areas outside the city.
- Education, the animals were here first and we need to learn to live with them. Learning how not to attract nuisance animals, how to deal with them when you see them, not letting your pet off leash. People need more info on who to contact for different animals.
- Public information on how to deal with nuisance wildlife. Stricter bylaws being enforced about those who are irresponsible with their garbage as that's what attracts most of the wildlife
I personally don't have a problem with Magpies, crows, or rabbits.
- Culling populations of dangerous nuisance wildlife. Coyotes roaming my area has started to become the norm, not the exception and it's not good.
- Education campaigns!
Better lighting in high traffic wildlife areas, and signage for those who may not be local to the area, denoting the presence of wildlife.
- Not sure. This question would be easier to answer if you provided some examples or ideas on how things could be improved
- We have invaded THEIR territory. It's up to US to adapt.

- Bat houses should be encouraged, to fight mosquitos. Backyard chickens should be encouraged, since they're omnivores, and will help control mice. We should be allowed to trap and kill the rabbits and squirrels. They make it very difficult to garden.
- Stop removing their habitat and forcing them into ours
- Bylaw against feeding nuisance wildlife. Neighbor feeds the squirrels, they come burry their stashes in my yard, putting divits all over the backyard that I bought specifically so that my kids could run around and play, now they trip. Then magpies decend to eat the stashes and poop EVERYWHERE
- We as people have taken over in the animals territories. And they want to live, so increasing awareness for people of how to not attract these critters.
Kill all the wasps, but try to peacefully coexist with everything else.
- Not feeding wildlife, excluding bird feeders that have protective cages around them to prevent squirrels, magpies, and crows to access feed. Encourage homeowners to call information to access how to deal with nuiance wildlife. Have more engaging and effective by-law/wildlife officers.
- Help with removal of skunks from property. Have lived in Calgary for 44 years and have only seen skunks in the past 3-5 years. What has changed?
- Have more habitation available so the animals have less opportunity to travel into urban areas. Have more regulations to ensure food sources are not readily available so there is less desire to inhabit developed areas
- Let us use pellet guns on crows, magpies and seagulls. the rest are no harm.
Also, ""Newflash"", Wasps are insects, not 'wildlife'... [personal information removed]
- Have a dedicated hotline to give guidance for understanding of the species and if needed humane methods of relocation/deterrance or have professionals who specialize in humane methods come out to help.
- More waste receptacles in parks and on pathways. Signage in parks and on pathways. Education on cohabitation with wildlife.
- Let them be. It was their home first. If a larger animal becomes problematic it should be humanely relocated! Not killed!!!!!!
- Easy access to information about the various types of wildlife. Maybe signage on trails on how to interact with that wildlife. Recommended methods to remove them if they are in your home/yard. The impacts poor human behaviour has on the wildlife.
- Education on the specific dealings with those animals.
- A massive cull of coyotes. Allow bow hunting on nose Hill for coyotes for a select time frame. Allow more beekeepers to reduce the wasps.
- having proper information to deter these animals form being on or near their property
- For the city to provide more support regarding problem animals (capture, relocation etc)
- City should pick up skunks and replace in woods. Way to many skunks in communities now. Dangerous wildlife ie coyotes..wolfs, wildcats etc should not be allowed to roam streets, access homes. Need to be removed from areas.
- Public education on co-existing with wildlife and using ethical forms of wildlife control before heavy handed ones. change our behaviour, is control necessary, what is the goal/how to monitor, are we using humane methods, consider community values, long term plan/ prevention, rushed "pest" labeling

- Stop being stupid and just co-exist. Bigger brains would improve the ability because people wouldn't be as stupid and selfish.
- More education of the public so that people learn to coexist with wildlife and to understand the benefits wildlife provides.
- Better enforcement of bylaws relating to outdoor cats, leashes on dogs. More education regarding coyotes and Bobcats to minimize negative interactions, and to instill an understanding that it is the owner's responsibility to keep their pets safe.
- Larger undeveloped areas for wildlife so they aren't forced into urban areas as much. Stricter rules about garbage storage so there isn't a food source for them.
- You should add deer to the list. They eat plants etc that people have put in their gardens. Little buggers! LOL Also, we had a bear in the Lk Bonavista area many years ago, add them to the list. Really though, I think that skunks, raccoons, coyotes are the ones to worry about.
- Stop expanding into rural areas.
- prevent of leash dogs from harassing wildlife
- Signage and alerts about sightings of certain animals, for example if coyotes are present in an area. This allows dog owners to take proper precautions
- Homeowners need to pick up feces as coyotes eat them, this scent draws them into backyards and parks.

Coyote areas need to be marked with signage. Warning need to go up when they are becoming a danger to pets and people. This is the coyotes home , killing or culling don't work. Maybe catching col

- Reducing attractants, such as garbage and compost bins left outside. Many houses have no ability to keep the attractants indoors so either it needs to be picked up more often, or the containers should be more wildlife proof.
- The ability to call animal services if any of the above enter your yard or hinder the community. I am experiencing a problem walking dogs in parks where regretrfully coyotes and bobcats have had to migrate to. I respect this but it is also a safety for a person walking if the pack comes at you
- Education and tips. The answer is not to go around eradicating everything.
- Wildlife was here first. I am still outraged on how the injured deer was handled by police in Lethbridge. Yes accidents happen but a designated agency or Vet must be available 24/7 to properly euthenized a injured animal. Anyone not reporting should be fines. It's a new way of thing but it's the kin
- More awareness. This is a weird list of wildlife -- do we have any choice but to co-exist with wasps? Problem animals need to be dealt with, leave the others alone.
- Educate the public. What and how to limit our exposure to the larger of these. How to dissuade the animals from being a nuisance ie: quite feeding them ( mice,squirrels)
- Leave them alone.. I enjoy spotting them

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- More education on how we live with those animals in a mutually beneficial way. Make sure people are not using poison to kill wildlife.
- People need to be aware that wildlife is a fact of life. Don't approach, don't try to pat -- leave them alone!
- Population control (coyotes only). Coyotes have injured / killed more people than wolves / cougars / bears in Canada, not a lot of people but people should be aware.
- Controls on waste (such as eliminating open dumpsters) would limit the continual reinforcement scavengers get in populated neighbourhoods. Leaving pets unattended in yards leaves them at risk to predators.
- Changing the designation from a negative connotation, nuisance wildlife, to urban wildlife. All these animals perform important functions in nature, including an urban environment. Understanding the needs and value of urban wildlife is critical. This understanding is achieved through education.
- Education on how to identify certain types of wildlife and which could be potentially harmful. Reminders to keep pets leashed/indoors and safe.
- The number of coyotes in the city needs to be limited. Coyotes should be allowed in the major parks such as Nose Hill or Carburn. When coyotes stray into residential areas they need to be controlled as they can be a hazard to pets.
- Education! Why don't you put on your "Coyotes in the Area" signs that breeding season is Nov - Feb with Feb being the highest time and to give them space because they don't have many brains left come February due to hormones driving their lives for a few months?? People really have no idea
- Our neighbour keeps pigeons in his backyard and is registered with the pigeon association so bylaw can't do anything about it. We have a disgusting amount of pigeon droppings in our backyard and we know it is not from other birds as the pigeon racing has ran out the natural birds we used to have.
- I called about a coyote in the park by my inner city house and was told nothing could be done. How about relocation.
- Allowing more wild spaces within the city, education. Assistance through the city for non-lethal relocation of animals on property.
- Prohibit feeding wildlife, which encourages them to breed and stay in locale (ie. leaving peanuts for squirrels, leaving domestic animal food outside like bowls of dog/cat food). Actively track down and fine those who do.
- Manage the populations of the various animals. Example: Rabbits. As the rabbit population in the city increases so does the appearance of predators such as bobcats and coyotes. Pets such as small dogs and cats can also end up on the predators menu within the city.
- I have no issues with any of these nuisance wildlife.
- Better understanding on what to do when faced with them and options for if those ideas fail.
- Relocation of animals that are a threat to humans and pets.
- Respect the wildlife, in that they are here before us. We are violating their space. Do not allow any chasing or annoyance of any of the above mentioned wildlife.

These are not nuisance: they are a part of nature, and we need to co-exist with them.

- Fining people heavily who feed them. Our neighbours use peanuts. This attracts a lot of squirrels. They destroy my garden. I do not think bats are a nuisance. Educate people on bat houses. And help install them. I can't get high enough safely to install mine.
- Educate people on avoiding encounters, and leave them alone.
- EDUCATION! People living in neighborhoods near parks desperately need to be educated that it is NOT ok to let their dogs chase/kill wildlife (esp. Nose Hill/Egerts Park). They need to be educated on the circle of life eg. Killing rabbits causes depletion of Coyote's food and puts pets at more risk!
- I believe we should be able to coexist unless safety to humans is a concern. Most often Bobcats and coyotes will leave people alone. Bats help curb insects so not sure why they made the list. Unless there is an extreme over population of any species or there is a danger let the animals be
- Public safety is very important. Providing education and methods to controls the pests.
- Ensuring proper vegetation in park areas to keep wildlife there and not force them to roam within the neighborhood
- Have relocation services available.
- Bats are not nuisances, they are essential members of our eco system. The only legitimate nuisances on your list are seagulls and wasps, which cause harm to native species and compete with less bothersome species. Educate the public and instruct them not to interact with wildlife.
- Education of the public. They must learn how to understand the habits of and live with wildlife. They must also be educated as to how to live safely with wildlife.
- Stop endless development of new communities which encroach into the habitats of these animals. These animals are not nuisances. They play important roles in the ecosystem, bats and wasps eat mosquitoes and pests. Crows, magpies, porcupines, raccoons, skunks and coyotes are carrion eaters.
- Ability to trap, kill and or dispose of nuisance wildlife.
- As we encroach into their lives we need to respect their right to life, habitat and food. Calgarians need education and awareness programs via schools and media. Heavy fines for feeding these creatures.
- The number of coyotes need to be kept to minimal numbers. there are far to many and are a threat to pets and small children. They are everywhere including in my neighbours and my own backyard. One was stocking my small dog in the backyard. Also found 2 half eaten cats along the walking path
- Skunks are a HUGE problem in this city.
Ive never experienced anything like it elsewhere in Canada.
I haven't the slightest idea how to take care of it but, something has to happen.
- Some bats may be endangered, so educate people that they must be protected. Seagulls are considered migratory birds, and cannot be harmed. Make sure your City policies align with higher levels of regulation. All the animals on that list have a place in the ecosystem, leave the alone.
- Calgarians need to be better informed on the habits and needs of wildlife that are in urban spaces. Personally, I don't consider these types of wildlife to be nuisances any more than some of my human neighbors.. ....

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Signs to alert calgarians in areas of higher density wildlife. They live here too, encourage the idea that we could coexist well. And protect greenspaces and wild areas in the city where many of these creatures call home.
- None listed are nuisance. When mice in my house I blocked their entrance point, trapped the ones inside, never a problem since. I see coyotes crows magpies rabbits squirrels wasps regularly. I give them their space and they leave me alone. Solution: Leave them alone. Need them for our well being.
- Support from the city if wildlife provides issues in family property. Help removing a skunk
- Education for those who didn't grow up here. For example, don't approach a skunk. Or how to hang bird feeders to avoid squirrels or magpies. Or how to take care of an aphid problem so your garden doesn't attract wasps. For those who grew up with different animals, they wouldn't know
- Leaving their habitat alone
- Yes, signs need to be posted to advise people of what wildlife can be in the area so they can be aware and no surprises. Also, animals have the right to roam about and can appear anywhere so that cannot be controlled. Calgarians should be aware of this.
- Education on how to coexist with wildlife. If not desired education on how to make yards and homes less attractive for wildlife.
- We need to learn to live with the wildlife that we have disrupted their habitat with expanding our city. Keep the city cleaner and not leave garbage out. Keep your cats and other pets under watch so they don't become prey.
- No change required.
- Corridors for these animals to travel within the City. Easy to find information on how to co-exist and/or interact with these animals along with tips on how to avoid attracting them. Resources on how relocate if they become a problem.
- Pulling their entitled heads out of their butts and realizing the animals are just trying to survive.
- We have experience with unwanted rodents in our homes. As long as we provide information for our tenants to ensure doors are closed and they doing what is required to prevent rodents from entering the home that is all we can do. We just have to make our home less desirable than others...
- It could be better for everyone to keep more nature intact, to preserve the environment.
- People need to become more tolerant. It's possible to co-exist and they need to need educated that there are benefits to living with wildlife
- I think the city should help with relocation of these animals.
- In some cases, nuisance wildlife must be controlled. For example, my neighbourhood is overrun with rabbits. They frequent my vegetable garden and I'm thus concerned about the health effects of eating these vegetables.
- An understanding that we encroach on their land. We shouldn't kill or resent them just for wanting to survive.
- Bobcats and coyotes are now a danger to our pets in our own yards. Can something be done proactively to dissuade them from coming to residential neighbourhoods. They no longer fear humans and are therefore dangerous

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- People HAVE to quit feeding wildlife. Attracts all types till feel like a zoo. The residual impact on others is horrible. Wrecked decks, plants, skunk spray, lawns due up as wildlife feel like they are in a kitchen. Attracts bad species like starlings, magpies.
- Stop invading on the animals' habitat and if you do encounter them you should leave them alone. We are encroaching on their territory, not the other way around. Things that would help are keeping your dog on a leash when in regular parks and realizing that you risk running into wildlife.
- Education on the animals: how they live, why they are where they are
- Educate people on how to stay away from them, how to deal with them safely and remind people that we are growing in their area.
- Education. I feel like some people just are not educated on HOW to properly co-exist with these animals. Coyotes are a big one, especially when it comes to smaller pets. This kind of comes back to people letting cats roam free, if they didn't roam, they wouldn't come into issues with cats.
- Less Development and more natural spaces. People should encourage cohabitation in a health way. You can use bat houses and other things to help control where these animals set up house.
- Education. I don't see any of these species as nuisances, especially bobcats and coyotes. All of these are wild animals, and we just need to learn what to do and what not to do to be safe with them and enjoy them. I hope I can see a bobcat some day!
- Education is most important for any of this. Most people don't know the correct way to deal with these animals. Also wasps are horrible and I would be happy if they all died and were replaced by nice pleasant bees.
- Education on how to co-exist
- More natural spaces reducing the amount of manicured areas. Stop mowing grass along paths and respecting them as the natural habitats of the area and us humans as the invaders
- The city needs to be more vigilant when it comes to complaints about wildlife like coyotes. In the countryside coyotes do not interact with people and pets. They keep their distance. There is no reason for this to be happening in the city.
- Proper waste disposal (ie using bins and not leaving trash in bags)
- we have so many skunks in and around our yard it's more than a nuisance. The coyotes in the neighbourhood are also very bold and there are tons of rabbits. too many of all of these. wish the city could control the populations.
- Gophers, mice, pigeons, porcupines, racoons, seagulls, skunks, squirrels, rabbits, wasps, should be kept in control and culled in different years. Coyotes and bobcats only show up when it is a bad year to hunt in the wild but need to be watched
- Education online and in the community (can be community specific issues) on value of species; how to tolerate species; what they can and can't do themselves for control; what the city will / won't, can / can't do; how to manage property to reduce negative encounters
- People having more common sense and NOT feeding wildlife. Not allowing their pets to antagonize wildlife.

- Let the wildlife live in their spaces and in our spaces, as we have taken over their territory. Locks on garbage bins so the animals cannot get into them. Clean up your space so that there is nothing that attracts animals to your property. Have your pets on harness and leash under supervision.
- The humans involved should recognize that all of the above animals are just trying to live their lives, and deserve the respect to be allowed to do so within the bounds of parks.
- Stopping urban sprawl so their habitat is undisturbed. Ensuring all garbage containers are secured (and no, the plastic carts we have aren't secure), and ensuring that all garbage spilled by collection trucks is picked up, to prevent habituation to human food sources.
- I don't think they are a nuisance. We have to share the space.
- Improved management of offleash dog parks where coyotes have approached owners/dogs. It seems it is reported and the city just puts up a sign, which does nothing to help. Relocate wildlife if they start to become aggressive to pets/owners. Worried it's a matter of time until something serious happens
- Ensure that wildlife has suitable natural habitats and that there are clear humane policies for dealing with problem wildlife.
- Education and awareness, maintaining city cleanliness, securing garbage and other animal attractants, giving wildlife space and relocating only when necessary
- Destroying crows and magpies. They are very vicious especially in the spring. Coyotes need to be relocated from the panorama hills area
- Education on benefits of animals - particularly for non-predatory animals listed above, like bats. Also, effective methods to not encourage nuisance wildlife on your property (e.g., wasp deterrents, low feeders for mice, squirrels, pigeons and magpies, garbage for raccoons and porcupines)
- -the city should be removing nuisance wildlife from homes and yards but allow them to exist in parks
- Maybe tips on how to deal with them and how to discourage them from becoming a threat or problem. Ex. How do I deal with skunks?? Is there anything to discourage magpies coming around? Who can we call to help? Etc.
- teach people especially children how to respect wildlife and behave when they see wildlife. Who to call if there is a problem with the wildlife
- Residents need to be more aware of the possible wildlife (all of them) that may be living or accessing their residential area. Keep your pets properly protected. If there is a possibility of confrontation pet owners must be thinking ahead of it and watch their pets!
- Removing them if they are acting aggressively. Alerting people if there are coyotes around. Telling people to stay clear of an area if they have babies.
- Education on how to live with urban wildlife. I've heard horrific stories of pellet guns or inhumane traps with intent to injure/kill wildlife, which could injure essential wildlife, or even children or pets. Option of municipal assistance to relocate problem animals would also be beneficial.
- Humane trapping and release when they are in harms way or a harm to others

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- More education and better understanding of these species. It is inevitable to have them in the city and trying to eliminate them is not the solution, People need to learn to live with them and behave accordingly. They are not nuisance and can actually be helpful
- Providing wild spaces for animal habitats, education on animal attractors and deterrents, education on appropriate human/animal interactions, and recognizing that we share the spaces with wildlife.
- We need to stop expanding our city boundaries into the wildlife areas. As we continue to encroach into their space we limit the space they can survive and thrive in. Then the animal is destroyed for coming into our area. Stop expanding out and start building up. We are the problem
- Public education! Not feeding wildlife. Keeping garbage locked up. So forth. Letting coyotes, skunks, etc exist peacefully.
- Don't feed them. Keep garbage in containers.
- Keeping enough wild spaces for them to be in. Public education on how to be safe around them
- Educate people so that they don't leave out food, garbage that attracts wild animals, don't let cats and dogs roam free, train humans to share the space in cities with wild animals
- I am an animal lover but also grew up on a farm and understand the science of population explosion. The City is out of control in that it does not do "culls" of many wild animals. They need to eliminate and reduce the numbers of coyotes, magpies, bobcats, rabbits and crows in the city.
- More corridors for said wildlife and education to the public regarding how best to manage interactions with wild life.
- Trap and release out of core areas
- I think calling animals native to this area "nuisance animals" to begin with is an issue. I think public education about cohabitating properly and demonstrate how to avoid attracting these animals to your home would improve wildlife/human interactions.
- pigeons wanting to nest in peoples houses provide a lot of damage and should be culled. never have had a problem with the rest.
- The city needs to take care of parks and green spaces that are near homes. By allowing weeds and natural grasses to grow out of control it provides places where mice, moles, gophers, rabbits can live. This in turn draws in other predators which may be dangerous to pets and people.
- Education on appropriate behavior (e.g. how to behave on encounters, preferred habitats, do not feed, garbage management, stay on trails in natural areas, keep pets away from wildlife), incentivising natural and permaculture backyards instead of lawns.
- Education on animal behaviour, how they are beneficial and not going to cause harm, and how to avoid conflicts. le not leaving food or things around that are beneficial for animals to nest or den in (unless they are prepared to share their space with the animals).
- Allowing the animals space to coexist with humans. Pet owners need to take responsibility for their pets and makes sure they are not put in harms way and encounters with wildlife.
- Population control of crows and magpies. Better relocation options for rodents and such. If people could borrow live traps and be given assistance in relocating animals to designated places, that would be great!
- secure a fence where they're often seen to prevent accidents or incidents from happening.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- It is important to distinguish what are wildlife that present a risk to the community and pets (coyotes, bobcats, etc...) and those that are just a inconvenience. Risks should be dealt with but others people just need to deal with
- Wasps must die.
Skunks should be rehomed to the country.
Gophers/moles should be managed so that they do not destroy our parks with holes everywhere.
I'm good with implementing coyote management protocols - although not quite sure how you would do that. Can't set traps.
- Do not allow anyone to harm them, poison any animal, or kill any of them. If there is a large population that is harmful towards kids, animals etc then bring in a team to relocate BUT NO ONE SHOULD BE HARMING
- Out of the above list I only consider mice, moles, pigeons, seagulls, gophers, and wasps a nuisance. Large predators are a danger, so relocation is an option. Wasps are the biggest nuisance, but I don't know how to get rid of them.
- education on prevention, management and what to do during encounters
- Stronger penalties and more enforcement for people seeking excessively close and unsafe interactions. Heightened respect for animals primacy
- Less food attractants.
- Informing the public what value these animals bring to the city by dispelling the myth that these animals are "nuisances". Reminding the public that we are in THEIR space and must make accommodations
- Teach children how cool they are while also teaching respect and safety.
- Educate the public about leaving these animals alone. Leaving them alone will reduce the risk of bites and negative animal interaction
- Change in attitude. The world belongs to all living creatures. It only requires minor adaptations to accommodate wildlife. Please remove the word NUISANCE. It sends a negative message. More education is needed for the public.
- Pigeons, wasps and rabbits are the only ones I have encountered. I am not aware of current methods of control and do not have the level of knowledge to make comments in this area.
- To start with to stop referring to all the above animals as nuisance wildlife in Calgary. Education will also be key to having them live alongside us.
- I have had no problem with wildlife. They are less of a problem than irresponsible pet owners.
- Educate the public. The animals are not always at fault when the interaction goes bad. The public is uneducated and has little understanding how wildlife behave.
- The city should learn to respect the wildlife area as well. We are busy just building away new communities with no respect for the wildlife, where do you expect them to go?
- I don't have any problem co-existing with them. Keeping areas clean cuts down on the food and housing opportunities. I'd love to see more bat boxes.
- More fully sealed garbage cans (the large metal brown ones) instead of open/flap containers - to keep from attracting that wildlife

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- More education - many of these 'nuisance' animals actually provide a service to us. For example, coyotes help keep the rodent population under control! Many of the birds help eat garbage and roadkill. And they do it all for free! And...they were here first.
- Living near NoseHill park we always expect some sort of wildlife to cross our paths.
- Penalties for people who poison/kill any of the so called nuisance wildlife. People should be educated on how minimize interaction with these creatures if they do not want them on their property, such as properly storing food attractions. Tolerance of these animals should be encouraged.
- Animals such as bobcats, coyotes, bats, porcupines, and raccoons should be trapped and relocated well outside the city. I can't even walk safely in my own neighborhood without being concerned about the presence of some of these animals, particularly coyotes and bobcats. They don't need to be killed.
- Making sure all garbage is properly covered and disposed of to prevent it from attracting wildlife. That's about it. We moved into their territory. They have a right to be in ours
- Cull the magpies and non-native rabbits
- leave them alone but don't dictate to homeowners what they can and cannot do on their own property regarding them
- Able to kill certain species.
- More education of the public is required. Officers should be patrolling parks speaking at community gatherings like festivals monthly meetings post in newsletters. Eg walking dogs on retractable leashes in areas where coyotes den. Cats are still often allowed outside
- Education on dealing with and deterring wildlife from the home
- I think wildlife in the city is important, but I am concerned about the number and boldness of the coyotes. There is general signage on their whereabouts, but I would prefer to know exactly where their dens are to avoid them. They shouldn't ever be allowed to den in off leash parks.
- Foremost education. Second, How to coexist peacefully if this occurs there needs to be understanding that their home probably displaced the animal. Who to contact quickly/easily for information. Hold workshops to learn about local animals. Parks Canada has pop ups in parks to educate-people enjoy it
- Keep garbage put away no bags left out and dumpster areas kept clean all back lanes should be checked by bylaw to that people aren't dumping stuff This would prevent habitat for the skunks Or coyote looking for food
- Education and the knowledge on how to deter wildlife from property
- Education regarding coexistence without threatening the welfare and survival of urban wildlife. They were here first!
- People not feeding wildlife, in carburn park, fish creek I constantly see people bring or toss food for deer and birds food and they become dependent. Also signage indicating "do not feed, "warning coyotes in areas," inform people when they may be in a park where there may be for porcupines.

- Thin out the coyote population in parks. At Carburn Park we have witnessed 3 coyotes trying to take down 3 deer together at the same time. Our neighbours have been stalked by coyotes while walking their dogs.
Magpies, keep garbage bins closed-less food or trap them. Citizens safety should be priority
- I can't put much faith in people being willing to do anything of the sort.
- Monitoring of dangerous animals in the area. Also dogs on leash in provincial parks.
- Proper garbage and attractant education. Realize that the animals are evolving and learning to coexist with humans and humans need to learn how to avoid behaviors that cause conflicts. Human's need to be educated on animal behavior.
- Have people not leave garbage out and available to wildlife. This is their home too.
- Provide a sign with a number for whoever to call around areas where wildlife is most. Preferably they are all kept alive and people are just more educated about wildlife if they are headed to an area where wildlife inhabit.
- I disagree that people living in the city should have to co-exist with the wildlife especially large animals. It is our fault they are encroaching on our property because the city builds out instead of up. They are better off in the wild where it is natural for them to hunt what lives there.
- NO POISONING OF THEM to unfair to the ecosystem
- Education. While driving around I watched an elderly woman try to put a cayote in her vehicle as she thought it was a wounded dog lol
- Education on all these animals. And stop labelling them with "nuisance", live and let live.
- Increased funding to wildlife rescue and rehabilitation and greater education to people who are likely to interact with wildlife
- Education. None of these are nuisance. Humans are the only legitimately nuisance animal.
- Education. I don't think people understand why/how wild life benefit us. A better understanding of safety precautions to coexist safely.
- Heavily fining people for leaving garbage strewn all over and inappropriately feeding wildlife. Stop the glut of needless Housing development encroaching on their land.
- Trap and release or removal of them especially dangerous ones to pets and children
- Better enforcement of bylaws against people letting their pets harass wildlife. For example, dogs running loose in the non off-leash areas in Nose Hill chasing deer and coyotes.
I do not consider any wildlife to be a nuisance.
More public education is needed on how to better coexist with wildlife
- Any dangerous animals, such as coyotes need to be removed. The people who allow them to stay will be held criminally responsible if anyone should ever lose a child due to an attack.
- Laws to protect wildlife.
- Reduce available sources human food to wildlife, ie reduce or better secure trash, reduce feeding of wildlife.

- City limit is pushed out again & again. The living environment for wild lifes are getting worse & worse. Don't let wild life living situation worsen. Give Calgarian enough education how to co-exist with these wildlifes. Protect wild life as setting up fence for coyotes in Arbour lake last summer.
- just ignore them. let nature be.
- Create throughfare for transitory animals. Greater responsibility in garbage disposal areas - cleanliness to not attract wildlife.
- People need to do what they can to prevent & decrease encounters with wildlife - keep their pets inside, on a leash, fenced off, & under supervision. They also need to manage garbage & recycling properly.
- A city funded task force locating, and monitoring, and providing assistance to Calgarians. Providing a space for these animals to live is a requirement of living in their world. We need to do it safely
- Need more educations, and harsher punishment for cruelty towards wildlife. Make people very aware if they are moving into an area on the edge of the city that there is native wildlife and that is a risk they are willing to take.
- Yes, they were here first. Stop listening to urbanites who don't understand that.
- Educate people on how to minimize the risk of pet interaction with wildlife.
Participate in local events with an educational and interactive booth/display/area that helps teach people about these animals, their behaviours, and how their existence benefit the environment.
- More control of prey population to help curb rising numbers of predators. Coyotes don't only pose threats to small pets but also to young children. They can get into yards and threaten children playing in parks
- Wildlife are not becoming aggressive or overly brave in human environments or with household pets
- Education.
- Not referring to these as nuisances. We moved into their territory and are increasingly encroaching due to suburban sprawl. Change your mindset.
- Better education to help citizens understand the beautiful relationship wild animals can have within our communities and how to co-exist peacefully.
- The notion of "nuisance" wildlife is ridiculous. They are just wildlife. How are deer, bears, cougars not on this list. The natural areas of Calgary should be enhanced and restored to natural habitat as much as possible and Human/Wildlife education be increased.
- Actually co-exist would be a good starting point. They're not a nuisance if you don't leave food/garbage/etc available for them. 9 times out of 10 the animal isn't the problem
- Better knowledge about the animals, we are in their space not the other way around.
- Could be improved.
- we should be more respectful of the animals that we're encroaching upon. Do more to protect them.
- Ignore them and be responsible humans. Clean up garbage to not attract, keep a close eye on your dog if outside and obey signs that may warn of recent sightings. Know your surroundings and that wildlife could be around, so just use common sense to work with that concept that they were here first.

- please do something about the domestic rabbits that were released, even if its to trap neuter and return them so they dont keep breeding with the wild population.
- People need to start respecting that we live near the mountains and humanity has taken so many homes away from wildlife! We can easily co exist as long as there is respect and common sense. I think the wildlife needs more right than they have. TRAPS, LEG TRAPS AND SNARES should be ILLEGAL!
- If an area is over run the removal of such animals
- Limiting further encroachment on land where these animals live
- Better education and way more provincial park rangers!!
- No food or garbage on the ground. They should be disposed of in garbage containers.
- Education
- Probably just education. I've never had an issue with any of the animals.
- Education
- More education. I like the team that goes to parks to educate dog owners on wildlife. Educate dog owners that letting small dogs loose in coyote prone areas, even the backyard, is not wise. The City also needs to remove problematic & habituated coyotes. Or reduce populations.
- Focus City interest and response to predators - bobcats and coyotes as the have a clear and present danger to Calgarians. The rest can be handle by Pest Control companies
- I love how humans and wild life coexist in my neighborhood. No concerns
- I'm sorry, but I don't want to co-exist with wasps or bats! If people weren't feeding some of these creatures there probably wouldn't be as many nuisance animals around. ex: bird seed doesn't just attract birds, but mice, gophers, squirrels then, hawks, bobcats...its all a food chain.
- Education, learning compassion young.
- Information about cool it is that we live in a city with so much wildlife. Info in the animals themselves (many of those I don't consider nuisance). What to deter, if someone does see them as a nuisance.
- Population control for bobcats. We used to have 1/2 in the south fish creek area but the population is growing. This year we saw one mom with 3 kits and one with 2 kits. That more than doubles the population we usually see. They are now coming into yards to kill pets. It is stressful for pet owners.
- Responsible waste management, including litter prevention measures and litter clean-up to reduce wildlife scavenging opportunities. designated protected areas/parks to provide safe habitats. Wildlife associate with humans because of habitat destruction and because we leave food waste everywhere.
- If people didn't feed any of them! You put out bird seed, yhen you have mice, gophers and squirrels, then hawks, owls, bobcats, etc...Feeding attracts not just what you intend it for
- Public education around co-existence, respect and importance of the environment. With urban sprawl where are these animals supposed to live? We have taken away their homes and land to live on. Interesting that you call these animals nuisance wildlife... maybe we are the nuisance.
- Education! It's awesome we have so much wildlife in the City!

- Education. These are all wild animals and many people do not understand that relocating or killing these animals is, in many cases, not the right thing to do.
- More public education on habits, needs & challenges faced by each of these species would give understanding & empathy for these creatures.
- Education. I watch the coyotes at the end of my street play in the field and hunt every day. But everyone I know fears them. A few simple precautions and we can coexist happily. They've never even looked at my dog, but everyone fears for the safety of their dogs.
- off leash rules need to be enforced. Education about how we can minimize conflict with our pets and how to reduce attractants on property
- Create or leave existing wildlife areas intact where these species can flourish regardless of our designation of these animals as pests. We need more connectivity with wild areas and wildlife
- Keeping a clean city with no garbage to be scavenged can help with certain nuisance wildlife, many we have to coexist with.
- Open hunting seasons for these animals - they are not things to 'co-exist' with inside city limits but rather they are pests.
- Maybe if the organic trash bin was stronger and had a lock, they wouldn't try to eat in our houses
- Education. Education for Cougar Ridge residents has already helped.
Awareness and education so that we can all coexist and not be in too much danger.
- Education, a website on what to do. They don't seem like nuisance animals to us - there was a bobcat on our street and people were super pleased, everyone just kept pets indoors.
- Make it illegal to use poison outside. We had a family of beautiful little weasels that would temporarily take up residence under our front step and they would clear up all the mice in the area. Someone put out mouse poison, which also killed their natural predator.
- Coexist with wildlife and leave it alone unless they are setting up home on your property or in your yard. You should be able to have the right to call wildlife or remove nesting wildlife from your property.
- None of these are nuisance animals any more than we are! All except pigeons are native species in a healthy biodiverse ecological system. People must be educated to understand the ecological role each animal plays and learn to live alongside wildlife. Bats control mosquitoes, coyotes control rodents
- Education. During the Lougheed years when I went to elementary school we learned about indigenous species as part of our science and nature unit. This helped me understand as an adult their role and how to behave around them. Also signs for coyote and bobcat sightings on the paths etc
- They should relocate shrinks and coyote.
- Wildlife management.
Natural deterrents.

- Dogs on leash outside of specific dog parks. Increasing urban wildlife corridors to allow animals to pass through the city without crossing major roadways. Education to the public on the minimal threat these animals cause.
- Find humanizing ways to defer coyotes away from off leash dog parks.
- Its more on the home owners and animal owners they are beautiful i love seeing the wildlife around however i keep my property clean of garbage, keep my yard clean after my dogs, and when i see wildlife i dont approach or bother them. If you antagonize the wildlife thats not them.keeps cats inside
- Coyotes and bobcats have been an issue this year in our neighborhood. Lots or rabbits around. People should be made aware of the issues with signs at the entrance to parks at minimum. Pet owners should keep their animals under control as much as possible to protect their animals and the wildlife.
- Continue to invest in public natural spaces so that wildlife can coexist without getting squeezed into places that get them into trouble with some humans. People need to be accountable for keeping their own spaces, children, pets safe from threats - it's not wildlife's responsibility to avoid them.
- Better public awareness and significantly improved trash pickup. The city garbage trucks in my neighbourhood often leave large portions of the bin scattered around the alley, which sometimes include bones and meat that attract animals.
- Humans must curb behaviour, learn and teach respect, not fear or feed them. Pets to be controlled and kept away, not walked or left in yards as fodder for wildlife. Maintain yards, trash, gardens accordingly.
- The city could maintain parkland, including wild, natural areas. The city could offer advice on how to deal with wildlife that encroaches on private land. I have a nest of skunks under my shed. If I closed off their entry point once they are gone, they might not return.
- I think controlling the factors that make the animals move into the city, like food and garbage left out. Containing our sprawling footprint that encroaches on wildlife habitats might help.
- In Lake Bonavista, one should not let pets outside our they'll get eaten by Bobcats. When this does happen it's the pet owners fault. While we may consider them a nuisance we have to coexist. Common sense and proper bylaws should prevail. Perhaps ward specific regulation about pets?
- Warnings to pet owners that in areas are close to green space to work with animals. Education on how to trap, discourage and remove above noted pests.
- Information and resources on deterrent or relocation measures
- I think we're in their habitat so to coexist pet owners need to take more precautions (in cases of predators) like not allowing their dogs off leash in known wildlife areas. I had a bat issue once & there was no one to call to help me! Ended up talking to someone in Red Deer who only advised.
- Problem prevention education, easier to access (and more willing to help staff) resources to remove problem situations such as skunks instead of leaving it to the homeowner
- Tougher regulations on open garbage cans, more accountability from food providers to ensure outdoor areas do not have food, maybe a law and some enforcement against feeding wildlife. More public outreach on the animals and how to deal with them

- Add a different category to reflect that some of the above species can be both beneficial and a nuisance. For example, many bats in my dwelling (house, garage) is a nuisance but bats in my backyard or park are beneficial to eat insects.
- A lot of interactions come from insecure garbage. As the City provides/requires garbage containers, a clearer route for requesting more/bigger containers would be helpful.
- Education. Keeping their pets inside or supervised.
- - whether we like it or not, we are all part of the natural world, and we need all these animals even if they are sometimes a nuisance. About the only thing I can think of to encourage acceptance of these animals is education.
- Co-existence is an honorable principle. However, when natural prey-predator dynamics are stifled or out of wack, we are overrun. A recent skunk problem in our neighbourhood is exacerbated by only relocating the 'offending' critters. Culling is not inhumane in my considered opinion.
- Education when someone calls 311 to say they saw a coyote or to complain about squirrels to stop wasting City resources and get over it.
- I love seeing animals in the city, except there are some summers in which wasps are too plentiful. We trap them on our property, magpies are a similar nuisance, currently learning how to trap them. Educate people on how to protect their own properties, make information available.
- Its fine how it is
- I've had a major problem with jackrabbits in the neighbourhood eating plants and burning the grass with urine. I love wildlife and would like to coexist peacefully, however I would support trapping and relocating rabbits and other pest animals to outside of urban areas.
- There should be fines for people who leave refuse out that attracts wildlife. There should be more education of the public on how to safely coexist with urban wildlife.
- a better understanding (example, bats eat mosquitoes), and clear instructions on what to do when you have issues (who is responsible, who do I call, what do I do when...)
- All of these animals play their role in our ecosystem. Providing education on what that role is and how to coexist would go a long way. Discussing the importance of securing food and garbage so that the wildlife does not get it would be of equal importance, and the dangers of feeding wildlife
- Prevent urban sprawl, public education
- A campaign educating Calgarians on these wildlife
- I find Coyotes a huge issue around Nosehill and Edgemont. I think having a better idea of the coyotes breeding season and how many are around an area at any given time would help me ensure my dog is safe. I know coyotes move around a lot however I have noticed trends and signs would be helpful.
- There should be a service that can help people living in Calgary deal with ALL wildlife especially those that encroach into your living environment and can cause damage to human health (with disease or bites).
- Provide more natural green space for these animals to live and travel through.
- In an urban area, any wildlife that causes damage or discomfort should be strictly controlled.

- Keeping garbage well contained is very important. Don't have hidden spaces such as under a deck for them to live in. Some species are becoming too numerous and may need to be dealt with such as magpies and crows who seem to gather in large numbers, are noisy and chase away other wildlife.
- Quit feeding them, make sure your home is in good repair so they don't nest under porches, sheds etc
- Limiting/restricting development of green spaces. Ensuring garbage is not left exposed (at the dump, near shopping centres etc. Allowing animals to coexist and be given priority even in urban areas. Ensure wildlife corridors are maintained with access to water.
- Co-existing is key and destroying wildlife that enter into the city should not be considered an option. Proper restriction to possible attractants (garbage, food, small animals) should be maintained. Education is a key step.
- Educate idiot city dwellers. Stop the insane urban sprawl.
- We need a rabbit cull in the NW - these are becoming such a large population they are making driving and cycling more dangerous
Moles on public land need to be dealt with. The hills left behind are unsightly and can damage to grass mowers
- Educating the public on the responsibility they have to keep these animals safe by removing sources of food and avoiding interaction with them. Advising Calgarians that we CAN coexist with these animals pleasantly by remaining respectful of them and teaching their children how to be respectful.
- A way to get rid of invasive species like the grey /black squirrels which displace our native squirrels.
- I want to live with all of the above (well maybe not the wasps) and let them do what they do naturally. However, I think there should be more effort on the part of the city to maintain safe areas for pets and people. Dog parks where there are bobcats or coyotes present should be monitored more closely
- Updates when large mammals are presenting neighborhoods (coyotes, bobcats, raccoons). Tips on how to live peacefully with these animals.
- Information that helps keep pets and children safe. For example, sharing information that the city has about coyotes and bobcats in a community or area, so pet owners can keep dogs on lead
- Improving people's understanding and respect for their natural behaviours so that people can maintain property so that it does not attract wildlife or provide nesting areas.
- Mostly I would just like to know that there is dependable, easy and quick access to someone who can help if there are safety or disease issues with the presence of wildlife and perhaps education on how to prevent/decrease safety or noise (crows, magpies, pigeons, gulls) issues with wildlife.
- Control and limit the geographical expansion of the city. The farther the city spreads, the more impact it has upon wildlife as it takes up the areas inhabited by wildlife.
- For the record, a lot of bat species are provincially and federally listed species and need to be removed from this list. Specifically, the little brown bat is the most common species which live in human spaces and they are considered May Be At Risk in Alberta and Endangered under the SARA
- Wildlife should get a right of way unless they're dangerous. Wasps are dangerous and coyotes can be ..

- Keep garbage and waste away from them. Allow trapping of damaging wildlife.
- Education. As a conservation biologist, I'm often amazed by the uninformed opinions and fears about many of these animals in the community. Rodents, etc. are a nuisance, so info on eradication (from yards and homes) is useful. With larger wildlife, basic info about safety for kids and pets is useful.
- Stop developing massive suburban communities and taking their homes away. Divert more natural space for animals within already developed communities. Public education that the animals live there, humans are visitors and humans do NOT trump animal rights.
- More parks and habitat for wildlife
- Stop regarding some of these species as nuisance wildlife of course. Bobcats are necessary predators as are coyotes. Wasps do have an important role in the ecosystem. This list of animals needs to be cut in half which would require the city to spend less in order to control them.
- These are wildlife. We should simply learn to live with them.
- Increased communication from the City Parks department.
- Stop thinking of them as nuisance wildlife
They have as much right to live as we do
- The only things that concern me in this list are bobcats and coyotes, due to lack of understanding of how to handle an encounter with them, and worry of risk to life. I can coexist with the other animals as I feel more familiar with their habits. Public education in multiple media would help.
- Don't call bats nuisance wildlife!
- I think education would help Calgarians co-exist with the wildlife. Maybe if the city educated the citizens that expressed concerns directly to them as apposed to trying to find a way to educate all, this may be more effective.
- Letting these wildlife exist on their own with no human interference, i.e. supplying food. Once the wildlife has presented danger to humans then wildlife officials or city exterminators should provide assistance in removing the danger.
- None, I do not consider any of them a nuisance. I notice that deer, who camp in my backyard and eat anything in sight, are not classed as a nuisance
- Calgary is doing an awful job co-existing. More growth is taking away the animals natural habitat. People that don't throw away garbage properly attract magpies and mice and seagulls.
- Limit lethal solutions at all costs
- A better attitude; live and let live.
- The City should trap and relocate wild animals in urban areas that pose a threat. Our dog has been sprayed twice by skunks, and Animal Services won't respond.
- Problems occur when there is an effort to cull only one animal. The response needs to be balanced when addressing an issue in a specific area. e.g. there was a coyote cull and then the skunk population in our neighborhood skyrocketed. Once the coyotes were back the skunk problem is minimal.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- People have to be aware and leave them alone. Simple, if they consume a few cats, so be it, cats should not be roaming about by themselves.
- Live and let live. Humans are the problem, not the animals who's land we have encroached upon.
- I think we need to educate the public that the wildlife is endemic in our area and they need to accept it, not try to eradicate/minimize/remove it.
- Population control or rehoming of coyotes at Nose Hill Park. They are living on an island in the middle of a metropolis with no way to migrate to more wild areas. As such, many are habituated to people and dogs and are dangerously bold for a city park. Frequent attacks are unfair to city dog owners.
- Calgarians keeping their dogs on leash when not at a designated off leash area and cats indoors. People being more responsible with their garbage/clutter on their property. Business keeping lids on garbage bins closed. Keeping property free of nesting areas (skunks/'coons/coyotes etc)
- Make people aware of risks to their pets and themselves and accept that some improperly supervised pets will be taken. As for non dangerous animals, educate people that living in a healthy ecosystem is healthier all around
- Spaces within the city that these species can exist without interactions with the general public are the best solutions. For the most part, these species flow in and out of the city without incident.
- Give the predator wildlife more space so it can chase the real nuisance wildlife. Small rodents can get into houses and transmit diseases. I can easier protect myself against a coyote or bobcat than against mice, moles, gophers. Don't ban larger wildlife because of dogs not on a leash.
- If the city won't control the populations, then people need the ability to deal with nuisance wildlife, just like in rural areas. Not all the animals in your list are nuisance animals though. Coyotes are a danger, magpies are just [removed]. Bats are endangered and should be protected.
- Learn to live with nature as it is and appreciate the wildlife.
- Education ... short videos about these animals, their needs and habits would help Calgarians' to find the room share the outdoors with all the wildlife that we're lucky to find in our city.
- I have had no concerns about wildlife and welcome it. If animals become a specific problem (aggressive, over-populated) the city can look at resolutions but generally I think we should just leave it be. We should be looking for ways to re-engage ourselves with nature.
- Recognize we are the intruders in their homes not the other way around. Learn more about wildlife and what not to do. DO NOT FEED WILDLIFE
- wildlife is not a nuisance! We are the nuisance, we are the ones encroaching on their land. animals have been on this earth for millions/billions and years! Us, only a few thousand years yet we have destroyed the air, water, land etc... We need to co-exist because we are the problem.
- More education on why these animals are in our environment. What they do for the environment and how we can co-exist and minimize harmful interactions. People benefit from having these creatures enrich our neighborhoods.
- Awareness and education

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Stop expanding city boundaries into natural territory of many species in the city and have a system in place to make sure animals in the city can't live there life in peace including have areas in which citizen can't disturb possible places where babies of these animals are kept
- Better/more education more readily available on each species to provide info to Calgarians on how to coexist / live with them, and what counts as a danger/nuisance vs. the animals being themselves.
- Some are nuisance and some are dangerous. Nuisance could be left to home owners, (mice and moles and small wasp nests). Again, traps could be made available for gophers, skunk, porcupines and racoons. the rest is up to the City to deal with
- Ridiculous you expect input in 269 characters for 16 creatures. Who is this possible. Idiotic!!! to put all them in the same category shows your ignorance. Waste of taxpayers money, this survey!
- Why does it need to be improved? They are part of our community. I love it.
- Stop the city sprawl that is taking over the habitats of these animals. Keep your dogs leashed when out on walks.
- Coyotes that attack dogs in our off-leash park need to be dealt with. It is inevitable that these wild dogs will become less and less frightened of human presence unless they have negative experiences. I think there is a huge difference between a "nuisance" animal and a dangerous one.
- Leaving the wildlife alone. Keeping cats indoors and untrained dogs on leash.
- We need to assess the current wildlife situation in Calgary and determine where wildlife and the city are clashing and solutions.
- Education & communications to reduce fear. Also training people how to react in case of a bad encounter. The media around bobcats I've heard has been really positive. Lake Bonavista facebook group shares amazing photos of the bobcats and it has actually become a source of pride in the community.
- The City of Calgary should be responsible to help a homeowner get rid of, said wildlife, if any are encountered on homeowner's property. The homeowner should not have to pay hundreds of dollars to dispose of such wildlife. After all, not many have any experience to deal with same.
- A wildlife sighting app that includes a map where public can upload photos showing recent activity. It could also identify problem areas within the city so those recreating in parks can be aware in advance. Maybe it could show what issues city parks staff are currently addressing.
- Coyotes are a threat to pet owners when using trails and parks. More efforts should be put in place to keep them out of city limits. People should have the ability to safely walk their pets without this fear.
- shooting coyotes would be a big help
- Cull coyotes. We've had a pack of them roaming in our neighbourhood.
- leave them alone. Love that coyote dens are marked off in Bowmont. Good to know when bobcats and coyotes are around so we can look out for our pets. Surprised by the list other than wasps, the others aren't much of a nuisance. We should tget away from lawns. Basfor environment and give us something
- Remove skunks!!!!

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- Some of the wildlife is a nuisance, i.e. seagulls while some of what is listed poses more of threat, such as coyotes. I think education is important as I know of people who feed animals either deliberately or because they leave garbage out.
- Raccoons should be kept out much like the rats in Alberta. They are very destructive. Rabbits are fine. Coyotes and bobcats are being seen very frequently in our neighbourhood which is new and makes small pet owners nervous to let their pet out in the yard. The rest can co-exist very well.
- Education regarding the fact that most of these animals belong here, that we're in their territory and should learn to adapt and appreciate what they bring to the city environment. Education re what to do when encountering a wild animal in the city environment (including not kidnapping baby hares!).
- Only issues I have are with wasps and lately squirrels. But that is because the neighbour is feeding them.

I think we could better coexist if we didn't destroy so much of their habitat for single dwelling homes. I frequently have Rabbits/Hares in my yard and have no issues with them hanging out.

- I think we should better preserve wild spaces for most of these animals, and encourage a diverse biosphere even within our city limits. Protect spaces and provide the ability for people to best co-exist with these animals.
- Making it clear that we came after the animals-- we need to share the land with them.
- city get more involved in controlling the wild animals in people's properties. The city taxes everything and when it comes to the public safety with regards to the wild animals including rodents the city does nothing and everything falls in the owner's hand
- - ongoing messaging about not disturbing wildlife; e.g. giving them space
- - ongoing messaging about minimizing attractants, such as dog or cat food outside and ensuring that garbage is secure
- - increased messaging about what to do when wild animals are injured and have become particularly worrisome
- There should be absolutely No co-existing for the 'dangerous ones' like Bobcats & Coyotes. Good grief, pets, kids & even adults are all at risk in our own yards & trails. We pay the taxes here, so they need to move on out!
- Deer should be added to the nuisance list. They have decimated our yard along with the rabbits. I am all for culling populations that are increasing unchecked.
- Public education: there are ways to discourage skunks, coyotes, etc. from looking for food/garbage around a homeowner's house.
- More knowledge on the animals that live here and how to react when encountering them, either by yourself or walking your dog or having wildlife walk into your backyard. Proper protocols on how to deal with them.
- Please remove coyotes from arbour lake. They are a threat to domestic animals and people. They are very scary and come too close. We are afraid for our pets and children++++.
- Education so that we can learn to coexist with wildlife. We are encroaching on their living space so of course there will be problems. What can we do to prevent problems from developing and how to resolve problems. Keep animals and people safe. Attitudes need to change from nuisance to neighbour.

- Remove them from the areas as they're ( coyotes, bobcats) not safe to the kids in the areas especially when the kids are walking to and from schools.
- Laws that prevent interference with these animals. I don't believe that wasps should be in the same category as the other animals on this list. Citizens need more assistance from Community Standards with respect to when these animals are injured or problematic.
- Adhering to the current bylaws, specifically keeping animals on leash at all times, unless in a designated off leash area. As well as having you pet under your control at all times.
- We need to learn to get along! Garbage in wildlife-resistant containers. Keep cats indoors, or on leashes. Keep your dogs on a leash, or voice command. Roaming dogs and cats are a much bigger issue! I am quite offended to see so many species listed as 'nuisance'! We are the interlopers, not them.
- Start with changing the city's attitude and verbiage - these are not "nuisance wildlife"; most are native species that are essential to ecosystem function, whether within city limits or not; most are inoffensive & harmless. Set the example & educate the public to respect/enjoy, not fear & destroy.
- I think there should be a cull of non-native species (squirrels, raccoons) that negatively impact native wildlife species. There should also be some form of population control for species that are missing natural population control in the city.
- An information hotline explaining how to act when encountering each species. More education
- less fences
- If people left them alone. If people were fined for feeding wildlife.
- Residences should only be residences and these wild life came from somewhere. They should be brought back into their natural surroundings before they become dependant on humans and become a havoc on society and dangerous.
- More education regarding wildlife, its importance, and ways to coexist.
- Removal of dangerous animals such as coyotes and bobcats. Lawsuit waiting to happen if someone gets hurt.
- mostly let them be. remove when a threat to health and safety only
- Signage in areas known for wildlife, about the risks/dangers/behaviours of those species, and what to do if you encounter them. Who to call to deal with wildlife nuisances. There needs to be resource available by the City to deal with them, even on private property. You cannot put residents at risk
- Take into account the wildlife movement patterns, ensure they have enough space to thrive. Use humane catch and release methods.
- Leaving them alone, give them space
- Educating the public
- First, it is up to homeowners to be diligent not to attract these animals. Wasps are dangerous pests and should be removed immediately. Moles and mice can be managed by trapping. Unfortunaltely, If any of these listed animals become a danger to the public, they need to be relocated or destroyed.

- -Have a resource officer that has the ability to handle the nuisance wildlife. -Population control.
- -provide free traps and have resources to have wildlife picked up or drop off at locations. Too often the “nimby” method used
- the population of skunks is not being addressed by the city as the skunk population has become overwhelming and it is hard to go outside without encountering anywhere from one to six of them at a time. something has to be done to reduce their number. I am worried for my dogs and my safety.
- Education regarding actual risks. Managing of perceived risks, and deprioritizing nuisance.
- create better education and awareness of the animals within the city limits. improve and educate about what to do if these animals present in one's community.
- Co-existing is respecting the animals, don't feed them, don't try to make them your pets, Keep your pets away from them.
- People should not feed any wildlife including squirrels.
- as we keep taking MORE & MORE of the wild lands and wilderness these animals do not know where to go... maybe the city should stop expanding OUT and focus on areas in the city that could be upgraded and made more feasible ... I have encountered all the above mentioned animals at one or more times .
- Education on the animals and their well being. None of these animals should be considered Nuisance wildlife and they are incredibly important to our ecosystems and way of life. People need to be educated on why they are important and why we shouldn't be trapping, relocating or exterminating them!
- Leave them alone. They all serve a purpose. Educate the stupid people about why ALL species are important. Nothing is a nuisance it has a purpose. Bats? Do you know how many mosquitos a bat consumes? Porcupines? They are just minding their own business. I just dont understand the list. Crazy
- People need to do a better job of managing their garbage bins. I have often seen piles of garbage left beside bins or bins overflowing that birds get get into.
- Send out pamphlets let newcomers know these are not pets be cautious be aware of your surroundings and respect they were here first we are taking over there territory. Of course some of this category do need to be weeded out like magpies raccoons? Seagulls crows
- leave them be
- Better cleanup of city, less garbage less wildlife coming to eat it.
- Better education about them. Like what to do if confronted by a coyote and to not take baby bunnies away from their nest
- Carefully store waste so that it does not attract wildlife and co exist with it.
- Get rid of invasive species (ie. Black squirrels).
- tolerance
- Unfortunately when garbage and recycling cans are left out, there is incentive for people to rummage through them. When they are not properly closed or items are strewn about it encourages nuisance animals in inappropriate ways. This is also happening when people are overfilling their garbage cans

- I do not think wild animals should be considered a nuisance. We live across the street from a large natural environment park (Bowmont) and have had no concerns.
- Coyotes are a problem. I have been chased twice this year as they show no fear towards me and my 75 lb dog. I think when someone complains they need to be educated to avoid humans. There is an issue in Douglas dale where I have seen 5 coyotes in a pack numerous times. I
- Education on how to co-exist. Protection from development of primary areas of residence for these wildlife.
- I not needed support myself, but hopefully we have clear and concise steps for people to take in different situations clearly listed somewhere that is easily accessible.
- training of Humans not to interfere-
- Public education. I had a porcupine in my yard, and was directed from one agency to another.
- People need to give wildlife it's space. They were most likely here long before us. I interact with wildlife with no problems at all. Don't scare them or hurt them would be my advice
- Stop feeding the wildlife ... no peanuts for the squirrels ... no dog food in the yard for the Magpies and Crows ...
- Provide more space within the city for wild animals. If they are a problem have the city relocate them instead of home owners.
- Educate people so they aren't stupid or cruel to the animals
- Published information highlighting the key roles that each of these species play in their natural environment. Also providing solutions to mitigate being inconveniences by these species: patching openings in homes and fences, hanging artificial wasp nests... Pigeons are an invasive exception.
- Education
- Legislation should be put into place which prevents all animal poisons from being sold directly to the public. These products are inhumane and unsafe for humans, pets, and other wildlife. All rodenticides should be restricted to licensed extermination and pest removal companies.
- Enforcing restrictions on roaming cats to reduce conflict with wildlife.
- Provide sufficient space for wildlife and be mindful of human encroachment on natural area boundaries, particularly with new developments. Avoid positive attractants (i.e. roaming pets, bird feeders and un-contained refuse/composting). Make use of control measures wherever possible.
- I personally dislike crows, seagulls and magpies and wish there was some way to control them as they are noisy and dirty. I believe the other creatures should be left to get on with their lives, as we've taken over much of their habitat, leaving them with no choice but to come into our neighborhood
- I do not think that co-existence is appropriate where the wildlife in question poses a threat of injury to humans or domesticated animals. My main concern is with respect to coyotes. When walking my dog in Varsity/Dalhousie , we have been followed on a number of occasions by up to 3 coyotes.
- Education that they have equal right to live here as we do and our pets; keep posting coyote etc warnings

- Education. The animals listed above are not a nuisance. They are indigenous to the city and we need to be respectful of their space. House cats and chihuahuas that can be prey to these species are not indigenous and need a responsible pet owner to learn how to supervise them to keep them safe.
- KILL THEM ALL!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
- Education and people being responsible. All the above have very important roles in the ecosystem. Eradication of wildlife would be horrible, ineffective and make Calgary a much less wonderful place. I have never felt threatened by Coyotes/wildlife. It is my job to make sure my pets are safe.
- Education on what animals to expect to see in what areas and how the City is helping manage the animals existence in the City.
- Try to keep the coyotes, bobcats, etc. away from parks etc. Our daughter in law has experienced several instances of being stalked by a local coyote! We see them around a few times per year. Worrisome.
- Firstly, I would suggest we cease categorizing these animals as nuisance.
- shoot the coyotes.
- To keep those so-called nuisance wildlife in check e.g wasps, they mostly arrive at dinner time in the summer, when eating outside. Instruct the public not to respond by flapping around with their arms, they become agitated and will defend themselves and put some food away from the dinner table.
- More public education that these all have a right to coexist with us.
- More information on what to do if animals are encountered, on large signs at entrances and exits of parks and greenspaces. More garbage and recycling bins replaced when the lids are broken.
- - Stricter laws regarding pets roaming without owner supervision. (as in, pets not allowed to roam the city.)
  - Pet food should not be left out of doors.
  - Leaving food outside for feral animals should be illegal.
- Educate people
- Awareness about how to live with the wildlife, not how to eradicate them.
- Maintain wildlife corridors and control inappropriate sources of food for urban adaptor species.
- Better information on how to manage the nuisance wildlife when they become an issue (more resources or support on the website, 311 etc)
- Education. Tv spots. Radio ads. Telling people not to freak out. Keep your dogs on leash. Show people that wildlife is ok. Posters and signs.
- leave the animals alone. they were here before us. We are encroaching on their hunting areas. By eliminating the predators like coyotes, we will have an increase in unwanted rabbits and gophers.
- Do we want to co-exist? Or would we rather establish practices to discourage nuisance wildlife away from the city. Bobcats and coyotes are newer to the city. Do we do enough to make sure our garbage is in a sealed container as done in parks?

- better wildlife "highways" through the city to connect parks and create larger safer spaces for the wildlife in the city.
- That there is a division of Calgary services that can help with relocation dangerous and smelly animals (bobcats, coyotes and skunks) and education afforded the public when it comes to nuisance creatures (mice, magpies etc) I like having nature in my back door and non invasive / no harm strategies
- I believe from living near green spaces and being fearfull of walking my small dogs that problem coyote and larg cats should be removed and sent to rural areas (relocation) should be considered. These animals are dangerous and I would like to feel safe in my community. Banff does it we should to.
- Leave the wildies alone, except skunks should be trapped and moved to the country.
- I think nothing special should be made to make these wild animals more comfortable in the city. They can live on the green areas; parks, etc. not within neighborhoods.
- being aware of wildlife's existence, where they live, how they live, how they interact with the city environment and keeping all pets away from wildlife
- Educating citizens, and fining citizens that harm wildlife. Also not making it an option - they live with us period.
- less suburban sprawl into their habitat. More public awareness about the risks of having unleashed/unsupervised pets. Bigger and more prevalent signage where wildlife (i.e., coyotes) are noted.
- Just stay out of their way.
- - Proper waste management by land owners/residents
- - Keeping dogs on leash or contained
- Proper yard maintenance (keeping attractants under control)
- - Better public education on how to safely coexist
- - Reasonable and educated response by the City to resident concerns
- Public education. There is no reason for people to interact with wildlife. If concerned, it should be called in.
- More public education. Tighter leash laws
- Any animal that is being a pest, then the city or trappers should be able to remove them from the area.
- Improved wildlife corridors, honestly. We are invading THEIR homes.
- Remove all coyotes from YYC.
- the city should be able to control nuisance populations and should relocate out of the city when possible (ie racoons). there needs ways to control and decrease out of control populations (ie gophers, wasps, mice, moles, squirrels)
- Coyotes should be removed from Residential areas, moved out to the forest humanely
- Eliminate these coyotes. All of them.
- More education and a direct source for questions. Ask for more assistance from Fish & Wildlife

- Education and more assistance from Fish & Wildlife
- More public education. I'm surprised to see the animals on this list be characterized as a nuisance. Many of these animals contribute to healthy habitats and ecosystems, such as bats! People need to learn how to co-exist with wildlife in our city.
- Satisfied with current system
- Education about wildlife. Signs in parks.
- For Calgarians to learn about them. We may think they are a nuisance but they are a part of the food chain and nature. We must learn to coexist with them.
- Crows and magpies need to be controlled.....coyotes, bobcats tranquilized and brought outside Calgary to the mountains again.....
- More green space. Strategies to limit effects on property. Education about the importance of these animals.
- Let people be aware of how to control-exist. How to learn not to attract them in a positive way. Maybe being allowed to build slightly higher fences so some cannot jump into the yards.
- People being responsible with their garbage and pets in green spaces and maintaining adequate green space in the city.
- Education & conservation
- Squirrels are a huge menace if one is a gardener.
- Understand we share the same space, education not elimination.
- City to take responsibility to actively discourage potentially dangerous wildlife within City limits e.g. bobcats, coyotes, cougars & bears.
- People need to recognize that wildlife has a right to be. If you WANT to co-exist then you WILL co-exist. It would help if the city quit expanding outward and taking up space non-human animals could use.
- reasonable opportunities to get rid of them
- We could all deal with wildlife better if we had more knowledge about these animals and strategies to use if they are damaging gardens, presenting a risk to our pets or ourselves. I think deer should be included in this list, as well as elk in some areas.
- Accept that if we want green spaces in our city, wild critters will inhabit these spaces as well.
- Trap nuisance animals in peoples yards and return to wild. Otherwise, they need to be given space. Their natural habitat is being encroached upon and they only seek to survive.
- Common sense & an acceptance that wildlife is a part of our city. Many should not be labeled "nuisance" Bats for instance are critical & we should be protecting & encouraging them
- An open mind. I think it's peoples personal issues that prevent them from coexisting. There are certain case, like if people are attacked, that there would need to be measured in place to relocate that problem animal.
- They were here first. Owners should not allow their dogs to chase wildlife in Calgary parks and natural areas. On leash in a off leash area when wildlife is present.

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Less urban sprawl and development that destroys natural habitat, forcing wildlife into suburban communities.
- Better education, particularly for animals beyond coyotes. Info on other common animals (like rabbits) should also be made available. Educate children and teachers in Calgary! Go to schools in the spring. Kids see baby bunnies and think they can pick them up without issue.
- People should not feed these animals or use bird feeders which are attractive to more than birds.
- Education - Understanding that we live in their home, not the other way around.
- Public education. Many people view these animals as scary or pests and they arnt. They are part of the ecosystem.
- Education in relation to the types of wild animals that may pose a threat . Also signs in public spaces that notify people when specific animals are likely to be present and what to do in the event of an encounter.
- Most of the above species are an annoyance but coyotes present a danger to pets and humans. Coyotes denning within city limits should be removed or destroyed. Personally I have trapped and removed skunks and squirrels that have come into our yard. But again, those two are only an annoyance.
- A more robust initiative to educate citizens of Calgary. These animals are simply trying to live and thrive. We need tools to live along side each group with minimal animosity.
- Education programs emphasizing the importance of wildlife to ecosystems, and green corridors to wildlife diversity.
- If people leave these animals alone, that would be good.
- Dedicated green spaces where they are not controlled
- Ensuring that people are aware of the importance of not feeding animals such as coyotes, bobcats, raccoons, skunks etc.
- Education
- People to educate themselves about animals they expect to find in their neighborhood...and EXPECT wildlife.....we are encroaching on their space! I love to see the wildlife and get excited to see them. I suggest that people not feed the wildlife. Don't leave out garbage/food to attract them
- Feral rabbits must be trapped and spayed or killed. Denning coyotes should be removed if near homes/people. Have traps available to public for squirrels/skunks/raccoons/feral rabbits/porcupines etc & the city can take them away. Control the population of these critters.
- More education on not feeding/habituating also approaching wildlife in the City. The City is doing a good job closing coyote dens that are problematic. However, feral domestic rabbits released in the Repsol Center area need to be CULLED!! NOT wildlife as the posterboard indicates. Invasive =harm
- Not leaving garbage easily accessible for wild animals.
Educating people not to approach wild animals.
- Humans need to understand that we are encroaching on the habitat of these natural creatures. There needs to be more enforcement of people feeding these creatures and encouraging them to be more comfortable around people.

- Education. Community open house reviews of wildlife within neighbourhoods.
- -People being cautious of their surroundings
- -Not feeding wildlife and making sure garbage and compost are not attracting wildlife
- -Having respect for nature
- Capture and relocate coyotes outside city limits.
- Education
- Knowing how to deal with them or prevent them from your yard.
- Information regarding importance of species in ecosystem. Advice on safe cohabitation of spaces eg around garbage, Children etc
- Create a law that stops people from feeding the pests like skunks and now raccoons. People keep leaving food out for stray cats and skunks are getting into them and spraying my dog.... I'd like to take one of those skunks and put it in the house of my neighbour that feeds all the neighbourhood pests
- Managing the populations, reducing human and dangerous species interactions
- Education about interacting with wildlife, commercials posters, talk about and let people know what to do if they see a moose or a bobcat some people call others don't and everyone including the animals have a right to be safe and given space.
- Lower collisions rates with cars and deer or coyotes by putting up sensors along highways and roads like Deerfoot to trigger flashing lights so cars slow down because animals are near.
- I think people need to be more realistic, animals were here first often we need to learn to live with them. The city has zero programs to help people live in harmony with these species
- Reminding people that letting their cats out unsupervised attracts wildlife and puts their cats lives in danger. Garbage should be cleaned up to not attract wildlife and wildlife should not be harassed.
- Relocate animals whose homes are taken over by humans
- An understanding of the wildlife and what their natural tendencies truly are. That they don't want to engage with us. We are forcing it with our actions. It's on us to be responsible, not the animals to pay for our mis-steps.
- More education on how to keep everyone safe.
- I think sometimes pathway closures are necessary for the safety of coyotes and small pets. I'm a runner and frequently use pathways but I'm totally ok with closures when necessary. Calgary should also stop expanding out and taking over more wildlife habitat. Only build on existing areas.
- Making sure people understand that natural parks are there for wildlife, that people understand that and stop treating them like dog walking parks as many Dog owners seem to do (aka nose hill park)
- Culls as necessary. Patience on the part of humans. Removal of wasps.
- Stop all the new development in their habits. Or require developers to have parts of habits preserved and require them to work with experts on how to best coexist with the animals
- Have designated areas where the animals can be, free of humans. A refuge where they can go so they don't have to "intrude" upon areas with a human population in order to have their needs met.
- Knowledge about these animals and the benefits of having them around providing a balance

- Fine people for littering, especially food items. Tax fast food outlets higher when their items are amongst the litter so as they will limit their excessive food packaging. Educate people to not feed the animals.
- There is no way we took their homes we need to just deal with that and accept they are here.
- Better enforcement of garbage disposal, i.e. no dumping garbage in alleys so as not to encourage "nuisance" wildlife to feed there. More enforcement for illegal dumping of garbage in alleyways.
- Education
- Coexist with skunks? My dog was sprayed by a skunk in my fenced backyard due to a neighbour letting them breed in her back yard. Skunks breed well and are not endangered. Please go back to having animal control provide traps and removing them. Not everyone can afford $200.00 to have them removed.
- Leave them alone. Just be vigilant and become knowledgeable is the best approach.
- Let cats back outdoors to kill vermin and reduce a food source
- I think that the parks should have more fences to prevent the coyotes and bobcats from entering. No harm should be done to the animals, unless they are on the property of a home owner, then I feel as if it should be legal to take necessary action to save your pet.
- Drink more beers, smoke some weed and calm the hell down :)
- educate people thru library workshops how to handle these encounters. I personally see only skunks, mice, wasp, pigeons, black squirrels as nuisance. Had the first spring skunk walk thru my neighbour's yard tonight due to neighbour leaving out old loaves of bread for birds
- City providing tools/services to deal with problem wildlife, especially ones causing damage.
- Stop leaving garbage out and if you're walking your dog and there's a coyote, have a noise maker that will scare the coyote away if he or she comes near. We have to respect wildlife - nuisance or not - we are a nuisance! Humane trapping and moving of wildlife like porcupines, skunks...
- Leave them alone.
People that leave garbage out need to be charged. Alleyways are filthy attracting animals deeper into neighbourhoods.
- I believe we have invaded their territories with our ridiculous sprawl and every effort should be made to coexist with wildlife and minimize our impact on the natural environment
- Education of the public on what to expect and what to do when they are in the presence of wildlife
- I think it's important that Calgary doesn't use chemicals (pesticides) to deal with animals they consider to be pests. I personally don't consider any of these animals to be pests and think they should be left alone.
- I think education is probably a big factor. A lot of the animals on your list are beneficial to our environment, such as bats, which eat insects like mosquitoes. Also, people need to understand that we have encroached on the wildlife's territory and taken over their homes, not the other way around.
- There is an unnatural plethora of some of these animals which could benefit from being culled occasionally

- Education. Wildlife is not a nuisance it's a system. Wildlife numbers ebb and flow with climate and food source. Unfortunately green bins have added an easy food source for wildlife. Wildlife is predictable. Stop feeding them and they will go away. Education
- I'm not sure what can be done but I have small dogs and bobcats and coyotes are a constant concern for me. I feel that I can't even let my dogs out for a pee in my fenced backyard unattended for a minute in fear of an encounter. I know they keep hare populations down but I don't feel safe.
- I do think that, if more effort was made to control the population of smaller animals, eg, rabbits, squirrels, skunks, there would be less of an issue of larger animals coming into the city.
- Education. Our city needs to be able to coexist with the native wildlife.
- Education on what to expect, and warnings from the city about when to keep your pets/small children indoors (not just for house owners but for renters and condo owners too). This applies especially to coyotes and bobcats.
- Safety protocols around coyotes. Wasp traps in frequently used public spaces.
- Catch predatory or nuisance animals and remove to another location far far away. Tag predators when captured
- Bylaws and enforcement of these bylaws to reduce resident behaviours that encourage these wildlife to become a nuisance. Many of the animals on this list I would not consider a nuisance - residents need to understand that accepting the presence of these animals is part of living in Calgary.
- City should provide assistance in dealing with skunks. Inglewood has an abundance of skunks. After dark I have to check my yard with a flashlight before letting my dogs out. At times I have to close all doors and windows due to the smell (skunk on my or neighbouring properties or on street)
- Better education for Calgarians. I live in a wildlife rich neighbourhood and I love it. Seeing deer, weasels, porcupines, and even coyotes is peaceful to me.
- Information sessions or social media posts on the wildlife. Benefits they can provide, how to properly and humanely shift things if there is a problem, information on their intelligence and social structures to bring understanding and compassion.
- Speed monitoring for cars to reduce chance of harm to animals.
- Too many cats are being let outside which encourages wildlife into areas they normally wouldn't venture. Also the mass amount of bunnies downtown need to be addressed. There were coyotes walking in Lindsay Park with dog owners unaware. Need more wildlife caretakers involved.
- Nothing.
- Education. We are encroaching on their territory so we need to leave them alone and let them be.
- Stop allowing more development. With the economy why is the city approving new development. Calgary has an abundant amount of homes. Protect areas that are wetlands and parks. Educate people.
- Education to Calgarians about being safe around said wildlife and keeping their pets safe around said wildlife. The wildlife was here before us and we need to learn to coexist peacefully and take steps to provide a safer life for the wildlife and us.

- Leave the gophers & rabbits alone. Skunks -> trap and relocate or destroy, parks should do this! Leave the bobcats and coyotes alone, they 'take care of' rodents. Raccoons need to be destroyed, no relocation. Wasps are a home owner problem - usually. Porcupines are inconvenient! Trap and release.
- I don't have concerns with most of the above animals. Overpopulation of coyotes in urban parks can be concerning when I am walking in the pathways.
Bats are incredibly effective at managing insects and are beneficial to the ecosystem. Perhaps creating bat boxes for habituate in parks would help
- People need to be more respectful, but I'm not sure how you can educate them to do that. There shouldn't be off leash areas where there is a know coyote den, and maybe they could be relocated or enforce leashes.
- Education
- City of Calgary should consider supporting bat boxes to encourage bats to create homes in appropriate spots. the effects on the ecosystem are incredibly beneficial.
Coyotes should only create concern if they overpopulate and/or threaten people in urban/suburban areas.
- Having the ability to forcefully remove problem animals. Such as coyote.
- engage citizens to leave these animals alone. ask citizens to not capture, or try to destroy these animals. I have seen deer, bobcats, coyotes skunks, porcupines, rabbits in my Charleswood neighbourhood, and these animals just seem to be passing by. they do not pose a threat.
- We all share the land in Calgary. Be respectful that wildlife has as much right to be here as humans.
- Keep garbage properly contained so they are not attracted to people. Don't feed them. Remove pigeon crow and magpie nests before they get to big discouraging reproduction in urban areas.
- People having more common sense. This is rare, so maybe getting notified if there is a significant amount of wildlife in their area that could do harm like Bobcats or coyotes. But if you live near a wooded area or park, they should know animals live there.....
- More weight given to science, ecological researchers, and Treaty and Indigenous experience and knowledge to maintaining balance.
- Providing designated areas for these species to live and thrive amongst Calgarian neighborhoods. They are not in our homes, we are in theirs. They were here first. If we take away their homes, they have no choice but to encroach on ours and thereby become a "nuisance".
- Intentional spaces for these animals to safely thrive within our city. Education about the importance of these creatures in our ecosystem.
- For most-where do i call when I'm having difficulty with a skunk for instance. I don't even know. Make this more accessible.
- I have no issues with any of these animals. People need to remember when they move into new developments they are encroaching on the animals home
- Assisting owners with education about the animals and resources to assist in their removal, if necessary (gophers, mice, skunks, wasps, etc.)

- Maintain dedicated natural areas - not manicured lawns, but grassland and woodland habitat that is not infiltrated by paths/human interference
- Have more open spaces and parks with lots of trees and brushes within the city limits.
- Dogs should be kept on a leash and or not allowed in areas where interactions could be hazardous to wildlife. Too many times I have seen owners allow their pets to chase wildlife along the river.
- Stop building out and start building up. When we have cougars walking into hospitals, we've stretched our boundaries too far.
- Not leaving garbage out and keeping cars inside and dogs leashed.
- I love the local wildlife in the city; however the feral pet rabbit problem in Mission is quite significant and I would like to see the city do something about them. I think supporting citizens in learning how to coexist with native wildlife through education would be helpful.
- If people were more knowledgeable about wildlife.
- Humans should leave them alone. It is unfortunate that they take refuge close to homes or in parks. If they are in danger of attacking humans, then they should be trapped and relocated. otherwise, let them be.
- We need to provide areas for these creatures to thrive, and surface for them to coexist... none of them are even a real problem, and most benefit us and our ecosystem..
- Not sure, but I will say some years ago after the ground squirrels were poisoned on the berm by Anderson/24th ST, the hawks which hunted that field were on the ground making awful cries. I assumed they had also been poisoned. That was a sad day.
- Wildlife should be left alone. Downtown, there is a gopher hill near City Hall; people stop & there are expressions of sheer joy on their faces to see these little animals in the sea of concrete (yet every year you send someone to exterminate them)? Maybe celebrate them - less $$ than Arts Commons
- Stop calling them a nuisance and realize they serve an important part of our eco system.
- Education on proper garbage disposal/storage many people overfill their bins and therefore repeatedly attract "nuisance" wildlife.
Education on how to repair homes or Create natural/non toxic barriers to prevent wildlife from nesting within structures. Also, didn't think we had racoons in yyc..
- A healthy eco system should allow free movement of wild life in urban areas, unless there is a danger to human health, life or limb (in this case apply animal control to relocate them). Non native invasive species should be exterminated.
- None.
- Why are bats on that list? We have them and they keep bugs away? We even built bat houses.
- Nice and Skunks are becoming a problem. Because of biweekly garbage pick-up, we've noticed a huge increase in these animals in our alleyways and around our homes.
- Prevent feeding of wildlife (squirrels especially) as they then bury food in people's gardens.
- Manage citizens' expectations around wildlife, as in the animals coexist with people in the city, citizens should get used to them. Should an animal become dangerous, relocation should be the first option rather than destroying the animal.

- More protection for the wildlife. We've take. Over their land.
- Keeping dogs out of wild spaces. Particularly nose hill, which has become a dog park at the expenses of wild life. The city's interference in harassing coyotes and letting dogs to roam free is disappointing. This space shd be left to the wildlife, but it is being ruined by dogs and interference.
- We are living in a wildlife corridor. Some animals get land locked in the city because of development and some are just confused and need time to get out. I believe we need to keep our pets safe from wildlife and keep the wildlife safe from our pets. They live among us. Educate hard.
- Letting the animal alone. Give them spaceThey were here first we have taken over their environment
- Stop building out and pushing them out of their homes. We need to build up and not out.
- Perhaps some wildlife education provided at community centers. We have had encounters with many of the animals listed and they add to the community and we should be able to live alongside each other. Some of the animals can pose a danger to pets and small children and good education would help.
- Monitor and deal with aggressive coyotes
- Calgarians learning to have respect. I live near a natural area and see all of the above in my area -- except porcupines. We especially need to appreciate the value of bats for killing mosquitos
- Not sure. Maybe areas that are off limits to people so wildlife have a place to be wild
- Why are any of these even considered nuisances? Bats eat insects like mosquitoes. Wasps pollinate our trees and flowers. The first thing that would help us coexist with these animals would be to stop seeing them as pests and consider them a natural part of our environment. We share their habitat.
- Provide wildl9fe corridors and bridges to allow them to get safely from green space to green space
- Humans caring for their property & others = no garbage left outside unsafely, nit feeding &/or leaving pet food outside, being mindful of small pets. Humans being aware of their surroundings & alert (paying attn to their pets, not distracted. There are no nuisance animals... we can all co-east.
- education on wildlife behaviors. what I see in my community is people treating wildlife as if it's harmful to a community. But they are a part of our natural ecosystem and people need to learn more about them instead of fearing the unknown.
- Some limitation and regulation. I'm 6 years in Calgary and looks as decries rabbits and squirrels population (( but more and more coyotes and bobcats in the city
- Controlled, targeted, humane, extermination.
- More parks, relocation of some dangerous animals (coyotes and bobcats), more public education
- Common sense to keep pests out of your house. Education on the ecological balances between animals - I.e., a top predator like a bobcat reduces the rodents and hares. Bats eat mosquitos. Seagulls & crows clean up carrion and waste.
- Education about these wildlife. Adequate green spaces for wildlife. Programs to support native species over invasive species.
- Pest control
- If humans would realize and respect that animals deserve to live here too.

- Planting of more trees and native habitats would assist with Calgarian's ability to coexist. We also need to increase awareness about feeding and habituating these wildlife as it only increases their 'nuisance'
- Citizen needs to know what to do for their home safety and prevent invasion of said critters. Bobcats and coyotes have had to adapt with expansion of city boundaries. Educating and awareness of public for park safety and increased activities of coyotes and bobcats such as breeding and whelping.
- Reminding individuals not to approach or befriend wild animals. They have every right to be here and I have no sympathy for those people who disrespect their space. Magpies on the other hand are not even native to North America and we have to let those dick heads live, which should change.
- Education and awareness of keeping homes and garages vermin free. Educating and letting folks aware of increased bobcat and coyote activity such as breeding. Coexisting as city boundaries have expanded into wildlife habitat. No kill if possible.
- Educating and warning signs when bobcat and coyotes are active in local natural reserves and parks. Breeding and whelping times. Educating how to keep vermin from your house and garage.
- Home and landowners should accept these species as part of our urban landscape and take measures to prevent attracting them, such as contained garbage, secure gates, high fences and no bird feeders if you don't want squirrels, magpies, crows or pigeons,
- Education on how to avoid attracting nuisance wildlife to your community and safety precautions to take.
- Education.
- City should assist residents with relocating animals like skunks.
- I think the City needs to have a program to help downsize the gopher, mice, vole, & mole populations. These rodents have taken over the city and they are food sources that attract bobcats and coyotes. In our cul-de-sac we've spent hundreds of $ on exterminators and we are still infested. Help.
- I truly believe that the rodent issue would be taken care of if cats were allowed to be let outdoors. Our cat caught mice and voles on a daily basis when outdoors. Magpies would be my top pick for a nuisance animal. Not sure what the answer is in order to cull these birds.
- Education and communication on what the city is doing to control
- Indoor garbage & compost & recycling storage - no bins left outside. Latched bins that require manual unlatching to access and specific tool on truck arm to empty. Better access to solutions for bird nuisances: pest control to eliminate property destruction and fecal abundance.
- Leave wildlife alone unless they threaten human safety or their dwellings. Wasps do not belong on a list of animal wildlife
- I appreciate learning where the wildlife is so I can avoid the area.

- Parks needs to be ready and willing to help with any nuisances that are in trees and parks in the city. Taking preventive measures especially for magpies, and crows will be essential. Removing old dead trees, hanging shining objects. Etc
- Leave the wildlife alone. Monitor your own pets. Be aware of what is around you. The wildlife were here first and we have encroached on their land. Leave them alone. Magpies need to be dealt with. Not indigenous to our area??? Stop people from setting up food for wild animals.
- Doing something about coyotes in places where kids play. At the WRMA there is a family of 6-7 coyotes, they chase dogs and kids , even my adult husband -but the city says they can't do anything because no one has been harmed. What a joke that is!! We need to be allowed to get rid of them
- Safe and reasonable culls should be an option.
- Educating the needs of these animals to everyone. How to deter them from your property if you don't enjoy them. Don't leave garbage bins out, bird feeders, etc. Ultimately if they are injured I believe we should step in when in residential areas. It's not ok to make that the homeowners responsible.
- Advertise information on the correct way to deal with wildlife to ensure no harm or discomfort to the animal
- Eliminate the word "nuisance"!! There are many wildlife facilities that can provide humane ideas on how to deter or co-exist with these animals, the city should work on educating people. All birds and mammals squirrel size and larger should be protected from poisoning, trapping and cruelty.
- Animal services doesn't do anything regarding porcupines... Doesn't know who does either, just told me to leave it alone while it killed a cat on the front doorstep of a house.
I chased it at my own risk because you are too lazy collecting a paycheque to be concerned for animals.
- Trap and remove coyotes. Allow people to have backyard bees to keep wasp populations down. Magpies shouldn't be protected.
- Public understanding. We have wildlife, we shouldn't be putting our garbage out the night before or leaving our cats and dogs outdoors.
Controlled population of calgarians - we are building too fast and encroaching on too much wildlife, resulting in more and more displaced wildlife.
- Education
- Removing the "nuisance" appellation. They were here first. We're the interlopers. Well--except for wasps. I really hate wasps. Kill them all.
- Making it against the law to interact with them, no matter the excuse! Once again to many chances and not enough folks who know better get fined...people get it when they get tired of being held responsible....
- When they become too much of a problem (skunks), relocate them.
- Education and acknowledgement that we live in same area and must Co exist with these criters take the right precautions with pets and children
- If or when wildlife is a nuisance e.g., coyotes - pets, threat, or garbage, skunks - smell, garbage; racoons - pets, garbage, then have officers readily available to relocate animals.

- We have rabbits the live under our trees and a little skunk that loves our yard. We co- habitate as they move on. As a homeowner I can make sure my trees are pruned so rabbits don't find security there and block and fix any spots that wildlife may use to den or call an exterminator if necessary.
- Nothing? They're wild and exist, we can't change that. Can't control them. Watch your pets when they're outside, if you can't do that, don't have pets.
- Education would help and the realization that we need to coexist with wildlife, including if that means keeping dogs on a leash
- First, a distinction needs to be made between native and invasive species, and those that are at-risk. Re locally endangered native species, the City should try to educate people about them so that they are better understood and tolerated. Problematic invasive species should be culled or removed.
- Better monitoring and information about wildlife in an area, especially bobcats and coyotes. Even information posted at park entrances, especially about how to respond to wildlife.
- Keeping people and off leash dogs out of the green spaces and private property so the wild life can hunt in peace. We really need to have heavy fines for people and dog found walking off leash dogs outside of the 150 off leash dog parks
Let's keep wild life wild
- Education is key we need to have information given out to people
And teach different ways they can coexist with our urban wild life it really isn't that hard give wild life space to be wild, don't feed wild life, don't harass wild life and to charge people whom have dogs off leash chasing wild lif
- Making signs and putting out the media to alert public of any potential wildlife danger. We must not harm these wild animals because at the end of the day we are the ones invading their property
- Maybe education as to the animal's interesting biology and role in the ecosystem.
- Education on what to do if you see them, and resources to report and relocate
- Responsible food disposal. Keeping them and children respectful distance wildlife. Signs in park educating on habituation and respect. Fines for distance and food infractions to eildlifr
- More teaching regarding the benefits of the above and how we should act around them to not scare them. We should not have to exterminate all skunks and raccoons and those type of critters... they should have to be relocated if denning in someone's yard.
- Relocation services for skunks in neighbourhoods I'd rather have cats roaming around and have city pick up skunks
- I think we dont coexist as much as we take over and relocate or control wild life
- Education! More information on what the city considers a nuisance, how to report them and how to get rid of them!
- STOP EXPANDING THE CITY. NOT ONLY IS IT COST INEFFECTIVE BUT IT ECROACHES ON LAND.
- The wildlife that is most bothersome and is currently a huge safety concern for our pets are the bobcats and coyotes. It is no longer safe to let our dogs out to play in their own fenced in yards.
- Improve the bylaws with respect to animal cruelty and make it illegal for civilians to harm large mammals. (Shooting them, poisoning, etc)

- I'm not sure. I have seen coyotes, bobcats, rabbits, and skunks in the neighborhood of Rosedale. I do not know if they are causing any issues.
- Learn to live and share our world with them.
- Education on how to co-exist with them. Education on safe and humane ways to deal with them.
- Help to relocate animals that are dangerous to family pets and small children.
- Have stricter rules for people to keep their cats indoors so they aren't eaten by wildlife. Re-location for wildlife putting people in danger. Less infringement on wild life's home with new developments and more conservation efforts.
- Not to consider these animals a nuisance but to coexist with them in a way that respects their lives
- To respect the right to life of these animals and not to consider them a nuisance
- Providing information to the public that most wildlife will avoid them, so the public doesn't spread misinformation and give wildlife a bad stigma. Provide people with information to prevent nuisance behaviours on their property. Educate the public on habitat limitations for wildlife in urban areas.
- Trap and release coyotes/bobcats to rural areas in rural areas but away from farmers who have livestock.
- Provide more natural habitats for wildlife to reside. Get over it. These animals are not of nuisance to me. Let them be. The only one that could be a nuisance would be mice as they can cause damage to homes, and wasps cause they are [removed].
- Leave them alone!! Don't kill them..
If there are safety concern for the animals relocate them.
- I think more education about the necessity of having a strong urban wildlife population would be beneficial.
- not too much... the key is communication. Give the public a simple tool to communicate when they see wildlife and ensure that the city uses available tools (twitter, etc) to get the message out.
- Keep dogs on leash when wildlife are present. Never allow them to chase wildlife.
- People realizing that we are encroaching on their space.... They were here first.
- People need to respect wildlife in our corridors and leave them alone. Keep your pets on leash or indoors.
- The city needs to be a safe place for wildlife. We need to address injured wild animals and provide them incentives to leave the city
- Until it is dangerous to human and pet life, ie more control over coyote dens
- More laws to protect them from being killed
- Education
- Respect that these are wild animals. Not encouraging them by feeding them or not disposing of garbage properly.
- Allowing Calgarians to eliminate the smaller nuisance animals such as squirrels, crows, bats, magpies, mice, pigeons, seagulls and wasps if they are causing damage or nuisance to individual owners. All other animals not listed in my list should be protected.

- Better control over populations, obligations of businesses and private citizens to take proper steps to control environments that may be conducive to these animals building shelters or access to food/garbage.
- Cleaning up litter. Better waste management. Relocation of dangerous wildlife
- Ensuring that there are proper habitats for these species to co-exist. As our urban landscape grows and we destroy their natural habitat, they are required to resort to other means to live which can cause conflict.
- Public education.
- Accurate information vs Facebook hype and stereotypes. Maybe partner with the zoo, or fish and wildlife to show that living adjacent/together is possible if we respect each other's boundaries/needs etc
- Education--most of the above aren't a nuisance in yyc
- People abiding by the rules as well as realizing there are wild animals in the City and that THEY need to protect themselves as well as their animals when in open spaces
- Providing more spaces for the wildlife to live, co-existing with the wildlife and understanding that humans have to share the land, having bobcats porcupines skunks coyotes around make Calgary feel more connected to nature and more peaceful not just a gross concrete jungle (like deadmonton)
- My experience is with coyotes in Varsity/SSprings Bowmont area. Education about timing of mating, denning, birthing; family/pack composition so that people will be more respectful of where/when to leash dogs in off-leash areas. And importance of discarding poop, not just bagging, leaving on trails.
- Hold property owners accountable for keeping their property clean and free of loose garbage. Ensuring pet owners do not leave any pets unattended while outside.
- Education. Being considerate of their space.
- That we live in harmony with these wildlife animals and not consider them a nuisance. That the public should be educated on them and their importance to the city. But also education on if we don't want to invite these critters that we have ways without using relocation or poison
- Well we should not be coexisting with wasps, for one! That's really the only issue I have on this list. They are killing bees, and ruining everyone's 3 months of actual summer weather. Death to wasps! Replace with bees.
- Leave them alone, give them distance/space and stop trying to legislate what should be common sense. Look at the extent we humans went to on behalf of a coyote and her pups in Arbour Lake. Despite the signs, the fence, the very clear message of DO NOT GO HERE, humans went there, regularly.
- Unless they are a threat to human/children's lives just leave them alone. My dog chases the pigeons, crows, magpies and squirrels out of our yard. If you are consistent they will find somewhere else to make their nests and hang out
- if these animals are aggressive and have moved into residential they should be removed and relocated.
- Stop developing so many subdivisions into wild life areas. Also our home prices would rise if there were not an over supply of homes.

- I think bobcats and coyotes are the only real threats on this list, in the sense that they are the only animals on the list capable of killing a child. At the same time, they are also the only things keeping the rabbit population down, and even so the rabbit population continues to rise.
- Increased fish and wildlife presence/help when wandering to residential areas
- Suitable warnings when animals seem to be causing problems in a particular area especially coyotes or bobcats that can be threats to pets or children.
- Public education about what these animals contribute to the ecosystem and what to do when encountering wildlife, lowering residential speed limits, restrictions on the use of pesticides, poisons and other chemicals that are harmful to wildlife.
- Educate all Calgarians to understand that we're encroaching on wildlife habitat, not the other way around. Calgarians need to understand how to avoid confrontations with wildlife and the City of Calgary has the responsibility to ensure that understanding.
- ensuring garbage/waste is contained; picking up and disposing of pet waste. Not allowing house cats out to roam free!
- 1st of all, the BIGGEST NUISANCE is not on the list! There should only be one: PEOPLE! People are the biggest nuisance! People create kaos, war, pollute, kill for pleasure, steal, torture animals, rape etc... only to name a few. People need to take responsibility for their actions.
- Create safe Passages for animals. Move wildlife before tearing apart their home to create ones for humans
- Education, regular garbage disposal, help with fixing any destruction caused by wildlife
- We need to re-define "nuisance" wildlife. It is just wildlife. We need live with all these animals. Dog owners need to respect on-leash areas. Most think if there is not a sign then they can walk their dogs off-leash. Cats need to be leashed when outside. They are a major cause of bird deaths.
- Understanding that they have as much right (or more) to exist in the space as we (the people) do.
- Education
- More education required to advise persons that we are invading animal habitat and we must co-exist. Tolerance is a requirement. Animals travel through our area, some stay many leave. Knowledge is the Key.
- Web based education on how it is best to deal with these "nuisance wild life" including the benefits that they offer to Calgarians. ie skunks eat wasps ect
- The city of Calgary needs to become more responsible for the rabbits and hares and bunnies let loose in the city, and reduce the release of other pets such as fish or birds. They are invasive. Coyotes are dangerous
- try not destroying all of their habitat - and if you have to move them then move them don't kill them.
- Ideally support for relocation of problem animals. I had an experience where I couldn't use my front door because of crows in the tree in my front yard
- I dont see these animals as generally a nuisance.
I live adjacent to Fish Ck BECAUSE they are there. If they stay onto my lawn that doesnt make them a nuisance.

- Education to public, including signage where appropriate (like deer signs on roads). Working in closer partnership with wildlife organizations, or specialists in the fields, to come up with ongoing plans for current and future wildlife management.
- Educate people. We can totally live cohesively with wildlife.
- Accept that we have invaded their habitat. We should leave them alone, but we can't because that's what our species does, we wreak havoc on other species.
- I am of the opinion that some animals need to be culled by the city: squirrels, magpies, and pigeons. The Eastern gray squirrel is actually breeding out the American red squirrel. Also, wasps are beneficial insects - they are pollinators, and predators of pests.
- Areas that have active wildlife (bobcats & coyotes) should be patrolled with safe removal outside city limits. Neighborhoods 45 + years old have an increased activity of bobcats. People should not fear their own back yard or be afraid to put their dog out in their secure yard.
- Public education about them so one knows how to interact with them safely.
- Black bin p/u increase! When bins are full, setting garb bags next to, is only option. Left in storage room & resulted in mice and spider infestation- waste p/u is crucial because leaving garb outside (not in a bin) also results in major mess from wildlife tearing apart bags.
- Let's live and let live. But here are examples of some exceptions: please don't get after us if we have to trap a mouse who is eating our belongings. Please help us out if we have a skunk under the front steps.
- Education on these creatures -- their place in the ecology. What we miss if they are gone. Strategies for co-existing that are well publicised in those communities that have the largest "problem".
- None of these creatures are a nuisance. I LOVE them all. Organizations like AIWC & CWRS should be paid to visit schools & communities etc to educate people about how to love & care for our fellow creatures. Humans have invaded & removed the habitats of many of these creatures.
- Not have garbage outside
- Telling residents to back the F off. There is nothing wrong with a bobcat in the neighbourhood, and if you leave them alone they will leave you alone.
- Urban sprawl is real and it will impact wildlife. There is a difference between animals protecting themselves and those that become predatory. Animals that become predatory in behavior must be removed from residential areas where children and domestic animals can be injured or worse.
- People recognizing that we have moved into the wildlifes home and should be tolerant that they continue to live near us.
- A media blitz by Nose Creek and Fish Creek parks to inform citizens on what to do when they see or have an animal approach them.
- Learn how to exist with the wildlife while learning how to keep them out of your spaces
- Change the golf course to large forests for those animals to co exist.
- I'm not sure that co-existence is really an option! Some may need to be relocated, others may need to be eradicated.

- Just leave them alone, keep garbage/food sources secured so as not to attract wildlife. For pigeons I've heard other areas use feed them with pigeon food that has pigeon specific birth control in it to reduce population since they are an invasive species.
- People don't have much knowledge about wildlife and how to co exist. I think Education in this would help.
Maintaining yards and parks
- I am not bothered by most of these animals. Larger animals we must be aware of to ensure that our pets are not killed or injured by them.
- Educate the public. More private place just for animals.
- Bobcats/coyotes need to be taken more seriously. We shouldn't have to 'co-exist' at the risk of our pets and children.
- 1. Education about how to manage the wildlife so we can easily co-exist.
- -set up bat houses in public areas/parks, so less likely to go into houses - helps reduce mosquitoes with less pesticides.
- -provide guides/information to home owners on how to deter nuisance wildlife from their property
- I strongly urge the city to not support the existence of coyotes with dens/pups within residential areas where there are families/children/pet owners. It is not fair, and not right for both the coyote and the residents of a community to be forced to be at continuous risk with coyote dens!
- People and wild life must co-exist. People have to be proactive, by keeping their children and animals in secure areas. Don't leave food or garbage out to attract wildlife. Don't walk in areas known as habitats, stay aware of your surroundings. Wildlife is losing homes/area to construction/growth.
- Education. I think most can be managed and some left alone will manage itself, having both predators and prey. Example: I walk my dog everyday in various parks and pathways, and use to see multiple rabbits everyday and night in the SW areas, now I've seen more coyotes and a lot less rabbits.
- More education so that people understand that most wildlife is not a threat if a few precautions are taken, ie, clean up after your pet, give wildlife a wide berth, keep pets under control
- A lot of wildlife is attracted to the green bins. They are smelly and garbage often falls out of them when they are being emptied. Perhaps some sort of different collection of the green bin would help with keeping wildlife away?
- Better education about how to coexist and keeping people out of spaces with den sites.
- Educate people how they can predator proof their backyards, increase trapping a feral and increase trapping of feral and Stray Cats will take another food item off the menu and decrease Predator populations.
- Education from multiple sources - tv, radio, social media and on-site at off-leash parks. Signs where presence is high or wildlife has been aggressive. Relocating wildlife when possible.
- As the city grows, the animals need space to live too. Educate the public that it is their duty as a human being to be respectful of animals as they all co-exist. The coyotes & bobcats need the mice & rabbits as food etc.

- Safe passages to wilderness areas. Animal-proof garbage containers.
- Having more respect for the wildlife; they are just trying to survive and in general are not treated respectfully. Free roam cats, unleashed dogs, drivers running them over, being shot at with pellet guns, diminishing land being developed rapidly. There should be more protected areas for them
- Coyotes need the fear of humans re-instilled in them. This can be done by wildlife officials shooting paintballs at them to teach them to stay away from humans.
- Ensuring there is adequate segregation of natural habitats for these animals from the general public and pets. Reserves and game trails connecting areas these animals frequent with adequate signage to indicate the purpose of these areas and precautions if necessary.
- When people are outside with their pet they need to be paying attention to the area around them, not texting or talking on their phone. Especially in an off leash, you should know where your dog is at all times and if there are any present dangers to your pet.
- Education. Ways to make coyotes scared to approach people, or remove the ones who are tend to approach or stalk people or their pets.
- Better education. We need to co exist as Calgary has become so developed these critters have nowhere to go and are misunderstood. Also make people aware of wildlife hospitals if they find injured wildlife.
- Those are not nuisance animals. Seriously? We are living in their space and they are 100% harmless.
- Making people keep dogs on leash with the exception of off leash parks
And having good sized fines for people who harass or harm wild life by them selfs or through their dogs begin off leash
We need to insure wild life rehabilitations can go anywhere to help injured wild life including all parks
- I think it depends on which species, clumping these species as one and calling them wildlife isn't useful. Some of these species are introduced (e.g. black squirrels). I think from where I see things we coexist well but I live inner-city where we maybe don't see as much diversity.
- Protection for wild animals. Strict fines for citizens who break the laws and disrespect wildlife and put them in danger. Zones for wild animals to give them their own space.
- More education of the public via public service announcements, etc
- The only animals on that list I've ever had an actual problem with are squirrels & wasps. The city could encourage the sale of only squirrel proof bird feeders, but the wasp problem is harder. Everyone collectively needs to do a better job of locating and destroying nests on their property
- Addressing dangerous animals (ie. Coyotes snatching dogs). Nuisances are fine, but once the behaviour becomes aggressive towards people it should be addressed.
- A safe removal plan and resource office for large nuisance wildlife such as bobcats and coyotes. The current "live with it" strategy isn't working and endangers safety of pets, children and the wildlife. A resource office or wildlife strategy would be helpful for all.
- Understanding the environmental impact on our wildlife
Educate yourself and others

- Live by fish creek park 35 years haven't had issues with wildlife till this year. Have bob cats who are preying on my dogs in yard and can't do anything about it. I can't stop a cat from coming in over the fence or down from garage roofs.
- Teaching people how to co-exist. We are increasingly taking over their space.
- Rabbits, Coyotes & Bobcats - we back onto a school field & we have seen/heard coyotes in this field. Also heard stories of people having to alter their route to school due to coyotes standing its ground, making people fearful to pass. The reason we have coyotes & bobcats is due to the rabbits.
- Allow residents to shoot / poison the pests.
- I think that we need to control the magpie population. In my neighbourhood, the magpies terrorizes people and they have snuffed out all of the cute and friendly birds. I think they should be relocated or permanently removed as their population is out of control.
- Make it more visible publically when dangerous animals have been spotted, otherwise wild animals are wild animals not much we can do
- Educate people on wildlife and when it is safe and when it isn't to be around wildlife
- We are very lucky to have diverse wildlife in our city limits! I don't find any of the above to be a nuisance. It should be the responsibility of pet owners and parents to be vigilant. We share space with wildlife and we should behave accordingly. Trapping/relocating/culling should be a last resort.
- If the city stopped its sprawl and humans respected wildlife. Wildlife has been around longer than us yet we expect them to just go away when we enter their domain. The public needs lots of education on how to navigate with wildlife and that they are the intruder not the other way around.
- Continued education and public information re behaviours and seasonality of wildlife and what to do if encountered.
- The City of Calgary should have programs in place to be able to relocate or remove nuisance wildlife from personal property. Parks and protected spaces they should be left alone
- I think better control of the rabbit populations would help with the coyotes in areas near rivers and ravines (for example in Bridgeland and Lakeview). I think coyotes known to be in communities need to be relocated and dens should be destroyed.
- Ensure trash, poop and garbage is not allowed to be piled up in alleys and yards both public and private areas.
- I don't believe most of these animals should be considered a "nuisance." With the exception of pigeons, domestic rabbits, raccoons, and grey squirrels (not red), all of these are native species whose habitat WE have taken over. I think people need to learn to coexist and appreciate these animals.
- If people could understand that most will just pass through if you leave them alone. Also--keeping waste/attractants under control will limit interactions. Controlling pet/wildlife interactions. People need to understand how to properly react when they encounter wildlife (education).
- Cleaner trash areas to limit the undesirable food sources. More sustainable natural habitats to allow for natural food sources.
- Respecting these animals, allowing these animals to live in their natural environment without threat or harm

- Keeping natural areas and stop putting up new communities and banks and shops everywhere
- Ensure there are protected spaces in the city/outskirts of the city for wildlife to inhabit. Do not build in certain areas where they are natural habitats. Catch and release when possible.
- Reclassify bats as NON-nuisance wildlife. Ongoing education on non-harmful deterrents. Set precedent and expectation that humans and wildlife must coexist.
- A greater understanding of ecology, reducing Urban sprawl, and maintaining healthy green space within Calgary. Many of these animals do not wish to co-exist with us either, and would prefer their natural habitat.
- CALGARY is infested with moles/pocket gophers. They have moved into my yard from poorly maintained boulevards. As much as I hate interference with nature these pests need to be controlled and coyotes can't do it in regular communities.
- Greater understanding of their habits, eco-system and what urban features attract these types of wildlife and NOT permitting people to house them as pets
- Restrictions on times that owners can be with their dog in areas where coyotes may be. Kinda like a bear warning in effect. Then if people are there when during the times they shouldn't be or when a van is in effect they are responsible
- Stop realeasing trapped skunks in fish creek park other parks. Take them several kms out of city limits
- Making poisoning them illegal.
Providing more natural habitat within our communities.
- Better information provided to communities on how to manage coexisting with these animals, and better options for aggressive displaced animals
- Humans are the problem not the wildlife. Humans create the problems and them blame the wildlife. destruction of their habitat and then humans are confused by wild life reaction to where did my habitat go?
- Seagulls Pigeons. Get rid of them.
- Better understanding of each species role in the eco-system. Eg. bats eat millions of flying insects, skunks eat grub and wasps, rabbits provide fertilizer and coyotes mange the mice populations.
- They need to be educated on why animals are attracted to living in the city. How they can keep their property tidy and free of areas to den, or food to eat to deter them from their area. Animals have a right to live here too and generally provide no danger to humans if we are not in close contact.
- Strong education.
I wish people could be dissuaded from using rodenticides outdoors because that makes its way up the food chain and kills raptors.
Bats are endangered - they should be the focus of conservation efforts not tagged as nuisance.
There are no ""moles"" in Calgary. Bio-facepalm, people!
- I have no concerns with coyotes or bobcats, I am happy to have them around keeping some of the other nuisance animals under control. Skunks are a big problem and I wish I had some helpful ideas on how to co-exist with them -- I very much dislike seeing them around my community!

- better education and information leaflets in our enamx/bills/community newsletters on how to co-exist. Is there a better word for nuisance? I don't see many of these as a nuisance.
- Wow, all of those animals were here before us. Most help keep other pests in check. Keep your cats inside, don't let them roam, which can attract coyotes. Don't litter, even food, and you will help keep seagulls and magpies from foraging.
- Population monitoring and control. Crows (also read Magpies) seem to have invaded Calgary in the past few years to the peril of other birds such as Robins, Wrens and house sparrows. Mice will invade homes if permitted, wasps will build their nests under decks--these both have to be controlled.
- I live in Cranston area and have wildlife in the area. We walk our dogs in the Fish Creek area and are aware of Coyotes and Porcupines, but we need to be responsible with our animals so that we have no incidents. If we want to live in an area where wildlife live, we need to adapt our behaviours
- Bobcats,lynxs, coyotes,skunks should be removed from neighborhoods. Any Wildlife that is a threat to domestic animals and people. Cats hunt mice,gophers, squirrel. Bats eat mosquitoes.. All good! Leave all the rest on the list alone...people need to be mindful of attractants in yards..ie garbage
- Knowledge of the common animals is important.
- More educational initiatives may help. I know there is a real problem on Nose Hill Park of people ignoring the rules of on-leash areas and letting their dogs harass wildlife, and I think authorized volunteers should be able to hand out tickets if there is not funding to send city staff there.
- Live & let live. Leash your dog.
- stop urban sprawl and a high amount of education to the public. we are the ones who came into their territory and changed their landscape. More signage? more natural habitats areas wildlife only . Dog owners should leash dogs more often.
- Leave the animals alone. Post signage where there could be a danger to humans or animals. Fine those who insist on infiltrating danger zones.
- Property owners/renters should not be putting garbage out for pick up until the morning of scheduled pick up, birds feeders should be less accessible for all wildlife except for the birds.
- more enforcement by by-law and provincial officers
- Provide information on how to deter nuisance wildlife in yards; track reports of aggressive animals and follow up in areas with multiple reports to remove the animals
- educate public about what to do if you encounter wildlife
- Learn about them, enjoy them, shoo them but do not hurt them. They have a right to live too.
- Education about native species and their habits. Proper storage of garbage/food waste to not unnecessarily attract animals where we don't want them
- better understanding of migratory bird act/wildlife act regs (what's illegal, fines). People should contact specialists to deal with wildlife humanely(not try to deal with animals themselves). Better understanding of wildlife behaviour ("nuisance" animals are usually harmless/will leave you alone)
- Get rid of the coyotes, they kill small pets and they are getting bolder in approaching people. We need a more aggressive way to get rid of the coyote population in Calgary. I believe they need to be killed, but that is just one idea.

- Trap and feed rabbits to zoo animals. Survey numbers of magpies (I believe they are high) and eradicate to establish population control - the same would be for pigeons. Fine people who feed wildlife.
Establish systems now so raccoons do not become in Calgary like they are in Toronto.
- First, get rid of pest, nuisance lists, you spread prejudice and hate by having them and people have become violent towards them. Education is well overdue here in Calgary, teaching what wildlife do for our eco-system and how very delicate it is now and should be of highest priority to protect them.
- Closing areas to humans when the wildlife there is breeding.
- More natural spaces and corridors for these animals to move and interact (ie. naturally control population) with other species
- Education
- None of these animals are a nuisance, they are vital parts of our eco-system. If they (bobcats and coyotes) are threatening the safety of humans or pets, they should be relocated. The other animals should be left alone unless they are causing damage to property. They provide valuable cleanup service
- Some need to learn/coached on how to co-exist with these animals. We are invading their home so it's natural that there will be more interaction. If I can walk my dogs responsibly on or off leash with wild animals around then so can others. It's up to the owners to observe and have pets under control
- Education is the key to understanding urban wildlife, particularly the wildlife considered to be nuisances. Ignorance and misunderstandings cause the problems.
- Education to the public on these populations; teaching how to manage their properties to decrease the possibility of these populations from homing on their properties
- Eliminate all coyotes before someone gets hurt
- Remove coyotes from residential areas or deter them, just as other communities have done with garbage bears.
- Keep garbage secure, respect that they are wild.
- Many years ago we had an urban wildlife control team. I would like to see this brought back. They responded to problem wildlife calls providing great education opportunities along with humanely dealing with wildlife.
- I have two small dogs and live close to Nose Hill. I wish I felt safer walking my dogs, but there are a lot of coyotes in our neighborhood.
- Respect for the wildlife - let them be and avoid/work around them. Stop hassling/hazing the wildlife!
- Timely cleanup of street litter and refuse so that animals are not encouraged to seek garbage.
- More enforcement — too many users not following regulations, particularly off leash dogs in on-leash areas
- For the most part they just need to be given space. Don't let your cat or dog roam free, and 99% of the time wildlife can co-exist seems to be more a pet owner problem not a wildlife problem.
- Allow cats to roam freely possibly with some restricted hours to assist in keeping rodents and such under control

- Animals were here first only when numbers reach out of control should city act. Persons walking small dogs need to be aware of danger and keep their animals near. Wildlife rarely bothers humans
- Education on the species and tolerance to a point but when they become threatening to humans and pets then control needs to be readily available not on a 9 to 5 schedule
- Skunks need to be addressed, skunks are becoming increasingly common in residential neighborhoods. My dogs, children, and myself have all been attacked by skunks. More of an effort to trap and remove need to be focused on. Of all the nuisance wildlife listed, they represent the greatest threat
- Stay out of their way and leave them alone. They were here first.
- More education for people on how to coexist. Sadly, many dog guardians don't pick up after their pets and throw away a lot of garbage.
- I think people need to be more responsible. For example, having dogs off leash in a place where coyotes are active. Or letting your cat roam free. I feel it can be more of a people problem. But there is some fencing in certain areas that the city could provide.
- Education for most people on animals would be a huge help. Add it to classes in grade school. Teach people how to live with them.
- More education to Calgaryans to realize these are wild animals not pets
- Prohibit the feeding of squirrels, pigeons and rabbits.
Prohibit the improper setting out organic garbage that wildlife can access.
- More education. They aren't going anywhere.
- Education on how to deal with, live near, and co-exist with these animals.
- Information! Advertising on the importance of leaving wildlife alone!
- I don't consider any of these issues. It's wildlife people need to learn to coexist. If you do have a problem animal being destructive Calgary city should be called to remove and rehome said animal
- Education, we moved into the animals homes
- Education, these animals were here first
- Understanding that they are equally viable to all the space in the city. But let me remove a wasp nest with a spray, let me remove a skunk with a trap, let me put water down a gopher hole, and let my cat go after Magpies even if she will probably lose.
- Providing enforcement when an animal such as a bobcat, coyote or skunk is creating a dangerous situation or a nuisance for residents of Calgary.
- I don't want to exist with these
- Just to leave them alone and always take precaution. Remember we have built onto their land.
- More open space dedicated for wildlife and active humane management by City staff (or appropriate contractor) to allow for successful living for both wildlife, people and domesticated animals.
- Halt the City's expansion into their habitat.
Calgary doesn't need to be continually creating new communities and expansion. Especially with the amount of existing developments, and the flooded housing market.
The city planners should be thinking at building Calgary upwards and not outwards.

- If the animal isn't a threat, let it be. People need to learn tolerance, WE are the ones encroaching into their territory.
- Many people don't recognize that there is a lot of urban wild life, I think a lot of people would benefit from a public service announcement regarding safety and wildlife characteristics. Most of these animals just want to be left alone, and are attracted to improperly discarded garbage.
- First, we should stop referring to wildlife as 'Nuisance' or 'pests.' Secondly, education around the benefits of wildlife and how to coexist peacefully. Third, better enforcement of having dogs on leash (in leashed areas), and enforcement of having cats indoors or supervised leash walk.
- If people would give them space since we took over their homes. The issue would be fine.
- Education/Information: Talk to Calgary Wildlife Rehabilitation Society
- I think a regular inspection of the Calgary areas that are known to have wildlife is needed. Pet owners should be aware of what animals are in the areas they frequently visit with their pets, as well as an up to date notice of what wildlife may be in the area or what has been seen
- Responsible pet ownership to prevent wild animals from roaming the city.
- Stricter laws around keeping dogs on leash (unless in a marked off-leash area), and making sure cats stay inside.

More education in parks and around communities on wildlife safety, to protect both the wildlife and resident animals/people.

More education on when/how to report wildlife issues.

- A better plan for keeping wildlife away from traffic
- I think these wildlife are part of our community. If people are worried about their pet's safety (or their own safety) they should be able to take precautions such as fencing in their yard to keep skunks and coyotes out.
Calgarians may need more information on how to prevent unwanted wildlife.
- Respect for their natural habitats! Urban sprawl is a huge problem, we can not keep building new communities on the land that these animals inhabit, then expect them to disappear. We need to stop building out and start building UP, and ensuring these animals have a protected natural habitat.
- I think more involvement from wildlife/animal services needs to happen as far as predator wildlife impacting people and pets..difficult to say how to better co-exist other than signage/community informed/animals relocated as needed
- I live near a natural area, and one of the best parts of living here is the interaction with wildlife. I live here and consider myself part of a shared ecosystem with all wildlife. I would not want anything done to change the wildlife in my area, including the overabundance of magpies.
- Leave them alone, keep traps and bait only if they nest in or on your property
- Have a relocation policy when ever possible.
- Bobcats and coyotes should be trapped and moved to a natural habitat outside of the city. We have coyotes that come right up to our yard and this endangers our cats.
- Halt the City's expansion into their habitat.
Calgary doesn't need to be continually creating new communities. Especially with the amount of existing developments, and the current flooded housing market.

The city planners should be thinking at building Calgary upwards and not outwards.

- An education campaign on the benefits of these animals.
- 311 Services to remove or control the nuisance at a reasonable fee without a fine or having to hire a private company. We are so overrun with crows and magpies that songbirds no longer nest in our community when it was once filled with various birds. Voles and pigeons are rampant.
- Teach an appreciation of how lucky we are to have the wildlife around. Educate people why trapping and relocating (particularly bobcats) just won't work, and have stiff penalties in place for any cowboys who think it's OK to take matters into their own hands. Educate on how to keep pets safe.
- I think the bird project currently going on to save window impacts should be listened to to avoid building further buildings that kill bats and birds
- Better best control
- We've had some issues with coyotes taking people's dogs. This creates a hostile view of the wild animals. Maybe signage in off-leash areas known to have potentially dangerous animals?
- If there is a threat to humans, wildlife officials should step in. If an animal is injured, same thing. It doesn't always work to just ignore them.
- Signage at areas where they have already created a problem. Relocate or destroy where causing a lot of conflict.
- Educate and/or fine dog owners for not following the on and off leash areas on Nose Hill.
- Ha! It will never happen. But the city should do more about the coyotes - these guys are getting more and more dangerous
- Educating people on the purpose of the wild life. How to coexist. Not harming the wildlife they all serve a purpose in our ecosystem.
- More areas that are safe for off leash to avoid wildlife conflicts.
- Using Media asking people to be tolerant and reminding them of the low risk
- Allow for enough green space for them to live in. People are the ones invading on their home. Especially with all the expanding the city is doing.
- A confident, optimistic approach to upholding a pro-wildlife culture among Calgarians. E.g., the BearSmart program indicates a 'status' to having this knowledge. Suggestions: Training ambassadors for each community, or modelling pro-wildlife enthusiasm via community programs, projects & publications.
- Its only the bobcats and coyotes that worry me as i have both dogs and cats. I put my cats on a leash in my own backyard but now I worry when I see bobcats in my yard over and over and the city does nothing.
- Have protected areas where these wildlife can exist with no interaction from people or pets. Deal with individual ones when problems arise otherwise leave them alone.
- People need to understand that the wildlife have as much right as we do to be here. When walking at places like nose hill, be aware of wildlife. People don't like it, stay in the concrete jungle where wildlife is minimal. Culling because people choose to be uneducated about wildlife is unacceptable.

- STOP BUILDING MORE COMMUNITIES!! There will be no more so called “country living” because of all of the nonsense building! Fill up the empty places first! Take away their homes, they will definitely move into ours! STOP culling! STOP killing! STOP building into their territory. It’s simple! LISTEN!
- People education about coexisting, information posted online or in areas where there are sightings of larger numbers.
- Knowing they are there, what to do do you are not attracting it to your property. What to do if they are on your property.
- Stop referring to them as "nuisance wildlife", for starters. Who gets to decide who's a nuisance? Using what criteria?
- Information
- Protected areas outside city limits for the wildlife.
- More knowledge about the various species and how to handle them when they are a nuisance or safety concerns.
- People should leave wildlife alone
- Education and awareness of the risk and steps to ensure safe interactions.
- Calgary needs to educate Calgarians on the wildlife in our city and what can be done to co-exist. They need facts not fiction and know what to do in the event of an encounter.
- I think it’s fine. They were here first and our ecosystem cannot live without them
- I wish I had a suggestion.
- I have a hard time with harming any of these animals. I feel we should share our environment with wildlife.
- Education, and understanding. Support/noticed in areas experiencing an influx of these animals especially coyotes and bobcats.
- Skunks have been a particular problem, with many dogs being skunked...in the summer on almost a daily basis we smell or hear of another skunking...the city doesnt seem to do anything about it...we need some sort of solution.
- Help with rehoming them.
- The skunks smell up the yard but they also eat a lot of pests so its a mixed blessing. The squirrels get really out of hand but not sure what could be done about it
- PLEASE, stop building more communities and start filling all the empty homes/places sitting abandoned. You take away their habitat, of course they will encroach on our supposed space. Uprooting their eco-system is damaging. Building "green spaces" is a joke to me! Seriously!
- I liked seeing the sandwich boards notifying us of coyote sightings in our local off leash dog parks. Notices of when wildlife are breeding and what they are eating might help us plan around them. Inform people why they should not feed birds, squirrels and the rest.
- Public awareness facilitated by programs offered to public for participation of educating, raising awareness of impact of eco systems

- Information about not leaving food sources out to attract wildlife. We also have to recognize that we have many urban/woodland interfaces and have to learn to live with wildlife. We took over their space
- Education. Ppl are so entitled, they think the animals should be killed. We are in their home and continue to destroy what's left of it. Ppl need to be educated how to safely coexist & handle issues without harming the animals. We want to live close to nature then complain when nature is in our yard
- - Called 311 with coyote not much could be done
  - Fish and wildlife, will kill it.
  - Lived with coyotes for a longtime , control pets
  - More education
  - City sprawling no where to go
  - Diffrence between city-fied coyotes and wild

- cleaning up garbage, proactive
- don't feed wildlife
- releasing rabbits encourages dead wildlife
- education in schools, Eg. social medial pics - respect wild animals to live amongst us
- threat to public = police enforcement = better trained
- it's a nuisance issue = relocated
- lack of fear is an issue
- like for city to come out and trap skunks
- needs, attracts them
- good to have signs when it is time
- forbid pets to interact with these wildlife.
- Education on the benefits of having some of these creatures in the area. For example: skunks reduce the number of moles/mice.
Education on humane ways to limit nuisance wildlife.
Resources to help have wildlife in their area that need to be relocated. Community alerts for dangerous animals.
- Do not throw bird seed on the ground, it attracts prey, squirrels, mice, ground feeding birds, and predators, such as bobcats which we saw stalking them in our area last summer. Use catch trays under the feeders
- I firmly believe that the city should hold educational classes on how to peacefully coexist with the wildlife we are blessed to have in the city.
- Most important is open lines of communication for home owners to access truthful facts from experts for information as to co-exist or deter interactions
- Of the above list, the only ones that can harm pets and that can't be kept out of a yard through fencing is Bobcats. They've become way to comfortable in an urban setting and should be relocated.
- Realize that we are invading there spaces so be understanding
- Contractors should be paid by the city to properly & humanely remove nuisance wildlife if causing a problem in a neighborhood or park.
- Education about their purpose ecologically. For predators, relocating them to non-urban areas.
- more education
- More natural parks spaces, even small ones, so wildlife can also live.
Manmade nesting areas in large areas such as nosehill park to encourage and support wildlife in these areas.
Designate areas in large natural parks that are fur wildlife only - no human access.
- Tolerance and education. Information on how to deter unwanted pests.
- Better population management of pests, such as gophers, skunks, magpies.
In my experience, there has been little to no assistance when issues are reported.
-311 submissions have been closed without solutions
The public awareness that was brought forth for the recent coyote encounters was great.

- more housing and natural areas so they do not feel cornered
- Skunks should be removed free of charge from residential areas. There is no way to coexist with these nuisances. They stink, and are vicious. Their smell penetrates the walls of homes and causes sleepless nights. Burning eyes and smelly clothes.
- I'm not impacted by any of these species. I know others are, however.
- I personally coexist with all wildlife fine, I believe they were here first and we are moving into their spaces and should respect them. By not leaving garbage outside the house to attract wildlife and having spaces for them to live peacefully with plenty of food might help.
- More articles about how smart magpies are, how interesting skunks are (and that they eat the pests in your gardens), how important bats are, what a good job wasps do controlling insect pests, etc.
- people should be responsible to appropriately manage their pets and garbage to co-exist with wildlife. I don't think coyotes and bobcats are nuisance. as the City continues to grow, it's human that invades into their habitat.
- The wildlife were here first and Calgarians need to respect that. Developers are causing the natural environment, which is home for wildlife, to vanish. The University District which was home to bobcats, coyotes, rabbits, etc is an example, Please reduce grey/black squirrels: getting overrun.
- Make landlords responsible for yard maintenance, especially garbage, compost and recycling activities so that wildlife is not attracted to garbage. Tenants may not be aware of, or care for proper garbage disposal practices.
Allow neutered and spayed cats to hunt, reducing prey for predators.
- More wildlife officers regularly patrolling communities and dealing with the wildlife in an ethical and safe way.
- More tolerance. They live here too and each serves a purpose in the eco system. It is unreasonable to think you can just eradicate them and not affect the life cycle of other animals. More education on how to coexist and less termination.
- Education for people on when to be concerned and how to coexist.
- Education about the importance of each species and their value to the well-being of cities.
Information on how to detour the animals to another area that is more suitable for them to live. These areas need to be established to have natural balance.
- We need to do better at protecting the wildlife in our area & appreciating the uniqueness of having these animals among us. So, education & information that these animals should be respected and not harassed. Brochures sent to all households & information sessions about animals in certain areas.
- Education about what to do when you see one of these animals.
- We have over built in their areas, but the coyote population has exploded & is dangerous
- More information about wildlife provided to all calgarians. Like why they are in our spaces (actually we are in their spaces), how to happily co-exist, trouble shooting etc. Info provided by reputable animal welfare organisations and specialists

- Calgarians need to educate themselves and realize that WE are in wildlife's backyard! Be smart about having pets outside off leash. We as a city need to use more natural methods to maintain a peaceful existence with wildlife, as demonstrated by using goats to control weeds in parks-brilliant!
- I think the green spaces in Calgary need to allow for more wildlife to live and if conflict between humans and pets occurs with the wildlife, then the wildlife should not be put down. More intervention on fining individuals who do not follow the bylaws
- let them live unless they bring in or are diseased trap mice & moles (kill), relocate skunks if bothersome, thin squirrel and rabbit population
- Support with relocation of the pest - not everyone can afford to pay. Education around simple deterrents or tips to deal with common problems.
- restrict off leash areas create seasonal no go zones for dogs - heavy fines for people who don't abide by them
Education to curb citizen 'entitlement'
Add a clause to licenses that the owner acknowledges the risks of coexistence with wildlife and will abide by all notices and warnings.
- Keep green spaces available for them to reside.
Education programs.
Wildlife is not allowed to occupy the same residence as citizens. Trapping, poisoning, removal of nuisance should be allowed if wildlife is damaging citizens personal property or residence.
- Educating people on how to live peacefully with wildlife, and providing areas for wildlife to have space away from humans. Also, preventing pets from wandering freely, so they don't interact with wildlife
- Educate the public on looking for wasp nests early, how to inspect your property for evidence of any nuisance wildlife, what can the public do about it, etc.
- We need to stop spreading out and into their territory. I think people need to be aware that we share space. I am not in favor of killing wolves/coyotes/rabbits etc.
- If a wild animal is causing concern they should be relocated. Coyote's denning in an area near parks, playgrounds should be relocated. Raccoons are not native and should be trapped and euthanized.
- More education on how to deal with some of the larger animals (coyotes, bobcats).
- Keeping dogs on leash outside of off leash dog parks!
- Brains and more common sense from the general public
- People not being stupid and respectful that they are invading their natural habitat
- Moles, voles, ground squirrels, etc need City control, specifically on public land adjacent to homeowners property divided by fence. We pay private to treat our property yet issue is from untreated city-side next to homeowners' fence line. Why are we dealing with City Land problems! It's safety too
- Education, live and let live.
- It will never happen people like to complain and the city responds to the few who do complain versus most who try to coexist. most people understand we are growing and are taking over their territory. The city does a good job with most food being not accessible.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Many of these animals are following the food sources of individuals who feed them or the absence of predators. Control by the city of food sources for the predators would be helpful. Some of these animals are destructive in a city or farm situation. Population control measures are required.
- Each animal needs to be dealt with differently. Humans should not have rodents in their homes. Its very unkind to mice to leave pet food out and keep filthy homes that attract mice.
- Ensure dogs are on-leash when not in off-leash parks as they constantly harass and stress natural wildlife.
- City makes it illegal for citizens to put any feed out for ANY wildlife!
- Trap and release. Many of the pest control companies are willing to and if asked will catch and release. Certain species of bats are endangered because of white nose syndrome. The handling of the cougar a few years ago in sw Calgary was deplorable. The city needs to promote catch and release as we.
- Educating the public on how to keep wildlife out of their homes and yards, by keeping pets indoors or on leash where required. Educated the public that wildlife is important and has a place in our ecosystem. It's not the cities responsibility to remove these animals just because they are not liked
- If people would pickle up after their dogs coyotes would not be a problem but dog owners continue not to do this. I don't get it. I am a dog owner myself.
- Leaving certain areas as wild areas where these animals tend to live so that they aren't pushed out into neighbourhoods and yards. Ensuring pets are not off leash in known breeding areas. If the animals are not causing any issues then they should be left alone.
- Having slower speed limits on the roads where wildlife is regularly spotted. I love living in a city where I regularly see coyotes, skunks and rabbits. I think more steps could be taken to help protect the urban dwelling wildlife.
- Teach respect for coyotes, don't start killing them.
- More education.
- Educating the public on importance of these animals to nature's ecosystem. Protecting wildlife by Increasing fines and making legal action possible for those who try to harm animals (bats, coyotes). Calgary's response to injured wildlife is lacking. Usually no help is given. This should change.
- Education, and more aggressive tactics to keep aggressive coyotes from coming into our communities, other than in the green spaces.
- All of these animals have been moved from their homes due to our expanding city. Animal owners need to be diligent when they are out with their animals or let their animals out to respect the wildlife. I actually love seeing all the wildlife when out walking my dogs or sitting on my deck.
- Relocating the animals
- Domestic pets (and their owners) need to give wildlife a wide berth. Fenced offleash areas give priority to our domestic dogs, just as wild spaces give priority to our resident wildlife. Enjoying wild spaces with your pet includes avoiding the height of wildlife activity which is at dusk and dawn.
- More green space integrated into neighborhoods

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- I think that people should be aware of the wildlife in their area and take proper precautions with their pets. This means not walking your dog off leash in a area know to have coyotes or bobcats. Not letting your cats roam the neighborhood.
- Stop building and taking their space!
- Do not feed wildlife and let them be as much as possible... respect their space
- My main concern would be to keep the Alleyways clean. I live in Northeast Calgary and the nuisance animals live in the debris and feed on the garbage in the alleyways
- Stop the over building and taking their habitat away.
- Educate Calgarians about these animals - their useful habits ( such as that bats eat mosquitos), their breeding cycles (so people know when to be extra careful around them), and their interesting behaviour ( e.g. the intelligence of crows and magpies and how they communicate to each other.)
- More park spaces for wildlife.
- Education
- Enforcing yard and garbage clean up so not to attract wild life into the city. Is there no way to control the number of rabbits and coyotes? Some kind of contraceptive implants? Why are there so many domesticated bunnies that people have abandoned in the cemetery across from Stampede park :(
- Maintaining natural areas for them to coexist
- City be responsible & educate the public.Each neighborhood has assigned City rep who should do info sessions at community meetings, post information on the community websites and newsletters, send mailers to houses. City do info sessions at schools colleges, immigrant associations; education is key.
- I think that there are several animals on this list that aren't nuisance animals (bats, crows, bobcats, porcupines, etc.), they are the animals that should exist in this area naturally and should be accomodated to co-exist with. I think there should be more education and respect for where we live.
- It is us to humans to learn to live with all wildlife. Interventions should only be taken if wildlife is directly and intently threatening humans without provocation, or if they are causing potential damage to structures.
- Education, penalties for those who intentionally harm wildlife. Allowing for natural habitat to exist. Instead of developing every inch of land .. case in point Paskapoo slopes. Where are they to exist?
- Move coyotes and bobcats out of neighborhoods!
- Relocating skunks, and culling the coyote population as it has exploded in the past years. They have become a danger to pets in people's own yards. Risk of attacking dogs in parks, pathways and even inner city communities. Could put children at risk.
- More education about how to co-exist with wildlife safely and respectfully. Many people seem uneducated that we share our space with wildlife, and except for pigeons, they were here first.
- Rabbits are the only nuisance I encounter and I would be very happy for some population control to keep the predators out of the city.
- Education regarding proper behavior and interactions.

- Stop taking away their natural habitat! Don't leave garbage outside or otherwise accessible. Learn wildlife safety practices. Get educated on mating seasons. Don't allow pets outdoors unsupervised.
- when they come into the city humanely capture and relocate
- Let them be, it's their living space too
- Educate Calgarians about how best to co-exist with these wildlife, including which ones are native species to our area. Information could include safe interactions, how to discourage them from your property if they are a nuisance, how they interact with pets. etc.
- Education - like don't feed the wildlife (rabbits). How Bats are good for the community (eat mosquitoes)
- Education, awareness and myth-busting for Calgarians, and improved network of interconnected wild spaces for wildlife (so that they can travel between parks/river valley without passing through residential/commercial areas as much.) Recognition that biodiversity, even in cities, is a good thing.
- More green ways, parks and natural spaces in city planning. Public awareness and education on why it is important to have urban bio-diversity.
- Continue to educate the public and make them aware where the predators such as bobcats and coyotes are being spotted. Allow wildlife that becomes a nuisance or dangerous to be trapped and relocated. Create a resource where the public can turn to help them with nuisance wildlife
- Changing the messaging away from referring to these species as nuisance is a good start. Who wants to co-exist with a nuisance? Providing public messaging regarding safety around wildlife and how we can avoid conflict with them while also providing education about their ecosystem benefits
- More support in helping to keep the nuisance wildlife at a manageable level - how to control populations, limit damage to property, and safely remove or deter them from high population areas.
- City of Calgary needs to do something about the massive amounts of rabbits in the city. And provide education to the public on what to do when encountering any of the nuisance wildlife.
- Better access to resources/services to remove truly nuisance/dangerous wildlife such as skunks and coyotes. Education regarding things like bats to dispel myths
- Skunks in residential areas. I understand that they live here as well but there should be more help to remove an active den from a private property. We waited a whole summer for a skunk den to be removed before the neighbors poisoned them. We had no help and could not sit outside or leave dogs out
- Add humans to the top of the nuisance list! Who was here first? Who is the gate keeper for calling a creature a nuisance? What guidelines are used to classify a creature as a nuisance?
- There needs to be more public education, what to do if you see specific animals, when mating season is and do and don't, leash your dogs in areas where there is wild life is present.
- Predators follow food
  - Bats- beneficial
  - Crows/magpies pigeons seagulls annoying

Squirrels foodsource

Wasps [removed] w/wing

- Bats and Bobcats are not a nuisance! 1) Control pets 2) keep garbage in proper containers 3) Understand that these animals were here first and taking precautions to stay out of their way would help.
- we need to do something when the wildlife is becoming a hazard in the city. We are being overrun by skunks in the NE and can't get rid of them. Same with coyotes. We don't have bobcats but other areas of the city do, and i think the city needs to help to relocate all the above
- Accept that we live with nature
- Understanding the habits and purpose of the wildlife
- Education on how to protect your yards, pet, garden from the wildlife. More information on who to call to deal with these animals.
- People just need to be aware of what wildlife is in their area and avoid it if possible. If you chase away the Coyotes some of their meals will flourish and then they become MORE of an annoyance. If you get rid of the Prey the Coyotes will become more of an Annoyance. The Answer is Balance!
- Leave them alone
- Ensure people leave them alone as much as possible, don't leave food around that attracts them.
- I think we already coexist to the extent possible. I don't see a need for change.
- Fining people who allow their dogs/children to chase them
- Info about what we are allowed to do about the nuisance birds.
- Calgarians simply need to educate themselves about the wildlife in their area. We are very lucky that we have the privilege of co-existing with the wildlife.
- Bat should not be nuisances. Is there a way to control magpies? They kill songbirds. Bylaws against feeding wildlife. A way to remove skunks?
- The city needs to control the rabbit population which is bringing larger predators. The city should be getting rid of all the coyotes, skunks, porcupines, and racoons in the city.
- don't have attractants in yards that will bring wild life in. Be respectful of wildlife
- Better understanding that we need to co-exist with these types of wildlife. Note - would not consider each of the identified wildlife equal. ie mice and moles can damage house infrastructure and potential for fire, etc.
- Create areas that attract these animals to keep them away from residential and busy streets. Keeping them and citizens safe
- Training seminars and better coordination with Provincial fish and wildlife officers
- Educational programs that promote peaceful coexistence between these animals and humans.

- Coyotes and bobcats are becoming too comfortable within the City and must be hazed and pushed back out to the City edges. For child safety Coyotes must be deterred from denning approximate to residential areas. Adopt New Zealand's successfully trapping and poisoning of nuisance animals program.
- Most of these animals pose no danger to humans and should not be considered nuisances. Coyotes especially are valuable predators who limit mice and vermin. Dog owners need to control their pets and not let them run off-leash or threaten coyotes. Bats are also valuable predators we should encourage.
- I've been unable to take our small dog to a dog park in town due the fact that a Coyote had attacked and killed someone else's dog in the park last year. There is a lot of tall grass and cover for coyotes to hide in during the summer. Enclosed parks or more established areas may prevent this.
- Control garbage.
- Don't feed them and keep animals inside.
- Educate. If you were pushed out of your home with your family, what would you do? Right. Get over yourselves and make room for other creatures. We created this mess so if we had any grace or intelligence as a species, we'd figure out we were no better than the above list, and, in fact, are worse.
- Giving wildlife some space in parks that is off limits to people & domestic pets.
- Bobcats and coyote can cause harm to pets and young children. Trying to find ways to keep them out of the urban communities. Especially during mating season.
- Education! Education! Education! The public and targaryens need to understand that these animals live with us and amongst us and they aren't going anywhere. We have to educate ourselves on proactive steps to avoid conflict with each species. Maybe the city can produce a proactive booklet for citizen
- Education
- I thoroughly enjoy the wildlife in Calgary. I have seen all the animals above in Calgary. I Firmly believer in the multiple wildlife corridors thru Calgary. As long as the individual animal has not shown to be a danger to humans, why classify them as nuisance wildlife.
- They are not the problem - we are. Humans have encroached on this territory to the point that we are spread out in a variety of habitats, and we can't expect to have no contact. Any decisions made must be at least as respectful of the animal as of the human. Maybe consult AB wildlife for ideas.
- We need to build up not out. Currently we sprawl and build roads where once there were ecosystems. We destroy their homes and their food source then complain that they enter our properties eating our plants or hunting our pets, then we euthanize the predators if they keep coming too close. Not ok!
- Educating the public. Unless they are a threat to anyone, such as aggressive coyotes, leave them alone. But; educating them not to feed skunks, raccoons, etc. is definitely needed.
- Control the food sources. Active efforts to reduce squirrel, rabbit and gopher population would reduce the number of bobcats, coyotes, and raccoons.

- Set out rules that everyone must adhere to when dealing with wildlife, if you are in a park that is on leash, keeping dogs on leash, making sure that about the wildlife and pets are safe. Wildlife was here first. Make sure that people understand that there is wildlife around even if we don't see it.
- That Calgarians weren't so damn uptight. They were here before you were, and humans are invading the wildlife's home and natural habitat. Proper education on handling these so-called "pests" and possible relocation, rather than exterminating them.
- Leave it alone
- Ensuring that garbage is properly contained, so it isn't tempting for wildlife. Having enough green space for animals to live in.
- Education. Wildlife listed above are by and large not dangerous to us and, wasps excluded, are part of what this household enjoys about Canadian cities vs. those in other parts of the world. :)
- Education from wildlife rehab centers on how to live with or humanely deter the animals. Wasps should not be included in the wildlife group. The nest needs to be removed if there is danger of people getting stung.
- I believe magpies should be considered an evasive species. They have displaced the number and variety of song birds Calgary historically enjoyed. Measures should be taken to reduce the populations.
- Education, people have such negative perceptions of these animals. Some people have never even encountered a coyote but are terrified of them. It's needs to be less us against them and more let's try to work together.
- Teach them that many of them are beneficial to us (eg bats eat mosquitos, magpies eat dead critters) and most of them don't like us and would prefer we just leave them alone. I think most people don't like magpies because they are smarter than they are.
- We have a problem with moles. We have been trying to get rid of them. But 3 neighbours all have them so they seem to be spreading. I think more education as some of our neighbours are doing nothing and they are expanding.
- Better education and assistance with communities in close proximity to corridors
Fish creek Nose hill, river ways
- Not a large problem in my area. There are coyotes and rabbits as we live near the Bow River, however they keep their space. Pigeons destroy property frequently and I hate them.
- It is very important to coexist with wildlife. Have designated areas that are closed to the public so that wildlife has room to grow. Educate the general public and start to create awareness in schools on how to coexist with wildlife.
- More education, particularly about coyotes who we share our city with, could help. Co-existing with wildlife is a reality here - more coyote awareness about what to do if you see one, avoiding interaction and keeping pets away from them would be helpful; not waiting until there is a negative encounter.
- Better education on how to manage issues which may arise so that the wildlife can be appreciated without encouraging issues.

- Unless they present a danger, or potentially will (ie predatory behavior) live and let live. (cull when appropriate)
- I am appalled at what is a 'nuisance' in Calgary. We need to learn to live with the animals instead of existing over them. I understand things can be frustrating, but perhaps if people were more educated on such things and cleaner, things could be better.
- Educate the public on how to deter the Nuisance wild life, what there typical behavior is and what may entice them.
- Educate public on how to discourage these animals from residential areas, know what there behavior is
- Education (media) that inform citizens about their habit and natural habitat and how to make properties less attractive to them
- It should be easier to relocate these animals when they become a nuisance. The city's response is often that you're on your own.
Perhaps a program to track the coyote populations would be useful to better understand their behavior and whereabouts.
- I believe that people (the city) have infringed on our wildlife's habitat. People should be aware of their surroundings to avoid contact with wildlife. Calgary should stop spreading out into the habitat of our wildlife. They were here before we were.
- Stop referring to them as nuisance wildlife? We have to expect to co-exist with wildlife that are naturally occurring in our climate zone. Education is helpful.
- City of Calgary could have information on the web on how we can interact or not interact with these animals to keep people and wildlife safe.
- giving these animals space within the city to live naturally so they are not forced into urban areas
- Better access for them to cross roads! Roads are huge barriers. Education - - no animals are a nuisance -they all have a purpose. Ensure we keep environments for them to thrive and eat. Make them a priority. It will make Calgary a better place. NO PESTICIDES! KEEP WETLANDS!
- I think that we should put them all in a pet shelter and then the pet shelter would train them so that we could buy them
- If you find wild animals just leave them alone so you don't get hurt. Just let the wild animal alone.
- I think that the wildlife should be left alone and not treated badly at all. If a certain animal over populates then we can get trained hunters or something like that to go put the animals to sleep.
- I think that if we don't bother the animals, then they will not bother us. If they do become a big problem in Calgary, we can sterilize some of them so they will not reproduce as much. This might be a large expense, but we could have a fundraiser.
- to leave them alone, and be friendly, so the older animals with long experience can tell there babies we are nice.
- Coyotes are coming thanks to all of the people letting their pet rabbits free and that can be annoying. Bunnies poop all over and eat the trees. They should be left at an animal center if people. Racoons and Skunks eat garbage so I suggest to put locks on the garbage cans that are still openable
- none.

- Information regarding safe distances and keeping garbage/pets/anything attractive to wildlife inaccessible. I already don't mind them too much, wildlife should be protected and we should try to stay out of their way more than we do
- Education. If we know how to deal with these animals before they become a problem, they become less of a problem.
- Knowing when the activities of year are and where the active area are
- Knowing when active and where active
- I feel that some of the wildlife in Calgary is overabundant due to the lack of natural predators. Some culling would be welcome (beavers and coyotes)
- Reduce urban sprawl and consider revamping existing neighborhoods
- Only animal I have issue with are pigeons. The city should provide removal services.
- having wildlife training, first and foremost, people need to be educated. coexistence is possible, but only with education. it needs to start there. education on the behaviour of, the benefit of and the cons or things against. bats for example are not nuisance they actually provide a service.
- Relocate coyotes in residential neighbourhoods. They are too aggressive and dangerous. Eradicate wasp nests.
- More education, signage around known dens of coyotes, Open Calgary map showing all 311 calls for different species, by neighbourhood
- Better understanding for the HUMANS that they are encroaching on the animals space.
Except wasps. We can do without wasps!
Limiting urban sprawl and ensuring that animals have space to roam safely.
More public garbage bins (within Fish Creek, walking paths etc) to prevent garbage as an attractant
- Do not encroach on there dens/ homes
Have a system in place for the removal of the animal if it's stuck or made its way into some part of your home so that you don't bother then and they don't bother you
- Public education and respect toward animals and habitat available to them. Reliable agencies to receive reports of sighting or nuisance.
Expectation of prompt response and re-location if dangerous/ habitual encroachment on residential or playground areas.
- Yes
- Community sessions about how to properly deal with, approach (or not approach) wild animals that includes an understanding of the benefits (ie. bat boxes) as well as the risks (ie. mating season for coyotes)
- Not leave outside open garbage or food to lure and feed wildlife.
- do a MUCH better job of hazing the animals out of the city
- Education. The animals were here before us and will be here after we are gone.
- Education to the general public
- Wildlife attractants that are of human origin (poor garbage handling, outside dog and cat food) should be controlled where possible. Bats and bobcats should not be considered nuisance wildlife.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- Covered garbage stored in garages or secure places. Not put out the night before pick up.
- Education and measuring its effectiveness is key to co-existence. Start with the predators. Coyotes and bobcats play a critical role in managing the populations of the rodents and other animals. All of the wildlife listed are a part of our ecosystem.
- There is no co-existing with Coyotes, Porcupines, skunks or bobcats. They DO NOT BELONG IN THE CITY where small children are at risk or pets.
- More effort on education in park areas
- We need to coexist with nature
- Control coyotes population, other than that nature will take care of the rest.
- We have a serious problem in Calgary with crows & magpies. They are noisy, make a mess by picking through garbage, and do not allow other bird to live in the area where they are - very predatory in that way. I think the city should consider a program to control them.
- Educate people to co-exist; teach of the benefits and ask why they feel so entitled and that their own needs are superior to any other creatures. Increase stigma, media awareness and punishment against offenders.
- Some sort of way to report where these nuisance species are and if there is an infestation. Some sort of way to remove them or assist with removing them.
- These “nuisance” wildlife are just trying to live in their natural area but now are becoming a nuisance to people and their small pets. What would help if to give these wild animals a wide berth and respect that certain areas including dog parks will have normal, wild animals in the area.
- Teaching Calgarians how to safely interact and avoid wildlife.
Garbage cans should be left closed and if animals are found in areas where they can pose harm Calgarians should expect them to be safely removed.
- Education. More support to wildlife rescues.
- I disagree with most of these 'nuisance' categories. I'd say the overbearing, ignorant, greedy City of Calgary that lacks compassion and humanity could itself be considered a nuisance.
- Wildlife bridges, more green space, safe relocation of potentially dangerous animals, better waste management and closable waste bins, education to citizens on safety in green areas, etc.
- Educate the public. I really don't see any of these as nuisance wildlife. They were here first and we are encroaching on their territory. We need to modify our behavior, not the other way around. An interactive map or website tracking sightings / encounters would be helpful. Its about being aware.
- Humans and wildlife live in harmony here.
- It is so important to increase education of people, to encourage respect and compassion for animals. There are ethical science based ways to deal with animals that can benefit people and animals alike. The greatness of a nation and its moral progress can be judged by the way its animals are treated.
- Education and learning to coexist. It's heartbreaking when these animals are treated as vermin and killed

- Education. We need to educate Calgarians that as the city expands and encroach further into wildlife's natural habitat, we are bound to see more of them, and we have a duty to take due care such as leaving them alone and keeping tidy communities.
- HOW ARE BEAVERS NOT ON THIS LIST??? Beavers are causing so much damage to the urban forest along the rivers. They kill so many trees every year. They need to be dealt with - removed, trapped, whatever. They do not belong in an urban environment! (This is not enough space to deal with all species.)
- They have as much right to be here as we do. The more we build and expand the more we will limit their space to be free and wild. Wild life corridors must be protected and further building restricted.
- HOW ARE BEAVERS NOT ON THIS LIST??? They destroy the urban forest. They are responsible for the destruction of hundreds of trees. They need to be relocated, trapped They are a nuisance and should be dealt with more effectively. This isn't enough space to comment on all species listed here.
- Create space for these animals to survive within the city rather than try to obliterate them. Try to keep all the animals in balance with each other.
- You won't have as many predatory animals if you get rid of the overpopulation of rabbits, voles/moles, and mice. It's crazy how many there are!
- Pick up pet waste. Pet waste is an attractant, and for those that do not pick up their pet waste, it naturally attracts wildlife and results in conflict.
Also, when people let their cats roam, it also attracts wildlife, and often results in the cats being attacked by wildlife (coyotes).
- Far greater collective consciousness than our species is capable of achieving.
- If we stopped considering wildlife nuisances. We are the invaders in their habitat and we should be focusing on how we can coexist. We should be looking to protect wildlife, and by default ourselves, not treating natural spaces as our private playground to do whatever we wish. Also, pick up dog poo.
- We MUST learn to co-exist. As humans we have the capability to keep ourselves, our children and our pets safe. The creatures we share our communities with have just as much right to be there as us.
- Educate the public because social media causes misinformation. Create corridors for animals to travel to and from the river, etc.
- More education ...
- Education, limit pesticides use, do not feed, keep garbage in recepticals.
- Easy access to information on wildlife situations such as: what to do when there is a Bobcat in your neighbourhood? How to avoid attracting pests (skunks to your property). What do you do when squirrels nest in your roof?
- Leave them alone.
- The city should be killing coyotes that are trying to attack/interact with humans and their pets.
- Squirrels should be allow but all other animals, particularly Raccoons, coyotes, bob cats etc., pigeons, crows, gophers and moles etc. should be eliminated in city limits
- more education

- EDUCATION!!! My neighbourhood (Brentwood) has many skunks and bobcats. People leave garbage out all the time, in yards and alleys. I see the skunks going through it and making a mess. Teach people about skunks and how to not attract them. I enjoy the wildlife in the city. I don't consider a nuisance
- City employees should be authorized to assist all Calgarians when these animals, dead or alive, are on private property and causing homeowners concerns.
- public education on what to do scenarios, public notice posted in areas where they are
- stopping the sprawl of the city.
- Education, people fear what they don't understand. Educate how to live in peace with them, about the animals needs and how they contribute to a healthy ecosystem, how to treat animals with respect and kindness (e.g., don't refer to them as nuisance as above many that is a licence to kill or harm).
- For people to stop being so stupid and educate themselves regarding wildlife. They were here first.
- I find magpies will attack small dogs or people if you are near their nest. Wasp control if possible they get very bad. Other wild life I have not had an issue with.
- Huge fines for people caught feeding or baiting wildlife! Taking calls about these reports seriously and being able to fine.
- Education of the public to understand how nature works how these animals benefit the env. and how t help them live independent healthy coexistence. Referring to them as nuisance is detrimental to how people see them present a positive & healthy view of nature and the animals that live with us
- Education; communicating with people to tell them about non-violent ways to discourage nuisance wildlife from entering their private space, and to help them understand the body language of animals so that they know when an animal is posing a threat, and when it is simply going about its life.
- No culling Maintain migratory corridors through parks & protect spaces. We love animals. Indigenous people understand wildlife in a different way. Take the time to commune with nature. Then we'll know how we can coexist.
- If people aren't getting hurt, let wild animals live in the city.
- If they're in their natural baitat & not hurting anyone, leave them alone.
- Maintained parks when they can be around with trees. I think we should lern how to co-exist with wildlife as long as it is safe.
- The city should do more to encourage more wildlife. It makes life in the neighbourhood better. Educate people on how to be safe around wildlife, and so that the animals are also safe.
- I don't rwally have any issues with wild animals in Calgary. I like going to Fish Creek Park. I think bringing in Hawks to deal with pigeons is a good idea.
- Raise awareness that these animals live in the city. People should know who to contact if there's an issue. I feel safe in general, but some people may not.
- You can see coyotes raoming down the bike path in Beddington. It's a little scary. They can eat your pet out of yard. I don't know what we can do.

- Animals on leash. Protecting Parks and Corridors. Education at Dog meetups & partnership with Dog/pet businesses.
- We should not hunt them. Leave them in their own habitat.
- There needs to be more education on how to deal with wildlife. People need to know to stay away. Growing up next to Nose Hill, we saw coyotes & never had an issue. Keep animals out of garbage. Secure it properly. Stop feeding peanuts. There should be a bylaw that people shouldn't be allowed to feed peanuts to wildlife.
- Should have more parks where they could freely roam. We shouldn't kick them out of their home.
- Keep companion animals safe indoors at night especially cats.
- - Leave alone
- - stay inside
- - Alarm houses
- - Educate
- - Sprays for protection
- - No litter
- - Quieter environment
- - Bigger forests
- - Planting plants
- - garbage cans designed
- - Put up signs (don't hurt, warning that they're there)
- - More spaces for animals to live & enjoy
- - Education on what to do if you see
- - No hunting in city
- - Animal drills
- - Rescue centres for injured animals
- - Don't approach wildlife
- - fenced areas for wildlife
- - walkways fenced off
- - Humane mouse traps
- Provide city personnel for trapping skunks.
- Stop expanding the city into areas where wildlife are being forced into urban settings. If some higher intelligence forced you out of your home, bulldozed it and then set up shop without re-locating you somewhere appropriate I would think you'd take offence to this. Why is wildlife any different?
- knowledge about how to rid them from our spaces, especially with pigeons, wasps and mice. I also think that Woodpeckers should be added to this list.
- Education, skunks living for 15 yrs, best security system ever & eat wasp nests! magpies & crows city should remove nests in the spring from all trees, devastating endangered birds. Pigeons should be removed from indoor parkades like Chinook- health hazard. The others are fine
- More fences to keep coyotes in their designated habitats (ie: Nose Hill Park), so they have less chances to cross over into neighborhoods nearby. A monitoring system to alert citizens of where coyotes have been spotted recently so as to avoid those areas when taking dogs into these off leash areas.

- We have a big rabbit problem in our neighborhood, so I'd like to see more efforts done by the city to humanely remove these pests.
- Education. Wildlife should be allowed to continue to live and thrive. People need to understand that we are in their yard... they are NOT in ours.
- Moles - earlier intervention before they get so out of control and do so much property damage
- More education for ppl on how to coexist with these animals. Less development into their habitats
- In my experience, this is being handled properly.
- If you are aware of where you are and what you are doing and the time of day or time of year and use the brains god gave you not act like prey you should be fine
- Maintained feeders in popular areas for certain species to encourage their population to remain in certain acceptable areas in safety.
- all wildlife has a purpose on this earth. We as animals also have a purpose on this earth. Unfortunately we pollute air/water/strip land of nutrients, war, kill, rape, abuse, neglect etc... all lives on this planet. the nuisance is = HUMANS! thats who you should be concentrating on not wildlife
- Education - what roles the animals play in our ecosystem; how to deal with these animals when encountered; what assistance the City can and cannot provide when dealing with these animals.
- Neutering program for stray bunnies. Severe fines for dumping domestic rabbit, law against the sale of bunnies in pet stores.
- Educate public. Ensure their pets are vaccinated, especially for rabies. Ensure their pets are always under their care and control. Do not allow pets to run at large.
Unfortunately, this continual urban spread and transportation "improvement" negatively impacts wildlife habitat.
- Educate people and help them understand wildlife behaviour, the place of wildlife in our habitat (why it's important), the dangers of interacting, etc. Also, what constitutes appropriate interaction/engagement with wildlife and why.
- Clear boundaries for wildlife and heavy fines if your dog is caught chasing wildlife as well if caught crossing into a wildlife only zone!
All new communities need to take into account of space for wildlife and not encroach on their space
- Maintaining waste within city parks, community gardens and wetland areas& implementing designated areas for them into communities with these concerns.
- More education to the public on the wildlife, what to do if seen, how to properly trap ect, what not to do
- Education on what to do with mammal encounters, especially coyotes, who have become desensitized. Magpies, pigeons and wasps serve little purpose. Nest removal if magpies close to residential buildings.
- Stop treating wildlife like domesticated animals! Also do not cause them harm. The city is growing but this is still their home. They have a right to be here. Stop feeding them.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Magpies are a nuisance. As are skunks. Would be nice to have more support and control options from the city. Coyotes are a danger to pets and humans as they are accustomed to people
- Not sure. Got a skunk that wanders the neighborhood now and then. Seems fine. Gotta be on my toes sometimes!
- Criminally charge individuals who purposely harm or kill wildlife within our city limits . I have often seen drivers swerve towards an animal running across road ways... this is a sickening act to witness.
- Preserving fish creek and other areas of provincial parks. The more the city expands the more “pests” will try to find new homes in our neighbourhoods. Also ensuring that individuals dispose of garbage properly. Garbage sitting outside of bins attract skunks, wasps etc.
- What they could take out of their gardens and not leave out that would attract them, as well as more information immediately available to learn how to deal with an encounter
- Clear public messaging in collaboration with strategic stakeholders on feral rabbits.
Information on humane pest control
Messaging on wildlife areas and effect on wildlife of pet owner behaviour.
- Better signage in parks and education in schools on how to enjoy and respect wildlife from a distance.
- More education so that we know how to handle possible close encounters with some of the more aggressive species.
- - info provided to citizens about wildlife in the area and how to coexist with them
- do not allow dogs off leash in on-leash areas. This disturbs wildlife and may push them into areas they wouldn't otherwise be in. Not sure how to mitigate the other pesky "wildlife" like squirrels, magpies, rabbits. If people are leaving food out for this wildlife, that should be stopped.
- Bats should not be considered nuisance wildlife, given the volume of mosquitoes they eat. The aim towards all wildlife should be coexistence, unless a safety issue or extreme nuisance occurs.
- More green space required when developments expand the city (ex the developments for the Southwest and West ring road). More education (short 1 min segments on local news channels?) about who to reach out to who can humanely relocate/remove animals that cannot coexist so people don't try themselves.
- I'm surprised that so many wild species are labelled "nuisance wildlife." Perhaps we should re-think this. In respect to coyotes, bobcats, and other species that occupy natural areas, I would encourage better signage and stricter rules for keeping dogs out of these areas.
- Information for people on what to do when they see/encounter potentially dangerous wildlife.
- Wildlife corridors that are off limit to dogs and people. The new development Wolf Willow at the south end of Fish Creek Park cuts off access for wildlife to leave the city, there's no more corridor. We're operating like we don't know the solutions but the developers run the city apparently.
- clear public messaging in collaboration with strategic stakeholders on feral rabbits information on humane pest control
messaging on wildlife areas and effect on wildlife of pet owner behaviour

- Education around the biology and ecology of the animals listed as nuisance wildlife. How to prevent these animals from making a home in their yard and precautions humans can take when in urban parks. Animals have a right to a safe space too.
- The animals were here first but maybe a nature preserve some can be taken to if where they are is unsuitable.
- Education and less judgement about the wildlife that are pushed into the city limits due to ongoing development. Smarter pet ownership (ie: don't leave animals unattended in yards or walk a dog off-leash in an area known to have "aggressive" wildlife (due to protecting young or breeding)).
- Allow us to shoot magpies.
- Leave no garbage out and to watch over your pets. Discourage all wildlife but do no harm.
- Need to be educated, many think most wildlife is dangerous. Wildlife should be left alone. Eg; need to understand a bobcat & coyotes won't kill them, but protect small pets. Skunks give notice by stomping their feet before spraying. Deer & rabbits leave their offspring alone & should not be disturbed.
- living near fish creek, I accept that wildlife may enter our community, however repeated sightings of a bobcat or coyote for example causes me concern for the safety of my pets in my own yard.
- They are needed in the ecosystem. I am scared of coyotes, but I understand why we need them.
- Education that these animals are simply trying to co-exist in their habitat. Perhaps, we could have communities in the burbs that would offer a dissolved boundary between suburban and nature. Animals found within the city could be relocated.
- Learn to appreciate wildlife. Human existence is constantly expanding and destroying the natural world and destroying the habitat ("home") of wild animals. They have no where else to turn. Calgary must share our river valley habitats with other species unless they are all turned into real estate.
- Information on humane pest control
Feral Rabbits: Clear public messaging in collaboration with strategic stakeholders
Other Wildlife: Messaging on wildlife areas & effect of pet owner behaviour on wildlife in these areas.
- cull the rabbits and the magpies
- Education of the public. How to deal with them and why you can just leave them alone.
- Leave them alone and only deal with the ones posing a problem to public health.
- Public education from the city
- Education on how the environment benefits from wildlife; each animal serves purpose in nature.
- Clear public messaging in collaboration with strategic stakeholders on feral rabbits (ie: Calgary Humane Society, vet clinics, etc); Information on humane pest control; messaging on wildlife areas and effect on wildlife of pet owner behaviour
- Not categorizing them as nuisance. Provide education about their benefits. We can easily coexist with these animals in most cases.
- We need to stop encroaching on wildlife habitats. We also need to limit usage of certain pesticides that are impacting bees, bats, etc. The city also needs to have a wildlife call line to come and get injured wildlife, and not leave it all to the province. Loud events, cars, etc should be limited

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- I think raccoons, feral rabbits (escaped/released) should be captured and euthanized, they are invasives and should be eliminated before becoming the major problem they are elsewhere. Skunks need removal from residences, perhaps then euthanized.
- People need to understand that animals move in when their habitat is invaded. They come in if food is easily accessible. Don't want wildlife, don't feed them, don't leave pets out unattended, don't let cats roam. With no food source the wildlife might stay away
- This is tricky. I'd agree most of the critters on this list are nuisances and should be population controlled (trapping, culling, reproduction control, City removal). Especially wasps and magpies, those guys are jerks. I'd add geese. I disagree that bobcats and coyotes are a nuisance in the city.
- I believe people should get along with wildlife, instead of targeting it because it does not fit into the perfect white-picketed house scenarios of a distorted view of the world.
- There is no definition here of what nuisance wildlife is or what that definition and inclusion in this list means for the wildlife. The concept of nuisance wildlife is a very 19th century concept and does nothing to address the issues of today where many creatures are becoming endangered because of habitat destruction. Most people have a very poor understanding of any wild animals or the out of doors. My [removed] neighbour tells me he shoots magpies and I have told him I will call the police if I ever see him doing that. Could we not have more education about wildlife and just try to get along? I enjoy seeing these animals in my neighbourhood. Many of these animals are native species and should not be treated like pariahs.

Vicious dogs

Expectations of owners

- Extremely heavy fines to owners of vicious animals to deter this. And bans on these owners being able to own pets at all with frequent check ups to ensure the offending parties aren't violating this. Vicious pets should not be allowed.
- My concern is that vicious animals are either ferally wild, bred with ferally wild dogs or are badly treated by their owners. Domestic dogs aren't often attacking humans. Any startled creature can only convey fear using their nature. A court is not equipped to decide. You need multiple opinions
- That they keep them under control and undergo dog training to help alleviate and aggressive dog.
- I think they should be expected to work with an animal behaviourist to work on the root cause of the aggression. Often it's the lack of training and socialization that results in aggressive dogs.
- Why do we allow people to even own vicious animals. Catastrophe waiting to happen. Ban large breeds
- Mandatory training for owners. Paid for by those owners.
- To vocalize them as such to passerbys. To retrain them.
- I expect them to purposefully move away/cross the street from other dogs/people when in public on top of being muzzled.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- I expect them to be muzzled and under the control of an adult as the law dictates, but realize that management always fails. I expect the owners to be working with a qualified professional that utilizes modern, scientifically validated training with welfare first in mind.
- they need to go for training!!! the owner need to learn how to properly harness and muzzle there animal the also need to know how to handle there animal. you can be over the age of 18 and be pulled by your dog if you have a aggressive dog you yourself needs to be trained how to handle any situation
- To take responsibility and act proactively to control their dog and avoid attack. We have a medium-size dog who was attacked twice by larger dogs of two different ignorant owners who didn't want to take responsibility and did nothing to prevent such behaviour.
- To follow the rules and to understand that not everyone is as comfortable with their animal as they are.
- shame the owners into having total control of a loving animal + member of the family. Training if fined. Before + after behaviours improve.
- Behavioural training by someone with appropriate experience-not trainers that teach a dog not to jump by "ignoring" it. I'm all for positive reinforcement training but dangerous behaviours need to be dealt with differently.consequences for this Initially and this could be Avoided completely
- To understand the needs of their specific animal and take the proper precautions to ensure the animal is not harmful to others. To understand THEY are responsible for the actions of their dog.
- Enter into a training program and no breeding policy
- Be in control of their animal at all times. Warn those around them not to approach the animal. Be prepared to take responsibility if their dog hurts or kills a person or other animal.
- Owners should be charged and vicious dogs (although blameless) should be put down. Pit Bulls are a beautiful, kind breed but with the wrong guardian they are a deadly animal with the ability to kill, physically injure and emotionally scar a person or pet for life. Owners should severely charged.
- use common sense. i see many dogs that should be muzzled and yet are not
- I believe that the owner and dog should be evaluated on why the dog is vicious, whether it is protective or trained to be, and when that is determined both the animal and owner should go through training to prevent other incidents.
- They should be charged if there is an offense, and not be allowed to own animals in cases of attacks.
- Notify neighbours and/or guests that their dog is vicious.
- Confused. I often hear of seized animals in Calgary being euthanized, not declared vicious. Is there a loophole in the bylaw that allows this? If the animal is declared vicious it should be returned to the owner with conditions stated above. Never euthanized. If the animal attacks criminally charge
- The owner needs to be trained. Most vicious dogs are the result of stupid owners.
- They should provide clear passage for other pedestrians and citizens.
- Learn proper training techniques. Try not to be a total jerk and deliberately raise a vicious animal.
- Cannot verbally harass other people e.g. egg on the dog to snarl or provoke an aggressive stance.

- That they get appropriate training to de-escalate the dog through behavior training and training for themselves to take control of the situation.
- Mandatory private animal obedience classes which needs to be passed in order to keep the animal.
- I expect them to be required to take dog training classes to gain better control of their dog, and to learn what they were doing wrong in the first place to cause the dog to become vicious as it is a learned behaviour.
- I think any dogs that are declared vicious should be put down. To believe that all people over the age of 18 can control a vicious dog is a false sense of security. The dog could easily over power an owner and attack someone/something else.
- I firmly believe poorly behaved animals is derived form lack of education. If an owner's pet is known to be in any way aggressive, they should have to take a basic online course in regards to animal behaviour and training.
- Owners of a dog deemed vicious or even one that is reported as vicious but not deemed vicious should have to take behavioural dog training to try to work with the dog to minimize its risk. There are a lot of dog owners that do not take training seriously, do not have appropriate control of their dog
- Having control at all times and secured properly
- Mandatory participation in dog training program specific to aggressive dogs.
- There should be no vicious animals allowed in Calgary. As this is not always preventable, owners animals must have recall or be on leash at all times. No exceptions. Muzzles are extremely useful.
- To communicate explicitly that their dog has been declared vicious.
- A sizeable fine along with mandatory dog training requirements.
- That they be licensed
- That they live outside of city limits with their vicious animals in a fenced in area. Minimum fence heights.
- The opportunity to be re-tested if rehab occurs successfully. Sometimes the dog is labelled vicious due to a provoked incident and this label follows them for life.
- I am fine with this for dogs with 1 offense only
- They must do training courses held by certified professional dog trainers. With refreshers completed every year.
- They should have to take mandated courses or training alongside the dog to correct or improve the behavior.
- None
- no off leash , muzzle if appropriate
- Professional training help. Not just to train the dog but for the owner to better understand the situation and take responsibility for their dog in an informed way.
- I would fully expect the owner to take responsibility and have their animal put down. However, I understand the not every person is capable of owning up to this.

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

When on public property, a vicious animal: Must be muzzled and harnessed/short leashed, and
Be under the control of the person over age 18

- First, no dog breed is inherently vicious. Charge the owner, remove the dog and rehabilitate it.
- That their ""secure"" enclosures be subject to inspection
- That owners must undergo mandatory training to train/condition their pets, and provide proof of certification.
- I have a huge problem with all stipulations requiring walking by individuals over the age of 18 even on private property and also public property.
- None
- Have them wear identifiable patches on harnesses (like service dogs) so they can be respected and treated appropriately.
- All owners should be compelled to take obedience training with their dogs, especially those with vicious animals. Why are people allowed to have vicious animals anyway? It makes no sense.
- Vicious animals should be euthanized.
- How about not being able to leave their private property with that animal because taking chances on anyone getting hurt by a "known vicious animal" sounds like a lawsuit and super irresponsible.
- Attend education on management techniques
- Keep them on leash!! I want all dogs on leash outside of dog parks. My dog is reactive and may bite their dogs while he is on leash.
- The pet owner must register with an animal behaviours specialist to help them deal with the dog and training.
- Just for them to keep their animal under control at all times when in the public, and not put them in a situation where they have no recourse but to defend themselves.
- Owners of vicious animals should have lifetime ban on pet ownership.
- None
- They must get a trainer involved as the animal and the owner requires training to make sure that the issue does not happen again.
- They should have to have the dog wear a "vicious dog" vest in public spaces.
- Control, not letting them run loose, not taking them to dog parks. Being responsible.
- I'd like to see that after 2-3 warnings that an owner be required by law to take a class to prove their fit to have said dog. It would save a ton of random attacks and dogs getting free of their owners.
- Not allowed in off leash dog parks, even if dog is leashed
- This seems good.
- I don't believe an animal should be caged or tied out to bark and suffer from the elements. Vicious animals should not be kept .period. If they are vicious, they are suffering and likely with bad people and it's a matter of time before they hurt or kill. Why would someone want a dangerous animal?
- That animal be update on shots and yard be locked
- I feel like mandatory training should be put in place.
- None

- have the animal assessed and owner follow through on rehabilitation or recommendations.
- I expect that they should have care and control of their animals. The dogs are on leashes where the owners are clearly not in control of them, and I have met people in the parks that have been bit and the owners of these animals disappear. The City MUST do more to provide information on what to do
- Get them trained by a professional who deals with vicious dogs.
- Agree with current bylaw.
- dogs MUST be tethered/leashed at all times unless in their houses or confined/fenced properties..owners MUST be fined high enough so it's a deterrent, even the first time, unless taken to a court to be overturned..
- I don't expect owners of a proven vicious dig to comply with any of these rules.
- That they stay away from public spaces where that animal might interact with other pets and people. That they are securely contained at home. If there is an incident in which their animal attacks a person, animal or property, they are financially responsible for the costs associated with that attack
- 1)I would hope they would keep them on a leash if outside their securely fenced yards.
2)Have a sign stating to beware of dog.
3)Muzzle if needed when leaving yard
- Be responsible and recognise your dog can be aggressive. Not be in denial.
- I agree with the current rules. Owners of confirmed vicious animals should be consulted with by an Animal Control professional and should be recommending euthanasia. Animals that are vicious typically have severe mental health issues and are typically not enjoying their life.
- Mandatory human training. Mandatory dog training. If the human isn't capable of responsible pet ownership, they lose entitlement privileges.
- 2nd offence, put the animal down. They have no use in cities.
- Collar tags to identify readily from a distance to stay away
- Vicious animals should only be allowed in specific locations (not near playgrounds/schools), and have a warning leash/vest
- The above regulations seem appropriate for this type of animal, I just wanted to emphasize that no breeds of dog should be regulated as a whole - the behaviour of the animal is due to how is was raised combined with its genetics, not just based on genes alone.
- I do not have any additional expectations other than those imposed by the City. I assume the exception to the above rules is when the animal is visiting the vet and therefore on public property but requires the muzzle to be removed for assessment/treatment.
- I have a concern about off leash areas. I think there should be an area for small dogs and an area for big dogs. Separation by height/weight. I do not take my dogs to any off leash areas anymore as I have experienced vicious dogs there and they are never muzzled!
- Enforce above.

- I expect owners of vicious animals (including cats) to keep the animal under control. It would be helpful if there was a way to identify the animal in public so that children, and others, would be aware that this animal does not respond well to others.
- Supervised if outside on private property and not locked up
- Must get the assistance of a behaviourist specializing in vicious animals.
- Control your animals, especially in public places, including dog parks and PLAYGROUNDS!
- If a dog chases another dog that is a vicious dog like really go to a dog park this is what dogs do. Wording of this bylaw has been abused in courts. Dogs chase children people etc they may grab a child going in traffic. They May protect from snake animal etc.. This Bite pull tug drag is a vicious dog?
- To take proper measures to control their animal at all times, but sadly that doesn't happen and then a person, usually a small child, is mauled or killed. Too often the dog(s) escape and run loose. It happens time and time again.
- Disposal of the animal.
- Training for owners. Enrollment of pets in behavioural classes or else be rehomed.
- Complete training program on how to keep control over your animal
- Owners of vicious animals me too except the seriousness of the situation and expect that if they do not fulfill what is required by law that the animal will be taken away and or destroyed
- should not be permitted to reside in a residence with children (under 18) should be muzzled when in the presence of a minor/child under 18
- Harsher penalties for dog owners fleeing the dog parks when their dog attacks another dog. Ownership for the attack and compensation for the vet bills.
- If it's vicious chances are it can't be rehabilitated and it needs to be put down. I'm a pet owner and lover but there needs to be zero tolerance for attacks, especially those causing serious injuries and/or death.
- Depends on the circumstances, I myself would not keep an animal that has been proven to be vicious. the risks in my thoughts would be too great.
- Dogs are a reflection of owners and training. If the dog is poorly trained the owner is 100% responsible. Mandatory training at the owners expense should be a bylaw penalty with an instructor assessment at the end and additional requirements allowed at the instructors. Identifying the animal
- To ensure they can never escape. Proper training with an expert should be mandatory.
- That the owners keep vicious animas restricted to their own property. That owners must obtain licenses and training to keep vicious animas
- Owners need to have positive training to help them understand and how to effectively help their dogs.
- To take responsibility and accountability. Have their dogs ALL licensed and current vet records available at any time to show vaccinations are up to date. That there are HUGE FINES, consequences to the owners as it is NEVER the animals/dogs fault but ALWAYS 100% the owners fault

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- Extensive training for the individual.
- Animals are under watch and unable to escape from their yards or homes.
If the animal bites it is put down
- Absolutely no Pit Bull (American Staffordshire Terriers) dogs.
- I think they should keep their animal under control.
- It must be mandatory for them to seek help from a professional and licenced trainer.
- These requirements all sound very reasonable. The path and effort required to have an animal declared vicious seem unreasonable. Example: if me or my child is bitten by a dog, how much time must I take off work in order to have a decision made to require a dog be muzzled?
- They acknowledge what vicious behaviour is and follow all the rules. Owners fo vicious animals be responsible for ALL costs associated with any injuries caused by their animal.
- To be held responsible & accountable for any & all damages, monetarily.
- Vicious animals should not be allowed in public off leash parks. Muzzles can suddenly come off and leashes can make aggression worse. In an off leash park, all dogs should be safe to interact with all other dogs.
- None.
- All dogs in the City of Calgary must have city dog licence attached to a collar, that must be worn on a dog at all times, when the dog is in the outside yard area of a residential city property, even if property yard is fully fenced front and back.
is fully fenced in the front
- Vicious dogs are not responsible it is the owners who trained these poor animals to be this way
- There is no need for vicious animals to be kept.
- I expect them to seek proper training to improve their dogs behaviour
- Not allowed in city
- Registration, mandatory behavior classes, clearly labeled on the dog and rescues need to be regulated when out dogs to inexperienced people
- Vicious dogs have no place in society. Dogs have been bred to pay positive attention to us. One's that don't and are dangerous shouldn't be put back in the same home where they have been taught or encouraged this behaviour. With small exceptions the animal should be put down.
- To go to a professional trainer to deal with the issue
- Ensure pet owners have financial resources available, like liability insurance in case animal cannot be controlled
- The animal should be muzzled when outside if its home.
- What is in place is fair. If you have a vicious animal you need to protect it as well as others
- Carry liability insurance and identify their animal with a coloured collar or vest au be red for caution?)
- Any dog could be perceived as a threat (people have phobias, allergies, emotional limitations) All dogs except muzzle should have same control regulations
- That a record be kept should they have a second vicious animal, and if there are repeat vicious animals by the same owner, that owner should not be permitted to own animals.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Some kind of vibrant visual indication of a problem dog that can be observed from a significant distance for everyone including the problem animals safety
- Be be charge, to have the pets removed and to be made to take courses in being a responsible pet owner
- I expect the owner to have control at all times.
- they should keep them under control and not in a public place around people /pets.
- People should not have vicious animals. The animal was obviously trained wrong or mistreated so those owners should not be allowed to keep the dog or own dogs going forward.
- If an animal is known to be vicious, they animal should be put down. The owner should be responsible for any attacks on people or other animals, they should have to keep their vicious dog in their house.
- Signage on fences/gates and front doors for delivery personal and door to door sales people.
- if in dog park: remove dog from dog park immediately private property: contained in a safe and secure area
- To be kept in control at all times. It is not dogs fault but the crappy training that they have had.
- Not permitted in off leash areas or parks.
- The owner should need to have proof of training to deal with this type of animal
- Not loose in a yard as they can scale fences and get out. And not allowed to show aggressive behaviour to their neighbours. Not left outside unattended.
- Know your dog. Know it's triggers and work to get over them and work to keep them away from said triggers. If being in public causes them to lash out take them to private parks to exercise until they've worked past their issues
- Locking an animal in a kennel is cruel and only makes it more vicious. Owners must attend training classes if they have a vicious dog ( the cause is poor training in the 1st place). I2nd, once a dog bites once, (serious bite) it will bite again. It should be put down.
- NO POINT HAVING EXPECTATIONS OF OWNERS OF VICIOUS ANIMALS...TOO LOW OF AN IQ.
- Vicious animals should not be allowed in any public place! We jail vicious people for a reason...vicious animals should be confined indoors so that there are no excuses by the owner...their lease broke, I didn't see or I didn't know or they escaped!
- No vicious dogs should be allowed period. My daughter was bit when a neighbour was opened their garage and the dog was off leash. Again the victims barely have rights and bylaw officers have no real authority without going to court.
- Warning signs, muzzled while in public and work with a professional trainer to solve the issues.
- None.
- Based on our experience, the existence of by-laws regarding vicious dogs does nothing if the owners don't comply. How can the above rules be enforced? They can't. So, why on earth are animals known to be vicious permitted in a densely populated area? They put people and other pets at risk.

- Change it to 6 foot leash. You cannot control a vicious dog with a harness. Add that flexi leashes are NOT allowed.
- To pay for for the veterinary bills if their dig has caused harm to another animal. If they cannot afford to cover such expenses they should not be a guardian of a pet.
- The owners should need to take courses or be educated in some way regarding responsible pet ownership.
- Perhaps they could attend training sessions for reactive dogs or other types of remedial classes
- They should be required to take their pet to mandatory formal training.
- To control them and always be under control and on leash with their owner at all timee
- I think the rules, as they are, are probably the best way to go.
- None.
- If an animal is vicious, it is most likely the owners fault, they shouldn't be allowed to have an animal at all. I think we all know that even breeds that are considered vicious are often not, they are trained to be vicious.
- Mandatory behavioral training should be ordered to help rehabilitate the animal and an investigation on why the animal is aggressive (lack of training/confidence, abuse). Dogs aren't born aggressive.
- Mandatory dog training classes to help understand why dog is vicious and how to mediate that. Let owners know what consequence are for 2nd attack and make it a significant deterrent
- I think a dog should have to wear either a harness or some form of notice to others so they can choose to keep further or cross a road. Something like a red leash that says Caution. The Red, Green, Yellow system is fabulous for informing those around.
- How about a mandatory training course for them and their dog?
- If a dog has attacked a human I believe it should be put down.
- a good percentage is because of a lack of training and should be forced to attend training! I blame the owners, not the dog!
- They should not be allowed to have multiple dogs
- None
- That they are unable to license additional animals in the province.
- Must be secured in area . Too many incidents of animals getting free and then attack. Limit the # an owner can have
- Mandatory training classes
Bigger fines
Deeming a dog vicious shouldn't warrant them to be quarantined for the rest of their lives. You might want to look what's behind closed doors as to why that dog might be vicious. It's not always the dogs fault.
- Vicious dogs must be muzzled and secured safely on the property. No vicious animal should ever ever be at an off leash. If an owner can not abide, the owner must be penalized.
- Rabies vaccination mandatory for the dogs. Securely fenced backyards mandatory for dogs over a certain weight.

- Cameras need to be set up at all off leash parks because not only has my dog been attacked by 3 vicious dogs (with mean/stupid owners!) at Auburn Off Leash park but a small dog named Bella was taken from that park when the owner turned her back! Bad owners of vicious dogs should be charged!
- Training to help the dog and owner learn to cope with or end the aggression. Our city has zero balanced trainers. PP/FF are great at teaching a new behaviour but can not stop an unwanted behaviour. We need trainers than teach both yes and no to help these folks
- Keep under control, no exceptions
- Should not be breed specific. Owners should have training to care for volatile animals.
- They should NOT be allowed in parks and off leash areas.
- If the owner fails to confine the animal and it results in an attack ...they should be heavily fined and the dog taken away
- None. These are good rules
- Property owner required to pay for any and all damages by owner of property on which dog is housed, or is allowed to be housed.
- Follow the rules
- If you own a vicious animal then you have failed as a pet owner. You lose your privilege. One innocent child maimed or lost to a mauling is one too many.
- They should not have them
- Dog training for both the dog and the owner
- every dog owner should take a dog training class.
- Actually exercise control over the animal in public and do not frequent busy public places
- Insurance to pay for damages
- No access to dog parks even if they are on a leash.
- To keep the animal on a leash no longer than 6 feet. To have secure fencing that the dog cannot geet through or over.
- Visually identified (ie. Red tag on collar/leash)
- Owners usually don't recognize behaviour issues with their animals. I'd expect owners with vicious dogs to be considerate of other people, but that's not going to happen.
- Proper ways of communication to others that their animal is vicious (calling out to someone walking towards them that their dog is vicious and it would be great if they could give some space if possible)
- I feel all dog owners need to have proper control of their dogs! I do not believe that certain breeds eg: pitbulls etc. should be deemed as vicious, aggressive or dangerous unless the particular animal has been proven so.
- If The animal is being reckless in public owners should be cognizant enough to remove the dog from situations that make other people and/or pets uncomfortable or possibly unsafe.
- The protections in place sound fair.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Owner attends mandatory obedience sessions with dog or forfeits animal so animal has opportunity for rehabilitation. A second offence sees owner forbidden to own any dog. Follow up with bylaw in that no dogs are in owners possession or on their property.
- Due care and attention - not allowing minors or those who are not physically able/capable of handling them take them out in public. There is always the risk that they will escape - have experienced this in the past
- A significant license fee (over $1000.00/year) should be imposed to limit the amount of people who would consider owning vicious dogs.
- Be aware of the triggers of their pet, take actions to ensure they have full control at all times.
- All the above listed are great. I'm glad our stuff isn't breed specific, but based on the individual animal.
- Pit bulls shouldn't be allowed in public areas ever, unless muzzled. They were bred to be fighter killers
- They should absolutely have to have a secure, SOLID fence! The city should be more responsible in enforcing laws with dogs that are acting aggressive on their property or not wether it's a problem with neighbours dealing with these dogs or the public that walk by and pray the dogs don't get out
- Must disclose the nature of the temperament of the dog when seeking care from a veterinarian, services from a dog groomer or dog walker to ensure the safety of employees in that field
- Rehabilitation courses and training to correct the behaviour.
- To keep people safe
- They shouldn't be allowed any more pets
- Keep them restrained effectively using muzzles, leashes, cages, etc.
- training, control
- They should attend a "human" course on how to raise, treat and handle dogs.
- A special visible license to insure dog owners and people know the dogs are vicious.
- That they go to dog training on how to control their dog
- Have their animal on a leash at all times when of the property
- With few exceptions, vicious animals are taking after the characteristics & encouragement of vicious owners. I expect them to be vile bully types, who will hopefully find themselves before the courts for any number of reasons, and released to their natural habitat - a prison. you can't change ass
- Owners should be made to take their dog to training classes to help teach them to be in better control of their dog. Educating them will help them understand the signs to look for and how to manage the issue. The amount of training should depend on the severity of the issue.
- To know when to euthanize their pet for risk of others, or at least be aware enough of when/where to walk your pet away from people/animals.
- Warned once and then severely fined. Third offense dog gets seized and destroyed. No exceptions
- Owners should be fined and lose ability to own animals.
- Maybe they should have to hire a trainer or something for themselves and their dog.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- The owners should be muzzled. There is no reason for a domestic animal to be vicious - it is how it is raised. That said, if an owner has an animal of questionable behaviour they must be held to task to ensure the safety of others AND their 'beloved pet'.
- Put it down. The animal has already proven itself a danger.
- Both owners and dog go through special training.
- The owner should have to take training on handling thier dog and if unable or willing they should not be allowed to have a dog, as well as re required to pay 100% for all veterinary bills for the animal that was attacked.
- Dog is euthanized on 2nd infraction. Owner limited to one vicious animal. Owner to be tested by dog-expert to ensure he/she has dog & people smarts to have care & control of such an animal. Housing / yard should be inspected to ensure it is suitable for animal & to properly contain dog.
- None.
- I think these are reasonable expectations
- The property should have signage regarding the vicious animal /the owner of such animal needs to put up a 100,000 dollar bond.
- What right does an owner of a vicious animal have to risk public safety should their management plans with the vicious animal eventually fail?
- They are made to take courses in order to get their animals back and be prepared to be involved with probationary period 2 years or 3 years in length with no further impact whatsoever whether animal is a chihuahua or a pitbull
- seems reasonable
- Vicious dogs, or animals of any kind, should not be allowed to be kept in Calgary by anyone for any reason.
- If an owner knows that their animal is vicious, I have to wonder why they would keep it. Best intentions do not mean that an animal will not find an opportunity to attack.
- On public property, they should not be allowed - at all - ever!! There is no reason whatsoever to own a vicious dog. If caught on public property, the fines should be heavy and may include time in jail for the owner.
- They shouldn't have vicious dogs. Why is there a need for one?
- Take a "reactive" dog course
- Euthanized if any attacks occur.
- Once declared a vicious animal, they should be mandated into classes to try & rehabilitate. If further attacks occur, destruction of the animal should occur.
- None
- They know the difference between vicious and fear reactive and obtain training and preventative measures to keep both animals and people safe.
- None

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- This is a very good description of vicious dogs. I am an owner of a pet that I rescued that falls under this category due to aggressive behaviour towards other animals (never people) and I agree with all of the terms outlined in the bylaw.
- Keep them on a leash and if you have them in the yard make sure they cant escape
- If a dog attacks a person or other animal, and is declared vicious by the courts, it should be put down. conditions are not enough.
- None
- Ban pitbulls and other dangerous breeds. Other cities do. Why don't we? These breeds are only owned by people with aggressive dispositions. How many children need to be bit before someone comes to their senses? It seems that dogs are better protected than kids in our city.
- Training of the dog and owner to learn how to socialize dog with others. Avoid off leash areas where owners have no control over dogs.
- Owners are educated on the importance of following rules in public, so harm will not happen again. No off leash dog park access (because you know they are still going there)
- too much risk, vicious animals should not be allowed
- I have zero sympathy for this situation. If a pet has exhibited vicious behavior, and I'm referring specifically to unprovoked behavior, I believe the animal should be removed from the home. They are wild animals at heart.
- Clear posted notices on the property so I can avoid walking my dog in the are and exciting the animal.
- Mandatory education for the pet as well as, the owner. If the owner fails then a life time ban on ownership.
- I don't believe anyone should have access to or own a vicious animal. These are behaviours that are taught (in dogs). This is not responsible pet ownership, it is the domain of people on the fringes of society, looking for protection or status among their peers. Owners like this also abuse their pet
- I am fine with the existing rules.
- Breeds that have proven to be vicious should not be allowed in the city. Regardless of how responsible the owners are, the animals are bred with killer instincts and it is usually innocent people and other pet owners who are attacked.
- Get a qualified trainer involved before your dog's issues become so severe that they are regularly biting/chasing/destroying things. If a veterinarian certifies the dog's temperament requires it - constant supervision, leash and muzzle outside of the owner's private property.
- Follow above regulations
- Only on a leash and never in a dog park.
- If a dog receives a complaint but isnt quite vicious there should still be some repercussions.
- To have the knowledge and training to recognize what their dog is telling them/their behavior and to be able to deal with any situation that comes up both physically and mentally. Ideally making them go through an intensive training program.
- If a dog bites a human it should be put down.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Not be allowed in off leash dog parks.
- Ensuring they are in control of their animals. Not taking them to highly public locations or at least taking the extra steps to ensure everyone knows not to approach
- These rules are sufficient for me
- TRAINING. Make dog trainers more accessible or known. Advertise good trainers and encourage dog owners, especially of vicious dogs, to train their animal.
- Keep your dog indoors at all times unless you're taking them on supervised outings on-leash. No off-leash. I would also appreciate some kind of kerchief to mark them as a reactive or aggressive dog.
- most dogs deemed viscous is all circumstantial. owners with small dogs laugh and say their scared as the small dog is aggressively barking and snapping at my dog who just wants to play. If my dog were to act the same to the dog he would be deemed viscous. We have an issue with untrained small dogs
- Must notify immediate neighbor if fence line is shared in order to prevent any fence fighting from either party's dog.
- Once determined to be vicious, either by behaviour, or an unprovoked confrontation, the animal is to be sent to a behavioralist (business) for re-training at the owner's expense. If not successful, then the animal should be destroyed.
- The owner should have a MANDATORY aggressive class taken on how to deal with a vicious dog. Rather than just pay a fine and get the dog back, learn how to treat the issue. As the last thing I want to see is a dog get put down because of a reckless irresponsible owner.
- Control and care taken to avoid confrontations
- Mandatory pet ownership training. Vicious pets are a reaction to ownership, and as an owner we bear the responsibility to manage our pets.
- To seek education, to handle them appropriately
- I think our city does a good job of managing these expectations already.
- Follow the rules. Be held liable for damage or injuries their animals cause to other people or pets.
- Owners of "small spirited" dogs must recognize that these can also be aggressive. Barking, snarling and attacking other dogs (even large ones) will result in a response, even from well behaved dogs.
- To seek appropriate science based behaviour modification and assistance from a trained professional.
- Sounds reasonable to me.
- Every pet owner should understand the characteristics of their breed and train accordingly
- To follow the bylaws! Maybe this means putting in stricter fines and punishments for those who dont.
- That they be muzzled and leashed in public and not tied up in yards (kept inside).
- Animals must be spayed or neutered to ensure that folk are not breedings dogs that have been labelled vicious.
- If another animal is killed, or a person attacked I believe an animal temperament tested as aggressive should be euthanized. Containment measures will typically fail at some point, and responsibility for the safety of the community should be held above the life of an aggressive dog.

- They should have to have signage on their property informing neighbors/community members of their animals designation. I think vicious animals should have to have microchips with their designation. If the owner has/had multiple vicious animals they shouldn't be permitted to own future animals.
- I think the current laws are fine but the problem is enforcement. Warnings are given too often.
- none
- Mandatory training sessions
- not to own them.
- Support provided for owner with recommended specialized trainers that can give one on one time to help with behavioral needs. Also recommended specialized vets that can assess if there is a medical reason for behavior that can be addressed. Have these services subsidized if low income.
- That they follow the responsible pet bylaws. However, other pet owners need to be responsible too. I have talked with people that have reactive dogs and it's a big problem when dogs illegally off leash come up to them.
- If a dog cannot be controlled and prevented from being vicious it should be euthanized. Dog owners must be expected to keep their animals from hurting anyone.
- Failure to meet requirements results in a lifetime ban of ownership of animals.
- that the owners take responsibility for their animals. if they leave the scene of an incident heavier fines. and reward those take responsibility for any incidents. ie. pet training, reduced monetary fines.
- Training
- That they take animal training classes and properly socialize the dogs from the moment they bring them home. They should have to pass certain levels of training from a reputable training facility
- none.
- That they have control of their dog at all times.
- To receive education on Canine behavior/body language. To seek professional assistance to train and rehabilitate if possible. Not to enter into any off leash dog park. To alert any nearby persons that their animal should not be approached.
- Attend a training class specializing in aggression to help manage the dog's triggers
- Make sure you have a big backyard for them and don't take them out in public!
- Education, training should be priority and all city run off leash parks should have cameras or by-law at the park regularly. Owners of vicious animals must pay for any vet/medical bills. Surrender their vicious animal if it bites a person or kills a pet
- don't bring them to off leash parks or around kids. even though they might be on leash and muzzled it is still scary
- Why should they even have the right to take the risk on public property?
- To be responsible for their dog. Including all items listed above but if they are caught they must be fined and held accountable. Track those who have previously offended and ensure proper punishment is put upon them.
- I like the current rules

- I expect the owners of vicious animals to be well-informed of the rules they must adhere to, following the decision of the courts to declare the pet 'vicious'. Pet owners should be criminally charged in the case of a second offence; placing the responsibility on the owner, rather than the pet.
- They should be kept in their home property only and not allowed in community. No one should have a vicious animal. If for security etc they should be registered..licence with city as guard dog. If must go out to vets etc muzzled..harness leashed.
- Mandatory training for owners and animals.
- Ensure it is spayed/neutered & microchipped. Owner, anyone else that will have control, & the dog must attend approved training classes together until owner/handler has proved they can control the dog in a variety of situations.
- To attend a class that educates about responsible pet ownership
- If you cannot control your dog and it is a danger to people or other dogs you should not be in public with them.
- To not be stupid.
- have a collar or harness that states that they are vicious worn whenever in public
- Owners of vicious animals should get rid of the vicious animal and rethink their life choices.
- Obligation to attend approved training program as many of these “vicious” dogs are likely just reactive and would not be a threat with proper training
- by-laws on this seem reasonable... I'd add even if muzzled and leashed, that they shouldn't be allowed in off-leash areas.
- There needs to be more investigation into what lead to the incident. There are far too many animals incorrectly labelled vicious and not enough consequence/accountability to those that provoke animals.
- enforcement
- Retraining of the owner and animal at the owners expense
- The owner takes safety precautions.
- Dogs fight..it happens.. But just know what your dog is capable of ..muzzle so your dog is safe from a biting yappy yorkie
- They should always be on leash and be very aware of where they take them. Hard but unexpected things happen
- They are equipped and educated to manage the behavior, they understand what situations should be avoided with their dog, potential checks on properties to ensure guidelines being followed
- None. If anything, I have expectations of the people around these dogs. People need to be educated to not approach, don't let their dogs approach, etc.
- Cameras in dog parks , most people that own vicious dogs don't know what to do, mandatory dog training set by court
- Keep them muzzled when they are with people the dogs aren't comfortable with. Those rules are good ones.
- Should not be on public property, be risk averse.

- Education, management and training.
- Must have signs on property alerting of vicious animal. Must undergo additional training
- Animal is spayed or neutered
- That they seek help from reputable, highly experienced dog behavior it's and/or trainers.
- That the animal is under control of the owner at all times
- That the owner must go through mandatory training classes with animal. Follow bylaws
- Same as any other pet. The owner should ensure that the animal is in complete control when out in public and is properly secured when loose on private property.
- They should not be allowed on public property. The owners property should have a sign that indicates that there is a vicious animal living there.
- That they ensure the public is safe. No exceptions. If you can't do that your do shouldn't be allowed in the city.
- Animals deemed viscous should be euthanized. Owners of vicious animals have proven they can't control or train them, so the animal should be put down.
- No vicious animals allowed in the city
- mussel at all times
- Existing requirements around any dog deemed vicious seem reasonable, AS LONG AS the requirements are strictly enforced! This is an issue of irresponsible ownership, and these owners should be mandated to take education courses or be banned from animal ownership.
- Harsher penalties for those who do not comply and their dogs escape. These people should not be pet owners and I should not be worried about walking my dog past their yard
- Once a dog is reported/proved vicious (or is a Pit Bull) the owner should HAVE to provide proof of insurance or their dog license will be cancelled. The Insure. companies have the data/pay outs that made them decide they won't insure them! Why doesn't the City heed their warning/listen to them??
- Dog and owner must undergo training with a reputable organization. Clearly the owner has no control of their dog so needs to get training in order to manage dog. Organization should also be able to determine if owner is suitable for such dog or dog not allowed to be with such owner
- A notice/sign should be visible to neighbors. Not live adjacent to schools/parks/daycares
- If they are a hazard they should be banned
- That the animals are contained and controlled properly to ensure that there is no danger to the public
- They should not be taken to parks, or areas where it's heavily populated with other pets or children.
- Mandatory dog/owner training. Dogs are vicious due to lack of appropriate care and training, suitable activity, etc.
- Respect that the fear and worry caused by their animals is real.
- Must have a mullet, and or drive a rusty pickup truck or a 90s mustang or Camaro.
Must have cigarettes or a vape on them at all times.
Must have at least one article of mma clothing and tattoos on neck and hands.

- I would expect owners should be forced to undertake training at their cost to be able to keep a proven dangerous vicious dog. Training should return some measurable form of testing and compliance.
- Dogs must always be on a harness, not leash and collar.
- Have adequate liability insurance
- Owners should be required to have an insurance policy covering their vicious animal that would pay any victims of personal or property damage.
- If vicious must notify people coming on property or around the dog.
- That these animals are kept away from children, even in the presence of an adult and that no additional animal is brought into the household
- Keep them under control.
- That they have control of the animal.
- None, continue as it is
- Owner training
- Minimum exercise requirements
- Unannounced check-in's with a bylaw officer to see they are following the laws.
- The rules above are sufficient, but follow ups from neighbors etc. need to be followed.
- Have the pet surrendered and rehabilitated the instant there is an event
- Vicious animals should be euthanized.
- These rules are appropriate as is.
- The above listed rules and procedures seem acceptable
- To be properly educated and to train their dogs.
- Those are fair guidelines.
- I expect the dogs to be under control at all times, never off leash
- That bylaws are obeyed and that everyone is working to best support the "vicious animal" living its best possible life, which means prevention of situations where the vicious animal may be provoked to attack, resulting in it's demise.
- You can get labels for harnesses, leashes, collars, etc. that say things like "nervous" or what-have-you, the vicious pet should be labeled accordingly too for the public, so say kids don't rush the animal to try and pet it.
- Enforce responsible ownership bylaws for all dogs. Irresponsible owners are more of an every day issue than aggressive dogs. Enforcing leash laws etc prevents incidents and bites. In my experience incidents with dogs are only taken seriously if skin is broken. This not okay and not proactive.
- They should be subjected to see animal behavior specialist.
- Must always been on leash
- It should be easier for animal control to seize an animal that attacks when they havent yet been designated as a vicious animal. Your "must have prior complaint" for them to have power approach doesn't work. In my neighbourhood, 3 dogs have been killed recently by other dogs. Mine was attacked

- Investigations of the owner, deep investigation.
- They should need to attend training programs to address the issues presented by the dog not only for the public's safety, but for the dogs benefit as well.
- Over the age of 18 doesn't mean they can control animal. Someone who CAN control animal plus 18+. What if animal gets out. Being in back yard is not good enough as vicious attempted attacks constantly through fences is extremely uncomfortable when out in yard. Stressful.
- That they take their responsibility seriously and NEVER allow their dog to be in a position to harm a person or animal.
- They should be required to attend classes with the animal as it is rarely the animal that is innately vicious.
- If their animal harms another animal they should be responsible for the vet bill and the city should enforce this instead of having to sue the individual
- When in public, a collar or tag that indicates that the animal is vicious.
- There should be severe fines and the owner should be required to get strict training for the dog at their expense, at the very least. Frankly I'm not sure why vicious dogs aren't just put down.
- I would like to see more punishments for owners of vicious animals, especially if they do not follow the above rules. As for extra rules, any persons coming into contact with the animal on private property should be notified of the vicious animal designation, especially if children are involved
- They be evaluated in order to purchase or own another pet in the future.
- Participating in extensive rehabilitation training focused on the root of the problem, not only management. This includes muzzle training.
- Attend positive reinforcement training classes.
- People who have had a previous animal related offense conviction in any capacity should not be allowed to own vicious animals.
- they should be able to train and control their pets
- I don't think they should be allowed on public property.
- I think there should be large fines for owners of vicious animals.
- They should be required to participate in training to reduce aggressive behaviors.
- Proof that the owner has completed some sort of behaviour training with their dog if found to be vicious. And the dog being assessed by a professional to determine if the behaviour can be corrected.
- That they be barred from ever owning any other animals. Vicious dogs aren't born, they're made- their behaviour is a reflection of the training they received.
- Owners shouldn't be allowed animals that have been deemed vicious
- All of the existing rules seem good
- Mandatory dog training,

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- These animals must be fully trained. Maybe be tested for obedience regularly. Fully fenced in, perhaps inspected for safety.
- That the animal can be controlled, cannot escape, has a muzzle on when outdoors. That neighbours are informed
- They should be put down if they're vicious. People with vicious pets are generally not responsible pet owners.
- A yellow collar and leash should be worn to warn others. Owners must complete training classes. If they are not successful their dogs will be apprehended
- The current rules are adequate however.
- If a dog is deemed vicious or aggressive, they should not be in the same area as other dogs, adults or children. They should not be walked around other dogs or children. Hard I know, but often they are hard to control, even with a muzzle and leash. Others should not be put at risk.
- Must take a training class that specializes in aggressive dogs
- I believe that a vicious animal does not have its place in an urban environment like the city of Calgary. Unfortunately, the animal has to pay the price for the bad ownership.
- Keep them under control
- Do not own them. Do not have them in city.
- The above rules are reasonable. I would also add mandatory spay and neuter programs for proven aggressive dogs and perhaps city programs to cover the associated costs for those unable to afford the surgery.
- I think these guidelines are sufficient
- I think any pet that is trained to be vicious, that is the problem. I know folks with pitbulls and they are wonderful dogs.
- Would like to see more focus on training and behavioral assessment. There is a big difference e.g. between an engaged owner with a difficult dog and an irresponsible owner.
- Should always be muzzled. Fines should be huge if the animal is loose
- To get a trainer or a behaviorist to help with the issue.
- Don't take them to dog parks, don't take them near playgrounds, and don't take them for walks in busy/crowded areas (i.e. don't take a vicious dog for a walk in Eau Claire during the lunch time rush).
- None
- Owners need to have the dog muzzled or contained. They should not be allowed in off-leash parks not walked freely in streets.
- When they approach others on a pathway, they must have their dog sit on the right side of the path so there is no chance of an interaction.
- I do not want them to use retractable leashes on their dogs, especially when it is a big dog (Pitbull, German Shepard, etc.), as those are not the strongest of leashes. It needs to be a good, strong leash that will not break.
Absolutely do not bring the animals to any off-leash park.
- Training to reduce reactivity.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- There is a big difference between a responsible dog owner with a difficult dog, and an irresponsible dog owner. While I appreciate the focus on public safety, I would like to see an approach that includes owner behavior, more training and dog behavioral assessment.
- make sure those animals are secure and cannot get free. do not let children under the age of 14 walk dogs such as bull terriers, German Shepherds etc.
- That they will inform others coming onto their property in advance or provide signage, not enter off-leash areas even though they are leashed, they be educated on rules and have had one-on-one counselling with professional dog trainer well-versed in handling reactive dogs.
- Have control and keep the animal just as safe as other people.
- They should be working with a trainer to correct problem behaviour
- That they will seek and follow through on training. Vicious dogs are that way for a reason and any dog with time and attention can get rid of these tendencies. I believe the rules of the city in public and private property are great but they need to be paired with adequate training.
- be wary and cautious of actions that may inflict hurt or damage to someone that has never encountered such species
- Any dog can be vicious in certain circumstances. However, there are some breeds that can cause more damage than others. Training of these dogs should be strongly encouraged. Signs should be used to alert the public that such dogs are in the area/on the property.
- Training classes for them and the dog. Vicious dogs aren't born that way it happens because owners do not take responsibility for properly training and socializing their animals.
- They must leash their dog before it leaves a vehicle or before it leaves the house or yard. Be cognizant that those around you may feel uncomfortable with their choice of dog, so therefore they need to go out of their way that those around them feel safe.
- If only these restrictions were followed by existing owners.
- This could depend on if the owner is responsive and responsible. Investigation should involve education and resources- referrals to training as well as looking into what the owner is doing proactively. If the owner is irresponsible then fines and seizure of animal because the owner won't change
- Notify the public the animal is dangerous through collars or patches on vests that indicate things such as "Nervous" or "Do Not Touch"
- No bad dogs, only bad owners. Should be required to prove they know how to train their dogs and rehab them. Owners who cannot prove that through some Form of exam should not be allowed to own dogs anymore, and they should be checked up on regularly to make sure.
- I don't believe anyone should be allowed to own a vicious animal in the city. There is simply too much risk involved. Years ago I had a dog that was unpredictable. She was well trained, but I couldn't 100% guarantee anyone's safety. I ended up rehoming her to a farm in the Crownsnest.
- Have a contingency plan in case the animal gets out
- Consult a veterinary behaviorist and/or a certified behaviour consultant for evaluation of the dog. Demonstrate they are following the behaviour modification plan designed by the aforementioned professional(s).

- They should have to show proof that they are taking the dog to a trainer and making efforts to deal with the dogs behavior. If someone owns a dog that has been declared vicious the dog should not be allowed to reside in a home with minor children. The owners should have to carry insurance.
- Register and pay an extra fee to own a vicious animal
- Keep their animals under control at all times, not allowed off leash without a muzzle while in public. Would prefer to not have vicious animals in public.
- I would hope that they would pursue additional training for themselves and their dogs.
- If the animal is not euthanatized and is able to go back home. There should be mandatory behaviour training for the dog and owner and follow up to ensure the owner has completed said course\training I truly believe every animal should have mandatory dog training. Viscous dogs would decrease
- Owners need to have a plan on how to exercise their pet. Leaving them confined just escalates the issue.
- They must loose all access to animals if their own animals are proven to be vicious. Should they regain the right to own animals they must attend mandatory training with their animals.
- None
- Steep fines for owners who let their dogs off leash and attack and/or bite children.
- None
- Owners of vicious dogs should have to take certain behaviour courses with their dog. Most dogs are not vicious; it's how they are trained. Proper training will help prevent more attacks.
- to demonstrate that given these restrictions they will still be able to adequately exercise them otherwise it can be expected for them to be more aggressive if they do not have an outlet for their energy.
- Ensure their animals are vaccinated
- I'm happy with the current rules.
- I agree digs that have been proven to be viscous should follow the rules
- They need to be imprisoned if their pet attacks anyone plus pay all damages plus 5 digit fine
- Partnerships with Humane Society or other welfare groups to enhance dog training programs so that owners can retain dogs and turn them around.
- They need to be vigilant that their dogs do no interact with other licensed dog. Prohibited from any kind of dog park.
Having said that, there should not be breed restrictions on any particular breed or mix breeds.
- Be mindful that it is often the owner who is at fault, not the dog.
- Not allowed in dog parks
- Understand their dog's triggers. If possible, work with trainers to help correct behaviours.
- I think the person should also be able to control the dog, there are many pet owners that cannot control the pet should something happen. 18 is fine, but must have the physical ability to control the dog.
- They should have to be muzzled at all time and be under the control at least 18 years old.

- Regarding vicious animals kept outdoors, there should be a minimum fence height requirement. There have been many times I have been out walking my 2 dogs and a dog has suddenly lunged and barked at us from behind a fence. I have often feared that the dogs would be able to hop the short fence.
- One chance, that's it. I was bitten by a vicious dog when I was young and I have never gotten over it. Scared & scarred, leery of all dogs off leash, that growl, bark or run/jump at me. Owners are not in arms length or in control of their-untrained/trained dogs go to any park. Bad owners dont change.
- I think fines always help deter people not following the regulations.
- Completely compliance of giving information in an altercation.
- The height of a fence can make a difference. They need to be at least 6 feet tall and able to keep the dogs in or keep in a pen with a lid.
- Just to make sure they have full control over their animal. Make sure there's no way that animal could possibly escape a yard or house. Don't leave said animals unattended outdoors.
- No animal should be vicious in the first place. People make them vicious. A dog will naturally protect its owner if it is threatened. There should not be any in the city.
- I love the Calgary rules of judging the animal and human vs breed. Please keep it up as so many of us have amazing dogs regardless of breed. Vicious animals should be muzzled always or if killed, possibly euthanized.
- Mandatory training of the human on how to care for their animals. Ensure that the dog is being properly cared for and treated by their owners.
- Follow leashing and GETTING TRAINING from a pro who wont mess up their dog even further.
- Pet should be spayed or neutered and be given food water shelter but also emotional care, also licenced.
- Proper training for owning certain dogs and that the dogs have been properly trained for obedience.
- To keep dogs on leash
- None. Too restrictive already.
- That they retain control of their animal and not allow them in environments where they pose a risk.
- Owners should be held accountable with stricter penalties.
- Attend training to recognize dogs body language
- Why allow vicious dogs? Owners of these kinds of dogs dogs are irresponsible. Don't allow them
- To take accountability as an owner and seek the help and support your animal requires. If you cannot do so, you should not own a pet. It is unfair to that animal. Also, common sense should prevail and you should not attend a dog park if your animal has behavioural concerns that risks safety.
- Abiding by the laws.
- Pet ownership rights for owner of dog should be examined. Ie owner has had two vicious dogs, therefore should have a 5 year ban on owning pets.
- Ensure public safety.

- i would say it depends on the particular incident and situation. training maybe, but again, depends on the circumstances of why it got designated vicious.
- Why have vicious animals to begin with? Even livestock guardian dogs who are trained to uphold the perimeter are capable of being around people without incident.
- It's the owners that have to teach their animals. It's not the animal's fault. The owners shouldn't be allowed to have animals.
- Vicious animals should NEVER be allowed in public areas. The public should not have to risk this. They need to be muzzle trained. Must be able to still provide medical care w/o putting vet staff @ risk. Need to give quality of life without endangering other people. Euthanasia if cannot do this.
- They should have to spay/neuter the animal and go to training with it in order to have a licence. if the dog is a danger to people it should unfortunately be taken away
- I would expect that if an incident were to occur, that they would stick around and take responsibility or else face charges of some sort. We had a few incidents in our community recently where several people were attacked by a dog with the same description and each time the owner and dog ran away.
- That they keep their animal away from other people. That they do everything they can to keep people safe from injury by their animal. That they be tasked with providing rehabilitation and/or re-training or lose their guardianship of the animal to someone who will be more responsible & accountable.
- Not allow them offleash
- I think the term vicious is misleading. Anxious would likely be more appropriate for most of these animals, which are likely suffering from extreme fear. My expectation would be that the owners work on improving fear through scientifically proven methods of desensitization and counter conditioning.
- That they have control of their animal at all times and the public and other animals are safe at all times
- I think the current regulations if followed are sufficient we need better enforcement that's all
- Vicious animals should not be permitted. Being muzzled and confined is cruel in my opinion.
- Owners should be forced into a training program to also help work with the dog.
- None
- Owners should be 100% responsible for the safety of the community an aggressive dog lives in. Aggressive animals can coexist peacefully but exceptional due diligence should be expected of the owner.
- Attempts by the owner to rehabilitate the dog. Vicious behaviour is not inherent, it is learned behaviour from experience (bad ownership, abuse, rescue, etc). It's dangerous for everyone else but it's also not ideal for the dog.
- Be a better owner, like most things in life it's environment not innate nature. I expect you to do right by your pet and get it the help it needs, perhaps seek therapy yourself so you can be a better influence on your pet.
- I think the current rules are great expectations

- None
- 'chasing' seems a bit extreme as a measure to determine a dog 'vicious'. A predatory animals they have an instinct to chase when something is running...it does not mean that they are going to bite. Also, a dog loping toward an uneducated person can be deemed as 'chasing' when the dog is playful.
- They should face huge fines and even prison time if injury to humans has occurred due to their laziness and irresponsibility and negligence. Once paid up, never allowed to own animals again in Canada and an eye kept on them to ensure they follow through.
- The owners should be the only ones that pay the price for vicious animals. Part of responsible ownership is ensuring that your dog won't cause harm. Maybe more dog training, maybe a muzzle.
- Fines for neglecting to meet expectations, with a limit of 2 or 3 strikes before higher fines, harsher punishment including arrest and or jail time.
- Follow the rules. Know how to handle the dog
- Have them muzzled at the park
Have a regulated 3 strike rule , if at an off leash park, after that they are NOT allowed to go at all , or must be evaluated by a professional or be required to seek professional help before attending again.
- To try their best to get appropriate training from a professional for help. To ensure people who come in the house or near them on walks are aware to be very cautious
- They must undergo several months of training with the dog with a trainer specifically knowledgeable of aggressive dogs.
- Owners must attend and prove they have specific animal behavior training. Must help the animal to succeed by giving them sufficient reactive training. Education.
- A vicious dog usually is the fault of the owner who has not taken their dogs to a training school. The owner will be fine heavily, dog to be taken away from owner. The owner is not allowed to have anymore dogs.
- None
- Post a $500 performance bond until they complete additional animal training from a professional instructor
- They should be required to take a course that they pay out of pocket for on proper care and control of their animal.
- To raise dogs to not be reactive and vicious
- This is a hard question, because due to circumstances any dog can end up being deemed vicious. I think those rules are reasonable, plus having a dog at large/on premises sign should be posted as well.
- I grew up in Europe, any non friendly dog wore a muzzle. That is the culturally acceptable way to show others that your dog is not friendly and minimize any potential issue.
I've lived in Calgary for almost 10 years and I've never seen a muzzled dog.
You are responsible for your pet
- The standing laws make sense.

- Consider behaviour classes, such as those offered by Calgary Humane Society. Always spay/neuter, vicious or not.
- Must be in the process of obedience training and having a vet check to see if any medical issues are coming from vicious behaviour. Failure to do so should result in a fine or having the animal taken away and put up for adoption.
- They train them to not bark and feel threatened by anything that moves.
- Owner is to blame. Mandatory dog school.
- If your dog is vicious don't bring it to a dog park. Even if it's muzzled.
- I feel the current expectations are reasonable.
- Intensive training of themselves & the dog. No dog was born to be vicious. There are problems that need to be dealt with to move the dog through that.
- owners should be required to notify the neighbourhood that their animal has been declared vicious. others deserve to be notified. how about a bright yellow leash - this could identify such an animal from a distance.
- None
- To keep them in their house at all times. No backyard access, no access or use of any public space, and they should also have to carry a special photo id license on their chest so if their dog kills other dogs or animals then the abhorrent owner can be found easily and held accountable.
- It may be helpful if owners of "vicious" animals are required to attend with their pet, obedience training. Other than that it appears the current Justice regulations are adequate. Re: danger of roaming cats; a dog whose instinct is to chase cats may unfairly be deemed 'vicious'.
- Have full control of them in public spaces or when the dog could escape to public spaces. Not ever have them around children even in the home.
- They should have to have a insurance policy
- Maximum control and care of the animal to protect others.
- Education to the owner to help control the dog. Encourage / support education for pet owners to learn how to care for a dog before they get to this point. Education for the public on the reality that there is not such thing as a bad breed of dog, just poor owners that lead them to become dangerous
- They receive court mandated positive force free training classes if they have been cautioned. Often the issue isn't the dog but an owner who abuses a dog and can't control it. Licenses kept up and bylaw checking on overall health of dogs not just default kill the dog attitude.
- Keep them on leash at all times, muzzles if needed and if they are not properly socialized keep them out of the parks. Create more off leash parks for dogs. If a dog causes injury the owner of the offending dog should pay all vet bills.
- Certain breeds of known vicious animals should not be allowed in the City
- I expect them to be responsible pet owners and understand the type of animal they are responsible for. Vicious pets should be identified with a 'red license tag' or something that can alert the public. Especially important should a dog get loose from their private property.
- The person who is in control of the dog must physically be strong enough to restrain the animal.

- That they ID their animals with micro chips that notify vicious animal apps. That they visually ID themselves mandatory armbands when they're in public places with vicious animals and that the animals have highly visible identifiers. Major fines for violations.
- I think the current guidelines are suitable.
- follow above noted procedures.
- Compliance with the rules, especially muzzle
Use of a 'do not pet' or 'I need space' sign attached to their leash or harness.
- If the animal is vicious, they should not be allowed. Period. Who needs a vicious animal? Seriously. Live out in the country if that's the case. Our population is too big to be putting people at risk. Even one dog attack is too many.
- When a dog is declared vicious it should immediately be put down.
- I believe that serious incidents of viciousness require the dog to be destroyed at the expense of the owner. I believe that breeds of dogs that have vicious tendencies should be restricted for ownership.
- On private property there shouldn't be regulations but severe consequences for the owners of the dog escapes
- Do not bring them to off leash dog parks. We have had multiple incidents of aggressive dogs with no supervision attack our puppy.
- Must be kept under control
- That's fine.
- - as always, the problems with such animals is not the animals themselves, but the owners. The owner who wants a vicious or potentially dangerous animal is likely an owner who doesn't care about the rules governing their control. Enforcement needs to be strict and rigorous.
- Owners of vicious animals should be required to attend a dog obedience course with the dog (at the owner's cost), then verify to the city what steps they will take to ensure this does not occur again. Further issues should restrict the owner from owning any pet.
- Keep it securely contained
- If dog is involved in more than one incident, the dog should be confiscated and the owner should be fined a large amount of money. That money can then go to rehabilitation /rehoming the animal once it has been thoroughly vetted to be safe.
- To be muzzled and controlled by the owner whenever around other dogs or people if they're aggressive towards people.
- Keep them away from children. Notify neighbours
- I don't understand enough of vicious animals so i don't understand why they are even allowed to live. If they could pose a hazard, why not mitigate risks and eliminate potential for harm?

- Owners should be expected to attend a number of consultations with a certified force-free behaviorist chosen by bylaw, and should adhere to parameters set by bylaw and the trainer.
- Owners need to keep them away from public that doesn't want them - stick to dog areas and private property. Muzzled when in public or under control because the dog needs to be socialized to move past their vicious tendencies.
- No specific breed should be deemed vicious. Owners contribute to what makes vicious dogs. If the owner cannot control the animals they should not have them.
- The type of people who have vicious dogs are not likely to follow rules. A vicious dog license and proof of insurance.
- Most animals, especially dogs are reactive rather than actually vicious. So I guess having the owners work with a trainer on reactivity
- Most animals are vicious because of their owners, proper training with a behavior expert should be required
- They have training to control them. I see owners struggling to control large aggressive dogs daily
- Vicious dogs should not be in the city at all. Once an investigation is done that shows the animal was not antagonized in any way but attacked randomly the owner should be required to put the dog down.
- I think the owner must abide by the law or the animal needs to be removed.
- Owners need to be educated about how to handle their vicious dogs. As an owner of an aggressive dog, I see it as MY responsibility to keep him and others safe by always having control over him and never putting him in a situation where he could harm others or be harmed.
- All too often a dog pays for being "vicious" with its life, while not looking at the idiots who raised it or the environment it comes from. Increase the fines 10 fold and put bans in place for animal ownership.
- That they avoid crowded places and situations that cause any distress to their pets.
- Mandatory training for them and their dog.
- I love dogs and have owned them all of my life, but if I owned a dog who was involved in a serious and unprovoked attack on a person or another dog I would have to seriously consider euthanizing the dog. I don't believe that vicious dogs have a place in an urban setting.
- That they are legally responsible for their animals. And damage to property or persons falls LEGALLY on their shoulders.
- Must attend city approved training for responsible ownership and management of their dog's behavior. Consider removing pet from home where children are present if the aggression is towards humans.
- Significant fines for repeat offenders
- They should never bring their dog into a situation where it could harm anything else and should be muzzled whenever it leaves the house.
- Fines and loss of the right to own pets

- The secure structure must be set back from public property lines, and sightlines from the public property to the animal blocked.
- There needs to be better understanding among such owners of their personal responsibility regarding the potential injury such animals can cause to other citizens.
- The owners are the ones responsible for the actions of their pet. If a pet is declared vicious they must undergo city mandated training for aggressive and fearful dogs. They also cannot enter off leash areas within city limits.
- There should be a sign placed so any visitor to the property is aware of the dog situation.
- There is no reason to have a vicious dog. They should be banned. There are plenty of friendly dog breeds.
- The owners of a 'vicious' animal should be required to properly train and habituate/socialize their animal so that it's behaviour is modified and stops being vicious. Failure to do so should result in the owner being charged and the animal being fostered until the required steps are complete.
- They should be required to take behavioral training classes for their dog, undergo a psychiatric assessment to see if they are mental stable enough to be responsible for an animal, potentially banned from owning animals for life if they are found to be vicious in their intent themselves.
- the owners need to be trained!!! mandatory dog lessons is a must and if they are unable to provide the necessary steps to help the animal then they should be made to release ownership of the animal
- That they have training to deal with a vicious animal and that they have sufficient liability insurance.
- One strike your out. Any animal attacking a human should be put down.
- I think these are fine
- There should be criminal charges for owners of dogs deemed vicious and involved in an incident. An owner creates a vicious animal and I think they should be prevented from having that type of animal again ever or at least for a period of time. Perhaps a 'watch' program where the city checks in.
- No one should be able to own a vicious animal.
- Mandatory professional training with an approved dog trainer yo see what can be improved.
- They should only be allowed one infraction, after that the animal should be destroyed and the person should not be allowed to own a dog (or at least breeds that tend to be large and vicious)
- I am not in favour of vicious animals being pets. If a normal animal becomes vicious then it needs to be taken out of the home and if possible retrained or given the space, training and human interaction needed so it may be reintroduced as a pet. If not then it may have to be put down.
- Since the owners are usually the problem, they should have mandatory training and heavy fees to keep a vicious animal. Honestly though, why keep them in the city at all, if they can't be rehabilitated they should be destroyed, and ban repeat offender owners from having pets.
- As long as the owners are taking the adequate precautions/handling of the animal, they already know the trials of dealing with the animal. Its the ones otherwise that need to be educated on proper procedures.
- To take steps to learn more about training their animal to calm aggressive behaviours.
- Mandatory animal behaviour education. A vicious dog is so because of human behaviour. Period.

- Vicious animals have NO place in an urban setting. One little mistake and a child can be killed. Having one the other side of a fence is a constant source of threat. If reported for any reason and officer feels threat, remove it.
- The owners should take canine behaviour training( breed specific if applicable) as well as participate in behaviour training with their pet. Education is key to solving most problems.
- educated to the by-laws, restrictions etc... people tend to ignore their responsibilities.
- Attempt rehabilitation of the animal with licensed professionals that can help reduce the aggressive behaviour
- Rule now sounds good.
- Agree with above
- Pet owner/ dog must attend intense training provide by a skilled trainer in this field. Follow up exams q 6 mths based on findings at that time duration could be extend 1 yr then proof of continuous training proper interaction is being completed by owner and dog.
- Haven't been bitten by a repeat offender animal that was being hidden at a relatives by the owner due to previous incidents, there needs to be a maximum one offense limit. Multiple people were attacked by this dog after previous violations. It has to stop
- loss of right to have pets
- Must seek advice from a force free, educated, science-based trainer.
- They should be executed, the owners. The dogs placed into rehabilitation using the funds left over in the estate after the execution.
- Having a known vicious animal is like carrying an open weapon. Ban vicious animals from public areas and give no second chance if a human has been harmed.
- Special training for both the human and the animal to deal with aggression, reactivity, etc., increased licensing fees, pre-determined consequences for owners who have vicious animals that offend again.
- I think if there is a dog attack on another dog in a dog park then there should be some exceptions if this is a one time thing, otherwise the present laws seem good. If a dog is injured then owner must pay vet bill.
- That they keep their animal leashed and muzzled or destroy it.
- In addition to the current rules, listed above, The City of Calgary should check in with the owners on a regular basis to make sure that these rules are being adhered to strictly.
- None.
- People should not keep vicious animals, period! Hospitalized as a child due to a mauling.
- As an owner of an aggressive dog, I must attest to the fact that part of the problem is off-leash dogs who are not vicious but also not in control. We've had so many off-leash dogs run up to us while on a leashed walk, which puts my dog on edge and is a major risk factor for all involved.
- Vicious animals should be kept away from off-leash dog parks (should be in the bylaw). If an owner is aware that their animal is vicious, they should register them with the city and be subject to a different set of rules and regulations. The risk of owning vicious animals is entirely theirs.

- That they control their animals for the safety of people and pets.
- LEASHES, LEASHES AND LEASHES. I had a very reactive dog, he was never OFF leash in the city and yet I had several close calls with unleashed dogs that didn't obey they handlers. Penalties need to be swift and just - and it is NOT breed specific
- That they are always under control.
- Expectation is the same for any pet owner, vicious or not. Keep control of the pet.
- These regulations seem fair.
- I expect owners to be in control of their animals. Many dog owners in my area have dogs that are quite aggressive. The owners do little to control them. There isn't enough consideration for non pet owners.
- Follow the rules, ensure person "in control" actually physically capable of restraining dog, avoid other dogs/ people deliberately. Be prepared to euthanize animal if they have injured either owner or others.
- Take the full necessary precautions of your rules and obey by them, if not a heavy fine will take place and I mean heavy fine, not a slap on the wrist type fine.
- Shouldn't be in public
- Work with a trainer to try to correct the behaviour.
- I had a lot of issues with a vicious dog in my condo building. I filed 3 complaints with the city regarding this dog. The third time this dog attacked my dog, my dog sustained injuries to his neck, requiring sutures and drains. I wish there were bylaws in place that would have allowed the (see#2)
- I would add that they would be required to take a training course dealing with these issues even though it might not totally curb they're aggression, at least the owner has some tools to help. It's much better than having to put a dog down.
- I would like to see owners of vicious animals required to take an animal behaviour course and be assessed on their ability to manage their animal (usually a dog).
- training course
- That they follow all of the rules and ensure everyone's safety.
- I want a requirement that the OWNER and dog undergo a class or work with a professional trainer to address the issue (likely a fearful dog). A muzzle and leash are just band aids to the real problem and helping actually solve that problem with a proper trainer is a much better solution.
- Muzzles actually make things worse. How does one define vicious?
- It is baffling why anyone would want a vicious animal as a pet but I think the current rules are adequate so long as they are actually enforced.
- They should have to take mandatory dog obedience lessons (imposed by the City) or be fined very heavily. It is irresponsible pet ownership to have "vicious" dogs - dogs just need to be properly trained, they are very seldom ever born "bad". Owners of such pets must also muzzle their pets on walks

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- No breeding allowed for dogs and breeds determined to be vicious. Only one vicious dog/household. No vicious dogs in homes with children under age 12. No vicious dogs allowed near any child or baby under age 6. One violation only - after that the dog(s) must be seized and euthanized.
- Red bandana or other recognized warning sign visible on animal
- That the animals are safe and well-treated.
- Who labels the dog vicious. I have been bitten by small/ toy dogs and they are not labeled vicious - perception of breeds is not fair to label
- That they don't own vicious animals?
- Vicious animal should not be pets.
My dog was attacked by a German Shepard that wasn't on a leash.
- I believe that owners of vicious animals are 100% responsible for the animal's behaviour. If an animal is found to be vicious, the owner should be required to and have to provide evidence that he/she is actively working to change the animals behaviour through training.
- That the animal be receiving behaviour training to overcome its issues.
- People should not allow them to be left outside barking for any extended length of time. Not more than a few minutes.
- Regulations regarding how high and strong their fences must be, in case the animal breaks the leash/chain.
- how about someone who also has the ability size wise to control a vicious animal.
and barking does not mean vicious!!!
- Be fined if owner is not following the rules above. Not be allowed at off leash areas ever. Owner should pay for any damages and/or medical treatment required for animals and/or humans as a result of vicious animal attack.
- Viscous animals should be put down. While it is not the animals fault, it is the owner's mis-management that is at fault. Aggressive dogs require training and management. If the owner hasn't done the work, after a certain point that dog is unlikely to be salvageable.
- I have an expectation that all dog owners are responsible. We live near an offleash area in Silver Springs. People seem to view the entire neighborhood as an offleash area. We see people with their dogs offleash outside the defined area everyday and the are hostile when this is pointed out
- Training courses and structure classes to provide dog with a different new way of dealing with stress and fear.
- muzzle and control, containment. Education on how to modify the behavior.
- None.
- should be killed
- Once an animal is deemed vicious, it should be humanely euthanized.
- I live in a 300 family apartment which is respectable and clean and I can tell you one day 4 unexpected tenants we're kept hostage on the elevator in a corner because the dog owner had no control over his large dog we were frightened and the owner didn't care that somebody could seriously be hurt

- Nope.
- Be under control at all times
- those are my expectations
- These are good bylaws
- It would be wise to carry insurance. Be aware their dog is a potential risk.
- Proof of vaccination with licensing. Existing rules look fine.
- The existing rules seem adequate.
- To provide proper care and training to mitigate any further issues with the animal.
- I think the rules specified above, if followed, are sufficient. Most vicious dog attacks happen because these dogs have gotten loose. An owner must ensure that this cannot happen, otherwise a hefty fine would be implemented.
- That they keep themselves, their pet, and other around them safe.
- There should be no owners of vicious animals ... owners should turn them over to authorities ...
- They have a special license and have proper training.
- Current regulations seem sufficient.
- I don't believe animals are vicious as a rule, and often are the product of bad owners. Having said that, if an animal is vicious, I believe it is the owner's responsibility to ensure they animal is kept confined and people and other animals are safe from it.
- Do owners of a pet that was deemed vicious have the ability to have it put down?
- Undertake urgent rehabilitation training with their animal within a defined period. Vicious animals outdoors impose upon neighbours in that they are highly vocal/disruptive, and compromise the comfort and safety of others in the area. You cannot often not pass by the property without fear of attack.
- Obtain insurance.
- Extra training for the owner and the dog. Help the owner to understand dog behavior and triggers. Property assessment to make sure the dog can be safely housed and not escape.
- Depending on the circumstances - consider putting the animal down, re-homing to a rural environment.
- These are lovely rules, for those who will obey. Sometimes vicious animals have idiot owners.
- I think all animals classified as vicious should be put down. Or else fine and/or jail the owners.
- Not sure that this pertains to vicious animals but we have a real problem in our area with people allowing their dogs to run all over our private lawn areas, urinating and defecating and when approached they get angry and feel they have the right to allow their dogs on others' property.
- Fine their owners or prevent them from ever owning another dog, the dog was not born vicious
- Vicious dogs are a terrible nuisance in apartments, condos and at public gatherings. Owners do not properly perceive that these are public areas and do not properly secure their animals. I have been bit twice by dogs in my condo building. Owner responsibility is sorely lacking!
- Behavioural training for the dog. Perhaps for the owner also.

- They should not be allowed to keep them. The City needs to take a serious stance and enforce removal of that animal.
- Serious mandatory education and realizing that sometimes euthanasia is the kindest option.
- They not be allowed to live in Calgary.
- Letting others (guests, passerby, vet staff or groomers) know if their dog is vicious, and are responsible in the event their animal attacks others. These owner(s) of the vicious animal should also be held liable in the event that this animal causes damages to another person or animal.
- I feel leash and muzzle requirements are adequate
- Financial responsibility for any physical damage done to others or others property
- They should put the animal down.
- I expect them to provide good care for their animal in a way that prevents any potential for injury to the animal itself or to other humans/animals. Their property should clearly display there is a vicious animal on the premise.
- Owners of vicious animals should be required to attend training, both with and without the dog.
- - Mandatory courses for handling, training, and reducing their animal's vicious behaviors.
- - Owners should be completely responsible for their dogs and liable for any damages (physical, emotional, or otherwise) caused by their animal.
- The owners should get additional training to understand their dog better, learn how to handle the dog and which situations to avoid to prevent triggers of aggressive behavior. Also dog to wear a do-not-pet vest to prevent people petting the dog and triggering the behaviour.
- Get educated. If you cannot handle the dog. Take it away. Not fair to euthanase dog that is not trained by an owner
- Insurance
- Mandated animal training for owners (not necessarily the dogs).
- mandatory owner training.
- many little dogs are viscous, however people don't keep them muzzled. However a larger breed is assumed it is vicious, yet may be very passive. how many big dogs are provoked because someone let their little dog run free?
- Engage in force-free, positive training with their owner - at least 4 classes
- Keep them away from humans and other dogs.
- They should not be permitted in off leash parks even when on a leash
- Take responsibilities for their animal's behavior including jail time and heavy fine.
- In addition to all above mentioned, I think owners of vicious animals should have to take mandatory courses, attend seminars or have mandatory training for their animals or similar activities. Uneducated person shouldn't own a vicious animal.
- dogs deemed vicious shouldn't frequent public dog off-leash parks. Even if they are muzzled etc. it's not fair to them and the other dogs.

- Owners are responsible for their animals and the damage it may make at all times. They should not be allowed close to people (less than 2 meters) unless invited. They should not smell people as many get very nervous.
- 1. They not be let off a leash and that they are not on a retractable leash.
- 2. They take appropriate training classes to help both the owner and especially the dog - he wasn't born vicious!
- 3. And if necessary muzzled with a cage type muzzle so he can't hurt another dog, or person.
- Owners who have had a vicious dog should be flagged as dogs do not become spontaneously vicious. More than one incident per owner should result in no dogs for 1-3 years minimum
- - Special licensing
  - Requirement to notify City if animal is rehomed (whether in the City or not)
  - Require that a vicious animal be spayed or neutered (unless deemed unsafe by a veterinarian)
- Owners should be fined for all incidents and required to cover the cost of all fees associated with the incident (vet, healthcare, property damage).
- The owner should proactively avoid any possible confrontation or interaction. Even if the dog is muzzled and leashed, aggressive behaviour is not acceptable.
- Fines
- That people actually follow the rules and regulations that are outlined by the city.
- I expect the people to be strong enough to control their dogs. There are too many strong dogs pulling owners and not under control. being 18 isn't enough. being able to stop a dog from pulling & running is required. I agree with the other current rules but vicious dogs shouldn't be allowed at all
- I think the definition needs work.
- I think this is reasonable.
- After a reported and investigated incident in 1995 with my child, me and a Mastif, I'm of the opinion ALL vicious dogs should be put down. I've still terrible reoccurring memories of this awful day.
- Bylaw needs to be able to implement conditions without court orders. An example would be if a person was charged with their dog causing damage to another animal , they cannot take it off leash anymore. If a dog bites a person twice, it should be declared vicious without a court order.
- Training and education on how to manage vicious animals.
- The focus should be on the owner not the dog. There are no problem dogs, only problem people.
- Perhaps the owner is the cause of this animal being vicious and needs to be investigated before the dog does.!!!
- That the owners must take specific training for their dog.
- To know what their animal is capable of. All dogs will bite if the right circumstances are present. Fear, poor treatment, poor socialization, poor training of owner/animal can and does cause problems. I've been bitten more than once by a vicious animal. People need to learn dog body language.
- Ensuring they are not in situations where their or others safety is at risk

- I don't believe in vicious animals just bad owners. I think the owners should be required to get training to be a better owner or should have to give up the animal.
- Vicious animal should not be tolerated in our city. Owner's should be more responsible with animals that are vicious - away from children/activities/parks. Mandatory muzzles even in yards.
- Be kept on lead at all times & muzzled in public places. Too often animal is far more powerful than owner
- I think that the rules in place are adequate.
- If a dog is declared vicious, owners should have to provide a substantial amount of money to be held until the animal dies. If there is another attack, the money is forfeited. I have had a dog killed by other dogs and there were no consequences for the owner of the attacking pack.
- I think they should need a bond to cover damages that their dog does to another animal or person
- The dog should be removed from their owner with an attempt to rehabilitate. Dogs don't randomly attack and owners should be investigated for neglect and improper treatment of the animal. It's not fair for breeds to be labeled due to ignorant owners.
- None
- A repeat offender must be put down without delay or appeal. The owner of a repeat offender must face a negative consequence that will actually mean something - not just a slap on the wrist.
- Not allowed to bring these pets in vicinity of children.
- Consistent steps being taken to get help such as training or consider rehoming. I believe any vicious animal is that way for a reason and can be helped.
- There should be large visible signage on the private property that houses vicious dogs. The owners should be required to take training with the animal until deemed reformed. Animals should be deemed vicious only by behavior, not by breed.
- Punish the owners. Not the animals. Don't put the animal down because someone refused to train the animal properly.
Do not allow these dogs at dog parks. Very often people's innocent dogs get attacked from these animals.
- Mandatory training classes with a training facility that is broadly accepted as having appropriate protocols and has proven success with rehabilitating vicious animals.
- I feel there should be some kind of marking to indicate it is a problem animal. I.e. A coloured vest.
- Any dog can become vicious. Dogs are animals and not totally predictable. Dogs protect their owners. They do not know me. Owners say oh my dog never does that. After it jumps up and/or bites me. [personally identifiable information removed] Dogs want to dominate and find their spot in the hierarchy. City dogs leashed
- While some breeds are potentially more dangerous than others, any breed can be dangerous. The problem is not the dog, it is the owner. To own a potentially dangerous dog, the owner must prove that the dog is well trained and disciplined by a certified trainer before it can be licenced.
- On going dog training and financial assistance for people who have fostered pets or adopted pets for the humane society and who need assistance.

- Owners must be held accountable to ensuring that the bylaws regarding their vicious dogs are upheld and maintained.
- When in public vicious dogs cannot be on a extendable leash.
Restricted access to certain high (people) traffic such as 17th Ave SW.
- None
- Criminal liability if repeat offences occur.
- Proof of animal training in a dog school, vet records, behaviour records and if animal doesn't improve, an acknowledgement that it will be surrendered. If animal hurts someone, it's surrendered or removed - full stop.
- That they take them to special classes to address the problem.
- Repeated offences should result in permanent surrender of animal to bylaw. Further behavioural testing to assess animal for rehab or euthanasia
- After an incident owners should be fined and expected to have training. This enforcement should be followed up by by-law officers that specialize in dog training
- Animals must be licenced and neutered.
- The owners that live with the dog & pet must attend & pass a training course to have better control of the dog
- What options are there for owners to provide proper training to their dogs afterwards to work on improving behaviour? Owners also need training, muzzles are helpful but doesnt help the dog in rehabilitation in the long run.
- Intense private remedial training/treatment should be a requirement. If the animal cannot be rehabilitated it should be put down.
- That vicious animals must be under owner. Control at all times and not be allowed in public places. Once they have shown harm to humans they should be put down
- Must take their animal to training sessions to improve owners understanding and ability to control the animal. If they can not get control of vicious behavior within the year of the animal declared vicious, the animal should be removed from the owner possession and owner should not have any animals.
- They do not leave them outside to bark incessantly. They are not allowed to come within 1 foot of a public sidewalk if they are kept unleashed in a yard because a chain link fence that runs right up to the edge of a public sidewalk is not a sufficient barrier to prevent contact with them.
- Owners pay all court and animal housing fees. Many dogs should be euthanized for their own mental health. Any additional infractions with the dogs caused by owners mistakes result in lifetime ban on owning dogs.
- To be aware and educated on aggression and how to handle it around others. A lot of people overlook aggression (especially in small dogs/animals).
- Take some kind of training for them and the pet

- In the case of a dog attack, same process as driving while driving. Fines alone will not work. Both the dog and owner should be made to attend dog training to ensure they're capable of being responsible.
- The animal to be under control and the owner to be knowledgeable about their animal and how to diffuse the situation.
- They have PROPER control over their animal. They should attend animal control and handling classes to give them skills needed.
- Owners should be mandated to take animal behavioural classes to ensure they can read their dog to try and prevent new situations from occurring. Also, most dogs are vicious for a reason. Owners need to be investigated unless the attack was provoked.
- Education and knowledge of breed. Mandatory training for the dog and the owner.
- See a trainer to aid in curbing the animals behaviour
- Training to help the animal that is specific to its needs/ fears. On leash at dog parks.
- If non-compliance with the rules the vicious animal must be put down and the owner is forbidden to have another animal until a set period of time, maybe five years, and a training course is successfully passed.
- I expect they will keep their viscoius dogs away from people and other animals and muzzled if deemed necessary.
- They should complete an obedience course with a certified trainer experienced in handling aggressive dogs.
- Have animal under control in off leash areas.
- I personally believe that if a dog is viscous for some reason it has something to do with the owner not the dog. The way dogs are treated at home is how they will react to strange people. If the dog is naturally timid & can be cross it is up to the own to CLEARLY communicate that their dog is cross
- No complaints with this model. I seen Vancouver is looking at a rehab clause in their Dangerous Animal legislation. That seems worth looking into. So if an animal deamed dangerous is rehabilitated it can be reevaluated and potentially have the the designation changed.
- Person in control of dog should be required to demonstrate ability to control the dog, and to notify public when they encounter the animal
- Owner and pet need to take mandatory training with a professional. I don't believe in auto euthanizing a dog...Also - the city DOESN'T follow the protocol above! I know of a dog that was seized and euthanized because the owner sicked the dog on his gf! Dog should've been rehabilitated & rehomed.
- To have to attend training classes with this dog and for as long as it takes to understand the needs of the dog and why it has become vicious. Vicious dogs are not born, they are created. Locking a vicious dog up in a structure perpetuates the behavior.
- Fines to hold them accountable
- Perhaps a coloured leash system to warn other people the dog is vicious
- Take the animals away from irresponsible owners and place with responsibility pet lovers

- The bylaw to allow the removal of the dog for any non-compliance of the bylaw.
- If an animal is proven vicious the dog and registered owner should have to show proof of training for the animal. Second offense is mandatory euthanasia.
- Owners who have dogs that are aggressive to other dogs should have to have them muzzled off property as well. Not just vicious towards people.
- I believe vicious animals that pose a threat to others must be contained in a private property. They must be registered as vicious and need to have warnings on their property.
- Mandatory training course for owners.
- Consider quality of life of your Animal.
- Regular inspections to ensure they are following the cond'ns, significant fines / animal removal if not. Mandatory training and testing of animal behaviour (ability to follow commands, etc.). If owner cannot meet these, removal and euthanasia of the animal.
- Vicious animals are the product of their owners. Owners should be made to go to some sort of training before being allowed any animals. They should be financially responsible for any damage done by their vicious dog.
- They should be required to work with a qualified behaviourist specializing in aggression to deal with their animal's behaviour.
- Require training courses
- I think owners should have to take course or something. I hate when the owners don't do a good job and the animal gets destroyed because of it.
- I think the vicious dog policy is excellent. The bylaw and courts are fair. As a CBCC-KA certificant I've worked with several cases that have come through with mandatory training conditions and I am always impressed with how the situations have been dealt with.
- The owner should prove they have spent the time training their dog and register in classes to help the dog
- Then to be cautious of other approaching dogs or little kids. Be responsible for taking their dog to obedience and behavioral courses.
- Vicious dogs are usually the result of chaining, neglect, abuse by humans. Check out the owner - if its a rescue the new owner has inherited the problem from the previous owner. Ban the previous owner from ever owning another animal.
- Muzzle, on leash, fenced in yard, training. Zero tolerance for savage attacks that cause hospitalisation.
- There should be NO vicious dogs in Calgary!
- Keep them on a leash
- They should not be permitted at off leash parks and owners should be fined for doing so. I have a pit bull and if he was attacked by a vicious dog not a pit bull in the eyes of many it would still be my dogs fault.

- I think they should work with them to get some basic training and control. Never, never off leash. And control them from disturbing the neighbours.
- Dogs need to be muzzled and not let off leash. Dogs need to be in control of a person at all times.
- the above rules seem comprehensive and fair perhaps restricting the re-homing of vicious animals?
- That they have access to behavior specialists and training to best understand the management strategies they need to use. That they abide by those individual animal-specific strategies. Your rules above could very well exacerbate problems they are supposedly meant to address.
- Meaningful charges to the owner. In a case of multiple incidents the owner not being able to own a pet.
- Mandatory training courses. Sometimes it's more about the owner than it is about the dog.
- No one follows these rules
- Financial reimbursement in the event one dog attacks another, legal ramifications if the owner of a vicious dog flees or fails to provide identification if their dog seriously harms another. more support for those who have had their pets attacked without being able to identify the indivs responsible
- To be able to decide if the animal is showing more aggressive behavior and reach out for professional assistance
- Nothing.
- They are aware their pet is vicious and are made to take steps to help control these behavioral issues, whether that be through city approved training/obedience courses or pharmaceuticals prescribed by their veterinarian. Also do NOT take vicious pets into offleash areas, even if on a leash.
- That they are required to seek further training or education to understand their reactive dog.
- I thing that Calgary's current regulations are fine. Progressive & doesn't single out any specific breed or type. This is good.
- The current rules seem sufficient.
- I think our bylaws for this are very good
- Owners of vicious dogs should not be allowed in off leash enclosed parks. If pets cause injuries to other dogs - pet should be removed from owner and fined a minimum of $1000.00. Pet owners also needs to pay vet bills.
- Attend corrective training and learn how to build their dogs confidence. The majority of bite cases happen out of fear. As well, if the dog has a history of aggression clearly the owner is not capable of correction and it should be seized to be in the care of an experienced owner.
- Owners must be forced to give up their vicious animal.. Animal must then be put down. No exceptions. Also that owner must be banned for life to have any dogs.
- Vicious animals are very rarely vicious for no reason. It's often a learned behaviour and is usually reversible with time, consistency and training. These owners need to do what is best for the animal, not what is more convenient for them.
- Keep them under control.

- To take all possible measures available to them to keep the dog contained and the general public safe.
- I wonder if there is a way to support these owners in learning more about how to train/manage a dog with aggressive tendencies? Dog trainers are expensive and may be a prohibitive cost for some citizens.
- None
- They should know their dogs needs and behaviour to other dogs and people
- Sign up for training classes. It's not really the dogs fault - that's how it is communicating that it is scared. It is the owner's responsibility to create a safer environment for the dogs to reduce future incidents
- TRAIN THEIR PETS!!! It is not the animals fault they are not trained
- Dogs are not vicious, they can learn behaviours that cause aggressive behaviour. These animals need training that should be performed by accredited trainers at the owners' expense.
- I find that many dog owners are not responsible and I do not have faith that owners of vicious animals will comply. The dogs should be removed from the owners.
- They need to go through dog training and work to retrain the dog of unwanted behavior.
- Proper equipment used in a humane way. Vicious dogs don't need to be harmed, they need to be rehabilitated properly.
- They must undertake mandatory training, at their expense, on how to train and control a vicious animal. They must also carry insurance in the event the vicious animal causes harm to other people/animals. The city euthanized the vicious animal if training and insurance are not up kept.
- Dog should either be muzzled at all times or eutheni3:
- Owners must give up vicious animals if not following bylaws on first occurrence. Any type of injury caused by such animal should be dealt by the courts.
- I think what's in place is probably enough.
- It should be made clear to these owners that they are financially responsible for ANY damage or injury their dog may cause.
- Weigh the options and the quality of life this dog is going to have when it is deemed a vicious animal. I have zero issues with euthanasia especially when it comes to dogs with multiple bites/attacks and especially when it's directed towards children.
- To understand their dog. Attend training and to show progress or surrender dog
- Dont take aggressive dogs to offleash areas, even if on leash
- To stay away from dog parks, even if muzzled.
- Pursue behaviour modification with a certified positive reinforcement trainer
- Must receive training on all aspects of dog ownership. Poorly managed vicious dogs should not remain in ownership. Vicious dogs could be the result of poor ownership and/or specific breed. They should not be allowed to keep the animal if an ongoing threat.
- To follow guidelines set out by the city of Calgary and to seek help from and follow the advice from certified, educated, professional behavioural help

- Lessons for the OWNER regarding dog behaviour. I do not believe dogs are born vicious owners need to understand their dogs and how to handle them if they have bad tendencies.
- When on public property if a vicious dog has a muzzle and is harnessed/leashed and an irresponsible dog owner doesn't control their own dog around this 'vicious' dog, the owner of the vicious dog should be empowered to report the irresponsible dog owner
- They should be required to take the dog through training and pass whatever level the City of Calgary deems appropriate
- Dogs that are deemed vicious due to an attack on a person or another animal should be destroyed.
- As above. They should be able to control the animal. There are no bad dogs, they may need training & there are bad owners that should not have them. Too many rumours of dogs being stolen for dog rings.
- These work.
- Have the owner and dog go through behavioural therapy. Sometimes the dog doesn't mean to be vicious and it's reacting to minor cues an owner is giving, whether directly or not. This will also give an opportunity to analyze the owner-dog relationship and help identify the cause of viciousness.
- they be vaccinated especially for rabies
- To take responsibility for their animal's behavior. If their animal is aggressive or attacks then they need to make sure others involved are okay and give their contact information.
- no extendi leashes, current rabies vaccines
- that they should be barred from public dog parks. My dog was attacked by them unprovoked and the owners just ran away while my dog is left with a half-torn ear. It was an un-neutered dalmatian and my dog is a neutered golden retriever. Also check if their dogs are neutered.
- Take lessons with trainer and bylaw course
- That they take appropriate steps to ensure they deal with it such as using a muzzle and appropriate lead/leash. Supervise appropriately
- Accredited rehabilitation program for offenders.
- To participate in training with their animal, keep on leash and away from dog parks/highly populated paths
- Leashed up, if they do attack be responsible, check on welfare of dog that your dog has been vicious with. What can we do when we are party to a vicious dog attack?
- 3 strikes of vicious behaviour against HUMANS and the dog gets put down.
- They seek training to modify vicious behaviors
- Stay out of off leash areas, even when on leash. Stay out of playground areas even when on leash.
- Proper training - locking them inside and muzzling them will not change behaviour
- BOTH owners Must take reactive dog courses and more training. It will help both owners and their dogs to learn that they each have contributed to said behaviours. If a dog needs medical care, the owner should pay for injuries caused by their pet.
- Owners of identified vicious dogs should also be required to carry extra insurance or liability in the case of an attack.

- These expectations seem to be sufficient. The problem is enforcement. People and other animals have been attacked by dogs and the owners have left the scene without providing any identification.
- People should not be permitted to keep dogs outside, regardless of behaviour.
- Why are people allowed to own VICIOUS animals? Both my sister and my dog were attacked by vicious dogs - both incidents were reported but no consequences for the owners. Owners are responsible-they don't know how to handle dogs. Owners train vicious or they don't know how to handle dogs.
- Dog owners should be made to take obedience classes for themselves and their dog. Owners need to know how to take care of their pets and properly control them. Education!
- Mandatory dog training including participation and completion by owner and all adults and caregivers of animal.
- Vicious animals should be put down without exception if they have attacked a person
- They go to behavior training and understand that they need to be the pack leader and teach correct behaviors especially in off leash parks
- Owners of vicious animals should never have them in a situation (eg. offleash parks, even on leash) where they can create a problem with other animals through chance encounter. They should never be allowed anywhere near children
- mandatory training
- Ensure dogs are secure. Incidents always stem from a dog escaping an area that is not secure
- They should have to undergo training! At least a month! Any Vicious or deemed vicious animal can be rehabilitated. These issues are 100% always owner fault. Lack of training in socialization or in obedience
- I expect that an owner of the vicious animal that has gotten loose be prevented from any pet ownership in the future with regular checks by bylaw.
- Not to frequently bring there animals into public areas
- It's bad ownership not bad dogs. People also need to be trained not to approach any dog and scare them. They protect their homes and families. Dog breed get bad raps and people are not educated about them. Their is a reason why that dog bit or chased someone. Not because of the bree
- Keep contained at all times, ie make sure yard is secure, doors closed ect. Muzzles in public at all times, leash in public at all times
- As a former owner of a dog who had reactive anxiety, MANY times I had to ask people to leash their dogs in bylawed leash areas. Most say "it's ok, he's friendly." As a smart animal owner, I would remove my pet from the area. The issue often IS NOT the vicious pet or their owner.
- Owners should be outright responsible for any incidents involving vicious animals.
- Unfortunately, most if not all vicious dogs are the fault of the owner. Not enough or poor training, abuse and neglect. Anyone who has a dog should be responsible for its behavior. There are many private trainers available in the city, there is no excuse for a vicious dog. Blame the owner, not dog

- They should need to use a leash that clearly alerts others of the dogs behaviour. Two leash system that attaches the dog to the owner so fewer accidents can happen. Also, home visit to ensure the yard can not be escaped. No fence, or contained 8 foot enclosure, no aggressive dog may reside.
- They need to be spayed or neutered. And the owner must provide proof to the court that they are working with a trained behaviourist to alter the behaviours.
- How about some mandatory responsible dog owner training, and professional obedience training for the dog. Second offences should have higher penalties and perhaps a ban on owning pets period.
- They should be put down, it is o my a matter of time before someone gets hurt
- That they keep their animal and the public safe
- They need to keep their dogs from barking, keep them indoors or whatever it takes but neighbours should feel safe and have the right to peacefully enjoy their backyards
- Vicious animals should always be euthanized. The risk of escape and injury to innocent people and/or animals is too great. There is no excuse for owning a vicious animal.
- Sadly, the people who tend to "own" vicious animals are--as much of a stereotype as it may be--pretty vicious themselves. As such, I have basically ZERO expectations of these people. They are the problem, more than the animals.
- That they take part in training(mandatory)
Owners be fined heavy for not following laws
- Vicious dogs are caused by negligent ownership. If a dog is a threat, it should be removed from the owner and the owner lose the priviledge of owning animals.
- Is the dog actually vicious. This should not be a term given by anyone but animal behavioural specialists and should be mandatory to bring the dogs for training with a professional. Half your "vicious" animals are just the results of people not respecting the animals.
- None
- All animals deemed vivacious and their owners should be properly evaluated and depending on circumstances they should be fined and had their animal under go training till rehabilitated and maybe even rehomed afterwards
- There should be some type of simple symbol to describe or show the public that the dog has tendencies to be aggressive. And example of this could be a green bow tied to the collar
- I think that looks good.
- Notify others if someone is trying to approach the animal.
- I agree with above. But on second attack public property as determined by courts automatic euthanization. on first and second atracks oprn the civil damages.
- That they be held liable for an negative impact of their animal. There should be significant penalties imposed on owners of vicious animals (e.g. fines in the $1-10K range).
- Liability insurance in case of injury and a "dangerous dog license number" that has to be worn on a bright harness at all times. Too many instances of a vicious dog attacking someone and the owner simply taking it & leaving so no way to track them down.

- take extra precautions when taking the animal in public places - ie; take dog for a walk during non peak hours, or go to an area that is generally not as busy.
- All dogs no matter the size need to be included. we stopped using off leash areas due to small dogs biting our very dog friendly German shepherds-because they are small many people don't see them as vicious- if my dog was to snarl and snap at a person or animal it would be vicious-not for small dogs
- Training for owner and dog. No entry to areas like dog parks or kid playgrounds.
- Ownership training. Some owners need to learn how to communicate with their dog. I feel owners should have to take training classes
- Owners must attend classes to train their animals. It's absolutely unreasonable that people can buy animals without having experience with them. Vicious dogs are a particularly rampant issue in this city. Dogs trained to be vicious should be outlawed.
- Not able to go to dog parks
- Owners should be forced to pay for evaluation and treatment by a certified dog trainer or veterinary behaviourist in order to attempt to rehabilitate a vicious dog. If they refuse to pay or are unable to pay they should be restricted from obtaining another dog for 5 years.
- A training program that owners can work through and potentially decrease limitations in the future of training goes well. Education for owners on how to ensure their dog is properly muzzle trained to decrease stress
- I've had a friend recently bitten in the face by a dog. A very serious bite. As far as I know the dog is still with the owner and nothing has been done. She will need to take legal action on her own to cover corrective actions for her face. The owner should be held responsible from the start!
- To have to take mandated dog behaviour classes to learn about how to read their dog and how to handle reactive dogs.
- I think if a dog is vicious the owners need to be investigated to see if they were abusive to the dog or did anything to aggravate the dog to the point of lashing out.
- Ensure that they have control of their animals and to inform others if they think their animal will pose a threat or be a problem in a certain situation. If possible, provide training to try to correct the behaviour, be it leash aggression, fearful response to a stimulant, or something else.
- They should be required to have a bond of at least $ 5,000. posted to cover any costs that occur as a result of them attacking.
- If an animal is declared vicious, they should rehabilitate the dog and rehome it. Also the people who owned the vicious dog should be reviewed by the court and may potentially have an animal ownership restrictions placed upon them.
- Licence the pets. Neuter them. Don't train them to be vicious.
- the current expectations are good if followed
- Full attention on their pet, I often see people walking a vicious dog with their phone and headphones. Also, size matters!! Little dogs have attacked my big dog so many times but no one cares
- To keep them on leash and take proper steps to ensure safety of others.

- 100% accountability
- None, leave dogs alone
- Owners be held accountable and NOT BREEDS!
- To train their dogs and to work with their dog to calm it down
- Proper safety measures should be met, no exceptions
- They shouldn't be allowed and if a breed is deemed vicious owners should have to prove the animal has been properly trained for obedience
- Owner must recognize that their pet is vicious and take the proper precautions. Heavy fines should be imposed when incidents occur.
- Advise other households on the block that they have a vicious animal on premise.
- After any incident, the owner should invest in professional training to address the behavior that caused the incident in the first place. Further, secure structure outdoors should be further defined (kennelled outside, fenced yard?)
- To go through training
- Depending on the offense they should be put down.
- train to change behavior, noise control
- It shouldn't just be age related. I've seen many older people than 18 who don't physically have the strength to control their dog. I expected the owner to be physically able to control their pet & to keep pet to the right hand side & away from people or animals when passing. People are self absorbed
- Safety
- I have a problem with the vicious declaration. I think one umbrella term is difficult to use. Obviously there are vicious dogs, but there are also circumstances where dogs fight, but are not vicious. I think case by case evaluation is required and should not be applied to all.
- Limit number of animals someone can own if one is a vicious animal.
- I agree with the current laws.
- Securely contained around visitors.
- I think the private property laws seem a bit intense. It's no life for a dog and they will increase likelihood of aggression living in these fearful and restrictive conditions. It's a self fulfilling prophesy.
- Owners KNOW their animals and if they know that their animal is temperamental/easily antagonized then be responsible and muzzle your dog for everyone's safety. Your aggressive animal MUST be kept inside (unless on a leash with the owner) as many animals seem to escape their yards and attack.
- That it be reviewed if the owners are appropriate for keeping a vicious animal. That this animal absolutely be spayed or neutered to prevent future breeding. And for suggestions on using behaviourist or trainer to manage reactivity
- The existing rules are ridiculous and, unenforceable, especially those dealing with the private property expectations. We NEED to get back to treating other species as just that, NOT dressing up dogs and cats in 'cutesy little outfits' while having NO idea what 'normal' is for these poor creatures
- Humans needs to be trained. Dogs are reflections of their owners!

- owner forced to take dog training classes, with accused dog. Most dogs are aggressive due to bad ownership.
- If a dog is declared vicious, then the owners must be forced to take a court on proper dog management. It's probably not the dog but the crazy owner. If they don't want to pay for the course, take the dog.
- It should be required that the owner and dog complete training. Dogs are not born vicious.
- My dog was attacked by a unattended dog that had been loosely tied outside a convenience store. Didn't know what steps to take called 311 to report, owner wouldn't give his name. Didn't know what we should do.
- Any dog that is deemed to be vicious should be put down. At the end of the day these are animals, and it is not worth the risk to human life, nor the expense to our health care system.
- They need to have training on why that dog behaves that way and how to deal with the animal's problem - which unfortunately 9 time out of 10 is the OWNER.
- Very few dogs are vicious. Show me a vicious dog and I'll show you an idiot guardian. Don't punish the dog - deal with the guardian. The dog can be trained by qualified canine behaviouralists; the guardian should be punished to the fullest extent of the new laws oriented around guardianship of dogs.
- Owner needs training on how to lead the dog. Dogs react to owner energy and training.
- These owners need to attend mandatory education and training. The dogs are vicious/ill-behaved because of the owner's inability to understand dogs and dog behaviour. If they do not complete mandatory education they should be banned from owning a dog. I don't think the dog should be returned to them.
- They report to the city with actions they're taking to train their pet
- I think that if they own a "vicious dog" they clearly don't have the skills to control that particular breed and should be sent to a trainer to address the behaviour. No bad dogs. Only bad owners
- Training. Dogs are vicious due to their treatment or training.
- I would suggest they not take their dog to dog parks/off-leash areas.
- education classes on how to train or work with your dog to try to educate the owner and train the dog
- None
- To understand the meaning of "secure structure" outdoors and how it may be different than a fenced yard.
- I need to ask why is there animal so vicious. Need training before being released if not put down.
- Maybe that signs be placed on the property as a warning just in case and that there is a peice they can Velcro on their leash to warn people on walks in public to not approach.
- Those are fine.
- There should be a financial bond in place to compensated for any physical or destruction that has occurred due to the vicious animal.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- I have concerns regarding an aggressive dog being outside and barking excessively and feel there should be noise requirements for dogs to be outdoors. Having a dog barking aggressively though a fence does not help someone feel safe.
  - It's unfortunate that this continues to be a problem. I would like to see proof or validation that the owner has completed a Behavior course with a certified Canine Behaviorist.
  - I think the animal at large must undergo behaviour training - or perhaps the owner should be under review instead of the animal. Clearly there is lack of judgement call by them and it's unfortunate it comes weighing down on the animal. animals need boundaries & discipline to understand we alpha.
  - Personally, I cannot think of any reason why someone would keep a vicious animal except as a watchdog at a commercial property and then I would expect them to be properly confined and appropriate signage posted.
  - When they move into a neighbourhood with children next door to warn parents if children try to approach the dog.
  - The owners need to go through a mandatory educational process which helps them understand what they have done/not done that has contributed to an animal being defined as 'vicious.'
  - No-one in Calgary should possess a _vicious_ animal. Owners should be forced to have them euthanized.
  - Perhaps some sort of registry if an owner has multiple complaints against them? Maybe you could look online and see Person A at Residence B (in your neighbourhood) has 10 prior vicious animal complaints. As someone with small children you may choose to buy elsewhere.
  - Provide clarity on what a secure structure is and is not. Further there are people over 18 years of age that cannot control a large vicious animal. Must be over 18 years of age and have the ability to maintain control of the animal at all times.
  - I'd like the owner to be required to take a dog behaviour/handle aggressive dogs course
  - That they comply with the above. I think the problem is not with the law but rather with people who will not comply. I think people should be expected to take their dog to a dog trainer and mandated to complete additional training.
  - Do not allow citizens to own any vicious animals on the vicious animal list. Of the top five or at least top three vicious dogs, not allow people to have Pitbulls, Mastiffs or Rottweilers in the city.
  - Owners must have control
  - The owner had some type of dog training
  - Mandatory training, probation, and monitoring of the owner and the animal. I am absolutely opposed to breed specific legislation that bans a breed, however, it would be appropriate for an owner to be required to have training in order to own a dog that is considered a vicious breed
  - It shouldn't just be "bitten" there should be varying degrees. If a dog has bitten another dog, like a nip, that should be differently treated than if it mauls or kills another dog. Also, dog owners should have a phone number to call if this happens at a dog park. And the phone # should be posted
  - Put it down if it is the aggressor.
  - The owner should go through a psych test.
- Dogs are just the way the owners made them

- Go through a training course to improve dog control
- To have their dog on a leash at all times or in a fenced back yard that they can't get out of. My dogs and I get attacked regularly by off leash dogs walking in our neighborhood and the owners don't care at all. There needs to be more enforcement of leash laws. There are 5 aggressive dogs in my area
- I don't have any answers for this at the current time. I think owners of animals deemed vicious should be investigated for why this has occurred, educated so that future animals do not become vicious or they should be registered and banned from owning animals dependent on the outcome of an invest.
- The problem is that some owners do not think that their animal is vicious. If an animal has injured or bitten any other animal or human, it should not be allowed out in public.
- They have taken a training course to understand how to handle their pet and to attempt to make positive changes to reduce chance of incidents.
- Have their dog assessed and search for ways of rehabilitation. Avoidance of the community when known behaviours have already been identified
- It all comes back to responsible pet ownership. If you have a dog that is not friendly with other dogs or with people, it is 100% their responsibility to keep that dog under control at all times. No exceptions
- A neighbour's Rottweiler is often left unattended in their backyard. A chain link fence separates it from the public walkway. When I walk my dogs there it growls, snarls and runs back and forth, trying to get to us. Just a matter of time before it jumps/gets out. Do I/we need to carry bear spray?!?!
- Owners should be required to take a training course on how to handle their dog.
- Put the animals do own for everyone's safety. There are no bad dogs just really bad owners.
- Owner must attend positive behaviour training for supporting and working with their dog
- Owners should be fine for having vicious animals. Too many are using them to protect their property and it is the innocent people who are getting hurt and innocent animals as well. Make the owners responsible
- Attend a city run class
- Are the owners in a training program to learn how to best manage the animals needs?
- They should be required to take courses in responsible pet ownership. Unfortunately most of them are low lifes who couldn't care less.
- By the time the dogs declared vicious it is likely too late. Dog owners must recognize the potential their breed has for injury if or when the dog attacks. Certain breeds that are bred for aggression it was a higher risk. This is not reflected I. The current wording.
- Strict and thorough owner training/education, restrictions about future ownership or restrictions about breed that could be owned.
- I think they should take their pets to reactive training so they can better their relationship with their pet
- Owner should have 2 point of contact with the dog, meaning leashed on two separate parts. For example, having one leash connected to a collar and one to a harness.

- Cross street, communicate clearly, no off leash, maintain control at all times
- No other expectations.
- Actively training the animals.
- All of those conditions seem fine.
- Signage or decal prominently placed at entry points to clearly identify high risk animal is on site.
- Maybe should have to take a “reactive dog” training g class.
- It seems weird to me that an animal deemed vicious by the courts would be returned to the owner in the first place. Isn't that like handing a loaded gun to a toddler? The dog should be destroyed.
- Dog owners with a lack of control using off leash dog parks to display the confidence of their pet in relation to more submissive dogs who use the park for what is intended. Aggressive breeds should be confined to a smaller section of the offleash park
- Responsibility for their Own actions
Educate and holding them legally responsible monitoring
To ensure safety of community
- To have control of them - whether a muzzle or locked up. Also as a dog owner & a mom, I appreciate when owners warn that their dog is vicious and then we can avoid going right past them while walking or switch sidewalks.
- Not allowed where other animals or children are likely to congregate ie. Parks with playgrounds.
- There should be something to let other people know they are vicious. And people should be educated on what that means so they do not approach the dog and put the dog and owner in danger as well as themselves
- That they actually follow the rules. My dogs were attacked a few months ago by a loose vicious dog. No idea who the owner was, no reprisals can be made. Negligent owners get away with being negligent. A lifetime ban on dog ownership if their dog injures another animal (dog, cat, child, etc)
- They should be educated and they should also take steps with private training sessions so that the animal and owners can live a happy, stress-free life.
- Keep the vicious animal out of public areas.
- Owners should not take their pet to public off leash parks, despite the use of a muzzle and a leash. These owners should be obliged to engage in behaviour modification classes and the dog should be removed from the home if they cannot attend and make progress in them.
- None
- Ensure they have homeowner or rental insurance.
- Vicious animals indicate a poor level of care on the part of the owners. Either the animals are abused, or unsocialized and untrained. If the owners are not willing to take socialization and training programs, their animals should be confiscated, rehabilitated, and rehomed.
- They should have to attend dog behaviour classes. It's not usually the dogs fault it's the owners lack of time spent to minimize that behaviour.

- To keep the dog under control
- Requirements for retraining.
- That they know their animal's limits and act accordingly (ie, not bringing a dog to a dog park when it doesn't like other dogs)
- To ensure the physical and mental welfare of the animal is maintained even if deemed a vicious animal
- Identification that they are a vicious animal especially when at dog parks. Take them to fences in areas at dog parks. Participate in training to help curb dogs behavior.
- Reach out to volunteers/organizations who can help them
- That the person over 18 is physically able to handle the animal . These animals should not be allowed on public property like playgrounds, school grounds. Also, are they really pets if they are declared vicious??
- I expect that they take the appropriate measures to keep people, other pets and themselves safe.
- To be actively training the animal to become more comfortable with humans and animals.
- Mandatory obedience classes and training for owners and pet after incidences occur.
- Fine the owner if the dog has bitten a person or another dog. If severely bitten a person, it might need to be removed from the owner and even be put down if it is deemed to be not trainable.
- Be responsible period but it isn't happening now so more rules are not going to do a thing when the people disregarding them know they will never be charged
- Should have to go to mandatory dog training classes if they want the animal back at all, and fined if not compliant
- I see no reason for people to keep vicious animals.
- Vicious dogs should be put down.
- They should have to prove the completion of an appropriate dog behaviour course.
- Depending on the severity of the mauling attack, the owner must pay the city's costs to put it down, just like the rest of us have to pay the city for not shoveling it's sidewalks after a storm.
- mandatory training of the owner/pet
- The animal is controlled at all times, there is a clear indicator the animal is vicious and the animal is vaccinated.
- I don't think owners of vicious animals should take them anywhere public, other than the veterinarian, muzzled or leashed. If they are vicious enough to cause a human hospitalization, they should be euthanized.
- They need to take dog training classes, to learn how to handle/treat dogs. Any dog, even a chihuahua, can be vicious. It's not just the big dogs, they just do more damage.

- Fines should apply if a dog hurts a person or another animal. Owner of vicious dogs should be responsible for vet bill of other animal they attacked....Compensation to humans for any trauma treatment...physical and emotional trauma caused by vicious dog.
- I believe that the owner should not be allowed to take the animal to an off leash park. Also believe that the owner and dog should take training as deemed fit.
- Training courses
- These rules seem reasonable.
- Vicious dogs, and irresponsible owners should not be allowed to run amok in the city. We aren't convinced that any specific breed is always a threat but some irresponsible people who own dogs seem to own dogs with a penchant for trouble.
- Vicious dogs don't change. Think about that when you let it back into the community
- Owners of vicious dogs should be expected to ensure their dog has been properly trained they receive training in proper handling and should ensure the dog is on leash and under control at all times when in public.
- Have visible signs identifying the home of having a vicious dog.
- no need to have a vicious animal in any circumstance .owners should be trained and then they can train their dogs....etc. properly. too high a danger to public.
- They must be fine and it would depend how much on the severity of the bite. The owners must be held accountable it is not the animal
- training/rehabilitation to reduce viciousness, owner held legally accountable for further attacks/injuries caused by dogs, limit vicious animals contact with children/other animals
- Do your do diligence. Make extra sure you don't put your pets life in danger because you slipped up.
- Keep the secure structure a minimum distance away from the property line
- Proper training for both owner and dog to minimize viciousness.
- As covered above.
- One attack on any person or animal should equal automatic euthanasia - no discussion. All dogs out on leash or in off leash areas must be muzzled. Too many innocent walkers marred for life because of a dog attack (even ones owners say have never been like that - hence ALL dogs muzzled).
- Is there a level under this? For dogs that attack others at dog parks and there are no repercussions? I have concerns about other dog owners and dogs at dog parks. That not all owners take responsibility for their pet or don't take reasonable action to ensure their pet doesn't viciously attack another
- It's unnatural to declare a dog "vicious" when it attacks another animal. I expect that owners know their dog and know their dogs triggers but the dog should not be punished for natural behaviour. Dogs are animals, they don't need to behave like obedient children.
- That they stop dealing drugs. Because that's who teaches their dogs to be vicious.

- The owners should go to a mandatory training class .. 99% of all incidents could be prevented with proper handling/training .. not all dog bite because they're vicious.. they feel threatened Or scared and the owner is oblivious to the signs
- I think some basic training classes may be of value. Dogs like humans can react in a bad moment and generally never act aggressively unless they're poorly trained, abused, scared or feeling threatened. And taking them away to evaluate just puts them in a unfamiliar place where they cant be themself
- Vicious animals should not be returned to their owners. Period. The owners should have a lifetime ban from owning any other animals.
- Muzzle and containment
- A truly vicious and aggressive dog, which represents an ongoing threat to other dogs or people, should be destroyed and owner fined. The rules as they are seem fair.
- Since it is often about the owner, the owner should be mandated to attend classes (maybe a partnership with Calgary Humane) on dog training/management, behaviour management. There should be a requirement that dogs with such designation be muzzled when in the presence of children age 10 or less
- More accountability. No one is enforcing the muzzle in public law.
- Must complete two hours of education on managing a vicious dog provided by a certified dog trainer with their yearly licensing.
- A funded program people could apply for that provides a licensed behavioral specialist has potential to greatly reduce the frequency and severity of aggressive dog encounters
- second vicious attack offence, heavy fines.
- Animals to be muzzled when in public followed by removal of animal after first offence
- Remove them from the city. Why do we allow a known vicious animal of any kind within the city?
- Should not be left in private property where someone under the age of 8 lives, should not be left unsupervised with someone under 18 years old (even if someone over 18 is present and is in "control")
- None. Dogs are not born violent, poor parenting creates this. Like humans, dogs can be rehabilitated
- I think the private property rules are too strict.
- Owners should be required to take several animal behavioural classes and consult with a behaviourist.
- It depends on the assessment of which dog is vicious and if it is properly assessed and is truly vicious then it has no place in the city and should be put down.
- I think the owners should be expected to have courses on how to handle these animals
- Mandatory for owner to seek professional Behavior modification training and provide proof.
- Have control of their pet.
- None
- They are kept out of the city. Doors and fences are usually not sufficient.

- Background checks on owners. Home visits to ensure dog is in secure location. Enforce owners taking dog reactivity classes to have dog returned to them. Euthanize dogs who are repeat offenders, I love dogs but there are plenty of nice ones looking for homes
- Kept muzzled and leashed in public areas!
- Double leash one attached to waist so they cannot get loose
- Maybe a special leash or collar that identifies the dog as vicious so passersby are aware. Care and caution from the owner while out in public with the dog.
- keep vicious animals away from children and away from other pets
- They should have to attend a training session and assessment of the dog
- No dog is vicious for no reason. It is always the dog owner who either is doing something wrong or not doing something right. Once a dog is deemed vicious, the owners should be expected to pass a mandatory course on responsible dog ownership.
- If a dog attacks a person it should be put down. Vicious dogs are typically the result of bad owners. If you beat and chain your dog it will go crazy. I love and own dogs... but none of them would ever harm a person.
- I expect that owners of vicious animals will adhere to the existing rules. This is not currently happening.
- having a clean police background check: no violence actions, no theft
- They should not be allowed to continue to exist.
Have them put down
- Do not allow them on private property
- Something more than a muzzle to identify them. Like a collar or harness with blatantly obvious color/wording for warning. Muzzles don't necessarily signify vicious to me.
- Owners need to be taking obedience courses to learn how to train dogs and handle them. There are no vicious dogs, there are owners who do not know how to handle dogs.
- more insurance for damages, requirement for training for owner and animal. mandatory neutering for unneutered dogs
- They are doing the best they can.
- They should be required to take a training session with expert dog handlers (ex. at the humane society), to help rehabilitate the dog, or increase the dogs quality of life in a manner safe for all involved, while following the above listed rules. This should be provided at low to no cost to them.
- Most vicious and misbehave dogs are because the owners are irresponsible. Dogs learn their behavior. Obedience schools for dogs are very expensive. And the dogs end up being punished for the owners negligence. Owners of vicious dogs should face fines, dogs should be confiscated and rehabilitated
- There should be a mandatory class taught to educate the human on how best to handle the animal or to learn about how their handling and or environment may have contributed to the dog's aggression. A dog is usually only as good as it's training. The human has to take some onus.
- Owners to be personally liable for their dogs behavior.

- Owners with viscous animals should ensure the safety of others and others pets. They should always ensure a safe distance from others when in public and give a warning to other owners and pets if they are being approached. Providing a color coded harness/collar with visible wording is ideal
- That they don't put their dogs in any situations where they can harm people or other animals. That they get help/training to help their dog overcome the aggression issues.
- None, Calgary has done a wonderful job with vicious dogs.
- To seek professional help for their dog to try to find the reason for the viscous behaviour so it can be treated
- Dog parks and populated places should be avoided. When on walks, muzzles are a must for sure. Perhaps the dogs should be required to wear something on them that says "Do Not Approach", to avoid contact.
- I expect that they do everything they can to help positively train and socialize their animals, to overcome behaviour problems, and work with an expert in animal behaviour on the dog's issues. Locking the dog up and muzzling it is cruel, not helpful, and requiring the owner to do so is ridiculous.
- To ensure they are properly handled when outside and inside of the home. muzzled if necessary.
- No access to off leash parks
- None. I feel the restrictions on vicious dogs are enough.
- "They be in control of their animal in most scenarios. If an unleashed animal comes up to one on a leash it is NOT the responsibility of the leashed animal owner if something happens, now it's up to the person who had animal off-leash.
I don't think the age 18 rule is appropriate or needed.
- They seek obedience training and/or behaviour modification courses. They take steps to prevent the dog from coming into contact with other people and pets.
- I used to have to use a muzzle on a previous dog. It was adequate to ensure my dog was safe to be around other dogs.
- I do not support breed specific conditions or rules. I believe that any animal has an ability to be a problem if the owner is not responsible.
- There are no vicious dogs, only vicious owners.
Perhaps the underlying cause is the owner and how they are treating or training the dog. The owner should be penalized, not the dog.
- I think the above protocols are enough
- Owners should be tested to prove their dog is controllable before receiving a dog license. they do this in Germany & the number of attacks on people has decreased. If the dog fails the test the owner has 6 months to take an obedience course & try again. Upon failure the 2nd time the dog is removed
- Safe confinement.

- There is often no way of knowing if a dog is vicious! The most "tame" dog may react differently when under a (perceived) threat. I have been nipped on a bike path by a loose dog that the owner said was "usually friendly". ALL dogs should be under control at all times! Not just "vicious" ones.
- Mandatory for the owner and dog to attend a training course or specific number of sessions. The city could make relationships with Calgary based trainers who might be interested in being apart of this if needed. It'll be situational so there should be more then one option for trainers.
- They must carry a minimum insistance policy in case the dog injures a person. Must show proof yearly paid in full.
- Proper training and safety precautions
- I would expect that above are actually and followed and that it be assured that the person with the dog is actually able to physically restrain it.
- That they take classes to correct the behaviour. If they are vicious there is no reason they have to stay vicious.
- I think if a vicious animal has attacked a human or other pet the court should be able to decide to destroy that animal where it deems this as necessary for public safety.
- To provide a safe environment which does not put the animal in a position where it may react
- City should do visits to make sure the home is not abusive towards the dog. Random check ins
- why are we allowing people to keep vicious animals. that seems like a failure of both the owner and the city
- Limit of one animal at a time within a public property.
- To keep them under control, muzzle when out in public, training
- They likely won't abide by these rules. I would never feel safe if a neighbor had a vicious dog.
- I don't see any reason for anyone to own an animal that has been labelled vicious. This is a one-strike sort of offense.
- Include cats in this one. They do all the same things, except cat owners let their pests roam free! Vicious animals are only vicious because of the owner. Owners of "vicious" animals should suffer the consequences should their pet harm another individual.
- Keep away from other dogs and people when walking. Do not go to off leash areas.
- I think that it is the owners fault not the animal fault the animal should be rehabilitated instead of being put down
- Provide one i one training with a certified animal trainer. Dogs in general are not vicious it is the was e are care for at home and trained.
- I expect owners to recognize behaviours and protect the public
- To comply with the rules by always keeping their animals harnessed and muzzled in public. By ensuring their pet doesn't accidentally get out eg through an open garage door.
- Training. Owners of vicious animals should be expected to go through training on how to handle that animal Also vicious dogs should not be allowed at dog parks
- None

- Vicious animals need to be under control at all times. I feel a lot of “vicious animals” are the owner’s responsibility
- Seek professional assistance to help rehabilitate animal. A list of reputable trainers and resources should be available along with affordable options as our economy is not great and training is not cheap.
- Must surrender to the city
- Maybe consultation and check in with a certified trainer who can further assess the issue
- Not to expose them to situations where they could hurt someone or another animal. Also to ensure safety of the vicious dog.
- Nothing else.
- Training with a certified behaviourist
- Do not frequent off leash parks or have your dog unleashed for a situation to occur. Know how to handle people who choose not to respect your boundaries or specific training or management of your animal as this is one of the biggest frustrations that will occur repeatedly.
- Any animal that has been commercially imported needs to have a special licence in case that animal is lost or abandoned
- Stay out of dog parks. Use a muzzle. Seek out a professional trainer
- First, I will say a vicious animal is only vicious because of mistreatment, lack of training, or training it to be vicious. I believe that on private property, if the animal is unknown to an individual, follow those rules to a tee. If known, the rules can be less severe. In public, rules apply.
- No control! Education for dogs and people. Rules are clear. Have something that will identify them as vicious. Control of their dog. What to do with vicious people. Us and who make expectation clear.
- - Bylaw officers need to understand behaviour before they lay charges.
  - Sometimes wrong dog gets charged
  - Owner can only control so much
- - Expectations should also be on unleashed dogs
  - Need care and controlx
  - Muzzles can be a deterrent
  - Face to face on leash is the worst
  - On leash when area is on leash
- - Rules are pretty clear
  - wear a muzzle
  - dog needs to be under control even off leash
  - issue is also vicious people you respond badly when you try to educate them
  - People think dogs should do whatever they want
  - Need other dog owner
- just know their pet and protect others
- Due care and awareness of the environment they will be taking their dog/animal to
- The city should seize the animal from the owner and keep it until you are certain it is safe to be returned to the owner

- They try to socialize them. Vicious dogs help keep coyotes away. Need proper place to keep them.
- Train the dog by a certified trainer
- Mandatory dog training after a change. Increase knowledge to improve ability to be more responsible
- Always keep the dog with you. Don't let other friends walk it. Give good food. Take care of it.
- To take their dogs to get rehabilitated to be more friendly
- - Training
  - Investigate the owner as well
  - Take the dog to dog school
  - keep away from people & other animals
  - always under supervision
- - Sign warning of vicious dog
  - Should be put into some kind of training
  - Depending on the seriousness of the attack give one chance then put down if happened again
- Beware of dog signs on private property
- Must wear tags
  - What if they get off leash by accident
- That owners are aware of these rules. They should be fined heavily if they do not abide.
- Should be required that owners attend training for aggressive dogs.
- That the dog must attend behavioural classes yearly.
- Financial liability for damage caused to others without the need for a tort-based suit. The bylaw should provide automatic damages. Consequences teach ignorant owners. Mandatory training for owner and dog failing which Animal is surrendered. Differential licensing costs.
- Most of the issues stem from owners who's dogs are fine and they assume them that all dogs don't have issues. Their dogs are off leash and running up to dogs who are reactive (on leash with responsible dog owners). Our last dog was not aggressive at all but would react when other dogs came close.
- The animal is never the issue. It is how the animal is handled and protected when in public. The owner is fully responsible for any action of the animal and should be held accountable. Killing dogs that bite does not solve any problems with the humans that can't handle them. They just go get another
- Must undergo training with a positive reinforcement trainer to ensure they are adequately knowledgeable and able to work on the behaviours.
- Why do they have vicious dogs? Should be illegal!
- I think this is a good policy
- That they are required to take mandatory training classes with their dog to keep the dog in their possession. With regular follow up from bylaw. Failure to go to classes removed the dog from their possession.

- More than 1 vicious incident (especially if it is due to negligence of owner) should result in the dog being put down. If guidelines are not followed people should be banned from owning pets.
- Proper and well maintained fences.
- Being caged for an entire animal's life is not a very good quality of life. However aggressive animals should be required to be in a program to assist in behavioral recovery, or responsibly euthanized if unable to have the animal signed off as not a danger to them or others.
- Proof of obedience training, and exercise needs being met
- Owners need to take responsibility of their pets behavior and take action to minimize danger to the public
- Undergo evaluation of suitability for ownership. Is the attack something that could have been prevented with proper training and ownership.
- Current bylaws and rules are satisfactory.
- People should not be allowed to own vicious animals.
- Vicious animals should NOT be permitted on public property.
- Under control means that the person is also strong enough to restrain their dog.
- I do not think that vicious animals should be allowed. If after training, an animal is still a threat, I feel it is the safest for everyone to put the animal down.
- Rules in place are good
- Give them a good home / care for them properly. Take great care to avoid any negative encounters with other animals or humans.
- Signage at the residence where the animal lives to indicate that the animal might have wild instincts.
- Behavioral education, they should learn how to read dog body language so they can avoid escalating to dangerous situations. Accidents are avoidable with proper education, unfortunately not everyone will be able to learn but owners should be required to have this knowledge.
- People have to realize that small dogs are vicious.& provoke altercations,
- It's the owners fault, not the animal. The owner SHOULD BE REQUIRED to attend animal behaviour training classes, should also be monitored to ensure the dogs are not being abused, mistreated or involved in animal fighting.
- The dog is always the one to pay the ultimate price. Dogs should be evaluated & if at all possible given a second chance, with one of the many groups available that can retrain the animals. Very few dogs are born vicious, owners are responsible for training and care of the dog making it dangerous
- They must be kept on leash, have a secure yard, be mandated to take a positive reinforcement behaviour course, and NEVER go to an off leash park. I refuse to take my dogs too off leash parks-way too many inappropriate dogs and owners who have no clue on what is proper behaviour
- take a sanity test
- They should keep their dogs on a leash and make sure to tell other dog owners that their dog is not friendly so other dogs don't approach them.

- I would also expect that they would be working with a trainer, and possibly using medication if indicated
- I don't think we should consider breed specific bans. All dogs can be vicious depending on upbringing. I think a colored bandana or muzzle ( say red) should be worn.
- I think we need to look at why the animal is that way. most of the time we will find human error is the cause for the vicious dog "owner or victim". then the human should have to deal with outcome and the animal either relocated or rehabilitated or other action as required.
- None
- To be properly educated on how to properly manage a reactive animal, attend training sessions if not knowledgeable. How to properly fit and use a muzzle, always allowing room for panting.
- Insurance if you have a recognized breed used for fighting. Pit bull, Diogo canario etc
- That they maintain the safety of those around them. This should be done through the above , but I believe people who have these dogs must be required to have insurance to pay for any damage that they do. Certain breeds are known to have a higher tendency and owners should hold insurance
- Participate in some mandatory training of the animal. Does a secure structure include a fenced yard? If not, I don't think a "vicious animal" should be muzzled in its own yard as long as the animal cannot reasonably escape from the yard.
- Do not agree with known vicious animals being kept.
- I think if they are the problem then they should be forced to take classes to understand and control their pets better.
- That they are capable of controlling and containing their pet. Vicious animals are not typically owned by responsible individuals, and are more of a status symbol for some - these are the cases where someone get hurt by one of these animals.
- All dogs should be muzzled when outside in the city or parks. This protects innocent dogs and owners from attack. Owners may not know their dogs are vicious until an attack occurs and should receive a warning, after that if the dog is outside and not muzzled then they should face a fine.
- Mandatory animal training courses to train the owners and rehabilitate vicious dogs!
- I expect owners to consistently and adequately ensure their pet cannot harm any person.
- Owners should be responsible and be able to show they have taken the proper precautions when handling a vicious animal.
- I think those people should not own the dog. There is some reason why the dog is vicious. They should have to give up the dog and if need be the dog should be put to sleep.
- Vicious animals should be permitted in public at all whether they are muzzled and harnessed or not. They have been deemed to be dangerous and I should not feel threatened when out in public with my children.
- Stay away from small children

- Their yards MUST be fenced. I dealt with a St Bernard that attacked me and my little dog, and Bylaw said it was ok that the yard only had Post-and-Cable fencing (it bordered a public pathway), as long as dog was tied up outside. Owner cried, so she only had to pay 1/3 of her fine. No deterrent there
- More responsibility to be placed on owners. Majority of vicious dogs have experienced some sort of neglect or lack of training by owners. Owners should be required to pass courses in owning specific breeds so that the accountability lies with the human, not the dog.
- Disclose to others that animal is vicious. Not allowed in dog parks
- They should be mandated to take specialized training (for the dog AND for them) from a certified animal behaviourist.
- To have control over your animal and not be in off leash areas.
- Greater duty of care to monitor the dog's behavior, ensure a yard is secured so the dog cannot escape.
- If you have a reactive dog then I think you should be aware of your dogs behavior and ensure that you are taking all precautions to make sure your dog and other dogs or people are safe at all times. A basket muzzle is a way to protect your dog out in public and also seeking out proper training
- Muzzles when in public. Compulsory training for the owners
- Severe penalties if the above is violated. Public registry.
- Warning on the property
- I would also limit the locations vicious dogs are allowed to be in for example children's parks or off leash dog parks
- I think a warning sign should be mandatory & posted for anyone delivering to the address, etc., either in the vicious dog's window or yard.
- Based on experience, I do not think vicious dogs should be allowed at off-leash parks. I had my dog at an off-leash park and he was attacked by a muzzled dog. Although the dog was muzzled it was still able to get a good chunk of hair out of my dog. The owner stood by and did nothing.
- Owners are usually the problem.
- Should be mandatory to receive training and rehabilitation
- It is somewhat implied but I am not sure it is followed, but they should not be permitted in off-leash parks or left outside businesses (e.g. tied to a post while someone enters a business). I think there should be a way for members of the public to know where the dogs are living in the city.
- To seek out positive reward based training, if possible.
- Mandatory to inform neighbors to be aware. Follow rules regulations, be respectful of others' fears and concerns.
- That they abide by the rules and if they do not, there are serious consequences for them.
- Higher fines. There's no reason anyone should own a vicious animal.
- That they receive proper training with a qualified behaviorist you assist with modifying the behavior.
- They take ongoing training, such as annual workshops or live training.
- Don't bring vicious dogs to dog parks. Dogs should require clear warning harness/leash/jacket stating "Not Friendly" when in public.

- I'm actually not sure I understand the secure structure outdoors. Why not just mandate that if they are to be outside there must be a fence X high and have warning signs? Otherwise guard dogs can't do their job.
- Mandatory completion of dog behaviour course and dog handling courses that have been approved by the City.
- That they be responsible and not ignore the situation. Often the animal has got loose and nobody is supervising. Or just don't care.
- They should be put down if they attack a person or another animal.
- Owners should take a course on how to handle animals, as this type of behaviour is often rooted in the owner not knowing how to treat the animal properly or knowing what the animal needs to feel safe enough not to feel threatened and react as if they are threatened.
- None, though the rationale for owning a habitually vicious dog in the first place escapes me.
- I'd like the owners to have to participate in mandatory pet behaviour/obedience training.
- No extendable leashes for vicious animals.
- Be under control of someone who is stronger than or is able to fully control the dog, not someone who is unable to pull the dog back, require all dogs to have strong leashes and put in place a time where dangerous dogs can not be walked during certain times like after school before 7 PM.
- Person walking them, or in so-called control, actually be physically capable of restraining their dog, also I have heard of owners of these dogs fleeing the scene...leaving the person with the injured or dead dog to deal with it AND pay for it. If their dog does damage, there should be a bylaw th
- Owners of vicious animals should keep them indoors when they are not home. The dogs should not be allowed to bark and bark and jump threateningly all day. They are kept as guard dogs but should not make neighbours' lives unpleasant.
- Adoption organisations working with abused, abandoned or feral dogs should have to disclose that there is an increased risk of having behavioural issues w/ these dogs, provide training and follow up support.
- If deemed possible, the owner might be required to take the dog to a trainer that helps decrease reactivity.
- Even if the person is over 18, they need to demonstrate they are able to control the dog.
- I think these are reasonable restrictions. However, I have witnessed people intentionally loitering and aggravating a dog they don't like from the sidewalk, and the owner should have the ability to enforce that those people move away from the property.
- Investigate the owner
- Attend an obedience or training class or facility would be great. Many of these dogs have an incident because the owners were careless or unable to see the signs of danger. There are no bad dogs, only bad owners. Labeling dogs vicious is not fair if the owners are not being responsible
- Anyone with a dog that has been deemed vicious must have a lot of training to keep that dog. There are very few truly vicious dogs most of it comes from lack of training lack of socialization and people mistreating their animal so they become that way there's also a huge factor in fear aggression

- License required and shots up to date.
- I feel the current requirements are adequate.
- they need to work on training with their dog
- Jail time for owners after investigation - one and done! No more slaps on the wrist.... PROTECT the dogs from owners that are at fault. Dogs are NOT inherently vicious. Dogs that are taken care of in all aspects don't get vicious!
- That every effort has been made to determine the root cause of the aggression, and that they have worked with trained individuals to try and correct the behaviour.
- Muzzled, do not have the dog off leash, warn people as they pass if they are stopping to pet dog.
- Do NOT take out in Public where the Animal could injure someone or another animal!
- Why is the dog vicious? If out in public it must be muzzled and on a leash at all time. If it attacks another animal or person it should be euthanized.
- The owner must be physically capable of controlling their dog. I had an experience last year in River Park while on my bike. A very large bull mastiff wearing a muzzle attacked me. The muzzle did its job and I wasn't hurt. The elderly female owner was yelling at the dog ineffectually.
- That they not be bred.
- Owners need to recognize that their animals may need extra training and ensure that the animals are on leash and wear muzzles when in public spaces. There is always a reason for the aggression. I think ALL dogs need to be under the control of a person over the age of 16 and aggressive >18
- No other.
- Vicious animals have no place in the city. Bann them.
- A financial liability if their animal harms another dog, to cover costs. 2 strikes they're put down.
- Dogs who are territorial of their owners, should not be allowed at off leash dog parks. My small dog was attacked twice by the same dog as the child of the owner kept trying to pet my dog.
- Obedience training, dogs who are properly trained are more well behaved. Mandatory exercising to keep the dog stimulated and enrichment activities to keep their minds on fun instead of attacking
- The above regulations are not being followed by some owners. There should not be any vicious animals in an urban setting.
- Enforce those bylaws
- Signage on their properties, notification to service providers, registry with the City of Calgary
- These regulations seem reasonable.
- When there is harm caused by a dog the dog must be euthanized and the owner fined heavily and responsible for all costs associated with said harm
- The above methods seem to do the trick already.
- As noted is adequate.
- Maybe start with "why" is the animal vicious. That's generally the problem: people think it is the animal that is vicious when in fact it is the person. Investigate the person first. Maybe they are working for a rescue/rehab org (for animals), that's okay then. But when they are not, go after them!

- A woman was walking her small poodle by our house when 2 large dogs came bolting out the front door of a home with the owner and attacked the little dog. Owner of large dog claimed it had never happened before, ya right!
- they should be identified by wearing a red bandana so you know to put your dog on leash. Stay away from off leash parks
- Could they have a special tag or something that flags a dog isn't friendly or has behavioural issues. Dogs are like people and they may not like someone or another dog. It does mean they are vicious.
- To do the minimum & more. There should also be identification on the dog that explains that the dog is not to be approached. Something similar to the yellow leash campaign from several years ago. This could be organized and controlled by the City of Calgary for consistency wording and equipment wise
- Muzzled and registered and licensed. Visits from bylaw to ensure parameters (fence or dog run) are maintained to prevent escape. Rescues to register all vicious dogs with bylaw sling with owner. Not allowed to roam and must be on leash and muzzled when walking.
- they do their best to control their pets
- Repeat offenses by a vicious animal should be treated seriously, as if the owner committed the vicious act themselves, since it is through their negligence that a vicious animal attacks a person or other animal.
- Common sense should prevail if the animal has serious attack on a person, it should be euthanised.
- Where is the section on dogs who bark all the time? The owner who refuses to train. Force owners to train their dog to a standard such as responding to voice commands, not barking etc. I am tired of a neighbour, who as soon as he puts his dogs outside in the back they bark. I cannot sit on my deck.
- I think that if they do not follow through there should be fines, etc.
- Unless the dogs are trained for a specific job, security for example, NO vicious dogs should be kept in family homes as pets.
- That they educate themselves on humane ways to rehabilitate their dogs, avoid situations that escalate their dog's stress, and not bring their dogs to off-leash parks until they have found a program that works for them. They should pay for all medical expenses caused by their inability to control.
- Keep them chained up and go to specific dog parks.
- There are far too many attacks in Calgary. Owners of vicious animals should be heavily regulated and monitored. Vicious dogs are a live weapon and the owners should be treated as if they own a dangerous weapon. Period.
- Vicious animals aren't safe at all but are they ok to keep if they have a license? They should be removed from an owner if they live in the city. The better question is why is the animal vicious? Has it been mistreated?
- Mandatory dog training
- An owner of a vicious animal should not be allowed to keep more than one such animal and should lose the right to having such animals if a subsequent animal is determined to be vicious.

- Just that they carry the proper knowledge on how to handle their pet and how to keep everyone safe, including their pet and others.
- I would like there to be training available, and subsidized if necessary, so that the owners and the dogs can learn more appropriate behaviours.
- Owners of vicious animals should prevent exposure to small animals and children. Owners of vicious animals should not use off leash parks. Owners should take classes that focus on teaching and managing aggressive behaviours before the animal becomes vicious.
- If they don't comply with the conditions, they can be banned from owning any animals. They should have to take and pass educational courses on proper dog ownership and training.
- The animals can not be left unattended with other animals in the household, even when muzzled. There should be an indicator, such as a vest or a leash indicating not to pet.
- I feel that if vicious dogs that have bitten a person should be euthanized. Once they've bitten a person, they'll do it again.
- They should train their dogs and themselves.
- vicious animals should not a taken to off-leash areas and under control at all times.
- full responsibility for their dogs actions
- Follow the above laws and warn people of the aggression either verbally or with a dog tag/leash
- Owners of vicious dogs should undergo training to give them additional tools of how to cope with their dogs, especially when in public. "Person over 18" is not enough - the person must have the physical ability to control the dog.
- Nothing
- should not be breed specific (more bites by small breed than larger "targeted breeds)
- Not to train their dog to be vicious.
- None.
- For their own well being and quality of life they may need to be euthanized.
- When in public, communicate to others of the vicious behaviours of their animals
- Stiffer penalties for non-compliance.
- People shouldn't keep vicious animals in the first place. They do not belong in an urban environment.
- "Be under control" needs to be better defined. Lots of people believe they have things under control, but are unable to recognize what that means.
- Animal behavior and training classes for the owner and ban from owning animals. Vicious dogs are not born, they are a result of terrible dog owners.
- That they do not allow them off leash and have them secured away from anyone or other animal they could harm

- Keep your dog on a leash, get a private run in a dog park or at your home, make sure the animal is muzzled, animal handled by older/stronger human.
- Owners who aren't experienced, as in, they haven't done research or haven't had another pet, I recommend they try getting a smaller dog or pet, or do lots of research, and to do a little test or quiz to see if they can have a big dog.
- Owners must actively try to reduce the risk of the animal by training or other measures. Complete a test of risk with an animal professional. If they cannot prove that the dog has been rehabilitated, the vicious dog should be seized and euthanized.
- Some pet owners are not physically able to control or restrain their dogs, i.e. BIG dog, small human. I would expect the owners to know their limitations and exercise appropriate measures.
- I expect them not to own vicious dogs. They show no respect for individuals who may be attacked by their dogs.
- I expect that they take proactive measures in regards to training to reduce reactive behaviours, and that they always prepare and act to prevent their animal from harming another being.
- Get help from a behaviorist. And follow through with the training.
- They should be forced to take training on how to improve the pets, and, the City should ensure that these animals are not being mistreated in any way that could lead to them being vicious.
- Owners should be able to control their animals, and be aware of the context of their viciousness. If the animal is a threat to others, muzzling and those type of precautions should be taken. Also, commitment to training and understanding their pet.
- Get additional training for them and their pet, consider not owning other pets now or in the future
- The animal and owner should have to attend dog training.
- Not to be in off leash park
- Seek regular training and complete (at their expense) yearly testing to ensure the problem is not escalating.
- A fenced back yard with only a single layer wood or vinyl fence is not secure.
- When a dog is declared vicious, it should undergo evaluation by qualified trainers and other qualified personnel as to why aggression occurred and pending results, should be dealt with accordingly.
- Always handle them as if they are indeed vicious. Muzzled, leashed and in control at all time when off their property
- They must attend canine behavioural courses and get and MAINTAIN Information and have regular reports given regarding the vicious dogs. They must be very responsible, accountable and understanding of these type of dogs. Give a viable reason as to why they must keep such a dog
- this needs to be re addressed. while on the owner's private property, no animal should have to be muzzled. owners should be educated, and both should attend obedience and behavioural training for the dog. I agree that the owner should have control....without education this is not possible.
- Our neighbour and unsuspecting dog were viciously attacked by a pitbull ON leash. Left them both in stitches while the pitbull and owner took off. By their reaction, wasn't the first time. Dogs like that should be put down and owners restricted from getting licences. Should be zero tolerance.

- There should be a sign posted at the entrance of the home and they should be required to use a RED leash and collar that can be identified from further away
- Spay/neuter, mandatory training, if it attacks again it gets euthanized
- To ensure they cannot leave the owners property unattended.
- Both the owner and dog should take obedience training from a trainer certified by the city.
- Extensive and on-going non-aversive training.
- Any injuries that are inflicted by the animal whether on humans or other animals are completely the responsibility of the offending dog owner. There should be mandatory intensive training paid for by the offending dog owner for the offending dog before the dog is allowed to return to the home.
- None. However, there are many people under 18 who are responsible and many over 18 who are not. Age should not be a factor, experience should.
- To attend training sessions with their dog- rehabilitation is required and not the animals fault if this is not provided. I think this should be mandatory (ie. through the humane society).
- Owners should take responsibility for their animal's behavior.
- none
- they should be muzzled
- The use of a solid nylon or leather leash. No retractable leashes.
- Vicious or aggressive Dogs should be muzzled any time they are outdoors, ie. before they are permitted to step outside, even if to be locked in a secure structure outside! Too many times, dogs escape these so-called "secure" structures and end up running loose!!
- coloured label on harness/leash. knowledge of how to properly care for a dog/animal.
- Maybe they should have dogliability insurance. As a cyclist, I've been chased by vicious dogs, terrifying ordeal. Am sure of bad outcome if I didn't escape or get off my bike and use my bike as a guard. also scared to get knocked down and injured by dogs cos broken hip or legs will be deadly.
- Muzzling is not a solution to a vicious dog. Owners must seek out professional trainers to help them rehabilitate their dog through behavior modification techniques. Calgary has many trainers that work specifically with reactive dogs.
- That the owner of a vicious animal be responsible for any veterinarian or medical bills for injuries their vicious animal inflicted on others.
- Deemed vicious or not, a dog that bites a human at a dog park should be removed immediately from the area by its owner. Same for dogs that aggressively attack another dog. The onus is on the owner; common sense is lacking in some dog owners.
- If your dog has severely bitten, mauled (Ian Dunbar bite scale) a human or killed another's pet dog then the dog needs to be humanely euthanized.
- Should be caged, muzzled when outside, under control of responsible strong enough adult.
- They should be held responsible to any attacks on people or other animals, and in severe cases the dogs should be euthanized. The owners should be heavily fined and not be allowed to own another dog again and if caught doing so the fine should be extremely severe.

- To ensure the animal is the owner's first priority and that first and foremost the animals are kept safe. I would also like to see the city take steps as to why the animals are behaving in a vicious manner seeks to do harm, The animals are never to blame only the owner.
- That they get specific, meaningful and adequate information that they understand that their dog is a 'problem'. Too many dog owners still consider their dog a 'perfect angel capable of doing no wrong' even after an incident or many. Always laying blame elsewhere.
- Mandatory training for reactive dogs.
- Current expectations are OK
- Notorious vicious dog breeds should receive extra scrutiny.
- Owners of vicious animals should probably not own animals. They likely had something to do with its conditioning and are obviously unable to control the animal.
- Owners should go through education/training on animal care and behaviour training. Owners should bring their dogs to trainers to prevent further inappropriate behaviour. The owners should be investigated for potential abuse.
- All of the above "manage" the problem, but do not solve it. These animals deemed vicious are the result of either abuse, poor conditions, or lack of education. I think owners should be assessed to make sure that they don't abuse their animals and the dogs are placed in courses to rehabilitate them.
- Primarily I expect the city to follow its own rules. The vicious dog should be required to have professional training and the city should enforce steep penalties with pet owners who do not comply.
- They should be heavily fined and/or taxed. There is no need and should be no privilege to have a vicious dog in any community
- Effective control over said animal, within their property or outside. Mandatory obedience training. Provide adequate mental and physical stimulation to animal. Adequate fencing to house animal (tall enough and strong enough).
- If applicable, get dog training
- Make decisions on whether the animal needs to be put down.
- Behind a six foot locked fence.
- I think a huge part of this regulation is related to the definition of "control", and as long as the expectations related to it then I think this is adequate. My concern is related to the vagueness of the wording.
- I think that when a dog is declared to be vicious there should be a mandatory behavioural class, that the owner and any other people with direct care of the dog should have to attend.
- The safety of children in the home. For example, when a dog is deemed dangerous, they still pose a risk to children within the home. I feel as though all dogs deemed vicious should be visually identified when out in the community to signal to other owners not to approach the dog.
- Keep them on leash in public
- I agree they must adhere to the specific rules outlines above

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Education of the owner and a refresher obedience course yearly would be helpful. Muzzled for walks is good for both exercise and the public
- Animal should be taken from owner. Owner not allowed more dogs for a 5 year period. Then probation. Most animals are (taught) to be aggressive.
- Keep the animals safe, as well as the neighbors, seek out behavior training/socialization training.
- The dog must be locked in a room, basement or garage when answering/opening the door to avoid it escaping. A warning near the front door. Must disclose to anyone coming inside their home, especially anyone with children.
- they should not be allowed to be in off leash parks, ever if they are muzzled and on leash. They are a danger to other dogs and children at the park
- THEY SHOULD NOT BE PERMITTED TO EXIST IN URBAN AREAS.
- to post a notice that they have a vicious dog, have no children under 18 yr old in the household, cannot own any other animals (dog, cat, ferret, bird, etc)
- training the animal to be non-vicious.
- Mandatory training about fear and distress etc. in animals - too many vicious animals are simply fearful and incidents are related to this. All dog owners must keep their pets from interfering with other animals/people.
- That they be financially responsible for the veterinary bills of the dogs that their dog injures.
- EDUCATION. Owners of vicious animals need to have proper education on their responsibility as an owner, the impact on the community, and how to properly care for and train their animal.
- I think this rule is a bit too much if a dog simply "chases" another dog. How do you know the circumstances of the chasing? Many dogs want to play and are not aggressive.
- Owners of vicious animals should have signage around their private property to ensure passers know that the dog on premises is vicious (which may prevent further incidents with door-to-door salespeople, etc).
- Do not take them to the off leash park & maintain control of them while walking on sidewalks (even if it means crossing a road to avoid others).
- If dog attacks, bites or kills people or animals the dog must be immediately destroyed and the owner fined mandatory $250,000 with no option for a lesser fine. Zero tolerance if owners cannot secure and control vicious animals. Public should not be afraid to walk/play in communities.
- I dont think they should be allowed to own them. These dogs should be put down. This is a danger to children and vulnerable people who are exercising their right to mobility. In addition, negligence is always a possibility so these dogs should NOT be allowed to be kept on citizens property
- Should always be on leash, special registration with 5 million liability insurance
- Post a cash surety of at least $5,000 to be forfeited, together with the animal, if any further attack incidents are reported against people or other pets.
- Work with a behaviour trainer using postive methods to rehab. Do a full vet screening to make sure there is no underlying cause to the problem.
- None, laws are acceptable in my opinion.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- None
- The animal should be treated humanely, ie not trained to be vicious by maltreatment.
- public warnings, responsible owners..
- Positive reinforcement training resources should be available through the city for the public. Reactive animals are a safety concern for children & other animals. Mandatory harnesses & banning of prong & choke collars would reduce fear & bites.
- Take an approved behaviour course with a certified trainer.
- Held 200% accountable! For injury and welfare of their animals
- Restrictions on animal ownership. Participation in animal training classes
- I expect them to have a sign on their fence if the dog is placed outside. I expect them to give verbal warnings to those they walk by, or have the dog wear a vest issuing caution.
- Welfare of dog is balanced with restrictions of bylaw
Training/mitigation action
Obligation to disclose status upon change of ownership
- All pet owners with a vicious dog should be required to seek training from a qualified dog behaviourist. Dogs are not born vicious, usually it is a lack of socializing/training/boundaries which is a pet owner's responsibility.
- Proper training for the owners!!!!
- to follow above stated regulations. Avoid common populated areas if pet uncontrollable.
- Proof of insurance to cover any liability
- 1, Owners should put solid yellow bandanas around their pets necks, to make others aware to use caution. In my opinion it would help both sides stay safe.
2, Owners, should be professionally advised from a qualified dog trainer that specializes in aggression.
- All the above makes sense, I would also expect a professional to be brought in to help educate the owner on rehabbing and managing the dog.
- I don't think animals that have been deemed "vicious" should be given back to the owner. The potential for harm to innocent people is too great. They should be destroyed.
- welfare of dog is balanced with restrictions of bylaw
training/mitigation action
obligation to disclose status upon change of ownership
- That they actually follow these rules. I've seen too many dogs running loose in the green space (not a designated off leash area) behind our house. If owners choose not to follow the ruling then what can the public do?
- That they work on their animal's behaviour with a qualified expert and keep the public safe.
- Training to owners of vicious animals (at the cost of the owners).
- A dog that has attacked a person must be put down. Kill the dog. It is the only solution. Obviously the person who has a dog who attacks someone is not a worthy pet owner. The dog endangers children in the community and will attack again.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Mandatory behaving lessons for both owner and dog
- The owner should be required to take their dog to a professional dog trainer. There could also be an underlying ailment and could be ruled out by a vet. The dog should be altered as this could be the reason for it's aggressive behaviour.
- In addition to the above that the owners be fined and/or help to pay vet bills. Owners and their dog must attend mandatory training
- Muzzled when in public and outdoors. If bite level is over 3 on Dunbar's bite scale euthanasia be an option
- Euthanize them. There is no way to safely handle huge and vicious animals. Owners of these animals do not follow laws, and laws are not enforced. I have been in parks where pit bulls have been off leash and have come dangerously close to my child, the owners do this on purpose.
- Many dogs can quickly become vicious if you approach them or their owner or they approach you. Some just attack from distance. The owners ALWAYS dismisses this attack and tell you it is because you are a male or you're wearing a baseball cap etc, etc. Owners should admit the truth about their dogs
- Welfare & quality of life of the dog is balanced with restrictions from Bylaw.
Owner must provide proof of training from a CPDT certified trainer.
Obligation to disclose vicious animals status upon change of ownership.
- Dog (and owner) training with a view to socializing the dog, educating the owner, and perhaps giving the dog and owner a reprieve if a bye law officer is persuaded that they have both ""smartened up"". There are many businesses that deal with dog training around the city.
- Owner must receive training/counselling so they not only understand how to undo the damage they did to raise a vicious dog but won't do it again. I truly believe it's all down to whoever raised it whether they are vicious or not. Owners who weaponize a dog should be jailed.
- Owners should have to post a sign on their property indicating that a vicious dog lives there.
- Certain breeds should not be sold by pet stores in the first place
- They should kill the beast before it kills a kid or, when it comes to larger dogs, kills a person. I expect the City to protect me from vicious animals. They should not be allowed in the City under any circumstances.
- All vicious animals, declared such by the courts, should be uthanized. People over pets.
- Post a bond against attacks resulting in personal or property damage
- Generally, dogs are not vicious unless they are under stress or anxiety. Owener shall do their part to reduce the stress & anxiety and have behavior training. Also, wear comfortable muzzle when walking dogs.
- Owners must attend behavioural courses with the animal.
- Welfare of dog is balanced with restrictions of bylaw; training/mitigation action of vicious animal - mandatory aggressive dog consult with certified dog behaviourist, etc; obligation of owner to disclose vicious animal status upon change of ownership (ie: on surrender, on re-homing, etc)
- Animals categorized as vicious should be euthanized, not released back to owners. If released back to owners, they should not be allowed on public property.

- Perhaps a double gate to the yard, front and back, that is, four gates. To try to ensure the animal does not get out to roam in the alley or on the streets.
- These laws seem reasonable. The penalties for losing control of a vicious dog should be very stiff.
- Be restricted from places where people and animals congregate when with their animal.
- Are you joking???? I expect them, unless there is overwhelming reason (law enforcement, etc) not to have vicious dogs. It's a little late for regret after some notorious breed has ripped off a child's face, wouldn't you say?
- A fine needs to be paid, and then owner and house occupants should be required to attend obedience classes. If classes are not attended or lessons are failed, the dog may be seized. This also gives more opportunity to see the dogs character
- Notify all guests and neighbours. I don't think it's realistic or kind to require it to be muzzled AND on a leash on private property.
- These people must be in complete control of their animal at all times.

Expectations of City

- I think they do a good job at present, so keep up the good work but continued heavy fines for people who own vicious animals and bans on them owning more animals.
- To look outside of our local learning and culture worldwid to see how progressive countries cope. Abusive owners should be prosecuted, not the dog. You can muzzle but ultimately, a calm, great behaviour place can aid change for the dog who's often in fear.
- I feel the city does a good job in punishing owners of aggressive dogs.
- Respond to complaints quickly. Don't allow calgarians to own vicious breeds!
- Occasional follow-ups on these properties. Welfare checks on the animals and the surrounding neighbourhoods.
- Provide training classes and socialization
- severe fines for any violations of the bylaw.
- I expect bylaw to have training on what is and isn't a vicious animal. Very rarely do animals want to bite as it is biologically taxing. More often than not an aggressive display is utilized in an attempt to gain distance. It is only when that is not respected that bites occur. Education is key.
- if the owner has more then 2 pervious records of owning vicious dogs they should not be allowed dogs. dogs arent naturally aggressive its all in the household situations they are going threw that tend to turn the dog! #1 problem people are at home training there dogs in protection!
- Raise financial penalties for the owners and educate each owner in the city with a pamphlet of rules and guidelines, once they licence their pet. You would get a tag and an education sheet attached. Dogs are not the problem - owners are and their ignorance and denial.
- They get a shiny metal sign that says: vicious dog.
- If a dog is vicious or attacks it is 100% the responsibility of the owner NOT the dog. The dog can be muzzled, leashed, or TRAINED and the owner obviously failed to provide the care this dog requires. I would like to see the dogs not be blamed, and put down, for the irresponsibility of the owner.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- I think more attention needs to be spent on why the animals acted out and if it was because a person was teasing or abusing it they should not be considered for this list as it was the person's fault. The people need to be charged instead.
- Seize and euthanize a vicious animal if it attacks, injures, or kills a person or other pet (dog, cat, etc).
- The City should ban deadly animals like Pit Bulls. They're beautiful breeds but we can't trust humans to properly raise them. We need harsher penalties for delinquent owners.
- To hear both sides of the story.
- The city should enforce that owners and dogs are evaluated on why the dog is vicious, and provide training to both owners and dogs to mitigate further incidents. If the owner is found at fault for training the dog to be vicious, there should be a lifetime ban on owning any dogs.
- I wish there was a faster response time to aggressive animal complaints. There was a lady that walked her dog in front of our house off-leash and it would rush up to me and bark and growl, corner me on my deck and she would do nothing regardless of what I said to her. It took too long to catch her.
- Never ever seize and euthanize the animal. Declare them vicious as per the bylaw. If the animal attacks again, criminally charge the owner and introduce stiffer penalties.
- If the animal hurts or destroys people or other pets, it should be put down.
- I STRONGLY think the circumstances surrounding each "vicious dog" case should be looked at individually, and not have a blanket set of rules for every situation.
- A second offense should be cause for euthanasia.
- There is nothing more tragic to me than when an animal has to be euthanized, however, where a dog has shown that it is vicious and will attack other animals or humans, I see little other choice.
- Zero tolerance for re-offenders. Euthanize as necessary.
- City of Calgary needs to employ people that understand dog behaviour. I've had discussions with your officers and they know NOTHING in that regard. Dogs are most likely being labelled vicious when they are not.
- I expect higher fines that will actually have a financial impact and can act as a deterrent, and I expect those fines to be levied against offenders, not just finger-wag warnings.
- I think any dogs that are declared vicious should be put down. They have already been involved in an aggressive incident so why are you giving them another opportunity to be out in the public.
- There are too many uneducated owners out there. There should be 0 tolerance for vicious animals, and I've always thought owners should have to have some sort of free/cheap online course training before registering an animal to help prevent vicious dogs.
- These dogs should not be allowed to go to dog parks or off-leash areas.
- Perhaps mandatory training with a Balanced trainer NOT a force-free class.
- As part of the investigation, awareness of factors that contributed to aggression (e.g., someone had their dog off-leash in an area designated as on-leash, which resulted in a fight and the on-leash dog being labeled aggressive).

- City of Calgary must take complaints seriously and deal with vicious animals to ensure safety of people. Especially children. The city should keep CALGARY and safe from animals that threaten their safety.
- Perhaps a different metal dog tag could be issued to explicitly announce viciousness.
- I have reported vicious dogs in the past & after visiting the home nothing was done. I would like more investigation before an incident rather than after. I was told while the dogs lunged at the fence they were still in their yard & nothing could be done unless they broke the fence & attacked.
- None onus must fall on owners
- Ban pit bulls and other purposely-bred vicious dogs.
- Provide enforcement. Where are the bylaw officers when dogs are running offleash and attacking other dogs? More investigation into alleged incidents.
- Enforcement
- Have professional dog trainers assess ALL dogs who have reports filed against them.
- Three strikes rule: animal is no longer allowed to remain within city limits after a third attack. When on public property, the vicious animal needs to be visual identifiable from a safe distance as having been classified as vicious (for instance, issue bright red or orange tags for vicious animals)
- define classification of vicious animal
- I would appreciate vicious animals being banned.
- Do not go down the road of banning any particular breed. I've worked with all sorts of dogs all my life. Even little dogs can be vicious and most pits I've met are gentle and sweet.
- Follow up and ensure that enclosures are secure, and that owners have fulfilled mandatory training requirements.
- Should allow training and behaviour modification as a goal of the city instead of fines when dealing with this.
- I would consider it acceptable for animals to be seized and rehabilitated. If it is truly an animal issue, not one caused by the owner and the animal can't be rehabilitated, then the animal should be destroyed
- Get them out of the hands of irresponsible owners.
- I wish that it didn't take an attack to label a dog vicious. I've met aggressive dogs in the off-leash doggy park... ones that have jumped up on me, growling aggressively & nipping. There should be frequent assessments of dog behaviour/obedience & owner competence before they are allowed off-leash.
- Vicious animals should be euthanized.
- Put them down. Too many animals. Why keep ones who are causing harm and probably have bad owners who let them poop everywhere without cleaning it up or bark endlessly, and could possibly be being abused?
- Use policies to increase use of leashes in public spaces.
- The City to hold the animal away from the owner until the owner is educated on how to work with their animal and when the commit to animal behavior classes

- A dog (that unprovoked) harms, maims or kills another animal should at the very least be deemed vicious and have the above restrictions imposed (and enforced).
- For the safety of the community, the animals should be put down. It's a shame, because it's really about the owners. Owners should have a lifetime ban on pet ownership if this happens.
- None
- Any dog that causes injury to a human is put down. Owners should be barred from owning any more dogs. Zero tolerance.
- I feel the way they handle it now is adequate
- Fines to owners for non-compliance, potential seizure of the animal
- They need to be assessed..the people and their practices with animals assessed...expectations if they are rehabilitatable that they get help for the animal and if they won't that tells you of their character and it should be taken away. The person should be flagged and prevented from keeping animals
- The city shouldn't just specify dogs as vicious, other animals can cause damage as well
- I feel like mandatory training should be put in place.
- None
- ensuring the above is completed
- There is no place for vicious animals. They should be put down.
- I think there should be more wildlife cameras in the parks all over Calgary. Owners need to be fined if they are in a park they shouldn't be in. The City needs to take action. The response is always the 'education' of the owner. Make the fines steeper and actually fine people.
- Higher fines for infractions or incidents involving these animals. Bans on owning pets, etc.
- For vicious animals in public - would be nice if they could have some sort of identification so other pet owners could know of a vicious dog.
- first time offender(s) MUST be fined..there shouldn't be any rules stating it's a first time offense therefore we'll give you a break..the fines and/or confiscation should reflect the amount of times the dog has been a problem..again responsible owners are usually not the problem(s)..
- If they are big enough to seriously harm a child they should be put down.
- If a dog bites another animal or person they owner should be fined. Then maybe people with vicious dogs would take things more seriously. If they are repeat offenders, euthanasia.
- Dog and owner should be required to go for behavioural training and reviewed on a regular basis. Most aggressive behaviour in a dog is the owner's fault.
- Vicious animals, in a clear case of severe injury to a human or another animal, should be euthanized. Public safety is at risk when these animals remain alive. Again, vicious animals have a very low quality of life, and that is reason enough to euthanize.
- Euthanize at 2nd offence
- Not sure
- Vicious animals should only be allowed in specific locations, and have a warning leash/vest

- I believe that the owner should be punished in case of a serious attack - they should know how their animals will react in certain situations and avoid situations in which this would happen.
- Recognize that a vicious dog did not get that way on it's own. Training and socialization, or lack thereof, or intentionally aggressive training and socialization, play more part than size or breed in terms of behavior. Owners need mandated education and support when a dog is declared vicious.
- Not allowed at off leash areas
- Thorough Investigation. Some owners are reactive about a breed that is vocal but will not harm any person or animal.
- I believe that the City needs to assess each case on an individual basis. Any animal can turn vicious in certain circumstances. We need to stay away from blanket judgments on breeds.
- Ensuring that they are evaluated by an expert prior to the designation of vicious animal given.
- Remove vicious animals and destroy and ban the owners from owning another
- I am a professional dog trainer and This laws do not protect us or our dogs.It is always hard to train owners and cops on how to handle their animals.
- To put that vicious animal down and forbid the owner from ever owning another dangerous type dog (ie: pitbulls). It is better to prevent injuries/fear/death by having a ban instead of that one event that destroys or impacts one's life forever.
- Capture & disposal.
- To do their best not to euthanize. Generally this is a product of ownership. Taking an animal away from irresponsible or unfit owners often makes all the difference
- Heavy and increasing fines for incidents. Enough at a minimum to recoup city costs in dealing with the incidents
- It depends on what has happened, what the dog has done. A dog that has got loose and attacked a second time needs to be put down.
- It is not the dog, it is the owner. If an owner raises a viscous animal they should have the right to own animals taken away
- Enforcing the above.
- Make sure the animal is thoroughly tested before being labeled as vicious. Some dog haters or dog-aphobics think a dog barking at them is vicious behavior. Not usually the case - dogs can sense when people are scared
- I think there needs to be more investigation into what prompted the animal to be vicious. There are more and more instances where people/kids are tormenting animals through fences. I had kids in my back alley throwing rocks and yelling at my dogs wile they were in the yard.
- Dogs can be unpredictable but owners must ensure the dog is under control at all times. Although situations do happen. Enforcement. Investigation and follow up including seizing the dog are necessary steps. However give owners a chance to do right so the dog doesn't suffer.
- One bite/ attack is all you get. The animal gets put down after that.
- That the city destroys any vicious animal that is not on the owners property. The city must license owners to keep vicious animas

- To FINE and hold ACCOUNTABILITY to the irresponsible owners of these animals. To NOT allow these animal owners from EVER owning again or they have to enroll in programs through CofC about responsibility of owners and what it means to be a responsible pet owner
- Ensuring the owner is accurately capable of handling a vicious dog.
- Enforce the bylaws. Higher fines for repeat offenders.
- I don't think the city should euthanize them.
- To ensure they do not endanger the public, and that they are properly cared for.
- The city should be able to seize and evaluate viscous animals without court intervention, and the courts should be required at least after an appeal, and appeals only allowed under reasonable circumstances. As a dog owner and lover, public safety still comes first — this is an owner problem.
- That the City hold owners accountable w/ mandatory court appearances & fines that will hit them where it counts.
- People who own vicious dogs should be evaluated to determine why their dog is vicious and educated to ensure they provide adequate care and training for all pets in their care. Dogs aren't born vicious and not every person is suitable to be a pet owner.
- None.
- The owners of vicious dogs are ultimately responsible for their dogs, and should be held criminally liable by way of fines and criminal charges if their animal inflicts injury to people or other animals like people's pets. The City of Calgary can raise the fines even more for vicious dog attacks.
- I believe the City should take the dogs away from the owner and fine the owner nor allow the owner ever owning animals again.
- Immediate removal from home and put down
- I expect them to ensure those dogs are not allowed in public, to enforce the rules and require owners to get help for their dogs.
- Any dog which is a repeat offender is put down or removed from city. No toleranc3 for vicious dog or potentially vicious dog breeds
- Review by case individually. Don't stereotype breeds. End of the day owners should be held accountable vs the animal.
- If a viscous dog is from a pure breed that had these traits the breeder should be held accountable also.
- I'm concerned that it takes too long to be deemed vicious. One unprovoked nite and it should be evaluated at owners cost.
- Muzzling should be enforced once a pet owner has more than one charge. I have first hand experience with this and I'm not happy with current regulations. There's a vicious dog in my neighborhood that has attacked my dog twice. I do not feel safe for myself or my dog.
- Timely response and detailed follow up.
- One strike rule, higher licence cost
- Proper assessment done by someone not in the city's back pocket.
- None.

- Public should be notified
- I think the city should enforce the laws and do their due diligence in conducting investigations.
- should be higher fines, training and or putting them down (death), dogs/ owners should be dealt with depending on the severity /problem.
- Remove them from the owner and humanly put them down if cannot be rehabilitated and rehomed.
- Vicious animals should not be allowed in the city, and if there is one who is accused of biting another person or another animal, it should be put down. No questions asked!
- Repeat offenders should be euthanized.
- ask animal owner to remove dog from environment, if there are multiple complaints - talk to owner(s) and advise behavioral training of animal before a fine is given. If refuse training, give a fine. Follow up in couple weeks time.
- If they bite a person ...the owner and dog should go to mandatory training to see both of them can be retrained
- Be registered, regulated with spot checks on animal.
- Quit focusing on breed bans - they don't work!
- Must be registered. Rescue groups must register vicious animals before allowing to be adopted.
- I think deeming an animal as vicious is done too easily. Dogs can have mental problems like anxiety that cause them to lash out. They could be ok and then see somebodys shoes that remind them of the guy that used to beat them every day. I think the city needs to do more thorough evaluations.
- They should not be allowed in off leach areas. They should be put down. Too often they are just locked up and beaten by poor owners, making them more vicious and suffering further neglect.
- IF THERE IS INJURY TO A HUMAN OR ANIMAL THE VICIOUS ANIMAL OWNER SHOULD BE LEVIED A HEAVY FINE AND RECIEVE JAIL TIME FOR ASSAULT PLUS PAY FOR ANY AND ALL MEDICAL EXPENSES AND ANY AND ALL VET FEES. THE VICIOUS ANIMAL SHOULD ALSO BE PUT DOWN.
- ALL costs and expenses associated with a call, vet, police, rescue staff etc. Should be charged back to the owner! I can't afford to have a pet why should I / tax payer be required to foot the bill for a pet owner??!
- No second chances! The animal should be put down. The owner should have to compensate the victim/family (trip for shots, worry about rabies/other disease), missed work, etc). Owners should be banned from having another pet for a year. If they ever have a second incident, ban them for life
- To never attempt breed specific legislation.
- None.
- Don't allow them, once identified and confirmed. Make owners responsible for any costs incurred as a result of injury to people and pets.
- None

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- I'm a bit concerned with the process of seizing an animal and having it assessed. That sounds like a very stressful situation for the animal and would likely cause aggression in any dog. Maybe it's the case already but having the guardian there might allow for a more reliable assessment.
- No breed-specific bans. Perhaps the City could check up on the "vicious" dogs and make sure the owners are following the rules.
- I believe our City has very well structured vicious animal by laws and that these situations are currently being addressed adequately. I do believe that training of a dog deemed as vicious should be mandatory.
- Restrain, capture and impose fines or put the animal down if found vicious and attacking other animals or humans
- Heavier fines for irresponsible owners who allow pets to run wild.
- None.
- The owners should be held responsible and accountable. The animal should be removed and evaluated as to whether it can be retrained but should never be returned to the original owner.
- Aggressive animals should be banned from off-leash areas and should be enforced. Too many attacks happen due to owners not abiding by that rule.
- Sporadic checks to ensure owner is following specific rules given to them. Ensure compliance
- Should have to attend rigorous training and get a certificate that the dog can be obedient. It's one thing to muzzle but control is primary.
- I think that Calgary Animal Services does an excellent job most of the time. Bill Bruce worked hard to put in a livable service for pet owners and non pet owners in Calgary. Since his retirement, the Service has continued to be professional and offer good value for dollar. Well done!
- The strictest policy possible
- yards should be inspected yearly and city licenses should be increased to accommodate the inspections. If the dogs pass training and become more docile, fees could be reduced. Just as if you get your pet spayed or neutered
- City should have ability to ban the owner from further dog ownership should their dog need to be euthanized for an attack
- The rules need to apply to small dogs, as well as larger breeds.
- That they be rehabilitated if possible or that they are put down.
- Better way for those attacked or have an incident to report. When an owner chooses to leave there's isn't much one can do. Too many off leash pets not under control. Be more present and fine
- Mandatory training classes.
No off leash.
- The city should have power to deal with the animal and owner.
- Follow up with resources to owners such as recommendation of behaviour vets or trainers. Property inspections for compliance.
- 1) Set up cameras at the entrances - free run areas
2) a "patrol" drop in to show police presence.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

3) Have large signs at Every entrance with: Absolutely NO Vicious dogs allowed, Dogs that have attacked people or dogs in the past also not allowed! Dogs must be under control and must recall!

- Respond promptly to complaints, monitor ongoing situations.
- Fines and stronger expectations of training for owners.
- They City should off public education, via their website, and encourage those who have had dealings with dog aggression to report the incidents to the City.
- Aggressive breeds should not be allowed
- Paying more attention to small dogs that should be labeled as vicious, but aren't because of their size. They are often "allowed" to be aggressive because they are small
- Any city fines collected from owners within incidents should go directly to the victims of any damage, and fines should be equivalent to the cost of damages caused by the animal.
- Dont be so quick to judge. Work more with the owners prior to making a decision.
- Zero tolerance. Period. These are essentially weaponized animals.
- Take them away
- A very thorough investigation is expected. Dogs have been deemed as vicious when it wasn't the dog but the human who was in the wrong. Dogs are not bad humans are bad
- Educate the owner on good pet care
- I think you also have to look at the larger picture. A lot of people with reactive dogs handle them extremely well. It's others with extendable leashes, aggressive smaller dogs, dogs off leash in leash areas, etc that are the problem.
- None
- If they kill or maim they should be put down immediately
- Dive into the cause of the incident. Some dogs are protecting their owners/property and people file false claims
- warnings and fines.
- Ensure behavioral conditions surrounding the incident (most dogs are fearful rather than vicious). Look more closely at the owners. With proper training, "vicious" dog breeds are not all vicious! Do NOT do breed discrimination!!!!
- 1 warning then the animal should be seized and put down. The city should ban dogs on Stephen ave. It seems the type of people that thinks it's a good dog walking area all seem to pitbull owners.
- More case studies and legal outcomes of certain vicious dog cases (rightly and wrongly accused cases would help I think)
- I think the rules are clear.
- I wish that pit bulls needed to be muzzled and leashed while in public.
- Ban the owner from having animals and enforce it. If owner is found with animal, escalating fines are incurred.
- Policing, welfare checks (often vicious animals are products of a bad situation - not always the animals fault but rather how they are treated that causes aggression).
- Ban vicious breeds entirely!

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- A report of a vicious animals needs to fully investigated before considering putting the animal down. Circumstances need to be taken into account and animals should be tested by an animal behaviour specialist.
- Certain breeds of dogs have been created for the aggressivity and combat capabilities, eg. pitbulls, mastiffs. These dogs should not be allowed in public spaces without be muzzled. This to be done without waiting for a serious attack before starting a judicial process of declaring the dog vicious.
- Would love to see more bylaw officers at the dog parks.
- When a complaint is made, it shouldn't be a Ridiculous process. It should be an immediate bylaw presence to deal with the situation. Their should be a bylaw for dogs on property that are aggressive towards neighbours, not just on public property.
- Realistic temperment assessments by qualified animal behaviorists on the risk to the public are absolutely necessary.
- Behavior assessment than put animal down
- Investigate the circumstances that caused the animal to be vicious in the first place
- follow up, education, support
- Mandatory training for dog owners in an attempt to make the dog less vicious.
- There should be higher fines if a dog hurts another dog or person
- Remove from owner if they are unwilling or unable to deal with them. Rehab where possible. Sometimes, a dog does have a bad day/is provokes/[removed] happens - do have compassion in such cases.
A dog that bites a trespasser - even with a history of bad behavior - should get a free pass, no exceptions.
- Enforcing training.
- If a vicious dog has committed a serious attack against a human it should be destroyed. These dogs pose a serious risk to other, especially young children where an attack could be fatal.
- Education on vicious dogs - help owners and provide resources so they can try to help their pet. If not able to be helped, information should be provide on behaviour euthanasia. Sometimes that is what is best for the community to keep everyone safe. Discourage "no kill" shelters and rehoming meandog
- Owners need to take full responsibility. If they won't then heavy fines or even jail
- Animals should be seized and rehabilitated and/or adopted. Or worse case put to sleep
- Maybe look into the owner...a vicious dog will most likely have a bad owner. Maybe they would do well with mandatory classes of some kind.
- FOLLOWTHROUGH. Have direct consequences if something has happened that was TRULY unprovoked - then have clear, concise action. If a person is bitten BUT was actually the instigator—leave the animal alone. In all things there must be a 'but for' clause (but for the person instigating...)
- Change the bylaw to have these animals put down. They have already proven themselves dangerous,, and their are no safeguards that it won't happen again.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- Make sure we have trainers in the city who know how to handle vicious dogs of all kinds.
- 3 strikes is unacceptable. It's unsafe. It is terrifying to be living next to an animal that you know has been vicious and with an irresponsible owner and yet you are helpless until an attack happen not one more time but twice. I have been the second attack.
- Calgary's vicious animal bylaw has worked well. Owner & animal get one chance. 2nd infraction, animal must be euthanized & owner not permitted to own another vicious animal. Coyotes - cannot be permitted to terrorize people. Relocate, haze, worst case, euthanize if no other option can be found.
- None. The city should stay out of it, it's not their job to babysit dogs or dog owners.
- Do not kill these animals instead invest in rehabilitation and training programs for these vicious dogs Often dogs are vicious due to poor training and can be trained properly
- If the animal commits one offence the animal needs to be put down
- Repeat offenders should loose the right to have a dog. Have been dealing with the same people with different vicious dogs for years.
- Animals deemed vicious should be put down. Provide the owner with an assessment of what may have contributed to the vicious dog so the experience can be learned from. Tweak animal by laws as necessary based on learnings (poor breeding, under socialized)
- If more than 2 incidents there are no exceptions euthanasia is required
- owners have to take classes to help them deal with their pets aggression issues or surrender them
- Immediate eradication.
- They should ensure that it was the animal's fault and that it was not provoked. They should pay a higher license fee if their animal has been declared vicious.
- Catch and destroy them if on public property and, if they have attacked someone, destroy them and jail the owner or heavy fines at the very least. By heavy, I mean $5,000 or more.
- They should be removed from the home and if nothing can be done to rehabilitate them, then unfortunately they should be put down. The public safety should trump everything.
- Control of constant barking.
- I am against any new bylaws that would categorize specific breeds as dangerous or vicious
- That all involved with animals have the proper training to assess animals correctly and determine if was human inappropriateness and not the animal.
- I think the city should bring in a certified veterinary behaviourist. Most vicious dogs are fear driven. With the right education for the owner and behaviour adjustment and often medication for the dog we can mitigate issues.
- Perhaps having a professional evaluate the owners would be good. This way you would know whether the owner is willing to do what needs to be done to ensure others safety
- Never look at breed specific policies or bans as those are based on bias and are unfair.
- Be more viable. And give fines.
- None
- Give your bylaw officers more power and increase consequences for irresponsible pet owners

- Ensure training at adequate facilities is repeated once a year. Reactive dogs need socialization in a controlled setting, instead of isolation. Create events where reactive dogs can have opportunities to socialize. Muzzles are good ideas to prevent fights from breaking out.
- Take into consideration the circumstances for the reason the dog acted viciously. If it's a small dog being the aggressor, and then the big dog responds, consideration into how the other party acted is a must.
Listen to, and act accordingly when small dogs act viciously. It's not just the big dogs.
- one bite and the dog should be put down
- Stricter regulations.
- Option to avoid Euthanizing, steep fines against the humans and restrictions on future ownership of animals. I think humans who engage in canine fighting or abuse their animals to create aggressive behavior should do jail time and face very severe sanctions and monetary damages to victims and public
- Animals are not property that should be discarded if a problem. We are responsible for their lives and must make every attempt to rehabilitate the. Deal more harshly with owners and breeders that disregard training.
- I think they should be removed from the residence and rehabilitated if possible.
- I do not want to see the City apply some kind of breed specific legislation. It is discriminatory and does not look at dogs as individuals.
- Ban them.
- That veterinarians make the decision based on the facts of the situation and the dogs's temperament, it shouldn't be left up to lay people's uneducated opinions or emotional reactions. Dog do chase, bite and sometimes destroy things - it doesn't make them vicious or a danger to the public at large.
- Fine owners who do not follow regulations
- Impound and destroy if any issue.
- Really bad cases should have the animals seized.
- I don't really know what to say, since Bylaw already seems too busy to deal with the files they have now... I guess just to do their best to ensure vicious animal calls are dealt with in a timely manner and that complainants know what they need to do on their end for documentation, etc.
- Education to everyone. Signage at dog parks. I am not sure if the color coded bandana is still a thing but my idea would be to issues the color coded bandanas if requested for free when licensing dogs.
- If the dog is declared vicious, there should be a limit on the # of dogs that owner can have.
- Rescue, train, and re-home.
- Simply put rules and bylaws need to be enforced otherwise they are useless
- I would like the City to check in on the care of vicious animals, as they rarely exist in a vacuum. I feel that owners of vicious dogs should be subject to regular check-ins to see how progress is coming with their dog.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Make owners more accountable to their dogs behaviours. Implement a colour coding for leashes that can tell other owners whether it's okay to approach, be cautious or avoid. Everyone should be held responsible in an attack or fight. Not always the big dog
- None other, I feel this is already very well handled by the city due to the very low number of incidents.
- If ownership is not found, animal should be destroyed.
- Rather than just putting them down, the dog should go through a rigorous training program to see what the issues it has. And only then decide if it's something that cannot be fixed have the euthanization as the last resort.
- If the animal is declared vicious -- put it down.
- None really - the specific rules cover it. Ultimately the person controlling the animal should be able to control the animal.
- Mandatory reporting of incidents in off leash parks, ban from being in offleash parks even if leashed.
- To insist that owners receive positive reinforcement education
- I expect the City of Calgary to apply unbiased treatment to all "vicious" animals, regardless of breed or size. I also expect the City of Calgary to prioritize the animal when addressing concerns, and to understand that all behaviour is product of the owner.
- Support for the victims of vicious animals.
- By laws should be in place to prevent the teasing of dogs. I have had several cases where children and teenagers have poked sticks through my fence to tease my dog. This will result in the dog being vicious and is the fault of others.
- First of all change your definition. Chasing? That's a bit far fetched considering chasing is a part of the play sequence of canids and not always with malicious intent. Education on proper socialization and it's importance. More supervision in off leash parks.
- Enforcement and follow-up to be sure that owners comply with the rules when their dog's status is changed. It shouldn't be up to neighbours to badger the City and report on issues - if the neighbour is even aware of the ruling.
- DO NOT discriminate against "bullied breed" dogs just because of their size or public opinion. Every dog is its own creature just like humans. I've been bit by many chihuahuas.
- I expect more bylaw enforcement and presence, especially at dog parks and public parks, to ensure that the owners are following the bylaws in regards to vicious animals.
- Regular evaluations / home visits to assess that the above expectations are being followed.
- That animals the city deem vicious are required to be spayed and neutered to ensure they are not being bred.
- I think reports of vicious dogs should be taken more seriously, heavier fines for owners, and further responsibility for the future of vicious dogs.
- I believe the city should be making routine inspections of any home where a vicious animal is residing to make sure the animal is being properly cared for. I also think there should be a restriction about vicious animals not being permitted near schools/playgrounds/etc. even while muzzled

- Be more strict and don't issue warnings. Have a quicker response time than 3 weeks.
- Dogs should not be permitted to be tethered outdoors or indoors no matter what.
- None
- not to allow them in the city.
- Provide more support to owners to address why their animal is vicious. Require course on basic species energy, nutritional, behavioural, socialization needs as part of licensing for pets in this city will be a preventative measure.
- Euthanize vicious animals or in some instances assess a dog and if it can be trained to stop vicious behaviour, require that of the owner and follow up multiple times to make sure that occurred. Do not ban any breeds.
- If the animal is proven vicious and the owner failing to provide professional training/socialization, or the breeder failing to ensure positive temperament of animals prior to breeding, the animal must be humanely euthanized the and owner/breeder banned for life from having/breeding animals.
- to be constant with education and dealing with incidents.
- Investigate the possibility that the pet was raised to be vicious. If so, removal and rehoming of the dog as well as the owner not being allowed to have pets.
- If they mutilate someone, they should be put down
- why should I bother? animal & bylaw will declare any dog as vicious that was in any attack. They'd rather avoid any chance of litigation than taking a real look at what the issue might be.
- Have a way to report incidences with dog aggression/biting of dogs not yet deemed vicious. I have heard of instances where an attack has occurred and the owner just leaves, and a victim has no recourse if they don't know who the owner is.
- That they are monitored and provided with resources to prevent future incidents.
- To assist owners in becoming educated on canine behaviour and body language and/or professional training.
- Be fair in their decisions. Uphold the law to ensure the safety of the public
- Heavily fine the owners of these dogs if they attack. If they choose to own a viscous dog they should also be prepared to pay the price! They should pay way more to license a viscous dog!!
- More monitoring of the off leash parks. Ability for dog owners to submit proof of attack to by-law and taken seriously. Educate dogs owners of what information they need to make a report to by-law
- more action if a complaint has been filed a fine maybe
- Should not be allowed on public property. Get rid of the risk of dealing with a situation.
- Uphold punishment, if there are fines then ensuring the individual who is responsible will pay and have a record of their actions to avoid future incidents.
- None
- I expect The City of Calgary to enforce and provide a mandatory rehabilitation program. This program should take 1-2 weeks and and train the pet to be less of a threat to other dogs and people. The goal is to get the animal to a point where the courts can decide to remove the title of 'vicious pet'.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- The owners should have to adequately demonstrate they have full control of the animal.
- Active monitoring of the owner to ensure compliance. A ban on keeping pets (by the household not the person) if the dog has more than 2 incidences. If the dog is people aggressive and truly cannot be re-trained and re-homed to a responsible owner, humane euthanasia.
- Please do not band certain breeds, but instead work to educate owners
- Most of the time the problem is with the owner not the dog, if they have multiple offences then the dog should be taken away and if the animals behavior can be correct they should be given that option and be rehomed. A dog that can be helped should not be put down for an issue cause by the owner
- To not be stupid also or try to make money.
- to make them top priority to be picked up if they ever get loose
- Take a harder line.
- The possibility of having the title removed if proof of training and improvement in behaviour can be demonstrated. Policies enforced by people with knowledge of dog behaviour. Everybody in the “attack” held accountable for actions. Many members of the public approach dogs in inappropriate ways
- There should be a mandatory animal behaviour/body language course that needs to be taken before you can own an animal. There should be public education on how to prevent dog bites what to do if you see a strange dog etc. Children under 12 should not be allowed in off leash parks
- unsafe dog-parks need to be regulated and monitored
- Usually it is the fault of the owner and NOT the animal. The owner is responsible for the actions of the animal. Fines should be higher depending on the degree of the attack ie: blood drawn, killing of another animal
- That the city looks at the entire situation surrounding the event. All dogs have the potential to bite, it doesn't mean they are all aggressive or vicious. The city can't violate rights and have bylaw enter any property without a warrant.
- Dont. Euthanize all the time .
- by-laws state it well - but need to be reinforced
- I think the person should have an opportunity to seek training and undergo testing to potentially have the vicious dog status removed when possible.
- The fines should be high and the dog removed if the fine and training are not completed In specified time. If people can't afford to look after a dog and be responsible the dog should be removed and rehomed
- An effort should be made to re-socialize the animal. If they don't change, euthanize.
- Current bylaws do not account for provocation which provides an incomplete picture. Bylaw employees should be educated in behaviour, handling and training. Decipher between citizens who are simply uneducated vs chronically irresponsible.
- Removal of animal from home if second attack or incident.

- That they put the best interest of the dog and the children in the community first. The desires of the owners, while important, should not supersede what is best for the community and the animal.
- Keep track of cases, but also communicate with owners and work toward solutions. I think incidents don't get reported because people (both owners and victims) are afraid that the animal will be destroyed, and are reluctant to see that happen with non-major incidents.
- I would actually like to see the animal put down, but sadly, I don't think the city will do that.
- Same as above
- One strike, your out. Vicious animals should be euthanized.
- All should be licensed, and after any incidents the license fee goes way up. This will offset some of the costs for an annual inspections, that should be done to insure the property is suitable for a dangerous animal. Dangerous designation only gets 2 strikes then animal must be surrendered.
- Please make the process for anyone victimized by an aggressive or vicious animal easier for the victim. My personal experience was that it was long and drawn out. I was threatened by the owner when I took my complaint to the city.
- City needs better enforcement, limit to one warning only.
- If the City licenses a Pit Bull and it attacks someone and the owner doesn't have insurance, then maybe the City should be liable for licensing them? A Ban would be easier and us not be frightened and have to carry around dog spray! I have witnessed 3 absolute nightmare unprovoked pit bull attacks.
- Owner needs to be fined for attacks to people/other dogs etc. Should have a record attached to owner to determine responsibility of owner and identify repeat offences by either owner or animal
- If they are a hazard they should be banned
- Respond to complaints of vicious animals and require the owner to provide PROOF that they have corrected the issue within a specific time period or remove the animal from them.
- While some dog bites may be expected, the city needs to do more, impose harsher penalties to owners of dogs with serious aggression problems
- Should the animal attack a child or severely harm another pet, the animal needs to be put down.
- Two strikes, and the dog must be put down, owner prohibited from owning further pets.
- Responsible action when the animal and owner has offended.
- Force owners to post a sign on the outside of a premises approved by the city.
- I would like to see the city give warnings in mild cases, but also be able to give training orders as described above. The city should work with the Humane Society to rehabilitate and rehome aggressive dogs if the owner does not comply and show success.
- I am mainly concerned about dogs accused of being vicious when the complainant does not understand dog behaviour. eg. a dog jumping up on a stranger is not necessarily vicious. If a dog behaves in a vicious way, the situation must be assessed fairly. eg. Did an unsupervised child provoke a bite?
- Enforcement

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- If they are vicious they may need to be put down if biting people or killing pets. Is the animal vicious from being treated in an inhumane way? Is rehabilitation possible?
- Mandatory fines for any transgressions
- To ensure that no child is allowed to be in a household with a vicious animal.
- Fine repeat offender owners. Rehome animals of repeat offenders, and ban them from owning animals.
- Mind their own business.
- Continue with current legislation
- Owner training
  - Limit licensing of other animals in the same household. ie, can't get another dog until this one is rehabilitated.
- The rules above are good.
- Rehabilitation first. Avoiding the death of the animal as much as possible.
- Vicious animals should be euthanized.
- For the most part, I think the City handles this appropriately. Some consideration of circumstances needs to be taken when declaring a dog vicious. All dogs will bite given the right circumstances.
- The above listed rules and procedures seem acceptable
- To screen each case and decide if certain person can or can not have such a dog.
- Vicious should not be breed specific, but determined on a case by case basis. Then the above restrictions can be implemented and ENFORCED.
- Proper consequences for violations.
- An element of grace and understanding, knowing that vicious animals are largely the result of human interference, poor socialization, mistreatment, abuse etc.
- I 100% do not believe in euthanizing an animal for being vicious. However, if the pet owner can not control their pet, they should be either required to do more pet training with professionals or hand their pet over to someone who can care for it properly.
- I like that our city emphasizes responsible pet ownership. But I don't see it being enforced and the focus here specific to aggressive dogs instead of basic responsible ownership is disappointing.
- To ensure the animal gets proper care for rehabilitation versus putting them down.
- People should not be simply able to own a vicious dog and take no further responsibility for training it. If they are allowed to keep it, they be mandated to take it and themselves to specialized training.
- Assessment of the owner's household and lifestyle to deem whether the home is fit to care for the animal as many aggressive behaviours from dogs are a product of the environment the dog is subject to. The city should take greater measures to ensure that animals are in the proper homes.
- If dog attacks someone - euthanize. Assess dog to dog.
- If a dog guardian demonstrates they cannot be responsible for a vicious animal, they should not be allowed to keep the animal. The City should err on the side of caution, have large fines for non-compliance, consider euthanasia in extreme cases.

- Make it law that the owners should be required to attend classes with the animal as it is rarely the animal that is innately vicious. Investigation into the owners treatment of the animal as it can be the case they have been mistreated and this is why they are aggressive.
- That you actually respond.
- After first offence, require the owner (s) and pet to go through training. Must pass to be allowed to keep the animal. Strong fines if break rules. Second offence, either turn animal over to rehabilitation organization willing to take them on, or euthanize.
- These dogs should not be allowed out in the public if they're not put down.
- Nothing. Legal system should punish owners if they do not properly follow the vicious animal rules, but that is not the City's jurisdiction.
- they must be sterilized at owner expense if not already.
- Define more clearly what constitutes a vicious animal. This evaluation should be done by an experienced veterinary behaviourist or animal trainer, not animal control/CHS. Dog's history and context of said attack must be taken into account (ie provocation or lack of control/knowledge of the owner).
- No breed specific legislation. More prevention and consequences for owners
- A proper assessment. There are various circumstances a dog could be seen as vicious (e.g. you pull a dogs tail it might bite vs a dog getting out of the yard and going on a biting spree)
- those animals that have viciously attacked other animals or people should not be allowed in public areas/streets.
- City should require that vicious dogs be clearly labeled when outside
- I commend the City's excellent programs to work with pet owners to train/rehab their animals to prevent further incidents.
- If there is an incident that isn't considered serious, I still expect the city to follow up on that since I believe a serious incident only occurs after many less serious ones.
I don't support breed specific legislation
- Again, just enforcing the rules consistently.
- Can't think of anything, when I hear about a vicious dog attack the City of Calgary bylaw response seems adequate.
- That the public be educated on how to approach and act around dogs. A lot of bites are triggered because the victim has no idea how to act around an animal.
- The city should euthanize animals that have already been deemed vicious. Dogs that have attacked before will also attack again.
- All of the existing rules seem good. I expect the city not to discriminate based on breed.
- Both people and other pets need to be safe and protected from vicious animals
- Immediate removal of these animals if the proper care and safety is not provided.
- Dealt with quickly for safety of people and animals in the neighborhood.
- Warning Signs must be posted at all entry points to property (gates, doors etc). If not, animal will be apprehended

- None.
- Should be taken from owners. If they had dealt with aggression before, it might not have crossed over to vicious.
- I expect a vicious animal to be destroyed or moved to a rural area
- Deal with them in an effective way to ensure safety of people
- Nothing further.
- Nothing at this time.
- What is 'deemed a vicious animal?' If it is based on breed, could we not ensure the folks that get that type of breed, also get some sort of additional mandatory training for that?
- Would like to see a defined process in order to declare a dog vicious, and also a way to lift the label again and "redeem" the dog. Am absolutely against breed specific legislation, since it has proven to not work anywhere it was implemented, while taking up resources and punishing the wrong people.
- Have educated and experience personnel to run the temperament testing. Being aggressive is not the same as reactive.
- If there are children living in a house that has a dog that has been deemed vicious, that dog should be removed.
- None
- City to license and monitor. If repeat offences, then owner fined and dog put down if cant be controlled by owner.
- The City of Calgary should ban breeds that have a history of vicious behaviour- ie. pit bulls.
- Would like clear guidelines what defines a vicious dog, e.g. by behavioral assessment by a specialised veterinarian. Would also like to see a way to "redeem" a dog. I am absolutely not in favor of breed specific legislation, since it is superficial and has shown not to work in any other jurisdiction
- the owners should received really hefty fines and the dogs destroyed.
- Awareness of animals that have been deemed vicious, enforce rules in place to protect people from the pet, and also to ensure that that pet - vicious or not - is being cared for properly and treated humanely in spite of their reactivity.
- I don't believe vicious animals should be allowed in the city. Even with the rules noted above, the reality is there are breaches and these dogs are extremely dangerous to the public. There is no good reason to have such an animal as a pet in the city, too many risks for the owners and citizens.
- Give the animals a chance to calm down and get used to their surroundings, and make sure that people who are dealing with them are professional and have LOTS OF EXPEINCES as newbie people can cause more harm than good to these guys. As well to understand the are not vicious by choice, but trauma etc
- Making behaviour training mandatory. And judgment should NOT be based on breed.
- I think the current process is great, but I think it is unfortunate that training programs, especially for reactive or 'vicious' animals are so expensive. I think it would be worth it for the city to make a training program mandatory and provide aid to those who might not be able to afford this.

- regulate the space they are allowed to minimize and isolate any accidents or tragic encounters with any un-experienced individual
- Unless it can be proven that the dog was protecting itself or its family, the dog's owner should be charged and held liable for any damage.
- Remember that it's not the animals fault
- If a vicious animal does not imply with the bylaws then it should be removed from the owner. That owner cannot have that breed of dog again.
- Way, way more enforcement. Shouldn't take serious injury to bring out a bylaw officer.
- Education on breeds, ability to refer owners to resources to assist in behaviours, analyze home environment to see if behaviour is resulting for bigger issues at home.
- More onus on the owners. Most of the time the fault of a vicious dog is the owner and not the dog. Remove the dog if appropriate, and flag the owner. Repeat incidents should result in a ban of owning a dog
- Make every effort to rehab the dog and get it in a home with someone who is competent at training and handling reactive dogs.
- I expect that any animal that has proven to be vicious by an unprovoked attack on another animal or a person is no longer allowed within city limits. There must be zero tolerance, heavy fines, and possible jail time for the owners.
- Repeat offenders may have to be euthanized. If that happens, owners should be banned from owning dogs for two years.
- Enforce the current bylaws and any animal that does harm to others, either human or animal is immediately put down..... no exceptions.
- To ensure the animals are kept under control, I'd not they must be euthanized.
- How do the courts determine that an animal is vicious? I hope that the circumstances of the event are considered and that the animal is evaluated by at least two trained behaviorists.
- I think each case needs to be handled on it's own scenario of what happened. Education that vicious animals are not all "pitbull types". People seem to think that a chihuahua that bites is "okay" because they are small.
- None
- Repeat offending dogs should be put down when owners let them off leash to attack and bite children.
- None
- Don't immediately euthanize the dog. That's not a fair option. Like I said, a lot of the time it come down to training. Give the dog and owner a chance by makin them take training courses.
- none
- Deal with cases individually and understand aggression in dogs can be caused by a variety of factors and does not necessarily mean the dog always behaves in such a manner.
- I'm happy with the current rules

- That any dog bred or trained to be biscuits by its owner will result in a very high fine and the animal surrendered and the person not allowed to Keep them
- Huge fines that get passed to victim. Animal must be killed.
- Education programs to enhance owner training and perhaps dog training consultant programs. It's NEVER the dog, but how it has been trained or taken care of. Most good trainers say almost all dogs are redeemable. Some may have to be given to more responsible caretakers if needed with more experience
- How has the owner trained it
Why is it viscous
- Compassion and assistance with corrective behaviour. Absolutely never kill the dog. Never.
- Most incidents wouldn't happen if these pets were on a leash. Most cases I have heard on the news have been pets off leash in leashed areas including roaming freely in a front yard. People simply don't follow onleash rules in this city, it needs to be enforced, signed and part of this REVIEW
- The animal and owner must take a reactive behaviour class before allowed out of there yard.
- Setting a definition that doesn't classify my dog as vicious by the simple fact he's a large breed and people freak out when he breaths.
- Ensure the public safety. Fines for people who ignored bylaws. If damage is it her that pets owner should be responsible for all the damages.
- Letting the neighborhood know so parents can talk to their children about the house/dog and why to be aware of that danger
- Vicious animals not being declared due to their bred. People can control, and train, their animals to NOT be vicious.
- Make sure the animal that is deemed vicious is a actually in fact a vicious animal and it was not just an unfortunate isolated incident. Most likely impossible but possibly have a system to keep track of animals deemed vicious and make sure the owners are following all rules.
- They should be taken away from the owners as they certainly do not know how to train or keep a dog.
- Tracking them and educating the humans..making sure they make the best decisions for the public.
- More investigation into the home life of the animal. Higher fines and penalties to the owner, especially if there has been more than one incident. Any owner that has an aggressive animal should have to have training and repeat problems should cause the loss of the animal and banned from ownership.
- Be fair. Listen and see between the lines. What is this dogs past, is there any hope for this dog, what is the real story here and possibly have the people caused this dog to react that way through improper training methods.
- Don't be breed-specific, judge on case by case and hold humans accountable if their pet is not treated with kindness.

- Definitions of what is classified as a vicious animal. (pit bull, doberman pinscher, etc.) Certain animals will require special licenses and permits to own. Education regarding it is not the animal at fault, but the lack of owner education and responsibility. Periodic checks on animals.
- To fine the owner of the dog was not on leash
- Don't label good dogs vicious, especially based on breed. Your bylaw officer informed my vet clinic staff "the only good chow is a dead chow." Absolutely unprofessional. It is essentially racism.
- None
- If animals are deemed to be vicious they should be put down.
- None
- These dogs need to be humanely euthanized
- Hold the owner completely accountable. Don't only impose fines but also require interventions to the presenting concerns and mandate follow up that they have been addressed.
- Protecting the public. Enduring laws are being followed.
- The dog that bites a human should be put down after a 2nd bite.
- again, it depends on the circumstances. if its clearly irresponsible people, then penalties maybe and forced training, but if its circumstances sometimes beyond control, then the city should simply show some compassion.
- We shouldn't be enabling vicious animals escapillt when accident happen and they have the ability to escape and run free.
- Blame the owners and not the animal.
- Holding people accountable. They choose to keep these animals- if it harms someone there should be no leniency. Encourage responsible euthanasia if people are not willing to work on the animals issues (not just dumping them at shelters)
- They need to step in and seize animals where needed
- Continue with this policy and not ban/assume certain breeds are vicious. Calgary is a great example of sound scientifically based dog behaviour policy.
- That the people responsible for the pet are thoroughly investigated to ensure that they are neither abusive nor causing the animal to be vicious by some other method. That the animal only be killed if rehabilitation and/or re-training is impossible.
- Accountability of owners
- Appropriate animal ownership is very important. Animals that suffer enough distress to become vicious may not be in the right homes. The city should assess if these dogs should be rehomed with knowledgeable animal owners/trainers/behaviourists to help them overcome their distress.
- Ensure they owners are continuing to be vigilant with their animal and monitoring public safety near the animal
- Better enforcement. Vicious dogs need a proper registry for those with prior attack incidents
- Simply not permit them.
- This is difficult. Most vicious animals are due to poor ownership. I believe that the owners need to be held more responsible.

- More control over who is allowed to adopt dogs that present vicious tendencies
- You are doing a great job.
- Dogs should be removed from homes if a serious bite occurs more than once and if the owners are willingly allowing the animal to interact with the community without safety measures.
- I'll assume you're not talking about humans (though if you'd like my thoughts on that please release a more specific survey). First and foremost try non violent methods, rehabilitation when possible. Education of all parties is a must, and as always stand strong to decent pragmatic principles.
- Education about management of vicious dogs and policing vicious dog incidents
- victims of dog bites/injuries should be awarded compensation which at minimum, covers medical costs, without having to proceed to civil court to receive it. This should be paid by the offending dog's owner.
- Work with rescue groups and trainers to try to rehabilitate the animal. If in 6-12 months that animal has not made progress, then maybe euthenization. Or an area for them to live but not be around anyone, but I know that would be a hard and expensive task.
- Be less harsh!
- Find a better solution than isolating the dog and putting it in a stressful situation then testing it. Animal behaviorist should attend at the residence on different occasions and make the decision that way. J
- Ensuring investigation and enforcement of standing bylaws and laws.
- Same
- Follow the rules and definitely know how to humanely handle the dogs!!
- Actually follow up with any complaints
- Perhaps more resources provided for where training can be found or recommendations for animal behaviour specialists
- Chasing another dog, animal or human does not mean a dog is vicious. Dogs chase each other and even get into fights sometimes, causing small puncture wounds. This is normal dog behaviour. Responsible owners break up the fight and remove the dog from the area. You need to revise the definition.
- Put more focus on the owner. Do they have knowledge? What steps are they taking? Is there any neglect or abuse? Animal ownership is a privilege.
- I don't have the answer, but something needs to be done about the people who know their dogs can be unpredictable, yet they let them off leash at the park anyway. My dog has been bitten in the past (unprovoked) and the owner was across the park without a care in the world about what was happening.
- To have the dogs taken to the shelter, fine the owner.

- I think the city should take complaint calls more seriously, especially for pitbulls, & Rottweilers. From personal experience, they didn't do much about a pitbull that was very threatening, stating that unless it physically had bitten me, there was nothing they could do!
- 2 strikes they're gone
- vicious. That is an opinion.
A chihuahua can be vicious, would someone report that dog for actually acting vicious?
Or would they rather report a big dog that is defensively barking/growling on a private property?
If a Pomeranian bites someone it won't be put down, However a big dog would
- Ensure that there is no underlying abusive situation in the animal's home!
- Calgary should start holding owners more responsible for vicious animals (excluding self defence or no history of vicious behaviour). Stop euthanizing animals for bad owners. Start punishing the owners for allowing this behaviour to happen or they will continue.
- Either banning dogs that are known to be aggressive or making mandatory training for these dogs, paid by owners.
- Enforce on leash more in general.
- Owners need to be taught that there is no need for violence dogs.
- None
- really, why even keep them? there's no shortage of other animals looking for a home. a vicious dog is a training failure by the owner, and vicious dogs should be euthanized. how many children need to be mauled before we learn this? one? five? fifty?
- Enforce the bylaws. I've seen many vicious dogs and their owners in non compliance
- A complete and total ban of vicious dog breeds is required. And a punitive fine and a required court appearance where the idiot with a vicious dog can be told about being a civil member of society. Vicious dogs are not needed in a city of Calgary's size. They serve no productive purpose.
- Re #1 judge fairly if dog breaks loose, chases roaming cat. Biting humans unacceptable if no provocation, if dog bites/snaps in self defense (being beaten or is terrified) then be fair, use common sense. No issue if pet is under adequate control. But curb the darn roaming cat problem!
- If they bite unprovoked, get put down. If they bite with provocation, charge the provoker.
- Put them asleep
- Ensure people are responsibly managing their pet and protecting citizens.
- Fairness. There seems to be a breed bias and also little transparency in assessment. For example, there have been cases of teenagers and other persons teasing dogs & promoting an attack. But the dog gets blamed. Independent animal behaviorists to assess and not bylaw.
- Have a way to track or monitor vicious animals. Patrol off leash parks more often to ensure owners are being responsible. Educate not fine owners.
- One strike, animal is euthanized
- The city should implement a mandatory course in conjunction with the humane society to provide education. People don't decide to own a vicious animal; it is usually irresponsible pet owners. We have a responsibility to minimize the number of vicious animals.

- There should be routine check-ins with the owners of vicious animals; in my mind at this point the owner has already failed to be responsible
- Frankly, the City needs to work on the interaction with the owners. The owners should be required to take reactive dog training through an accredited force free training program.
- Like humans, dog rehabilitation is possible. The process of classifying a dog as vicious should include a review process if requested by the vicious dog owner.
- Treating the situation fairly - i.e. do not punish for isolated incidents and owners who are trying to cooperate. Do not just based on breed!!!
- Vicious animals must be euthanized after first offence. They should not be allowed in the city.
- To ensure that these animals are being appropriately managed.
- Follow appropriate legislation.
- Set strict rules with consequences for non-compliance, monitor compliance, quickly respond to concerns.
Offer affordable tailored training courses for these owners.
- One strike and you're out. Owner should have to either move or get rid of their animal after one complaint.
- When a dog is declared vicious it should immediately be put down.
- To hold owners responsible and trying to rehome strays
- Rehabilitation, not euthanization. Any dog can be saved
- Effective and timely enforcement of non controlling owners
- At some point it probably needs to be turned over to the province.
- I don't believe a vicious dog should be returned to an owner. It should be euthanized. The owner has already proven to be irresponsible if the animal had an opportunity to be vicious.
- - see above. Without rigorous enforcement of existing regulations, unfortunate consequences become inevitable: some innocent individual is hurt or killed, the city gets a ton of bad press for not doing enough, and the pet pays the ultimate price
- Known dangerous breeds should require further training for the owner before being allowed to own the breed. Too many young "tough guys" want to have a pit bull, but have no idea what the dog is capable of.
- Keep it off public places
- The only message that sticks with irresponsible dog owners is when they're financially punished. Large fines for reoffenders or owners that let their vicious dogs off leash would be a good start.
- Maybe a fine. Or a warning.
- No second chances for Pet owners for any incidents
- If a vicious animal is dangerous to the public, then eliminate the risk.
- I think they're doing a good job already. I like that animals are given a second chance, and that owners are held accountable.

- See answer above, it is 98% the fault of the owner
- I believe certain breeds should be banned- they are very dangerous and at best intimidating. Specifically, pit bulls and Staffordshire terriers etc
- Ensure truly vicious dogs are put down
- They need to be able to quarantine the animal if a serious incident occurs.
- Hold the owner accountable instead of the dog. I would like to see the city of Calgary try to rehabilitate vicious dogs more often as opposed to euthanizing them.
- I expect the city to exhaust all avenues before killing a dog they deem to be vicious. Locking it in a cell for 10 days and doing an evaluation on a stressed animal is not doing your best.
- Possibilities for rehabilitating the vicious dog. Chance for re-assessment.
- Vicious dogs should have a tracking device and the city should obligate owners to keep all vaccines up to date.
- It's a tough one but I think more training and awareness.
- Do not accept and re-home dogs that have been deemed vicious in another town or county. Vicious dogs do not have a place in an urban setting.

If they animal kills or grievously harms someone, the animal must be removed from the owners care and a
- Remove vicious animals from homes where children are present. Be strict and remove animals when owners do not comply with rules.

- If a bite happens the dog should be removed from the owner and destroyed.
- Put them down
- ALL Licensing costs for the owner of a viscous animal must be higher to reflect the additional cost that the city is forced to take on to ensure bylaws are being followed.
- Do a better job of advertising the consequences to pet owners of vicious animals and ensure that stiff fines and perhaps jail time are the result of an uncontrolled animal attacking and seriously injuring another citizen.
- The city needs to better asses dogs. Currently you hold them for several days with no access to the outside or people. If you want to bring out the worst in an animal, that's how you do it! The city should require owners to attend training and allow for behavioural reassessment after training should not damn an entire species to condemnation e.g. pit-bull terriers which are demonized as vicious.
- The above signs should be mandatory.

- DO NOT BAN BULLY BREEDS. Poorly behaved dogs are a direct indicator of their owners NOT an inherent trait. Public education reminder people to be smart around animals (don't pet a strange dog without the express permission from the owner), especially focused on parents educating their children.
- the city of calgary needs to create relationships with other animal organizations who could possibly help with these animals
- Zero tolerance for people not following rules regarding vicious animals, they need to be removed & re-homed or put down. Any vicious animal that harms somebody needs to be put down.
- One strike your out. Any animal attacking a human should be put down.
- I don't think rules need to change per say, but more strict enforcement should be looked into
- Perhaps a 'watch' program where the city checks in on owners and the animals to see if the animal is being abused or properly cared for and whether the animal is controlled.
- No should be allowed to own a vicious animal.
- THE current situation seems to be working.
- If a vicious animal causes an incident then the owner(s) is/are responsible for 100% of damages and the owner(s) must undergo training in pet ownership & responsibilities prior to owning any pets (vicious or not).
- Take legitimate complaints seriously and don't return vicious animals to morons.
- None,
- Ensure that all reports of a vicious animal are investigated and dealt with in accordance with the bylaws. Perhaps suggest training methods or local training services available.
- Leniency of circumstance. Most vicious behaviour can be avoided if circumstances are favourable. Context is everything. Owners of non-vicious dogs have a due diligence in preventing altercations. Poorly behaved dogs should not be permitted off leash, regardless of temperament.
- If reported for any reason and officer feels threat, remove it.
- It should be mandatory for ALL canine caregivers to take canine behaviour classes and attend training classes with their pet. Education is key to solving most problems.
- higher fees for having a vicious dog.
- Make sure there are clear guidelines that wouldn't put at risk other dogs that have been biased as vicious eg pitbulls and Rottweilers so as to make sure that these dogs have a fair chance in life and aren't being put down for unfair reasons
- If dog is too vicious put it down.

- The City desperately needs to have updated information on training practices and animal behaviour - whether it is someone on staff or a group of trainers that staff can contact and take advice from. I'd also expect followup with owners of these dogs to ensure that rules are followed.
- Animals are typically better than people, what does the city plan to do about vicious people?
- Investigate and prosecute.
- Please consider a pitbull ban in Calgary. The majority of attacks causing harm last year in Calgary were pitbull attacks. My family had two pitbull attacks on children in front of our house within a month of last summer. The second pitbull still lives in my neighborhood...
- Do NOT make this a breed specific issue. Require special licenses for owners that are issued upon completion of X hours of aggression/reactivity specific training. Vicious animals required to wear a vest or identifying item that would tell others that this animal is vicious and not to approach.
- None
- Removing them from the community.
- The City of Calgary needs to be proactive with these cases and not rely on the public to report. And reports by the public need to be taken seriously.
- None.
- Vicious animals should be euthanized.
- None. I think the policies are good.
- My expectation is that the city actively pursues vicious animals prior to an incident rather than in response to one. The city should set out clear definitions of what is considered a vicious animal and require registration by the owner. Failure to do so should result in a substantial penalty.
- That applicable bylaws are enforced.
- I believe all designated OFF leash areas should have cameras, or be by law enforced more often. A stronger presence would make people think twice.
- unsure
- If the City has to confine an animal, it must be done with respect and keeping the animal healthy and safe. There should be support for owners of vicious animals as no one wants to go through this process. Perception should be animal owners don't wish this on anyone.
- Heavy fines for violations. Too dangerous.
- No other expectations. What is in place seems reasonable.
- Be prepared to euthanize animals who have injured their owners and/or other people/animals (in my experience a dog who killed another dog was not euthanized as the only human he'd injured was his owner).
- Take all necessary info from both parties as it is always the small dogs that attack and initiate it. Bigger dogs get the reputation of attacking, get put down just because but when it is a smaller breed, they don't get complaints when it is always the small dogs who are vicious and initiate.
- Identify them with special licenses or just make them go away
- Enforce the bylaws.
- city to have dealt with this more severely much sooner.

- I would like to see the opportunity for a dog to go through testing/behavior analysis after a certain amount of time to be removed from the vicious animal list. This would give the owner incentive to try and help solve the behavior issue which is good for the dog, the owner, and the public.
- Removal
- Add the requirement for those with vicious animals to post signage on all access points on their property to alert the public to this potential danger.
- when they attack people and draw blood they are euthanized. such animals to be insured by owners to cover claims by victims of attacks.
- Very heavy fines. I mean $2,500.00 and more for a first incident. People never take the small fines seriously so they have to "hurt" the pocket. Then mandatory dog training. If incident is repeated, consider putting dog down and not allowing the owners to own another pet. Pet registry?
- Swift and immediate action and investigation into the household. Possible intervention by FCSS where children live in the home with vicious dogs. Mandatory sterilization of all vicious dogs and vicious dog breeds. BIG fines/penalties for infractions involving vicious dogs - owners get charged.
- Don't just worry about the animal, look into the owner and if adequate care was being provided
- Do not engage any type of breed specific legislation (BSL).
That all animals are treated fairly and humanely; that euthanizing an animal is the absolute last resort.
- One strike rule.
- Timely investigation of animal attacks, and potential consequences for both owner AND animal.
- Thorough, objective investigation into the circumstances of the event to be put in front of the court for their consideration.
- Remove the animal triple the fine
- I think the City of Calgary should have more stringent requirements for ownership of vicious animals and require proof that owners are working with animals to improve their behaviour.
- DO NOT PUT DOWN AN ANIMAL OUT OF CONVENIENCE! ANIMALS SHOULD BE GIVEN EVERY CHANCE TO RECOVER AND CHANGE AS HUMANS SHOULD!
- Vicious animals should not be allowed within city limits.
- It's not fair to label a dog vicious for a bite on private property. dogs are territorial. Maybe require a beware of dog sign
- I would like to see breed bans in Calgary. I see no reason to allow big aggressive dogs to mingle with the public and put people at risk. In no particular order: Pit Bull, Fila Brasileiro, Doberman Pinscher, German Shepherd, Dogo Canario, Rottweiler,

- should be killed
- Once an animal is deemed vicious, it should be humanely euthanized.
- Have to be taken off the street or nobody learns a lesson
- If reported they deal with it
- after one offence, the second offence the animal should be put down
- Enforce the laws we have. Breed specific legislation should be avoided.
- Fair process in determining a vicious dog. Dogs are territorial by nature. Was the dog provoked or antagonized? I do not think a dog should be branded vicious if this is the case. Irresponsible owners with multiple unprovoked infractions (bites/attacks) dog should be euthanized.
- Stop putting "off leash areas" in the middle of popular walking paths. Off leash dogs parks should be separate ENCLOSED areas. Not randomly along a path that leashed dogs may be walking. A dog on leash meeting a dog off leash is commonly problematic.
- With any repeat violations, perhaps banning or limiting licenses at the same address as the repeat offender.
- 1) Re-do the bylaw to work in the real world. Not all animal bites are as cut and dried as the bylaw pretends they are.
- 2) Properly train bylaw officers to do an actual investigation. There is no proper investigations.
- 3) Train city lawyers to not use the bait and switch tactics they employ.
- Big fines for these animals getting lose.
- Euthanizing should not be an acceptable option.
- When an animal is seized the city needs to and has a legal obligation to ensure the animals health in their care. This does not always happen and the city should be held liable. Bylaw officers do not investigate properly as the bylaw as written, is a death sentence to an animal regardless of cause.
- Vicious animals should not be tolerated ... pickup and terminate ...
- Understanding of specific situations. Periodic monitoring to ensure rules are followed.
- Animals should be treated as humanely as possible. Otherwise, current regulations seem sufficient.
- I believe if an animal attacks a human or other domestic animal under its owner's control that it should be put down.
- The city should deem the owner responsible for the animal and if there is another incident, charge the owner with the crime.
- None. I think the laws are very reasonable.
- Provide a mandatory identification system for easy identification when animal is out in public such as brightly coloured tag so that persons and pet owners know to avoid the animal. - All dogs need to be leashed in public areas! I am sick and tired of dogs approaching me and my children in parks and at public gatherings, not being called back by their owners or warned off by us. Owner responsibility of dogs is sorely lacking!
- A fair and objective investigation process that excludes breed prejudice.
- I expect the City of Calgary to intervene and remove that vicious animal from the property and destroyed. The City already has problems with enforcing strict fines on owners who allow their dogs to bark persistently to disturb those around them. We need much stronger enforcement all around.
- Firm enforcement and zero tolerance, one strike rule. A bylaw that if an animal is declared a vicious animal that neighbors and local schools must be notified. In writing with photos of the animal.
- That one offense results in massive fines and the dog being put down immediately. That certain breeds be banned completely.
- The City of Calgary should more strongly enforce laws when animals deemed vicious are involved in an attack.
- More cooperation with owners of dogs deems aggressive to recognize that not all dog attacks are because a dog is aggressive. Working with the owner, their trainers, and veterinarians to provide support for a dog who has attacked can help facilitate more success and help prevent repeat incidents
- Repeat offenders should be euthanized
- The animal should be put down.
- The City should require additional, separate licensing to keep a vicious animal. The owner should be educated in their responsibilities and have the license/certification to prove it.
- If there is a pattern of vicious animals associated with specific individuals, their ability to own pets should be restricted.
- - Owners who demonstrate that they create vicious dogs (as in, several animals in series are deemed vicious) should be prohibited from having dogs.

- understand that it is the owners responsibility to control and train the dog. Dogs don't become aggressive for no reason. Training to both the dog and owner is essential to avoid aggressive behaviours
- A dog deemed vicious should be put down. Calgary should consider banning dangerous breeds like pitbulls.
- Limit dogs for every one. No more than two.
- Limit
- all breeds are treated equally. a Vicious small dog is still vicious
- see 1
- That the city looks at the best interest of the dog
- Ban them
- Owners should be fined if they hurt anyone or other animals
- Too lenient. If a dog has a pattern of attack, it needs to be put down and the owner has to be punished.
- place responsibility on the owner for the pets behaviour and investigate if abuse is suspected.
- Vicious animals should be allowed to play with other similar animals, however, they should not be allowed to bully another animal.
- If the owner refuses to take responsibility and refuses to take training classes then the dog should be removed from the home.
- They should tighten regulations and vicious dogs should be put down. Immediately. The current rules are too lax. I love my dog, but I'm smart enough to put the safety of my family and community first.
- - Ability to conduct regular inspections of properties containing vicious animal(s)
- On first offences, their should be varying repercussions on the dog based on severity of the incident. i expect that re-offending dogs should be destroyed.
- Although it can be traumatic for a dog owner, there should be zero tolerance if there are further violations. Once a dog is deemed vicious, no mistakes should be tolerated. The potential consequences are too serious to be ignored.
- euthanasia
- Attend to cases in a timely manner.
- I expect vicious dogs to be removed and not returned to owners. those owners should be banned from having dogs. if it is possible to retrain the dog to be docile then maybe they could be adopted to new responsible owner but I think that would be rare and the dogs would have to be put down.
- Nothing regarding vicious animals but when letters are sent out to owners about their pets, more info on the letters is required. The letters sent are so vague, it's frustrating.
- It should be investigated. Should look at the owner to see whether they are not the problem. You have some owners who think they no how to handle dogs and they haven't a clue.
- See above. If your animal is declared vicious, it should be put down.

- There should be more education about this, and encourage the safe use of muzzles for dogs whom people "aren't sure" about. Better safe than sorry!
- Continue strong enforcement and education
- I expect the City of Calgary to enforce leash laws for ALL dogs. It should not only be a priority for animals that have already been involved in a dangerous incident. My children are afraid to go to the park because SO MANY people allow their dogs to roam free near playgrounds.
- A willingness to make difficult decisions around surrender and euthanasia for vicious animals.
- I would prefer to see the owner be put down before the dog is touched.
- To NEVER put down a dog due to an aggressive behavior or violent act. Blame the owner, not the animal. Vicious dogs are able to be rehabilitated if their owner cares enough does proper training, or surrenders their dog to someone who has the skill to do it.
- Teach people and do outreach in the off leash parks. I see a lot of people who say their dogs are 'fine' but the dog's body language clearly says they are not fine. Teach owners to watch other owners with his/her dog to know what to look for to avoid situations where dogs become a problem.
- That the city doesn't allow vicious animals with anyone not providing specialized care
- Fine the owners. And better yet offer programs for owners to learn how to be good pet owners and rehab and training programs for owners to work with their vicious dogs.
- Manditory mussel law for vicious dogs walking or in yards.
- Expect to prohibit specific breeds, enforce bylaw & protect people
- I think that the City of Calgary does a good job.
- I would like the City to make frequent checks so that vicious animals are restrained properly. The City should also monitor off-leash parks and deal with dogs that are not under the owners' control. People often do not even have their dog in sight and are not cleaning up after it.
- The City needs to ensure that the owner of a vicious dog covers the vet costs of the injured animal. A fine is not adequate.
- None
- Enforcement
- Enforcement of proper help and rehab for the dog and owner(or shelter) before having it euthanized. I believe the owner should be 100% responsible and liable for an injuries
- Close monitoring and visits to these animals to ensure they are taken care of properly and are humanely treated.
- If thwir dog attacks someone they get heavily fined and pay any vet or hospital bills. Again punish the owner not the dog
- Vicious dogs should be euthanized for a second bite incident. No waivers!
- I think the city of Calgary currently does a good-ish job in dealing with vicious animals. I would like to see by-law officers receive more training in how to handle deemed vicious animals in a less aggressive manner and be trained in de-escalation if they aren't already.
- Ensure that the animal does not cause any future issues. Either physically or emotionally.

- One offence. Put them down. This is a safe city. We do not need guard or vicious dogs at all in the city. Go to the country on your own fenced land.
- Follow up with the animals progress, and vaccinations to ensure that no diseases are spread to other dogs and/or humans.
- Making sure that reviews of vicious dogs behaviours are being conducted by Bylaw Enforcement agents.
- Required participate in positive reinforcement training.
- None
- Continue to remove animals and consider not allowing owner to have animals in future.
- A second offence would mean surrendering the dog for rehab and then, hopefully, rehoming.
- Current policy works
- Owners should have to post a large sign at their front door to warn people of the dog. And a small sign posted on the lawn to warn kids going into the yard after a stray ball
- There is great potential to provide education and training to both the owners and dogs. Sometimes dogs are vicious because the owners are not aware of how to handle or train their dogs. Offering regular sessions and mandatory sessions after an incident occurs could be vital.
- That they step in, assess the animal and make recommendations for how it should be handled with the public interest in mind
- Must take their animal to training sessions to improve owners understanding and ability to control the animal. If they can not get control of vicious behavior within the year of the animal declared vicious, the animal should be removed from the owner possession and owner should not have any animals.
- Have pet training courses for pets and animals to take together to learn better socialization habits and ways of being.
- Faster court dates so dogs aren't stuck in the shelter for long periods of time. All dog must be sterilized.
- I don't always think putting the animal down should be the answer. A lot of the time, these aggressions can be caused by the owner and it would be better if the city could seize the animal and have someone work with the animal and try to find other options before euthanizing.
- If the person or animal is a repeat offender remove the animal and ban the person from owning another.
- I think COC does an excellent job given restraints. The dog parks we enjoy have a vibrant and dedicated audience so perhaps empowering them to report, follow up and be vigilant with increased marketing around reporting to authorities.
- Hold the owner responsible. Many animals that are vicious are the product of their owners and the way they were raised.
- To treat each case and animal as individual incidents and not paint a broad stroke by making bad assumptions.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Education before euthanasia. Depending on severity of attack, two strikes before the dog is removed. Mandatory education. Minimum space requirement bylaw.
- Treat them fairly and acknowledge that when there are incidents, many times the human is at fault for putting them in a bad situation or failing to take precautions. These animals deserve a second chance and should be rehabilitated and placed into a home where they will be properly cared for.
- Not to euthanize if there are options to rehome
- Enforce the rules. Provide consequences such as: If non-compliance with the rules the vicious animal must be put down and the owner is forbidden to have another animal until a set period of time, maybe five years, and a training course is successfully passed.
- I would expect that if a dog is deemed vicious the city does regular checks on the dog and its owners unannounced to ensure they are not a danger.
- Regular check ins with a specialist to monitor the status of the dog. Not to punish the dog but I am a strong believer that dogs are a product of their upbringing and environment and it should be on the owners to try and rehabilitate the animal
- Vicious animals do not belong in urban settings as it is too easy for them to get loose and endanger the public.
- Take them from their owner and attempt to retrain them again. Then pass to a possibly better owner.
- I think before a dog is deemed viscous it is important to investigate the owners. Most times it is because of the owners dogs can be cross. This goes for ALL BREEDS, any dog can be cross, so with that in mind I believe that there shouldn't be labels on certain breeds of dogs
- The harness thing seems really weird. Harnesses give owners/handlers LESS control of their dogs. Harnesses were created to allow dogs to pull... comfortably. I could never see why you would want an animal with questionable behavior on a harness?
- Monitoring of animals designated as vicious
- The city should not be able to seize and euthanize a dog without first giving the owner and the dog a chance to rehabilitate. Dogs bite for a reason and training both dog and owner by an expert is key! Like I said - mandatory professional training by specific experts - not pet smart for example.
- Ensuring the owner of a vicious dog is caring for the dog properly not just adequately. Random checks on the address and accommodation of dog and owner and verification of continued training for owner and dog. Bad dogs are reflective of bad owners.
- Removal of the animal..fines to the owner
- Retraining the pet owner
- Be sure to communicate when dogs are removed from the city by court order. They just end up in other communities and cause issues. Ban certain breeds.
- I firmly believe that an animal with any history of vicious behaviour should be euthanized. There will never be enough enforcement of 'conditions', and not one more child should be maimed or killed because of irresponsible pet owners.
- Tighten the laws. Increase the fines. Make it so vicious animals first offense is mandatory training. With moderate fine. Second offense comes with a massive fine to pay or you put the animal down. Owners choice.

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- There should be harsher repercussions for owners of dogs who attack other dogs. We should be able to walk our dogs in public without being in fear of a vicious dog attacking our dogs.
- Vicious animals should not be allowed in the near proximity to schools or playgrounds as children are especially vulnerable. I support euthanizing animals that have bitten people.
- No large vicious dogs in condos.
- Be kind and empathetic. Some dogs have never had an incident and have just spent their lives loving everybody and everything. Then one day, when they are 12, something happens that no one understands. How can you work with the owners and the animal in a kind and appropriate way?
- As above, enforcement and regular monitoring of these animals. Rapid response & decision after incidents, but prevention is key - my daughter was jumped on & bitten by 6 or 7 unleashed, uncontrolled puppies when she was young - all of the above should be required of ANY dog owner BEFORE an incident
- Spot checks at the home to ensure the "rules" are being followed.
- Rehabilitation should be looked into before destroying them
- I am happy with the current bylaws.
- Have classes for the owner to enroll. Animals can improve with focus.
- No more euthanization of vicious dogs. We don't kill criminals for their misguided ways why are we still killing animals.
- Ban the chaining and isolation of dogs and the use of "industrial guard dogs" ... do not allow chaining and isolation of dogs and do not allow any business to keep dogs on their property to provide "security". It's 2020.
- Education, fines and termination.
- Put them down!
- Making sure they are in control
- I was recently attacked by a dog on leash that overpowered its owner. I filed a 311 complaint and was told the bylaw officer couldn't do anything because the dog was on leash. The dog I was walking was bitten. It seems ridiculous that nothing can be done when it wasn't controlled.
- Vicious animals should be taken away from their owners when the animal attacks a person or another animal.
- Follow-up with owners on any mandated management first from a support, second from an enforcement perspective. That context is considered; was an animal provoked? Or reported as a neighbour spat not an authentic concern? Can third-party assessments be done that remove the label when/if appropriate?
- If they're bad dogs, do as you need to do to eliminate the problem.
- Extreme fines for irresponsible dog owners, it's never the dog's fault, it's the owners.
- Actual support instead of shrugging off an event and the impacts of said event.
- Nothing.

- Keep a detailed report of any and all offenses, including specific reasons as to why the animal lashed out. Was it their fault? Or was it provoked by a human? Many dogs are blamed unfairly for attacks when they were provoked and gave multiple warning signs. Finally, NO breed specific bans!
- Public posting of areas where vicious animals live (not specific addresses).
- They provide financial assistance where needed for owners to seek training or education on dog behaviour
- Should not single out any specific breed.
Add mandatory training with a licences trainer as a condition of ownership.
- None I can think of at this time.
- Vicious dogs should be assessed. If more than 2 incidences pet needs to be removed and if behavior continues euthanized.
- Those who attend off leash parks should understand how to approach dogs and how to read a dogs body language. Too many times I have seen people charge at dogs assuming every dog is friendly - this is inappropriate and the dog will be blamed. Respect of space is is the utmost importance.
- Do not racial profile certain breeds as vicious. It's the human that can teach a dog to be vicious.
- I believe it should be legally mandatory for owners of aggressive dogs to be assessed by a board certified veterinary behaviouralist to ensure that the dogs mental needs are being met and that the owners have the resources available to them to deal with these difficult animals.
- Try to rehabilitate and maybe rehome- euthanasia as a last resort.
- Fine the owner and remove the dog from the home. Zero tolerance.
- Is there any sort of appeal process if a dog has been involved in an incident and has since improved through training or behaviour management? I understand wanting to protect the public if a dog has harmed someone seriously but I also worry about how easy/difficult it is to have a dog deemed vicious
- None
- Guaranteeing that both the owner and the dog are good citizens
- The City of Calgary should limit the use of euthanization as the solution. Again, a “vicious” dog is usually a scared dog or a dog that has had a rough past and needs training. Owners who refuse to treat their pets properly & that includes investing in time/training should have to surrender the dog
- Perhaps proof of training when licensing
- Be cautious not to blame an innocent animal for the irresponsible actions of a human. Bans on animal ownership for people with repeated issues should be applied and enforced.
- Removing the animals from the owners.
- If the owners are found to be at fault for the dog the dog should be removed and put up for adoption with a responsible person. No bad dogs only bad owners.
- Making sure these dogs are in proper care of the owner.
- Regular audits the homeowner is following the proper procedures, euthanize vicious animals.
- The city should actually do something. We have a vicious dog on our street and the city did nothing when he attacked another dog and his owner.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Special mandatory registration of location where such animal is being kept, with an openly visible sign at location warning the public of possible hazard.
- The owners of these dogs need to be held more responsible. They seem to get off easy when their dog causes injury or damage.
- None that I can think of.
- Not all dogs are vicious and we shouldn't punish a dog for being themselves. Typically humans are the cause. We need to blame them. Stressing a dog out is counterproductive to dealing with vicious dogs. Why not make mandatory training for both owners and so called victims.
- I don't believe the above bylaws are enforced. We spend a lot of time at Southland and there are dust ups almost every day. I often tell people they have a dog that should not be at a public off leash park. Education, big signs and big fines.
- To hold people accountable to following the rules.
- Ensure that certified positive reinforcement trainers are being used.
- The owners should be required to be trained (at their cost) on how to care for their animal if they wish to keep it. Very often vicious dogs are the result of violence and poor ownership. It is not the animals fault usually. If they cannot be rehabilitated then the dog should be put down.
- The practice of seizing and isolating dogs who have been involved in serious incidents should be taken under advisement. While I respect the need to be mindful of safety, social isolation can be extremely detrimental to the behavioural well-being of a dog. In this day and age, we can do better
- be more proactive. there are an incredible amount of irresponsible dog owners that cause other dogs to react negatively. some sort of education campaign maybe i dunno
- There are different "levels" of injuries that are caused by dogs. Dogs that attack a human and 'cause puncture wounds with no provocation should be euthanized.
- Making sure dogs are treated fairly and not based on breed. Rehoming or training if possible before considering euthanasia in the event of an incident
- Certain breeds that have a tendency toward vicious behaviour should have to pay a higher licensing fee that could then go toward victims for medical care as well as bylaw enforcement.
- As above. Should help monitor dogs & behavioural assessment are good. Follow up on abuse, dog rings, training to attack (unless appropriate ie. police)
- Rehabilitation before death. All animals deserve a second chance. Sometimes it's not the dogs fault and is actually the environment they live in or were raised in. The dog can be rehabilitated through training and socialization in a controlled setting.
- fine owners appropriately and require owners to take training classes with their animals
- That they look into the animal's past behaviors and the behaviors of the owners before deciding what to do.
- fine people
- Education and providing resources for those living with vicious animals, nothing will change unless the owners are educated, it's not the fault of the animal themselves.
- Must be spayed

- Sterilization, euthanasia
- The City should not be able to decide what a 'vicious' animal is - how does the city know which animal is vicious? This cannot be determined by an umbrella ban on any specific type of dog (ie all pit bulls are vicious)
- I believe if info is given on vicious attack it be followed up and dog owner must be banned from dog parks
- Cats must have the same rights and responsibilities as dogs. Same rules.
- Enforce leash bylaws strictly. Require additional training for dog and handler where appropriate.
- Thank you for not responding out of fear by using euthanasia, instead looking for better options
- Dogs are reflection of ownership - remove them from poor owners and put them in the hands Of capable people that can train them
- I was bit by my friend's 123 pound giant breed dog who was after my 33 pound dog but I stepped in between them. I did not want to report this incident when I went for medical care for my injury. I don't think they need to get anymore involved as the two of us have been working together with pros.
- No other expectations.
- Better enforcement. implement a better solution to identify the animals. Right now if an owner is not nearby or doesn't choose to provide identification, it's virtually impossible to track them down. Instead of a license tag, vicious dogs should be required to have a scannable rfid
- There should be more monitoring and fining of calgarians who have their dogs offleash in an area that is not designated as offleash, regardless of dog behaviour. I am NOT supportive of any breed-specific legislation as it is not science-based.
- I expected, in both cases of attacks that the City Animal bylaws would have at the very least fined the owners, and had the owners take training to the satisfaction of the bylaws department to ensure this would never happen again. Instead there were no consequences for the owners in either case.
- None
- Understanding that vicious animals can be traumatized by little, bad-mannered dogs.
- STOP PUTTING THEM DOWN JERKS!! It's not their fault hold their Owners responsible and give them the needle and take the animal way rehabilitation is the key
- Vicious animals should be required to wear an identification of some sort so anyone in the vicinity knows of the designation - something similiar to a service animal harness.
- limit the number of vicious animals
- The owner of The vicious dog should be checked to ensure law is upheld.
- Vicious dog offenders must undergo training with their pet
- After a serious attack, because there is always a risk that a vicious dog will have another aggressive incident, the dog should be put down. The City is much too lenient on this subject.
- be
More educated as well.
- Fines and definite education on the use of muzzles

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- I expect the city of Calgary to ALSO look into how people approach ALL animals. Many times, the issue is NOT a “viscous” dog. It is ignorant people not watching or controlling their own pets or allowing them to be off leash. Likewise, many people are not being mindful of their children around pets.
- If there are incidents involving harm to people, the animal should outright be removed as it has shown to be a danger to the community.
- A registered, public list of homes containing aggressive dogs. I’d check it before I bought a house next door or delivered something/picked up something purchased on a public site such as Craigslist.
- Actually investigate claims. False claims do happen. It is fraud to file a false report, yet you treat it as fact, and do not investigate further, just punish an innocent animal.
It is not only fraudulent but also animal abuse to file a false report against an animal and its owner.
- Fines. Make them steep. And have a process the owners must follow for training/rehabilitation.
- Euthanasia should be an absolute last resort, as this situation is usually the result of a bad owner/home situation. I feel many dogs can be brought under control with proper training and management.
- Put them down
- Following up with owners of vicious animals to ensure they’re following the law
- Need to implement higher penalties for owners that are not responsible, protect children and people from these animals better
- Seizure, evaluation of animal, and euthanasia if determined to be vicious. Owners who do not cooperate should be fined and forbidden from owning animals in the future.
- Here I have huge expectations. Deal with the animals--AND the owners--as forcefully as possible.
- Hold owners responsible...not always punishing the dog
- Confiscate them, fine owners and ban animal ownership.
- Is the dog actually vicious. This should not be a term given by anyone but animal behavioural specialists and should be mandatory to bring the dogs for training with a professional. Half your “vicious” animals are just the results of people not respecting the animals.
- Keep track and complete random checks
- To ensure they safety of the public by making sure this animal is not going to reoffend
- I think that the city should implement a law that all vicious dogs be mandated to attend behaviour classes to correct any issues
- No other expectations
- None
- Safety of public first. Bylaw officer to determine if animal might be hostile and risk to public. Dog to be held in kennel at owners expense until determined by court in redonable timeline. Attacks by dogs on individuals showing jostile intent to other people or priv property, as determined exempt
- I would like to see the City having more enforcement levers to use. In particular levers that allow the city to impose immediate sanctions on owners, not just the animal.

- Special license numbers that must be displayed on dog so it can be identified if it attacks and then runs away / owner removes it without exchanging information
- Owner should be required to have a separate license to own a vicious animal. If multiple offences occur, mandatory training is required.
- Fines and mandatory training
- Keep up the good work.
- Outlawing viscous dogs, guard dogs. Dog breeders. People who have viscous dogs should be reported& fined based on length of time their dog was viscous. Higher fines for dog owners whos dogs have caused distress or harm and forced training sessions.
- None
- The city should provide options to owners of vicious dogs so that they may keep their dog in the family. They should not be forced to euthanize. An exception is if the owner has been cruel to the dog, then it should be seized and rehomed or euthanized if no option is available for rehoming.
- Any vicious animal needs to be dealt with as soon as possible. First strike, your out. Sorry harse. Why wait for a second occurance?
- To hold the owners accountable. It's often not the dog's fault but due to poor ownership.
- I would hope that any cases of vicious dogs are fully investigated before a decision is made to put down the dog, which I think should be the last resort and only done if the dog was not provoked and if relocating the dog to a new home would not help it.
- Ensure that each animal is given a fair trial/both sides of the situation are considered and analyzed. Animals have natural instincts and in certain situations, will act on them when provoked. In unprovoked instances/severe cases (the animal poses a threat to public safety) restrict pet freedoms.
- 2nd striike and the animal is euthanized.
- Offer free dog training courses so that people may have the opportunity to raise responsible pets who know the difference between right and wrong and know not to bite.
- Taking calls more seriously.
My landlord made a call about the vicious dog at large that is unregistered at our place and nothing can be done unless he attacks us or we actually catch him in the act of killing another cat.
- harsh punishment if expectations aren't followed
- Take little dog attacks and even bad behaviour seriously.
- I expect people who are walking in on leash areas with their pets off leash to be fined as it puts vicious dogs on leash in a dangerous situation.
- N/a
- None, leave dogs alone
- Don't force them to put it down except in severe circumstances
- The owners of Vicious animals should be dealt with meaningfully.
- Enforce breed training before licence granted
- Stronger and more active enforcement.

- Complete a full investigation and do not pass judgement until objective evidence is given. Provide resources for rehabilitation for such declared animals.
- Having mandatory training buy a reputable dog trainer
- Depending on the offense they should be put down. Vicious animals should not be in public, period.
- na
- Maybe have a coloured collar or leash that allows people to see from afar that the owners doesn't want their dog interacting due to behavioural issues. Usually it's the owners fault dogs become aggressive by not walking them or letting them off leash to terrorise other dogs or people walking.
- Safety
- I think if you provided breed education and made behavioural classes available for dogs that could be more "problematic" and also affirming that smaller dogs need behavioural training too, as i've seen aggressive small dogs instigate problems with larger dogs and only the larger dog is blamed.
- Less chances/strikes, after one unprovoked attack/serious bite should be automatically deemed vicious and owner can seek to remove the vicious title through court vs using court to fight for the vicious title.
- None
- Required training with the dog and owner to be completed. These current expectations feel like incarceration instead of rehabilitation. Fix the problem of reactivity. Don't hide it away and expect it won't happen again.
- When an animal attacks any individual /or another animal they should be put down. By attack I mean an animal bites a perfect stranger or goes after a person's dog while anywhere in public. If ones dog tends to snarl/growl at strangers then muzzle it for everyone's safety. Responsible ownership!!!
- Same as above!
- The City of CALGARY does not have the resources to even begin to address the issue. There needs to be a MASSIVE reset in the HUMAN psyche, not just regarding animals. People pay 'trainers' (aka 'know nothings' HUGE money to 'make the dog behave nicely'. $1800 to a guy who 'watched ALL the Cesar vids
- Make sure after investigating what made the dog be vicious? Again, it's not the animal,s fault it's the owners responsibility they should go thru proper training
- I presume the City has a professional animal behaviourist assess the dog.
- Hopefully when reported they are able to locate, unfortunately in my case too many dogs matching the description so the dog wasn't found. Not sure they could do more.
- Certain breeds of dog should be made illegal, ie: pitbull. The statistics clearly show a relationship between these animals and violent attacks. The argument of whether it is the fault of the dogs or their owners is ultimately irrelevant, as the result is the same.
- It would be nice to provide rehabilitation for the dogs that can be rehabilitated. Death should be a last resort.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Pet ownership must be redefined in law as pet guardianship. Pets must be redefined in law as sentient beings not property. All pet management legislation needs to be defined in terms of guardianship. Rehabilitate the pet and punish the guardian in vicious situations.
- Capture, and don't release until the owner has had training.
- We have been attacked with our 30pound dog multiple times, on-leash and off-leash at the park. It's too easy for people to have dogs and have them be ill-behaved. Almost like off-leash parks need to be swipe access and those deemed vicious/charged can't enter. Also 100words is a silly limit.
- Follow up with owners
- Address the training of the animal and the quality of training the owner provides. If the owner cannot provide training to control his/her pet, That pet shouldn't belong to them
- That they are attempted to be rehabilitated and taken from the owner
- Non breed specific rules because any dog can be vicious if not treated well. Fair trial of animal in an incident - wave penalties/sentences if animal is provoked
- This is a waste of money. Everyone involved. Not taking being human seriously
- I think the above stuff I read seems appropriate minus the additions I added above. Animals are animals and people need to never forget that they can get vicious at times for many reasons
- There need to be officers in the park during peak hours or a phone to call and report them. Or even security cameras! So many dog attacks in dog parks.
- There should be further investigation as to why the animal became or is vicious. Is it due to the owners or the environment the animal resides, or an unusual situation that escalated and caused the animal to attack. Most of these situations are caused by humans not the pet.
- Limit / restrict ownership of certain potentially vicious breeds of dogs
- I have concerns regarding an aggressive dog being outside and barking excessively and feel there should be noise requirements for dogs to be outdoors. Having a dog barking aggressively though a fence does not help someone feel safe.
- the owners and animals must be tracked and harsher punishments must occur.
- I think there should be better investigations. Not just "he said, she said". I once was wrongly accused & forced to take the fine and a record. I had an alibi from work and volunteered for bylaw's to come and meet my dog- they were hesitant and frankly didn't care since a fine was already set.
- Let's be very strict about enforcing whatever bylaws are in place or about to be put in place.
- If there are complaints without injuries being incurred then mandatory training should be required. If injuries occur then it becomes a legal matter.
- monitoring of the owner for a set time frame to ensure that the requirements placed on them/their animal are met.
- If there is a serious incident, the animal should be _immediately euthanized_. There should be zero tolerance for vicious animals. Why are we so weak about this?
Dangerous breeds (pitbulls etc) should be _banned_ in Calgary.
- Higher fines for owners that fail to meet all requirements. Owners are the problem not the animals.
- To take possession of and humanely put to sleep dogs that cannot be retrained.

- Fine the owner and ensure the owner pays to euthanize the animal. Sentence the owner to volunteer at an animal shelter for 80 hours too.
- Owners should take some ownership of the dogs actions. Training is part of the problem often
- Visit the dog parks during busy times, 4pm week nights. Most dog owners don't have control of their dog.
- Provide programs/training for owners of vicious breeds paid for through licensing and fees paid by the owners of vicious breeds.
- Be reasonable and fair.
- If it's maimed or killed another pet or person it should be put down. Exception is for an animal proven to have acted in self defence.
- I think what you have in place is pretty reasonable
- I feel that even if a dog has not attacked...yet repeatedly shown aggressive behaviour...the city should assess. Why wait until someone has been mauled!?
- Better leash enforcement laws to deal with the owners who don't care about their dogs behavior knowing there aren't any repercussions or consequences that are worth taking notice of. Maybe hefty fines would better keep communities safe from dog attacks or being chased. The victim right now suffers.
- I think the owner and home should be investigated to try and uncover why the dog has become vicious. I don't think the dog should be returned to the owner until a full investigation and an answer if found. We shouldn't have vicious dogs in urban centres, or anywhere for that matter, at all.
- The City should consider banning certain breeds of animals that tend to be vicious in nature or make the owner take training and have insurance if they want to own a vicious breed.
- Heavy fines if there is an incident and exponential more if there is a repeat offense.
- This is the owners responsible, the only thing the city needs to do is advise the owner of complaints and perhaps provide them with information on how to resolve behaviour issues.
- Again, it is responsible pet ownership. Licensed and chipped dogs (and cats) should have serious consequences and fines, if they are not able to control their dog.
- I think the city is doing the best it can. Short of requiring all dogs to be muzzled when in public I'm not sure what else can be done. This is common practice in many European countries. The muzzle is seen as a tool, not a punishment
- If someone calls for help actually show up within minutes not 2 weeks later. They need to actually answer the calls and do their job
- Owner training expectations
- Vicious animals should be seized, homeowners find, and the owner forced to go to a training course the city should offer and the animals should not be left outside unattended they should be put in side or in a proper enclosure in the yard where they cannot escape
- Put on city run class
- None
- Penalty should be much higher for dogs who attack. By the way I am a dog owner and dog lover

- Larger fines, pet ownership restrictions and jail time that actually deter poor pet ownership. I believe this will require more resources and partnership with the Provincial Government to update laws.
- I think there should be more investigation into what provokes animals to bite/attack. I think large breeds are often mislabeled vicious and punished for reacting as animals do in stressful situations.
- Education for bylaw officers on dog behaviour and body language.
- More public education on identify and approaching potentially vicious animals.
- None.
- Require owners to receive education on managing both the triggers and needs of high risk animals. Encourage owners to work with qualified trainers on risk reduction strategies.
- Perhaps a way for a dog to have their "vicious dog" label pardoned, following training and improved behaviour - tester by a trainer. Not all dog bit situations are genuinely "vicious".
- Destroy them. I know it sounds harsh, but I'm trying to think how I'd feel if my daughter was maimed or killed by an animal that had already done something bad enough to come to the court's attention.
- None
- Make them accountable for their actions
Increase. Fines for non compliance monitoring to ensure safety
- Maybe have a repetitive behaviour clause; issue 1 - assessment of the dog and training for the owner (both at the owners expense) - this would then result in a decision tree type structure as to how to proceed next. Issue 2 - more training. Issue 3 - fine the owner and possible seize the pet.
- Surprise Follow up checks to ensure they are following the rules.
- I would like to see more education out there about vicious dogs and what it means to be vicious and how to deal with the dogs and owners and how to coexist with them
- More strict. One chance, I've had enough of my small dogs hurt by bigger dogs. A lifetime ban on dog ownership if their dog injures another animal (dog, cat, child, etc)
- The city needs to formalize what they mean by "vicious". Reactivity in dogs and vicious behaviour in dogs are not the same thing and do not come from the same place. Additionally, the city needs to ensure that owners with "friendly" dogs are keeping them under control. Problems are very avoidable.
- Not allowing vicious animals in public areas. These animals are highly unpredictable and should never be allowed in public areas.
- The City should ensure actions are taken to mediate the aggression in the dog, by requiring the owner and dog to attend classes and if this cannot be done then the dog should be removed from the home.
- I believe more training needs to be put in place, when a dog is under distress after an incident - being collected by strangers and put under a stress test - most dogs will likely fail. I also believe if the dog has more than one incident, the owner needs to be held responsible in a more serious way
- Ensure the owner is actually able to control the dog even if over the age of 18. A 110 lb person can not control a large aggressive dog.

- Policing the care of animals deemed vicious. If it's merely ignorance on the part of otherwise caring owners, mandated socialization/training should be issued. If it appears to do with abuse, neglect, or dog-fighting, the animals should be confiscated and the owners charged and fined.
- Could the city provide at a discounted rate training classes at the humane society?
- Just prompt response to complaints.
- Remove from owner and assess for the likelihood of a re-occurrence/attack
- Owners who let dogs escape knowing they are vicious should be fined
- Ensuring that it is not a one off situation caused by an external factor.
- Fines for the owners, opportunities for rehabilitation and training programs, confiscation after multiple offences
- No breed profiling should ever be undertaken or considered
- Mandate dog training and or offer it low cost/affordable to allow owners to take advantage and try reshape the behavior.
- Accessible, affordable training/behavior intervention. Well-natured dogs with responsible owners can easily pick up violent behaviors. It is heartbreaking for an owner to go through this. SUPPORT not PUNISHMENT
- Zero tolerance for violation of the guidelines and more regulation with people taking these kinds of animals on public property
- Following up after an incident
- To offer training, either through the humane society or through an alternate program. I feel that the city does a good job with vicious animals following an incident.
- I have retired racing greyhounds, high prey drives. I They chase the roaming cats that come in my yard. I expect the city of calgary to stop setting my dogs up for failure and make it illegal for my neighbours to have their cats outside off leash. My dogs don't chase other dogs or people. Just cats
- The city must get involved.
- You dont do anything now about dogs off leash in leashed areas or dogs being attacked in leashed areas by unleashed dogs. More laws do nothing if basics aren't enforced and the people violating are fully aware they will never be charged
- Take every case individually and look at the owners responsibility
- Vicious animals should be prohibited.
- There must be follow up if the animal is returned to the owner to ensure restrictions are being followed
- Dogs that are reacting out of self defense due to being hurt, injured, or provoked by humans such as when kicked, stepped on, ran into, should be exempt from a vicious designation.
- The City should offer the availability of keeping an animal for assessment within the home. The conditions in which seized dogs are kept is inappropriate for testing to occur.
- If an assessment returns where a dog is found to have no aggressive qualities the city of calgary should not be able to request a vicious designation. Animal behaviour experts should review what conditions from the bylaw are appropriate for a particular dog.

- Give concealed carry permits to those feeling endangered when walking past one's kennel!
- I think the City of Calgary has been responsible as I have understood in dealing with vicious animals.
- If an animal attacks, and is deemed vicious, they should be taken away from their owners. 9 times out of 10, it's the owners fault that it has become this way (or taught).
- Policy should be dogs with behaviour issues should be muzzled and on leash, not allowed in off leash areas and be with adult 18 and older. After one incident, owner must prove they and their dog have completed a dog behavioural class of x number of hours before they can go out in public with muzzle.
- Supply training courses
- This seems to cover the necessities.
- BYLAW OFFICERS PRESENT AT OFF LEASH AREAS. FIRST WARNING TICKET OF A LARGE AMOUNT, NO SECOND WARNING, IF ANOTHER INCIDENT HAPPENS THE DOG IS PUT DOWN. TIRED OF INNOCENT PEOPLE AND THIER WELL BEHAVED PETS GETTING HURT, USUALLY BY A DOG OWNER WHO IS IRRESPONSIBLE AND WILL NOT PAY HEALTH CARE BILL
- If dogs are aggressive toward or attacking other animals and /or people they have no business in the city.
- Stop being nice
- To ensure animals who addre repeatedly violent are not released back to a home that cannot control them.
- again no vicious animals should be excepted in Calgary city limits. no excuses. granted they had to learn that behavior from humans in the first place. But inhumane to have them continue to live with out rehabilitation by experts who know when it possible and when a better decision should be made
- Put a sign in the window and on the lawn of the residence where the biting dog lives to remind others that it is not okay and also a public shaming
- hold owner legally accountable for further attacks/injuries caused by dogs, remove animal from owner after multiple vicious incidents
- Having had a situation. The City was completely heartless in how it dealt with the situation. I would like to see the City show compassion, nobody wants their animal to hurt someone. Don't rip it from family and out it in a disgusting cold hole, then cut its loving family out. Let them choose vet
- Same as above
- Very high fines for any infractions. Euthanasia for a repeat offender.
- No chances - hurt anyone or thing - euthanasia. Vicious animals always caged or chained up, even when outdoors because fences do not always stop them from escaping. No vicious animals should be allowed period, but if deemed some sort of breed then I am guessing we are calling it vicious.
- I'd like to see the City enforce mandatory training for vicious animals and their owners to reduce the risk of the animal attacking anyone again.

- Not to jump the gun and declare dogs “vicious” after only 1 or 2 attacks. Look at the circumstances. Also, the City of Calgary shouldn’t be profiting off of handing out vicious dog tickets.
- Raid the drug houses and take fighting dogs and dogs trained to be vicious for drug house protection from other dealers away.
- I think the city had the right depending on the situation to take the animal.. but the city never disciplines the owner and takes it out on the dog
- There are not vicious dogs, there are vicious owners who traumatize the animals to make them vicious, and antisocial. Those owners should be heavily penalized and deprived of the privilege of having the pets in the future.
- Heavy fines for vicious animals involved in an attack.
- Ensuring all dogs are evaluated and with the owner/families. Segregated they cannot be themselves and behavioural problems often stem from the owners themselves.
- Vicious animals should be destroyed and not returned to their owners.
- High fines. Ban pitbulls
- Issues and charges need to be addressed quickly.
- Automatic euthanasia in the event of pack attack, roaming uncontrolled (escape from property) attack, and fines for owners
- Follow up. A friend has a dog deemed vicious and given instructions: muzzled off their property, on leash only (no off leash parks) and attend training for vicious dogs at humane society. They NEVER took classes, continued to take the dog to off leash park early in the morning, no muzzle.
- Require euthanasia (of dog) in event of attack
- Provide a program for owners that provides them with behavioral support from a professional
- second vicious attack offence, destroy the animal. I'm not a vet, but castration after the first offence might be effective.
- Remove after first occurrence without muzzle
- Once a vicious animal is identified through whatever means the city uses for such determination the animal is then required to be removed from the city
- The current regulations sound reasonable, perhaps a mandatory red leash - or marker to identify dogs in public that have been deemed "vicious animals" as a warning to other users and pet owners.
I am mostly concerned that the vicious label is properly used and dogs tested/identified.
- The animal should be assessed by an animal behaviorist. A lot of these so called aggressive dogs have been raised by aggressive humans and sometimes have been provoked by another human. Fine the owners and if possible rehab the animal, don't put it down.
- Have a certified animal behaviourist have input as to the required training for both dog and guardian.
- As above

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- I expect the City to work with the Humane Society to determine if this is truly a dog problem, or if this is an owner problem. If the owner isn't a responsible pet owner,, the dog should be removed, rehabilitated and adopted out to someone who will take care of them properly.
- Not allowed at off leash areas, regardless of whether dog is leashed\muzzled.
Some sort of "3-strike"-like rule for repeat offenders.
Some sort of check-in process for owners of vicious dogs w/ authorities. If deemed vicious, maybe an every 6-month check in to assess owner actions, dog behavior
- Unsure, each case would be unique
- Better enforcement. An impossovle task. At off leash park we go to there is a dog with a muzzle and owner lets it attack anything close and justifies it by saying her dog can not bite it just sounds bad
- Deal with them firmly and keep our community safe.
- Having owners tracked, if they happen to have multiple vicious dogs they should not be allowed to own any
- Honestly they should be put down. Sometimes you cannot train out poor genetics.
- following up with these animals.
I DO NOT support a breed ban
- They should do proper testing on the dog both temperament ,and medical as they can both be an issue. Also the situation of aggression should be taken into account. If a dog is protecting its enclosed living space or if it attacks an animal at large while in its own yard etc
- None, as above.
- Innocent until proven guilty... but if they harm a human, don't take a chance on the owner following the rules. Put the poor dog down.
- I expect that vicious animals that are not properly controlled, will be seized by the city and destroyed if necessary.
- controlling more
- Have them put down
Do not allow on public property at all.
- Should be put down
- Harsher punishments to owners. They get a slap on the wrist if their dog does domething harmful to other dogs when they shouldnt have been out in the first place.
- Animals should never be euthanized . It's humans, not animals. Repeated offenders should be forced to surrender the animal and it needs to be rehomed, and humans not allowed to own another, unless there is a legit reason why it wasn't animal's or owner's fault
- ABSOLUTELY NO BREED BAN!
- I would like to see access to mediation for neighbors who are in a dispute regarding animals.
- None
- They should be required to take a training session with expert dog handlers (ex. at the humane society), to help rehabilitate the dog, or increase the dogs quality of life in a manner safe for all involved, while following the above listed rules. This should be provided at low to no cost to them.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- There should be more consequences to the owners for not properly training and caring for their dog. A dog's poor behaviour is a reflection of a neglectful owner. There should be fines and consequences for the owner. Harsher punishments for back yard breeders and animal neglect/abuse.
- Assuming a class was taken (as mentioned above in #1), there should be some follow-up to ensure that what was taught, is being put to practice and that the human is working with the dog, to better the dog and the situation. If someone is going to have a pet, they need to put in the work.
- Quick response to reported vicious animal attacks.
- depending on the degree of the animal, I feel they should be assessed by a professional to determine if they are containable and safe to be around others or if they are too much of a risk and need to be put down
- Public Education and Information on animal behaviour so that people recognize different animals body language and how to properly/safely approach and handle animal. Also so that people learn when an animal is telling them to back off that people listen.
- More follow up would be wonderful.
- Proper assessment from all parties to assess if the animal was triggered, abused, has health issues that could lead to their aggression etc.
- I expect and urge the City to reassess what they consider to be a 'viscous' animal! If a dog shows that it is responsive to positive training and socialization to overcome problematic behaviour, rehabilitation is the answer. I'd urge the City to rely on the expertise of animal behaviour experts
- Train and not kill. Most dogs are able to learn and change. Remove the animal from the home if their behaviour is due to abuse or circumstance.
- In all possible cases I would expect that the decision to deem a dog is vicious would be determined by a educated behavioral specialist and unless requested by the owner allowed to live.
- Giving as much benefit as possible to owner. Ensuring there is no bias in review if animal is considered to be put down. Ensure ALL other options are exhausted before euthanasia.
- The city needs to keep better track of vicious animals to ensure owners follow-through with conditions and remain committed to rehabilitating the dog. If owners don't have the capacity or desire to work with the dog and it remains a danger, the city should intervene to prevent additional incidents.
- Education for owners (especially owners with small children) and the general public. Make sure someone who is adopting a dog is matched up with the right breed. Children should not be left alone with a dog the parents are not familiar with.
- follow up on vicious dog owners if they are not in compliance the dog should be removed from the owner assessed to see if it is possible to control the dog and if not then put down.
- NO BREED SPECIFIC LAWS
- More and better patrolling. I have NEVER seen a bylaw officer up on Nose Hill in all the times I have been there. I have had a dog run at me many times. I have no way of knowing if they are vicious or not; I just don't want ANY dog running at me. Bylaws without patrols are useless.
- Ban fighting dog breeds

- Not just pointing fingers at the dog. Unfortunately a lot of incidents are situational. If you seize and possibly euthanize a dog, are you teaching the owner anything?! Education is SO important and I think it's very undermined when it comes to "vicious" animals.
- An animal that has been found not under control should be not allowed to be off leash in public. Shouldn't need the vicious experience to add additional controls on them.
- They should be able to apprehend if any of the criteria is not met.
- Rehabilitation
- They should have to go through, and pass, mandatory obedience training, paid for by the animals owners. Though in general I do not think that vicious animals should be allowed as pets.
- They can provide information to the owner for classes to correct the animals behaviour.
- None.
- Animals are not vicious by nature. They learn it from their humans. If a dog attacks, yes it should be kept under closer watch but as should the owners.
- that they be euthanize and the owner banned from owning pets for at least a year
- Provide a higher fine for no compliance of the licensing agreement.
- Removal of the animal from irresponsible owner, allow adoption to rescue groups, proven adopters when possible
- Do more to ensure safety of people and pets. Not sure a dog deserves a second chance.
- I couldn't believe it when a dog had hurt several children on my street and I finally got it contained in my yard, and then it took an officer over an hour to come get it. I have a short fence and didn't want to risk leaving it to escape and injure more kids. More decisive action should be mandated.
- Required training and certification that they are responsible to own a "vicious" animal!
- If a dog attacks unprovoked once, circumstances should be reviewed and pet monitored and dealt with accordingly.
If it attacks unprovoked again it should be put down as it cannot be trusted.
- Education
- Provide training opportunities to rehabilitate the animals.
- More positive info on different breeds. Ie the Pitt bulls and rottwilers. More info on the general public how to handle being around dogs in public. Especially kids..
- I would recommend mandatory dog training for an owner and vicious dog, or potential rehoming to a well trained owner. NEVER SHOULD AN ANIMAL BE PUT TO DEATH AS IT CAN BE WORKED ON WITH PROFESSIONAL TRAINING
- More support for owners of vicious animals. Their pet does need to be exercised too. Create some off-leash fenced off areas that can be booked (google "My Walkies"). Reassess validity of viciousness after a while - eg. was it a wrong time/wrong place event when the pup was young and is now trained?
- Owners of any breed considered or appear to be vicious should have to take that dog to training
- None

- Provide resources to owners. ensure the animal in question is not reviewed or tested in stressful unfair, unfamiliar circumstances.
- Euthanized
- For repeat offenders, vicious dogs should be confiscated for reforming if possible in the case of abusive owners especially.
- Licensing of vicious animals. And city checking that rules are being obeyed?
- If the animal has done serious injury, I expect them to be put down, not rehomed or put under the restrictions stated above. It should be a fairly quick process.
- Investigation and understanding of the circumstances- I.e. was the dog provoked, injured, did the person not listen to the owner's instructions
- Helping owners manage behaviors/behavioral training. Enforcing law of dog being leashed - for walks, in front yard, in parks, running free next to bikes or skateboards. Educating the public about space and respect needed with anxious/reactive dogs. Teaching common sense of not coming up from back
- Any animal that has been commercially imported needs to have a special licence in case that animal is lost or abandoned
- Before putting an animal down, work with him/her! It won't take a week or two, it may be more or less...give the animal a chance! He/she may have been abused, had lack of training, been in several homes...find out their history. If you can't, call in a professional first!!!!
- - mediation group
  - dogs are property, treat them as property
  - other party - what they did should be consistent -> bylaw
- Educate bylaw officers
  - off leash dogs should be at fault when attacking on leash dogs
  - Definitions of care and control
  - Level of discretion
  - Normal for a dog to bark at someone
  - Review what should be for a charge based on normal dog behaviour
  - Any incidents should be reviewed
  - should be an investigation

- More tickets
- Tiered offense - ie. 1st ticket $25 then increases
- people know the rules, but don't care if not enforced
- construction areas double the fine
- pay for enforcement through tickets
- Enforcement slaps laziness
- Different beliefs of professionals and pet people
- target education to different groups
- Dog walkers have developed skills - if dog limit is brought down, won't be worth it, so uneducated people would be the ones walking dogs
- - Education about dog behaviour
- Mediation group instead of going straight to enforcement
- Rights for people to protect themselves
- I think the city is doing an adequate job
- If the dog is very dangerous, do not allow it to interact with the public
- Provide proper warning at the property for visitors
- If dog has any previous experiences in violence, they should not be allowed outside on public property
- Rehabilitation & treat them with care because they don't know any better
- - Inform the public of any vicious animals
- Vicious dogs living with young children any rules around that?
- The city should enforce the bylaws strictly.
- Stiffer penalties and removal of dog for owners that do not follow the rules. Dog should go to a shelter that can try to see if behaviors can be alleviated.
- That the city revisit their vicious status yearly.
- Prioritize public harm over irresponsible ownership. Protect people and non aggressive pets. Owners with previous issues should pay more.
- Education to dog owners of "my dog is fine" people who walk their dogs off leash in non off leash areas. They're just as much at fault for not controlling their dogs.
- Again, not the animals. Deal with the humans that are not equipped to have an animal they cannot protect others from.
- To work with certified behaviourists to determine if this really is a vicious dog or if there was a justifiable reason (based on scientifically known dog behaviour ) for the attack and to aid in rehabilitation and management. Is the dog in the right home.
- There are too many warnings to the owners of vicious dogs. After the first incident(attack) the dog should be removed & owner fined. Our dog was attacked by 2 dogs & no consequences for the owners.
- none

- Put down animals that have owners who do not comply to court orders.
- -Required to be involved in a recovery program to assist in behavior correction.
- -removal of the animal for non-compliance/repeat offender
- -euthanasia for dangerous animals.
- -Prohibiting owning of animals to persons who have past reported animal abuse (making it illegal)
- Harsher penalties for the humans, more crack down on untrained small breeds, more leniency for so called 'vicious breeds' - a trained rottie, doberman, pitbull or german shepard is less of a danger than an under stimulated siberian husky or an un-trained toy poodle, bichon frise, or shit tzu dog
- Investigate all incidences and respond appropriately to victims
- Assessment of incident leading up to the attack. Was the dog being pestered or abused by attackee. Consider allowing re-assessment of the animals aggressive tendencies after a period of time. Assess owners to see if the dog could live without restrictions in a more appropriate home.
- To trap and hold vicious animals, and to euthanize if necessary.
- Dogs should be removed from the home and provide proper training. Owners need to go to "how to treat/raise a non-violent pet" before being allowed to own again.
- Prohibit vicious animals on public property in Calgary.
- Do not ban specific breeds: We are terrible at identifying mixed breeds so all med to large mixed breeds are then killed.
- Education and training to see if the animal responds. If not, the animal should be euthanized.
- Ensure compliance
- Enforcement of the rules when reported / maintain a list of viscous animals. Removal of animals from owners who are not willing to / able to follow the rules.
- None
- Helping owners find resources to help, educate and keep everyone safe. Respecting the dogs space is important and should be considered if bylaw is required to visit or check on a dog labeled as aggressive.
- I feel that rescue societies should not be bringing in dogs from out of province . I have nothing against pit bulls etc .except if they have a bad background you can not change that ,at least not most people
- Coordinate with animal welfare orgs and dog behavioural specialists. Recognize that BIG DOGS get a bad rep, even when small dogs like chihuahuas also have terrible behaviour and often instigate problems, but it's generally the big dogs that take the blame.
- Do not blame the dog or animal. it is the owners that are responsible. More attempts should be made to rehabilitate the animal after an incident
- Any dealings with these animals is done humanely and that the owner takes full responsibility. Second chances (not with the same owner) should always be tried with the help of a trainer.
- More follow up. Euthanize 'repeat offenders'
- ban and remove them from city
- Education for the dog owners. Often it is poor treatment of the dog by the humans.

- I would like to see training mandated, with a qualified Behavior consultant. Education to help prevent dogs from developing these issues would also be very helpful
- there is a stigma when it comes to dogs. the most cases that we hear about seem to be spun in favor ratings and such things like that. i think a real investigation should be done by bylaw that's not bias towards the "victim". and animals should be given equal right as humans we live in shared space
- That any incidents are dealt with appropriately - the owner should be charged if the public is injured as a result.
- Promoting programs (preferably affordable) that educate people on how to properly socialize to avoid reactivity as much as possible and how to manage it if it does arise
- A more proactive approach to identify high risk breeds and stronger controls around them. i.e. required liability insurance, required dog training and restrictions from high use parks.
- Give the opportunity for the animal to have the vicious animal label removed with the appropriate training and review of their behavior. Removal of animals from unsuitable/unfit owners (only in extreme cases, like dogfighting, etc.)
- Enforce removal of known vicious animals.
- It is more the owner then the pet. Most dog owners are good and reasonable to take care. Those that don't should have to take classes and if they can not control their pet take them away and ban them from owning another animal for a period of time or never.
- There can be no leniency with a vicious animal (it should be put down). Fines must be significant to deter owners from even owning a vicious pet.
- Don't see it as a cash cow and jump on the owner with a huge fine the first time, maybe there should be a programme they should attend or a test they should take to see if they understand the implications of owning a dog that is vicious, maybe they have to take out an insurance policy to protect vic
- Mandatory obedience training for owners and their dogs.
- I expect that the city should act immediately and take possession of pets that have been in an altercation with a person or their owner. And NOT leave it up to the owner! Several times I've been in a situation where my family or myself have had trouble getting support to deal with a dangerous dog.
- There should be more proper analysis of whether an animal is "vicious" or not. Putting animals in a strange new place, such as the pound, and then "testing" the animal by waving sticks and approaching it while eating is not a good measure of whether a dog is "vicious" or not. Have actual experts.
- Animal control needs to be very involved. As I have said before there is usually a human reason for a dog becoming viscous.
- Vicious animals should be put down, and owners should not be permitted to continue to maintain the animals in their home. IF the animal has been deemed to be dangerous and has caused harm then there is a very high chance this will continue to happen. People should be able to feel safe.
- Put them down

- That the owners are actually held accountable, to their victims, not just the City. It's a joke the way it is now.
- That care and consideration be given to dogs which have been neglected, abused, poorly raised or trained to be vicious. City should try rehabilitations before sentencing the dog to be put down.
- Considering vicious animals are frequently a result of poor training and bad owners, perhaps better education and more opportunities to take positive training classes for inexperienced owners would help.
- They Are appointed a training class to attend and that the owners handling is evaluated to assure they can manage the dog safely
- Provide assistance in locating appropriate training for vicious dogs and creating a process to potentially declare a dog rehabilitated.
- There could be a training program created to assist people who do not have the means to take training when they are dealing with a reactive dog. Also more bylaw officers attending dog parks to ensure safety of all dogs and people
- I believe that the city has an obligation to provide information of the dog and it's owners to any victim of an attack.
- Make sure the owner is actually a responsible owner - it's usually the owner not the dog - don't return the dog to a bad situation
- I would charge more for licensing fees to own an aggressive dog
- Ban pit bulls, please.
- Should also be mandatory counselling/education/follow up with the owners if the dog is returned after there has been an incident with the dog.
- A vicious dog is always the result of poor dog ownership. The city should require all vicious dogs receive rehabilitation
- Is there a way to follow up to see if the owners are following the restrictions or to check with adjacent neighbours to address any concerns?
- Mandatory spay/neuter programs.. Access to affordable programs. Education.
- Mandatory training session, signage, submission of character letters from neighbors to renew license yearly or a city provided questionnaire. City inspection of containment on property every few years.
- That they follow through with the consequences when owners do not abide they rules.
- Vicious animals should be euthanized.
- Be fair and ensure good behavior assessments are conducted. Reassess the animal if the owner gets it training with a qualified behavioral trainer to determine if this has modified their behavior and they could have the vicious animal designation removed
- Provide annual workshops or live training to ensure that pet owners continue to be responsible. It's another way for city workers to check in with pet owners that they are doing the right thing.

- No previous bite history=owner works with a trainer specializing in aggression. Owner MUST be held accountable; 98% of vicious-dog incidents are caused by the human owners misreading or missing clear cues.
- None
- If the vicious animal is being encouraged or not actively being rehabilitated (ie. completing behaviour and training that is approved by the City), the City should be able to remove animals from the home and prevent the owners from acquiring new animals.
- They need to be monitored and removed. Why do we need vicious dogs unless they are working guard dogs? Do they need a special license?
- Take control of this. Consider banning certain breeds of dogs in alberta
- Do not "make allowances" for attacks on people or other pets. The first step should be a fine and education, the second should be "jail time" for the dog and a bigger fine, and third, confiscation and euthanasia
- Better enforcement of the existing rules
- Require the owner of the vicious animal to help pay for some of the injuries obtained by the animal and/ or individual.
- No dogs be allowed near school, old homes, parks, daycares or any place that has anything to do with weak, vulnerable or places where dogs may pose some harm.
- Ensure dogs that are dangerous breeds are restricted in the first place. We license cars that can kill but not pit bulls? Also, educate these owners...all dogs can attack. Only my 15 lb won't kill anybody or any dog without a lot of effort...educate owners of responsibilities
- Subsidised training with trainers/behaviorists for owners to create a behaviour management plan and learn techniques on managing and rehabilitating their dog.
- I appreciate that the city takes a more reasonable approach and does NOT immediately issue a kill-order. Changing the name "vicious" to "highly reactive." Perhaps providing safe areas for owners caring for dogs struggling with reactivity.
- A user-friendly way to report incidents
- I expect that the court look into mitigating factors, such as was the dog being tormented or teased by the victim or bystander leading to the aggression, or was it truly a random event.
- none
- After 1-year, and attending training, the dogs should be able to be re-tested so they can reduce their sentence or punishment. Dogs can be rehabilitated and should not be permanently labeled without the ability to appeal or rehabilitate.
- If a responsible individual or rescue is willing to take some of these dogs it would be nice to see some rehabilitated instead of euthanization
- None
- None
- be aware of where the dogs are - and ensure that they are in training, and under control

- PROPER investigation into circumstances leading up to a dog apparently becoming vicious. Dogs protect their pack(family), their territory and aren't able to speak. Dogs react more when they are in pain. Dogs give warnings prior to attacking.
Have assessment done by balanced bark before put down
- I would like the city to take the time to determine if an animal is vicious due to its current environment, rather than destroying the animal. Many of these animals can be rehomed and rehabilitated.
- I think that the by-laws in place are good.
- If animal has Viciously attacked a human the dog should be euthanized with the exception of a Police dog of course.
- Mandatory assessment of the animal's behavior. Why is it vicious? Is the owner abusing the animal or encouraging the behavior. Mandatory rehabilitation training or the dog is re-homed.
- None. It sounds like a reasonable policy.
- That there be a clearer definition of vicious animals so that animals who were provoked, startled, or defending themselves are not unduly labelled.
- I would examine the root of the behaviour of the "vicious" animal. An animal is not born vicious. Most animals are loving and just want to be loved. The City of Calgary needs to focus on rehoming or retraining the animals. They are made vicious by their people.
- No other.
- Any vicious animals should be euthanized.
- Encourage people to take themselves & their animals for obedience training.
- Additional education to children and adults around asking to pet animals. Also understanding that someone who pets a dog without asking are responsible for their actions and the outcome.
- the city doesn't communicate any cases, ways to prevent incidents or report any serious incidents. I assume many people with vicious dogs are not aware of prevention, or what the process includes until they are involved in it
- If deemed by courts a viscous dog, mandatory obedience training, mandatory owner training on how to stimulate dogs
- Regular property checks of vicious dog locations to ensure compliance with court orders
- Please ban pitbull ownership and especially rescue agencies rehoming dangerous pitbulls here. These animals are bred to kill. It is not their fault but that doesn't mean we should allow more of them in the city. I think the breed should be banned altogether.
- Vicious dogs have no place in the City and should not be allowed.
- Maybe there might be an issue of weight of the dog to owners weight issue more than age. A 120 lb dog will do as it pleases with someone who is 160-180 even if they are 18.
- Vicious is a challenging word. Unfortunately, animals can get labelled as such when the animal is provoked, or the pet owner is negligent. This goes back to defining rules on pet care and ownership, and enforcing regulations on animals adopted, sold, and imported.

- Please tell me we are smarter than blaming an animal. If it was vicious, it was either bred to be that way or abused or etc., because the person likely was too (not that I am excusing the person). Deal with the human. Counselling might help but also need fines, jail... And ENFORCE whatever you do.
- Many people at dog park unable to control their animals.
- The city bylaw officer should assess the dog in person before making a judgement. Have a park where aggressive dogs can go off leash but only have individual parties go one at a time. Even charge the owner 10.00 for 1 hour of walking there dogs in this specialized off leash park.
neuter them
- Notify neighbours/community so that people can take precautions. But the biggest thing would be to support a consistent visual marker or piece of equipment so people know not to approach the Handler and dog. Most people have no idea how to approach dogs and are extremely dangerous unintentionally
- Mandate all rescues to license their animals and transfer ownership. Rescues to have correct skilled and trained volunteers to be able to take in aggressive rescues.
- Increase fines for neighbors that taunt dogs
- Repeat offenses from a vicious animal should not be tolerated, and in such cases the animal should be destroyed.
- As soon as I move on my deck they start barking at me and do not stop. His response is they are protecting his property. So piss off.
- That seems reasonable.
- Removing the dog and enforcing appropriate action.
- High fines for repeat offenders in addition to special requirements on licenses for repeat offenders (cage muzzles when off property) and very high fines if those are not adhered to. Perhaps a partnership with Humane to create a course for owner to attend to reapply for license.
- Very high fines for owners if the animals hurt another animal or person(s).
- If an animal attacks or bites ANYONE, they should be immediately put down, the owners heavily penalized and stopped from owning vicious animals. Pit Bulls should be illegal. We have an appalling attack record that needs to be stopped.
- They need to be removed from the owners. It's a terrible thing to deal with but the risk is too great. A child could be seriously injured or killed by a vicious dog. Not good enough that they are on private property or muzzled or leashed. A vicious animal was made that way by a person.
- monitoring of vicious animals
- I agree with those who want to prohibit ownership of select breeds that are commonly associated with viciousness.
- I feel that the City of Calgary should be doing frequent home checks, announced and unannounced to make sure that the rules are being adhered to. Also, I think that if owners did not follow the rules then perhaps the dog needs to be removed from home.

- Don't automatically think an animal is considered vicious based on one offence. Don't euthanize the animals. Give them the proper training as it CAN be fixed (coming from a professional here). You don't know what happened to that animal for it to react that way, especially when it comes to kids.
- I trust the City of Calgary staff to respond to information about problem animals, and I think that they are doing a good job.
- Confiscate vicious animals that cannot be rehabilitated. Mandate classes to control aggressive behaviour in some cases where rehabilitation is possible.
- The City should not allow Pit Bulls within city limits. They are threatening to most citizens.
- They must be able to respond quickly to complaints and ensure the dog is secured and gets a fair evaluation.
- They should have special licensing and ensure address is up to date.
- A no tolerance, for a vicious attack of a person. They need to be euthanized.
- Enforce training for the pets and their owners.
- any animal causing significant injury to a person or pet should be evaluated and put down if necessary. Safety is a paramount.
- responsiveness to reports about these animals if they have violated the requirements
- None
- Respond with detail, not just an upset neighbor
- That they charge the owner if a vicious animal is out unharnessed and isn't muzzled.
- case by case basis - not breed specific
- That more responsibility must be put on the owner. Harsher punishments must be given out.
- First, effectively monitor/enforce the above rules. Second, put in place legislation/procedures that will allow the destruction of dogs involved in unprovoked attacks. Third, licensing requirements that exclude the new registration of breeds prone to vicious behaviour.
- Also a check into the owners who may be the cause of the viciousness. And if found to be responsible, they should be banned from future ownership.
- Eliminate the risks to humans, children and other animals by seizing and destroying dangerous animals.
- encourage training for owners prior to ownership of breeds that are more likely to be aggressive
- Evaluation by an animal behavior specialist to determine if retraining is possible. Removal from owner. Euthanasia if cannot be rehabilitated. The dog, not the owner that is.
- Understand that little dogs are often more vicious than large breeds, it just never gets reported.
- If a vicious animal attacks a dog or person, I think it would be appropriate that there are laws in place saying that the owner is responsible for vet or medical costs.
- Certain breeds should not be allowed within city limits. There is no more reason to own a vicious dog than there is to own an assault rifle
- If involved in a more serious attack or multiple offences the animal should be put down.
- To ensure these animals owners are following the rules
- I

- Zero tolerance of risk to public.
- Determine that owners are actually capable of physically controlling their pet; levy higher fees for "dangerous dog" registration. Provide proof of dog obedience training.
- Ban ownership of breeds that are know to be vicious. It is important to protect innocent people from vicious dog attacks.
- The current system for classifying and requirements for owner and animal behaviour are extremely flawed. The processes in place currently do not have a dog's best interest in mind and allow for negligence on the part of a complainant to result in unfair sentencing for dogs.
- Be fair, as should be the case with a court decision. Follow through with the expectations from the courts that the owners to keep their dog and others safe.
- Ensure they have a humane, comfortable home first and that they are not being mistreated. Assess these animals and if there is no hope, then humanely put them to sleep.
- I expect the city to ban pitbull related breeds.
- Need to understand the context of the aggression and what steps the owner is making to work with their behavioral issues.
- Same as mentioned.
- If there is a second incident or the owners don't comply then the animal should be seized.
- Keep them out of the park
- City shouldn't only wait for a serious attack for seizure. They are dogs which even on leash can drag their owner and attack public. Such adults shouldn't be responsible for having these dogs.
- Sedation. Limited holding time. Euthanasia.
- A dog that unprovoked breaks free of it's owner and harms another person or another animal should have a two strikes and you are out. In sever cases maybe one strike and out! Like the dog that snatched a yorkie from it's owner arms and mangled it so badly it nearly lost it's life and did lose a leg!
- Need to be evaluated by an animal behaviorist before they decide on how to classify the dog.
- This bothers me. All dogs will react given the right circumstances. People have to be educated properly both dog owners and non dog owners. I think some behavioural education is warranted. It also should be that all animals should have some obedience training.
- Create well communicated zero tolerance policy. Weak policy allows harm to humans and pets by irresponsible owners . Locking up a dog at home is not going to make its behaviour better. Have steep fines on first offense, and if serious harm, put the dog down. so there are consequences. Otherwise no
- They should not be allowed in off leash areas, even if on leash.
- Leave breed out of it
- Track the location of the animal and allow this information to be available to the public so that neighbours are aware of the dangers and can avoid or prevent any further issues. Require mandatory registration and continual monitoring of the animal at the owners expense

- A dog that has killed another animal (ie: pitbull attacks and kills another dog at a dog park or in their community) they should be removed from the home and not permitted back to the owner and should not be permitted in a home with minor children.
- Consider training the dog and owner by a professional who knows and works with difficult dogs.
- To do due diligence prior to putting these dogs down
- I strongly believe our current bylaws amply cover this issue
- none
- Huge fines,
- investigate owners to make sure dog is not being treated poorly or being neglected.
- like to see more bylaw enforcement..
- Seek professional trainers with the credentials to aid in such cases.
- None
- If a dog has severely bitten, mauled (Ian Dunbar bite scale) a human or killed another's pet dog then the dog needs to be euthanized (humanely).
- Mandate obedience classes
Investigate the level of care of the animal
- If multiple offences committed, animal should be destroyed.
- The City should hold the pet owners completely responsible for the behavior of their dogs, and they should have to pay for any damages caused by their dog
- To ensure all supports are put in place to keep the animals safe and prevent any abuse of the animal.
The city should never be able to put an animal down unless the animals are suffering from an untreatable illness. We are human beings and we do not have the right to choose who lives or dies.
- None, as long as the dog owner is educated and clear on what it means to keep a vicious dog - then that is fine. I also think fines need to be WAY amped up for vicious dogs so owners get the reality of another issue.
- Enforcement of mandatory training.
- I think if there are multiple incidents then ownership may need to be reassessed
- I am confused why a dog that was deemed to be vicious (i.e. attacks aggressively and not defensively, is or likely to be a repeat offender and which it was thought training would not help) would not be put down? At the very least some serious mandatory dog training with a certified org or trainer.
- The city should investigate the owners for abuse or neglect of the animal. The city should investigate as to why the animal acted violently. The city should encourage behaviour training for owners and pets to prevent these habits from forming or change those that exist.
- My perception of how the city deals with pets that have shown aggression frightens me. I am a dog owner and I do my best to ensure my dog is docile, but I am scared that the city would take away my precious dog and "destroy" it. I think there should be a chance for rehabilitation.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- With vicious breeds the City should take a look at the pet owner. An 85 year old man with a young, Unexercised and Un-neutered aggressive breed dog should not be permitted
- Owner should be made to take a training course at their own expense in order to keep a vicious dog
- Put them down. Children's safety should come first! Usually viscous dogs are a mix of the breed and poor ownership - so having them still on property is too risky.
- More stringent enforcement of owners of known viscous animal provocation or attacks. Bylaw should do periodic checks on these animals and their owners, to ensure that rules are being followed. For ex: checking to ensure they have adequte fencing. Mandate obedience training.
- No second offense allowed
- Make decisions on whether the animal needs to be put down.
- A dog declared to be vicious should be put down.
- Fairness. If someone is trespassing, the dog should get the benefit of the doubt. Also, it's not always the big dogs that are aggressive. I've been bit plenty by small dogs, but no one takes that as seriously, which is wrong.
- I expect that the City has the necessary staff to ensure that there is sufficient oversight to enforce these restrictions on vicious dogs. It's one thing to make the regulation, but it's an entirely different matter to see that it's adequately carried out.
- Neighbours should be informed if there is a vicious dog in the area. I think there should also be a little more information provided to the general public about what constitutes a vicious dog.
- Additional supports for owners before dangerous designations. For example, when a dog is aggressive, providing supports to the owners to ensure the dog doesn't escalate. Also. when a dog bites a human, that should become part of the hospital record that is shared with officers.
- Put down dogs that harm people or other animals
- I agree with the specific rules relating to a vicious animal
- none its well managed thank you
- I think they should be put down if there is EVER biting of anyone. Unless it is deliberately invoked.
- Educate owners/ offer training
- I think they do a good job.
- there should be a way to report these instances at off leash parks, we have had many altercations with vicious dogs but no way to report them
- SWIFT, PERMANENT REMOVAL
- Letting the public know, inspecting owners home for compliance
- same as above.
- Training and understanding for officers to understand that many animals are in an unhealthy environment (not their fault, like kids they are victims unable to change where they live) that environment is often responsible for that unwanted behavioral responses.
- That they have the authority to monitor other dogs that the owners of dogs declared vicious purchase or adopt. Dogs are seldom vicious for no reason, and those people whose dogs are vicious are more likely to have other dogs who are also vicious.

- The animal (dog) should not have to be kept in isolation in the shelter's impound while waiting for a court ruling. The burden on the shelter and the negative impact on the dog itself is too great and is really counterproductive.
- I think this is tough to determine. Some dogs like to play rougher and some dogs like to run away. Owners with overly timid dogs typically view these rougher dogs as a threat when they really aren't. I think a warning given to overly timid dog owners that they have a right to keep their dogs leashed
- Dogs labelled vicious should not be allowed in dog parks. There should be some system of reporting vicious animals without requiring their City tag numbers (which owners are obviously reluctant to provide, and which would be difficult to get from an aggressive dog).
- Fully understanding the cause of the attack - if provoked by another animal, small child, person - the dog should not be punished for it.
- No future licensing for owners of vicious dogs who have had dogs who have previously attacked or bitten people or other animals.
- After a dog has bitten a human, it should be removed from the home, rehabilitated or destroyed.
- The will euthanize them immediately. Cruel to hold them at the pound for months only to be euthanized later
- Monitor the dog to see if progress has been made to improve behaviour.
- To uphold these laws with more seriousness in terms of dogs requiring muzzles.
- None
- Any vicious animal that kills another person's pet, or causes harm or death to a lawful person (ie not breaking into your house) should be humanely euthanized and tested for rabies. The owner should face heavy fines and prohibitions.
- City should make sure calls are responded to appropriately
- If a vicious animals injures another, owned animal, the owner of the vicious animal should be subjected to fines, scaled on the basis of the injury inflicted and costs to the other pet owner. Further, the owner of the vicious animal should be required to submit a plan on preventing future incidents
- Bylaw should enforce courses to people with animals in public with obvious behavioural and body language concerns and if not filled the animal should be siezed
- Review of the circumstances and consideration to dogs reacting out of fear and people/other animals not following the direction of the owner or cues from the dog. Exploring every avenue including surrender before euthanasia. Never implementing breed bans and encouraging education/obedience!
- Charging owners and leading to criminal charge if unmotivated attack
- Understanding. Owners always try their best to soothe and train their dogs to behave. Offer resources on how to take a dog who may have been previously abused

Consultation with neighbours

Fines for taking dog with known history to public areas: dog parks

- More education for pet owners, in particular with breeds with a genetic disposition to be more aggressive.
- Higher fines for those individuals who are not responsible pet owners. Each case would have to be assessed individually.
- Harsher punishments for owners who do not have the training to handle a dog and harsher punishments for owners whose neglect has contributed to the behavior of their dog.
- Very tough. Situations come up suddenly, there are no visual email markers to identify them. Cannot read their license...if they have one. Owners usually defensive. Can take a pic but how would you know where to begin? Need by-law enforcement officers on sight...
- A harder line on protecting innocent citizens
- To place conditions on the owners to get professional help for a period of six months or more. To place restrictions on where the owner is allowed to take their dog within the city limits.
- None. The current bylaw is fair and reasonable.
- I expect that animals deemed 'vicious' should be destroyed by the city of Calgary. No second chances. Potential too great for harm. Here is a link to recent dog attack on people <https://www.cbc.ca/news/canada/manitoba/3-people-injured-dog-attack-winnipeg-1.5481138>. FYI pit bulls banned in Winnipeg
- escalated fines for at large/chase/bite take aggression relinquishment/surrenders dog handling training for officers
consultation with neighbours
- Helping owners find help for their animal's behaviour, making sure the public is safe.
- Please DON'T initiate breed specific legislation or bans. This would be a step backwards. Maybe more public informative sessions to educate others about vicious animals.
- Vicious animals get no warning. They must be put down immediately. Out for a run with my 6 year old and a dog attacks and bites off a chunk of the mail lady's leg. That dog needs to be put down.
- Confiscation if the dog if the owner appears to not understand or wish to help the dog and learn proper responsible ownership.
- Fines do not correct a dog's behaviour, and a bylaw passed that requires the owner be required to take the dog to a professional dog trainer. Correcting a dog's behaviour & altering the dog would reduce complaints to animal control.
- The city of Calgary must ban pit bulls and rottweilers. These animals are bred for fighting and have attacked many children over the years in many parts of the world. The evidence is clear. Ontario has banned them and Calgary has received many of these dangerous animals. Why are we at risk?
- When an attack happened to me, from one owner with three large dogs in an off leash park, I was unable to see their license plate number so I don't know what the City would have done.
- Escalated fines for vicious animals, whether at large, chasing, lunging or biting.
If City issued the vicious dog license, they should be responsible for relinquishments & surrenders.

Neighbours should be consulted before issuing a vicious dog license.

Dog handling training for City Bylaw Officers.

- Follow up by an animal bylaw officer on how the dog and owner are doing. I believe that a "vicious" dog can generally be socialized if it's in the "right" hands for long enough. If it can't be socialized then having it put down is a reasonable option.
- If animal can be rehabilitated it gets that option. shoot the owner, not the dog. Also over age 18 does not ensure proper treatment/handling of the dog. Some criteria should be established as that alleged adult may be the problem and the dog maybe should not be returned if that is the case.
- City of Calgary should adopt the stringent penalties that City of Surrey adopted for dog bites. In June 2017, a dog next door attacked & seriously bit (4 bites) our adult daughter on our own property without provocation. The 3 fines were inadequate; the dog should be muzzled & a sign posted.
- Better understanding to explain to owners that just because you think your big dog is just playing and not being vicious, the little dog it is chasing out the park is scared stiff, you need to be able to recall.
- Protect us from vicious dogs by not allowing them. Ban pitbulls and any other type of dog that has a history of being vicious toward humans. One or 2 may be upset but hundreds of thousands will applaud your actions. Keep us safe. The risk from some species is too high.
- Prompt response. Dogs who bite should be retrained at the cost of the owner or put down.
- Separate licensing for vicious animals at much higher cost
- Create programs to educate publics. to provide a life animals deserve & regulate that the vicious prone animals must wear comfortable muzzle in public areas.
- Better assessments of the owner. I believe animal behavioural issues are created by a poor environment.
- Escalated fines for at large chase or bite; Take aggression relinquishments/surrenders; Dog handling training for officers; Consultation with neighbors of vicious animal - are they okay with that animal living next door given measures are put into place?
- The definition of vicious is too broad. Most every dog will 'chase' another dog in play. Damaging public and private property is also something that nearly every dog will do if left alone - this is a nuisance behavior, not a dangerous one. City should euthanize any dog declared vicious by the court
- I expect the City to have significant fines in place. I also expect that a dog that bites a person will be confiscated, checked for rabies, have an investigation into the details and euthanized or put on a restriction pending whether the dog was "egged" into biting or if "un-solicited" biting.
- Enforce restrictions on whereabouts.
- Since there are "no bad dogs only bad dog owners" animal transgressions causing bodily harm should be charged against the owner as if the owner had personally committed the offence. Current practices are a joke.

- People need to be punished. Dogs are not bad by nature, people make them that way. The owners need to be held more accountable. Even to the extent of possible jail time for multiple infractions. People must be in control of their dog at all times. Either through training or leashes.
- Mandatory owner/dog training. Must have solid 4-6 ft fence around entire property. Cannot use off-leash areas. Not sure City can this but: Cannot have children in the home. Cannot live near a school.
- The current determination of vicious animals by the court seems reasonable.

Urban Agriculture

Beekeeping

- To be informed, know what the rules are, and how to report violations.
- I am allergic to bees.
- Maybe a standard sign in the front yard that this property contains an apiary. That would provide warning for those who have bee sting allergies, in particular.
- no concerns
- Allow it!
- Some minimum standards in terms of location and number of bee hives on a property. Afford the owner the ability to site them in a way that makes sense, but not to overrun a property.
- Netting, proper hives. Limitations on bee types (ie: don't bring foreign, dangerous Bees to our ecosystem) Bees are important and I really believe this should be done. They're also not overly dangerous, so I don't think a ton needs to be done really.
- Lots of space and education. I feel it is responsible to notify the neighbours as well if you plan on having an apiary as so many are allergic to bee stings.
- Protected areas for bees (e.g. East Village project in 2019) and many many maaaany beautiful urban boulevards where bees would gather and mind their business.
- I am not concerned about urban bee keeping
- signage
- I have no issues with this at all. Just education is needed - To leave them alone and ensure people know their value. And maybe alert neighbours of what do to in the event of a swarm, not using poison in their gardens etc.
- Would love to see more of this.
- Contact information for the Beekeeper (in case of the odd swarming).
- More of it, I have zero safety concerns
- Training and rules
- Bees should not only be allowed but supported and encouraged. We particularly need to encourage a variety of bee species. Perhaps a bee keeping course or ticket should be encouraged but that could be costly and maybe not necessary.

- Bees are natural, even in Calgary. Though there should be a limit of beehives per backyard or space, we should not regulate beyond that.
- nothing - i think this is a great idea
- Yes, however the neighbours must formally consent first.
- Encourage as much bee keeping as possible
- 1 million % agree. Let's be innovative as a city and lead the rest of the world with our urban bee keeping.
- Does not bother me at all if doing it responsibly. Not sure about the folks with severe allergies but bees are around naturally and are good for gardens.
- Beekeepers should have to keep unexpired EpiPens handy and be trained in their use, and signage should be required.
- I am all for beekeeping, but there should be a limit on the number of hives allowed. Four should be more than adequate.
- Bee's are a natural part of the environment and ecosystem. I have no safety concerns with bees.
- Mandatory training for beekeepers offered by Bee Keeper Association. Mandatory licensing and inspections.
- The City needs to relax rules related to beekeeping.
- Anyone should be able to set up a bee hive.
- I'm not bothered by urban beekeeping. The practice does not make me feel unsafe.
- I don't think that any urban beekeeping should be on residential property or in the city limits on commercial property. If you want to have bees, then live on an acreage or farm.
- If keepers were to take a simple online permit test before being able to have them, I would be quite happy about this. It should state clearly the needs for the bees, as well as perhaps distance from neighbors and maybe something regarding potential deadly allergies for direct neighbors.
- Support but would like more regulation. People should have to register their hives with the city/pay a small fee, take/pass a test on basic essential beekeeping regs/practices. Limit number of hives per property. Setup disease surveillance program. Please work with Calgary&District Beekeepers Assoc
- A sign indicating there are large numbers of bees in the area.
- Opportunities to work / improve road rights of way or other public spaces. Knowledge on the differences between honey bees and native species.
- Signage
- flowers, plants and trees.
- nothing additional
- The homeowner MUST have a large yard AND plenty of trees,shrubs,flowers,water source.My neighbour has bees,but none of the trees/shrubs/flowers/water the bees are attracted to. So my fully landscaped yard is constantly full of bees to the point that I cannot enjoy my yard barefoot! Need site inspect
- Regulations, ethical treatment of bees, liscencing and education for keepers - in urban areas.
- Signage

- Bees are friends! They help plants grow and keep our green spaces lush. Absolutely. No protections needed in any capacity.
- I am pro urban beekeeping. Bees are vital to our ecosystem. We make our own yard as bee friendly as possible.
- As long as they can safely raise the bees I would be very happy to see Urban Beekeeping.
- I don't think Urban beekeeping should be allowed.
- I am all for urban beekeeping.
- Nothing
- As long as the bees are not posing a threat, great idea. WE are losing bee populations.
- I believe this should be encouraged and information and support available by the city.
- Nothing, but I'm concerned about those who attempt urban beekeeping without proper knowledge or training.
- It's great, should be encouraged to keep indigenous species. Make sure neighbours are aware in case they have severe allergies to beestings though.
- Should not be allowed. This is silly and unnecessary. Buy an acreage. This is so difficult to make reasonable for everyone surrounding the owners home. This kind of idea just causes wars between neighbours
- That your aware of hive is near by. see next door neighbour has them, you are aware not to disturb them. Including something similar to what the pigeon owners in urban setting have. an Urban Bee Keeping association.
- I think this is wonderful and should be an available option to those that would like to keep bees. Bees are in decline and are a necessary for gardening and fruits/vegetable growing.
- I don't think there is any issues with urban beekeeping for personal use. Commercial beekeeping within city limits should not be allowed.
- Licensing. Then public posting that bees are being considered at a residence. There may be someone living next door or quite nearby who is anaphylactic to beestings.
- I think this would be great for the environment! But because some people have allergies, I think if it's in a public area there should be signs, like for off-leash areas.
- Great for bee population which is suffering. question whether they would swarm and make neighbours lives miserable?? I think this should not be allowed in the city just outside city limits
- Bees are lovely and I have no concerns.
- Bees are clean and the city can determine what needs to be placed to keep the public safe. Having said that nothing is 100% safe.
- Appropriate signage for areas with bees, due to allergies (which can be severe). Special licensing.
- Limit on beehive numbers ie) 1 or 2 colonies
- a proper beehive enclosure

- must have a limit of (bee) hives so one doesn't have honey to sell at a commercial level and must keep in mind people with allergies to insects and stings..perhaps neighbors in a 1 blk radius should be given a letter in case anyone objects, otherwise bees are the best for agricultural & human life..
- Don't have a problem as long as they aren't bugging me while enjoying a meal outside. Bees seem to be better than wasps in regards to this.
- Nothing
- Let it happen. Make sure folks are licenced (formally educated in safety) for the safety and proper care of the bees, and for neighbours. If they're cared for and treated well, there should be little to no conflict about their presence.
- 1)Just let the neighbors know, then I could plant more flowers!
2)Maybe limit how many hives in any given community.
- No. Bees are harmless creatures and essential to the eco-system. Any opportunity to have beekeeping should be valid, even in urban areas.
- Nothing, bees are docile and friendly and will not sting you out of spite. Leave the hive alone and you wont get stung
- The honeybee has adapted to humans, and is generally non-threatening. Persons with allergies would have such anywhere, and are self-managing. Keep hives from being disturbed and everyone can be safe.
- It would be nice to have access to knowledge of where there are urban bee keepers. Incase we come across a swarm of bees. Nothing about safety for these wonderful creatures.
- should not be allowed in residential communities. Period.
- I think that as long as they are kept on private property, or in a controlled area, and are of a controlled population, I have no problem with urban beekeeping.
- Avoid areas where people could be easily stung. Limit number of hives on property. Issues with people that have bee allergies and safety.
- Maybe 1 box is enough ?
- Appropriate signage, and annual safety inspection. Example: a bee structure went up in East Village last summer, with a large sign to indicate what it was. Appropriate signage gives people with allergies or phobias the opportunity to avoid the area. A prominent sign on a fence for urban yard hives.
- I would want beekeepers to undergo a certificate course of basic beekeeping. I would also want to see properties with bees have some signage on front & back fences, so those who are dangerously allergic can be aware of what's present. A limit on max number of hives allowed.
- Notification of it in the area.
- I think this is a great idea. SAIT has bee hives, and this could really help the bee population. Plus, if people keep honey bees, the homemade honey would be a great by product. It would be a positive thing.
- Whole-heartedly support beekeeping. Owners should have proper training to care and maintain hives. Beekeepers should have enough space for bees to find food. Beekeepers should be able to request that areas adjacent to their property not be sprayed with chemicals.

- I feel completely safe, I just think that it should be monitored to ensure that the wild bees aren't faced with competition. This could be done by having a limit on hive density and registering hive locations. I have noticed that there are significantly more honeybees last summer than previously.
- True beekeeping improves plant pollination and honey harvest. But think of surrounding, anyone allergic to bees, is area large enough to accommodate hives without interfering with surrounding area to be able to enjoy their own outdoor living.
- Education. I grew up around beekeeping in Manitoba. They are a gentle species and really important to the ecosystem. Ppl need to understand they behave very differently from wasps, hornets and bumble bees. Training should be mandatory for new beekeepers to help them get it right.
- A limit on the size of the hive and mandatory beekeeping training. No hives within a certain distance of a school. Training for animal services officers in relocating a hive.
- I think warning signs should be posted to let people know of beekeeping if they are located in areas accessible to the public. I think urban beekeeping is a great idea.
- Nothing. They're just honeybees.
- I would love to see more bees in my yard and around the city as it means we have a healthy, thriving ecosystem. If bylaws around personal pesticide usage do not exist, I would like to see this be a focus to ensure the insects are protected.
- I don't want my neighbours to have an unreasonable number of beehives just because they can. Limit the number of hives a home is allowed to have.
- Disease prevention and safety for the hives.
- Ensure correct needs for bees
- No beekeeping.
- Basic rules about distance from neighbour yards and maintaining food/water supply so bees don't swarm neighbours. Current neighbours should get a veto if they have deadly allergy.
- This should not be allowed as the hive owners / beekeepers can not control the bees on others' property.
- Signs. So that those with allergies (not me) are forewarned.
- Should be restricted to the tops of buildings where there is less chance of them coming in contact with people and stinging them and killing them if they are allergic to them.
- As is seems to work fine. Maximum 4 hives per residential yard seems fine.
- I don't want to be inadvertently walking into a beehive. I do plant wildflowers for the bees. Set up hives in large green spaces where they can be given some space.
- People should have certification of some kind that proves that they know how to care for bees
- Unfortunately bees can sting and kill people and cannot be confined to a particular property by nature. Urban bee keeping should not be allowed. However the city should promote bee healthy gardening as they are critically important. However they can swarm and if you get a nest there is not city help
- Signage. That's about it!

- I believe they need to be registered and inspected by city or rep for diseases on a regular basis. And to check to make sure neighbors don't have allergies and limit hive numbers
- I would like to be warned if my neighbors have bees, but otherwise I am all for them. I think we should have them in more of our parks and natural areas
- I would want the person to be licensed to ensure they know what they are doing.
- Registering and if neighbours have severe allergies than no.
- I wish more people would do bee keeping they date super important to our agriculture
- That the persons doing this have knowledge are educated in the well being of these animals/wildlife. That there is some form of licensing and insurance should their wildlife hurt a citizen/neighbour due to their pet/wildlife under their care and ownership
- There needs to be restrictions on how many hives are allowed, what the bee houses look like and how close they are to your neighbours.
- I think there should be urban bee keeping to enhance our bee population as they are essential to pollination.
- Limits on how many per site and how many within a specific region/area of the city would be required
- We are having problems in summer time with bees allowed in back yard hives in Calgary, coming over to adjoining properties in large numbers, creating a safety hazard and a nuisance, for people trying to relax on their back yard decks and patios. I live in Ward 10 N.E. district of Calgary.
- Good idea! More of it.
- I feel safe with beekeeping. The bees need our help and we need bees
- I believe there needs to be guidelines to ensure the bees are able to exist safely for both the bees and neighbours. I don't know enough about what other cities are doing - there are lessons to be learned. Perhaps limiting the number or size of beekeeping facilities and proximity to doorways.
- I already feel safe around urban beekeeping.
- Love it!
- Simple signage, advising of bees if in an area accessible to others
- As long as the owners have the education and know how to do it, yes.
- I'm really scared of bees and wasps so I can't answer this objectively.
- Community associations should be more involved. Older neighbourhoods are great places for bees but more should be done to plant with biodiversity in mind and a lot more native plants. Native bees must also be promoted.
- Bees are limited to a small number and are not allowed to roam freely, must be securely kept
- People not have an informed opinion
- Depends if neighbors have bee allergies which can be severe
- An EpiPen in my pocket. I think urban bee keeping is fantastic and we need more of it. I feel totally safe with it even though I have a severe allergy to bees.

- - Limit hives on properties by land area (ex 1 per 250m<sup>2</sup>)
- - Require properties with bees to also have 50m<sup>2</sup> of flowering plants per hive, minimum. Otherwise domestic bees outcompete native types for scarce food.
- Otherwise no problems.
- Good for the environment
- Yes, there are no health concerns and are beneficial to the ecosystem.
- don't see a problem if the hive is properly maintained.
- Urban bees are not a safety hazard. People have the right to produce their own food.
- This is amazing! To feel safe I feel like it should be licensed in order to have bees in the city.
- None
- Minimum yard space and restricted number of hives
- Something informational regarding the presence of a beehive and information about how they are not dangerous.
- I don't have a problem with it
- Yes, bees are necessary to help pollinate plants and honey is an added benefit to the beekeeper. I can see no safety concerns as long as the bees are enclosed in a proper beehive.
- Yes, however I think it must be done ethically and closely monitored by responsible beekeepers
- Responsible ppl, constant care and upkeep
- Yes please but I think each person must have some type of proper training and certificates so everyone knows how to properly care for our bees.
- I would want to be sure that I will not be swarmed by bees when I am near the beekeeping boxes, that I won't get stung and my children will be safe
- Training and then license
- SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED...GET SERIOUS. GO LIVE IN THE COUNTRY IF YOU WANT TO FARM.
- Sufficient signage of beekeeping on a property.
- Distance to neighbors and where the bees may travel. My family (adults and children) have severe allergies to bees and I do not want an incredibly increased population near me and my yard.
- I think this needs to be monitored
- This would be great to see ! However, there does need to be inspection to make sure folks KNOW how to be bee keepers and how to keep the bees healthy and safe and away from causing problems for other citizens.
- I require nothing to feel safe. Bees exist in the environment regardless. As with all neighbour disputes or property concerns complaints can be made via existing processes.
- Definitely a positive thing. We need to save the bees! They aren't a danger to people unless provoked. Educate more on bee safety and raise more bees. Do field trips to bee farms so kids can see how not dangerous they are!
- as long as it doesn't hurt or interfere with neighbors it is acceptable

- Nothing could make me feel safe living near bees!! No guarantee of our safety. Way more allergic people than previous years. We are not educated/ trained to deal with bees, nor should we have to be! someone messes with the bees, anyone in proximity would be attacked! Do not belong in city!
- I am against it because bylaw really doesn't have any authority to deal with problem pet owners, so if someone isn't following guidelines it will be a problem for neighbours.
- With proper training course put on by professional beekeepers
- A permit system where education or certification is required for responsible beekeeping practice.
- I don't think bee keeping in urban areas is a good idea but I think people should plant more flowers and hang bee nesting tubes but no hives.
- I'm ok with it.
- Licensing, only after verification that the licensee is educated about beekeeping, aware of the requirements to safely manage the bees, and a limited number of hives -- not enough for a commercial business. Annual renewal, depending on neighbourhood impact.
- Not worried.
- I'm not allergic but I think that it would be courteous and prudent to have a public consultation process (sign out front notifying neighbors and requesting input).
- Education for the beekeepers, ensure they know how to control and care for their bees.
- If an urban beekeeper has certification and a license to prove they are competent to keep bees, then no problem.
- A cap on the number of bee hives.
- Education. Bees aren't the enemy. Ppl may try to harm them even tho they are pretty small and defenseless. Perhaps if ppl had a greater comprehension of their benefits they would welcome them a little more.
- Must be in a enclosed area with proper procedures in place to protect the public
- We should encourage this but there should be an application process and an opportunity for neighbours to voice concerns and oppose if there is a neighbour allergic to bee stings.
- I wouldn't feel unsafe. I would love to see more of this.
- Beekeeping should be allowed in public spaces as part of a community program.
- Nothing really. Luckily I'm no allergic to bee stings.
- Signage on property, licensing so if immediate neighbors have severe allergies they aren't allowed to operate
- Limits on the size of hives/number of bees
- I would like to see an educational component as part of beekeeping permit so that they are responsible beekeepers.
- We need bees, totally helps out the urban environment, my only concern is to educate that they don't sting unless provoked or close to the hive. homeowners should have signs visible close to the hives.
- Keep letting people do this

- Have a neighbour with has bees - no problem
- Yes provided they are not a nuisance to neighbouring properties
- Knowledge. Educated
- Responsible, knowledgeable bee havers who want to provide a healthy, stable environment to the bees and are concerned about the impacts that the climate, pests and possible negative interactions between the bees and the public.
- Yes, but regulate where beekeeping is happening within the city/city area.
- Open area and warning signs
- The city is no place to raise bees where our homes are very close together. Please keep your bee keeping dreams to an acreage.
- Nothing, I feel bees are a part of a neighbourhood
- Important but don't want any of it my neighbours
- Regulations on size of operations, licensing only to those who show knowledge or capability to bee-keep. Inspections of all properties pre and post licensing.
- Yes, provided they reach out to the provincial beekeepers routinely to keep the hives healthy. Also, there should be an ideal distance away that a hive must be placed when there is already an existing hive in the neighborhood (to prevent territorial disputes).
- Ensure that no one will get stung - not sure how this is possible unless someone has a lot of land.
- Not dangerous to humans nearby.
- Bees don't stay in the bee keeper's yard. It hinders other peoples right to enjoy their own yards.
- Licensing.

- Space for proper bee flight patterns without effecting others enjoyment of their property.
- Nothing
- Should be allowed unless someone residing close by is allergic. Bees generally don't sting and are vital for our ecosystem
- Limited numbers and distance from dwelling and yard areas
- That the bees are secured and no concern for bee swarming or increased bees in my outdoor living areas. Very concerning for someone with anaphylactic bee sting allergies. Small Manageable numbers of beekeeping areas might be ok.
- Not opposed but should have to get permission from neighbors as people like my mother are deathly allergic to bees and might be opposed to them.
- Hives should be no less than than 12 feet from any property line
- Peoples backyards for beekeeping is fine. No issues.
- Only small colonies and neighbours must agree as bees can be troubkesome
- Heck yes! There are wonderful companies that the city could partner with to get more people into bee keeping. A small sign to alert people there is a hive (for people who are allergic) is all that's needed
- Yes! Please let us have bees in our back yard!
- Oxygen
- The city should be encouraging as many bees as possible. Responsible ownership is important but no regulations necessary.
- Needs to be well signed with appropriate equipment. Epi pens should be on the premisis
- That the owner has gone through a training course and gets a license so we know they are taking care of the bees properly. I do not think they are a danger if they are properly taken care of.
- Nothing... People should keep bees if they want.

- I believe it should be allowed. Give one hive / x number of sq m of property.
- More flowers planted for the city bee keepers. A system in place so those who are afraid of bees know their neighbours have them.
- Nothing it will be AOK. Maybe you could develop or borrow existing guides for homeowners who wish to have bees
- No. Just No.
Too many citizens with anaphylactic allergies, and the fact that sometimes, and urban ""kept hive"" will relocate into someone's walls (As happened to the home next door to my parents recently) - unless regulations can be adjusted to allow extermination under such circumstances.
- Nothing as bees are reasonably passive. The hive should be kept on the owner's property and a reasonable distance from public walk ways. I've yet to see a hive in a location that concerned me. I like local beekeepers as my fruit trees, garden and flowers do much better because of them.
- I feel safe knowing there are beekeepers near me. Let nature take it's course.
- as long as the bees are not bothering be at my house, I'm fine with that.
- Great idea but limits
- Absolutely keep the bees, anything that encourages them to survive and to help them, lets do it.
- Would never be safe as highly allergic. Since it's not possible to confine bees not sure how you fix this
- Signage for those who have allergies so they can avoid the area/be aware.
- I don't have any concerns and think it should be encouraged.
- Signage, continual monitoring and training for those who want to keep bees to ensure they are doing what's right for the animals. Application (much like requests for development) has to go to all neighbours AND if they have true allergies THAT has to be verified before it can be denied or ok'd.
- Just limiting size of hive that accommodates the property. Sign that says that bees are in the property but they will not attack unless provoked or hive is threatened.
- Bees are naturally occurring in most urban areas, if you want to keep a hive or two for personal uses, or potentially selling then uou should be providing adequate water, and food sources in your yard (ie: gardens of all types) as well to supply them with what they need.
- Publicize beehive locations within communities so allergic people are aware and can avoid them.
- Limit on hives within a certain area; registration with a board; notices available that a hive is being kept in the area
- The surrounding neighbors should be informed, incase of allergies
- This needs to be limited to a certain number of hives, and how big each hive can be. Perhaps a small, medium and large categories. BUT... for medium and large you would have to petition your neighbors to x radius for the various sizes of hives (for allergies)
- Love this idea.
- A warning of the bee keeping area before I get near.
- Allergy issues present trouble unless safety can be guaranteed.
- Nothing wrong with it

- I need nothing to feel safe, This must be allowed.
- Not in city limits.
- I have no concerns, and would welcome beekeeping neighbours.
- I am absolutely for it, the bees are on the verge of going extinct and need all the help they can get I think encouraging beekeeping encourages bees to thrive
- It's so expensive to live here and people need to be able to feed their families. I know I do. I am 100% behind people being able to use their land for all types of food.
- Big supporter of urban beekeeping but maybe limit the amount of bees a single household can own so neighbors aren't dealing with swarms.
- Unsure
- As long as kept to honeybees that are not African or from other continents
- unless we are encouraging habitat for native bees we should not have beekeeping on urban properties unless they are of sufficient size to minimize impact on neighbors. need special licensing
- Ok as long as the individual has proper liability insurance and does not infringe on the safety or comfort of their neighbours.
- As a person with a severe, potentially life-threatening allergy to bee stings, I do not, under any circumstances, want them moving close to my yard. I have many flowers and enjoy my backyard time immensely and would no longer be able to do this.
- Fencing to protect hive and keep humans away, unless they want to come closer. Not in an open yard for children to get at.
- Being bothered by bees already from a hive a distance away, they should not be allowed
- I would need to know what knowledge/experience is required in order for a person to legally be allowed to keep bees in their yard. Have to admit this would be scary to live beside someone keeping bees especially if I had small children.
- Shouldn't be allowed.
- Absolutely a win. Honey bees are not aggressive, but if someone has hives in their yard, then a sign advising people passing by should be required.
- Anyone whom has taken the time to educate them selves (taken a course?) should be able to bee keep. Bees are not dangerous and should be encouraged in any way possible.
- On owned property of not less than 1 acre.
- Only if neighbors within 5 or 6 home radius are OK with it. Allergies???
- A knowledgeable beekeeper and respect from neighbours.
- Nothing, I have no problems with bees in the city
- I think this should be regulated.
- I have no issues feeling safe with this.
- Should not be allowed. I have an allergy to bees. Should I have to stay indoors if my neighbour decides to keep bees?

- DO NOT ALLOW. If someone wants to raise bees they can move to a rural area
- Limit in number of hives and distance from neighbours, especially in suburban settings.
- Locations where the hives will not be disturbed/vandalized. Maybe a notice stating there are be hives in the area?
- Hives should be set back from the property line a certain distance, and only be allowed in back yards. The permitting process should permit immediate neighbors to veto a permit application in case of allergies.
- Signage
- Bees should not be kept close to playgrounds or schoolyards. Mostly because children can be unpredictable.
- i believe this is beneficial to help the world population of bees and I do not see any negative impacts
- A notice posted. We need to encourage Urban Beekeeping it is simple and safe and very necessary.
- More bees! We need them!
- 5+ foot fence between our backyards if the hive is within 5 feet of the shared fence. I need to be informed that my neighbour is keeping bees. I need to be informed of bee behavior/safety. If a direct neighbor is anaphylactic, no bees kept at adjacent houses.
- With consultation of neighbours. However, more of this is needed and appreciated. Bee's are the basis of all agriculture and need to be well maintained.
- I am not opposed to this if it does not have negative impacts on neighbors.
- I don't see a problem with beekeeping.
- Responsible ownership. Precautions put in place, to ensure those allergic to bee stings are not put at risk.
- Training course/certification. But absolutely allowed
- Nothing. Bees will leave you alone if you leave them alone
- Only in community gardens where there is a lot of space.
- I think this is a fantastic idea, but anyone who wants to do this should have some type of training/knowledge of the practice. Not sure what that entails though.
- The people caring for the bees have knowledge and expertise in the matter. I am all for people having bees in the city as our bees in general are in danger, but just want to ensure they know what they are doing and are active in being responsible for their bees.
- Yes allow it. We need more bees and more pollinator gardens. Give incentives to people and developers to plant bee friendly gardens rather than unsustainable lawns.
- Yes!!!!
- Nothing. Bees exist without backyard hives.
- Should not be allowed.

- Sure. Bees are great
- I am in favour of beekeeping
- Regulations on the number of hives permitted. Otherwise the idea is a good one.
- Absolutely not as its not fair for neighbors to have higher than average number of bees on a property
- nothing. Bees are not an aggressive insect. More public education would help reduce the publics misconception of bee and other polinators
- Limit to number and size of hives on a property. Training for individuals looking to establish hives on property.
- Yes! The bees need our help.
- Signage to warn allergy sufferers.
- Regular inspection of hives to prevent spread of diseases to other bees, prevent owners from abandoning hives, letting bees starve. Strict limits on number of hives.
- Usually development permits require feedback from the locals which I am concerned will be uneducated and unfair. My only concern has ever been those with sever allergies. I have no idea how to tackle that other than notifications?
- I would like to be aware that it's happening and that the people doing it have undergone some type of training.
- Only on rooftops of skyscrapers, or homes backing fish creek (homes that are not too close to others where the bees have open areas to enjoy)
- I don't need anything. I like the idea of beekeepers needing to be in good standing of a beekeepers association of sorts and perhaps having completed a training.
- Irban beekeeping is safe
- Education! Online information, public seminars, outreach programs. Beekeeping is fantastic and a wonderful addition to any urban space.
- Neighbors need to be notified. If one has an allergy, then this should not be allowed. Also should be mandated to join the local bee keeping club to ensure that the populations are kept healthy.
- Yay bees.
- A strict limit based upon the size of the property. While honey bees are not aggressive, there are a significant number of people who have an allergic reaction.
- Nothing, bees create a positive urban environment.
- Should be licensed and neighbours within a 5 house radius should be made aware.
- No city backyard bee keeping !!! There are places called farms for that!!
- I don't see a downside with beekeeping. There will be people who are allergic, but that goes for everything. The benefit society gains from having more bees should take precedence.

- Bees are reasonably safe - property setbacks, and enclosure in a private / fenced area of the property would ensure that the hive is not accidentally disturbed.
- I don't know enough about Beekeeping however I would imagine if a Neighbour had anaphylactic responses to a bee sting they wouldn't want someone with bees next door ;)
- Beekeeping is welcome in urban settings. No restrictions or bylaws needed. Use existing bylaws for nuisance issues
- Must be in back yard that is septated by a fence with gate
- Urban beekeeping should be encouraged by the city and regulated only insofar as regulation is necessary for the safety of Calgarians and their bees. Bees should be explicitly allowed on rented property.
- Signage. The owner should have completed some kind of training for care and keeping of the bees themselves.
- Urban apiaries can only be had by licensed people who have undergone a course and passed a test for proper bee and hive care. Licenses should need renewal every few years with an updated test. There should be signage around the area for the public. Bee species should be restricted to native species.
- I fully support allowing bee keeping, however I can see how they can be a nuisance. This is a tricky one, allergies, stings etc. I do see the benefits outweigh the negatives.
- That the beekeeper(s) can prove to have reasonable knowledge of the practice and controlling the swarm
- Allowed in any fenced back yard, with neighbour consent.
- Honey bees can sting, notwithstanding what beekeepers may say. Their venom can be dangerous to people with allergies. Bees do not stay within an owners property - they travel and can disrupt the enjoyment of outside amenities. Neighbour consent should be mandatory. Number of hives should be limited.
- Nothing there are bees everywhere.
- There should be a limit on the number of hives allowed per yard, but there should be no prohibitions on having them. They're a safe and clean way of providing food for the family.
- Licensing and regulations to sizing and noise.
- I have no issues with urban beekeeping continuing as it is, with no bylaws needed.
- No problem just not near me as my girlfriend hates bees.
- If the bees are kept appropriately and aren't a nuisance, why not?
- Only safe, North American bee species would be allowed (ie bumble bee and honey bee). There are invasive, aggressive bees that wipe out local populations and attack humans/animals without provocation - those must be strictly prohibited. Size of colony should also be a factor.
- Limit on number of hives. Setbacks from neighbouring properties. Requirements for beekeepers to be educated in how to keep bees.
- In favour. Bee keeping is an expensive investment and beekeepers do not risk that investment by compromising health/safety. Bee keepers need protection from vandalism.

- Not permitted in densely populated areas. Others have a right to enjoy spending time in their yards without being surrounded by bees.
- No concern. They are not threatening in any way.
- Nothing, I would actively encourage beekeeping.
- If bees aren't native to the area, they will have a negative impact on native bees. Have we as a society learned nothing about introducing foreign species into the ecosystem?
- Common sense
- No!! I would definitely not want to live next door to a beekeeper! Dangerous for everyone, children and pets included! This is a terrible idea!!
- Yes, but I think there should be permits given in order to keep and obtain such creatures. I think residents should have to apply for the permit. Applications should include home checks and husbandry exams.
- Ensure that beekeeping does not interfere with the neighbours' enjoyment of their own property.
- In order for me to feel reasonably safe in areas where there is urban beekeeping, I would require there to be rules and regulations. Beekeepers should be licensed, occupy at least half-an-acre of land, and be required to rule out the possibility of neighbors having be allergies.
- Must keep the hives locked off at a safe distance in a way that bees and can get in and out easily but curious children cannot get in and potentially aggravate a hive and get injured. Requirement to notify neighbors and provide safety information. Keep epi-pen on hand.
- Appropriate care of the animals and signage on the property indicating there are hives present
- Limit number of hives. Homeowners with yards.
- A minimum distance from a residential building/neighbor
- I don't need anything. Bees in the area reduces wasps, yellow jackets and other nuisance pests.
- Yes. But there should be some sort of license or course required.
- Everyone is safe from bees, they're just working away making life better for everyone.
- Bees should have good sources of water in their beeyards, and be well maintained to prevent the spread of disease.
Responsible beekeepers are always welcome in my community
- I like the idea, bees are relatively harmless and provide vital pollination services. However, there should be some guidelines to the size of your property and where they are stored to be considerate of neighbors.
- nothing
- none
- Nothing.
- I have no safety concerns and would love to see more urban beekeeping.
- Guidelines on safe placement and limits on density of hives.
- Limit on hives, but otherwise a great thing

- Maybe a fence so that I cannot go close enough to the hive to be considered a threat? I think that people that do urban beekeeping might have a better idea of what is necessary. Overall I am very supportive of the idea of having urban beekeeping in Calgary. I think it is a great idea!
- I would not want any beekeeping done around my home unless I would be guaranteed they would not be a danger to us or our animals in my own yard
- Very good, should be encouraged and the city should give out materials for people to do it.
- A licence for the beekeeper for number of hives allowed appropriate for the size of the home lot. Also requiring knowledge of beekeeping.
- Limit the number of hives
- I suppose a limit on the number of hives would be necessary and expectations for keepers. Ensure the animals are properly and humane cared for.
- Education requirement for beekeepers
- A reasonable limit on number of hives (2? 3? I don't know what's appropriate).
- I have no experience with beekeeping, but I might be interested because there is a great need for pollinators, particularly in urban areas. I would hope the city would consult with experienced beekeepers to come up with regulations regarding urban beekeeping
- Nothing - I think this should be encouraged
- An annual license to ensure owners are being responsible
- I believe urban beekeeping is important to have in the city. For pollinating, and local urban gardening.
- sure by-laws about how many hives... but, sure...
- I have no issue with urban beekeeping
- city inspector to assure safe handling
- Nothing I'd be fine with bees in a neighbor's backyard no one in our household is allergic
- That they have a big enough yard so the bees aren't bothering neighbors too much.
- If kept to one hive, fine. In our neighborhood there is one property that has three. We cannot walk into our yard without the undulation of bees to enjoy it - they dont care of them. Concern is the people I know who have lethal allergies. A property who has a hive should really post a warning.
- Defined rules for beekeeping. I think as long as the owner (operating) of the beekeeping, whether it is in a backyard or on a building rooftop, is aware of the rules and responsibly taking care of their bees.
- Not comfortable on small lots or multi family housing. I don't want bees next door I'm allergic to the sting
- Bees are a natural part of our lives and are very useful to our gardens. Leave them alone and, if people want bee hives, no problem.
- This makes sense. However before a hive or hives are put in place people in the vicinity should be notified. If individuals proximal to a hive are prone to allergic reactions to stings then the hive / hives should not be put in place.
- Yes - love it - great idea.

- Nothing.
- Signs
- No problem as long as the beekeeper is willing to look after a swarm. Bees are good for the environment.
- I am in favour of urban beekeeping as it greatly helps with pollination. There should be a reasonable limit placed on the number of hives allowed within a given area. Where applicable, consent of neighbours should be required.
- Limiting hives. Honey bees are not easily provoked, but for the well being of the bees, a limit of 2 hives
- Just a permit. This is beneficial to the entire ecosystem
- Nothing aside from some way to manage it so that owners are encouraged to learn and connect with best practice urban beekeepers. This is a great idea! We need bees! Maybe community gardens could also keep bees.
- Maybe a warning sign if hives are within a certain distance of public areas
- Limit to number of hives and individuals have taking a bee keeping course. Notifying neighbours of hive placement and being responsible for swarms.
- yes
- I'd like to see the caregiver take a course on safe bee keeping so the bees don't get or spread diseases They are a lot of work but I love the idea
- should not inconvenience their neighbours - safety (allergies), noise and/or smell
- Great idea, but with native bee species. Requirements for good location choices e.g. not directly adjacent to a schoolyard perhaps. Perhaps signage at a beehive location to alert passerby's of the presence of the bees
- Nothing, bees are not a safety issue and beekeeping should be encouraged. Bee populations are declining, and these most important pollinators need to be protected, and beekeeping is one way to help this crucially important species.
- Anyone who applies has permission from neighbours, and takes into consideration possible allergy reactions from stings.
- There should be enough space for the bees so that neighbours are not affected or potentially stung.
- I don't have a concern
- Beekeepers should skillfully manage their hives and ensure they don't negatively impact the surroundings.
- Love it! City can do more to understand what it means to be "safe". More rooftop urban hives in apartments, allow homes to have an amount deemed reasonable by a beekeeper
- There should be signs letting people know they are in the area. And it should be first come first served. So that there is a limit per certain area.
- Fenced area and signage to keep people from disturbing area. Otherwise have no issues with urban beekeeping and would be a big supporter of it.

- I am strongly in favour of bee keeping. The hives should be within the owners yard but bees are of great benefit and very low risk.
- Urban beekeepers should require a license, a large private area that is outdoors, and maybe even have signs up so people with allergies can be aware. I think this is could have a lot of potential to increase the bee population and want to see this happen.
- NO! It is just an easy way for ppl to make money and Beekeeping is a huge detriment to wild bee populations. EDUCATE YOURSELVES!
- Education and by law codes
- Bees are fantastic, needed and occur naturally throughout the city. Hence, people should also be allowed and encouraged to have them.
- Nothing. There are bees all around anyway.
- hives in fenced area to keep them from being vandalized or targeted by wildlife, warning sign of hive in area (for people who may be allergic). May need to get approval of immediate neighbors.
- None
- Ensure that any hives are not in an area that could be easily or accidentally accessed by the public. This would work to protect both the people and the bees.
- Policies and standards about bee hive placement and maintenance. Also licensing.
- Education for beekeepers and neighbours.
- Restrictions on the number of bees and hives a single residence may have. No over-wintering of larger bee farms. Permits should be registered and available to access for anyone moving to the neighborhood so they are aware of the potential higher bee population if there was medical concerns.
- Nothing. I think it's a great idea, and there should be no/minimal restrictions on it.
- Nothing. Beekeeping is safe and should be allowed under all circumstances. Mason bees, for example, are harmless and non stinging. I would love to have a small honeybee colony.
- This is fine as long as the number of hives is kept to a small number. One to three hives.
- Yes
- Yes
- I think the number of hives must be limited depending on the lot size.
- No objection
- Minimum yard size of 50 by 100 to have bees and beekeeping area can not be withing 15 feet of neighboring fences.
- I believe any family dwelling should be able keep neeing, as long they are properly cared for.
- Signage - for people with allergies to be able to choose whether or not to approach. Yes, there are natural beehives, but these numbers are greater, and potentially in many houses on a block.
- Yes! Max. hive limit in urban areas.
- opposed
- Not concerned.

- Beekeeping should be allowed but the keeper should have some appropriate training, that includes overwintering, proper care, proper handling of hive. Perhaps a permit/license would be required. Proper signage posted, so citizens are aware of the hives being present. If honey is sold, need a license.
- I feel perfectly safe and want to see more urban bee keeping. Information and classes on bee care could help those who want to get into bee keeping have success with healthy happy bees
- Bees are so easy to keep, specially if you reside near parks, they help pollinate, and give back honey. I would like the idea for anyone thinking about having 1 or 2 beehives must complete a compulsory educational tutorial with a test, and be register with the city.
- Limit to One Hive
Ensure Owners understand the responsibilities (ie. putting water out for bees, so they don't go to other yards to obtain and become nuisances (i live next to house with 3 hives where this occurs. are in our grass/on hoses)
Occasional compliance checks, and penalties if not comply
- Nothing. Let the bees do what they do and they won't bother you. Educate people.
- Love bees! More flowers for the bees I guess
- Signs, warnings and general awareness.
maybe the beekeeper should be notifying the neighbours.
- Nothing, that seems pretty safe. Maybe regulations of number of colonies per square foot of personal property.
- Maybe a sign, but then again any kind of worker bee is relatively harmless. We have a ton of mason bees living in an old wood chopping block in our back yard in Mahogany. They should be around in the spring to help with everything, we sat right beside it in late summer watching them.
- Signage and instructions for how to stay safe. I think given the decline in the bee population we should encourage bee keeping in low density areas.
- I think this would be a good idea, to help the bee population. I'm ok with allowing this, as long as the correct infrastructure is present to house them.
- Yes, for sure!
- Education and planning for swarmings.
- Lot size/space requirements for a healthy hive.
- Not in new communities with small lots, there is the strong potential for conflict.
- Nothing, Urban beekeeping is very safe.
- Quantity. Too much, no longer for consumption purposes.
- Beekeeper must take a recognized course and pay for city inspection of their setup to ensure neighbours safety
- Proper home for the bees
- Should be encouraged.
- Brother is highly allergic and cannot use yard at all as covered in bees from neighbour hives. Unfair to neighbours to restrict their personal space. Invasion of personal space. Home owner.

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- I'm fine with bees. In fact, I like them pollinating flowers. I don't feel unsafe.
- That they are properly housed on the owners property
- Bees are critically important and should be encouraged. Maybe some way of letting people know where bees are would be good to help people with allergies but no place is completely bee-free. Maybe have a rule where new beekeeping can't be started if anyone with an allergy lives in a small radius
- Hives should be well out of the way so people don't get stung.
- This should be encourage. I don't understand who people would feel unsafe around urban bees.
- Could be kept in safe areas like patio roofs of tall building or open private spaces
- Knowledge that the bees are in an appropriate hive/house. Some limits preventing overcrowding. i.e not more than 2 hives in a given area. Please refer to experts in the field.
- minimise impact on native bee species or allow only native bees, make sure neighbours aren't allergic to bees, minimise possibility of swarming, make sure bee keeper is knowledgeable and educated and accountable.
- More research is needed. Non-native species (honeybees) are invasive and can lead to less plant diversity as they are not as good as pollinating as native (non-honey) bees.
- If my neighbour is keeping bees, I'd want to be sure that there would not be more bees in my yard than if my neighbour was not keeping bees
- I'm good with urban beekeeping - only thing would be a process to deal with complaints if there was an extreme issue
- Limits on how many hives are in a certain area.
- This should be encouraged.
- I theoretically support the practice, but can understand how issues could arise or neighbours may have concerns. Is this something that could be solved by following a process like the Dev Permit process, where you apply, meet certain conditions, and neighbours can give feedback?
- Nothing. Honey bees are generally harmless- they rarely sting.
- Proper bee shelters, regular inspections, registration for urban beekeepers
- That the practice is properly regulated. Beekeeping should be encouraged because of the importance of bees to the environment.
- Nothing, bees are great and we need more of them! As long as the hive is maintained and the bees don't outgrow it, there shouldn't be a need for intervention unless they swarm. All solvable problems.
- No. Calgary's back yards are far too close together. A lot of folks have bee allergies
- Nothing
- Sure we need bees
- Urban Beekeeping should continue to be permitted/unregulated. Ideally proper education (website/workshops) avail for good husbandry/responsible pet owners/ neighbours. Due to possible allergen/reactions, signage might be helpful to alert those with sensitivities to keep away/be cautious.
- -great idea. Proper bee boxes are very safe

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

-licences and inspections required

- Maybe set limits of how many boxes per area. Bigger areas or yards vs small yards. Bees need space and who wants to deal with bees and mosquitos when sitting outside?!
- signage and perhaps fences if close to areas where there may be a lot of children
- I would plant flowers for them
- Rules to ensure safety
- Nothing, bees are not vicious or purposely attack anyone.
- I am fine with beekeeping. It does not seem to be an issue but it grows and becomes a problem then we likely need some regulation around bee keeper training, clubs, where the honey is sold, licensing etc...
- Information, protection of the right to grow one's own food, while maintaining reasonable standards and regulations around it. Public information, helping the uniformed public understand beekeeping better and actively supporting community members who are keeping bees responsibly.
- Yes!! great idea
- Very cool. I have a colleague that is doing that in Bridgeland and they are working well!
- The urban beekeeper should have adequate space so the hives are out of sight and sound of neighbours so as not to disturb. Neighbours should be informed, as some people are deathly allergic. Bees don't sting out of the blue, but accidents happen and we have right to be prepared of additional risk.
- My husband is allergic to bee stings. This is an unacceptable risk to his healy
- A sign or notification that there may be a higher density of bees
- The bees should be in an isolated area away from other homes.
- My concern is more for the safety of the animals. How do we ensure hives are properly set up and maintained? Apply for licence with proof of education and or affiliation? Much like what is currently expected with pigeons?
- Reasonable limits on number of hives
- Warning signs as bees can cause allergic reactions and also just bad stings. Disagree with allowing in city
- A limited number of hives i'e not the whole backyard filled. The owner should have done a bee keeping course.
- Nothing. Pollinators are essential to our food supply and a balanced ecosystem.
- I have no issues with urban beekeeping and do not feel this should be regulated in any way.
- Nothing can fix this ridiculous notion. This should be banned. It has no place in an urban environment.
- No. Native bees are already at risk due to climate change and studies show that urban areas are biodiversity sinks for these wild bees. Introducing pollinator livestock such as honey bees is detrimental to urban biodiversity through loss of food, transmission of diseases and parasites.
- No concerns as long as the bees and beehives are being cared for and maintained.
- Great idea. We need more bees.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- have not had a problem and there are several beekeepers in my area.
- Proper signage so I can avoid disturbing them.
- Don't try to pick up bees? Bees are usually docile insects and don't attack unless provoked. I'd be thrilled if my neighbours kept bees!
- Placement away from heavily trafficked areas and yard entrance/exits.
- Being allergic to bee stings, I would want the opportunity to oppose bee keeping near my home or at least be notified that it was going to be established nearby. I don't object to bee keeping, but want to be informed.
- As long as safety protocols are met, I'm fine with safe beekeeping.
- I think this is great! As long as it is kept to a decent number like one or two hives per household. Also, initiatives for native bees should be paired as they need help too.
- I don't feel as if anything is needed in place to feel reasonable safe.
- Those who would like to beekeep must follow a regulation similar to businesses - they must publicly announce/put up a sign that says they intend to beekeep and the city must allow and recognize if community members vote no as bees leave the property.
- Beekeeping should not be allowed in the city. Those living close to the beehives may not enjoy the increased number of bees in the area.
- All the beekeepers I have met are very careful and respectful. Unless humans or pets in danger should be minimal interference
- Not within City limits
- I'm all for bee keeping. Bees don't sting unless provoked, so they don't pose a safety concern. I've been a gardener for over 40 years and am often surrounded by bees. I've only been stung once, and it was my fault. Education in Kindergarten to Grade 3 would be helpful.
- Someone has received basic training before taking care of the bees
- Maybe just some signs so people who are allergic can avoid the area?
- nothing, bees aren't a threat.
- Nothing. I feel safe wherever they are placed.
- I'm ok with that. Maybe consider an evaluation of the impacts on the ecosystem as a whole.
- No issue with this, however I believe there needs to be a limit on the amount of bees in each backyard. However overall, I think this is a great idea for every single neighbourhood in Calgary.
- If bees are not bothered, they are 100% safe. I have no issues with urban beekeeping. As a city we should be promoting every possible way to support bees.
- Notices and signage in areas where there us beekeeping. City to issue permits to all beekeepers.
- The bees should be kept safe and ensure they are not left in areas the public can access thrm
- I'd like to see signs to notify the public of the presence of bee hives, just for those with allergies. Otherwise, great idea.
- I think there should be restrictions on the amount of hives and location on their property
- Absolutely this should be encouraged. In a time when bees are in decline we should be thinking about how to reverse and protect such an important part of our ecosystem. I do feel that there should be a system of basic education around this so that new bee keepers aren't contributing to the problem.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Fine as long as it is in appropriate areas (not near playgrounds).
- Not unless it's on an acreage but not in residential backyards. Not in my neighborhood.
- Nothing
- Nothing. We NEED more bees. Obviously I wouldn't want a hive right beside my front door. They need space but we need urban beekeeping.
- How many bees? Is this like 10 bees or 100 bees? I would be very concerned if it's more than a single natural hive location would have in the wild. No one wants to live near a concentrated population of bees. Small populations would be ok. I had a ton of bees on my flowers last summer naturally.
- Owners part of a recognised beekeeping club. Perhaps a website where neighbors can see where beehives are located. Signs in the neighborhoods advising people of bees in case of allergies
- to be a long distance away. My Husband is allergic and has already been hospitalized.
- I am totally for urban beenkerping
- This could be encouraged and expanded to promote urban survival and propogation. All bees, including native and honeybees are vulnerable to extinction and are essential for our agriculture and recreation (e.g., keeping our parks and 'urban' ecosystems intact)
- I don't have an issue with this, however I am petrified of bees and would not them next door to me. So maybe neighbor approval?
- Maybe a sign up saying bee hives present I think they are perfectly fine to have
- Nothing, it should be encouraged
- Obviously there are concerns, especially near condensed housing or when your neighbour has bees and you/your child is deathly allergic. Could you look at restaurants with garden rooftops and community gardens allowing beekeeping in those areas inc designated, permitted farms, the zoo & heritage park
- Urban beekeeping should require a license and permits in place where people will have consulted with neighbours. A concentration of bees in an area could be a health hazard for some with allergies
- I think there definitely should be laws in place so this doesn't cause problems for neighbors. More people want to do this now and it should have rules to follow.
- Neighbours without neonic pesticides.
- Bees are not aggressive. Lol I have never felt unsafe in areas with bees, there are bees everywhere.
- Great idea. I have wondered about one for my yard as well.
- Yes we need more bees considering how integral they are to our ecosystem and because they're dying off.
But they should only be held in a house with an area big area or just a big area where it will not cause discomfort to the owner's surroundings.
- Great idea, bees are necessary for pollination, however people wishing to keep bees should be be educated on the proper care and harvesting the honey.

- I'm not allergic to bees so I have no concerns.
- 100% but they should be bee types that dont have Queens like Mason Bees.
If citizens are wanting to make honey you would need to ensure people around dont have major allergies to bees somehow as they would be protecting the queen.
- The current policy of registering provincially is effective and safe. I have kept bees in my yard in Calgary. Our neighbours responded positively and were very curious about our bees.
- Limit of two hives per property
- Don't want to get stung if living near a city beekeeper. Also not crazy about bees being used like livestock... just let them do what they do naturally, not keep them as a commodity.
- Nothing
- Nothing. This should be allowed.
- Just to know they are there so I can inform any friends with allergies. We need more bees in the city and world.
- No concerns, simply space around the hives themselves
- This should only be allowed on larger properties, so they can ensure that the hive is well back from buildings. It should require a license and the neighborhood should be checked first to ensure that nobody nearby had a fatal sting allergy.
- The more the merrier.
- This is a good idea as bees are in steep decline.
- requirment for training for those keeping bees. Possibly limits on number of beehives in a block? (I don't know enough about how far bees travel to know). I think they would possibly benefit my garden!
- Allowing people to bee keepers if they've taken a course.
- New communities maybe but otherwise no reason for it!!
- Education before being able to proceed.
- Posted knowledge of registered hives so house purchasing decisions can be made. Both from a safety perspective and to avoid creating a garden devoted to saving native pollinators and having the garden instead dominated by some dolt's new pet bees.
- Little or no regulation should be added. At best a permit, with education course/training but limits on who or where bees can be kept.
- this one i'm a bit on the fence. ecologically bees are important. but bees have the potential to sting people or other animals, if you keep tons of them around. and there's no real way to control them. so i probably would be against urban bee keeping unless they can be contained and controlled
- Responsible individuals who know what they are doing. Should require a permit/course to verify knowledge base.
- Nothing much, bees are naturally in this area, and are a normal part of life. Should be required to notify direct neighbors, in case of severe allergies having a large population very close would not be ideal for those individuals.

- One hive per property, oversight by a master beekeeper, yearly checks for health (for mites, fungal or bacterial infections, as well as husbandry and overall health), winter maintenance requirements
- Warning signs would be nice.
- Oversight to see that the bees are being handled in a way that is appropriate for their health & that no problems are being caused for the community.
- Definitely for it
They keep wasps away and are good for pollination. Older areas would be better suited for this given that they have larger properties.
- Nothing - Urban bee keeping is harmless and valuable to everyone.
- Limit the number of hives allowed per square kilometer
- People should be required to take an accredited bee keeping course prior to setting up a hive.
- I have no issue with beekeeping. They're good for the environment and populations are dwindling
- As long as the number allowed per household is regulated, bees are an important part of the ecosystem and bee farming is very beneficial.
- Not within city limits.
- Nothing! Bees are wonderful, non aggressive and welcome addition to my gardens all summer long
- Light fencing and signage.
- Sure!
- permit and course to ensure safe keeping for humans and bees (similar to Edmonton's bylaws)
- No. People are allergic to bees and this could cause more issues within the city. Outside the city would be better.
- This should be allowed provided the animals are cared for according to animal welfare laws. If needed a license and mandatory training session could be required, and succession planning.
- Signs in area
- Educating neighbours and only allowing a set up if neighbours for a two block radius allow. Bees travel and neighbours should be able to voice their concerns. As well, neighbours would want to avoid using pesticides. Are they going to be ok with that? Bees are a neighbourhood creature not singular
- Yes it would be amazing for the most important creature on earth.
- None. Bees should be protected and protection encouraged.
- Proper set up and knowledge
- A notice, like signs, the bees are in specific areas
- Nothing. Bees are harmless
- To have my EpiPen at all time because I develop an anaphylactic shock when stung. I refuse to have beehives next door. Beekeepers to find out his neighbours have any allergies to bees. They are not allowed to raise bees if neighbours are allergic to bees that could be fatal.
- There should be a limit on the number of hives allowed per sq km or something because honeybees out-compete native bees, and can harm people.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- If people are trained in beekeeping and know what they're doing, then they should be allowed to do it. Perhaps a permit for beekeeping?
- Bees need food. Usually the hives are moved around agricultural sites to pollinate crops and fruit trees. There is not enough food in urban hardscape.
- Yes! I'm personally not interested in keeping bees but they are awesome to have around, especially if you have a garden.
- Bees are necessary, but I just wouldn't want to be stung by any. Maybe warning signs posted???
- Nothing ... bees are needed and not invasive.
- Hive size limit. Consultation regarding life threatening allergies next door.
- Irresponsible because you do not know how many people within the bees range could be allergic.
- Honeybees are not aggressive. I only expect some sort of signage and fencing around the hive to avoid accidentally disturbing the bees. Individuals with severe allergies should consider carrying an epi-pen.
- A garden. Flowers, vegetables, fruit trees. I completely feel safe with bees.
- Registered. Limit of hives. Otherwise awesome.
- I don't feel that this is an issue but only if regulations are set so that beekeepers would have to ensure that their neighbours had no be allergies.
- Education about bees/urban beekeeping
- we need to protect native bees, not honeybees. native bees are more efficient pollinators and are under threat of extinction - this is not the case with honeybees. The location and number of beehives should be limited to reduce the impact on native bee populations
- More of this please
- My concern is for the native bee populations that are already under tremendous pressure. This would increase competition for limited food sources and possibly disease. I am certainly not against beekeeping but I am concerned about unskilled people who do it as a fad creating problems.
- I do not feel threatened or in danger of bees. I welcome urban beekeeping with adequate regulations in place, and respect for the bees and the community by the keepers.
- An educated beekeeper (has to have done a course). A willingness to work with neighbours and not aim the bee paths at them. Someone on hand to deal with swarms (not dangerous but scary looking).
- No
- This would need to be limited to one or two hives per household, I like this idea but would not want to have multiple hives in my neighbours yard.
- I am fully supportive of urban been keeping. There are simple best practices that can be followed to make them safe and an integrated part of the urban ecology. As native and non native bees all over the world are in collapse, this should be accompanied by a herbicide and pesticide ban.
- Check-ins to ensure the bees are being properly cared for would be nice

- Yes. It's a great idea but it should be licensed and all bee keepers should have some sort of education and certification. Bees are dwindling and we need to keep them healthy and diverse. So yes.
- This should be allowed, with controls in place to protect people.
- Great idea. Get it done, no need to even discuss.
- As long as the general public is not in danger of being stung, urban bee keeping is good to have
- I don't have enough knowledge to provide an informed opinion here. Clearly, sufficient distance from a beehive to public areas. My main concern would be irresponsible bee keepers who, through negligence, allowed a hive to swarm. That could cause some alarm in an urban setting!
- Signage maybe. Otherwise nothing.
- Homes that are on an adequate size lot. Like pigeon ownership, beekeepers should be required to be a member of some association and be educated. Nailing a beehive to the "neighbour" fence should not be allowed.
- A minimum expectation of hive integrity (i.e. fit some standards) as well as some training
- Limited number of hives.
- I love and encourage urban hives! no safety concern. same needs as responsible pet ownership of a cat or dog - that Bylaw can intervene if the hive has been neglected and/or depositing waste
- Restriction on the size of colony kept.
- I live next to people with bees. It hasn't been a good experience. I believe they need to be sure the bees are being provided for and if they aren't there is someone to call to make sure they are or their bees are taken away.
- Very ok with bee keeping!
- Signage on the blocks where bees would normally fly.
- Signage, instructions for how to act appropriately, public information on how honeybees positively impact our environment.
- As long as the number of hives is limited in residential areas I am all for it
- One hive per yard maximum. No resale of honey. Beekeeping course to understand how to practice hive safety so one knows how to ensure bees never feel their hive is at risk as that can trigger aggressive behaviour.
- I feel fine about this already, I love the idea!
- Absolutely NOT!!! There are so many people who have allergies to bees- It is unkind at best and dangerous at worst to expose them. Essentially, neighbours would be stuck indoors all summer and even then could be stung just coming and going from their houses.
- Lovely. Keep working with the ABC Bees to educate keepers, public and gardeners.
- Should be allowed, but permits should be a must and only so many bees(approx) per area
- If the city uses the Calgary District Beekeepers Association guidelines as regulations I believe that urban beekeeping can be a safe activity within the city. Unfortunately there will be individuals that will go outside these guidelines so the city will have to be prepared to enforce the regulation
- Urban beekeeping is good as it improves local bee populations.

- Love this idea. I'd just like to know where the hive was so I could avoid getting too close / stung!
- No hives close to thoroughfares. I have friends who raise bees and know they don't like me. We think, due to my quantity and colour of hair, that I look too much like a bear. They dive bomb me in warning but have never stung. I love that there bees in our communities and especially my garden.
- More bylaw enforcement resources
Max number limits
- No - not acceptable at all. Many people are allergic to bee stings. It can mean life or death.
- appropriate structural areas for them to be in
- This is fine, although honey bees are a non-native species that is moderately invasive.
- Proximity mechanism for non-owners to be protected; protection for bee-owner to prevent hive-poisoning. Also "who is first" mechanism so if a person who has a bee allergy moves beside a person who has urban bees must have a resolution mechanism
- I consider it very safe. And I like it.
- Fine, as long as it doesn't become a nuisance to neighbours.
- Nothing. Based on my research, bees are not a nuisance to humans even when hives are nearby.
- Nothing. Urban beekeeping is brilliant and I think the City should actually encourage this through subsidies or credits or benefits.
- I feel safe already. Maybe more education about how and when bees will sting people? If bees are present in an area, they will not sting, they sting when their hive is threatened or you accidentally step on them or crush them. They are different to wasps!!!
- Let's get started! There is nothing unsafe about bees!
- As there are some people that are allergic to bee stings, there needs to be enough "free space" for bees to be kept. As much as we need to help bees, I'm not sure within communities is a smart move.
- - as with all almost all human endeavours, it is not the majority of owners who follow the rules and show respect for their neighbours that are problems, it is the highly visible and unpleasant minority who flaunt the rules and have 20 hives, not one; 200 chickens, not 3, etc, that give people pause
- Bees are essential for pollination and keeping our global food supply healthy and thriving. I would support backyard beekeeping 100% as long as hives were well maintained and initially set up by trained professionals.
- Nothing. Bees are great.
- Simple awareness if it is in my immediate area. I think urban bee keeping is an important part of maintaining a healthy urban ecosystem. However, preservation of native species is highly important.
- There is no way for the beekeeper to prevent the bees from encroaching/disturbing neighbours. Because they can't be controlled, it should not be allowed.
- I love the idea but it shouldn't be allowed. Too risky given the odds of a neighbor having anaphylactic reactions to bee stings.
- Obvious signage, approval from neighbours

- Education around beekeeping in the community and signage when a hive is on the property. - Think "beware of dog" but without the negative connotation.
- I fully support urban bee keeping, without bees we don't get food.
- One small hive per some defined area. Perhaps one per block.
- Distance from the bee boxes.
Only on properties large enough to have a reasonable distance from the next residence.
What about those people who are allergic?
- Bad idea - everyone lives too close together
- I think this is a great idea, so encourage it and keep requirements minimal! If there is a large number of bees, perhaps a sign, and if the area could be open, sufficient warning not to interfere.
- signage
- I think this is a great idea. We need to increase and protect the bee population and responsible bee keeping is a great way to do this.
- A guarantee that they will stay in owners yard and not interfere with the ability of others to enjoy their outdoor space
- I'm not worried about urban beekeeping. I think there needs to be a limit to the amount of hives you can have in a residential yard in the city. I also think beekeepers need to be registered with the Alberta Government so that the hives can be tracked.
- I have no issues with urban beekeeping and think it should be encouraged.
- Direction on size of colony/hive, acceptable placement, and material it can be built from. Hives should be intrinsically safe and are not a concern for me.
- Beekeeping is good environment and world bee populations need to stay strong. Considering most people are afraid the amount of people will remain small.
- That all beekeeping places are regulated by the city and have a minimal structure to run. All beekeepers should have some kind of training. The amount of bees should be limited in order that the bees don't cause trouble in the neighborhood.
- I would like to know that neighbours or local businesses that are keeping bees have had education or some kind of certification on how to do so properly.
- Limit the kind of bees which are raised to less-aggressive varieties.
- They must also plant flowers! That's what bees really need! So they must provide the food (flowers) for the bees
- Nothing. I feel safe.
- I support urban beekeeping, I think there needs to be more of it. There is widespread understanding that bee species are declining and we need them to sustain our agricultural system both large and small scale.
- separation from hives, notices in the area.
- I would rather not allow beekeeping, but if it goes ahead, a large buffer area which requires consent of all residents prior to keeping, for which consent can be revoked by the residents at any time and for any reason, including a new neighbor moving in.

- Good if hive in a locked confined space. Very important for our gardens and ecosystem
- Hive entrances shouldn't be facing a neighbor's property.
- I am all for Urban Beekeeping in your own backyard, provided the person knows what they are doing and can come collect a stray swarm if that happens. Also, being mindful of any nearby neighbour's with allergies as you cant control where the bees will be
- Hives should not be too near public property lines and owners on either side of any private property line should agree to the hive placement.
- Just safe bee houses. I fully support urban beekeeping
- I think urban bee keepers should have to apply and take an exam that shows they know how to care for bees and have the time to do so.
- Street-visible signs indicating that bee-keeping is taking part in an area.
- I think it's a great idea! However they should apply for a special license and receive at least one home inspection to make sure the hive setup complies with city requirements and safe for the adjacent properties.
- steps to protect our native bees not the damaging invasive honey bee
- Public education that bees are helpful and critical to the health of the planet. Being scared of a sting is a pathetic excuse to regulate or stop beekeeping in urban areas.
- I feel safe now in areas of the city where residents keep bees. I actually enjoy watching these docile bees as they feed on the flowers.
- A sign front and back stating there is beekeeping going on.
- This should be encouraged. As primary pollinators, our species survival is directly tied to the survival of the bees, and their populations globally are in sharp decline. They help with balancing our ecosystems.
- This is unsafe. I have a neighbour with a large hive. I have friends who visit me who are deadly allergic to bee stings. There are bees everywhere and they can get aggressive.
- Responsible people taking up the hobby. Licencing? Maybe best left to people who know more about this particular "livestock" though I personally think that's a bit much.
- That the keepers are knowledgable in their craft to minimize chances that the bees would leave/swarm elsewhere. That there is a small buffer of land between a hive and an adjacent homeowners yard. This does not need to be a large buffer. As long as the hive is not right against a neighbour's fence.
- Essential
- is a wonderful idea. We need to keep the bees alive. People using pesticides are killing them
- I approve of urban beekeeping as long as the bees do not interfere with my safety.
- I am not very familiar with bee keeping. I would be interested in having some bees. My only concern is if there is a danger of being stung if there are too many. Should there be a limit in the number of hives per property?
- Beekeeping is governed by provincial rules and shouldn't be interfered with by municipalities. I think if people register their hives and follow density recommendations made by the beekeepers association they should be allowed. Make arrangements for expert assessment for inevitable NIMBY complaints.

- Relatively little. If hive numbers / yard are kept reasonable. Access to good bees is provided. And good training provided for keepers I think it is an excellent way to introduce nature to our communities.
- Beekeeping needs no regulation. . If people leave hives alone, they will have no interaction with urban bees
- Nothing, bees are great. I tried to build a carpenter bee nest in my back yard but could not lure any of them. Being pollinators they are a great addition to any community. If anything we need a lot more.
- Enough space allowed around hives to avoid unwanted encounters
- Only one hive allowed per household. Hive should be centrally located in owner's yard.
- A maximum # of hives per household or area enforced
- I have no concerns about Urban Beekeeping. I think it is an excellent idea.
- Bee Keepers should have some training and should register like other pets that are outdoors.
- Nothing about urban beekeeping would make me feel unsafe. Calgary is behind the times in not already having a thriving urban beekeeping community.
- Responsible caregiver that is mindful of their neighbours proximity. Proactive, enforceable city bylaws and productive involvement for issues.
- Love the idea though not for me
- Absolutely, though if possible they should try to focus on native species like Bumblebees (honey bees are fine but an import from Europe)
- People and allergies?
- Educate people as to the benefit of bees and learn how to behave safely around them.
- Just regular checkups to make sure there isn't possible diseases the bees could be spreading to other bee populations it may come in contact with
- Don't allow it!
- That bees are kept away from neighbouring properties such that swarms don't cross over property lines. Our neighbour has a hive and the bees occasionally swarm into our yard due to the hive being too close to our fence. They have a large yard but we don't so we can't use our yard when this happens
- Bees certainly affect all the neighbors way of life in a negative way via allergies, fearfulness, and moreso PROPERTY RESALE values. These 3 points alone would be a highly valid reason why Bees should not be permitted in the city. In reality Bees fly out past their own yard fence to get their food
- Good idea if these bees are not a threat to our wild bees and other wild nectar collecting insects. Will there be enough food, will they interbreed, will the domestic ones take over, will they introduce illnesses? See the trout problem in rivers.
- Yes within limits - provided beekeeper can ensure safety of neighbours.
- Absolutely think this should be legal

- Responsible beekeepers. Licensed and bonded. Regulated. Should have to apply to the city.
- never felt unsafe around bees. No special mechanism for me need is required. I'd like to see more than the ones I see currently.
- More information. I honestly haven't read into the pros/cons of this and would love to see some trials being done throughout the city.
- Limit to 5 hives per house.
- Limits on the number of hives, training for the people who own the hives, and signage indicating that hives are nearby.
- No additional notice, but for those with allergies I suggest they may want signage around households with beekeeping.
- Good and useful for local ecosystems.
- Would love to see beekeeping. I would feel safe where there is beekeeping as bee keepers are invested in keeping others safe as well as themselves. There will always be people afraid of bees no matter where they are. We need them for our environment.
- I feel comfortable with the current bee keeping guideline. Only suggestion is to change the guideline into a by-law.
- I would not feel safe living next to someone's beehive.
- I already have beehives in my neighbourhood and quiet enjoy the experience. they help pollenate our gardens, we have learnt so much about them as a species.
- I don't know enough about urban beekeeping but I think that accountability to a local beekeeping club or association is a good idea. Then the City of Calgary can deal with the club or association for concerns.
- Limits to the amount of bees, if you are actually going to allow beekeeping. Maybe the type of bee as my understanding is that honeybees are crowding out the bees that are actually under threat right now.
- Educated (maybe certified?) owners.
- Responsibility - I think it's a great idea, wish I had the courage to try it.
- There needs to be training to appropriately care for the bees. There is a risk of poor bee care, swarming, and disease spread without proper education. There also needs to be a limit on how many hives a person can have.
- Would not feel safe living next door to a beehive.
- To be aware of the location.
- To keep it on farm land and not in the city!!
- Keep honeybees out of calgary, in favor of more support for native bees - the honeybees are not native.
- Love it
- I am fine as is, with the natural and honey bees in my neighbourhood.
- size and location of hives. I don't want a hive located right next to my children's play area.

- Nothing, these are insects and behave as such, with very little inter contact with humans or other animals & insects.
- sounds ok
- Owners of bees should have to prove they know how to care for them and to keep kids and neighbors safe.
- Should be allowed, bees are quiet and generally do not pose problems. Extra pollination is welcome.
- I don't think any regulations are required for beekeeping. I feel safe with beekeeping happening near my property. I would actually encourage more citizens to actively keep bees.
- By license only. Big colonies can push out smaller native colonies which upsets the balance.
- Lots of land - bees, like other farm animals need open space, not a small backyard.
- No issues, I think more people should keep apiaries
- I believe this is paramount in order to sustain natural environments and pollination of plants. Beekeeping should be allowed with a license. License should seek to assess the owners practice and responsibility for maintaining bees.
- Nothing in particular. Bees are everywhere as is.
- Limits on the number of hives per household in a residential area with the ability to get more through a city application which includes getting sign-off from your neighbors.
- No, urban beekeeping should not be allowed because the bees do not stay on the owner's property. This impacts their neighbours. Moreover, the bees are domesticated European honey bees that compete with our local native bees, like bumblebees. I read that there are 1400 urban beekeepers in Calgary!
- Notice for immediate neighbours that a beekeeping interest is near them. Permission from neighbours may be a consideration. A community plebiscite to ask of beginning interest.
- a limited number of beehives for each property owner. I would suggest that the lot size square footage may be a determining factor
- Not an excessive number of hives on a residential lot. Bees are not scary or a problem. I think three hives would be reasonable.
- information about the relative safety of honey bees and an indication of where they may be in your neighbourhood guidelines about where hives should be kept (e.g. distance from property lines, neighbouring parks) to ensure safety
- flowers
- I am not in favour of urban beekeeping. In contrast to commercial beekeepers, hobby bee keepers do not manage their bees for disease. Moreover, there are not enough flower resources in the city for both these domestic bees and our native bee species. Not a good idea.
- Nothing, they're bees
- I feel safe. Many neighbours have bees and the only impact is a more beautiful garden and free honey!
- nothing, stay out of it. Should be none of the city's business unless there is a care issue.

- There are way too many urban beekeepers in Calgary! This activity needs to be limited. I think that the city should restrict the number of hives per quadrant and those numbers should be about 10% of the current numbers.
- I fully support urban beekeeping and think registering your bees with The City like we licence our dogs and cats would be good. There needs to be clear guidelines and clear consequences for not following through.
- My concern is more for the bees. Bees do not injure people unless threatened and contribute to the food supply and beautification of neighborhoods. Beekeeping is not easy so I think that people should have to take a course on beekeeping and be licensed/ subject to inspection.
- Large enough area
- Yes!
- Bees are good for agriculture and bee keeping should be promoted within the city. A limit on the number of bee boxes per property would be beneficial. A limit on how close a bee keeper can keep their bees to their neighbors property would be necessary.
- The hive should be kept in a fenced in area so that it cannot be disturbed accidentally which would be bad for both the person (or animal) that disturbed it as well as the bees. Aside from that I have no concerns with urban beekeeping and am in fact a strong supporter of it.
- There are hundreds of be gives in Calgary has hundreds of beehives and I haven't had any issues with them. Issues that have come up seem to have been well taken care with the current methods of dealing.
- I feel safe with this already.
- Regulation that these need to be licensed, if they are doing this to sell, they are having an income and why aren't you regulating this. It should also be done if the property is big enough and contained so it doesn't danger others that are near by.
- I am pro beekeeping. A sign so that people with allergies can safely avoid the area
- Nothing
- respond to nuisance behavior
- I don't feel threatened in any way by urban beekeeping. At the same time, it would be reasonable to limit it to 1 hive per yard, located at the center of the yard (to minimize any possible interactions with neighbours).
- No bees, people have allergies
- The City of Toronto does not allow hives to be placed within 30 m of the property line separating the beekeeper's property from adjacent properties, parks, businesses, streets, and alleys. Thus, beekeeping is not permitted in the higher density neighbourhoods. We need some sort of guidelines.
- This is beneficial for our environment, and should be allowed, though require some sort of permit process to demonstrate proper basic knowledge of beekeeping prior to engaging in the activity.
- need to know location of bee hives in order to avoid allergy impact
- 100% for, so long as space is adiquite and not done too close to property lines (unless agreed on by neighbors)

- Bees should be kept in a manner that is not disruptive or a nuisance. Perhaps hives are kept a minimum distance from neighboring properties.
- We must limit how many beehives are being kept in Calgary! Montreal has implemented laws to put a cap on beehives in their city to reduce the impact to the native bees. Urban beekeeping is at odds with the City of Calgary's biodiversity goals and must be controlled.
- Responsible apian management, especially when the hive needs to divide, in order to reduce risk of swarming. Consent of neighbours within a set radius, in case of allergy or other objections.
- I know many beekeepers in Calgary who are committed to providing a safe environment for their bees. We need more responsible beekeepers like them!
- Appropriate space requirements for hives (ie: a backyard, vs a condo balcony). Maybe some basic training (1hr online, etc) to aid in keeping the bees alive and healthy.
- Bees cannot be contained within the area of your own property, therefore would be impinging on the safe use of your neighbours yard . Keeping bees in a residential neighbourhood is a really bad idea.
- We have a huge problem with urban beekeeping in Calgary! Some people have built their businesses around teaching people about beekeeping and selling started kits. Now we have over 1000 beekeepers in Calgary. The loudest proponents of urban beekeeping are the ones profiting from it. Huge impacts.
- Signage and education
- Notification to the neighbours before bees are introduced to the property.
- Assurances that the beekeeper has been properly educated, and a process in place to evaluate neighbor concerns. Also, hive limits.
- I grew up on a farm and I worked at a near by honey farm. I have looked into urban beekeeping and have a loose plan. I support looking into this and forming guidelines for people that are interested.
- YES! Urban bee keeping is incredibly important to our bee population and ensuring the survival of the species and of our planet. I think as long as proper hives and equipment is used people should be allowed to bee keep wherever they want (outdoors obviously).
- No keep out in suburban areas or on top of buildings. People can be very allergic.
- The current guidelines are quite adequate. There are a number of hives in the neighborhood and they've not been a problem.
- Not opposed with knowledgeable keepers.
- A certification requirement.
- Perhaps the urban bee keeper should be required to take a certified bee keeping course and consider the size of the hive.
- awareness and transparency
- Bees are nice and they don't bring any harm. The limitation could be towards how many you can have in your property.
- N/A. I think there needs to be more of this.
- This would obviously be taken to an extreme by some people and that would change the outdoor enjoyment of others. Not a fan.

- no... too many people are allergic and this is not an urban friendly project--- houses are too close together in most communities for this to not impact another person....do not allow
- I have been a beekeeper in the city for years and my neighbours didn't notice until I brought honey around in the fall. If you are a responsible beekeeper who doesn't have a hoarding issue [personal information removed] There shouldn't be an issue with neighbours. Urban bees are much healthier
- Bees are fine.
- WONDERFUL!!!
Bees are necessary for our flower and fruit pollination. Worldwide they are disappearing. I think if you know what you are doing raising and caring for the bees I see no issue.
- Nothing - I would feel safe regardless
- I feel that bees can safely be kept in the City on a residential lot but I would not want more than 3 hives on a typical lot but if you had a large corner lot or a large lot more hives would be fine. I would encourage people having hives in Calgary.
- Love it. Save the bees. We would not have food on our tables without pollinators.
- Recent research on bees, highlighting their essential role in balancing the ecosystem and encouraging healthy growth in nature, is an exciting and promising for individuals looking to get involved in beekeeping. Many cities around the world are supporting urban beekeeping
- That someone is physically going out and checking people who do this it is the only way people follow rules they know they're being watched
- no problem
- I would prefer to encourage native bee populations in the city. They are much better pollinators and are more important to our environment.
- Nothing extra.
- should be ban
- Urban beekeeping is fine and generally nuisance free. Bee experts and possibly NRCB can inform policy about this practice.
- We have enough green/public spaces (and/or could have more) where people could keep bees. I prefer that they do not have them in their yards. My concern is that neighbours should be able to enjoy their back yards without fears of being stung.
- Signage on the property to inform people in the area that bees are present.
- Notice so that I know bees are around as I am allergic to them.
- No concerns other than the bees are taken care of. Maybe belong to an association like the pigeons?
- This is an area that requires some management through bylaws. Should address sanitation, safety, and proximity to neighbours, schools.
- I have no concerns about urban beekeeping as long as they stay within the existing guidelines for hive counts. Existing nuisance bylaws seem adequate to keep it under control.
- Nothing. Public education would be helpful for those opposed

- Perhaps a limit on the number of hives per yard at 2,
- Honey bees are kept in close proximity to human habitats, all over the globe, for thousands of years. They provide products - Honey - bees wax - pollen - propolis for use at the home consumer level. They contribute to the success of garden plants requiring pollination. No noticeable feces, noise.
- I would be very nervous living next to a beekeeping operation. I do not believe this type of operation should be within the city.
- No to beekeepers ... the urban areas is last place the wild bees ... I plant my flowers for them ... not the beekeepers
- I would feel safer if I knew bees were nearby. They are essential to our ecosystem and urban beekeeping should be celebrated.
- Should be allowed. Bees our the lifeblood of our food sources.
- Educated (and maybe certified) beekeepers. Reasonable limits on numbers of hives.
- The owner has proper training on handling. They speak with their neighbours, especially those with elementary and younger kids.
- I have no issue with Urban beekeeping
- I had no idea this was even a thing, I have no problem with it.
- Honestly nothing. Bees are very docile. They have been kept in back yards and on commercial buildings and provide great pollination. Obviously don't kick the hive.
- Not to be kept within 25 feet of a public sidewalk walkway or adjacent yard/private property. Secured to prevent being knocked over accidentally.
- I am severely allergic to bee and wasp stings. If urban beekeeping were permitted in my area, all of the insects would need to be fully enclosed and contained within a greenhouse or equivalent structure for me to feel reasonably safe (which defeats the point of keeping the bees, entirely).
- This may be workable if sufficient space such that increased bee density does not pose a safety risk for persons or animals. Do not feel appropriate for areas of high density living, or in most single family dwelling communities. Consider restricting to acreages and larger geographical properties.
- All good no problem at all
- Nothing. I am severely allergic to bees.
- Active member in local organization. Educated. Proper yard space, etc.
- I have no response to this as I don't know that much about it.
- Max 5 hives per residential dwelling & fines for keepers acting irresponsibly or with messy/unethical operations. Get YYC Beekeeper Assoc. input. Bees are integral to our ecosystem & benefit both the city and neighbours of keepers (home & city gardens, flowers, trees, fruit, education, honey)
- Neighbours who keep bees should have to purchase full bee protection kits for all houses in a 3 house radius. Or erect full bee netting over their entire back yard.
- The owners have them well contained and take care of them.
- Nothing, other than reasonable limits on amount of hives or bees per property.
- Nothing.
- Upkeep of hives to prevent swarms.

- I think urban beekeeping is great and should continue. I do not feel there are safety concerns
- All ok with this - as long as provincial requirements are met. Ideally the city should limit the number of hives within a certain radius to ensure enough food for both native pollinators and honeybees
- Should not be allowed.
- I think ensuring that the appropriate amount of space between dwellings and the hives (whatever that distance may be) to prevent those that are afraid/allergic to bees can reasonably enjoy their property.
- I have no concerns about urban bee keeping. So long as there is basic fence around the entry area to keep kids from just running into the flight path, it should be good. (a basic flower garden fence is more than enough.)
- No. Area in city not big enough.
- I would encourage and support ownership of a modest number of bee hives (perhaps 2 per household) with the possible exception of areas where it increases predatory wildlife.
- A good relationship with the beekeeper, which includes talking about location of hive(s) in their yard to avoid issues with neighbours normal and regular backyard activities that may be disrupted by the bees flight path and possible water supply issues. And honey.
- Fine but limited
- No
- Fine limited to 1 hive per property...and only so many total in a community...allergies etc.
- Nothing, perhaps a rule about the setback distances from neighbouring properties and lanes/public areas.
- All for it
- In limited areas...away from neighbors with allergies being able to shut down application
- Good idea to ensure continued pollinations urban areas. Must be ethical and sustainable for natural bee populations.
- Absolutely
- Ok so long on a large enough property that not too many bees in neighbouring yards
- allow urban bee keeping. however limit to how many hives
- Nothing. Bees are not dangerous unless mistreated. There should be no infringement on a persons ability to keep bees in the city.
- Education. Protective clothing. Bees will swarm - not to much fun when living next door or wanting to invite others over for a bbq.
- Respectful distance to spots where neighbours walk and enter exit homes and gardens. Respectful disclosure w neighbours
- Signage at the location and a limit to the number of hives.

- Nothing - maybe some warning so nest isn't inadvertently disturbed.
- YES PLEASE!
- It should be allowed if the interested party has the approval of all his neighbors (at least 5 houses to his side and 5 in front).
- bylaw or guidelines regarding best practices, public education and limits to project sizing for personal bee keeping.
- Should be allowed everywhere, with the restriction that bee boxes should be more than 2 feet from property lines to avoid accidental disturbances by neighbors.
- I'm good with this. I love urban beekeeping and would love to do it myself
- I think we should allow this if bees are well kept in the yard or under control.
- I have no concerns regarding bees. They are beneficial to our gardens and natural spaces.
- Register urban hives to ensure that owners are being responsible. And have more of them! New York has hundreds of urban hives without issue, surely we could do the same
- - Registration of hives with the city
- - Zoning or parcel size restrictions on where they can be kept
- - Required standards for apiaries
- A controlled density of hives so adjacent residents do not have their outdoor activities affected.
- When I kept bees in Ontario, hives had to be registered and a bee inspector would come and check the hives to make sure they were well managed and uninfected. This prevented infections from spreading from hive to hive, whether it was other honey bee hives or the native bee hives (ie. bumble bees).
- there should be sufficient distance between bees & houses. noise & potential stings in people with allergies are a concern. generally bees don't concern me but hives can be very noisy & should not be close to houses. I think there are many park and similar spaces in the city where bees could live
- should not be allowed. can't control where bees go.
- Proper signage as to "bees present". Safe distance from my property as determined by professionals. Limit amount of hives according to space required/space available.
- A sufficient barrier so that I won't accidentally wander into the zone where the bees would feel threatened by me.
- Yes!! Beekeeping - up to 2 hives per city lot
- Signage warning people that there are bees in the area, maybe with some educational information about how to behave around bees so as to avoid getting stung. Information about the benefits of having bees as part of our environment, and also what to do if you get stung.
- Should have some regulation. Perhaps they should ensure neighbours are okay with it.
- should be allowed
- Hive limit based on square footage and minimum square footage of beekeepers property, adequate feet ht., locked gates. Hives should be in back yards only.
- I believe in trying to assist the bee population however the number of hives needs to be controlled in urban areas

- Controls in place to ensure a swarm can be contained and removed if the swarm lands on someone else's property
- A limit to the number of hives allowed per sq meter.
- Big enough back yard. Limited number of hives per neighborhood
- All for it. no issues
- Well I am allergic to bees and wasps so that is definitely an issue. If you have a large property then I would not have an issue with it, but the smaller one definitely no. There should be a cap on how many bees can be kept and not a continuous growth of the bee population.
- A limit on how many hives can be kept depending on neighbourhood density and intent (personal use vs. selling and requiring a license)
- Not sure but I like the idea
- No
- This is my third year keeping a hive and all is well thanks to a course I attended by Calgary Beekeepers Association. All is well with my bees and neighbours thanks to education and support provided by Beekeepers association.
- Limited number of hives per city lot.
- Personally can tolerate but do understand others would fear this situation- likely more of a concern of families with young children - recommend prohibiting within city
- I think it should be allowed. Perhaps posted signage on the person's property that informs others that bees are located on the property.
- Nothing - I'm not worried about honeybees.
- a responsible owner of the bees (ie ample flowers)
- Nothing. I am not afraid of bees and love seeing them in my garden.
- Yes.
- A limit on the number of bee boxes allowed.
- Bees naturally populate nature & must be encouraged & protected. I have zero concerns about bees even if a neighbor were to have a hive. I think that would be great
- A hat
- Consultation with neighbors would be essential, especially if there are people in the close vicinity that are allergic to bees.
- No
- Its not good. It is destroying the native albertan bee population !! Albertan bees dont produce honey, but they do provide the best quality pollination for native plants. Limit non-natural beekeeping to 1 hive per property. Even then, should be discouraged.
- Nothing
- Seems like a great idea. I know some people are concerns for allergies so maybe just notification or signage at the residence for people to know?
- Hive setbacks from houses, schools and playgrounds

- The bees don't smell and they are quiet, unlike barking dogs next door, Bees are great neighbours because they pollinate our gardens.
- There should be a regulation to cap the number of hives (I have no idea how many would be reasonable) and a minimum distance between the hives and any dwelling.
- Knowledgeable people being the beekeepers so a licensing program to ensure this is the case with those wishing to beekeep.
- Research has shown that Urban bees (honey bees) decrease the number of wild bees (bumblebees) due to decreased availability of pollen/nectar. Honey bees hives should not be allowed in back yards. We kill hundreds of honey bees per day in our yard....we only want wild bees!
- I have a bunch of bee hives near my place in the community garden. As long as I don't bug the bees. I don't feel scared with them around.
- Its about common sense not safety. I'm from a beekeeping family. Maximum 3 hives on a residential property is more than enough. Bees are messy. Eliminating feces as they fly from the hive. Covering neighbours property in the waxy residue. [personal information removed] Ridiculous to allow!
- Honey bees are an invasive species. There has been a significant decline in the native bee population due in fact to the reduction in their food supply caused by the invasive honey bee. Honey bee hives should not be allowed in the city.
- There should not be urban beekeeping within the City of Calgary.
- Limited to Elevated (on roof) beekeeping
- Any place. Natural bees and insects are all around us. The bees and polinators are very important to for all plants and food sources.
- You should ask your neighbours if they have concerns first and not put hive near their homes unless they consent.
- I think it should be allowed, it helps plants and the ecosystem.
- Never safe. My husband is allergic to them.
- Absolutely not. Don't forget there are plenty of us that have anaphylaxis to bees wasps and the like I don't need you adding more to the city thank you
- Some training (certification?) in hive management and beekeeping techniques.
- I think this is a WONDERFUL idea, especially considering bees are endangered. We as a city should be encouraging this practice
- To know before my neighbor installs one and knowing they've had training before bringing bees to the neighborhood and have flowers for the bees to pollinate
- Needs more to be more rules about who can and how many. And how it affects not only owner but also Neighbors
- Love the idea Of urban beekeeping. It will improve my garden and my enjoyment of the outdoors
- Size of property and distance from beekeeping housing to neighbour.
- Limit the number of hives on each property. 2-3 is sufficient. Signage on property so neighbors are aware. Avoid bees in home directly adjacent to homes with severe allergies ( dry note required)

- There should be an appropriate buffer between a hive and neighbouring property. People should demonstrate that they know how to keep bees.
- No issues with it
- Allow it. Bees need all the support they can get. It also helps create a healthier natural environment.
- Permits and signage notifying the public that there are controlled hives in the area.
- Unobtrusive signage. Occasional hive checks to watch for disease [removed]. Mandatory education sessions before picking up the hobby.
- I am happy with urban beekeeping as long as hives are safe from vandals and damage.
- Beekeepers know what they are doing
- Maximum number of hives
- Beekeepers be required to attend a competent workshop before ownership. Yearly or every 3 years certification/ licensing, so as to confirm they are within the proper number of hives.
- I do not think bees should be kept within city limits
- If my neighbour did beekeeping i would move i do not feel it is safe in city but i am also uneducated in beekeeping so who knows so long as i dont have tons of bees around.
- That the person keeping the bees has some sort of training or certification proving they are educated in the handling of bees.
- Restrictions to the number of hives each household can have. Proper notice that there are hives on the premises because of children and allergies.
- Absolutely not in areas with zero lot lines. Bee venom allergies can be life threatening. A bee hive located on the other side of the fence from a patio could be extremely dangerous to someone with allergies.
- Excellent idea
- support it, bees are critical to pollination and diversity
- Guidelines on how to properly do such. Love bees.
- there are bees in my area coming to feed on my willows in early spring and they can be seen gathering water from pond. i feel totally safe and have never been bothered or stung. they have a good purpose to offer society and the earth by pollination. if theres no bees, then there is no food to eat.
- bees are helpful in pollination and food.i feel totally safe around them and have only been stung by wasp in my yard in fall season
- As someone with a family member deathly allergic to bee stings, allowing in home yards is concerning but should be allowed, Perhaps in designated or well signed areas
- i see bees but not enough to worry about and they have a good place in community helping pollination.i dont feel unsafe in their presence as they seem to be too busy to notice us
- Yes. No restrictions including selling of products including honey, wax, bees and hives should be allowed.

- Bees are safe to be around. They just get busy pollinating everything then go home. Native bees and honey bees are no problem in regards to safety. Bats, birds keep insects and bees in check. Balance.
- I support this. Bees are great
- Education is essential. I think if people are going to keep bees they should follow guidelines and be able to keep them properly so the bees don't die. I also think they should know how many hives they can have for the size of their yard.
- Should not be allowed, given the very close proximity to neighbours in our tightly spaced lots.
- Maybe a limit on the amount of hives in a yard? Bees really don't bother anyone so I have zero problem with keeping bees in the city.
- I think we should have more bee keepers, not less. The amount of bees in my garden has reduced drastically in the years I've lived here. As long as the keeper has had proper instruction on how to keep them, I think that's all they need.
- Permitting and/or Licensing
- This is lovely, bees make flowers bloom
- Signage that there are urban bees at the residence. Licensing to ensure proper bee enclosures and harvesting practices
- I am supportive of urban beekeeping for educated beekeepers who are able to prevent and handle things like swarming.
- Yes but limit amount of hives.
- I feel safe already. We need more bees!
- Registration, mandatory education, hive parameters and limits on the number of hives in a square kilometre. Notification in the neighbourhood and regular inspections. There should be consideration to impacts to native bumblebees in Alberta as well - most species are at risk.
- Urban beekeepers should be licensed (modest fee).
- I have no concerns for my safety. However, bees swarm occasionally, and while docile the swarm must be dealt with by a professional apiarist within 12 hours.
- Please do not restrict beekeeping. We need to encourage bees as they are so important to our environment. There are many guidelines in place to help beekeepers ensure hives are safe. A neighbour of mine keeps bees and I have never had an issue.
- Signage, proper housing, nest kept a reasonable distance from sidewalks/paths
- Yes! Signage indicating a hive is near.
- Honeybees are pretty docile - I feel safe when I see hives. I also feel excited when I see hives! Love it!
- Nothing I think it's great.
- I guess just something in place to keep them from getting aggravated. I'd hate to see kids get stung.
- Strict licensing and enforcement in place to limit number of hives per yard, limit on number of homes within a eg. 5 block radius to have license for hive, bylaw officers able to remove any size naturalized unlicensed hive which occurs in my or my neighbours' yards.

- Education, teach us how to do it and let's save the bees!!!!
- I think having some seminars to teach the proper way to have and take care of bees. We need to help all animals we keep taking more and more of the wildlife are
- That the neighbor is keeping bees. My neighbor had a hive and they were travelling to my backyard fountain for water. I was ok but it concerned my visitors.
- There is no reason to feel unsafe around urban honeybees
- I am supportive of urban apiculture under a permitting process where hive owners/operators can demonstrate that their hives are located in a safe location (based on characteristics determined by an expert). Number of hives in the City should also be regulated not to outcompeted native pollinators.
- I have allergies to bees so well marked and me not who pays attention to signs isn't going to walk into a hive accidentally
- don't know enough to feel safe having large condensed masses of them close by but if it is safe and wouldn't mean I can't eat dinner in my backyard then I am all for it!
- A sign.
- Nothing; bees are not a threat unless an individual is allergic to stings, in which case it is their responsibility to care for their own health by being prepared, just as they would in any outdoor environment.
- Native bee program might be better.
- I have no problems with people maintaining urban bees. I think this is a great idea. We already have urban bees in our neighbourhood, great to see the bees. Bees do not smell, do not bark, or dig up your garden or use as a litter box. Do not steal the bird seed either!
- Educated, as in they've done a course.
- Nothing, everyone should be urban bee keeping.
- I'm all for it. They keep to themselves and the neighbours usually don't even know.
- There is nothing about urban beekeeping which makes me feel unsafe.
- That concentration of numbers of bees is manageable, that the conditions under which they are kept is sanitary, that hives don't lead to bees creating hives inside of nearby residential walls or soffits.
- I love that there are urban beekeepers. this should be encouraged and not unduly regulated
- Nothing. Urban bees are completely safe and leave people alone as they go about their business pollinating our plants.
- I think this is ok but how do you register & monitor & keep admin costs down?
- Urban beekeeping requires more visible services for people who want to pursue it but are not sure where to begin. As well, having signage to
- Not having too many of them. Bees are fine as long as you leave them alone. S

- Maybe just a limit on the number of gives you can have and you must take a bee keeper course.
- Nothing. Urban beekeeping is good for our city, our planet, and the bees.
- Nothing.
- As a person with a phobia of bees and wasps, I would love to at least have signage in those areas so I can mentally prepare myself. For those with allergies this would also be helpful. However, bees are extremely crucial to the environment and I am in full support of urban beekeeping in Calgary.
- I do not have personal safety concerns with the backyard keeping of bees. Education about bees and their habits would be helpful if we had neighbours who had bees.
- Nothing. Bees are harmless when left alone. Except I would like to know where the apiary is, for knowledge sake.
- Licensing of some kind.
- No
- A maximum hive population in residential yards; bee keepers should be able to demonstrate they have at least done training.
- Visible signs - informing me that there's bees in the area
- Proper zoning, and a license to have bees, this license should be very cheap, like $5 dollars a year and stay at that five dollars for as long as the City of Calgary exists. No bees, no humans!
- Signage: potential hazard
Communication with neighbours
- Oh god. I don't even know. Netting? Bee proof netting? Is that a thing? In all seriousness, I think the city could dedicate areas to this much like community gardens.
- Maybe take a course or read about bees and bee keeping- there's a lot of information available. And there are now smaller hives for backyard use. If it helps the bee population I'm for it.
- Would be beneficial for your flowers and plants if well pollinated. Good for the environment
Cons - if you have allergies, or get stung numerous times. Beekeepers need to collect the honey and wax and it can be time consuming. Might not always be welcomed by your neighbors.
- I am in support of urban beekeeping and think this should continue to be legal for recreational purposes. I do wonder about the impact of domestic honeybees on native pollinator populations & would be curious about environmental impact - information on this might change my answer.
- Nothing. There is nothing dangerous about urban beekeeping.
- We live next to a bee keeper and we feel powerless to address any of our concerns. There should be a way through 311 to lodge complaint or grievance. Our neighbors bees poop on our house which is hard to wash off, and if we have any water in the yard is overrun with bees, if it were a dog I'd call 311
- I am allergic to bees yet I see no issue with people raising them in their back yards. The owners need be held accountable for any and all damage to other's property.
- No problems
- I would be worried about getting stung

- Domesticated bees are of no safety concern, and this leading question is intended to stir up unfounded fears and suggests an agenda on the part of the party asking it. Leave the bees alone! That said, as with any animals, there should be reasonable limit based on property size and neighbour distance
- Proper housing and proper certified training to house, care and keep bees.
- I don't want nor support urban beekeeping and do not appreciate leading questions on these surveys.
- Beekeeping should not be allowed near daycares, schools or playgrounds or hospitals or clinics.
- Nothing
- There are several beekeepers in my neighbourhood, some keep bee hives in their backyards. Most neighbours in the area are not even aware of bees near them. Should limit number of bee hives per property. Beekeepers should belong to a local registered beekeeper's group.
- Unless someone is planning on keeping bees on an apartment balcony with close proximity to other tenants I see no risk to the general public and I feel reasonably safe.
- I am against urban beekeeping. Bees would need to be kept contained and unable to fly amongst the public.
- Yes. The bee population is dwindling. If someone wants to there should be no restrictions on bee keeping.
- Sufficient space from hives to other people's properties for them to feel safe. Management of hives to prevent other animals destroying hives and to prevent disease impacting wild bees.
- I strongly support this, we just need to make sure that there is sufficient space between hives and other property owners/users.
- Place a limit on the number of hives/bees are kept on a property so that they don't become a threat or nuisance to neighbours.
- Bees are safe
- I feel safe.
- Good idea only if bees are native species.
- Nothing. Bees help our world go around
- Urban beekeeping can be seen in my neighbourhood and I welcome the sight. However, I think we should be careful to encourage the right species that are natural to this habitat and not alien species who might upset the balance of the natural ecology.
- Nothing, really
- must have urban beekeeping course and be a member of the calgary urban beekeeping association
- Nothing
- I feel totally safe around urban bees
- Maybe a limit of 6 or fewer hives per individual property? I think urban beekeeping is a great idea for Calgary.

- I think beekeeping should be encouraged in the city. It's good for our ecosystem
- I would only be in support of urban beekeeping if the City was sure there are not impacts to wild bees. Honey bees can compete with wild bees for food and spread diseases. Urban beekeeping Calgary has increased exponentially with no consideration for native bee conservation.
- could be fatal with people that are allergic, I feel like it shouldn't be done within city limits purely because of this.
- Cool with it.
- Good for environment.
- Nothing. Allow them.
- -Secure fenced yard to keep pets and children away from bees (for the bees' sake)
-Must pass beekeeping course through continuing education or from actual beekeeper trainer.
- Health and safety of bees.
- Responsible hive management
- This is a good idea and should continue. Help people do it in a way that supports the over all bee population. Encourage people in general to plant bee friendly plants in their gardens.
- Urban beekeeping provides an excellent ecological service for the city. The Calgary beekeeping association recommended practices should be followed to ensure safety. The city should not introduce any additional bylaws regarding beekeeping and leave it up to the agriculture ministry at the province.
- Yes I believe so. Perhaps ensuring a beekeeper license so there is a knowledge base to understanding swarming when queen bee needs to find another hive.
- should not be allowed. Bees require medication is they get sick and urban beekeepers are not going to get a VCPR with a veterinarian in order to take care of their 1 hive. This puts other bees, including actual commercial operations at risk of disease.
- Notification as a neighbour and larger yards or separation by a certain number of feet, but overall not a great concern.
- I don't know. I'd be concerned about getting stung.
- 1 acre or more properties.
- No problem. Bees are good for the environment and we need more. I don't see bees as a threat - of course if someone is allergic then it would be a problem having them in their community.
- I think it's a wonderful idea... extensive bylaws would need to be in place
- Not allowed
- Nothing! Bees are nice!
- Good
- I think this is a great idea, with a focus on native bees, and native flowering plants, but not limiting to this, will be greatly beneficial and we will see a more vibrant flower scene in Calgary.
- all for beekeeping in urban areas - if there is a licensing process and people are responsible

- No, not enough pollination supply within city for many hives. Rocky view county won't allow bees for acreages under 2 acres. Calgary lots are too small.
- I support this, there is nothing but positivity that can come from housing non invasive honey bees. Owners should have to attend a course to properly take care of bees.
- Is it true the bees used for beekeeping are different than the bees in our environment. If so they shouldn't be allowed. Only bees for this area. My understanding the keeper bees can kill the natural bees to our ecosystem?? Is this true? I'm all for bees but the right ones that can cohabitate
- It needs to be in a place no less than 4 acres. No residential bee keeping unless they have minimum 4 acres
- Complete ban. If Rocky View County & other neighbouring regions have bylaws deeming that land less than 4 acres CANNOT house bees or chickens, how is it possible to provide the land space clearly needed by these animals within city lots? If cats have to be contained in a yard, so too will bees.
- Urban beekeeping is great for the city as long as people know what they're doing and they have someone to guide and direct them. Having some kind of registration and an inspector would be a good idea.
- I am in favour of urban beekeeping in areas where there is sufficient plant life to support it.
- As long as it doesn't affect the neighbors I don't see why not. But if it's a issue with too many bees and that people are not being stung then maybe not.
- Permit and consultation with and approval by adjacent and affected neighbours
- This should be allowed. Limit restrictions.
- It should be advertised so that people know that they are passing by. However anyone should be able to keep a beehive in their backyards as long as it's fenced, without having to declare it or have a permit.
- Anaphylactic shock... The risk is so great, that unfortunately this should not be permitted. It is a sacrifice to protect lives, not comfort.
- Bee hives are located away from public walkways etc. to minimize a chance of being stung.
- Fine with it so long as people keep their bees healthfully and safely.
- This should not be allowed
- Na
- Perhaps a licencing system to ensure the beekeeper is knowledgeable.
- Just some signage. I LOVE the bees in my "back yard". [personal information removed]
- I never felt unsafe in an area with bee hives. I understand that honey bees are not aggressive. People with an allergy to bee sting would likely be more concerned about their safety. In that case, a sign stating how far one is from a beehive should be enough.
- Responsible bee keepers, trained and training

- I am quite comfortable with bees in the city after having a couple of hives next door one summer. The bees were very good neighbors.
- I trust my neighbors to be responsible, many hives in my neighborhood and no issues
- Sure if you have a adequate yard and are registered/licensed to do so. Also maybe not directly near schools or playgrounds
- I'm not so concerned about human safety with beekeeping, I'm more worried about the effect on native bee populations that will face increased competition and disease. Hives in Calgary should be regulated to ensure beekeepers are inoculating their bees properly to prevent the spread of mites/disease.
- As far as I know bees are quite safe, and would help urban agriculture efforts greatly. However there may need to be restrictions to avoid introducing invasive species of bees, provided there are not already provincial and/or federal regulations.
- fencing and signage to indicate bee hives are present.
- An understanding of nearby allergies
- Unsure, education in this area for the public?
- Do not wish to have beekeeping in our area as I am quite allergic.
- Nothing. I think people should be allowed to raise bees. Can be left as a courtesy to inform neighbors.
- Open information from the keeper
- There should be no issues with urban beekeeping. Alberta already requires you to register your hives with Alta Agriculture. That is sufficient.
- I want there to be guild lines for lead practice so citizens can be successful in bee keeping! A limit on hives probably makes sense too.
- Some signage around the property to notify people there is more bees around; in case of allergies
- A warning sign and a safe marked area.
- Owners to be competent. All bee farms to be licenced. Setback from housing requirements. Enclosure requirements.
- Required notification of neighbors
- Restrictions on the number of hives - no more than one or two per yard. Keepers should have to provide some proof that they are knowledgeable about bee keeping.
- Nothing! Bees are the best. In fact the city should invest in more honey bees near parks!
- Nothing. Bees are not a threatening animal so long as you don't pester them. We need to educate people on both beekeeping and how to respect our bugs.
We should also endorse MORE native beekeeping
- No issue
- Having beehives be reasonably spread out to prevent population die offs from disease (e.g. American Foul Brood).

- As a person who is allergic to bees, I would be very uncomfortable with beekeeping within my local area. Although I appreciate and support the efforts to save the bees I think this needs to be limited to specific areas that have been set up for this.
- I do not have any comments on this. Lack of knowledge on my part.
- Proper housing and management of bees, so they are cared for properly and don't invade neighbour's property.
- Nothing! Save those bees baby!
- Responsible ownership
- I think it should be allowed, it would help with pollination in the city and nice to get fresh honey. I don't think there will be a huge risk to anyone with allergies as they usually only sting if threatened.
- Honeybees should not be kept as they are negatively impacting our wild bee populations, and subsequently, our native plant species. For safety measures, however, signs should be put up so those with severe bee allergies are aware that there is a higher bee population in the area.
- Totally pro city bee keeping. I want my own hive.
- I'm ok with it
- great, helps pollination
- No problem
- Make sure they are native honey bees so that they support our eco system. Also, I'm okay if the neighbour is responsible about keeping the bees ensuring they don't get out of hand.
- Nothing, no regulation, maybe incentives to keep bees
- Ok
- I'm not opposed but would like to see some restrictions on how many could be within a neighborhood.
- Reasonable knowledge on the part of the beekeeper.
- I don't know enough
- Bees aren't aggressive. Better education is needed for neighbours of bee keepers.
- Should be allowed with rule to regulate. It is important so that we can address sustainability in our changing climate.
- Concerned about family members allergic to bee stings
- Notification that there are bees in the area and addresses of where the hives are located.
- good idea
- A limit on the amount of hives and a manageable colony.
- No concerns.
- With proper training, no problem.
- awareness and knowing proper safety measures are implemented
- Rules to protect bees and the people living around them - otherwise fine.

- Responsible beekeeper that knows how to properly manage and care for their bees. Ex a good bee keeper could see if bees are aggressive and find out why or re-queen the colony if it's just an aggressive queen. Bees are everywhere and are important for pollination and responsible beekeeping is amazing
- I think urban beekeeping is fine. Bees are not vicious like wasps and only sting when attacked. If you are respectful of the bees there shouldn't be an issue.
- I think it's a great idea.
- I love the idea of urban beekeeping. I would just hope that the beekeepers know what they're doing.
- You shouldn't need a permit! We should be encouraging more people to keep bees. We need more bees and less wasps.
- Perfect
- I am ALL FOR urban beekeeping. It helps our environment and does not hurt neighbours. The bees used are usually not aggressive like wasps and so I welcome them!
- Distance. Don't 'bug' the bees. Leave them alone and for the most part they'll not sting you. A single sting resulting in ridiculous bloated human response is an example of the silly 'power of one'. One person got stung so 'the system' recoils in horror and overreacts. We are NOT the rulers of Earth
- This is important and I agree with it to a small hobby size, not an urban industry.
- This is a big no for me. I am allergic. If someone wants to keep bees, I would potentially be open to it as long as there was a strict size limit on the hives and they have to ask the neighbors, 2 ways on each side, if they object. Should be declared on property so real estate agents can search.
- I would be interested in keeping bees! Pollinators are important. Honey is delicious. And if set up properly a hive shouldn't cause any trouble for neighbors. I think having cities that support greater biodiversity and sustainability is the way of the future!
- Yes, so long as it doesn't interfere with the neighbours' enjoyment of their property. If an adjacent neighbour has a documented life or health threatening bee allergy, that should be an automatic veto.
- Think we should encourage this but limit the number of hives.
- We already have bees in our neighborhood, doesn't bother at all. I personally like it, very cool to have pollinators in Calgary.
- Not sure
- Perhaps a licence similar to dogs/cats that requires owners to comply to a regulation- ensuring hives are tended to appropriately
- I think the more honey bees we can help to exist in the world, the better.
- Notice of the activity if there are serious allergic persons in the area.
- I have no issue with it, but assuming people with allergies do, a req to inform residents within a certain radius. If it presents any risks, there should be standards/requirements in a bylaw for beekeepers, and info provided to residents about mitigation strategies beekeepers have in place.
- As a society we must do everything to promote bee health. From beekeeping practices to herbicide use to pest control and finally to educating Calgaryans on the role bees play in our overall health.
- what? I don't understand this question. How can honeybees make me unsafe?

- Establish limits on quantity of hives.
- Absolutely. Especially if it improves local farming and sense of community
- no issues
- Yes! More bees, even with allergic family members I still thinks it's worth it.
- I always thought pigeons were part of the landscape of a city. Homing and racing pigeons are for a few not the many and maybe should be designated to specific area in town just for them.
- Ok in limited numbers
- protect the bees from people. so the hives need to be protected.
- No concerns
- I think it's a great idea and should be encouraged. There should be no or very little barriers to proceeding.
- There are several hives in my neighborhood and we haven't had any issues. In fact, we like the pollinators, and our apple trees have produced many more apples than before the hives were around. We feel very safe around the bees, and to continue to feel safe, maybe limit to three hives per property
- I think it is exciting if it is done responsibly. I think individuals would need to prove know how and that there would need to be signage warning people of any danger.
- Go for it!
- Signage about the activity, to know what to expect.
- Definitely like the idea! Let the neighbours know that there are hives. Control the number of hives possible within a given area.
- As a former bee keeper, I feel fine about bees in the area as long as they are well cared for.
- Nothing special, except maybe a sign or something?
- I have no issues with bees. I wonder if people need a certain square footage of yard in order to keep them?
- Not in the residential neighbourhoods.
- Bees are great for our environment and don't cause any issues for me. Bees leave you alone if you leave them alone
- I do understand the importance in bee keeping. I feel it is import to encourage beekeeping but maybe limit the amount allowed in the city center.
- People who want to keep bees should have to complete a course and follow guidelines to ensure they know what they are doing.
- urban farm sign

- Signage
- It's a good idea, perhaps limit the number of hives an individual may have
- Huge concern as my self and several members of my family are severely allergic to bee stings
- As an alternative to pesticides, look into hosting bat boxes as a method of pest control.
- Urban beekeeping is essential 2 responsible caregivers of the bees. Whoever wants to be in urban beekeepers should be allowed to
- Signage
- This would be a no from me unless they had an acreage, there are a lot of people allergic to beestings etc. they would have to be a set distance from perimeters and it should be large
- Great idea!
- Nothing. They are safe as long as they are a domestic variety.
- Regulations regarding the number of hives in one area and the size of the colony. All licences should be required if it is a business. Enforcement and fines for anyone who does not follow.
- Shouldn't be allowed. I don't want to be stung or swarmed
- That would be great, citizens would have opportunity to have home made pure honey.
- Nothing
- no issues
- No issues
- Urban beekeeping is an excellent way to increase and help stabilize the bee population. It also helps to educate and familiarize people on their habits and benefits.
- I feel safe
- Rules as they stand at present work. I fees safe with the urban bees located in our vicinity. There's no noise or odour from them. And, they pollinate the flowers and veg in the garden.
- Nothing. It is perfectly safe, although not environmentally responsible as honey bees can out compete our native bees and pollinators.

- Yes great idea
Must meet safety standards to not create conflict with other residents
- Might be a good idea to have a sign indicating that bees are on site.
- Nothing. Bees aren't aggressive. The only time I've ever been stung was when I stepped on one. I'd be fine if my next door neighbors had bees. My only concern with domestic bees is that they can outcompete native bees for pollen & nectar.
- Complaint process if there are issues, and the ability to fine owners if required. There should be some regulations in regards to the size of hives allowed based on yard size and an annual permit to have one.
- A great hobby but it should be licensed.
- All for it
- Signage warning of bee hive in the area.
- I think urban beekeeping is a great idea and way to help bees thrive
- not okay
- Scientific studies show that urban beekeeping is detrimental to the native bee population. The honey bees take food away from native species. They are also less efficient at pollinating our plants than the native species are. Honey bees have their place in agriculture, not in urban settings.
- Limited number of hives allowed
- Limiting number of hives
- I want to know about the bees in my neighbourhood, be educated about what they look like, risks and benefits. A member of my family is allergic to wasps, so education would make us feel safer.
- I would not want bee hives next door to me, concerned about me or my grandchild stung.
- I am definitely okay with this, but people should register with the city if they plan to do this. It should not interfere with the safety and well-being of neighbours, but that being said, neighbour complaints should be warranted rather than just complaining for the sake of complaining.
- No concerns other than contact information posted for neighbors should the bees start creating a hive outside of their "home hive" to have them moved back. Great initiative otherwise!
- Responsible bee keepers. That need to ensure that the bees can't get out of their area and cause potential harm to others.
- Nothing - I think beekeeping should be allowed in all spaces
- Neighbors should be informed of the beekeeping for their safety and bee safety. Otherwise no big deal.
- Ensure safe bees and control number of bees so that additional queens don't go just anywhere and set up hives in trees.
- Fully support. Bees are good for the environment.
- I fully support urban beekeeping as long as people are trained properly in how to do it. Perhaps a two day training program resulting in a certificate or license that allows a person to keep bees?

- They need to have hives away from common property lines (ie: shared fences) and would need to prevent negative interactions. Hive maintenance and proper disposal would need to be considered. As well as neighbours with allergies.
- Nothing, bees are great for the environment and ecosystem
- A friendly sign that states there is an urban beehive in the yard or area. People are likely to be less scared if they see bees and hopefully supportive if they know it is there.
- I do not believe that anything needs to be in place other than registering the hives as you would a dog or cat. I hope Calgary fosters a healthy beekeeping community as it greatly increase the vibrancy of the city.
- I don't think this is a safe urban practice & is also intimidating to neighboring people and pets in the community. Imagine living next door to a city yard that is packed full of beehives! This should not be allowed in a city urban environment--the amount of regulation& policing too expensive, too!
- Education on how to deter bees from one's own proerty
- That would be a great opportunity for the residence of this city to produce their own honey.
- Should not allowed.
- I think it should be permitted.
- Bylaws as to how many hives can be on 1 property and maintenance of said hives
- I am fine with it but signs would be the biggest thing for people like me who are allergic to them like a be ware of bee sign on property fencing
- Ok. No disease allowed
- Nothing... bees do not cause issues as they are not aggressive.
- I have no concerns about urban beekeeping. We do not keep bees in our yard but a neighbor has bees that visit our yard regularly through summer. They don't cause any trouble at all, they are not aggressive in any way and we enjoy watching them visit flowers around our yard. They are wonderful!
- education and information
- That the bees will not come in my yard and compete with the native ground dwelling bees that are trying to survive on my property. I personally feel safe.
- Love it! Great idea
- Distance from fence/public land to prevent stings.
- The area surrounding the hives needs to be fenced in and the hives need to be a reasonable distance away from areas where people may pass by, so they will not be at risk of exposure to many bees.
- Keep as is
- no issues with beekeeping. It's a huge benefit for everyone, pollination of trees and plants, fruit. Its a good idea!!
- Nothing. Our neighbor has a hive & we're ok with it. He shares the honey so bonus
- Our next door neighbours have a hive co-managed with a beekeeping professional and it has been a boon to our gardens, an education for all and the hive has never been a problem. All for it!

- Bees have a high potential to be a source of severe allergy and phobia for many. Hives should be kept in a space that is a considerable distance from other homes.
- Not sure
- yes by those willing to be educated by professionals . too many bees dies from lack proper care due to lack of knowledge and education on the part of the hive owners and hives not properly attended by "companies " that say they will maintain hives them on others properties
- Appropriate signage should be sufficient plus if it's in a residential neighbourhood the permission of the neighbors on the street.
- I'm worried about kids with severe allergies who wouldnt be safe playing outside if the neighbors had bees. Maybe requirements about keeping hives a certain distance from property borders.
- That bee keepers are knowledgeable of safety precautions and it is not being over done
- Should not be allowed in urban areas, rural only.
- Not really because it takes a lot of learning, most won't do the work.
- Safe amount of distance from the hive, a lot of back yards are too small. Some type of beekeeping license/class where you have to demonstrate competence, with the fees to help fund removal of abandoned or poorly kept hives
- Required distance of hives from neighbouring properties and schools/playgrounds
- Beekeepers must have some sort of license and have been trained in where they should be, how to establish a safe hive etc. Not permitted to just the average person. Also limit the amount of hives based on an expert's (not a councillor or general citizen) knowledge of what that number should be.
- I do not know a lot about bee keeping to know what would be needed to feel safe, but would support responsible citizens keeping hives
- Education/back up plan available if something happens
- In many developed European Countries urban beekeeping is highly supported and encouraged . They are considered part of city green development by pollination of flowers and by their presence indicating clean environment. Important is also the community economic benefit.
- There needs to be adequate room for bees to be kept safely. I agree wholeheartedly that bee keeping should be encouraged.
- Bees generally will not bother humans so there is no concern of being safe. But bringing in foreign bees for urban beekeeping can decimate the natural bee populations. Something should be put in place to screen and ensure the bees can interact and have access to plenty of resources.
- Ban
- Great idea. Strong and clear regulations will be required.
- I would support bee keeping, as long as the hive was not too large. There needs to be a limit.
- Signage
- More education and public awareness - is it dangerous to keep bees near people?
- I think this has to be a case by case approval. Very few bee friendly areas for pollinating without people using pesticides.
- Bees and bee hives do not make me feel unsafe. I hope to one day have a small hive in my yard.

- require membership in the Alberta Beekeepers Association; limit number of hives in urban setting. I think anyone wanting to keep bees cares for the health of the hive and will be responsible.
- Hives are located so the bees enter and exit in a fashion not disturbing neighbours. Limit to three or four hives per residence
- I see major issues if a neighbor sets up a bee hive and for instance someone next door has a bee allergy. It's not fair to allow one neighbor to have or do something that can not be kept withing their own yard. We don't want to allow roaming cats or dogs so why bees.
- Fine, does not seem to be an issue
- Nothing. What is there to be afraid of??
- yes, because bees are endangered and honey is amazing a lot of different things.
- Yes! I think this is a fantastic opportunity for hobbyists and people to supplement their income. Honey is a super food (especially in its unprocessed form).
- Some control on the numbers of hives in a given area - our neighbors have 2 hives and they have not been a problem for us.
- I am not in favor of it simply because it has the potential to be handled irresponsibly and there are a number of people with deadly allergies.
- Adequate education/training for the people keeping bees to ensure safe and humane beekeeping. Maybe a limit on how many hives based on property size?
- Hive volume limits
- Nothing zero issues with beekeeping. It is a great idea. Maybe limit the number of hives one can have
- Limit the number of hives to three.
- It's great!!!!!! Should be encouraged
- Restriction on the number of hives/bees based on acreage of the property. The smaller the property the fewer amount of bees. The exception being high rise building where the bees have more room to spread out.
- Absolutely, perhaps with a permit system to ensure the landowners are taking proper steps to secure the correct hives and have plans for extraction, swarming, winterization, etc.
- Give your neighbors notice of the hive and a chance to discuss any issues with it. If your neighbors agree i dont see there being a problem.
- Nothing
- Nothing. Bees are relatively harmless and necessary for plants.
- Proper management
- I think there should be notification of people in the area before it happens , my concern would be someone neighboring with severe bee allergies.
- I support urban bee keeping. I would support an incentive program by the city to encourage it.
- Sounds cool
- Do not allow. Too many people are allergic

- best practice bylaws from other well governed and regulated cities
- Limits on the number of hives. Also, honeybee keeping it has a detrimental effect on native pollinators.
- Must be on private property that is fenced
- Nothing.
- Yes, one hive per household.
- Not in heavily populated areas or near schools/playgrounds. Lots of people have bad allergic reactions so no urban bee keeping close to neighbors that have this high sensitivity.
- knowing that people are knowledgeable and able to appropriately care
- Proper set up. Bees are so important to ensuring we continue to have healthy gardens.
- Safety protocols, though I'm unsure of what that is. I support beekeeping, would just want to be sure that those with severe allergies to stings are not affected.
- Maximum bee farm towers based on home owner land size. Eg 1 tower per house on a 60m<sup>2</sup> property? Just as an example.
- Nothing, love urban beekeeping! There should be more of it!
- I think reasonable numbers is important for urban beekeeping.
- Limits on the number of hives.
- This should be allowed, they can't really do much to keep the bees other than ensure their farm meets the bees needs
- Not up against a fence or garage that someone else owns. Not an 'excess' number of bees in someone's yard if they are undesirable.
- I love urban bees! I purchase urban honey, I have planted bee-friendly plants to support local hives. I know of non-profits that have hives. I think this is a beautiful way to pollinate city fruit crops, connect people back to nature and to preserve bee populations.
- None I Fully support it
- All for it! Bring it on!
- No concerns.
- I have no problem with this. Honey bees are not dangerous.
- Yes please
- Not have it in residential neighbourhoods or near public parks, netting or other containment requirements to keep them out of others property, owners of bees accountable and liable for any harm or damage the bees cause
- Applications for a permit much like secondary suite- input from neighbours
- A limit on the number of hives or bees.
Maybe one - 2 only?
- I support urban beekeeping. There are many benefits. I suppose if there are bees that sting signage or proper enclosures need to exist so people aren't accidentally disturbing the hives.
- Fencing around the bee hives

- Education. I love the idea of beekeeping but don't know enough about the impacts on others, including safety.
- I agree they should be allowed. As long as they are not causing issues.
- No more than 2 cells.
- I have no concerns regarding this. Bees are endangered so anything we can do to support them should be encouraged.
- I'm in favour of bees, but I know this can be a concern for people with bee sting allergies. City lots are small, and bee presence will increase on neighboring properties, which increases the chance of a bee sting incident of a susceptible person (e.g., needs an epi-pen).
- We need bees. Yes yes yes everyone with the space and time should be keeping bees.
- Go for it!
- A limit to how many hives one can have and they need certification that shows they know how to keep them and are responsible!
- Signage alerting people of their presence. Will reduce numbers of native bees so not supportive of urban beekeeping.
- Why does this need to be urban. Bees should not be kept in places where neighbors are within 50 feet.
- This seems like a great idea given the trouble bees are in. It should be somewhat limited though, so that neighbours are not affected by large swarms of stinging insects.
- Permitted by Alberta agriculture. Density of maximum of 2 hives per yard.
Provide water source in your yard for your bees.
Maintain hives to prevent swarming. Let your neighbours know you have hives, be open, they are to let you know if there is any issue.
Address the issue if any.
- Yes this is a fantastic idea it will help the bee population and our agriculture as a whole
- Hives are not kept near shared areas like fences
- Nothing, this is safe enough.
- I am all for it. The bee population is dying off we need more keep e alive.
- Just an assurance the owner is trained to safely keep bees. Requirement to keep bees a certain distance from the property line to minimize conflict with neighbours.
- 100m away from neighbours
- Acreage...not densely populated neighborhoods
- I'm fine with this.
- No - too many people allergic to stings
- Beekeeping should be monitored and fines should be issued for any hives that swarm.
- Limit per square foot of property of how many boxes you can have.

- Yes. Limit number allowed. Certain homes.
Rules to protect animal when owners stops activity.
- YES, MORE BEES! I believe those that have courses/certification should be allowed to raise bees. I feel the amount of hives should be dependant on the size of the land you live on. A professional should inspect your property before starting, recommending how many hives, what type of bees, etc.
- Warning signs
- I have family that keep bees, this past time has brought our community together. The health of the natural areas around the hives have improved dramatically since getting the hives. Creating self-sufficient, sustainable households are important
- Whatever is currently in place.
- Signage that beehives on property to alert neighbours if allergies
- Bees are great. What actionj do you take if swarm moves. Inform owner?
  - Method of communication with owner should have knowledge of bees or credentials
- The issue with bees, the problem is allergies. Before you get your bees, it's reasonable to notify your neighbours & check if there are allergies. Space is an issue. You need to make sure there's enough for them, considering the size of urban lots.
Consider how many hives each person has.
Q: Whats the definition of recreational beekeeping? Whats the threshhold b/w rec and commercial?
What's hapening in the city about this is pretty cool. The city should have beehives. And manage them. I've started planting more flowers that attract more bees.
- What activities to protect
Education inline what to do on bee knowledge.
  - Communication to where city limits
  - Allergic reaction, beehive on premis
- Some form of notification of bees in the area. Mainly, to inform those people with allergies where they need to be more cautious.
- No good in backyards due allergies to stings. I have seen anaphyllactic shock. Dangerous. Put bee hives in our wild city areas, plant wild flower and herbs that strengthen bees immune systems in those areas and ditches. I would volunteer for this. Use recycling bottle money for this
- Yes
- In an unbiased answer, bees are beneficial to all, and as a beekeeper, I know they are docile and immense fun as a backyard hobby as they are, no additional intervention needed other than more people doing urban beekeeping.
- Kept in an isolated secure area.
- Permission from homeowners surrounding the hive up to 3 houses away in any direction.
- This is a concern for both allergy humans and bees subjected to pollutants in city areas
- Yes
- Notices on every property with bees, to let the community know there is a bee colony present.
- Should be allowed

- I think just a limit to how many hives in a small area near neighbors. One hive in a backyard is fine. Bees are good and necessary and struggling to make it in our world.
- Nothing more than is currently in place. Bees are silent, not smelly, and benefit entire communities. Swarm management options are already in place for the rare instances of swarms. I have a hive in my yard and it has never been an issue for neighbours! Well cared for hives are essential.
- Reasonable limits on hive number and sizes that would prevent operations from becoming large / commercial in nature.
- I need to be supportive to those who keep bees. Bees are great pollinators and part of a natural ecosystem.
- Just have the space for it.
- Less herbicide and pesticide usage - Cuba is not facing a bee crisis like North America is due to the lack of harmful pesticides; more educational programs and access to start up beekeeping
- This can be an acceptable addition to the surrounding area.
  - should require an annual poll from the surrounding neighbours, this can assist to ensure there is no abuse or allergy concerns.
  - checks and reviews for those with the hives (and past hives)
- Limits to how many colonies/hives are allowed per capita of land.
- yes! Important - every community should have a bee hive. anyone wanting a bee hive should have one.
  - Nothing in place needed - bees are harmless.
- I have no issue with bees and safety.
- Nothing. Bees are essential for a healthy environment and don't fly around stinging people willy nilly.
- Having a say in any close to where I live as I have a child with bee sting concerns so should have a right to keep her safe when she is playing outdoors
- I think beekeeping is a good idea!
- I generally support urban beekeeping. Limit number of hives to a reasonable number. Review best practices in other urban settings that have extensive urban beekeeping experience.
- Signage of a hive on a property but otherwise no issues
- I do not feel that this should belong in the city.
- Consultation with neighbors prior to starting bee keeping to understand any serious allergies, etc. Limits on reasonable amount of bees in a residential neighborhood.
- Education on how to deal with urban bees that are in my area in the event that the bees need help.
- Great idea, but may need to limit hive numbers in typical residential areas. Many people are allergic to stings, and have concerns about bringing more bees into an immediate area.
- Good for the environment
- A LIMIT TO THE NUMBER OF HIVES IN A PROPERTY AND A LIMIT TO THE NUMBER OF PROPERTIES WITHIN A DESIGNATED AREA (TO BE DETERMINED). NEIGHBOURHOOD, NOT JUST ADJACENT NEIGHBOURS, APPROVAL, AS SOME PEOPLE ARE HIGHLY ALLERGIC TO BEE STINGS.

- in a yard
- An owner that provides sufficient hives to maintain them. Inform neighbours of the bees, should someone be allergic to bees.
- honey bees rarely sting
sign posting their presence so sensitive persons can avoid area
- YES YES YES! information on how to avoid getting stung, information on why this is important.
- Love the idea. Think bee neighbor should advise neighbors so there's no panic and someone trying to kill bees. no more than 2/3 hives to ensure people can still enjoy yards. more could be a problem
- Hives should be kept at a certain distance from homes and towards the centre of their yard, not to once fence or other fence as to be a nuisance to one neighbor of the other.
- I do not have safety concerns about urban beekeeping but I think we need a better understanding on the impacts on local wild bee populations.
- Educate public on benefits, limit hive size.
- A limit on the maximum number of bees that can be housed or kept within a certain area.
- Limit the number of hives in a district and in one yard. I would not like my neighbour to have a number of hives.
- Nothing bees are naturally occurring maybe 100 yards from peoples homes or something similar but wasps and bees exist already I think this is a great idea
- I don't think we need bylaws for urban beekeeping. I trust that people who are interested in this will do the necessary research before putting in the financial investment.
- Support this as long as carried out responsibly and safely.
- WE live near an urban bee keeper and there have been no issues
- People need education on most things and to understand what the reason is people are doing things. I don't think someone should have 10 bee hives and most people would just complain anyways.
- Controls on size of hives, restrictions on locations where these can be set up (certain minimum setbacks from schools, parks, businesses). The city should also inspect these on an annual basis, as a condition for licensing.
- Notice or signage. If someone has a severe allergy then they should be aware that bees are on premise. Usually bees don't sting unless provoked but best to take precautions.
- Once again people who keep bees need to treat them with respect so that they are not a problem to their neighbours.
- I am comfortable with bee keeping in urban areas. Honey bees are not aggressive and do not create any issues for surrounding home owners, if anything it can actually help gardens.
- I feel very safe. I am thrilled that this is being considered within the city of Calgary
- Encourage and educate

- I have no safety concerns regarding urban bee keeping - but owners needs to know how to take care of the bees to prevent the spreading of diseases between hives - cleaning and disease recognition, etc.
- Information accessible for proper beekeeping practices
- I personally think urban beekeeping shouldn't be promoted as honey bees are not native and out-compete bees that are, but I don't feel unsafe about their presence in an area.
- No problem! We need bees.
- Bees are very safe and beneficial
- Limit on the number of hives and the care and control of the hives. Signage would be beneficial especially in a case of allergy
- Yes !
- I believe beekeeping should have a limit on how many hives you are allowed to have in your backyard
- Appropriate regulations around safety. For example, would all types of urban beekeeping be safe for neighbours in a small yard? Is there a space required for offset from neighbours? Is some training required?
- Absolutely nothing! I strongly encourage helping to raise the bee population, with out bees, we starve.
- Anything related to bees should be encouraged.
- DO NOT agree. Anyone living in the city in close proximity to someone else; people are allergic to stings and can die. Inside city would be irresponsible.
Sure if someone has an acreage then provide a 'temporary' license to allow; renew each year as circumstances may change or city boundary change.
- As long as the beekeeper is knowledge and can manage the hives, I have no problem with this..
- Nothing needed. Bees are generally harmless and a benefit to society in general.
- that the beekeeper is responsible and has undergone the appropriate training as well as licensing to keep bees and receives monitoring and support to ensure the safety of the animals and people in the area
- Love they idea, nothing!
- Plenty of signage to indicate proximity and location of hives and guidance on proper behaviour near bee activity.
- No honey bees, encourage citizens to plant native flowers and plants to support the native bee populations.
- Nothing. All our gardens, green spaces, parks, etc. will be much healthier ecosystems with this element. This way the hives are in proper controlled locations.
- Honestly as much as I think this is an awesome idea - our communities, especially the newer ones are too close together. houses are almost stacked on top of each other. if 5 or 6 of my neighbors have bees I am going to have issues with there being too many bees in my yard as well

- Nothing? I think it's great! I wonder if there is enough forage to support the growing numbers of hives in the city. City of Calgary should do more to promote pollinator-friendly yards, and discourage turf grass monocultures. Lawns are lame.
- Signage
- There has to be appropriate parameters for urban beekeepers - do they meet safe property standards, such to ensure whatever they are doing does not impede on the well-being of others in the area. Can neighbors enjoy their private outdoor space? Could be difficult unless they have a large property
- I can see a place in backyards for beekeeping in Calgary. It is known that bees are needed for plant growth. More is known about disease in bees, and that should be monitored.
- Notice to neighbours in a specific but small (2-3 home) radius. Bona fide medical certificates of severe allergies to support objections.
- Bee hives surely need more protection from people than the protection people need from beehives. Hives should be supported and encouraged by the city. Regulation on the species that are brought in from urban hives so there is no threat to native populations (aggressive/out compete)
- Safeguards for native bees.
- Beekeeper has taken a course from accredited training centre and is a member of a beekeeping guild. If there is an incident, like swarming, then the beekeeper and/or guild is responsible for responding.
- People engaging in this practice have to take course on how to do this safely, register with city, and have premises inspected - permit issued.
- no issues
- If you are a neighbour just let me know you have bees.
- I would encourage this, but limit number of bees/hives per owner (dependent on lot size). Perhaps a permit/inspection prior to installing hives or education requirement prior to set up?
- Nothing
- Should be allowed with a restriction on the number of hives one can have.
- Nothing... honeybees are very docile
- Allowed on properties of a specific size.
- i think that they should not be allowed residential areas...but do have a great purpose in other areas (industrial, rural areas)
- I don't know.
- One of my neighbours in Victoria kept bees. I don't know much about it but my flowers and vegetables did very well with all those bees around
- Should not be allowed. Possibility of stings
- We have been living in different cities in Germany over the past 10 years, Urban beekeeping, livestock and pigeons are allowed in all cities there. There were several beekeepers close to in our neighbourhood For me no safety concerns, rather that children learn to respect and safely interact with bees.

- I am fine with that. If it was in my neighborhood, I would want more information as I react strongly to stings.
- Nothing
- Would be important to have signs stating the close proximity of Bees especially for those with Bee Allergies! Otherwise the world needs BEES!
- Maybe
- People must have experience to do this and are doing it for the correct purpose.
- Limits on the number of hives to avoid overwhelming neighbours.
- Basic safety
- Just knowing someone is doing it, and has plants in their yard to encourage bees to stay around. Also would do my own research to know which were bees or if wasps were in my yard.
- Requirements for signage alerting the public to the presence of bee hives and setting a maximum number of hives at one property in the city
- Should be encouraged with input from beekeepers. There should be a way to keep people away from hives to keep both bees & people safe.
- Limit the size and amount of hives.
- Should be encouraged. Bring back the bees!
- why is this being considered in the responsible pet bylaw? Bees are not pets. I don't think beekeeping has any place in the city. it poses a risk to people with allergies
- Residents should be permitted to beekeeping under a controlled program. Notifying neighbors prior to beginning and respecting of any allergies.
- There should not be any urban beekeeping.
- Apply provincial regulations for bee keeping
- Literally nothing - bees are wonderful and mind their own beesniss (ha!)
- No chemical use.
- Love the idea but given the ever shrinking properties and growing house sizes, there would need to be minimum space requirements and education. Our backyard is too close to neighbors for us or them to safely have bees. With kids and pets and shared fences, it's a concern
- It's a great input from humans into healthy balance of nature. We can do at least beekeeping in order to help out trees and flowers around.
- There should be a limit to the number of hives per yard. Otherwise I have no concerns. We need to keep bee populations up and they need all the help they can get.
- Any non-floral patterned shirt would perhaps help in avoiding trouble with bees.
- I have kept bees and find them non aggressive and not a hindrance to others. I believe a good practice is to check in with immediate neighbours before getting bees in case there are allergies.
- How can anyone with serious allergies to bee stings ever feel safe with large numbers of bees in their neighborhood. Beekeeping cannot occur in areas where someone has a life-threatening allergy, and they must be removed or prevented if someone with that condition possesses it in an neighborhood.

- why Urban beekeeping? Have concerns of public safety. Don't know what need to be in place to feel reasonably safety.
- Notification of beekeeping close by.
- There shouldn't be any in a residential area because of allergies etc.
- Urban bees are extremely important to our community. I think it needs to be encouraged. But I also think that people should have taken mandatory minimum course so they are beekeepers not beekeepers. Numerous diseases and parasites affect bees. Education and supporting provincial inspection is a MUST!
- no, bees in close proximity to houses may cause stings
- Properly maintained hives do not pose a significant threat to nearby residences, and should be allowed within the city limits.
- I fully advocate for this and do not see a need for city involvement.
- This should only be done if it is not affecting the people that live by you;
- No problem with bees at all
- I feel no danger in a beekeeping program, and I plant flowers specifically to encourage bees so that my food plants can also thrive
- No. I am very allergic to bees and if they get in my back yard then I cannot go out and it is my property.
- Support Urban beekeeping and trust there are only one or two hives in any backyard.
- Good as is.
- a process to deal with complaints and concerns with enforcement
- Some is tolerable but control the density.
- As long as neighbours know what you have so that proper precautions can be taken if allergies to bee stings. A license and consensus by neighbours might be helpful?
- As long as it's contained and not bothering close by neighbors, don't see an issue.
- Nothing.
- Lets keep the wasps away
- I don't currently have a problem with this. I'm all for it.
- Who decides whether a person's property is large enough to accommodate beehives? What will be the criteria the beekeeper will have to follow and how many hives will they be allowed? Will they be monitored once they get a license on a yearly basis?
- Keep them in a place far enough away from public getting stung
- These insects are not native and will be competing with native species for pollen. A city environment doesn't offer enough plants for both. Beekeeping should not be allowed unless they are on an acreage. normal safety procedures where there is less chance of someone allergic getting stung.
- I already feel safe and have no issues with this.
- ok if the beekeeping is kept to a small scale.
- discussion with those nearby (ex neighbours) to ensure no harm is likely

- Interested
- Great! Should be encouraged!
- Education is key - both of the general public and the new beekeepers. Ensure there is a minimum distance between beehives and residential homes. Encourage more beehives on rooftops of commercial buildings.
- Number of bees per square footage of yard space plus the consideration of proximity of neighbouring homes. Perhaps permits should be given out and the neighbours should be allowed a say - in case there is a severe, documented allergy.
- I currently feel safe.
- There is no safety issues with urban beekeeping. Belonging to a club that helps regulate is good
- Unless it becomes an issue, I am all in for this. The more, the better.
- Licensing and a training course should totally be required. I have a friend with bees in the NW and bee keeping is a lot more work and money than people think.
- I think bees are safe and don't concern me at all.
- consideration for the impact on native bees as the species often raised in urban beekeeping are not native and can have impacts on the native species.
- Allowed with license & public notice to neighbours who can appeal. Signage (wrought iron bee) out front of home that advises beehives are kept on property.
- if the neighbors agree why not as some people have allergies to bee stings.
- Wouldn't want beehives right next to my property, where i could inadvertently be stung. I have severe allergy to bee sting.
- Simple - - education and boundaries - that's all. Lots of wildflowers - it would benefit all of us. Why not have wildflowers instead of grass that is ill kept and costly anyway.
- Urban beekeeping is great for backyard beekeepers, having one or two hives. But not for running large businesses and many gives on single properties.
- A little sign on the property that would quickly identify bees in the area (so those with allergies can be alert).
- Know that the type of bees being kept do not pose undue risk to public
- I believe bees should be kept by professionals or legitimate honey farmers or something. I'm not a big fan of the growing population of hobby/amateur beekeepers. They should be more controlled considering they compete with our native pollinators
- I'm OK with having urban beekeeping as long as the individuals are properly trained.
Bees would actually be a benefit because they are a pollinator. Bees world wide are dying off so having some in back yards would help.
- as long as they are kept properly don't think it is an issue as honey bees are not huge attackers as long as they are left alone

- Bees need to have space and not cause excessive concern for humans worried about stings. There are many with severe bee sting allergies. They wouldn't feel safe living nearby a bee hive owner.
- Must have a large yard with only a limited number of hives.
- Where
- Nothing. Do it
- Allow
- YES PLEASE!!! Bees are so, SO important.
- Knowing that I wouldn't inadvertently put myself at risk of a sting. Maybe a sign saying 'Beekeeping in area' ?
- Notification to neighbours nearby to offer them a chance to oppose based on allergies
- Neighbours should be informed.
- Signage
- Education
- Online city registry/map available of addresses where bee keeping has been permitted. Do not allow it in multi family homes such as condos and townhouses. There needs to be reasonable distance between homes to protect those with life threatening allergies.
- Nothing! Please allow this!
- no thanks
- I am concerned with the risk to people and pets with close contact to many bees. Bee stings can be lethal to both humans and animals. I do not support this endeavor. It should remain in rural areas.
- no - dangerous to others
- A fence and 10 ft from property lines.
- i am afraid of bees and may find it difficult living close to a beekeeper.
- No, too many people have allergies and can not always carry or afford to carry Epi Pens.
- Limits on the number of hives per property.
- I believe our environment needs to aid the bee's, and if locally owned it may be beneficial.
- Definitely good thing.
- No problem with that because they don't smell, they're quiet, and they serve a purpose - plant pollination & honey.
- Yes, proper beekeeping is not a problem if the area the bee hives are kept are properly enclosed.
- Communication with neighbors.
- I need to know there is a place to contact if I have issues. That there is a person that will work with me if issues arise to help make things better and if needed being a mediator between me and the party I have an issue with.
- I think the city should, at a minimum, put limits on urban beekeeping. Honey bees can have severe negative impacts on native biodiversity and the city should put serious effort into investigating this issue at length. Native pollinators are a necessity in order to have effective pollination

- I worry about native bee populations. Urban areas have the chance to be a great refuge for native bee populations. Honey bees outcompete native bees for resources. We should protect native bees and leave honey bees in farmer's fields where they belong. Keep urban spaces available for native bees!
- Nothing needed.
- I think there should be some sort of regulation to make sure people don't hurt themselves or others. But it is important for people to raise bees and help increase pollination. So I think it should not be too difficult for one to raise bees in their own home.
- I am more worried about the bees. The +15 downtown had a space with bee hives installed, but when bad weather came the hives were not properly protected. It looked as if they were broken and most of the bees died.
I would feel safe if the hives had ample space.
- Nothing. I love the idea. Everything I plant in my yard is to attract bees.
- It's bees. I wish we had more bees in my neighborhood. I would expect, if I had a neighbour with hives, to be advised by that neighbour and provided with more information on how to help the hive thrive
- Yes great idea. Develop safe guidelines.
- Should be allowed and limit the size according to location
- A limit on the number of hives kept in one area
- I already feel safe and want more urban beekeepers
- None. We need bees - go for it!
- I do not think that beekeeping is appropriate in an urban setting. Doubtless, the bees will be attracted to the blossoms on other trees in the neighbourhood.
- Hive setback distance from property boundaries, management of over-aggressive bee colonies
- Don't really like this idea. How many bees would get killed by cars, people? Is the owner keeping the area properly clean? What happens when wasps/hornets takeover a hive?
- This activity should be carefully studied and the best evidence understood before it is permitted. Are urban honeybees hurting Alberta's native bees?
- Honey bees are an invasive species. Instead of introducing more, we should be taking steps to protect our native bees. I don't feel threatened by the bees, but rather the people who sanctimoniously feel they're doing good for the environment by having bees, when really they're just helping themselves
- Distance. For example, I would not want a hive in my neighbour's yard next to my sandbox. I feel that beekeeping should not be allowed in mixed-dwelling (condos/townhouse/etc) only single-detached, with permission from immediate neighbours.
- Hives are great but MUST have proper disease management, as I have family members who owns commercial operations I expect disease management for ALL hives. Also licensing with education if dogs and cats are to be licenced
- Beekeeper's are aware if neighbors have allergies to bees.

- Limitation on the number of hives and proximity to neighbours.
- this seems very safe and good for the city/planet
- Yes should be allowed because helps plant and fruit pollination.
- I AM an urban beekeeper. I find the current guidelines perfect! I have gotten to know my neighbours and they LOVE the bees in their yards and honey and even beekeeping with me. I've done for 4 yrs and no safety issues whatsoever for myself or my neighbours. It is already regulated by the province.
- Awareness, if you live within close proximity. There could be issues that arise with anaphylactic reaction allergies and proximity to parks (including playgrounds, dog parks and school yards).
- Beekeepers have to be held to strong standards so that neighbors are not threatened in any way due to their beehives in the area. Fines and removal, if necessary?
- notification
- nothing - we should encourage more natural bee husbandry
- Yes
- There are a couple of people who do bee keeping on our block, I am allergic to stings and they are not trained in the art of bee keeping. Not sure how they can contain them Should not be in residential areas
- Simply knowing where the apiaries are so that I wouldn't cause the bees to feel the need to defend themselves would be sufficient; bees do not attack unprovoked.
- Bees are great. The city should plant more flowers and plants that help pollinators. We need more bees.
- Please love and respect
- Ensure the beeds are not going to swarm
- Bees in the city is a good. It's a good way to make honey in the city. Give it to family & neighbours.
- Not too much
  - Maybe a sign noting ""A beekeeper with hives lives here""
  - More bees the better
- Keeping a beehive would be great
- Any beekeeping seems fine
- Should be allowed to keep one give per community. Increases gardening possibilities. Run by co-op housing or a group/person. 1 per 5 mile radius
- I think we should allow bees in the city
- Should be allowed to have bees in the yard. Should be taking care of the bees
- I think the more bees the better, so we should have few restrictions on bee farming. I would appreciate little more than a bee registry, and signs/stickers that advise the public of bees on the premises. Beyond that, I feel it should be governed privately
- Leave this space
- Adequate proof that owners are appropriately educated about safety, health and cleanliness.

- Hives kept away from fence lines / gates / schools and daycares / playgrounds / bus stops; limit the number of hives per square footage of lot size; implement annual fee/ license to keep urban livestock.
- No urban beekeeping allowed. Some individuals have anaphylaxis reaction to bee/wasp stings.
- A license to keep bees, proper housing facilities and safety equipment for beekeepers. Notices on homes that keep bees and on alley fences so that children are notified of their presence.
- laws to ensure the person is doing this correctly so that it benefits pollination
- Yes!
- I am very allergic, encourage parks to plant flowering trees and flower beds vs - flowering weeds and clover taking over the grass where our feet and seats conflict with there pollen gathering activities.
- The City should monitor urban beekeepers. I don't know if they need licenses, but they should. I know of an instance when bees were not cared for properly and left and built a hive in someone's foundation, thereby causing substantial damage and the home owner had no recourse.
- Think this needs to happen but how do we deal with those that may live near a hive with allergies to bee stings.
- Appropriate housing and caretaking- it would be amazing to see bee keeping accepted and welcomed into communities!
- This tends to get out of hand. The bees leave the hives and those of us who are allergic to bee stings can't go outside. Bee venom can kill someone
- People with allergies to stings need to know if they are close to urban beekeeping so they can take precautions.
- Permit + inspection
- Licences, permits
- Honestly, I'm a little scared of bees. I know they are necessary and I want to protect them, so as long as I am notified if one of my neighbours is keeping bees, and what is expected of them, I'm okay.
- signage-warnings
- A limit of the amount of hives allowed. A mandatory care course and license to keep bees will educate the public and track the amount of hives within a neighbourhood
- Yard size and limited to 1 hive
- Restrictions related to how many hives can be located in a certain area, parks supporting bees near by zoned areas.
- Appropriate storage and good management of bee hives
- Nothing. Love the idea. I mean, some reasonable regulation about beekeeping. But nothing too restrictive.
- bees are necessary to our survival. bees dont go out and look for peoples to hurt they are too busy trying to survive .bees come in my yard to see out my flowers but have never been a problem and provide me a free service by cross pollinating our yards.

- Sure, Bees are endangered. But would have to be housed appropriately.
- Permit/Licensing
  - Proper housing
  - Standards of care and control
- Our family feels absolutely safe with urban beekeeping. There would be obvious exceptions where bee hives may be in high traffic areas and increased probability of conflict. Otherwise, we would encourage more urban bee keepers!
- I'm not fond of bees, however they do have an important purpose. As long as they are not disturbing me when I'm outside, no concerns.
- Should be allowed as long as it doesn't harm your neighbours
- Nothing. "Go Bee Keepers!"
- regulations that owners must follow and are monitored to make sure owners follow
- Nothing. Bees are part of nature.
- Bylaw & fines making it a self funded program
  - License
  - Training
  - Min size lot/setback
  - Insurance for damages
  - Garden/water source on site
  - Neighbor consensus
  - Max permits within area
  - Responsible for allergic reactions
  - My experience: swarm when keepers not home/activity in hazmat suit 13' away
- All for it. Consideration may be made for the number of hives in relation to size of the property.
- City website map of hives for use by persons with allergy reaction
- It is a great idea. It will help pollinate fruits and vegetables, but also help with diversification of our eco systems. It is a great hobby if done responsibly.
- I understand the importance of replenishing our bee supply but it shouldn't be allowed in an urban setting because of potential danger to people. By allowing it in an urban setting, you're more likely to get unskilled people pursuing it as a hobby vs a properly maintained operation by professionals
- permit/license
- Should be limited to one small hive.
- Urban beekeeping should only be allowed if the individual has taken a certified bee keeping course and fully understands that bees are livestock and need to be safely managed to prevent the spread of disease to native species of bees. Enhancing native pollinators habitats would be better.
- Don't have any in the area, so don't know what the impact might be.
- I'm not scared of bees and we need more of them.
- Nothing other than a permit. It's a great idea.

- This should be allowed. Stop over regulating things. Focus on annoying loud animals like dogs!!! Barking should be the priority area to focus on for the Bylaw Review.
- Should have large and secluded property that won't affect your neighbours property values. Prior to setting up beekeeping advise neighbours first because many people are very allergic to stings.
- I'm not totally opposed to it. The concern would be that they don't become a nuisance i.e. that the beekeeper is limited to how many they could keep. I get concerned that an individual beekeeper would get carried away and keep too many which could become troublesome. How would this be monitored.
- NA
- I fully support beekeeping but regulations should address some responsibility for public safety due to possible threats to certain individuals who have anaphylactic shock from a simple bee sting. However we must realize bee populations are dying due to agricultural /chemical use environment pollution.
- License/permit - should include consent from neighbours. Must be certain distance from other dwellings & public use areas.
- I am OK with urban bee keeping. Hopefully it will help out pollination and wild bee populations.
- There should be an ability for neighbors to notify authorities if the hive becomes a problem. Neighbours should be able to veto a hive (e.g. because of allergies, small children). Keepers could be asked to change the queen.
- We already have beehives in our neighbourhood and we feel safe. The bees don't smell and they are quiet, unlike barking dogs next door, Bees are great neighbours because they pollinate the gardens. Calgaryans have kept bees for years with very few concerns or incidents.
- There are 100s of beehives currently in Calgary. I feel safe because there are lots of native bees, and the evil wasp, that fly around anyways. I feel safe.
- Not more than 3 hives per household
- I believe the number of hives per property has to be limited to 2 or 3...and no more than 10 to a city block...or something like that. Maybe less than that per city block. Each hive has the potential of housing 60,000 bees.
- I don't see urban bees as a risk to the public in any way.
- I have already beehives as neighbors and never had a problem they are also quite and clean.
- Education regarding safe keeping of bees. Most domestic bees are not aggressive and people need to know this. Also, we should be educated on which chemicals could potentially harm bees so that we can protect them from those chemicals.
- Permit and/or licensing
- Nothing in particular needed for safety. Bees are not dangerous, smelly, or noisy. They are highly beneficial.
- Those looking after bees must not have more than a small number of hives on a city lot. Poorly tended bees would tend to swarm, creating anxiety where they land. Must be tended properly. Bees are a fantastic addition to the community, and if people understand them they will not feel threatened.

- Really nothing. Generally the bees are harmless unless one decides to bang on the hive.
- A knowledgeable and committed beekeeper who tries to mitigate any concerns of neighbors. The beekeeper should be able to alleviate any fears through clear explanations of the habits and value of bees.
- There should be a maximum number of hives allowed per property. Beekeepers could be required to have epipen where necessary. Otherwise I encourage this activity. Pollinators are important for the ecosystem and help gardens thrive. They also ward off other more dangerous pests like wasps and hornets.
- Ability to move away.
- Control on number of hives per yard. I like bees and would even consider keeping them myself.
- Urban beekeeping is a blessing and perhaps even a necessity. Real problems only arise from negligence which could be resolved by enforcing a program that addresses complaints with a site visit from the provincial apiculturist (or other agreed upon member of CDBA) to assess the beekeeper's practices.
- As long as the bees are located on a person's property, there is no issue as I see it. Those people that fear bees are the ones that swat wildly at them and that causes the bee to get upset. Wasps/hornets are the issue here as a pest, they can attack humans and pets with little cause.

Livestock

- Again, to be informed, know what the rules are, and how to report violations. I also have health concerns about urban livestock.
- not at all- disease
- Regulations as to what species of livestock are allowed and how many and in what size space. Licencing. Regulations about waste management.
- waste removal, odours, movement controls (escaping etc) and of course noise.
- Allow it as long as there is no disturbance to neighbours
- Minimum standards in terms of cleanliness, and size of livestock-specific buildings on a property beyond what are currently outlined in the Land Use Bylaw. Max # of animals, possibly based on uncovered property size.
- I don't want livestock in my neighborhood. Not as a matter of safety but a concern for disturbances such as smell, noise and diseases
- Proper land for the type. limitations on the number of animals per square foot. Proper caging or housing where appropriate. Must maintain a proper standard of care. Must treat them humanely. If raised for slaughter, slaughter cannot be done where the public could reasonably see. Must be clean.
- Depends on the livestock. I think very few people would be capable of keeping most livestock in their yards.
- Fenced off areas so that the livestock is not attacked by coyotes.
- I am not concerned about urban bee livestock
- no thx

- I think chickens should be allowed, but people have to manage the smell and noise with neighbours.
- Just no
- Not sure how I feel about this I guess if they were not too noisy and stinky I wouldn't have a problem.
- Property cages and housing, conscientious ownership.
- I think you would need to have something in place to control the noise and smell of livestock so as to not bother the neighbours. Enforcing proper shelter would also be good for the animals.
- More of it, I have zero safety concerns
- Training and rules
- I support neighbourhood chickens / geese etc.
- People have the right to provide themselves with food, therefore there should be no restrictions on livestock in Calgary beyond providing a responsible space and feed to animals.
- animals need enough room to move and live - not necessarily a good idea to have a larger animal in the back yard.
- Yes. As long as they are kept on private property. Please modify the bylaw to consider pot belly pigs as pets, not livestock.
- Kept in safe and humane conditions
- Absolutely!!! Chickens are organic pest control that makes eggs! No roosters, but a few chickens per household is fab.
- I don't want to live next to chickens or miniature horses and the like. Miniature pigs seem fine as they are like dogs but farm animals shouldn't be in the city, in small lots, it's not fair to them. I don't want my back yard smelling like a barn either.
- I think people should be allowed to keep a small number of chickens for pest control and egg production in their yards.
- I am not in favor of this, even though my grandparents kept a cow in the back yard back in the 1920's. Large animals smell, and there is no way to adequately remove their waste. About 10 years ago, my neighbors kept a sheep in their garage, and it kept getting out and into people's yards. It stunk
- As someone who is interested in keeping chickens in their backyard if the bylaws were to change. I would like to see a limit placed on the number of chickens per household/enclosure for the chickens. Also if bylaw officers should be able to check on the cleanliness/welfare of outdoor urban livestock
- Mandatory training, inspections and licensing. Must not impact neighbors with smell or noise.
- The City needs to relax rules related to livestock.
- Chickens and pot belly pigs should be allowed.
- Livestock belong on farms and ranches. They don't make me feel unsafe, it's just not fair to the animal to be in an urban setting.
- I don't think that any urban livestock should be on residential property or in the city limits on commercial property. If you want to have urban livestock, then live on an acreage or farm.
- Same as any, I believe that a simple online permit application to ensure owners are properly educated on both the health and needs of the animals and respect towards neighbors would be sufficient. I also believe urban livestock should be used for eggs and other purposes that do not require slaughter

- Support but recommend working with Alberta Veterinary Medical Association, UCVM, local urban livestock clubs to establish regulations and set restrictions for number of animals in place, registering these flocks/herds, setting up disease surveillance program.
- Enforcement of proper disposal of waste so that water isn't impacted nor are there flies and diseases being spread. Enforcement of noise bylaws. A plan to address the likely influx of wild animals that will want to eat the livestock. Number of livestock per home guidelines.
- What is the danger of fire and infection?
- Clear guidelines for livestock owners including expectations regarding noise and odour and animal welfare.
- Quantity limitations.
- a maximum weight per animal, and a maximum number of those animals. Current bylaws are too restrictive
- No. I know many people would be responsible and good with their livestock, but those few who aren't would be a big problem and I know the City is equipped with near enough staff to handle problems. There would have to be a minimum yard size, minimum distance to a property line.
- Goats are handy as lawnmowers.
Also, cheese. In other words they have the sophistication to be urban. Cows... not so much.
- Limits of numbers,. For all other these we need enforcement of the rules
- Just like with pets, Calgarians should be free to keep as much livestock of whatever type as long as it does not negatively impact any other Calgarian beyond the extents of the livestock keepers property
- There shouldn't be *rural* livestock, why should there be urban livestock? There shouldn't be. No protections could make me feel comfortable about it.
- I am okay with urban livestock within reason. I don't think a full sized horse or cattle is practical. Chickens are fine.
- I would personally like to be informed if someone in my neighbourhood was planning urban agriculture as Livestock can be quite loud. Adequate enclosures would need to be built and maintained in order to avoid predators.
- Shouldn't be allowed.
- I'd be okay if people wanted a couple chickens, as long as they weren't too noisy.
- Adequate fencing
- Love the goat program. Chickens as long as the smell is contained, great. No backyard slaughters!
- I believe that homeowners should be allowed to keep chickens in their yards.
- Re: safety only? Ensure they are properly contained, can't hurt anyone or transmit disease to domestic pets/humans.
- Horrible idea. A backyard or house is not appropriate for livestock.

- No. Not in the city. Neighbours should not be able to see, hear or smell the creatures. If that's possible then go for it. It will only cause issues between neighbours..
- The are contained within the owners premises.
- I don't have concerns with small livestock if the home/yard footprint is large enough to accommodate them. I would be supportive of back yard chickens or other egg laying birds.
- This would really depend on what animals we are talking about. Keeping a cow for example within the city limits is not really feasible....
- How is manure disposed of? What happens when the animals reach end-of-life/usefulness? If they are raising livestock for meat, how is that meat processed, and what happens to the by-products of slaughter? Again, I believe that licensing and regular inspection of facilities is key.
- urban chickens are great! no safety issues here :)
- I believe that people should be allowed to have chickens within city limits
- No...how to control that they are being cared for properly when the novelty wears off....chickens are noisy, smelly, bring mice??
- People need to clean after their livestock. And there must be a limit.
- I don't believe it has a place in the city. It will draw the predators to that livestock. I can't believe we are discussing this.
- Special licensing. Urban livestock being restricted to less densely populated areas (due to potential smell/mess)
- Small livestock that are housed in a run overnight, quiet. Chickens or small sheep would be okay. Just need to maintain yard so it is healthy for pets, livestock and humans.
- It would be so great if we were allowed backyard chickens or potbelly pigs. You'd just need to make sure to have appropriate enclosures/fences and be aware of how to care for such animals responsibly.
- totally against this..we can concede to no more than 2 chickens, otherwise livestock belongs on an acreage and farms..not in close living areas such as neighborhoods....
- As long as I don't hear or see the livestock, I have no problem.
- Nothing
- The owner should have to have an appropriate amount of space for the health and wellness of the animal. Ex: a horse can't be healthy living in a 600sqft backyard, same with a cow. Licences proving you've been properly educated on needs and care of that particular animal to ensure safety.
- I would love to see an urban chicken program brought in to Calgary. I think applications should be required and permits should be issued to responsible keepers. Approval would require consent from neighbouring properties as to not disturb the community.
- 1) Maybe no roosters allowed so not too noisy
- 2) Limits per communities
- 3) If they are for meat it's to be done at a butcher shop not in anyones back yard.
- I do not think Livestock thrive well in an Urban setting. For the well being of the animal they should not be in an urban setting.

- Nothing. Urban fowl and small animals (pot bellied pigs, goats etc) up to a limit should be allowed to cohabitate inner city. Make little noise and with good upkeep doesnt smell. ALT : Have expanded community "garden" with an animal share
- Fences are all we need, and they are everywhere.
- Depends on house/yard size and the number of each species. Health/medical conditions of immediate neighbours needs to be considered. Ownership information must be made to potential buyers of property within a specified radius.
- I would love to have chickens and be able to produce my own food locally sourced out of the back yard. Again no safety concerns.
- should not be allowed in residential communities. Period. The smell, loud noises - we shouldn't be forced to live beside livestock in the city
- Totally fine with urban livestock, as long as there's a limit to what households can have. I'd be fully supportive of neighbors having chickens or a pig.
- Ability to ensure that no smell or sound travels from the property. Neighbour's ability to sleep and enjoy there space without smelling animals or hearing them all night is important. This isn't appropriate. Not appropriate in multi-family buildings.
- Containment. Fencing.
- It seems like you aren't asking if citizens think this is appropriate - is this a done deal?
- Urban livestock should be limited by available space and proximity to others, not limited to emotional support. For example, min XXXm sq of grassed yard per cow; or a chicken cannot be kept on apartment balcony. Numbers should be limited (no backyard herds or breeding operations) based on species.
- I would want signage front & back of the property to make visitors, city workers etc aware of what animal is present. A limit on max number of animals allowed.
- Fences maintained.
- Depending on the livestock, and the living conditions, this could be positive. We have seen the positive impact the goats have made in the natural grasses. Proper housing, and cleanup would have to be required.
- We should allow chicken - hens not roosters for egg laying. As long as owners care for the birds and keep the area /coop clean. Coop size should be appropriate for the number of birds owned.
- I support keeping urban livestock, so long as there is not a noise issue. I would love it if my neighbour had livestock.
- No city lot is large enough for cows, horses, sheep or goats. There is too much disrespect and neglect with animals within the city.
- Other than birds, I don't see a place for other livestock. But a minimum lots size to enable roaming without noise complaints would be appropriate.
- A couple of chickens are way less disturbing than a dog. I lived in Seattle and owning chickens was commonplace with little issues. No need to break new ground here. I would live to own a couple of chickens.

- I think smaller livestock should be allowed and regulated within the city limits. Getting permits specifically for chickens in the city would be a good idea. It has to be feasible for the land space and proximity to surrounding neighbors.
- Depends on the animal. Are they loud? Smelly? Number limits? Space requirements?
- I would love to keep backyard hens, but I think there needs to be restrictions on how many hens per household and regulations on size of coops and adequate winter protection. I would also like to see slaughtering within the city prohibited, as well as roosters prohibited.
- I would prefer livestock stay in the rural areas.
- Heavy penalties for abandoning livestock i.e. if your laying hen quits laying you do not just get to dump it at the animal Shelter.
- No problem
- No livestock.
- Space and quantity regulations where the animal has humane space to eat and live that doesn't interfere with neighbours
- Owners of livestock cannot adequately control odours or noises (especially for chickens or other birds) and should therefore not be allowed to keep them adjacent to other residential properties.
- Nothing needs to be in place as they would be on private property. Or, if need be, perhaps a sign at the front door, "sheep on premises", "bees on premises". But it's nature and we are too removed already from nature.
- Urban livestock needs to be restricted to smaller animals and no more than 3 at a time. Chickens should have no roosters as they're incredibly noisy.
- No problems if appropriately sized. No cows unless a very large lot. Chickens and ducks should be fine as their space requirements are already similar to dogs/cats.
- No concerns about the livestock themselves. It is with the ability to clean up.
- Why not allow mini pigs as acceptable pets? They live in the house, and they don't bark.
- If it is kept indoors it doesn't infringe on your neighbours use of their property and is Doctor ordered I don't see an issue. However I don't think chicken coops or pigs or ducks should be allowed. Smells. Noise the attraction of predators. People can live outside the City and raise animals
- A fenced or secured animal.
- I believe chickens/quail should be a right. I am low income and chicken eggs are a great source of B12 vitamins. As low income this provides breakfast lunch or dinner for my kids! We should be allowed to harvest our chickens for meat too. All while maintaining cleanliness and care of our own flock
- I would say chickens and other small livestock would be alright, but they need proper housing and hygienic clean up done.
- Proper pens, cleanliness and reasonably quiet.
- Pigs are smarter and cleaner than dogs. Let them be pets.
- Yes chickens only though in the city
- Same as above

- Nothing - livestock does not belong in the city. I'm not interested in dealing with the sounds or smells of livestock in my neighbour's backyard. This is a bad idea.
- If you want livestock move to a farm.
- Absolutely not. With recent history of virus spread with animals in urban settings, livestock and wildlife needs to left in rural areas where there is lots of room between animal and human interfaces.
- I am opposed to any farm animals within the City limits. The smell, noise, isn't for urban living. Nothing could be done to have my feel reasonably safe with farm animals within Calgary city limits
- We do not want urban live stock kept in back yards of residential homes in Calgary, it devalues our property values, and it also creates a problem with noise and bad odors coming from the livestock kept in these residential back yards. If people want livestock they should buy property in rural area.
- Sounds interesting.
- The city is no place for livestock.
- Same as above - I think it is fine providing The City looks at best practices from other cities, and puts limits on the number of urban livestock based on yard size and impact on neighbours.
- I already feel safe around urban livestock, too.
- Totally fine!
- I like the idea of urban livestock, other than a restriction on what animals are allowed, I think it's a great idea
- Within reason, and again though as long as the owners have the education and know how to do it, yes.
- I would LOVE to have a couple chickens for eggs!!
- Yes to chickens, if people interested in them are trained to keep them safe and well and healthy. How to dispose of poop? Keep their housing clean? If people want to keep animals for meat, more training. What to do on winter? Also end of life? How to deal with them?
- Quiet, clean, limited smell and limited disruption, well taken care of
- None
- No!
- Chickens! The city is long overdue to allow urban laying hens. I feel zero safety concerns around hens and small livestock, they pose less risk than dogs.
- Manage nuisance to neighbours (property line distance, minimum land area, etc)
Ensure ethical treatment (ex minimum land area requirements.
Allow chicken, geese, sheep, goats.
An rc2 lot should be able to have 1 residence and a small collection of animals (a dozen chickens or a couple goats)
- Okay if limited in numbers
- Restrictions on number and size of animals should be in place.
- No, No, No, Has the city heard of swine flu or bird flu? These diseases start when people and animals live in close proximity.

- Small livestock such as chickens and rabbits should be permitted within city limits for food production. People have the right to produce their own food.
- Don't want them
- Should be licensed and vet checked with shots. And have appropriate knowledge about owned said livestock as well as the proper home
- None
- I had urban hens for a number of years and there should be a cap on number of birds per household again no rooster and education and a possible mentorship program for new owners
- Same as with dogs...keep the manure cleaned up. Otherwise, makes for a healthier, maybe even more accepting population.
- I don't have a problem with it as long as waste is kept clean
- Keeping chickens is a benefit to the owners since they can collect the eggs. Chickens are also great as a natural bug controller. IF the chickens are housed in a proper enclosure I can see no issues.
- Yes, backyard chickens. I think there should be a rule for no roosters and a certain number of hens.
- No
- Yes please but I think each person must have some type of proper training and certificates so everyone knows how to properly care for our livestock.
- I would want to know that the areas are kept clean, that there is not a mess of waste that causes disease and odours. I would also want to know that there is not excessive noise from the livestock.
- Restrict size of animal. Guidelines for animal space required and distance between houses
- SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED...GET SERIOUS. GO LIVE IN THE COUNTRY IF YOU WANT TO FARM.
- Proper coops which will contain animals to the designated property.
- No! Unless someone is living on a large lot ( 1 acre +) it is a disturbance to neighbors (smell, noise, predators) that is not reasonable to accept of neighbors.
- I don't think farm animals belong in the city
- Absolutely! Chickens yes, BUT there must be some laws around the Coop and number of chickens... coming from a farm, Chicken Poop STINKS and they can have lice, so it is important that owners are held accountable for keeping the area cleaned and pets well cared for to ensure no stench or disease.
- Urban livestock should be allowed within Calgary. Nearly every other major city in Canada allows chickens and seems to function fine. I have no additional concerns beyond what currently exists with dog ownership which is obviously allowed. Issues or complaints can follow existing processes.
- Livestock doesn't belong in a city. I don't see how livestock can have a good quality of life if they aren't on a solid very large piece of land. Emotional support or not .. cows belong in a field. Get a dog people.
- no there is no need.... chicken are messy and noisy constant clucking or whatever there sound is. Living next to a wildlife area will only bring the wildlife into back yards causing problems for dogs cats and people.... we cant even control these let alone chickens a HUGE NO!!!!!!!

- No, no and no! Farms are called farms for a reason...livestock of ALL kinds belong on rural farms!
- Not allowed! There many people that will have more livestock than allowed. There will be feces, possible diseases, noise all day/night. It will attract bugs/flies. Perhaps the city could allocate land outside of residential areas and people could rent a space to keep the allowed # of livestock.
- With proper training from a farmer.
- It would be great to allow chickens in suburban settings. But, ownership brings responsibility not to draw in coyotes or other wild predators.
- Livestock should not be allowed in urban areas under any circumstances. The noise and smell would be extremely annoying and we already have enough noise from barking dogs that are ignored by their owners.
- City isn't a place for livestock. Will only attract predators.
- Nothing would make me feel safe enough with respect to possible transmission of disease due to livestock feces on adjoining property.
- Limits on how many you can keep so as to not smell the place up.
- I would want parameters such as which types of livestock are acceptable (no large species-not enough space), limiting number (ie max 6 chickens).
Please allow chickens!!!
- Livestock do not belong in the city.
- Nothing "unsafe" about people having a few chickens or a miniature pig! No more annoying to neighbours than a barking dog living next door.
- Adequate space.
- Reassurance that urban livestock will not disturb the surrounding communities.
- Must be a registered and licensed and in a area that permits them from roaming free
- Within reason, and a limit. Chickens should only be allowed to provide for that particular family or community. Also should have to apply for a permit and a period to allow neighbours to voice concerns.
- I think chickens should be allowed, and pigs as pets. Again, I wouldn't feel unsafe.
- Urban livestock should be allowed in numbers that do not cause odor or vermin.
- I can't really imagine feeling threatened by domestic livestock but I worry about owners not taking good care of their livestock, not giving them enough space or attention. I would not like to live next door to animals that are being mistreated.
- No livestock within city limits. The idea of chickens etc as emotional support animals is ridiculous! Get a dog or cat, much cleaner.
- Signage & enough space
- Limits on the number of each type of livestock
- Having a reasonable limit of chickens per household to limit the possibility of people abusing the ability to provide health sustainable eggs and support animals for their families.

- To me, it's more of a noise issue. Do I really want to hear a bunch of chickens/goats/pigs whatever in all hours of the day? hard to relax on my deck while I listen to animals squawking all day long....Keep it small or move to a farm!
- Allow for people to have livestock. Chickens, ducks, goats, meat rabbits, sheep and pigs should all be allowed. If people have issues things like stink bylaws can take care of that. The reason I stated the larger animals because possibly they could be allowed for a sort time for things like.....
- Approval from adjoining neighbours every other year. Due to allergies. If a neighbour dispute the 'permit' and can show just cause to have it denied then for the neighbours safety it should be denied. Please see above example of severe allergy.
- Smell and noise
- No - unfair to keep livestock in a small urban setting. Noise and smell pollution to neighbours
- Knowledge, educated
- People who are committed to provide a healthy, safe, stable environment to raise and keep chickens in their backyards. They should be inspected, licensed to be able to keep hens to provide their family with organic eggs. The chickens provide free manure, eat food scraps thus reducing the garbage.
- Small livestock in inner city areas, larger livestock in outer city areas.
- Enough land for the animal to thrive and not be a nuisance to others. Ensuring the animals are treated humanely. Maybe offer some classes in order to get a license. Education on disease control. Secure fences.
- The city is no place to raise chickens or have a chicken coop. We live in close environments, and I choose to live in the city to not wake up to a rooster, or the smell of the farm. If people feel if people feel the need to raise farm animals, they can live on a farm.
- I am fine with urban livestock, chickens and ducks keep the slugs away in the garden. Pigs are sometimes pets anyway, but larger animals need more space to roam. The main issue is how to deal with their waste. Hopefully these folks would be composting, but the green bins could help in this aspect
- Same as above
- Inspections of property, limits on proximity to neighbouring yards and nearby water drainage systems. Proof of veterinary records and visits yearly.
- No. There is not enough room and/or sanitary procedures in city limits. Livestock should be taken care of in rural settings where transmission of diseases and associated pests can be reasonably controlled.
- Regulations to make sure that livestock well cared for, reasonably quiet and clean. Eg. I think it would be good to allow hens if someone has good facilities and room for exercise, but probably not roosters because of the noise
- Not noisy/smelly/roaming.
- Urban" and "livestock" seem to be an oxymoron. A rural lifestyle should be in a rural area.
- There should NOT be any livestock kept @ residential homes in the City of Calgary.
"N/A. We don't have urban livestock.

But if it was allowed, strict licensing and mandatory vaccinations where applicable

- Chickens must be allowed. Follow Edmonton's lead.
- Make sure they are on the persons yard and no smell around the neighborhoods.
- List only animals that are not permitted, as opposed to listing the ones that are permitted. Could further limit by known maximum size/weight, and also by maximum known sound volume typical of species. Limits on any nuisance (accumulation of feces/waste/measured noise/odour criteria/etc.).
- Allow chickens in certain size yards.
- I think that everyone should be able to provide themselves with food. I would feel safe if poultry was allowed in any yard. Egg chickens would provide people with food security.
- Should be allowed
- Chickens only
- As long as the animal has the space and care it needs
- That there are no roosters that will crow while I'm trying to sleep! That the chickens will not get territorial and attack my young children if they are in an open yard. That they are cleaned up by the owners, no smell or poop in public areas. I am really in support of urban bees and chickens!
- I believe we should be able to as long as they are clean and safe
- That the animal noise and their waste are dealt with in a proper manner.
- Back yard chickens should be allowed as long as they are kept in good health and not attracting rodents. Have a limit say for example 10.
- Limited numbers and significant distance from dwelling and yard areas. Noise and odour control.
- Livestock requires large amounts of land. A minimum size yard should be considered per animal along with all other rules related to responsible pet ownership.
- Allergies to many farm animals so it could increase my reactions if there is urban livestock next door. A concern of livestock faeces and urine leaking over into neighbouring living places. I would worry it will attract even more coyotes to our neighbourhood. concerns for noise impacting sleep
- Depends if they can be managed properly and inspected frequently for mistreatment or cleanliness
- Chickens should be allowed. We already have rules in plaec that would address abuse or abandonment or unclean areas
- No large livestock but chickens etc should be allowed. Calgary is trying to lower people's carbon footprints. Have a local source of eggs would help towards lowering carbon footprints.
- No. You wish a farm animal, live on a farm where they can roam free
- Depends on the livestock. Small livestock (up to the size of a small goat) would be fine. Chickens would be great! No safety issues as long as owner is responsible.
- Yes! Please let us have backyard chickens!
- 1 square metre per hen up to 6 hens. Adequate bedding/coop. For eggs only. Protect feed. Fenced in yard for free range. See CLUCK Canada specifications (COOP) for the ethical & responsible raising of hens.

- The city of Calgary is behind many Alberta cities! Urban chickens would be beneficial for food sustainability and soil health. 4-5 chickens, registered, with proper housing should be allowed. (No roosters, laying hens).
- Limits on the numbers allowed and consideration of noise issues. For example I don't think I would be fair for a neighbour to have a rooster that woke everyone up at sunrise.
- A fence high enough that whatever animal it is won't get out.
- Yes but a limit to what animals and the # allowed , maybe based on backyard space. Chickens 3 or 4?
- Limits in size/scale and numbers (ie chickens vs cattle), size l'd property and appropriate storage/housing
- Unacceptable in an urban city. Do not allow it.
- Chickens!!! And ducks. These are great pest control (especially for slugs) I think chickens (5 or less) should be allowed. No roosters)
License per henhouse.
- Limits on how many in relation to area.
- Limits on numbers held on each property ..like 3 to 5 hens ..not 50 and rules of cleanliness ..permits to encourage responsible ownership ...I would like 3 hens of my own if allowed
- I would really like to be allowed to have some hens, there's no comparison to the quality of the eggs versus store bought. I wouldn't see a major problem with having one or two goats, but a cow could be a different story. Again this would have to be done responsibly.
- No roosters, limits on numbers and type of livestock. Standards of care outlined.
- Chickens, goats etc should not be aloud in the city. The feces alone is awful and they almost always carry disease and lice that's transferable to other common pets. They should have to have solid secure fencing, proper housing etc which isn't sufficient in the general size of Calgary's back yards.
- Allow a small flock of chickens for eggs in backyards. They do not make a lot of noise and are easy to keep. Limit chickens to 10 max, hens only, no roosters
- A proper coop.
- Chickens and goats are great. Noise is a concern but they're a great addition.
- I think that urban chickens are good, but larger livestock is something that a typical yard could not accommodate. I believe that with urban hens, roosters should not be allowed. Otherwise, go for it.
- NEVER, the city is not a farm
- Yes. Especially chickens. Same as above. Allow egg laying chickens based on space available.
- A way to insure disease and viruses are not spread to the surrounding community members.
- Nothing really.
- No pigs - too stinky. Anything else is fine
- NO!
[removed]
- A reasonable fence/enclosure, appropriate to the type of livestock.
- It would be nice to have this. We should all have the right to self sufficiency.

- Depending on what it is I don't feel most livestock should be living in back yards but if they are small and don't cause a disturbance then all is good.
- Insane
- Keep the live stock out of the city, want livestock? Live out in the country. Or support local farmers
- I think properly cared for animals that are not a nuisance should be allowed
- Proper fencing. Greater distances between homes and properties.
- No concerns
- Very tricky. 300 characters is not enough. An urban setting for most livestock is not fair to the animal nor the others around them. Some cultures believe it's ok to slaughter animals close to home and having livestock or parts thereof will encourage wildlife to stay close.
- All livestock needs to be kept humanely with adequate room to run and roam, adequate and species specific food and clean water. No slaughter within city limits. Has to be done by someone licenced to do it! No halal slaughtering!!! Once you've seen it, it's definitely not humane!!!
- Any person housing livestock should be required to obtain a P.I.D # (premises identification number) and report illnesses appropriately as well. Ensure that you providing proper housing, water and feed. And that you have the appropriate amount of space for the type and number of animals.
- Chickens ok in small numbers, with permission from adjoining neighbours.
- Limits on the number of animals allowed in an area; noise limits - I don't want to be woken at dawn!; proper fencing / cages; proper medical / vet / health knowledge.
- I would be concerned about the noise and possibly the smell
- This has to be limited based on property size.
- I don't see a problem with this so long as the facilities provided (ie coops, pens, etc) are both sufficient for the animals and unobtrusive to neighbors/the community
- I think it would be wonderful if people in Calgary could own a couple of back yard laying hens.
- None, as long as no harm comes to the animals. A sign of what is in the area is always appropriate though.
- I have no issue with this. A goat makes an ample substitute for a lawnmower, and deals with kitchen scraps well.
- Last thing we need in Calgary are livestock. The potential for virus's being passed is too great.
- Noise is the only concern. I feel it should be allowed
- Not in city limits.
- I would welcome urban livestock, with some very modest rules on noise (roosters can be a problem) or general cleanliness (to deter vermin).
- I'm in favor of things like chickens and pigs but I don't think it makes sense to have cows and horses inside city limits
I firmly believe that pugs and chickens can make great additions to the home
I'd just put a limit like no more than 4 chickens etc
- It's so expensive to live here and people need to be able to feed their families. I know I do. I am 100% behind people being able to use their land for all types of food.

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- The city should allow for small livestock such as hens and goats in limited quantities to be kept in backyards. Edmonton and Okotoks have such provisions in their bylaws, why is Calgary so behind.
- Love the idea of urban livestock for small livestock - maybe no large animals like bison in the city. Also, limit the total number of urban livestock per household. This is a progressive idea that can alleviate food scarcity, keep urban residents in contact with their food source, and is fun.
- Absolutely not. The smell, sounds and disease. Urban homes are too close together for livestock to not negatively impact immediate neighbors and that is very unfair.
- As long as there is no poultry enough as is dealing with magpies at 430 in the morning no need for roosters and upkeep is par to livestock on farms
- special licensing and properties of a size that have minimal impact on neighbors for noise, etc. will be legally and financially held accountable for negative impact
- Must have sufficient space for the animals and not infringe on the safety and comfort of their neighbours.
- Growing up on a farm I can't see the need for urban livestock. People have no idea what it takes to responsibly take care of livestock. Urban chickens need to be in a clean, warm place and will eat feed that attracts rodents etc. They smell. Prepare for escaped chickens once the novelty wears off
- As long as there is little or no smell, and limited noise associated with the animals, I do not have a problem with them. I do worry that they may bring wildlife into areas where they could be in danger.
- Fencing and proper animal husbandry
- Should not be allowed if it causes any issues with neighbours, sound smell or property values.
- Thinking of chickens or small animals like that, not much.
- Shouldn't be allowed at all. If you want to raise livestock, move to the country. There is no need for it in the city. Don't need the smell or noise and the livestock deserves to be in the country.
- Hard no. These animals belong on a farm.
- Hens should be allowed. Roosters should not be allowed. They are loud and I have lived beside homes with roosters and they definitely will wake up the neighbours.
- On owned property of not less than 1 acre.
- I support urban egg production but am concerned about how a humane end of life or slaughter would occur.
I support other urban livestock if bylaws enforce cleanliness and restrict noise. Also, I am concerned about animal welfare, particularly at slaughter
- Not even sure where to start. If neighbors are OK. Smell mitigation. Only in larger yards.
- Knowledgeable and responsible owners and proper space. Maybe offer a certificate to know owners have taken some training. Also should be done to dog owners. Respect and open-minded was from neighbours.
- It's all about intensity and scope. If everyone is allowed 2 backyard hens, then that's fine. But if it's a larger number, then the intensity may cause some nuisance. There should also be space for the animals to be happy.

- I think keeping small livestock within the city should be allowed, such as chickens. Perhaps setting limits on size and number of animals would be ideal
- It would be good to have chickens. If pigeons are allowed, why not chickens. Chickens are more useful. They are great for teaching, a more wholesome and sustainable lifestyle.
- No issues with safety here, I'd love to see urban chickens or goats.
- None permitted, including so called support animals. There simply is no need and the chance of negative impact on neighbours (noise and smell) is too great. We are an URBAN community, not a RURAL community. (The concept of "support animals" is being abused and is ridiculous.)
- Really this shouldn't be allowed unless on a large lot of say over 1 acre
- License to own, limits based on yard size & shelter.
- There is no place for this in Calgary. More and more people are moving here and living closer together. The health, noise and safety concerns of the majority should not be compromised by a few people with some off beat ideas about what a pet is. Do not succumb to the phoney need for service animals
- No pigs, chickens, goats, cows in the suburbs. If you need one of these, move to the country.
- Adequate fencing to contain livestock.
- I would love to see a program to allow urban chickens.
- Monthly inspection area is kept clean and no disease or infections
- Ensuring that noise and odor are not infringing on neighbours rights.
- chickens(not roosters) and other livestock as long as the home has a big enough yard
- A notice posted
- I know that the smell can be an issue with certain animals, but I am all for small urban livestock in the city.
- Chickens and quail are ok. 5 birds max per household. Same rules as other pets about noise and smells. No roosters.
- With a licence. As well as, an accompanying require that requires mandatory education class provided at the cost of the applicant. Much in the same manner as a hunting licence. This would also require acceptance of surrounding neighbours.
- I do not support this. If people want to raise livestock they should move out of the city.
- I worry about the smell. I also worry about the damage that could occur to neighbouring homes if any animals got loose.
- Do not agree with any kind of urban livestock being raised in the city limits. They attract predators and smell. If people want to raise farm animals they should live in a rural area.
- I would like urban chickens to be permitted. Look at Red Deer and Edmonton as examples of pilots projects.?
- Training course/certification. But absolutely allowed
- Nothing. Do not approach them.
- There should be NO urban livestock.

- I definitely think people should be able to raise chickens, but only in certain neighbourhoods. Obviously high density multi-family housing is not an option, unless it was a community effort with a central, dedicated area for this.
- I am not as much of a fan on this one, only because most people wouldn't do what is needed to be responsible to adequately care for livestock.. it takes a lot of work, money and care to ensure proper sanitation, vet care, even the noise and smell levels.
- Yes allow within reason. Ie urban chickens/ducks. Maybe don't allow roosters and limit flock size.
- Yes!!!
- Nothing. A poor pet owner is a poor pet owner whether it be a dog or a chicken. Most people who have a passion for urban hens are responsible and conscientious. It's insane that major cities like New York allow urban hens and we don't. Who does this council think they are. Power mongers.
- Should not be allowed.
- i feel safe about urban livestock, especially egg laying hens
- NO! Not necessary and caused extra noise and messes.
- No issues as long as owners keep cages clean and waste removal at hand. Communication is key.
- Limitations to size, weight, and number of animals would be critical. No large animals should be allowed, especially on residential lots. Zoning adjustments may allow some commercial properties to maintain a reasonable number of larger animals. Health inspections should be made at owners' expense.
- Sure- as long as they have the space to care for the animal
- I am in favour of livestock, no bigger than a sheep
- Just chickens, with a limit on the number allowed .
- No..because it will attract other critters like skunks..weasels and bashers..coyotees
- A limit to the number of animals on a property (likely determined by size of property)
- Chickens should be allowed. Limit number of chickens allowed on a property. Guidelines and resources for housing, access to outside areas, protection from predators. No roosters allowed.
- I'm all for chickens for eggs. Lots of low income families could benefit from this. We already have noise bylaws etc, some of my neighbours are louder than animals (smellier too)
- Regulations around containment and follow-up by city after licencing to check living conditions of animals. Perhaps a limit for size and number per square foot of yard.
- Not acceptable. Owners should face removal of poorly housed or fed or escaped livestock. Bad idea in general - noise, smell, mess.
- Good animal husbandry so they do not become a nuisance to neighbours.
- No livestock over a certain size would be nice and some rules about enclosed fencing, a basic standard of animal care knowledge, etc. would help.
- Never
- Nothing. I think allowing livestock increases safety as it allows people to be more self sufficient. Chickens, ducks and goats do not pose safety risks. In fact having these animals reduces the requirement for chemicals in gardens and chemicals make me feel unsafe.

- Chickens should absolutely be allowed.... welk hens not roosters. This is also a question of sustainability
- Education and strict checks and balances. The greatest risk of urban livestock is ignorance. Nobody minds a backyard chicken coop. Everybody minds a backyard chicken coop that is messy and housing neglected animals.
- Nothing larger than a pot bellied pig should be allowed. Ok with a small number of chickens provided that they the owners get surprise inspections in order to ensure cleanliness.
- Good hygiene.
- There is no reason for urban livestock. If city limits are extended to encompass an operating farm then an exemption could be granted.
- Minimum space requirements for keeping of livestock, adequate space for them to roam and thrive.
- Not allowed
- Once again they have places called farms for that !! No city backyard other than cats and dogs!!
- The only thing I'd be concerned with is smell, and suitability of the animal to the space. Keeping a few chickens? Sure why not; just keep their pen clean. Keeping a horse or cow in the average backyard? Not suitable.
- Can be kept as pets with proper space for them
- As above
- There should be no allowances for urban livestock. We are fortunate to have many small acreages near Calgary where owning and raising livestock is possible, and would be better for both neighbours and the livestock. Livestock (including chickens) should not be allowed in the city.
- I do not feel live Livestock for the intend of food should be kept in the city. It would be hard to enforce proper husbandry and I worry about how keepers would cull their animals. In regards to public safety it would be dependent on what type of animals they were raising.
- Limit to pets. No commercial livestock operations
- Urban livestock should not exist in Calgary. HOUSE RABBITS NEED TO BE CONSIDERED AS PETS AND NOT LIVESTOCK!!!!!!
- Small fowl should be allowed on appropriately sized plots, with appropriate enclosures. Landlords should not be able to stop tenants who follow the bylaws from raising fowl.
- Signage. I think they should also have an appropriate amount of space for the animals to live. They should have safety measures (fencing, animals marked, etc.), hygiene rules, noise rules.
- Licensed and to get a license, a person takes a course on proper husbandry for that species. Annual licensing includes identification of local veterinarian whose practice includes that species. Restrict #s of any one particular species a household has with min space requirements for housing/animal.
- Allow urban livestock, with licensing and limits on type and number of livestock per household. Suitable bylaws controlling odour, noise, waste (fecal matter) collection. No slaughter allowed in residential locations (i.e. slaughter only at butcher, game meat shops, etc. with guts disposal)

June 29, 2020

- We live in a city not a farm. There are too many problems that are preventable if people start making their house a farm. Animals from farms smell, are loud, and again the city is just asking for more problems.
- Miniature pigs are a myth. Pigs get to be BIG. One is enough. No-one should be allowed cockerels/roosters - far too noisy. Chicken poop smells something wicked. No-one should have to put up with that sort of smell drifting through their bedroom windows.
- Small, domesticated animals (indoor pygmy pigs, outdoor chicken coops) with neighbour consent and controls in place for odour, noise, annual community-based review, etc.
- Livestock should not be allowed in urban areas at all.
- I think more people should be able to have chickens ducks ect as long as the people keep it clean I think it's great
- Backyard chickens are a fantastic source of food, and fertilizer. Being omnivores, they're also good form of pest control against mice and insects. There should be limits based on yard side, with proper housing required, but no prohibitions. Obviously, no larger animals such as sheep or cows.
- Disallow.
- I'm hugely in favour urban livestock, especially chickens. The same rules as being a responsible pet owner of cats/dogs should apply. They should have a license, proper housing in place with frequent cleaning/maintenance to reduce smells and other pests, limits on the number and no roosters.
- All for it as long as it's kept clean.
- Backyard hens have been successful in other communities. Again, as long as they are properly cared for and aren't a nuisance I think we should try it.
- Chicken hens (not roosters) and ducks (both sexes) are quiet and clean animals when taken care of properly. I highly encourage Calgary to allow these birds. Geese can be loud and aggressive, so neighbourhood density should be considered. Larger animals considered if the space required is present.
- Smell reduction somehow? Noise reduction. I think urban livestock is a bad idea. I don't want to live near farm animals.
- In favour. Must be monitored and stringent penalties enforced if animals are not sufficiently provided for both physically and psychologically.
- Not at all. This is not appropriate in an urban setting.
- No concern. They are not threatening in any way.
- For the safety of people and the livestock, adequate housing/fencing must be required. Each animal should also be microchipped so that if they do get out the owners can be quickly contacted. Owners should be fined if their livestock is not under control. A cap on the amount of animals allowed.
- No one wants chickens or pigs next door to them
- Common sense
- People slaughtering animals?? Disgusting! Unless they are living in your house and treated as a pet this is a terrible idea! They don't want to live their lives in teeny tiny cages the rest of their lives! And what happens to them when they are no longer wanted? Where do they go then? No!! No!! No!

- Yes, but I think there should be permits given in order to keep and obtain such creatures. I think residents should have to apply for the permit. Applications should include home checks and husbandry exams.
- Ensure that it does not interfere with neighbours' enjoyment of their own property.
- In order for me to feel reasonably safe in areas where there are urban livestock, I would require there to be rules and regulations. Animals like horses, donkeys, roosters, buffalo, oxen, cows, llamas, alpacas, etc should be prohibited from being kept as livestock in a residential area.
- Rules around cleanliness, smell, and noise affecting neighbors. Perhaps a minimum lot size to ensure they have enough room to be healthy and to also not disturb neighbors. Must get approval of nearby neighbors.
- Proper enclosures and vet care for the animals. The animals must have a good quality of life and the property kept in good, healthy conditions ie: frequent removal of waste
- Chickens, only hens and not roosters. Limit to 2 or 3 hens. Proper housing.
- Do not want my neighbors owning livestock. This is an urban city. Livestock belong on an acreage/farm.
- No issues at all. We need more of this in a city FOUNDED ON AGRICULTURE. The supply chain is volatile. Let people support themselves more.
- This should be a no-go. There are too many irresponsible people that would ruin it. With increased density taking place, how can we ensure this will be properly looked after?
- Great idea, my only concern would be roosters, but I would love to have hens!
- Healthy, well maintained livestock should be registered and secured as pets are and protected from predators.
- Currently the only livestock I feel should be allowed within the city is chickens. They provide eggs and can be processed easily for meat and they take up minimal space. However, there should be rules for the size of your property and where on your property you can contain them.
- the Owners would have to provide proper maintained enclosures with enough space for the animals, and there must be a reasonable amount of space between properties
- keep them on the owner's property
- A license, welfare checks.
- My son's neighbour has chickens and a rooster in San Francisco. The rooster de-crowed, however still very audible early in the morning. The chicken clucking sounds are annoying, the feed is attracting rodents. Not a good idea in an urban setting.
- People should be allowed to have a small number of chickens and maybe two pigs.
- There are a number of urban livestock that would be no less problematic than many dogs. Similar to bees, guidelines on location/buffer with neighbours, appropriate shelters, and density restrictions.
- Disease control and mitigation of smell
- Again I think this is an excellent idea, I think raising chickens, goats, ducks, or whatever else people want would really be great for the city (cows seem unfeasible unless you have a big yard). My one reservation is I would be a little concerned about waste, but I am sure it could be managed.

- I don't agree with allowing any urban livestock in the city, i don't need to deal with the stink or noise
- Depending on the livestock and ability to keep em safely.
- Chickens should be allowed in the City. Licence required for number of chickens allowed appropriate for the size of the lot. Chicken house and fenced area SB required. Small Pigs under a certain size should also be allowed but be required to have a city licence.
- Enough space and ability to contain the after waste
- I suppose a limit on the number of livestock would be necessary and expectations for owners. Ensure the animals are properly and humane cared for.
- That manure is properly disposed of to avoid smell. This should also apply to domestic pets (cats and dogs) as well. Dog excrement are gross after not being cleaned up all season. Why are hens called LIVESTOCK? Are you also contemplating resident being able to keep sheep/cows/rabbits in backyards?
- Ban on larger livestock like cattle, and pigs, limit to the number of smaller animals such as goats and chickens. Requirements for appropriate chicken coops.
- The main considerations here should be smells and sounds from the urban livestock, and health concerns surrounding the disposal of waste.
- Within reason. A few chickens is reasonable as long as they are kept in humane conditions.
- Registration, the same as cats or dogs, limit on number of animals total
- I think that Calgary should allow citizens to keep live stock in the city, as long as it is regulated. Such as the number of livestock you can have, and where on your property you can keep them. As well as keeping the livestock health and safe.
- chickens, but you'd have to do up a bunch of by-laws for this... number, where the coop can be, size, allow for complaints about noise and smell (which I've heard really aren't big problems) and allow people to locally sell excess eggs.
- I don't want it
- need liscence.. also a city inspector to assure safe handling practices
- I've never felt unsafe around livestock but I'd hope that the chickens would have adequate living area
- Big enough yard to accommodate needs of the animal.
- Small livestock such as chickens (no roosters), pheasants, etc would be great.
- Defined restrictions on what is considered urban livestock. I think it would be great to have backyard chickens if you have the want and space to do so. Other cities do. It would also be important to have size restrictions (specific sized backyard or neighbour house distance?).
- I think small quiet farm animals are ok in urban areas but the situation of every animal needs to have guidelines. Pigs, small goats, small horses etc. As long as they are limited as to number, and the yard is clean . As far as chickens, limited to small number, they are noisy
- Just say no. Chickens, geese, ducks, cows, miniature horses or whatever have no place in an urban environment.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- I do not support urban livestock in any form. The surface footprint of the average city lot is too small to provide for the effective management of feces and odour, generated by livestock. These activities can be pursued on acreages and farms outside of the city boundary.
- Ye - I've had backyard chickens in Australia - great for food. Great for kids to be exposed to farming and understand the food cycle. Limits on the number of chickens per size of yard is important - understanding they are social creatures with a pecking order so 3 would be my recommended minimum.
- Fencing.
- Please, please PLEASE allow urban chickens.
- Just say NO. Chickens, cows, miniature horses, ducks or whatever do not belong in an urban environment.
- I see nothing wrong with a couple of laying hens kept in a fenced enclosure. Cleanliness rules should be required. I don't see a need for pigs, cows, horses etc. (miniature or otherwise)
- It is absolutely absurd that Calgary does not allow chickens - exactly how backwards can this be?? Chickens - limit of 6 no roosters, contained in well ventilated enclosures.
- Limit size. Eg: No backyard cows/horses/goats. Chickens, small pigs, etc OK. Roosters with neighbor consultation and permit. Subject to current noise bylaws
- Chickens: for sure! No issues as long as responsibly kept.
- Proper containment/fencing, regulations on dealing with waste
- That the individuals are following set regulations (ie number of animals) and caring for them in a way that maintains the health and happiness of those animals. For example, with chickens, treating it the same as you would someone with dogs. Noise and odor complaints handled through bylaw vs a ban.
- not meant for city sized properties. Chickens, pigs, horses, goats, cows, all belong on a farm not in the city
- Backyard hens are amazing g. I had 4 hens for 5 years in se Calgary. I miss them lots. I actually was a part of the charter challenge with Nikki pike, after years of harassment from the city I gave them up, I think 5-6 per home is a great number. Same thing offer a quick course about caring for hen
- should not inconvenience their neighbours - safety (allergies), noise and/or smell
- I believe urban livestock should be allowed under specific circumstances and conditions, e.g. a small backyard flock of hens, providing there is adequate space for the animals.
- Yes to urban livestock - as long as animals are cared for and not neglected or abused, same as for any pet ownership.
- Cleanliness and smell should be considered. Neighbours should be consulted.
- No livestock within city limits. There are noises and smells associated with livestock that I shouldn't have to deal with. Chickens smell, pigs smell, horses smell, goats smell and so does their urine and feces. Live out in the country if you want to keep livestock. Support animal? Get a dog.
- Fences and waste removal
- Raising livestock in an urban setting is inappropriate for both humans and livestock.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- Let people have chickens in the city. Have more of a conversation with communities that would like bigger animals on their property.
- As long as it's done safely for the animals and the community and on their own property I have no issues.
- The issue with urban livestock is possibly noise and mess. So if a neighbor wants chickens for example, I don't mind, but I also don't want a rooster crowing 6am in the morning, and livestock stinks so how do you ensure they are cleaning the areas on a regular basis?
- Secured containment within a home including good fencing around the yard. Again a big fan, especially of chickens as I have seen laying places and extremely inhumane. If there is urban livestock also you know what they eat and no transportation cost.
- Livestock do not belong in the city. Small animals like chickens might be ok but they can be loud and attract unwanted attention such as coyotes and malicious people.
- ok as long as they are properly cared for/do not bother the neighbors. Perhaps a neighbor survey/approval should be required to obtain a license?? As soon as any evidence of abuse/neglect/smell is proved, the license should be revoked. Set a strict precedent and keep it or it could become a mess.
- Education and by law codes
- Livestock is safe. Just like pets, owners should be responsible for maintaining reasonable cleanliness. The city and province already experiment with goats and pheasants. We need to open this to households.
- Nothing. We should all be allowed to have them.
- Small and quiet livestock only (no roosters, etc). Must be in pens of suitable size, not roaming free. Must be subject to inspection to ensure adequate cleanup, care (ie., no farm smells in the 'hood).
- Limited amount, certain animals in approved enclosures. Must have neighbors permission.
- Disease, smell and noise. If you want to be a farmer, move to a farm. The right to have urban livestock also carries the responsibility to ensure that your "hobby" does not negatively impact others enjoyment of living in the same area. The "emotional animal" argument is very weak.
- Policies and standards in place, including licensing, noise and smell abatement, and checks.
- Education of owners and neighbours. Health and safety checks.
- More programs for back yard chicken coops, maybe by community approved lottery?
- No roosters in the city. Chicken keeping is a great idea. Bylaws for health and cleanliness and the welfare of the livestock.
- Urban livestock should be allowed. Especially chickens.
- Only as a support pet with a letter of support from a qualified professional.
- Yes, especially if they are chickens.
- If is proper amount of space. And no loud roosters and no horrible smells. Animals are treated well.
- Must be a suitable distance for noise and odor control
- Livestock for food in urban areas No Way! I don't want to witness them being harvested next door.
- Livestock should not be allowed whatsoever in an urban setting.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Every family should be allowed to own hens or other small livestock if cared for properly, and not a nuisance to their neighbours, similarly as cats and dogs are owned within the city.
- No goats (they can escape and they chew through things)
No rabbits (also easily escape and impact the ecosystem)
Coyote-proof enclosures, to prevent coyotes, bears, etc from coming into residential neighborhoods.
Yes to chickens!!! No roosters.
- Yes! Poultry such as chickens, geese, ducks, etc should be acceptable. Max. flock size five animals? Limit of max. size
- I am opposed
- That's a misleading question. I believe people want to raise chickens in the city. I have no concerns with this. However if you are actually asking about raising beef cattle in the city I would be concerned about the lack of space for the cow. Please clarify the question.
- Chickens or other poultry should allowed. Permit required.
- A change in bylaws to embrace responsible livestock owners. Look at the concerns find solutions, not restrictions. Give calgarians the freedom to raise chickens well
- Just hens, nothing else. A similar requirement as the town of okotoks. Must be registered with the city and have regular visits from bylaw officers, also perhaps having the on front your neighbors.
- Compliance to set rules such as keeping yard clean from livestock's waste to limit smell/flies/rodents size (height) restriction on livestock so that they won't leap over fences
Noise restrictions (ie. no roosters)
Proper disposal of waste - not just thrown in alley
- They are secured on their property, pens are kept clean so they don't smell for their neighbours.
- I would love to keep chickens for eggs! I don't think it's right that that's illegal right now.
- same as previous
- Nothing, chickens aren't a nuisance if they are well kept for, we want to raise chickens in our yard mainly because the nearest home would be over 60' away and would not cause any problems.
- Proper containment, clean-up and noise management. I don't know why we wouldn't allow some number of livestock where suitable space is available.
- Should not be allowed in city limits. Smelly, dirty, just adding to the animal issues
- Depends on what species and how many animals.
- Chickens only with a limit of laying hens, and no roosters. As most yards are too small for any bigger livestock, I don't think it wise to have larger animals and assure quality grazing.
- Lot size/space requirements for healthy livestock.
- Nope, not in a city.
- There should be absolutely no urban livestock, with the exception of ESA animals. Other urban livestock keeping has too many repercussions for rescue organizations when people get tired of taking care of their "backyard chickens" etc. Only exceptions should be for rescue/sanctuary organizations.

- A wholehearted yes to backyard hens. A similar program to other urban municipalities (ie. Edmonton) would be wonderful!
- Quantity. If it's too much then perhaps no longer for family consumption. If it's small enough, it should be acceptable.
- Existing bylaw should stand. Houses are built too close together to make livestock reasonable or save in this city.
- Proper containment of the livestock
- Should be allowed as long as the animal is given the appropriate room to roam. So no cows in a small backyard but a couple of chickens in a coup is reasonable.
- Livestock can carry diseases and feed and excrement issues are a problem along with noise and stench. I love horses but don't want one on my backyard.
- Licensing. I am in favour of urban livestock
- Hens! I don't know why they are not allowed.
- That they are properly housed on the owners property
- As long as they follow the same noise and nuisance bylaws as other pets this is fine. There should be rules to protect against bad owners who allow smells to get bad or noise to become difficult, but if the animals are quiet and clean (and maybe they share some eggs!) it's OK with me.
- I can't see allowing anything other than a few chickens. It would be fine if it were hens only (no loud roosters), precautions were followed to prevent spread of disease and there were limits on the number. Should also regulate cleanliness and smell and not allow large livestock.
- Thoughtful laws around what animals can be kept in a city and live happy and healthy lives. Chickens should be allowed.
- Disagree. Cities are urban centres not rural pasture areas. I do agree with the summer goat eating weed project, but oppose keeping private cows, horses, pigs, etc. in cities. Buy a farm to keep them!
- Appropriate enclosures for livestock. Some measures to minimize things like smell and overcrowding
- control numbers, control noise, control smell, control disease, control shelter, control disturbance to my property. make sure those keeping livestock are educated in livestock care and accountable for their animals
- There should be regulations as far as required land area for a species and which species should be allowed. Chickens should be ok, but larger animals are not.
- I'd want to be sure there is no smell or noise affecting my property. I don't support urban livestock.
- I'm good with urban livestock - only thing would be a process to deal with complaints if there was an extreme issue
- Reasonable living space for the animal itself. Chickens/fowl are not a problem for neighbours, no more than dogs or cats are.
- In general I think the city needs to chill out about this. I would rather my neighbor had well kept chickens than a cat they let loose all the time.

- I theoretically support the practice, but can understand how issues could arise or neighbours may have concerns. Is this something that could be solved by following a process like the Dev Permit process, where you apply, meet certain conditions, and neighbours can give feedback?
- Safety isn't a concern, as long as the animal's feces aren't creating unpleasant odours for the neighbours.
- Acceptable noise, size, and cleanliness regulations, registration
- My biggest concern is space and smell. If there is a way to designate areas for urban livestock that could be a good option. Similar to community gardens perhaps.
- Nothing - I would love Calgary to allow backyard chickens with bylaws. As long as the owner is responsible I have no problems.
- NO. Livestock doesn't belong within city limits. Again, the houses are jam packed together and everyone's yards are so small.
- Safety isn't a problem, it's more of neighbour disruption with smells and noise.
- Depends where they are kept.
- I feel that urban livestock should be permitted. Ideally proper education (website/workshops) avail for good husbandry/responsible pet owners/ neighbours. Noise levels/odours/mess could be addressed/enforced similar to dogs. proper housing/space needs to be available to ensure happy/healthy animals
- -licence and inspections required
-should be no odors detected by neighbours from livestock and noise should not impact neighbours or licenses will be withdrawn
- If people want livestock, live on an acreage or farm! Our houses are too close together and yads too small to support livestock without impacting the surrounding homes. Who wants to see, smell, or hear livestock next door?! Let alone if they're kept for food!
- signage and fences
- It would bring the knowledge that meat , cheese milk etc comes from livestoke and not a plastic tray. It could also teach work ethics
- Rules to ensure safety and minimal disruption to neighbours
- Limits on numbers and ensuring proper care and cleanliness.
- not allowed in the city
- I absolutely think urban livestock, more specifically chickens and meat rabbits, should be supported. Citizens who wish to take control of their own food production should not be barred from doing so. Clear guidelines based on the animals welfare and reasonable production needs are important.
- Yes, Chickens only, the rest are just messy!
- I'm not sure if this allowed? Though very cool, but will the livestock have enough room to roam?
- Poultry, mini pigs, goats, donkeys - would need min. requirements for space, enclosures, cleanliness & quantity. Too many could be noisy, smelly, disruptive, may attract additional wildlife. I'd be concerned about quality of life for large animals, and safety of others if got out (they'd be scared).

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

June 29, 2020

- Livestock are not suited to urban life. If they can be kept inside like our dogs and cats and odours controlled while allowing them exercise and enrichment. Maybe
- Fencing
- These should not be allowed in any areas where neighbours would be affected.
- I really would like to see the keeping of Chicken hens be fully legalized. My primary concern is more for the safety of the animals. How do we ensure the coops are properly set up and maintained? Apply for licence with proof of education and or affiliation? Much like with pigeons?
- Reasonable limits on how many.
- Don't want any livestock in the city. I grew up on a farm. Livestock should be outside of the city for sanitation and health reasons
- Noise control - shouldn't be over a certain loudness or duration. Smell should be not noticeable.
- Bylaws to ensure they are contained and properly cared for.
- Any livestock kept within City limits needs to have adequate fencing or containment so that it cannot escape and leave the owners property - zero chance of running at large.
- Nothing can fix this ridiculous notion. This should be banned. It has no place in an urban environment.
- Chickens are fantastic urban pets. I have had them myself (in another city) and when limited to a small flock of hens, they are very non-disruptive, they are educational, and very entertaining.
- Should be allowed but with the same regulations and licensing in place for dogs and cats. Limits would need to be in place and proof that an appropriate environment was in place for said livestock. If there were neighbor complaints regarding odor or noise, then a restriction of livestock
- Even better idea! It's so silly that you cannot have chickens, etc But you can have 19 dogs? Chickens are very very easy to maintain, very clean, and make far less noise than a dog. Also less mess. Dog feces and urine stain grass and smell so bad that it can affect your neighbours outdoors enjoyment!
- I do not want pigeons, goats, chickens etc being kept as livestock in the city. people keep rabbits and then when tired of them just let them loose and the domesticate rabbits do not know how to fend for themselves or defend themselves
- Signage would be helpful to create awareness of things to do or not do around such animals. Also the animals need to obey noise bylaws. No roosters crowing at 3:00 in the morning!
- I think as long as people have appropriate documentation allowing said urban livestock and have a proven history of successfully managing those animals in an urban setting, AND it is beneficial for the welfare of that animal, then it is okay.
- A limit on the numbers of livestock that a property can reasonably house. Also, simple guidelines for humane living conditions for those livestock.
- Would be concerned about noise and odors from animals.
- Safety protocols and standards - a whole yard full of chickens would be a no-no. But if they are gated etc, it would be fine.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- I think chickens (upto 3 hens) would be great. I think that there should be rules of course, and people should be expected to keep a standard of cleanliness and it be up to landlords to allow them. I believe that this is very progressive and an obvious necessity for moving forward in food systems.
- I think that the ban on keeping livestock discourages Calgarians from learning to farm and provide fresh meals for their families. However, I think that louder poultry, such as roosters and guineas, should only be permitted in urban areas as emotional support animals.
- Livestock must be kept on property and if noise/smell/living conditions of the animals effect surrounding houses they have a right to say it is effecting the way they live.
- If you want to raise livestock then go live on an average. Livestock has no place in an urban city.
- Not necessary in our urban environment, breeding ground for virus transmission as in Wuhan China. Should be outlawed.
- Not within City limits
- I don't have a problem with chickens in an urban setting. But, I don't think ungulates belong in the city.
- Again, proper training and accommodations to take care of the animals
- It's fine, as long as they are being kept humanely.
- People should be able to keep chickens and ducks. It's really no different than rabbits or pigeons. It's better for the environment to have local food security.
- Nothing. I feel safe wherever they are placed.
- I am in principle in favor of urban livestock, but would like to see a clear strategy on poop, guidelines on space requirements and welfare, and risk mitigation for pathogen transmission between wildlife, urban backyard livestock, commercial livestock, and humans.
- As long as the urban livestock is kept well then this is a great idea. However pet pigs need to be removed as 'livestock'. These should be treated the same as Cats or Dogs, considering in an urban setting they are the same and have the same characteristics as a dog.
- I'm completely in favour of people being allowed to keep a few hens or a small goat or a pig. Obviously animal welfare laws would apply. Many cities in Canada allow urban hens. They make excellent pets, they eat a lot of bugs, and they lay eggs.
- Not acceptable to have urban livestock at all.
- Not within the city Limits, unless it is a miniature horse.
- While I support urban livestock in theory, I am allergic to many of the common animals. Having them, fir example, in the yard next to mine would be very uncomfortable. I'm not sure how to be fair about balancing these needs.
- NO - Livestock do not belong in the city. How would the noise/smell be handled to ensure the neighbors are not affected
- Yes, the cost of keeping hens is significantly lower than keeping dogs or cats. A bag of food for a dog and be $50+. Whereas a 50lb bag of chicken feed is $14. It will with access to fresh organic food to families concerned about food security. Veterinary care is a must though.

- Fine with it, provided there is appropriate space for the animal and suitable cleanup. Fan of chickens provided the smell and noise is kept down.
- Not allowed in residential neighborhoods. An acreage outside the city is fine but not in my neighborhood. If I had a person with chickens living next to me I'd move.
- Fences
- I feel like this could get messy and dangerous quickly. There will definitely need to be limits as to what can be kept and shelters will need to be regulated.
- Probably best not to allow this.
- No roosters and clean coops/living areas. Limit to how many hens one can have. Larger livestock needs more space
- We are too very to neighbours and if there is any smell/noise it would be very noticeable. The dog next door was thrown out of the house as soon as the owners got home from work. He barked, threw himself against the door for over an hour starting at 5. Will the livestock be better taken care of?
- With set limitations and as long as they are kept in safe, well ventilated and healthy conditions and neighbours sign a form in support it should be fine. However if noise, poor conditions, smells and Qty impacts neighbours then there should be fast repercussions and fines.
- I don't feel this should be in residential areas, but could be okay in zoning like Urban reserve or something similar.
- Only if backyard is big enough and they are kept clean
- Should be limited with good processes in place to ensure safety, hygiene, and noise control.
- It would depend how close proximity they were. I wouldn't want them right beside my house . Do we worry about a Kid's hand thru a fence or climbing over? If a neighbourhood builds around an existing farm-those new individuals have no say about that farm. Love the goats in the park, not livestock tho.
- Urban livestock is fine as long as the animals are not allowed to roam free and do not cause disturbance to neighbours. Once again a license or permit should be required so that people are forced to consult with neighbours.
- I think chickens should be allowed and also have regulations to follow
- Sufficient and secure space and shelter. Limits to noise similar to any other potential noise complaint.
- Livestock is good chickens are quiet and eggs are delicious. A goat or two can provide milk and meat and kids love them
- Livestock do not belong in the city. They are farm animals.
- Owner's should have the ability and willingness to take care of the animal and it's needs. The animal should not be mistreated in any way and should not cause discomfort to the owner's surroundings.
- Limited to no more than 3 to 5 animals as long as there is a large enough space however again education is a must oasis cleanliness.Owners will need to respect their neighbors with regards to noise and odor.

- I don't believe that chickens or other noisy animals should be kept in the city.
- Pigs, chickens, ducks oh my!
Limit this to certain breeds for size restrictions and noise reasons.
I would like to see an emphasis put on rescue animals. Maybe we could trial this with a few pigs from the humane society etc.
- I would love to keep chickens in Calgary. I would also like for people to be able to keep other small animals like goats. Many municipalities have great rules that we could apply here such as maximum number of chickens, no roosters, possibly requiring the owner to take a class.
- 6 chickens per property
- I would just be thrilled to be able to adopt a pig or chicken or goat etc and have as a pet, don't have any safety concerns regarding livestock in the city.
- Bylaw on controlling animal but people should definitely be allowed to keep livestock to improve access to local food - chickens, ducks, goats, all reasonable animals to have in the city with no safety concerns
- Safe containment, for the livestock's sake. Please allow backyard chickens and pot bellied pigs!
- I think people need the opportunity to grow or raise their own food.
- With appropriate guidelines, all should be allowed. It is part of food sustainability.
- This should be only allowed ad emotional support and only a few. Many properties are too small, and owners too irresponsible, so it results in a nuisance to neighbors due to smell and noise. If people want livestock, move to an acreage.
- As long as they are in the proper enclosures and have enough space, this is great
- Chickens or other small animals should be allowed. Should be limited to small numbers of animals per address.
- Limits on numbers of chickens and noise
- No urban livestock at all. What a disaster that would turn out to be with the number of irresponsible pets owners that already exist
- Definite NO, people can't follow bylaws when it comes to domestic dogs and cats, this will be terrible for communities!! Drops market value to homes and communities. If they want then buy an acreage, or build in new communities, attracts coyotes, cougars, other wildlife!! NO No NO!!
- Smaller animals only. Must be kept indoors and not outdoors alone.
- Keep it locked up, no noisy livestock
- Allow small livestock, chickens and or a single goat with permit and restrictions on where, ie no to multifamily houses, high density residencies, town homes. Requirements to keep area clean. Cant be used as a source of income.
- unless its causing issues like disease or terrible smell or waste, i don't see why not. let people do what they want.

- Should not be allowed. People don't have the appropriate accommodations, nor the knowledge to provide adequate care, either medical or husbandry. Rescues already see an enormous amount of surrendered exotics, these are just larger versions of an old issue. Who will deal with the unwanted ones?
- Limits of number of urban livestock to: four hens (zero roosters), four quail or similar, five meet rabbits, and concessions for larger properties allowing ruminants such as two mini horses, two goats, two sheep, two donkey, or similar. Yearly health check requirements, including husbandry and facil
- I believe that urban livestock is fine as long as the animals are well cared for and have enough space.
- Oversight to see that the animals are being handled in a way that is appropriate for their health & that no problems are being caused for the community. I don't see why having rabbits in a backyard is okay but having chickens is not. Larger livestock (horses, cattle) doesn't need to be in the city.
- Small animals like chickens sure.
- That the neighborhood and property values are not affected by the livestock, limit on number of animals based on property size
- Encouraging people to keep chickens, feed their families, teach children how to care for animals and where food comes from makes sense to me. Same as above people should be required to take a course and have appropriate setups for them. Roosters in the city aren't appropriate.
- There should be close monitoring of urban livestock to make sure they are healthy and not disturbing the neighbours. If anyone with livestock needed a permit to do so bylaw services would know who had livestock.
- All for chickens (again, regulation around how many per household and type of housing for them). Goats can also be very beneficial
- Not within city limits.
- Why not!! Chickens are low maintenance, quiet during the night and provide food and a fulfilling hobby for those who love them!
- Kilogram size limit determined by land area, signage and properly kept domiciles for said animals, yearly inspections for larger animals.
- Sure!
- permit and course to ensure animal safety/hygiene and community safety
Limited numbers- ex so many chickens per xx square meter //1 goat per xx square meter
- No. We have issues with people and normal pets, we don't need issues with farm animals, and most can not be controlled with noise. If someone wants a bunch of chickens or roosters, the neighbours will be the ones to get irritated and cause tensions.
- Backyard chickens should be allowed provided the birds are cared for according to animal welfare laws. If needed a mandatory training session and inexpensive license could be required, and succession planning.
- Ensure spaces are big enough for animals, cages are not close to neighbour's windows

- No roosters since they crow, but properly kept chickens are fine, an indoor pig is fine, even a smaller breed of goat or miniature donkey, etc in my mind should be allowed. If a giant Great Dane beast of a dog is allowed, why not a properly vetted and cared for livestock animal?
- Yes! Chickens, pot belly pigs and even goats as long as they are well taken care of with adequate shelters
- Should fall among pet limitations... I. E. If noise, waste or smell disturb neighbours, it must be limited. But a couple of clucking chickens in someone's yard is no more disruptive than barking dogs or noisy cats.
- Not really sure
- Ensuring extra noise and smell isn't bothersome to neighbours. Maybe having a limit on size and number of livestock based on space in yard.
- A permit or license process
- This is not clear, what kind of livestock? Cows, sheep or pigs? To make sure they have shelters and are cleaned at least weekly.
- Should be a size limit: a 300lb pig is inappropriate. Also a limit on number, depending on species.
- This could get very smelly very quickly depending on the livestock people want to keep, but keeping chickens would be a good option.
- Not fair-livestock We are trying to increase human density per acre - pigs and chickens smell, their food attracts rodents/predators. Concern over Calgarians catching diseases salmonella from chickens and SARS / COVID19 from animal to human. Ignorant of basic farming and animal husbandry practices.
- Yes! If you have the space for the animal to live in humane conditions why not. Personally I would love to trade mowing the lawn for a goat or 2.
- Urban livestock is a great idea, as long as the owner has the proper space, fencing, and shelter (sound proof), for what they are raising & they take proper care of the animals! I think chickens are great! Over 45 years ago my parents had chickens in Calgary & our neighbors were fine with it.
- None,
- 2 Chickens should be allowed
- This is the Wild West, why can't I have a backyard chicken?
Make it a license like a dog.
As long as owners are responsible, and care for their urban livestock what is the problem? This could bring new local products to communities
- Adequate fencing and safe housing for the animals. As a vegetarian, I would be extremely uncomfortable with a neighbour slaughtering livestock within hearing range or within sight.
- I completely feel safe with urban livestock.
- Is not an emotional support animal. What a joke that whole thing is. Got no problem if someone has chickens for eggs, long as they are registered and not too many.
- I have absolutely no issue with this whatsoever and encourage this to be allowed. Especially chickens.

- Education
- biosecurity - there is a risk of disease transmission without proper health measures in place. Noise, smell and nuisance
- As long as it's humane I'm all for it
- The SPCA is already overwhelmed with neglected animals. I can only imagine the horrible conditions some people would keep their poor chickens in. I realize there would be lots of responsible owners but I am certain there would be an enormous amount of neglect and cruelty also. Witnessed this in BC.
- The only concern I would have is that standards of cleanliness and sanitation be maintained as well as adequate habitat, care & shelter for the livestock.
- No roosters (too loud). Reasonably well kept coops. Smell and noise don't bother neighbours. If you have small animals like pigs or goats, that they follow same rules as dogs - have to be on leash when off property. Basic concepts with all animals - respect others.
- No - this is one of the stupidest and most ignorant things I have ever heard of. Animals stink, livestock -especially chickens - stink something awful in summer heat. They don't belong in a city period.
- This is not for the city, I love animals but livestock should be relegated to the farm.
- There are many areas in the city where chickens, ducks, quail and pot bellied pigs would do well. Just like any animal they need people to adhere to best practices in order to manage them well. The families/schools that take this on, can have a significant impact on compost production.
- Perhaps a restriction like Victoria has where you cannot have a rooster due to the noise.
- Depends on size and type of livestock. Also there is a health concern from persons who do not keep their chicken coops clean. Licensed, mandatory education program and bylaw visits would be key.
- Chickens in backyards absolutely should be allowed.
- Keeping hens for eggs is fine. Need to ensure noise and smell concerns are addressed beyond that.
- Definitely livestock does not belong in the city, such as pigeon, chicken or pigs, due to their mess, waste m, smell and noise. Very unsanitary.
- Please be more specific here. I'm sure that no one is imagining urban bison herds! This is restricted to chickens or livestock that could be raised in a typical backyard? Such livestock would be small and not dangerous to people. To eliminate infection risks, there should be a max number.
- Hens are fine. Cows goats horses not so much. Yards are not large enough. Just keep the area clean and smell free as much as possible.
- There must be a minimum lot size required for urban livestock. Urban Livestock license and course on animals, how to be a good neighbour should also be required.
- Housing standards, keeper training and vaccination records.
- Limited to size and number and waste disposal requirements.

- would welcome chickens in the city. # should be proportionally appropriate to the space provided and size of the yard. this should be in line with what's considered by animal experts to be safe and healthy for the animals. similar noise controls as say, a barking dog, for a noisy rooster.
- Very strict rules on allowing the animals from cages, strict cleanup measures. Regular animal welfare checks.
- No chickens! I lived beside someone with illegal chicken coop in their backyard. Huge nuisance in the mornings. They would wake me up early in the mornings and were very loud whenever being fed. With no AC in the rental unit, windows were kept open most of the summer making the noise much worse.
- This is not a reasonable safe practice for urban livestock. Each live critter is a potential disease carrier and spreader.
- I would like to see evidence-based rules on how many animals are allowed on one property, the best housing conditions, and welfare-minded practices. I think it's a great opportunity and a source of food security but just as with other pet ownership, it needs to make the animal's welfare a priority.
- There is no need for livestock in the city. They interfere with others use of their property. Attract pests such as mice, rats skunks, squirrels etc.
- Reasonable maximum number of chickens. Four is plenty to supply a household with fresh eggs. No resale of eggs allowed. Given population of Bobcats probably need rules on enclosures to avoid them getting eaten and attracting animals. Also, chickens are not allowed to roam free.
- I would love to keep some hens, I think a pilot project, and then regulations about the size, type, and number of livestock one can keep, and the property requirements.
- The problem with keeping chickens etc is that there is an assumption that everyone would be responsible and keep the pens clean etc. That would never be the case. If you want to keep livestock - you are welcome to - just move to the country where your neighbours are not a few feet away.
- Small live stock is acceptable if kept in reasonable numbers, clean and noise generation is considered. No worse than my neighbours constantly barking dogs...
- Fine as long as it's smaller live stock like chickens, goats ect. Also should be permitted with animal limits per yard and neighbourhood and with inspections.
- Perhaps small livestock will be acceptable as long as noise and odor is acceptable.
- Urban livestock should not be allowed. Livestock require acreages to roam, something an urban backyard can't provide.
- Livestock are allowed in the city where my mom lives and the chickens are loud and smell horrendous, they cannot enjoy their backyard space anymore because of the chicken coops. All livestock are loud. I feel they should remain outside the city.
- I don't find livestock remotely threatening. As long as the animals are well cared for in appropriate numbers I would love to see more local animal husbandry.
- More bylaw enforcement resources
  - Max number limits
  - Noise and odor limits

- NOOOO! Definitely not - under zero circumstances do I want to hear chickens on a constant basis. It is bad enough with neighbours who do nothing about their dogs barking continually all day long, never mind having the noise and smell of chickens. I am far more against this idea than I am any other.
- urban livestock should not be permitted.
- This is fine. I've driven past pastured horses within City limits on a regular basis for years.
- Proximity mechanism for non-owners to be protected from noxious smells and nuisance sounds; protection for livestock owner to prevent poisoning.
- I would like to see some guidelines drawn up by owners of the specific livestock in cities. I want to have chickens, have experience raising chickens, but would like guidelines / help for a city location.
- Absolutely NOT. Do we need to look any further than the current crisis with COVID19 to say having livestock in the city is a very bad idea? If someone wants to own livestock, live on a farm or a rural setting.
You have the perfect out with the current pandemic to say no to this idea. Take it.
- As long as odour and noise is kept in check, I have no issues with urban livestock.
- I would like there to not be a rooster in my residential neighbourhood, what if my street has several roosters? Can we have a community rooster? Rooster for hire? All seriousness, noise is my concern for livestock in the city. Have we done any pilot projects?
- Totally fine. The sound of chickens (not roosters) is a calming sound, much quieter than dogs! There is no smell if composting education goes along with it.
- I would like to see chickens/poultry in Calgary.
- I am 100% against this. Livestock belongs on farms or outside of the city. The city is not a good place to create backyard farms
- - see above
- No, no, no. I've experienced roosters crowing at 4 am and can imagine the noise disturbance this would make Chickens create a ton of waste and if enclosures aren't properly maintained, the smell would be horrendous. People won't maintain their sidewalk shoveling the city won't enforce that rule. NO
- Mind the noise.
- Again, simple awareness and the knowledge that owners are to keep their livestock contained within their own property and held to a standard of ethics. I would be very interested in having chickens if it were allowed and would ensure they are kept safe and happy in my own yard.
- There is a large concern regarding noise, cleanliness, smell and attraction of predators. There is also not enough room on a typical back yard for the ethical treatment of any livestock.
- Should not be allowed. I love farm animals dearly, but people continue to prove they can barely care for domesticated animals. This would open up a whole other can of worms.
- None. Although Airdrie recently had a backyard chickens pilot program and the mice were a HUGE problem. They decided against allowing backyard hens

- should be limited to a small number of animals and small size animals. Concern is with noise and smell. Permit and annual inspections should be mandatory for health and welfare. Livestock should be kept at least 3m away from other properties to allow for good separation from those who don't want it
- Small numbers of livestock should be allowed by any home dweller provided they can be cared for and kept humanely. They should be able to care for them, clean up after them and ensure they do no harm to other animals or humans. The numbers should be based on type of animals and on the purpose
- Not keen on this. Odors, noise.
- Love the idea of having up to four layers in the yard for fresh eggs!
- Bad idea - disruptive, will reduce property values, keep to acreages / farms
- If it was a direct neighbour, I'd like to know they have one, and I'd like there to be a plan in place to reduce odours and noises.
- This is common sense
- I agree with the keeping of chickens. they are an easy animal for people to house and care for but needs to have regulations on the humane housing and care for the animals.
- A guarantee that there will be no noise (crowing, etc) or smell that penetrates beyond owners yard
- I really don't have a problem with chickens in the city either, as long as there are rules as to the amount of chickens one person can own, plus they need a proper coup and wire pen to keep them safe.
- No, nope, never. Raising livestock in the City should be prohibited. The City can barely keep up with complaints of animal abuse and neglect when it comes to dogs/cats, adding chickens to this is irresponsible. I for one don't want to see neglected and abused chickens in my neighborhood.
- Direction on maximum number and type of animals, required minimum/maximum size of both yard and habitat (chicken coop or the like). Safety is no concern, sound levels and smell are.
- city is for people, livestock is for rural. If you want livestock, by a acreage or farm outside the cities. Majority of city livestock is either too care for ie. pets or not cared for enough ie. poor treatment, loud sqwacking, roaming
Emotional support Livestock should be banned
- I support backyard Chickens
- There should be a limit of animals per person and they should have appropriate structure to take care of the livestock.
- A limit on the numbers of animals kept. For chickens or small livestock such as a goat, owners should take some sort of certification or education on how to do so in a city in order to prevent noise, waste, or disease issues in neighbourhood and to ensure the health and well-being of the animal.
- Chickens should be a thing for sure. I don't see any problems here.
- I'm not keen on roosters waking me up in the morning...
- Nothing. I feel safe.

- I am opposed to keeping hens, roosters, goats and other similar livestock on private property within city neighbourhoods. The noise and nuisance factor should outweigh any citizen's right to maintain such animals on their property within the city.
- as long as the livestock has appropriate enclosures and is properly cared for, with minimal impact on surrounding neighbours (ie. the smell isn't any worse than you would get on a normal day, the there isn't a precipitous increase in noise, etc. ) then I'm fine with whatever.
- Livestock belong in the countryside. Calgary yards are not large enough for most livestock. Odours from livestock pens in a concern. In winters, access to warm indoor areas (barns) may not be available to properly care for livestock. Escapees are hard to manage and require more bylaw resources.
- Noise, smells and possibly transmission of disease (ie China's issues). Should be permitted and inspected if complaints issued. Must limit number of animals per size of yard kept in.
- How about, nothing bigger than goats in the city? Urban cows are probably a bad idea.
- You should be able to have chickens etc. in backyards. Clean up and smell management should be addressed. But if the yard can hold chickens comfortably, I see no reason why people can't
- Yardspace must be present for animal welfare, and number of animals allowed dependent on total yard space available for the animal. All must be licensed. Animals may not leave the property unless leashed (no off-leash areas). Noise controls must be stringent.
- appropriate fencing and some way to manage any smells.
- I think people should be able to keep small livestock that can be confined to their yards (no ungulates).
- - Livestock should have working barriers to prevent specimens from invading other properties.
- A hotline number for reporting loose animals should be visible on signs
- Indicator signage placed on the publicly-visible side of these barriers should indicate the animal(s) active in these properties.
- To an extent. They definitely need a special license as well as very clear husbandry rules/bylaws. Keeping livestock in urban spaces can put residents at risk for disease transmission. For example, removal of livestock waste needs to be clear and effluent cannot be allowed to run off the property.
- Limits on amount
- Permitting requiring chickens have enough space, food and care to live in an urban environment.
- I would feel completely safe with home owners having a few backyard hens. I know that there are lots of municipalities that have wonderful success with allowing this as a way of sustainability in their communities.
- Nothing.
- There should be limits on allowable species, and numbers, as well as requirements around property size, housing of the species, health maintenance, etc.
This should be subject to periodic inspections and fines for failing any inspections carried out.
- Seriously? There is no shortage of agricultural land in Alberta. There is no need for livestock in the city. Ban it.

- I'm all for small-scale chicken raising - I think having a half dozen hens with appropriate shelter is reasonable.
- That owners are educated and capable of responsibly caring for their animals.
- Goats and chickens should be allowed.
- Minimum number of hens kept in coops should be safe.
- don't know enough to comment
- I do not want urban livestock in the City. Livestock belongs on acreages or farms where there is ample room for their well being. I am concerned about noise and odour.
- I have been interested in having a couple hens in my backyard. Hopefully this will be allowed by the bylaw change. I don't think chicken hens would pose any danger to people but perhaps to neighboring gardens if they escaped. I would think a noisy rooster would be a nuisance.
- I would love to own chickens. I'd agree that it's important to keep animals in clean, appropriate spaces and that numbers and noise should be regulated, just like dogs are. Absolutely no home slaughtering unless appropriate health/ use of space regulations are brought in.
- I have zero issue with chickens or even small goats kept in yards. If number/yard are kept reasonable and guidelines for coops are provided this is very simple. Tags/ID on animals is a good idea. I've seen communities in the US which allow chickens and it is fantastic.
- Livestock as a hobby or pets are OK. treat the same as dogs
- Most people would not be able to keep more than a few animals. I guess the focus should be making sure there is a reasonable amount of livestock, not over crowding.
- Mostly concerns about noise and smells. I personally would love to own a couple of alpacas for lawn maintenance, fleece and natural fertilizer
- Poultry only should be allowed, but in limited numbers (say a maximum of 3). Coops should be centrally located in owner's yard.
- A maximum # of animals allowed per household with safe enclosures
- I think urban livestock is a good idea as long as the noise and smell is not interfering with neighbours. (I'm not sure how to measure this). People will need guidelines on how to properly care for livestock. Additional funding for humane societies may be necessary to ensure proper care.
- I think that all animals that are outdoors should be registered. There should be some rules around cleanliness and smells and not being at large uncontrolled.
- As long as numbers are kept under control (no more animals than a dimension of space can handle) I would love to see this. Anyone with an emotional support cow has duped you. If emotional support livestock got a stamp of approval then anyone who wants a city goat, chicken, donkey should get one.
- Responsible farmer that does not allow smell, sound or waste to disturb their neighbours. Proactive, enforceable city bylaws and productive involvement for issues.
- If clean, not noisy, love it. The restaurant next to me stinks more than a chicken for sure
- Absolutely, as long as manure/waste is disposed of in a frequent manner and smells are kept to a minimum

- Not in favor of any urban livestock. If you live on the south side of such residence, you'll get all the smell and all the noise.. Some people actually do shift work and are trying to sleep when the livestock is making all there noise. If you want livestock move out of the city.
- Educate people where food comes from and the fact that some people want to responsibly raise their own food.
- Just to do regular health checkups and have not too large of grouping of the urban livestock so as to make sure there isn't a population explosion that could cause issues with roaming wild livestock
- Don't allow it!
- Noise levels should be reasonable at all hours of the day (thinking of early in the morning or late at night).
- This is a hard no. Lets be HONEST here, the REAL farms/farmers don't even have their houses located this close to their own animals barns & pastures! These small city lots with houses in extremely close proximity to these animals is not good for any neighbors including their MENTAL HEALTH (& Resale)
- NEVER unless Canadians are starving because of war or so. noise, smell, space
- No - maybe with size limits. Must have adequate size yard
- Yes within reasonable limit! Up to 6 laying hens per house should allowed
- All animals are livestock and are meant to live outside. Cows, pigs and the like are not for the city. Not acceptable.
- I'd love to have hens myself. I loved the white noise they create, not to mention their eggs. No special mechanism need is required. perhaps some education about what to do when some potential predators and pest shows up. Coyotes, rats, mice.
- More information. I honestly haven't read into the pros/cons of this and would love to see some trials being done throughout the city.
- Limit to 20 chickens.
- Limits to the number of animals allowed, requirements on the house/cage provided for the animals, rules in place to deal with the smell and waste that can be associated with livestock.
- Let's be able to have chickens (no roosters) in backyards! This is so important for climate change and food resiliency in Calgary.
- As long as animals and their waste are kept clean, no issues. Would promote community farm markets.
- I would say no to this. Absolutely none because of easy abuse in protecting public from odours and filth.
- Follow Vancouver by-law. Why reinvent the wheel. <https://vancouver.ca/people-programs/backyard-chickens.aspx>
- Livestock belong out in the country, not in backyards.
- The welfare of the animals as well as the community can be respected as long as accountability is in place.

- If you want a farm animal, go live in the country. Livestock should not be kept in the city. I don't worry about feeling "safe" around chickens so much as they are noisy and stink, so I do not want them in my neighbourhood.
- Educated (maybe certified?) owners.
- If the owner in question knows what they are doing and being responsible, it shouldn't matter what it is. I think welfare checks would be good, to ensure that the safety of the animals and public is top notch!
- Some livestock can be raised in the city, such as chickens. But there are appropriate ways to care for these animals and people need the training to do so.
- Livestock belong out in the country.
- To keep it on farm land and not in the city!!
- Backyard chickens are fine as long as they are in appropriate shelters and enclosures, which are kept clean.
- Love chickens
- Chickens should be allowed.
- Proper enclosures to ensure coyotes are not working their way into the property.
- Small amount would be ok as the smell would be the biggest distraction.
- Urban means Urban. live stock belongs to the country. it will cause health issues to the communities.
- There should be no urban livestock in the City of Calgary. It is very difficult because of the smell and cleanliness and dealing with neighbors.
- Should be limited to large enough yards, but is very situational.
- I think regulations that keep the animals themselves safe and healthy could be allowed. And I suppose a limitation placed on number of animals or volume of space used for livestock raising would be reasonable. No more than 20 chickens or something like that?
- Absolutely not. Including chickens. Living with livestock in crowded conditions leads to problems seen in China and other 3rd world countries. We don't need this.
- You're kidding, right? Maybe we should let cows roam free on the streets of Calgary and hire a bunch of City workers to clean up after them. No livestock in city limits.
- We live in such close proximity to each other in Calgary with small lots. I'm not sure this is appropriate.
- Calgary is far behind other cities in this regard. Keeping urban livestock should be allowed so families can have access to home grown food. They also support urban farming, which in turn can lower our carbon footprint. Calgary should look to Red Deer for a good template. Appropriate licensing is key
- Appropriate clean and secure enclosures. I am more concerned about the animals' safety and well-being than my own.
- Owners responsibility to address concerns of neighbors including noise or smells. Urban livestock should be permitted so long as it does not adversely impact the rights of others.

- The most likely livestock would be backyard chickens for eggs. My concern is that avian flu is transferred into domestic chickens from wild birds, so if the chickens are in the backyard this increases the chance of such a transfer. I think mandatory veterinary care for urban livestock is necessary.
- That livestock owners have education certificates to be accountable for responsible care. A cap of how many animals may be on site.
- I grew up on a farm. I do not want any urban livestock such as chickens, pigs or goats in my city on residential lots. I would not feel safe because of noise and smells. The potential to attract vermin and predators and potential human pathogens.
- My biggest concern here is the health and welfare of the animals, and how that might affect humans. Issues are vaccinations, grooming, food, veterinary care and impact on neighbours (noise, smell) I would like to see a permit system and periodic unannounced inspections.
- land owners in the city should be allowed chickens for personal egg consumption.
- cast iron frying pan for eggs. it's silly chickens are not allowed. Less a nuisance than dogs or cats.
- What kind of livestock? Chickens, nothing, they're chickens
- Should be no livestock in an urban area. If you want livestock, move to a farm.
- I am not so keen on urban livestock unless it is regulated. Many people today think only of themselves, not others who live nearby. What sort of actions can be taken if people have too many chickens or a cow and things are getting out of hand with noise or smell?
- I do not agree with any livestock kept on person property for any reason, including emotional support, as livestock cannot be taken anywhere outside of the home so I can't believe that this an appropriate emotional support animal.
- Nothing
- Time for people in Calgary to have a small number of backyard chickens.
- Chickens should be allowed in urban areas. A limit of how close a chicken coop can be to a neighbouring property should be set. As well as a limit on the number of chickens per property based on the size of the property. Fines should be made if people are not properly caring for their animals.
- I have no safety concerns with urban livestock as long as they are properly/securely housed which I know if for the good of the owner as well as the public so doubt there is much issue with it.
- Essential to us as human beings and one of the most important and fundamental connections to who we are as human beings on this planet.
- I feel safe with this with permits and guidelines around how many you're allowed.
- This needs to be regulated but to a degree of what can be considered allowed. Having a cow as an emotional animal in a city is ridiculous and determining what can be an emotional animal should be set.
- I am pro-chickens. I wish the city would allow for chicken coops in yards. Owners should have a limit of how many chickens one can own, the limit should also be based on yard size.
- Smells are minimal and noise is minuscule

- respond to nuisance - noise control for chickens
- Need controls on numbers and bylaws to protect neighbours, e.g. re. dealing with manure/odours. A small number of chickens/rabbits okay with reasonable rules, e.g. pen situated in center of yard. No goats, sheep, cattle, pigs, horses, llamas/alpacas.
- No livestock, you want livestock, buy a farm
- I am in favour of this, and feel it would be best implemented via a permit process to demonstrate proper basic knowledge of livestock keeping and care prior to engaging in the activity.
- Livestock don't belong in urban setting...keep them in rural setting
- Some smaller fowl/quail should be fine, so long as noise is kept in check. Smaller species in general like some pigs or whatever, should be permitted as well, space providing
- The livestock should be confined/restricted to the property of the individual responsible for them. Noise, smells, and nuisance should be kept to a minimum and not disturb neighbors.
- Size and number limits are essential. Control of waste, noise and odour. Control of debris, as we are a windy city. Health management of all animals within the city. Mandatory annual or more veterinarian inspections as with any farm.
- I would like to raise chickens like other municipalities allow in Canada. Just like responsible dog and cat owners follow rules, so could chicken farmers.
- Appropriate space requirements for chickens (ie: a backyard, vs a condo balcony). Maybe some basic training (1hr online, etc) to aid in keeping the chickens alive and healthy. The ability for neighbours to report legitimate complaints. Public education and encouragement.
- No, if you want to have live stock live in the country.
- Proof of education/ knowledge/ certificate etc from an accredited Canadian school
- Appropriate means of disposing their waste.
- Assurances that the beekeeper has been properly educated, and a process in place to evaluate neighbor concerns.
- I had 2 backyard hens the last two summers. My neighbors have been supportive and love to stop by. Being from the farm I always made fun of city slickers. Now I am one. This has provided me with an opportunity to teach my kids (10,8,6) about agriculture and hard work.
- Depends on the live stock. Chickens and other smaller livestock as long as they have excellent living conditions should be allowed to exist within calgary. And as long as they are kept tidy and healthy.
- No should be on a farm. Carry diseases. Avian flu and other. Not safe.
- Chickens/feed attract vermin, which are already a problem in the city. You know there will be people who think slaughtering and processing their chickens in the backyard is no problem, and I suspect bylaw officers have more than enough to do without dealing with such an issue.
- It can be source of available food but it requires proper knowledge of care and housing requirements. Most spaces require modification for safe, adequate confinement. There is a need for disposal of waste in a safe and sanitary manner. The issue of humane disposal also applies.
- A certification requirement.

- Chickens: Noise and smell if the hens are not properly cared for. Also, attraction of nuisance animals a concern. If small flocks are properly housed in a secured yard, there would be less issue. I like the possibility for livestock here in Calgary.
- Depends the size of your property. Are the animals in a good space? Has to be regulated according to size of property and the type of animal the person want to have there. 10 chickens in a single family home with a nice size backyard, all fenced and chicken coop properly done all good to me.
- No roosters or animals above a certain size. Can't keep a cow on a city lot.
- This makes no sense in the small, cramped spaces between homes. Noisy, smelly. Can see this going badly.
- again...why---- get your livestock on a farm--- houses are too close together in cities as is the current trend ---thanks to Mayor Nenshi ...to have to put up with smells and noise from this trend in the city...no regard for people close by
- I have no interest in smelling chickens or other livestock. Chickens smell horrid. Bees dont smell and avoid people. I think it also depends on the population density. In bowness my yard was huge and it would have been easy to have livestock and not bother anyone
- Livestock should not be allowed within city limits. The odor would be unbearable. It is hard enough to deal with foul odors coming from city drainage.
- Dogs come in all sizes and we have no issues, so a chicken or small goats and other animals of that sort I see have no issue as long as they are maintained and cared for PROPERLY.
- Nothing - provides the livestock are kept in a yard or barn
- Not a problem provided guidelines are in place regarding cleanliness and food storage re rodents
- At the very least I would like to see Calgary support urban chicken coops, with appropriate regulations (ie. No roosters, housing regulations, amount)
- Make sure we are safe
- fenced areas
- I would be in favor if there was licencing as for cats and dogs and at a monetary level to pay for Bylaw enforcement should issues such as excess noise, cleanliness, neglect, etc. arise.
- A secure livestock pen (i.e. a fenced back yard). I may have concerns about noise.
- should be ban
- Most livestock are associated with nuisances like smell, noise, and environmental management with regards to their waste. An Agricultural officer/regulator would need to be employed to manage and license the practice. Their should be a cap on numbers informed by policy.
- If people wish to raise livestock as a pastime, they can network with one of the MANY acreages and communities that surround Calgary. These relationships could be built/enhanced. I have enough problems with my neighbours' dogs that I'd prefer not to have other livestock added to the equation.
- Fencing or containment to prevent animals from roaming loose.
- Should be none. No need at all.

- No large livestock like cows. Pigs are ok. A set amount per household. One or two is ok. Chickens more but only one rooster (too disruptive w noise). Large animals licensed like dogs. Proper enclosures.
- Move to the country. There is no place in the city for livestock. Sorry.
- Guidelines for how many of what types should exist (if they don't) similar the urban keeping guidelines, and the nuisance bylaw enforcement are adequate. Cows seem ridiculous, I am open to small animals and birds at a scale that is appropriate for the location.
- Nothing
- No goats, horses, pigs or cattle. Limit of 6 chickens per yard, with a coop mandatory. No roosters allowed!
- Chickens, rabbits, and other small animals should be allowed but in limited numbers. They should have proper housing. They should not make a stink or noise that will disturb neighbours. They are valuable to provide "close" food to the owners.
- I can only see having livestock on your property if you lived on 2 acres or more on the outskirts of a city and not right in the middle of it.
- Should be on a farm ... viruses possible in urban area ... no live markets ...
- I feel this is reasonable as long as the space is maintained and odours controlled.
- Certain livestock should be allowed such as chickens in small numbers. Keeping a cow or horse in a backyard might be too much.
- Perhaps some sort of registration or even certification is reasonable.
- The size of the animals need to be restricted. There needs to be enough space for the animals. Both humans and animals are not at risk. That these are pets and not used for food (exception of eggs and honey).
- I don't believe that urban livestock should be allowed
- pet pigs or chickens (laying hens) are totally fine with me, maybe not cows.
- Yes, lets modernize. Chickens require only a few square feet each and make less noise than a dog. No roosters, hens will lay eggs without them. Mulch keeps the smell down. Goats are great along side urban farming where they will eat all of the weeds. Dairy cow? Only if you had half an acre.
- max weight size of animal to prevent city cows, Llama, alpaca etc, but allow for chickens, small goats rabbits etc. Max # of animals per size of enclosure by humane treatment act to prevent overcrowding / humane living conditions, odor /pest control. Security of animals away from adjacent property
- Mandatory licensing of urban livestock "farms", and mandatory standard vaccinations for all chickens and pigs. Novel influenza strains that affect humans typically arise from these species, so no household should be permitted to receive a license for both species at any one time.
- Absolutely opposed. Do not at all agree with the provision of livestock as 'support animals' within city limits. High risk with public health concerns, along with odour and other considerations. Restrict these animals to rural areas only.

- Should be allowed with appropriate regulations. As a society we should be embracing more life in the city, more biodiversity and local food options. Animals should be housed humanely and smell and noise should be the consideration in regulating.
- My concern is about reducing noise, odours, and vermine.
- Active member in local organization. Strict bylaws on quantity, etc. No one wants to hear roosters crowing.
- I don't think this should be allowed at all. The smell alone is enough to make certain people sick.
- The ability to raise chickens or goats in the city really interests me. Suggest max of 2 goats in city limits (social animals, can't have just 1), and up to 8 chickens per residential dwelling depending on lot size. Need regulations for fencing, coops/sheds, cleanliness, and a complaint process
- Maximum 7 cows in a starter home back yard. Slaughtering must be down inside your garage or under the cover of darkness.
- I absolutely feel the bylaw should stay the same regarding livestock in an urban setting. Most people don't keep their livestock clean and under control. It just adds to noise pollution and smell to the neighbors around them. I adamantly do not want livestock raised in the city.
- People should have to complete a course before being allowed, also a reasonable number on what can be kept in 1 yard. I think a few hens is probably okay. 1 alpaca, 1 neighborhood goat to mow grass?
- I cant imagine a hypothetical concern regarding livestock I think you are referring to; goats, pigs, hens, etc.
- Care and attention to feed, cleanliness and housing of animals to ensure they do not become a nuisance to others.
- Small livestock such as backyard chicken coops should be allowed in the city of calgary.
- Do as Seattle does, then all good
- Should not be allowed.
- Animals should be registered, and potentially housing requirements should be inspected before licensing is issued. Keeping livestock is a lot of work and preparation to provide enough space for the animals. Many animals also cannot be kept alone - they need companions.
- The average goat, chicken, or other small "livestock" pose less risk to the community & environment than cats and dogs do. As such, the same restrictions as for cats & dogs should be more than sufficient. Basically, the owner must be completely responsible for their animals.
- No. Care, vaccination, feed too much work for city folk. Neighbors will complain about smell and noise. That's why they live in the city. PID numbers required in rural areas, room for animals....leave them rural.
- I would encourage and support ownership of a modest number of chickens (perhaps 1 or 2 per person in the household) with the same expectations and guidelines for responsible housing and waste management as is already in place for cats and dogs.
- Chickens (laying) are fine up to a half-dozen birds per household. Smell and noise are potential issues that should be worked out with neighbours wherever possible (complaint driven).

- NEVER...DESTROYS PEOPLES PROPERTY VALUE & WITH CORONAVVIRUS IT IS CLEAR VIRUS'S CAN MIGRATE TO HUMANS...WHY IS THIS EVEN CONSIDERED?
- No
- Never
- Limit on number allowed, shelter types allowed, types of activities (i.e. no slaughtering your chickens in the backyard). Limit on types allowed. Controls on animal health and hygiene.
- I think that it should depend on the amount of land and the size of the animal. One animal more people could keep to enhance their food landscape even on a standard city lot is chickens (no roosters).
- Why is this considered? Corona Virus proves it's not safe. THERE IS A REASON FARMS EXIST OUTSIDE CITY LIMITS.
- Small scale livestock should be available for personal use and/or micro scale sharing (2-3 families sharing chicken eggs).
- Absolutely
- No - should not be allowed
- Noisy
- allow Chickens and small livestock within city limits. Limit to how many of these animals can be kept. No obnoxious loud animals. such as rosters, however hens are good. animals would still fall under noise bylaws if requires. Same for excess smell. - just like Dog poop smells if left all winter.
- people should be allowed to keep hens in their yards
- Nothing. small live stock like chickens can be easily contained and cared for in most yards. Things like goats and pigs would require more substantial fencing etc. but shouldnt be discounted if they have the proper space available to them.
- Cleanliness and regulation to protect the health and safety of the animals and wild creatures living amongst them too
- no additional needs
- Chickens and birds should be allowed.
- Should be allowed
- Never should this be in an urban neighbourhood as people seem to have enough problems following three bylaws with their cats and dogs..... it will even worse with livestock.
- Problematic. Feces, flies, disease noise concerns.
- Nothing
- No.
- It should be allowed if the interested party has the approval of all his neighbors (at least 5 houses to his side and 5 in front).
- bylaw or guidelines regarding best practices, public education and limits to project sizing for personal livestock i.e., need a property of X size for X number of chickens etc.

- Chickens, ducks and goats should be allowed everywhere without restriction. Roosters should require permission from neighbors within 1000 ft. I think pigs should require permission from directly adjacent neighbors. Very small breeds of sheep or cattle could be okay on very large lots.
- hens are great. Roosters need special consideration given the noise factor
- Limit hens should be allowed in the backyard. Hens noise is much less than dogs. But the owner should clean the cage regularly and keep smell minimal.
- Noise and smell are of some concern. I am not sure on any regulation regarding these issues but am open to urban livestock under the right conditions.
- A fabulous idea. Provides food security and allows people to lessen dependence on commercial food sources. Allow 2 or 3 chickens per household, require permits for roosters so no noise issues. Goats and ducks should also be allowed
- - Size/weight limitations
- - Zoning or parcel size restrictions
- - Required standards of care
- - Requirement to register with the City
- My biggest concern would be noise, particularly with chickens and pigeons can be very annoying, even though they are not that loud. Dogs can be trained not to bark but I don't think livestock is as easily controlled.
- I think urban chickens would be a wonderful thing for Calgary, with limits on the number of hens per household and potentially an inspector to ensure the health and safety of the animals and people is preserved. This would be a great way for people to reduce their carbon footprint (less shipping).
- As long as not smelly or noisy, should be allowed
- ABSOLUTELY NOT!! LIVESTOCK SHOULD ONLY BE PERMITTED ON FARMS OR ACREAGES EXCEEDING ONE ACRE. I DO NOT WANT CHICKENS/LIVESTOCK MAKING NOISE NEAR MY CITY HOME. OUR LOTS ARE WAY TOO CLOSE FOR THAT!! NOISE, SMELL, IMPROPER CARE AND OR DISEASED ANIMALS RIGHT NEXT DOOR, NO THANK YOU!!!
- I think this is inappropriate and shouldn't be permitted. There are a lot of noise, maintenance, cleanliness issues with livestock and they need space and a city isn't an appropriate setting.
- I want chickens! Please allow backyard hens!!
- Yes
- Chickens - no more than six
- Pigs - no more than 2
- Regulations outlining what types of livestock would be great. Specifications about numbers, sizes, types of enclosures, cleanliness of enclosures. Regulations that stipulate the livestock is for personal use only and not business.
- It depends. I wouldn't want a chicken coop, pig sty, goats that people use for food in my neighborhood. If someone had a pet pig or a pet goat etc. That would be okay
- should not be allowed except hens
- Nope. I'm not in agreement with this. I don't want to be woken up by chickens. I'll go to Kauai on vacation for this.

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- A citizen should require a certain amount of land in order to have livestock. They should not be allowed in normal residential areas.
- Limits to the size and number of animals in a back yard. (Max number/area - to prevent over crowding of pens. Noise /odour control.
- Assurance that smells will not become problematic.
- Chickens and small animals should be allowed. Most places allow chickens (for eggs) as long as they do not cause a nuisance or loud noises (reasonable amount of chickens) small goats and other livestock should be allowed
- I worry about Avian Influenza regarding chicken or any birds. I know they can benefit a home and supply eggs etc. Calgary had better have a plan with the CFIA for outbreaks of animal born illnesses like Avian Influenza.
- Again it would have to be a large property and kept clean, no odours or noise and a cap on the number of animals. For the average size property again a definite no and a cap on the numbers.
- A small chicken coop is fine, again given density.
- Not sure but I like the idea
- No
- I am interested in backyard chickens (3 or 4) for egg production. I think Beekeepers Association is good model to follow to provide education and support if there are problems. City should encourage formation of volunteer Chicken association that can set the standard for others.
- Maximum six hens (no roosters) or ducks per city lot. Geese to be discouraged due to noise.
- If at all intrusive to neighbours prohibit.
- I think 2-3 hens could be allowed, which seems like a number that would provide for the family, and nearby residents interested in buying the eggs.
- Hens pose zero danger to humans. I feel totally safe near hens. They also add greatly to human quality of life, neighborliness and community, and the education of children.
- Chickens and other birds pose no safety issue as predators such as coyotes and bobcats are already brought in due to other animals other livestock should have secured locations
- I would feel safe. I worry for the health of animals that people keep outside all the time though I would like to have some chickens.
- No.
- Don't agree with livestock in the city...I don't want to live beside farm animals!
- Urban livestock can be a nuisance to the communities they live in. Smell can attract wildlife and fowl especially have the risk of spreading disease. There is a huge risk of these animals being taken advantage of and not being cared for properly. The city does not have the resources to Manage this
- Livestock is a very broad term. I don't think it fair to horses or cows to be confined within a city lot. Chickens though would be fine provided there was a limit on how many per household.
- Fencing
- I don't believe there should be any urban livestock in Calgary.
- No

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- Clean and maintained. No smell.
- There needs to be proper space and the animals requirements met.
- VERY well defined waste and cleanliness requirements including fines for first time violations. Setbacks from any nearby structures. Fencing requirements including visibility to limit children wanting to access area. Noise control. Minimum space requirements and setbacks from neighbouring property.
- I do not approve of keeping livestock in an urban setting. If someone wants to keep livestock, they should make the choice to move out of the city.
- Livestock isn't defined in this survey. I would love people (even my neighbors) to be able to have chickens (if they are cared for in the same manner expected of companion animals like dogs and cats). I don't think it's appropriate to have cows, goats, pigs, sheep in the city.
- Cows, horses, chickens, rabbits etc will all bring disease and/or mice, raccoons, skunks. We have all three of those critters on our street already!
How are you going to enforce sanitary conditions, noise (think roosters).....we don't need more bylaw officers and health inspectors.
- They are not my pets. Unless the owner says it's Ok for me to touch them I won't.
- Chicken, pigs, smelly, messy, noisy! Emotional Animal Permit? Seriously?? We need to STOP all this pandering to special interests groups, many of which are not legitimate. Registered guide dogs only, including for emotional support
- In the late 40's, my grandparents raised chickens in Bridgeland. The smell did not bother them. It sure bothered me. Smell, noise, attracting pests such as mice and rats, disease are all problems. You want to raise livestock, get an acreage. There should be none in the city.
- There should not be urban livestock within the City of Calgary.
- More goats to maintain park grass please!!!!
- Any place, with reasonable restrictions on numbers, hens should be allowed as a secondary source of protein for home owners. This is a great way to decrease the carbon footprint of a household as the eggs can be produced right in the backyard.
- They should be allowed, urban livestock are no more messy or noisy than dogs are. I especially would like to be able to have chickens in my yard.
- No!!! Chickens are dirty and noisy.
- If you're talking about keeping chickens that's a good idea but again you have to regulate cleanliness and regulations huge because I can go out of control. Have you ever cleaned a chicken coop? Do you know what you're getting into? I have it's not for everybody.
- Fencing to keep animals and public safe. Chickens would be fine e.g. in an Eggloo with a fenced area to scratch in. Possible concern over rodents being attracted but benefits outweigh negatives. City could provide poultrykeeping courses for public to pay to attend. Also maybe ban roosters.
- I would be fine with up to 3 hens (no roosters).
- To know before my neighbor installs one and knowing they've had training before bringing them to the neighborhood and have a right to reverse the approval if they're not keeping it clean to reduce local poop odours

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

June 29, 2020

- Should be limited to yards that have enough space so neighbours don't smell or hear the animals. There should be a limit on the number of animals a person can have and should not exceed the number of people in the home by more than 1
- In my experience chickens are loud and they stink. I would be frustrated if my neighbors were allowed chickens.
- Suitable space on property to house various livestock. Catalog of what is acceptable and largest animals not or even by numbers, more than two is a no-mess, noise and smell for neighbours.
- No large livestock, even "emotional support livestock" should not be allowed in city limits. No roosters, 2-3 chickens could be considered but owners must attend a mandatory course on proper care and housing. Infractions are treated by a lifetime ban to having more chickens.
- Animals should be kept in species appropriate quarters for their own and everybody else's safety.
- Seems unfair to the livestock
- Depending on property size certain size and number of animals should be allowed. Urban chickens that are properly maintained and cleaned should be allowed.
- Ensure that there is adequate space for the animal to live comfortably. Also ensure that the area in which the animal is clean 100% of the time to ensure they are safe, but also ensure neighbours are not bothered by the odours.
- Regular checks to make sure the living conditions are acceptable and the animals are cared for properly. Mandatory education sessions for owners. Appropriate signage.
- As long as livestock is kept in secured areas with enough space to comfortably live I am happy. And that all waste is disposed of properly and with cleanliness.
- If large animals I would worry about smell having enough space for them in a back yard as well as shelter
- Proper fencing
- So long as the noise and smell do not disturb others. Provide a clean and spacious area for the animals. All animals can be emotional support even though they have no permit.
- I do not think livestock should be kept within city limits
- Not really specific..so if my neighbour had a cow. I would not appreciate the smell of cow dung wafting around. Chickens....noise, farm animals belong on a farm not in a city
- Nothing
- I love this idea. I have always wanted chickens. There must be limitations to the amount of livestock permitted. There is a risk that urban livestock will attract wildlife into the city. Precautions must be taken. Courses available on how to clean and maintain livestock habitats to reduce the smell.
- Our neighbourhood borders on natural parkland. We had squirrel proof birdfeeders & trays underneath to catch seeds & raked any spillage up weekly. Our yard was soon infested with mice, which chewed holes in the foundation & got into the house. Mice carry hantavirus. Chicken & livestock terrible idea
- A course offered so you know how to properly take care of livestock!
- Chickens only, no roosters

- YYC needs to allow urban chickens, like most other modern cities. We had chickens for 8 years, and it is a lot less smelly, noisy, dangerous or dirty than dogs. We and our neighbors benefit from eggs and it is a GREAT learning experience for our children and the neighbor kids. Wake up YYC!
- Let people have their chickens already. Make them get a license to have some. Then if there is issues/complaints it's chicken etc owners paying AS to mediate not the general tax mill. Can't see how living next to chickens is worse than living next to a day home LOL LOL
- i feel chickens are okay as long as they dont create a unfavorable smell for neighbours or loud excessive noise the same as a barking dog rule applies
- chickens should be okay if only 3 birds
- Concerned about waste and doors but should be allowed with limits on size (no full sized cattle, horses, swine, etc) and numbers or density.
- i think poultry in small numbers would be okay ,maybe 4 animals and as long as the owner cleans after them so neighbiurhood doesnt get stinky
- Yes but not rosters, peacocks or other noisy animals
- I think this needs to be very tightly monitored! Emotional support animal - fine but it would be disastrous and barbaric if ppl started keeping livestock to slaughter for food.
- I think of chickens when this comes up, not much else. A limit of 3-5 chickens seems reasonable. I feel it should be limited to larger, 50 ft lots, not multi residential properties and not disrupting your neighbors ability to enjoy their yards.
- I support this.chickens are great
- This is a city of many cultures. Keep agriculture in agricultural areas. There is a reason why they are separate. Too may animals. Keep the focus on responsible pet ownership, as this is a big enough issue.
- I think people should be able to keep hens in their yard if properly cared for. I also think the city should consider the use of goats instead of spraying toxic chemicals to control weeds. Those chemicals are not safe for people, pets, or wildlife.
- Please do not allow this!! Livestock belong on farms. The smell and noise cannot be contained in small city lots.
- I would love to see more of this. Chickens would be great. There would obviously need to be a limit on number and rules on cleaning up after them even in your own yard as chicken poop is stinky.
- I would LOVE to have a couple of chickens!! There are many surrounding towns that allow a few backyard chickens, and they don't seem to be having any trouble. As long as the owner is educated, and keeps the area clean and doesn't allow the feces to accumulate and smell.
- Regulations on feces and noise
- Sure, as long as it is not cruel to the livestock as the space is too small
- No livestock should be kept within city limits.
- I am very supportive of urban agriculture that regulates odor, feces and noise concerns.
- Nope.... No livestock. They carry disease and should not be allowed. With or without a permit. Emotional support animals should be defined as regular house pets.

- Biggest concern is how safe the animals are - do they have enough space, etc.
- Yes to backyard chickens not pigs, etc w/same requirements as above. Limit the number of hens to less than 3 or 4 (should not be for commercial purposes), no roosters. Coop parameters should also be defined, hens shouldn't leave the yard unless caged or leashed. Rules for deaths, disease monitoring
- Define "livestock"? Mini horses or goats could be okay as long as they are not left outdoors all of the time. What other livestock do people want?
- As long as they are contained by adequate fencing/housing, and cleaned every day or two, there should be no issues. Animals must still be housed in adequate sized enclosures to allow enough room for each animal.
- Signage, proper housing
- Sounds great. My concern is around smell so maybe rules on size of yard or distance from neighbors?
- Would love for Calgarians to have small livestock such as chickens. For my own safety I would want rules in place limiting numbers and ensuring cleanliness / air quality.
- I think urban livestock would be good with limits on the number of animals based on your yard size.
- I don't think they should be allowed at all. They're noisy and smelly
- Strict licensing and enforcement in place to severely limit noise/strong odors/size/inevitable accompanying of wild rodents and predators which occur with bedding/outdoor feeding of livestock. Responsibility of livestock owner for any clean-up/damage inc. odors which occur.
- Proper waste management
- Education on how to do it safely.
- Again teaching seminars and then having proper fences and cleaning up people should be able to have livestock
- Just inform neighbors and depending on the size and habits of the animal
- There is no reason to feel unsafe around urabn livestock
- Chickens should be allowed in the City with a permit. Permit conditions should make sure owners clean up and care for their chickens to avoid odors.
- The space to keep the animal health and happy
- as long as it doesn't impede on my quality of life-, noise, smell, safety -then I am fine with it.
- Nothing really, except a stock limit per hectare to prevent over stocking.
- Regulations regarding fecal matter clean-up.
- Hen are low impact and easy management.
- I think rabbits and chickens would be great as long as proper husbandry is followed. Chickens might be limited to a maximum of 6.
- Provided the space is large enough for the animals in question. And the keepers are once again educated
- Awesome, but maybe a limit on animals, and make sure they cant roam free.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- I strongly don't agree. Livestock is messy and smelly and people don't pick up after their dogs, much less clean a chicken coop. Your neighbours shouldn't have to deal with that.
- There is nothing about urban livestock rearing which makes me feel unsafe.
- Depends on the animal. Also manageable numbers of animal, sanitary, safe living conditions. Smells (e.g. manure) are kept to a minimum. And noises are not a problem, e.g. may need to restrict roosters.
- I think a small number of chickens should be allowed for urban homeowners to provided self-sustaining food production. Roosters can be a problem (crowing) But I am all for allowing chickens and other small urban livestock.
- Nothing. Small urban livestock are quieter and safer to people than dogs are.
- I'm concerned about feces, smell and disease. What types of animals would be allowed? How would this be managed and keep admin costs down.
- Urban livestock ought to be limited to smaller species like chickens.
- Bring it on. Except they should have a place and a time to be out indoors. Thinking night to so as not to disturb the sleep of neighbours.
- chickens ok
- At no time should livestock be kept in urban setting. The exception would be the goat heard that is used to maintain weed filled areas.
- A limit on the number of animals
- Only chickens should be allowed. You need to live in a detached home with a yard. A limit on the number of chickens you can have, may depend on yard space, no roosters! Guidelines on what the hen house specs should be. An online course needs to be taken, so people actually know how to care for them.
- Need to think about feces, smell and neighbors. Depends on the livestock.
- Nothing.
- I would want to ensure the livestock is properly taken care of, I do not wish to see livestock not being treated well. Perhaps a policy where owners need to show proof of regular healthcheck Otherwise, I am all for it. Especially chickens. I would love to see more local options for purchasing eggs.
- I do not have personal safety concerns with the backyard keeping of hens, rabbits, or goats.
- No roaming livestock.
- Reasonable limits for amount. Licensing and proper care for any who have them.
- No
- Chickens (max number) and caged rabbits should be permitted. Should be expectations about odour and noise.
- Adequate shelter and maintenance
- Never. Livestock should only be on farms. How would you like your neighbor having a rooster waking you up a dawn every sunny day?!!
- Communication with neighbours
Owner education

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- Stringent regulations about waste and cleanliness of enclosures. Enormous fines for mistreatment or not providing a clean living environment for the animal.
- If people are going to have animals they need to know how to take care of them: proper food, lots of access to water and proper shelter and veterinary care. Take an animal husbandry course or research the animals before you commit. I would love to have three chickens.
- Shouldn't be in the city and only in rural areas. Would require a large property in the city. Might not be good for the environment as they induce greenhouse gas emissions
- I think urban chickens and small animals could be acceptable in communities with low density, however I would want there to be bylaws to ensure that coops, etc were not impacting neighbours with smell or animal waste in an untoward way. Larger livestock could be considered but not in the inner city.
- Nothing. I have no issues with people keeping urban livestock
- If chickens were allowed I would consider getting some. So long as there is no nuisance, property damage to neighbors, and ultimately the owners of the livestock were held accountable I see no issue.
- Ban all livestock. This isn't the 1800's. Chickens, beside the smell, are especially bad for attracting vermin. They belong in the country.
- I worry about diseases and smells from this. If people want to have livestock, they should live in the country, not the city. This should not be allowed in the city.
- I don't like that the City has blindly banned harmless animals such as chickens in the past, but understand that if poorly managed they could be an issue. Again, limits on numbers and noise and smell should be sensibly enacted. In this community, alternate forms of sustainability are crucial.
- Chickens should be allowed with the proper proof of care and housing.
- I don't want nor support urban livestock, and do not appreciate leading questions on these surveys. Currently the City Residents do not respect the bylaws - don't add more complexity to the mix until people can demonstrate they are responsible.
- Livestock should be allowed as long as they do not make noise after dark or cause smell or harm to any property or person.
- A fence and animal enclosure.
- Limit on the number and size of domesticated livestock. Complaints about smell and noise need to be addressed and dealt with by CofC animal control regulations. Exotic animals need to have special regulations and restrictions depending on type and health hazards. Apply Resp. Pet Ownership Regs.
- As long as noise bylaws are respected, the animal is being cared for (fresh food and water) and poop is cleaned up I'm ok with it.
- I am against urban livestock.
- Livestock (chickens, potbelly pigs, goats etc) should be aloud in the city with enough yard space
- Sufficient space from other people's property to prevent impacts to them (noise, smell, disturbances)

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- I strongly support this, we just need to make sure that there is sufficient space between hives and other property owners/users.
- Smaller livestock such as chickens, geese, ducks, goats, sheep, and pigs could be included in current pet bylaws: need to be registered and licensed. Place a limit as to how many of each species can live on a residential lot. Appropriate shelter should also be considered for such animals
- preferably no, maybe birds. Most livestock stinks, I don't really want to smell that
- As long as the owners are maintaining appropriate disease prevention.
- No. Stinky and noisy. Cruel.
Plant a garden instead.
- Not in the city
- No strong opinion as I haven't encountered any urban livestock. However, I might have concerns in the summer from smells, noise, attracting vermin etc. I think livestock should remain in the rural setting for all concerned.
- Adequate and sanitary living conditions for animals, housing that is secure, animal welfare regulations
- follow pigeon section 27.1
- Nothing
- As long as the animals are cared for it is fine. The city needs to have rules in place that would be similar to the cat/dog bylaws
- Livestock like hens for eggs or meat should be allowed without a permit. It's a ridiculous overreach that they aren't allowed. There is no downside to keeping livestock responsibly in the city and would increase food security.
- So long as the yard allows enough space for the animals and the owners are responsible for their livestock, urban livestock is a fantastic idea. It's great for bringing communities together and can sometimes help families with budgeting for food.
- Some livestock in the city is fine, as long as there is enough room for the animals to be healthy.
- maybe smaller animals should be allowed, but not more than 5 and should be in proportion to the landmass/backyard space homeowners have.
- Have a minimum yard size and restrictions on amounts for hens, goats, sheep, alpacas.
- Local chickens coops are good idea but no male roosters. No more than 4 chickens. Chickens for meat must be kept, culled humanely. Disposal in compost
- Nothing. Allow them. As long as the volume and smell are reasonable.
Pot bellied pigs have not been permitted since 2009. This sort of paternalism is extremely unnecessary, and its embarrassing that Calgary has banned them as pets. Modern purchasers are all aware that potbellied pigs become large.
- -Chickens - up to 6 per yard depending on area. Basic humane practices and sanitation. No roosters.
-Meat rabbits. Up to 12 per yard depending on area. Basic humane practices and sanitation.
Adequate cages to secure rabbits.

Both rabbits & chickens shall be permissible concurrently.

Beehives ok.

- Good enclosures with ample space
- If people have adequate space and facilities, I think urban livestock such as backyard chickens or even goats should be permitted. Proof of space and a good home/containment for the animals should be necessary for the permit.
- Chickens should be allowed but limited to single family homes with backyards and limited to two/three per household. Chickens are excellent for pest control as well as providing fresh eggs. Roosters should not be permitted due to noise issues.
- Chickens- no more than 4 to six. No roosters.
- Chickens should be allowed. If you're willing to buy all the necessary supplies And are limited to a certain amount of laying hens only then I would support.
- If this is concerning pigs or chickens, a limit would be reasonable. No roosters.
- Controls on the type and size if the animal so that if it gets loose it is unlikely to injure people or pets. Noise is also a concern, both volume and frequency.
- It should just not be allowed. The houses are way too close together in Calgary.
- 1 acre or more properties and no noise or smells.
- Absolutely don't agree with livestock in the city - move to the country if you want chickens and cows in your yard. If I wanted to listen to animals making noise and smell the results of these animals next door I'd also be living in the country. Absolutely No.
- Smaller livestock (goats, pigs, chickens, ducks) should be legal, again with extensive bylaws, including random health/responsible ownership checks.
- Not allowed
- I like the idea of being able to have backyard chickens. I think licensing people in order to have a coop would be a good idea.
- Nothing! Chickens are awesome!
- NO I do not agree they need to be in areas that are large enough to roam not backyards in cities
- I think that chickens in Calgary is not a good idea as the backyards are getting smaller. The smell produced from chickens can be a nuisance to neighbours who do not want chickens.
- no thanks
- I dont feel there would be issue or conflict providing proper enclosures standards are met
- No. City lots are too small. How are people going to house these animals? Rocky view county limits out buildings for a reason on acreages. Take into consideration biosecurity for animals, vet care, feed ( cannot purchase in Calgary), noise, manure? Where is that going?Monitoring these animals? Who?
- I support the ideologies of having hens in yard, not roosters. Hens are quiet, clean birds, and with proper care and a proper coup they can be safe from wildlife like bobcats and coyotes.
- - there is nothing that can be put in place to make me feel safe. The odour and noise from these animals can not be contained in close living quarters that homes in an urban setting are located.

- No. Rent spaces in rural areas if needed. Anyone can do this but people do not follow the rules or control their animals. Meaning smell, messes and noises. Needs more surveillance of each situation.
- Absolutely not ! Animal shelters are over crowded with Dogs and cats. There are too many irresponsible pet owners out there that can barely handle those 2 types of animals do not add more
- It is inhumane to keep livestock on urban sized lots. This is a selfish and arrogant approach to supporting and enhancing “local” food systems. Instead, the city of Calgary should look into partnering with neighbouring farming communities to support local food programs.
- I think letting people have chickens would be great, maybe even ducks. I think there should be a minimum per household of the amount of animals you can have as well as some bilaw about treatment (as i assume there are for pets) ensuring the animals are safe and healthy.
- Cleanliness and control are potential concerns. Otherwise, it depends on what livestock. Hens but not roosters? Goats and sheep are excellent weed control.
- I would love to be able to have a pot belly pig as a pet. From what I have read and seen they make pets and are clean animals. So don't understand why they can't be kept here in Calgary.
- Permit and consultation with and approval by adjacent and affected neighbours
- It should be limited to chickens. And the number should be based on the size of the lot. To ensure the animals are treated well.
- No. Nobody want more irresponsible owners.
- Ok as pets, not to be used as a food source, other than chickens for eggs would be ok. Large animals such as ponies, llamas etc. should not be allowed. Overly noisy animals such as roosters, should not be allowed.
- Potential for attracting predators and scavengers. Not a good idea in our city.
- This should not be allowed
- Correct animal care
- Licencing is needed to ensure proper care and handling of animals, knowledge about disease transmission, etc. No harm to neighbours is crucial - standards need to be established and fines introduced re: Non-compliance. Licences to be revoked under certain circumstances.
- Again, some signage, I suppose. And probably some fencing.
- As long as the livestock is contained behind a fence, I am not concerned. I am very much in favour of allowing poultry and small livestock (e.g. goats) within the city limits, mainly to increase the local food source.
- Responsibilities come with that, knowledgeable and training
- Chickens should be quiet and not disturbing the neighborhood. Chickens should have a place to live in one's property - not be free to roam in the neighborhood.
- Allow chickens, geese, ducks, (all max 6), quail, (max 12) all or meat or eggs or as pets, goats (max 4) for meat or milk or hair or pets, pigs (max 2) for meat or pets. Enforce rules for maximum number per yard.

- I think the by-laws should maybe concentrate on not being a nuisance to neighbors. I think a few hens would be a great addition to many back yards. Obviously large livestock will be a problem in the city.
- Sufficient fence or pen
- If you have a yard big enough and know how to care for them. Again minimum yard and structure requirements should be implemented
- There should not be urban livestock. I lived in a city were urban livestock was allowed and it was horrible. Loud, dirty and noisy
- I love that you are considering allowing urban livestock like chickens and ducks, and I heartily support this. There need to be requirements for proper enclosures and care, but with these in place I don't see any significant safety concerns for people.
- I would love to have backyard chickens. Just need to ensure owners have the necessary setup.
- Just signage that displays where animals are kept and where they graze and what to be aware of if any potential dangers exist on the property.
- Access to mobile veterinary services to troubleshoot care and upkeep
- As above
- Annual checks & permits to ensure the animal's are being looked after properly.
- Bylaws for safe keeping of animals with minimal disturbance to neighbors so there is a framework to work from if an issue arises.
- Responsible maintenance
- Chickens should be allowed with a maximum number regulated per yard.
- I want there to be guild lines for lead practice so citizens can be successful in urban livestock. I would like to see a strategy for having successful chicken coups throughout the city.
- Nothing. Small livestock like chickens and ducks should be allowed. The dont cause any nuisance as long as they are properly cared for, but the same can be said about dogs & cats too.
- A warning sign, penned enclosure and quiet. Safe marked area. No smell.
- Must be licenced. Requirements on roaming space and setback from housing. Space must be routinely upkept to prevent odours from manure etc.
- Required notification of neighbors. Bylaws to enforce cleanliness and noise.
- I would love to see people allowed to keep up to 4 or 5 chickens or ducks for egg production (no roosters!). Proper coops and cages with ongoing upkeep for cleanliness and enough space for the poultry to have a degree of freedom of movement.
- Within reason, be allowed but must have permit/permission to keep in backyard
- So long as there are regulations on the quality of living conditions, it should be allowed. We need to open up chicken farming. Many people are suffering a food crisis which shouldn't exist in a first world country. It's time for Calgary to become educated in livestock work and learn how to own them
- As long as it's not a noise disturbance
- Having number limits to prevent overstocking residential areas.
Encouraging lisencing for urban chickens to prevent abandoned spent layer hens.

Ensuring that all livestock owners are consulting veterinary advice from a licensed veterinarian.

- Ensure space and care is sufficient, and that noise/ smell can be contained to not disturb neighbors.
- Again lack of knowledge on my part. Possible noise and disease issues. Might draw more wild predator animals into the city.
- Proper care and housing of livestock and proper hygiene and cleaning up after them.
- That the animals is well cared for
- Should not be allowed
- Potentially, I think there should be a limit on how many animals you can have per household, the yards in Calgary are not very big. I wouldn't want rosters or anything that makes a lot of noise in the morning though.
- I see no issue as to why keeping livestock in an urban setting would be unsafe. Vancouver has managed to do this nicely, mixing urban and rural properties within communities. As long as people are respectful of the livestock, and there is proper fencing in place, there should not be an issue.
- I want a chicken
- I think it would
Be nice to have under 5 chicken in certain areas. On a 2 year trial bases.
- depends on the species
- Chickens only.
- I think the animals need to be kept really clean to prevent spreading of disease.
- Hygiene and consideration for other people in the area
- Gross, it should not effect other neighbors, I don't want the noise or stink by my home
- I'm absolutely against livestock in urban areas, especially chickens. They could ring disease.
- Reasonable knowledge on the part of the livestock keeper.
- I would want to have enough reassurance that the fencing is secure enough.
- Odor and noise would be the only issue--so responsible owners important.
- Small livestock should be granted.
Chickens, goats, etc.
- Concerned about the smell and noise factors
- Should not be allowed in the City under any circumstance.
- good idea
- Reasonable amount of room for the live stalk and proper housing/fencing
- Need a property large enough that the noise and smells doesn't bother the neighbors.
- Just plain no on all counts.
- awareness and knowing proper safety measures are implemented, noise control, cleanliness
- Require proper properties, and licenses should be temporary and require inspection and renewal.
- Again they should hold a license and health & safety checks made regularly especially if people living on each side of them. Unannounced checks should also be made. High standards should always be kept regardless of what pet, bees or urban livestock you have.
- No, we don't enforce the rules for dogs and cats why increase the burden.

- This wouldn't make me feel unsafe in any way. The owners would have to keep the areas clean so they don't smell. This would be important for local agriculture and local food sources. This could be a huge new movement to benefit Calgaryans local food wise and money wise.
- I think that if people can provide adequate care for livestock and they are not infringing on others (ie. Smell, loud noises etc) then it is fine.
- I agree with the current regulations.
- I would love to see backyard chickens allowed by the city.
- People want to live cleaner lifestyles. They should be able to keep a couple chickens or ducks without issue! And pigs are cute pets. I personally wouldn't want one cause the snorting would get annoying but I think they are brilliant.
- Chickens (6)
- I think people should have some! If under a certain number of animals just like with dog ownership. Chickens would be great to include! If the person has the space on their property for a proper housing for them then yes that works. As long as they keep with the proper lodging even in winter
- Moo, oink, cluck cluck etc are not sounds (and accompanying aromas) suitable for an urban environment. The animals deserve a proper environment of their own, NOT some patch of grass in a city. Commercial farms that confine livestock are called 'cruel' and yet we are OK with in the city? Hypocrisy.
- No, farms are meant for livestock. There are enough issues with untidy properties, can't imagine adding livestock to the mix. If I wanted to live in a rural area I would. What about allergies? Don't open this door, some humans will always push the limits.
- I like the idea of chickens but if they are noisy and it impacts my enjoyment of my backyard, there needs to be a law that neighbors can petition that they go. If they are quiet and no smelly then ok with me. Pigs, not sure.
- I'd love to keep chickens for the eggs. I'd know that the animals producing my food had a good quality of life. It'd save me 1-200 dollars a year, as a single Mom that's a new pair of boots for my kid. Also chickens mean sustainable pest control in my veggie garden! I vote yes for chickens!!!
- Yes, so long as it doesn't interfere with the neighbours' enjoyment of their property. Obviously that's why roosters are never allowed, because roosters are jerks and terrible neighbours. Hens, though, seem fine. Goats are great, but need a lot of mental stimulation or they become unhappy.
- As long as there is enough space and a limit I'm ok with it
- Look towards other municipalities that have successfully allowed chickens and copy this model (Portland Oregon etc)
- Licence
  - Limit on amount of animals
  - Adequate accommodations for the animals
- As long as the livestock aren't affecting the neighboring properties I don't see a problem - they should be subject to the same bylaws as anything else though (ie: a rooster crowing at 5 am every day should be treated the same way as someone blasting music). Obviously no animals with disease.

- Not particularly liking this idea - mostly smell and noise issues - I've lived on a farm and chickens are noisy! the numbers would have to be limited and the neighbours notified.
- I have no issue with it, but perhaps a req to inform residents within a certain radius. If it presents any risks, there should be standards/requirements in a bylaw, and info provided to residents about mitigation strategies livestock keepers have in place.
- Do we really want to become like the Chinese with their rampant outbreaks every so often - too many of which are related to livestock in proximity to humans? If the city intends to promote this path, they had better first get their ducks in a row to safeguard human health.
- guidelines and frameworks for inspection, and ensuring that spaces are clean and well-maintained. I see no reason why people, with permits and inspections, cannot have a set amount of chickens, for example. Pre-reqs could include education sessions.
- Signs with details on stock and how to behave round them
- Livestock should only be in the country, where neighbours are far away and may not care about smells and sounds emanating from your yard
- I think there needs to be suitable fencing and protections between the livestock and people. There also needs to be a limit on how many and the size of yard that is a minimum. Waste from livestock also needs to be dealt with appropriately so the smell or potential pathogens don't impact neighbours
- Established limits on quantity and enclosure-types for urban livestock.
- Small livestock like chickens, pigeons, sheep, and goats ok so long as rules in place to ensure they have their necessities met
- should not be allowed
- Chickens maybe, they are very smelly. Making them legal allows them to get the vet care they need versus illegal pets. Restrict amount and space.
- There are people who care for their stock and others who do not. What repercussions are there for those who do not. Some animals are messier than others, who decides what animals can or cannot reside by you. Again canvassing neighbors before approval is issued.
- No
- protect any livestock from people. so they must be in a secure living area.
- Provided no smell enters neighbouring property and sound adheres to human noise bylaw
- I think chicken should be allowed in the city, but no roosters. Only hens.
- I have no issue with it as long as it is done responsibly. That also means thinking about smell. Farmers have to consider smell so i think for livestock in a city they would also need to consider it. Animals would be need to kept in a manner which would limit smell.
- If you have the space i.e. an acre per animal
- Not too close to other people homes, due to odours
- My concerns are noise, disease, odor. If those are well managed then I suppose it's not an issue.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- I need to know they are well cared for & there is no _cruelty_ involved.
- Nothing special. I think you should allow backyard chickens (and honestly, get rid of "emotional support livestock" [removed] - pun intended).
- I think livestock belong on a farm or acreage. I would not want a neighbor who keeps chickens or pigs or whatever in their yard. Most city lots are not big enough to humanely keep animals.
- Not in the residential neighbourhoods.
- Small livestock might be ok. The only concern I would have would be with noise or smell. It would be similar to other pets. The expectation would be to keep the yard clean and the noise down
- Chicken, turkeys, and goats. I think this day and age should be encouraged.
- Not a good idea.
- Urban farm sign
- Urban livestock should be allowed, full stop. Minimum standards for cleanliness, animal welfare, and space should be outlined in a bylaw, and licencing to provide cash flow for The City to monitor standards and issue fines where necessary.
- No license, but certain conditions attached, such as for spacing and containment.
- No opinion
- Concerned about noise and cleanliness
- As long as there is no excessive sounds or smells...I guess following the same rules as for dogs
- Whole heartedly believe we should be able to have urban livestock. A permit required and specific bylaws to make sure the livestock do not cause upset to neighbors. Dogs poop in people's backyards and can bark. I dont see why chickens would be any noisier or dirty.
- Fencing so they don't get loose, rules on cleanliness to keep the smell down
- - Application and education process to have in yard.
- Nothing.
- No. I pay my taxes and do not deserve to have the smell, noise and overall disrespect from a lazy or crappy neighbor. Absolutely NOT!!!!
- Monitoring of noise bylaw
- Having lived beside someone who kept chickens I have to say this is a bad idea. The smell from them was awful and coyotes were very attracted to them.
- Contamination and breeding grounds for disease such as avian flu, increase in mouse population. There is a reason the bylaw was put in place and should remain that way
- Maximum limits for ownership
Care expectations - housing, cleanliness, secure enclosures
- Urban livestock is not necessary. If people want the cows chickens goats that can move outside the city
- Nothing
- I want to be able to have chickens in my yard. I have no concerns over safety
- No problem, let people have chickens if they want them
- Go for it!

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Depends on size of yard, noise, number and type of animals. Not all animals should be allowed to be called "emotional support".
- Regulations regarding the size, number, noise and smell, and even more importantly, enforcement and meaningful fines.
- Livestock don't belong in the city.
- Raising chicken and Quails for eggs and meat would be another good choice for the residents.
- No, roosters allowed due to crowing noise. All other animals just need to be kept in clean living conditions, i.e. clean up poop. Also, the number of livestock being kept shouldn't get out of hand. I don't think you need 20 chickens in your back yard just to have fresh eggs on your table.
- No issues
- Urban livestock including, but not limited to, chickens, pot belly pigs, and goats should be allowed within Calgary as long as they have adequate room/yard space and proper care.
- As long as they clean up after themselves
- The City should conduct a pilot study to look into the impact of urban chickens.
- Proper veterinarian care, including vaccines and other medications.
- No will do nothing but create conflict with wild life people don't realize how scary this can be because livestock comes with outdoor Enclosures which encourages wild life into their yards
- Nothing. Urban livestock rocks!
- I'm of two minds. So long as there's no roosters and smells are contained, small livestock like chicken seem reasonable. On the other hand, Canada keeping dense human populations separate from animals like chickens offers some protection from novel strains of flu & Coronavirus jumping in to people.
- Strict yard size requirements and a place to report noise and smell complaints. There must be a permitting process and the ability to revoke it when guidelines are not followed. I'm hesitant with allowing livestock in general though.
- No - unless a documented support animal. Livestock requires specific care and should be left to those who farm, ranch and are trained in proper care and maintenance. Unfair to neighbours and the animals themselves (who need more space than a city lot!)
- Wouldn't mind it as long as smell and noise aren't bad. I wouldn't mind a few chickens for eggs
- I'd like to raise ducks and chickens.
- If you have a large property where the smell or noise coming from the urban livestock isn't an issue to individuals around you, I don't see an issue with it.
- not okay
- Properly contained in a fenced backyard, a reasonable number allowed.
- Should not be allowed in city
- No predators, nothing too loud, otherwise good.
- No Livestock in the city. Livestock should be limited to farms & acreages. Small livestock such as chickens & pigs produce lots of excrement, fleas, attract flies & coyotes to area. Absolutely NO to urban livestock in the city.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

- Again, I am okay with this, but people should register with the city if they plan to do this. It should not interfere with the safety and well-being of neighbours. This includes cleanliness and smell.
- Great initiative subject to suitable yard area! Should a certain threshold be met (# of livestock or type dependent) there should be a waste management plan. City should offer specific composting/waste program for a fee.
- Keeping smells and in some cases noise under control. Making sure the animals are healthy as to not spread disease.
- Permits should be obtained, so that the person is held responsible for any loose animals, or violation of noise bylaws. But I do think people should be able to have chickens etc. when approved that they have the space and knowledge to properly care for these animals
- Fenced yard, in addition to cages, 6 ft chicken wire fences required for chickens, shelter, with adequate ventilation.
- Limitations on total weight and number of life stock. I.e. max of 4 animals or up to 200lbs. So someone could safely have 2 goats or 4 chickens.
This would also require city approval on enclosures, questionnaire on animal health/safety etc.
- No requirement. Move to rural area.
- Chickens are okay. No pigs of any kind. Pigs belong on a farm in the country. No pigeons for any reason. Pigeons are dirty
- I would really love urban livestock to be allowed in the City again, especially nowadays with our understanding of producing our own food, humanely raised animals, etc. We would love to have chickens for eggs! Again, a training certificate/license program would be ideal to ensure competency.
- I'm opposed to livestock in the city--urban environments are not suited to livestock. Cleanliness, care of the animals, and noise would need to be regulated. It might increase wildlife population/negative interactions as easy food sources. Noise would also be a concern.
- Proper penning and control of the animals.
- Backyard chickens(hens) should be kept in a safe chicken coop with a wired, covered outdoor access to keep them and the area safe from urban wildlife such as coyotes and lynx/ bobcats. I would love to have chickens, urban farming should be allowed for responsible owners.
- The city By-law officers already investigate the next door neighbours for not picking up after their dogs. City crews have had to clean the mess. The smell in the spring/summer is quite overwhelming. . What will happen if they are allowed to have farm animals? Keep farm animals on the farm.
- I feel that as long as the animals are registered then I would love to see urban livestock. I feel strongly that allowing chickens, goats, etc. to be maintained in Calgary would create a vibrant and young city.
- perhaps 2 chickens or two bunnies, if properly housed and regulated and licenced with city.
- Allow urban livestock in a limited capacity or hold a public decision on types of animals considered livestock. Application to have non-standard animals. Number of animals to be considered as part of the application (eg: 2 chickens are allowable vs 20 are not).

- Having organic eggs and meat of both Chicken and Quails would be great. That really a good initiative.
- chickens only (no roosters). Although I think pot belly pigs can easily live in the city, I do believe that people don't realize the work involved in caring for a pig and therefore we should not allow urban livestock outside of a limited number of chickens.
- Should not allowed.
- Chickens may be permitted in a limited fashion if properly cared for. I am against having others such as pigs or goats in the city.
- Size and numbers of animals
- Fine with it as long as the property is big enough for the animals on property and they are cleaned up after
- Should not be allowed.
- Absolutely not
- Biggest concern is the smell and noise. I believe the bylaw should address these, but otherwise goats and chickens should be allowed. Maybe lot size should be explored.
- At this point in time, I have no concerns with urban livestock. If neighbors did have any then I would expect them to respect noise and smell concerns.
- education and information and licensing like a dog of cat
- If the animals are quiet and kept healthy, contained and clean-no smell, I think it's great and feel completely safe.
- Not sure about that one, some can be quite smelly (lived in BC farm country). Chickens especially attract mice/rats.
- Chickens are fine, maybe some coop regulations and maximum number of chickens (6?). Not sure what other livestock would be in Calgary.
- The livestock needs to be under a certain size & the number needs to be acceptable for the space in which they are kept. I support urban chicken keeping, for instance, with rules to keep them from being overcrowded in their space. I am not aware of cows that are small enough to be reasonably kept.
- Allow backyard chickens
- Depending on the home owners property size I think it could work such as egg laying chickens as long as they are set up properly to meet the humane needs of the hens and a limited number of hens...no roosters! No pigs, cows, sheep, goats and horses in city yards...too stinky, too loud.
- How big? Chicken and pigs can really stink so the owners need to be diligent in cleaning
- Chickens, if looked after are fine. No roosters! Initially one of the early vocal proponents for chickens In Killarney kept such a pigsty of a rental property that people were upset. It wasn't the chickens who made the rest of his yard a mess, they were fine. Framework needed!
- I feel there should be restrictions on property size for livestock in urban settings, many yards are too small. In addition, there should be regulations on affect to neighbors including things such as noise, smell, and damage.

- Not sure
- No harm in two chickens for home owners supply of eggs as long as they have proper shelter, food and healthy care.
- A maximum of three chickens with proper housing for them per address
- As long as livestock is kept in humane/sanitary conditions can't escape/ roam around neighbors property i think small livestock is a great idea. Animals should require vaccinations. I would expect some regulation about what type of livestock is allowed in what space/ size of enclosure
- Small livestock - such as chickens -would be acceptable so long as they are properly cared for, a limited number of animals are present and they aren't loud and annoying.
- Should not be allowed in urban areas, rural only.
- No!
- The reasons against urban livestock are well stated. Smell/noise
- No urban livestock please
- Too many issues with wildlife, they are already dealing with too many irresponsible owners, why would livestock be any different? domestic bunnies dumped, ginue pigs dumped into parks ect. Puts too many at risk and can hurt an eco-system greatly.
- Ridiculous. Cows, Sheep, Pigs, Horses, Goats are not backyard animals. Most yards cannot accommodate a chicken coop or animals (AZA). Should have a chicken keepers license - have a regulated size and type of hen house. Kept certain distance from neighbour property line and house. Max of two.
- Taking part in collecting eggs from chickens that also enrich our lives as many other animals. It also offers a chance to see where and how food gets to the table with is very existing, especially for children.
- Adequate space for the animals and the waste products to be managed. Similar to pets, not causing a nuisance (ie. noise)
- Do not want this
- If the animals have adequate room and are enclosed properly they should be allowed. Roosters and other noisy animals should not be kept in dense urban areas. A reasonable number of hens for the size of the property would be acceptable.
- No concern for safety but livestock tend to be noisy and uncontrollable. They can also bring diseases. Although they could be no issues I believe livestock do not belong in urban cities.
- Ban completely
- Big fan. I would like to have a fancy chicken or a pot bellied pig.
- No.
- Max number of animals
- Waste management - ensure that animal waste is cleaned up and disposed of to not create a health hazard for people and other pets.
- Case by case as most people do not have any idea about the animals welfare needs. What veterinarian in an urban area are going to care for them?

- As long as they have adequate room to happily exist it could be fine. Considering the small properties characteristic of urban living, it's unlikely anyone in the city can accommodate a full-size cow for example. Small animals like goats and chickens however, could be accommodated by application
- should not be allowed in an urban setting
- Locate so as not to disturb neighbours and be kept so as urine odors do not arise
- I don't think the majority of lots in Calgary can actually provide the proper space for live stock or a buffer to neighbor . I imagine that storm drains will not deal with the H2O run off mixed with livestock excrement. My option is you should be on a rural property if you want livestock.
- Fine, does not seem to be an issue
- Nothing. I think chickens and domestic geese should be allowed in an urban setting.
- yes, i believe that this is helpful for the environment they build carbon in the soil.
- I would like to see it regulated, but would be interested to see where it could go. I would personally love to have chickens.
Noise, smell and other considerations need to be made for neighbors.
- We are not in favour of having cows, horses, pigs or chickens in our city neighbors yards - there are acreages and rural areas far more suited for this - and better for the animals.
- Given the noise, smell, and potential encroachment onto private property and potential impact on home values, I am very against this.
As well, the amount of disease potential is too risky!
- Adequate fencing.
Adequate property size definitions to ensure humane treatment for animals.
Some sort of monitoring program to ensure appropriate care and treatment of animals.
- Limit to number of animals
- Stupid idea why would I want chickens living next door to me. Omg the smell and the noise. House in our community has a massive pig that has zero quality of life because it lives in a backyard pen at night they let it roam at the midday school playground area
- Allow a maximum of four hen chickens.
No pigs, sheep or goats.
- Believe smell and waste could be an issue and should be monitored closely
- Two major concerns with livestock is smells and noise. Have the livestock be kept in an enclosed shelter at night to minimize noise. To mitigate smell, have the livestock penned at least 3 meters from the nearest property line. Plus owner responsible for twice weekly cleanup of livestock waste.
- No to cows, goats, sheep etc. don't see anything wrong with chickens as long as noise and smell regulations are followed.
- Give your neighbors notice of the hive and a chance to discuss any issues with it. If your neighbors agree i don't see there being a problem.
- Proper fencing to ensure livestock doesn't end up roaming freely.
- A good fence

- As long as it's capped and not an excessive noise issue
- It should be limited to small animals ,a regulation on space they need to be kept in . There should be minimums of back yard size etc . and animals should have to have regular vetting and proof of such
- I also support urban livestock. But with a limit of hens and meat rabbits per household. And they should be licensed yearly like dog and cat owners. Not per individual animal but like, a chicken keepers liscense.
- As long as it's under control
- Do not allow. Too much chance of disease
- Proper fencing.
- best practice bylaws from other well governed and regulated cities, yes please to chickens!!
- Limits on the number of animals
- Must be on private property and fenced
- I don't think it's appropriate to have livestock in urban settings. There would need to be strict monitoring of welfare and nuisance issues and this would add to our taxes.
- Chickens yes, less than four birds per household. Livestock no.
- Limitations on numbers.
5 Freedoms must be met.
- knowing that people are knowledgable and able to appropriately care
- Proper set up. Chickens and goats can add to the our food system, and help reduce pesticides to kill weeds
- I think there needs to be a size limit and regulations around the size of the owners property/proximity to other neighbors. I wouldn't want to share a fence with an animal that was noisy or smelly, but if the owner had proper shelters etc. I have no issues.
- Minimum land size requirements. Eg. Available Land must be 100m2 per livestock animal.
- I encourage it! Would love to see more urban chicken coups in backyards and community gardens.
- Limits on the number and type of animals allowed, stringent requirements for property cleanliness and upkeep, and enforceable regulations for nuisance smells and sounds.
- This should not be allowed, with shrinking lot sizes
- Don't make more noise than the average dog. Don't create smells or become a nuisance.
- I think urban livestock is a fantastic idea. I have owned chickens before, and they are not much different than dogs when cared for properly. Their enclosures are low odour if maintained, they are relatively quiet and can live with minimal impact on neighbours. Urban farming is being done successful
- Special licensing and inspections
- Within reason. Chickens would be good.
- My safety? I would be more concerned with how some livestock would be kept, fed, disposed of should one die and what the rules and regulations about slaughtering would be. I could see there being concerns over noises and smells too.

- Restrictions on Noisy or smelly animals kept outside. Indoor pets should be ok if reasonable. Each case must be assessed individually.
- Chickens and goats should be permitted. By permit
- Not have it in residential neighbourhoods or near public parks, sanitation regulations, no roosters, must abide by noise regulations, containment requirements to keep them out of others property, owners of animals accountable and liable for any harm or damage the animals cause.
- Investigations by Agriculture department to ensure standards are met
Applications for a permit much like secondary suite- input from neighbours
- No. Too much potential for negative impacts: smells, noise, animal waste.
No good reason to live in the city and also have livestock.
- I like the idea of owning some livestock, such as chickens. But in reality I think they could be very disturbing for neighbours in an urban environment.
- Limit to number and controls around the smell and noise.
- Education. I love the idea of having chickens, especially for eggs, but don't know enough about the impacts on others, including smell and noise.
- I think large farm animals should be where they can roam. Maybe a eight limit.
- It's great idea. Just keep number below 10.
- Roosters may be a nuisance due to crowing but a reasonable number of egg laying chickens on a property with land area to ethically support them would be great.
- Not in favour. Roosters are really annoying and wake neighbors. If livestock pens are not regularly cleaned, they create odour and rodent problems.
- Chickens yes. But no roosters to wake us up early.
- Dependant on the space the person has. I think backyard chickens for eggs are great even maybe pigs, again if you have the space and knowledge
- Again, limits on how many one can have for their specific zone. Fenced yard. Ducks/chickens in the city, for sure! This helps families with lower income provide food for their family! Horses, goats, cows, obviously need more room to zoom! :)
- Smell, noise, allergies, concern if animals get out or carry diseases. Would diminish enjoyment of my yard.
- This is a problem for humans with allergies. Livestock belongs on a FARM not in an urban setting. Chickens cows horses goats at al need space...Humans not in rural areas have a right to not be forced indoors by livestock in an urban setting. NO urban livestock EVER.
- I'm not sure if it is possible with most livestock, but preventing unpleasant odours from affecting neighbours must be top priority.
- Yes I think people should be able to keep chickens
- Absolutely not- noise can not be controlled, odor related to feces is a huge problem with livestock.
- Appropriate pens or habitats.
- I think it would be great to have chickens or othe livestock as long as there was aduquate space

- It would depend on the type of livestock. Appropriate safety fencing and gates. Requirement to keep livestock housing clean to minimize odors. Create a minimum distance livestock must be kept away from the property line to reduce interference with neighbours.
- Nothing. We should be allowed chickens in Calgary for egg laying purposes only
- Define livestock..how many...yard requirements. I'm all for chickens...but how many would be allowed in a densely populated area? Noise? Smell? No pigs, baby horses, cows...my desire to raise livestock should not interfere with my neighbours desire to relax in his yard
- I'm fine with this if they are contained
- NO - the poor neighbour that has to listen to and smell those livestock.
- small livestock such as chickens should be allowed, with limits on numbers and provisions for animal safety.
- Permit required. Clear definition of what can and can not be kept and space requirements. Proper housing/equipment in place before permit is given
- Needing to clean up regularly so there is no continual stench from feces.
- I think as long as basic husbandry is taken care of I am very much in support of certain livestock being allowed within city limits. In particular I think having up.to 2 to 4 hens no roosters would be great to reduce insects and help recycle green waste.
- Livestock smells. Not something that I would be happy to have living in my neighbourhood.
- Yes. Limit number allowed. Certain homes.
Rules to protect animal when owners stops activity.
- I would love to have a horse. Not feasible in the space we have. If someone has the space for say the larger livestock, allow them. Chickens and/or ducks in smaller spaces for sure! This helps lower income families provide for their family! How many is dependant on the yard space etc.
- There are varieties of chickens etc that are not nuisance (noise) animals. I think that as long as the keeping of these animals does not become a nuisance (noise/smell) then allowing Calgary residents to become more self sufficient is positive
- I do not like the ""Animal as Emotional Animal Permit"" unless it is a very rare and specific situation. Chickens as urban livestock could be okay if it is monitored and the yard is large.
- Shouldn't be allowed to slaughter chickens on property. Would be open to chickens. Would be interested in having own eggs.
- - Can they be slaughtered on property
- - Could affect more wildlife
- - Cleanliness
- - Mammals as livestock not appropriate in urban settings
- You have to have some amount of educations to have those animals. Are there courses on animals husbandry to ensure people take good care of them?
Maybe a questionnaire? What is your education?
Goats - Good husbandry is needed so they meet these standards.
Chickens are small and not aggressive. Geese can me aggressive. A backyard with a small space is probably not a good place for husbandry. So, this could be allowed but people need to be educated.

Maybe the costs of good husbandry courses could offset the costs of monitoring. We have to know the people get the privilege of taking care of the animals are doing it well.

- - Cleanliness
  - smell
  - Allowing slaughtering - NO!
  - Proper housing
  - Attract more wildlife
- Limited numbers, for animal/bird welfare. Ensure have proper enclosures (size and security) for animal's welfare and ensuring not contaminating neighbor's property.
- No! I live on a slope! Do not want water runoff from my neighbour's backyard carrying disease into my yard!
- Yes, if kept clean and reasonable number of animals. Eg. 3-4 chickens (no roosters), or 1-2 goats, or 1-2 sheep. No more than 4 barn yard animals per house, zero if reasonable complaints are not addressed by neighbours, such as cleanliness, smell or noise, or over crowding/ too many animals/house
- I have NO issues with back yard chickens, provided their living space is kept reasonably clean (non smelly), not only are they a joy to raise, but beneficial as far as food.
- Livestock should be raised on a farm, not in a city. Will result in too many animals living in close proximity to too many people.
- That owners follow guidelines put forth by Agriculture Canada on animal husbandry for their species
- I'm fine with urban livestock with the exception of roosters. Don't want to be woken up super early.
- Should be allowed and licensed with investigation or application to ensure owner can meet requirements for animal safety and public concern. Review each time owner moves to another address
- Yes
- Limited size of animal.... must be a chicken or smaller.
- Chickens should be allowed, no roosters though. If the property size permits then other livestock as well such as a goat or lamb.
- Again a cap to how many based on the plot of land. As long as they are well kept and treated well.
- Proper fencing and waste management (for smells), and perhaps a limit on how many animals. I fully support urban livestock! Keeping chickens in the city would be such a benefit to so many.
- I am vegan and do not support live stock of any kind.
- Chickens could provide people with a local food supply. The number of birds would need to be limited and there would need to be rules on keeping the property free of a lot of waste materials.
- I think a couple of chickens can't hurt anyone. Maybe not roosters in the city because of the noise but as long as the owner has a place for them to sleep, what harm do they do?
- Spot checking for humane conditions, secondary compost locations for animal waste
- Certain animals can be a good addition to the urban setting.
  - diligent review of nondisturbing animals. (no roosters crowing)

-Maintaining odor requirements/penalties

-license required and annual polling of neighbors to ensure no disruptions to clean and reasonable living.

- Biosecurity in regards to diseases. Odour and noise ordinances. Adjacent neighbours should be able to veto.
- chicken's are fine - other livestock need lots of roaming space - not fair for them to be allowed in the city - hard to feel unsafe around chickens - maybe limit the amount so the noise of clucking is not annoying
- I have no issue with urban livestock and safety.
- Animal to space ratio isn't too low, otherwise the smell could be too much for some people.
- Have a say as some can be excessive from a noise, smell and waste perspective and would not want those near where I live, better suited for acreages or farms.
- Sure why not, as long as they're not planning on killing the poor animals. Just my opinion.
- Livestock do not belong in an urban setting. Too many potentials for noise, odours, and other nuisances to neighbours. Lots in Calgary are generally too small and there is land outside the City for livestock.
- If they are cared for and contained, i see no problem
- Same as above.
- More of a nuisance than safety issue, being a good neighbor. Reasonable limits on the number of animals / no disturbance to neighbors. Proper care for the animals.
- Education on the type of livestock that are in the area and their requirements to live a safe and healthy life. Rules and regulations to reduce the impact on neighbours and for the safety of the livestock.
- Terrible idea. Smell, pests, concerns with virus outbreaks and animal/person transmission.
- No-this is a major city not a rural village. Neighbours' approval and (depending on animal) neighbourhood approval-and certainly NO roosters Regular checks of property for health and safety concerns.
- in a larger yard
- They must be kept a reasonable distance from neighbours to control noise and smell. Livestock are usually larger as well, so providing adequate space for them to be healthy.
- no
- This is a good idea. Need to consider diseases etc. I like the idea of being able to have livestock to improve our urban food system.
- No.
- New licenses should include a notice to each of the neighboring neighbors to let them know this is going in, what it means to the properties around, etc.
- As long as the livestock is kept fenced or penned in, I think this is safe.
- No to live stock. Lot sizes are too small, cleanliness, risk of disease due to unsanitary conditions. It would be difficult for Bylaw to manage any rules if live stock was approved.

- If they are kept outside, they need to not impact the neighbours. This means no noise, no smells and no activities that negatively affect the neighbours. There is no need in an urban setting for keeping livestock so this would be a privilege to be able to keep them within city limits.
- Limit the number of animals to be kept. 2 pigs maximum. Strict rules regarding pens and cleaning up after them.
- Depending on your idea of livestock chickens I think should be allowed with rules and regulations but it's silly to not allow people. Now cows and large animals would be difficult to keep in check.
- Any bylaws regarding urban livestock should ensure that animals are kept in a manner that promotes the animals health and vitality and would not permit abuse.
- Very challenging in an urban environment. Perhaps this could be undertaken similar to community gardens where there are appropriate, designated spaces for keeping livestock in the city.
- These should be restricted and only allowed on large lots out of town where they can be given a reasonable living space.
- I think this should be left to farms and acreages?
- People do not need to raise livestock in city limits. The smell and noise is not conducive to a happy neighborhood.
- I don't think urban livestock posts a safety risk. Owners should clean up after their livestock and ensure they have adequate housing and are not a nuisance as with any other animal.
- I think chickens should be able to be kept by people who have no mental illness and will treat them respectfully.
- There needs to be rules and guidelines to ensure the animals are treated humanely, and do not create a nuisance. There needs to be responsible ownership which includes regular clean up after animals, no animals that create large rackets such as roosters, etc.
- I feel very safe. I am thrilled that this is being considered within the city of Calgary
- Chickens, why not
- Only allow "emotional support" animals, and even then re-think that policy. But backyard chicken coops or pigs, goats, etc mustn't be allowed. This is how diseases cross from animals into humans (Coronaviruses anyone?), not to mention the noise, smells, more calls to 311 to deal with animals, etc
- A mechanism to ensure livestock are receiving proper care from owners, have a proper habitat to retire to at night that will not disturb neighbors. Supportive of initiative with some mechanism to oversee and ensure care and quality of life for livestock and neighbors around.
- No issues here . So long as owners are clean and respectful of possible smells from any waste that might be produced their animals. Noise may be a concern with certain animals. Limits on the number of animals may be something to consider - ie) no more than 5 hens; 2 pot belly pigs or whatever...
- Access to information, a cap on how many and what type of livestock, accessible information and dedication to proper livestock handling from the city

- Depends on what the "livestock" is and why they're living in an urban area. I have no issues with rescued animals (eg pigs, chickens, sheep) living out their lives in a safe urban environment but would be extremely upset to find out that a neighbour was raising animals for food. Not appropriate.
- Less interested in this.. I would not be very happy to live next to someone who had a backyard full of chickens.
- Everyone should be able to chose whatever animal they wish to keep on their own property in a reasonable and responsible way
- For livestock such as chickens I would support them being in urban areas as long as there were no roosters as they can be loud.
- Cleanliness, perhaps size requirements per size /number of animals.
- Yes !
- I would feel that there would need to be identification on all animals and Licensing as well.
- Then buy a farm. This is the city.
- Appropriate regulations around safety and enjoyment of the community. For example, not all types of urban livestock would be appropriate for neighbours, there should be space requirements for different types of animals. Appropriate training should be required.
- I think that backyard chickens should be allowed, minimal number of birds per home. I also think miniature pot belly pigs should be allowed as pets. They are no different than a dog for care as a pet.
- I don't agree with large livestock, chickens maybe but not pigs, goats, cows, etc. I also think the Emotional Animal Permit thing is getting a little crazy.
- Don't agree.I grew up on a farm. Too much room for error and irresponsibility. Disease from lack of cleaning spread to animals/humans. Smell too much for city.Noise at all hours and no control to stop it. Stop roosters crowing at sun rise (stop dogs barking?!) Breeding season - what r u thinkg
- Are we talking pets or animals they torture and eat. If pets, there should probably be limits based on land available. There is nothing that makes having animals to torture kill and eat that I would be comfortable with.
- Absolutely not.
- People should be able to keep urban livestock based on the size of their homes and area they will keep the animals. They should be able to show that they are knowledgeable about how to safely and responsibly keep those animals; e.g. license, city check area, mandatory annual courses to renew license
- Love the idea, nothing!
- Plenty of signage to indicate proximity and location of livestock and guidance on proper behaviour near livestock.
- Ownership of chickens should be permitted! Allow chicken coops in backyards. Maybe limit the number of chickens per house to make sure it doesn't get out of hand but people should be allowed to have chickens for eggs and meat.

- While I believe there is a benefit in some cases & I personally would love something that would help me maintain my lawn, this seems like it could be tricky especially when it comes to smell & noise. There would need to be more discussion than this space allows especially goat vs. a couple of hens.
- Same reason we are too close together for proper livestock raising
- Yes, please! I'd like to see an education/licensing requirement though, and maybe a maximum number of animals based on yard size.
- Signage
- Livestock should not be an issue unless it is negatively impacting to others beyond current allowed species that are allowed to co-exist with humans (dogs, cats, certain birds/rabbits, etc). Should maintenance of livestock be a nuisance to others (odors, fecal waste, property damage, noise), then no
- I would love to keep my horse in the back yard. This is no longer practical, smell, noise, probably not great for the backyard or the horse. There should be thought about space aloud per animal.
- Limited types and numbers but responsible owners keeping reasonable numbers of chickens should be allowed, 100%.
- Calgary has fallen behind other cities in Canada for their policies against urban chickens. Yards housing chickens should be be able to prevent them from getting out (or other animals getting in). Max # of hens (no cocks) should be based off of the amount of coop/yard space you have available
- Current legislation is good enough.
- Livestock for support or egg production if owned by a trained member of an association/guild. Association would ensure guidelines for urban care (inc. high standards of humane area/care guidelines; veterinary care) are followed. I would feel safer if livestock-type animals are never for slaughter.
- Permit and premises inspected.
- no issues
- No thanks
- Some urban livestock should be allowed, such as chickens. Regulations regarding lot size to supports animals should be decided on. Regulations regarding sale or giving away animal products (such as eggs) should be published. It's a little unclear currently
- Common sense
- This is a catch 22 I would love to have a few chickens but they are messy and roosters are noisy and if the cages are not kept very clean then you can expect smell and other "problem" wildlife. I am responsible and understand the work that goes into having them but my concern is so many don't get it
- As long as they are cleaned up after and have vaccinations as well as signs posted
- Not allowed.
- Not in the city
- I don't know.

- I used to live in Victoria where we and many of our neighbors kept chickens. It was great to co own them with a neighbour so that you could still vacation etc. They were easy to take care of.
- Absolutely no way!
- Many of my friends keep chicken in Europe, where city populations are rather more dense than in Calgary. In the sake of the animals and neighbours the # of chickens and the way they are kept should be regulated. For me this is no safety concern and chickens might have a positive effect on life quality
- The biggest issue for me is the stink. If it didn't smell as bad, I would not mind.
- Nothing
- Have no problem with 2-3 Chickens. Otherwise would not want neighbor with anything more than that!
- No to livestock.
- Should not be allowed under any circumstance. Yards are too small and owners are not responsible enough to clean up after chicken or pigs in a city lot. People don't pick up after their dogs walking, we don't want livestock in city lots.
- Absolutely not. We are currently dealing with Covid 19 which originated from close proximity between people and livestock.
- Depends on what it is
- Wouldn't want that.
- The term urban livestock is so broad as to make the answers to this question useless
- Low smell. No large animals or pigs, but rabbits and poultry ok if limited (especially poultry)
- There should be no livestock in the city. No cows, chickens, pigs.
- Need to be in the right settings and should adhere to the same noise requirements as domestic animals.
- why is this being considered in the responsible pet bylaw? if people want livestock they should live outside the city. Living in an urban setting is no life for livestock. I would be concerned about disease, noise, attracting wildlife, and attracting pests to a yard with livestock
- Residents should be permitted to urban farm small livestock in limited quantities and under a controlled program. Notifying neighbors prior to beginning an urban farm so they are aware of any noises or smells that may occur. Small livestock could include: chickens, turkeys, small goats
- There should not be any urban livestock. No pigs, chickens, etc..
- Chickens NO!
- Appropriate regulations and training for enforcement officers
- We talking chickens? Again, nothing.
- Low noise, no chemical use. I'd say no odor, but the city's own facilities (Shepard dump etc) make enough stench as it is.
- Backyards are generally too small in Calgary to allow for this without it being a nuisance for others.
- Bylaw enforcement to ensure neighbours are free of smell and noise and any intrusion on our space 24/7.

- I disagree with urban livestock. Chickens and other domestic animals living in a backyard will produce noise and odours that will disturb neighbours. I do not support allowing livestock within city limits. If emotional support animals are needed, they should be kept indoors and quiet.
- it depends, handled well this is a good idea in bolstering food security and over all awareness of food sources.
- Noise and smell- if these are managed, no issue.
- NO livestock in the city. We are currently enduring a global pandemic (coronavirus) that originated from too many animals in close contact with humans. Livestock should be banned in the city to prevent more animal-human contact particularly as many people are already unqualified and negligent.
- Why urban livestock? First, hygiene concerns. Secondly, livestock don't have enough space to live on, which is very brutal to them.
- No Comment
- Chickens would draw in wild life
- Great idea!! Chickens can help with reducing insects and rodents.I think it needs to be done responsibly and a good place to look at is St Albert.There is minimum requirements in place that include things like living quarters,neighbour support/awareness and Animal Welfare bylaws,do it now!
- NO
- Small animals that do not are not noisier than existing pets, or produce foul odors if properly cared for should be allowed with an annual license.
- As long as the space is appropriate for the animal to have good living conditions, there should be no problem if the neighbour is caring for the animals properly and doing a good job of removing old feces, etc.
- this should not be in the city
- No inappropriate smells or noise
- I worry that people will not educate themselves on proper feeding and handling of the animal, I would like them to have to allow an inspection annually for the care of the animals to be able to renew their license to raise.
- No not under any circumstances.
- Backyard chickens are legal everywhere but here, and the 'experts' who testified at the last hearing were misinformed. The WHO clearly states there has never been a case of Avian Flu, or other crossovers from backyard chickens, only factory or farmed chickens. Can send a response from WHO if needed!
- Every city block should have a community sheep to cut the grass. Each home owner gets a turn to have the pair of sheep and then pass them on to next neighbour when their grass is 'cut'. And you get free natural fertilizer for your garden and some wool as a side benefit.
- a process to deal with complaints and concerns with enforcement

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Most livestock should not be allowed in the City. Noise, odours, and cleanliness are primary concerns to good neighbourhoods. Livestock do not belong in the confines of the City.
- If they are well taken care of and not being problematic for neighbours I see no issue with it. Should be a limit to numbers of livestock and what you can have.
- As long as it's contained and not bothering close by neighbors, don't see an issue. They need to be treated humanely and with respect.
- Nothing
- As long as the animals have enough space to roam freely, and the smell does not permeate the area, this seems fine.
- Drainage, sound proofing, well fenced, continual monitoring by the health department and heavy fines if any conditions aren't followed.
- Hen chickens and smaller animals are ok to keep as hobby or pets, never to be slaughtered in the city.
- Enclosures must be clean, safe and escape-proof. Animals must be safe from potential bad neighbours and predators. Animals must not be too noisy.
- I have no problem with people having livestock. I think it's great! We need to get back to that kind of living.
- no urban livestock especially no chickens - most importantly roosters are noisy at any time. Smell of a chicken coop could be objectionable to adjacent neighbours.
- depends on livestock. proper containment would be required
- Back yard hens to a limit of 6
- Chickens are ok, but limit the number. City should be held accountable to ensure enforcement occurs on those that become a nuisance from smell, bad visual appeal. No warnings, they are ineffective and unfair to the 95% who comply
- This is not a question of safety but rather of noise and smell. There is not enough room for responsible keeping of livestock in the city.
- Should be okay upon permit process, on a per case basis and amount of animals per square footage of yard should be looked at.
- With max size limitations.
- Chickens are fine as long as citizens know how to care for the animals and the safe disposal when expired. Also I think this needs inspections to be sure that the animals are properly cared for. For eggs only. No roosters
- Definitely should be permit-driven. Chickens etc might be fine but when you start adding pigs, cows and goats then there will be issues. Best to start off very cautiously.
- Licensing and training course and proper installation for hens keeping. Chicken and poultry have a very distinctive smell which can be bothersome for neighbors. Chickens should also be tagged so they can be traced back to their owners if they are found roaming outside of property.

- Should not be allowed. This is something that can get out of hand very quickly and become unsanitary, noisy, and foul smelling for neighbours. I wouldn't want this next door, living in the city is not the same as the farm.
- I am concerned about the noise and smell of chickens.
- controls for noise, odors, aesthetics
- Allowed with license & public notice to neighbours who can appeal. Signage out front of home that advises livestock is kept on property.
- I think that animals such as hens should be allowed, granted they are being taken care of properly and have a heated area for the winter.
- If we make an opportunity to have a few chickens it would not be a hazard or inconvenience to others so long as there are rules around it.
- Keeping a small number of chickens in a yard shouldn't be an issue. People with 1 medium or large dog generate way more dog shit than a few chickens. If people want to keep chickens they shouldn't need a permit either. Never have I seen a carnivorous blood thirsty chickens out attacking people
- Farm animals, including chickens don't belong in the city. I have a right to the quiet enjoyment of my property, which is an urban property, not a rural property. I would challenge in court any transgression of this right.
- We would need to ensure that animals aren't kept in cages in cold and hot weather with nowhere to exercise - - that is my big concern.
- Chickens have shown to be useful and not troublesome backyard pets in many urban areas. This has been established and should be allowed in Calgary.
- Clear standards for pens, etc. that are fair to the animal and ensure it is kept to the property (for it's own safety and that of other animals and people).
- livestock are managed appropriately, not released to public spaces
- Appropriate fencing I suppose. Not too worried about this one, I would enjoy having a chicken coop one day
- You have not defined urban livestock. Are we talking about an urban cow or an urban goat, an urban horse or urban hens??? Please reconsider this survey. I really want to advocate for responsible small-scale urban hens.
- I believe that no one should be allowed to own chickens in the city of Calgary. They are dirty and the stench is beyond belief. I am talking from experience. They would also spread diseases.
- proper precautions and designated areas need to be in place as we don't want them running around or causing problems
- Keeping livestock and humans healthy. Keep pens clean. Noise down.

- Would like to see some allowances for livestock. Miniature horses as support animals, chickens for eggs etc. If the yard is kept up and maintained (namely adequate removal and sanitation of the feces, or composted), then owners should be given the allowance.
- Having lived 2 doors away from someone who wanted a couple of chickens and ended up getting 27, I'm strictly against it. I've lived in the same house for 30 years and no one had any mice issues until the chickens arrived. Next came the skunks as they are apparently quite fond of eggs. No livestock
- Chickens are too noisy
- Health and safety sanitation checks
- YES. PLEASE. Chickens at the very least. The price of eggs is outrageous and they taste nasty.
- Depends on the livestock I guess. I'm okay with chickens for egg but don't feel that most properties are set up to accommodate the space and hygiene needed
- Occasional inspection for cleanliness and hygiene to prevent the spread of illness
- People must attend a proper information course to be licensed.
- Reasonable hygiene
- Fences
- It should be permitted with limits. I'd far rather my neighbour have a pygmy goat or half a dozen well kept chickens than a pitbull on a chain in their yard. As long as they are following the same rules as for cats and dogs (licensed, not causing a nuisance) they should be allowed within reason.
- Nothing! Please allow this!
- seriously?
- I do not support livestock in urban settings.
- NO - livestock needs to remain on acreages and farms. Yards in the city are not big enough to keep animals and will create mess, odor and likely disease (just look at China's situation). BAD IDEA
- Keep it contained in proper housing and fencing
- animal welfare and adequate living space may need to be defined. if the animal is happy, it is okay.
- Absolutely NO. Disease and predators are the first 2 reasons. This law is already being abused. Shut them down or we can expect to have mini horses on the C-train along with the chickens and ducks. Disease, Disease, Disease. Coronas Virus sounds familiar.
- No safety concerns, but some level of control over numbers of livestock.
- Chickens I understand in the backyard, but there may need to be a limit set per square foot of their pasture/enclosure.
- Not every house, but limited numbers are OK.
- I oppose urban livestock, because of the smell and noise which affects the surrounding neighbors. They serve no purpose and should be limited to rural areas
- Again, no problem as long as owners are respectful of neighbors with respect to smells and noise.
- Register animals. Similar to dogs.
- I need to be communicated that neighbors are going to have urban livestock and I need to know there is a number and person or group that I can call if there are issues or I feel less safe

- No opinion.
- Nothing needed. I used to love seeing horses on 14th st -till your bylaw tyrant banned them
- Needs to be done within reason. I think having a couple chickens is OK if the person has enough space for them. But anything bigger should not be allowed in an urban setting. And regulations need to be in place so things don't get out of hand.
- A good fence and someone watching them. Signage would be nice too.
- Nothing. Seems like not a hazard. Although might be a sound / snell nuisance?
- I think so long as proper bylaws, cleanliness and similar were followed, there are no issues
- Why not? I would love to have eggs in my quaint heritage home, save a bit of money and stay healthy.
- That they are not a noise or health issue
- I want more urban livestock raised for food
- Mostly noise concerns here. I am all for a few chickens, but keep those roosters quiet!
- This is also not appropriate for our city; animal/waste odours will drift to the neighbours' yard. There are already - in my opinion - issues with cats and dogs. I imagine that the City of Calgary will need to have a much enlarged Bylaw Office.
- Management of odours, confinement of livestock
- No. Just no. You are all worried about Bobcats, coyotes, etc., then you want to introduce dinner? And a chicken is so not an emotional support animal!! They have lice and bugs and should be on a farm, where they have the space they need.
- Chickens and ducks seem fine if strict standards are created and met.
- I'm not opposed to urban livestock, as long as we can ensure a level of cleanliness and organization. People seem to have a hard enough time picking up after their dogs, how will they be a picking up after other animals, and how will it be enforced. It only takes a few to ruin it for everyone.
- I support urban chickens as long as the owner is ensuring their coup is clean. For this to happen, there should maybe be an inspection program to ensure the livestock are cared for appropriately.
- do not bother me if they are properly cared for I will support licensing and education for this also
- Pens are kept clean and safe for the animals.
- Livestock should not be in the city.
- Cleanliness and living standards that would have to be enforced. I have no problem with a neighbour raising chickens as long as I can't smell them and they are well cared for.
- Defiantly against allowing any livestock in the city. People can live in the numerous rural ares in Alberta if they want livestock. I moved to the city to get away from animal that cause high noise, unpleasant smells and are a nuisance because they get loose into community often.EU pigs big problem
- urban hens should be allowed with the number based on size and type of dwelling. they are an excellent way to supplement the food supply and lower living costs.
- Yes please!!! I would love to have chickens in my yard. I grew up on a farm with chickens so maybe no 'roosters'? Too noisy for neighbours. Also, I live in Brentwood and there are many bobcats and coyotes and i think chickens could attract more... so there should be guidelines about enclosures etc.

- Awareness, if you live within close proximity. There could be concerns regarding noise and smell. Requirements to ensure noise and smell do not become an issue for neighbours should be included in the bylaw. Consideration should be given to livestock attracting wildlife.
- NO LIVESTOCK AT ALL. GET RID OF SO CALLED ' SUPPORT CHICKENS' IN URBAN AREAS. MESSY, NOISY, SMELLY, DISEASE CONTROL?
- notification, they should apply for a permit and put a notice out to their neighbors giving them the opportunity to voice their concerns
- nothing , educations is needed for people
- No
- If some one wants to raise chickens etc move out of the city to an acreage, cities are not for farming.
- I think I would like to know the rules that would govern the keeping of animals such as chickens, and I would like to know that there would be a mechanism whereby Animal Services could inspect premises where the animals are being kept if there is a reasonable doubt that the animals are being kept in
  - Reasonably small control & sound
  - Chickens good (max # per household)
  - I would love to raise chickens at home
  - Approve of only smaller animals
  - I don't have concerns. They should be in a coup, in a closed environment. They are not dangerous.
  - Leave this space
  - Adequate proof that owners are appropriately educated about safety, health and cleanliness. Public notice provided to adjacent neighbours.
  - Limit the number of livestock per square footage of lot size; implement annual fee/ license to keep urban livestock.
  - No urban livestock, it breeds disease.
  - Size and weight restrictions on livestock. I.E. (# of chickens / fowl allowed = square footage of penned in space / average area required to house 1 chicken / fowl) Categorize ALL livestock in this manner for rural livestock restrictions. Housing facilities subject to periodic approval / inspection
  - This should be illegal
  - chickens with a limit per home
  - noise and odor bylaw control -
  - I do not believe that livestock belong in the City.
  - Why not chickens and ducks?
but quails are quiet.
Rabbits the eating kind.
But not cows or goats or sheep

- Appropriate housing and caretaking along with registry. Livestock needs to be welcomed into the city!
- I am concerned over the odor and the mice that seem to appear with the livestock ( including chickens)
- i believe it would be a great addition to our sustainability to allow hens within the city limits.they are not noisy, produce food, the chicken manure can be put in the green bin.I have a neighbour that has so much dog waste in the yard and this is permitted. OMG,those who have hens are responsible
- Small animals only, maybe. Perhaps we could have a few livestock facilities around town rather than having livestock in our yards.
- Permit
Inspection of animal's living conditions (must be adequate for animal needs, consultation with experts for cruelty/health hazard-free living environment).
- The city is no place for livestock
- I'm fine with it as long as the livestock have enough space and appropriate environment for their natural behaviours and necessary exercise.
- proper structure for the livestock
- Urban livestock is a great idea with appropriate guidelines, animal amount limitations, courses and licenses. A mandatory course and license to keep livestock will educate people on proper care and keep them accountable and trackable.
- Chickens - no rooster/ upto 4 hens/ upto 2 mini goats or pigs or horses
If smell or poor maintenance then fined strike 3 in effect
- Controls/rules related to odour and noise management, pilot programs, controlled numbers and breeding.
- No issue with small numbers of chickens. Roosters should not be permitted. Small coops can be managed and odor controlled
- Huge fan. Again, some reasonable regulations, but totally in.
- i am all for any one keeping chickens at a limit of 6 or a few bees hives with limit of 4
- I don't think many Calgarians would want a neighbor that has livestock animals next door.
- Effect on agencies that may be required to accept surrenders or seize neglected animals.
Realistic ability for an urban property to meet needs of livestock
Nuisance smell/noise
Proper housing
Standards of care and control
- We have no concerns with small animals such as chickens. Roosters would be a noise concern. Standard rules should apply regarding proper care and clean housing.
- If you are on an acreage or there is a lot of room between the houses, no concerns. I prefer not to have any livestock in my neighbourhood.
- Should be allowed as long as it doesn't harm your neighbours

- This one is a little more difficult. As much as I think I wouldn't mind living beside a home with chickens, I would mind if it became too noisy or too foul smelling! I wouldn't approve of livestock larger than a chicken.
- -regulations that owners must follow and are monitored to make sure owners follow
- Suitable fencing or other containment. Licensing with appropriate inspections upon renewal and/or complaint where safety is a concern. This could be managed via the city or organizations similar to those for pigeon keepers and should be self-financing
- Bylaw & fines making it a self funded program
  - Permit
  - License for each
  - Training
  - Min size lot/setback
  - Insurance for damages
  - Neighbor consensus
  - Max permits within area

Actually none of this makes sense to me.
Why we live in the City-because we don't want to live on a farm.
- I think there should be limits to number of animals for the size of the property (similar to horses in a rural property), and regulation about if livestock ownership impacts the properties adjacent (ie if livestock feces is spreading to neighbors), but otherwise allow for it.
- Noise , odour, waste control and disposal regulations, bylaws
- It should be limited to chickens (hens only) not roosters. It would be a great idea as long as people do this responsibly I.e. clean up and make sure they have proper housing to prevent coyotes and Bobcats from eating them.
- Should not be allowed under any circumstances in cities. Too big a potential for spread of disease among humans. Remember the avian flu? Documented transmission of flu between animals and humans-more recently the corona virus, direct result of China's wild animal live markets. Not worth the risk.
- effect on other agencies that may be required to accept surrenders or seize neglected animals
  - realistic ability for an urban property to meet needs of livestock
  - nuisance smell/noise
- Livestock not be allowed in a city environment. Livestock require large amount of space for their health, not possible in a confined city area. Livestock are not support animals. Support animal is one that has the ability to respond to a persons command or intervene in a crisis. Livestock do not.
- Only given a license if they have a certified course on animal husbandry and safe management of these animals.
- They need to be quiet so as not to affect others sleep which affects our health & well being. Also cleanliness is of utmost importance so as not to spread disease & contamination of our drainage systems. Smell can also be a problem.
- Animal welfare laws need to be enforced.

- Permit and consultation with neighbors
- This should absolutely be allowed. Urban livestock is great. Stop over regulating things. Raising livestock for a pastime or local food is wonderful and should be allowed and encouraged. Don't regulate livestock in the city. Let people have small ponies/horses/ chickens, etc (quiet animals)
- Smaller livestock such as chickens used as support animals only and mostly kept inside. Livestock could attract certain wildlife.
- I do not support livestock in backyards or want to live near it, due to noise, smell, transmitting of diseases, nuisance, lack of care and cruelty. Enough animals are abandoned and suffer from lack of care or cruelty. today. Laws not strong enough as is. Enforcing laws will cost taxpayers more.
- I would not like chickens in peoples yards. They will be a nuisance. What if the neighbour has a cat/dog.
Now that we are in a pandemic- I might be open to it, but otherwise not a fan due to noise/smell/other animal issues.
- I do not have sufficient knowledge of this particular subject. But, what about the smell of manure in the City?
- Realistic ability for an urban property to meet needs of livestock.
License/permit - should include consent from neighbours.
City would have to take on the responsibility of accepting surrenders &/or seizures of these animals.
Effective control of nuisance smell & noise.
- I would love livestock in my backyard and my sheep herding dog would love it as well.
- There should be no urban livestock.
- I'm good with limited amount of chickens
- I have no problems as long as there is a nuisance bylaw that the City can enact if there is an issue.
- Chickens are desirable. But not more than 6 hens per household.
- Seems unnecessary in the city
- As long as the owner can provide a proper accommodation for the number of animals he is planning to have and keep clean, not smelly I would be ok.
- Animal cages must be kept clean and well maintained. Animals must also be kept healthy.
- Effect on other agencies that may be required to accept surrenders of these animals or seize neglected livestock (City of Calgary, Calgary Humane Society, other rescue groups); Realistic ability for an urban property to meet the welfare needs of livestock; Nuisance smell and/or noise in urban areas.
- Permit-based (low cost!), Limit on number of animals (eg. 4-6 hens/ducks) per house, no roosters.
- For me it is not about safety, generally urban livestock (except bison?!) are safe. Wouldn't want bull cattle around. Nor lammas. Need them to be cleaned up after (daily?), secured in yard.
- Fences to contain livestock would be essential. There should be limits on numbers and size. Overall hygiene and maintenance of properties should be required.
Fines for allowing detritus material to collect.

- Are you joking. Seen the news lately. Been to China recently? Animals in close proximity to humans = disease. And how do you build and maintain sanitary facilities for livestock when you can't keep the city half free of pet excrement.
- Control on number and size of animal. As long as it's not too noisy (rooster) or smelly (pig), I've got no problem with it
- Please no. There are already a lot of irresponsible pet owners in the city, and The City of Calgary doesn't seem to have the resources to manage the existing problems. I cannot imagine how The City would manage this. I do not want chickens, pigs, or any type of livestock in my neighbourhood.
- 300 characters is not enough for proper input! Urban livestock; case by case basis. Let it be. Those with illegitimate complaints [removed] could likely use a healthy dose of education on the subject they're complaining about.
- A couple or three/four hens should be permitted for backyard gardens. No roosters allowed as they are disruptive.
- Limit the number of chickens. Maximum 10. If you have too many, there might be more disease. People should always take care of them. Chickens in the city is good for eggs.
- - need pond for ducks
  - loud
  - stinky
  - egg collection
  - outside areas of the city
- - stinky
  - ponds for ducks
  - noise
  - leave them alone
- Sounds will disturb others, bad smells, running wild if get away, mini barn in backyard, 3 chickens, 1 cow, ~ limit animals, keep livestock on farms, can't keep them quiet.
- If this is referring to chickens and other animals I say please don't allow this – people don't look after their dogs and cats let alone chickens. I found chickens on Nosehill that had obviously been dumped there.

Pigeons

- Again, to be informed, know what the rules are, and how to report violations. Also concerned about hygiene of this particular practice and health issues.
- filth and disease, bird droppings
- Current regulations seem to be fine. Perhaps regulations on the number of pigeons kept.
- no concerns as long as the coops are kept clean and odour free.
- Allow it

Calgary is already full of pigeons so in theory they shouldn't be a big issue. But in residential areas there should be limits on #s of birds and cleanliness requirements.

- Not concerned with safety. Concerned for noise, smell and mess.
- See urban livestock as most applies. Just keep them clean.
- why?
- I am not in support of pigeon racing so I would change the bylaw that currently approves this.
- I am not concerned about urban bee pigeons
- Urban thing.
- Pigeons cause a mess when they roost, and the poo is like cement when it dries. I have never seen someone keep them that isn't a delapidated eyesore.
- Yuck. No.
- no comment.
- Property cages and housing, conscientious ownership.
- Common misconception that pigeons are unsafe because they are dirty. pigeons have amazing immune systems and are not a health threat to us. Leave them be.
- I support.
- THE WORST! As someone who has had neighbors with pigeons, it is ridiculous that the city allows this, but does not allow chickens. pigeons are a nuisance, and the feed attracts rodents and other wildlife. It is clear that even though the city regulates it, they do not enforce the bylaws.
- i think we have enough flying around. i would not want to live next door to someone who kept pigeons, they can be noisy
- Yes, however the neighbours must formally consent first.
- Leave them alone
- I don't know much about urban pigeons. Are they a food crop?
- Pigeons are dirty and noisy. They will poop all over your garage is they decide that they want to hang out there and they will return constantly. If you have a rain barrel for your garden, this is disgusting.
- Pigeon farming is something I have no real knowledge of, but seems like it could be done responsibly.
- The current bylaws are sufficient.
- No opinion.
- No. No. No. These are filthy animals with feces and feeding. Please, just no.
- How does racing pigeons benefit our community or society? Is this considered animal cruelty?
- No opinion.
- I have no problem with urban pigeons. There are so many birds in the City, what's a few more?
- I don't think that any urban pigeons should be on residential property or in the city limits on commercial property. If you want to have urban pigeons, then live on an acreage or farm.

- I've had too many incidences of pigeons clearing out feeders and roosting in our own home to approve of anything regarding pigeons. I believe it's too easy for me to just "let them go" or have feeding of them become someone else's responsibility.
- Support but recommend working with Alberta Veterinary Medical Association, UC Vet School, local clubs/association to setup regulations, disease surveillance, restrict numbers and establish best practices.
- Required basic level of vet care so they're not spreading disease.
- I have never thought of urban pigeons.
- Clear guidelines for pigeon owners including expectations regarding noise and odour and animal welfare.
- Pigeons are rats with wings.
- should fall into "Urban Livestock" - enforce a maximum such as 20 "livestock" animals
- No. I'm so glad to finally be rid of pigeons pooping on my deck and patio. Please don't encourage these birds. They're cute and all, but they don't understand the concept of boundaries.
- Send an email.
- No opinion
- As with wildlife, the city needs to control their population to keep it close to what natural levels without city activities would be. This can be accomplished either directly or by addressing the underlying factors that allows the population to grow beyond the level that it naturally would.
- "...any person who keeps pigeons must be a member in good standing of either the Canadian Racing Pigeon Club or the Canadian Pigeon Fanciers Association and the pigeon wears appropriate identification." seems good enough to me
- I am fine with urban pigeon keeping.
- I would personally like to be informed if someone in my neighbourhood was planning urban agriculture. Adequate enclosures would need to be built and maintained in order to avoid predators.
- No... not really. [personal information removed] I would keep the regulations the same.
- Urban Pigeons should be entitled to a bird/sq ft ratio to prevent over crowding. Pigeons should be banded and registered with the City. If Pigeons are used as a food source there should be strict methods employed to prevent suffering. Pigeons should be in good health and free from disease.
- Cleanliness
- ?? pigeons live with us now and always. Live and let live. I don't see this as an issue.
- no opinion
- Nothing.
- Weird but okay as long as they are housed appropriately and not released to the wild. Should have to be banded so they are readily identifiable
- No. Just no. Why?
- They are housed appropriately and as per above.
- Personally I think pigeons are rats with wings. Carrier or passenger pigeons homing style that live in an enclosure are ok but not something I would want.

- Don't have an opinion
- There should be NO urban pigeons in an urban setting.
- No concerns here, I knew pigeon hobbyists growing up and it's a safe operation
- I am sure people being what they are would raise them to eat them not race them. How to control that they are being well cared for from cold.....smell?
- I have no concerns.
- No, no pigeons and especially as they have been used as squab. Many cultures raise them and they are not clean.
- Special licensing
- no opinion.
- bylaw is correct..responsible pigeon owners are not the problem..bylaw must remain the same unless close quarter neighbors have issues (eg: pigeon feces) then pigeon owners must rethink where their birds are kept..
- As long as I don't see or hear the pigeons, there is no problem.
- Nothing
- Stick with current concept of being part of the club and/or licencing by education that you know how to safely care for the birds and can meet their needs.
- 1) Have a limit as well
- 2) I don't really get the use for pigeons
- Pigeons are harmless and provide no benefit and not many negatives to a city. No bylaws needed.
- Even in captivity these animals could easily contract disease from the wild birds that live inner city. That being said I am NOT opposed to people keeping them as they are a delicacy and are a very easy bird to raise.
- Pigeon cotes will provide excellent opportunities for everybody. Pigeons prefer to roost safely with other pigeons, so the system becomes self-organizing. No worries.
- Would be great if they had tracking devices so the owners know where they are and home owners can get them to come get them when they start to build nests on/in their property.
- No safety concerns here either. Just making sure that we keep the areas clean and not a nuisance to the neighbours.
- should not be allowed in residential communities!!!! filthy, loud, disgusting amount of feces. Once they set into a neighbourhood you can not get rid of them and you are stuck with all of the feces. DISGUSTING
- I don't know enough about this - do people want to breed urban pigeons or grow for food? Or is this referring to free roaming pigeons?
- Ability to ensure no disease, no noise, no waste all over adjacent properties. Appropriateness is questionable. Not appropriate in multi-family buildings.
- Contain feathers.
- It seems like you aren't asking if citizens think this is appropriate - is this a done deal?
- Current bylaws seem to be appropriate. I have no concerns.

- I would want signage front & back of the property to make visitors, city workers etc aware of what animal is present. A limit on max number of animals allowed.
- Remove them in whatever way necessary.
- We are getting more wild pigeons in the city. I'm not sure what the purpose would be for having a pigeon coop though.
- I don't want my neighbors to have pigeons if the birds are noisy
- Love it, I think they're beautiful birds (and not too loud compared to other pet birds).
- Messy, filthy birds
- Not sure I understand how that fits in an urban environment. I don't believe you can humanely have pigeons in a yard and enable them to fly and stretch otherwise....
- IMO the trouble with pigeons is that it is harder to contain the breeding, especially for strays.
- I have no issues with pigeons being kept, but I do think there needs to be limits on how many can be kept on a property.
- Limited number, I don't want to see property get messed or damaged due to an unruly number of pigeons.
- Nothing.
- Too each their own enjoy. Urban chickens are doing good!
- No Pigeons.
- As long as they don't increase wild pigeon population in the city
- Owners need to keep noise and odour levels to an absolute minimum. There aren't enough bylaw enforcement officers to keep non-complying owners in line.
- Nothing. And everyone is doing it so make it legal already. Then all the knowledge, tools, supplies can be found easier and locally for those that no longer have to hide their hobby. Knowledge is power.
- No problem with the pigeons
- No problems.
- Again depends on ability to clean up after them. I wouldn't be overly happy if they were to take up roost on my house.
- We have many pigeons around as it is. Why not allow pigeons as pets?
- Totally against. Pigeons can smell, create huge messes and spread disease. They cannot and shouldn't be caged. Unless they are a Doctor approved support animal they are more a nuisance. Many cities have issues with these birds in areas and Calgary shouldn't promote the birds within City limits.
- Prefer not kept as pets at all, however coops in a yard, with a limit on how many.
- I am not a fan. As i have seen u fit cages
- No Pigeons in the city limits

- They are filthy and I would like to not have them here.
- No. For the same reasons noted in question #2. Animals such as pigeons need space to live and grow. A city is not an appropriate place.
- Opposed
- The problem with urban pigeons is the large amount bird droppings pigeons create on buildings, decks and patios, as well as every where on adjoining residential properties that happen to be next to a city residential property that has pigeon coups and the owner lets the birds fly regularly.
- Sounds interesting.
- No opinion.
- Is the current bylaw working? If yes I would leave it. If there is abuse or neighbours are complaining, then I would suggest exploring specific ways to address those issues based on best practices.
- Pigeons can become pests, but I'm open to responsible pigeon ownership...
- Why not?
- Noisy and messy, they need to be fully contained.
- Within reason, and again though as long as the owners have the education and know how to do it, yes.
- Urban CHICKENS please!!!!
- They're already here, keeping them as pets is another story. How to keep them safe, healthy and in clean housing. If for meat, humane killing. No selling.
- Pigeons need to be under control, their coop must be kept very clean and cleaned regularly. Any smell or noise must be highly limited. I expect the birds are not free to roam and will not defecate on surrounding property. They must be properly housed and limited to a small amount.
- None
- No!
- We seem to have a lot of them already in the urban wilds, and I have never felt unsafe because of them. So I see no need to be concerned about pigeon fanciers and such.
- Sure
- Fine if not impacting neighbouring property
- Restrictions on number of pigeons and cleanliness of facility.
- Don't know about this one.
- See urban livestock.

- Doesn't effect me.
- I have no issues with urban pigeons.
- Pigeons should not be allowed in urban areas as they they are noisy and make huge messes with their fecies . They are beautiful birds but in groups they cause many problems
- Not a fan of pigeons, as the coop has negative impact with neighbouring properties.
- Previously experienced pigeon poop on our patio due to many urban pigeons three doors away. Please -- no urban pigeons.
- Not worried.
- Limiting the number of pigeons allowed.
- Pigeons are no problem as long as they're kept and controlled by the owners.
- Don't know enough about pigeons to say much. Are they potential disease carriers? If so, then they should be kept in a coop or indoors.
- I'm not sure what this even looks like.
- Birds can be messy. Having a plan in place to ensure the birds aren't leaving excrement and food litter for the general public to clean.
- Must be certified to raise and control them in a cage and not to them free to control disease
- Think this is fine as is.
- Urban pigeons should be allowed in numbers that do not cause odor or vermin. Pigeons should not be allowed to be lived trapped, should come from breeder.

- I've never experienced a problem with urban pigeons.
- They should be contained within their own property, too messy when allowed to fly out in groups
- In addition to the current membership requirements, limits on the number of pigeons
- Similar to above, otherwise there should be no issues with pigeon raising if we can already raise exotic birds.
- I've seen them around and is kinda cool to see them fly in a flock. My only issue is that they don't create a noise issue (Cooing) with neighbors or they start nesting on my roof and pooping everywhere. amount of birds is key.
- No comment. I don't know enough
- Vermin with wings. Strict control and limitation on how many (I would suggest 5 max). These animals are a nuisance and create noise and filth on other people's properties.
- Disease
- Absolutely not in an urban setting - noise/smell/bird faeces - not conducive to being a good neighbour
- Knowledge and education
- I think people should be able to responsibly keep pigeons to consume as a local source of meat
- No.
- Disease control
- Same as above, no issues that I can see beyond an abundance of pigeon poop.
- Same
- Bands mandatory, and owners fully responsible for any lost/stray landed pigeons.
- Don't we have enough pigeons already?
- They don't seem to be a problem now. Ensure they are well cared for and clean.
- Not noisy/smelling/roaming.
- They crap on everything. It's hard enough keeping my car clean.
- I consider pigeons livestock and they should not be kept in residences in the City of Calgary as they can become a nuisance.
- No comment
- As long as they are not pooping on car.
- Limit on number, and/or limit on number commensurate with exterior space available, and/or based on neighborhood density zoning (fewer or none in denser areas)
- I feel safe with pigeons and the current regulations but would prefer urban chickens.
- Should be allowed
- I don't like urban pigeons
- The current bylaws are acceptable
- I don't know anything about urban pigeons.

- Limited numbers and significant distance from dwelling and yard areas. Noise and odour control.
- Pigeons in diapers. They poop everywhere. Are pigeons aggressive? Do they attract other aggressive or predatory animals? I don't know a lot about pigeons but having a large number of them does not sound safe or something you would want in urban areas
- yes they should be allowed as breeding, competition, companion animals and should be allowed to fly however the flocks should be locked up by sundown. People should not be allowed to encourage wild pigeons to set up flocks in the neighborhoods nor should their flocks become a public nuisance
- No issues with people having pigeons. It's not like they aren't already in the neighbourhood nesting and doing their thing.
- Only if properly housed and neighbours agree
- Sure I don't see any issues with these as long as the area around the home is kept clean. A small sign if the pigeons are allowed to flock (this can be frightening)
- Whatever.
- Just...no
- It sounds like the current system is adequate.
- Nothing... Same answer as the bees. Keep potions of you want
- Limit to # of birds , size of enclosure
- No way. Unless there's a way to ensure that they are controlled population wise. Live in an inner city area with a huge pigeon people - they are messy and carry disease.
- Unacceptable in a urban city. Do not allow it.
- I don't have a lot of experience but as long as they aren't messy, go for it!
- Nothing
- We have enough pigeons in this city but if people own them they need to be responsible and limit to a reasonable number
- I would rather see hens but a limited number of pigeons would be ok in my opinion. You (the City), could potentially make some revenue off of permits for goats and bees and/or leg bands for the birds.
- Same as above.
- They need to be free of disease and of lice etc. It's transferable to other common household pets. Pigeons are extremely dirty birds
- Allow a flock of urban pigeons. No problem with that.
- Proper coop.
- Disgusting. Absolutely disgusting.
- I can't imagine that this is popular enough to need to legislate more than what is already written in the bylaws.
- limit the number in areas to avoid over taxing resources and leaving a footprint on environment and neighbours

- Again, limited by property size
- Sure, why not.
- None , as long as they are in their natural habitat and not used for entertainment. Otherwise a warning sign of what is in the area.
- No opinion.
- Feathered rats should be exterminated on site
- Yes please, pigeons are great.
- Not in city limits.
- The current rules are about right.
- I think using them for raving borders on illegal gambling territory
But homing I'd say again set a limit like no more than 4 or something reasonable
- It's so expensive to live here and people need to be able to feed their families. I know I do. I am 100% behind people being able to use their land for all types of food.
- Current rules on pigeons make sense. I would like to see current rules remain in place for pigeons to prevent the city from becoming g Toronto and Montreal, covered in pigeon poop.
- Fine by me. Pigeons don't seem to be a nuisance. They stay where there's a food source so just don't ya e a food source if you don't want pigeons.
- If constant testing is done to prevent disease don't see it as a issue
- current legislation is fine

- Must be a member in good standing of either the Canadian Racing Pigeon Club or the Canadian Pigeon Fanciers Association and the pigeon wears appropriate identification.
- I actually like the sound of pigeons but would hope that the owners keep them contained in a safe enclosure.
- Should not be allowed.
- Not allowed. They don't do anyone any good and make a mess everywhere.
- Shouldn't be allowed. Again, if you want to raise pigeons, move out of the city.
- Doesn't seem to be a problem and so why should a Calgarian care. The current bylaws seem reasonable.
- Pigeons carry disease and should be treated as pests.
- I am concerned about humane slaughter and am otherwise supportive of urban pigeons
- Straight no...
- Proper coops and cleanup/maintenance of space.
- Needs to be clean
- I don't have enough information to comment on this
- I had a neighbour who had them and they would just roam freely around the area. He would leave the dying or sick ones out and not keep the pen very clean. This should be more regulated.
- No issues with safety here.
- None permitted due to noise, smell and defecation on neighbouring properties.
- I have no issue with pigeons
- License to own
- Noise and disease are chief concerns. Also, out of control birds escaping and taking up residence elsewhere are a big concern. Give your bylaw officers a break and forbid all mores of livestock other than dogs and cats
- No urban or suburban pigeons. We have enough feral ones that make a mess everywhere.
- Adequate housing for pigeons.
- I do not know enough to make a strong opinion on the matter
- Monthly inspection area is kept cleAn n no disease or infections . Flying ground restricted so we aren't getting poop showers from mass flock
- no, cause damage and carry disease
- A notice posted
- Is this a thing? Don't pigeons just exist?
- Not really a large problem.
- I am not familiar with this issue.
- I think the coops are an eyesore. It might hurt the property values of neighbouring homes.
- No. Absolutely not. We had pigeons being raised in our neighbourhood a few years ago. They were noisy, stinky, and never stayed in their own yards. Pigeon poop is toxic and they leave a mess wherever they roost.
- No opinion

- Can be a nuisance. They are noisy and dirty. Pigeons should be controlled by their owners.
- They are becoming a blessed nuisance. Remove them.
- I agree with the guidelines already set out.
- I have no issues with this as they are already lots of pigeons around.
- Under proper licensing yes if they are just used for racing/homing. If used for food limit flock size so they don't get out of control.
- Sure.
- Nothing
- Should not be allowed.
- urban pigeons are safe too
- NO, I am continuously cleaning up pigeon poo on my patio and this can cause sickness in my dogs!
- Haven't encountered this, but same as above regarding cleanliness and knowledge of location.
- Disease control is important. Size of owned flocks should be controlled. Proof of ownership will be an issue. Responsibilities for bird waste may be problem for liability reasons. This may require the City not allowing regulated ownership.
- Sure- as long as they are cared for
- I am in favour of pigeons
- If pigeons are truly raised for racing or homing there shouldn't be a problem with them roosting on others' property. Should have feedback from neighbors before permitting.
- Yes within a limit..if they are racers or homing
- nothing
- Limit to number allowed on a property, guidelines and resources on housing and care.
- Guidelines to ensure birds are kept healthy to prevent spread of disease.
- Worst and most poorly controlled aspect of animals in city. If someone belongs to a pigeon club then there does not seem to be any limit to the numbers they can have. Mess, noise, no recourse for affected neighbours.
- Good animal husbandry so they do not become a nuisance to neighbours.
- Not a huge fan of this because they are super noisy. I wouldn't feel unsafe, but I would worry about disrupting local bird populations and drawing in predators if they were kept outdoors.
- Never
- I think current regulations are satisfactory.
- Home owners need to be held accountable for fostering environments that do not give pigeons a place to roost - ie my last apartment had them living in the rafters due to landlord neglect
- Is there any system that monitors the wellbeing of these animals?
- No issue. Already exists in small numbers.
- Good hygiene.
- Like livestock there is no reason to keep pigeons, but an exemption may be provided for small flocks of homing or racing pigeons.
- Continue the membership requirement for pigeons.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

- Not allowed. The pigeons even when belonging to clubs fly over neighbouring homes and release droppings all over. The owners do not go around to clean up after them. Should not be allowed.
- Really ??? Do we not have enough pigeons already pooping over everything in our yards and houses. Could be a health risk as well. Lets keep things as clean as possible.
- I mean, they can't be worse than magpies, and there's nothing we can do about those little annoyances...
- No issues with current laws
- As above
- Urban Pigeons should fall under the livestock rule, and should not be allowed in the city. As with pigeons, we are fortunate to have many small acreages near Calgary where owning and raising pigeons is possible, and would be better for both neighbours and the pigeons.
- I dont know enough about Urban pigeons.
- No restrictions necessary. Use existing nuisance laws as needed
- This should not be allowed
- I think the current rules are sufficient. There should also be a way for neighbors to effectively launch a complaint against owners regarding noise, hygiene, etc. Ideally urban pigeons should not be permitted to be free-flying and perhaps restricted to aviary cages to reduce impact on neighbors
- Licensed annually with a restriction on numbers a household can have per min space requirement - up to certain amount per person over legal age. Include short course on proper husbandry of pigeons and identification of local vet that practices medicine for pigeons as part of course.
- They carry too many diseases and are extremely annoying and loud. They should not be allowed.
- Look at any city. Urban pigeons are a disasterous plague with out-of-control roosting and crapping everywhere. Ugly spkies adorn the buildings in sad failed efforts to stop their roosting. We don't need to encourage that.
- Should not be allowed in urban areas, as these leave your property and leave waste on other property, roofs and fencing. And how does an average person understand "appropriate" pigeon identification?
- Pigeons cause health hazards by their droppings. They also cause a nuisance by their noise.
- Maybe so under 15 pigeons as pets
- As long as they're housed properly, they're a fantastic source of food, and fertilizer for the garden.
- Disallow.
- See above.
- done properly, why not?
- As with the chickens and ducks above, I see no reason why people can't have pigeons so long as the number of birds allowed is appropriate for the space available and the neighbourhood density. Probably a max of 4 birds (whether pigeon or otherwise) per house unless significant space is available.
- Bad idea. I live near a backyard full of pigeons and there is poo everywhere and they are annoying.

- In favour. Must be monitored and stringent penalties enforced if animals are not sufficiently provided for both physically and psychologically.
- Limited in number.
- No concern. They are not threatening in any way. And by the way, it's already happening in many areas. Someone's pigeons ate all the new grass seed when an off leash area was re-developed in my community.
- A maximum amount of pigeons per sq ft/coop. Inspections for cleanliness and disease prevention. Methods in place to ensure they are not attracting wildlife to the area i.e. birds of prey/coyotes/mice etc.
- Pigeons are gross, how can we get rid of these flying rats
- This is a thing???
- Again, why? This is definitely not what the pigeons want! It's a really stupid 'hobby'! It should definitely be against the law!
- Yes, but I think there should be permits given in order to keep and obtain such creatures. I think residents should have to apply for the permit. Applications should include home checks and husbandry exams.
- Ensure that it does no interfere with neighbours' enjoyment of their own property
- In order for me to feel reasonably safe in areas where there is urban pigeon keeping, i would require there to be rules and regulations. Pigeons should be licensed and pigeon keepers limited to a certain number of birds. The pigeons must be tagged, as to identify pet vs wild animal.
- Nope! Nope! Nope!
- The bylaws in place seem sufficient currently. Frequent removal of waste and a clean, healthy environment for the birds would be my only concern
- No, unless for eating. Limit number of pigeons because they make a mess.
- We have problems already with wild pigeons. Don't need anymore.
- Go for it. Doesn't hurt anyone.
- No. There is no need for this.
- nothing wrong with pigeons!
- I like the current regulations.
- they must be kept in an enclosure with a top or screen cover so that they are not causing damage to neighboring properties and must be kept very clean so as to not attract rodents
- none
- A license, welfare checks.
- Only racing and homing pigeons should be allowed and caged when not racing/coming home, and cages must be clean and all possible noise dampening must be done.
- I'm not sure anything needs to be changed other than perhaps some sort of disease testing/reporting of certain diseases.
- Disease control and mitigation of smell

- I don't really understand why the bylaw should be different for pigeons vs. other livestock. I think any small animal livestock should be permitted.
- I really don't agree with urban Pigeons as I constantly need to deal with pigeon shit on my vehicles as they sit on the power lines right above my carport or sit on my eaves or fence and shit all over the place for me to clean up homes and yard
- Yum.
- As per existing rules.
- I grew up with them in our neighborhood and had a few friends who raised show and racing pigeons. If the space is available and the clean-up is done regularly, no problem.
- I'm not sold on the idea of pigeons. I like pigeons but I don't know how you would expect owners to contain them to their yard. I worry about the welfare of pigeons or other flight birds that can escape yards. If they would be contained to a property I am on board.
- I don't know much about pigeons. Are they loud? Do they help sustain the human food chain?
- Current regulations seem fine. I can't imagine there are that many pigeon keepers in the city.
- Should be discouraged. I work with a wildlife rescue, and we have found that owners of banded pigeons can't be bothered to collect them if they end up at the rescue. too often they let their birds go and they end up feral . They are such dirty birds.
- Same as now
- perhaps a limit on amount of pigeons to keep from them becoming a nuisance
- I also believe that urban pigeons are fine as long as they are well taken care of and are kept in certain places.
- no no no no.... yuck... no. ... disease carrying rats with wings.... no
- Hard no
- licence requirement
- Only be allowed a certain amount
- Kept in structure so not disturbing neighbors.
- No issues with urban pigeons but maybe limit the number of birds depending on the property size, urban density, etc.
- I didn't know this was a thing, so cannot comment.
- Proper guideline for how many and proper housing
- WHY?? They're messy and noisy and I can't see why anyone wants them.
- I do not support urban pigeons. Common pathogens transmitted from pigeons to humans are E. coli, encephalitis, histoplasmosis (respiratory disease from fungus growing in pigeon droppings, which can be fatal), candidiasis and salmonellosis. A flock of pigeons covered my house in droppings for years.
- No opinion
- Nothing.
- I don't understand why we allow these and not chickens.
- Pigeons are messy and noisy and not needed in anyone's backyard.

- We had a neighbour who had pigeons. They were not a problem, but he had a large yard. In my opinion, pigeons are fine, but their coop should be kept a minimum distance from neighbours homes/buildings.
- No concerns with this. Should be fine for raising squab or racing pigeons.
- Not a fan, but that is my personal issue.
- Containment and waste clean-up
- Limit to number, complaints handled on case by case basis. Care standards
- sure with limits of no more than 10 birds
- Sure
- should not inconvenience their neighbours - safety (allergies), noise and/or smell
- The description of the current requirements seem appropriate. Perhaps requirements around locations of the roosts to mitigate any impact on immediate neighbours.
- Pigeons are not a concern, again as long as they are cared for and not neglected.
- Cleanliness and smell should be considered. Neighbours should be consulted.
- Where do these urban pigeons defecate? You cant regulate that and I don't want to be cleaning more pigeon feces off my fence and vehicles.
- Waste removal properly
- There should be no negative impact to their surroundings.
- While I'm not a fan, I shouldn't decide for others. Contact those who do have urban pigeons and have an open conversation
- They should be actively culled.
- No issues as I believe most are trained so they are not a nuisance.
- So long as the pigeons are well trained and the owner is properly licensed this should not be an issue. Pigeons are everywhere, rats of the sky, the only ones left in Alberta, we may as well put them to use.
- why not? as long as their area is well kept.
- Education and by law codes
- They are everywhere already...not worried one bit.
- Nothing.
- Nope. Not interested in pigeons pooping all over the place.
- None
- Disease, smell and noise. Since there is no way to control pigeons, anyone living nearby has to put up with the smell and mess left behind
- Licensing, standards, and policies. Specifically related to cleanliness.
- Health and safety. Responsible housing.
- Sanitation bylaws and animal welfare laws.
- Pigeons should be allowed. Other bird fanciers are allowed, why not pigeons? They are common in other countries and cultures as pets and a hobby animal.
- No!! Too many problems with noise, smell etc from unkept enclosures

- Sure
- If people want them...
- I cannot support urban pigeons. It is not possible to keep them on their own property.
- No living next to a coop would be a nightmare noise
- Every family should be allowed own pigeons on their property if cared for properly.
- The current rules are fine.
- Yes! Continue current legislation
- opposed
- Pigeons are fine but what happens when the mess they can cause isn't cleaned up. Fines implemented.
- NO
- Compliance to set rules such as keeping yard clean from pigeons waste to limit smell/flies/rodents/disease
Proper disposal of waste - not just thrown in alley
- Keep them penned on their property and not pooping on their neighbors. Keep the pens clean so they don't smell for the neighbours.
- I have never felt threatened by pigeons
- Don't like them in the city as they are smelly and ruins places with droppings.
- I certainly don't want livestock in my neighbours yard.
- Same as bees, that seems pretty safe. The smell or accumulation of feces would be an issue.
- Same as livestock.
- Proper containment, clean-up and noise management.
- No, this should not be a thing. Pigeons are pests everywhere else and they can't be contained to an owners house or yard. Hard no
- Yes.
- Why not!
- Lot size/space requirements and waste removal.
- With proper facilities to prevent noise and smells from feces, it's possible. Like on top of a tall building. In a typical R1, it would cause too much conflict
- No, why is this necessary? Why would racing pigeons be relevant in 2020?
- Quantity.
- Existing bylaw should stand
- Proper home for the pigeons
- Is this an issue. Leave it as is.
- Again, noise, fecal matter is a challenge. Attracts hunt birds which impacts cats and dogs.
- I don't see any pigeons around, which is fine by me. Don't encourage them.
- That they are properly housed on the owners property
- If they are quiet and clean it's OK, if they make a mess the owner should clean it up. Birds already poop places now and you can't stop them so as long as they don't make a big mess it's OK.

- I think that's a bit much to allow these. Don't they carry disease without providing benefits?
- Again I don't understand how people could feel unsafe around pigeons
- We have enough wild pigeons in the city.
- Appropriate pigeon storage/coops. Some measures to minimize things like smell and overcrowding
- control numbers, control noise, control smell, control disease, control shelter, control disturbance to my property. make sure those keeping pigeons are educated in pigeon care and accountable for their animals
- No opinion
- I'd want to be sure there is no smell or noise affecting my property. I wouldn't want the pigeons on my property.
- I'm good with urban pigeons - only thing would be a process to deal with complaints if there was an extreme issue
- Not a problem.
- I theoretically support the practice, but can understand how issues could arise or neighbours may have concerns. Is this something that could be solved by following a process like the Dev Permit process, where you apply, meet certain conditions, and neighbours can give feedback?
- There are already pigeons everywhere. What's a few more?
- Proper pigeon coops, quantity regulations, regular inspections, registration and tagging
- No strong opinions.
- Nothing - as long as the owner is responsible pigeons are fine.
- No. For the same reasons as above
- Same as Urban Livestock. Smells, noise, and disruption to neighbours.
- Well now they are messy. And do eat the bird seeds at the feeders.
- I feel that urban pigeons should be permitted. Ideally proper education (website/workshops) avail for good husbandry/responsible pet owners/ neighbours. Noise levels/odours/mess could be addressed/enforced similar to dogs. proper housing/space needs to be available to ensure happy/healthy animals.
- Pigeons should be kept in proper enclosures and should not be allowed to fly free to poop in other people's' property.
- One pigeon is cute(?), Sounds nice and is fine. Multiple birds are loud, smelly and can attract predator animals. Who wants that next door??
- keep it as it is at the moment
- I love the sound and flight of allbirds.
- Limit to numbers
- As above.
- not allowed in the city
- I also support backyard pigeon keeping, within reasonable numbers and with clear guidelines and expectations on keepers.

- No idea about this.
- Similar to my opinion on poultry, my primary concern is what guidelines would keep the birds safe and secure, while not disturbing neighbours or enticing additional wildlife to the neighbourhood.
- No. I have a bird phobia and having chickens, pigeons, or other birds maintained in an outside enclosure would force me to sell my home and face a financial loss at this stage in our economy. I have dealt with psychologist and psychotherapist with no cure for my issue.
- Nothing needed
- They need to be kept on the owner's property and not poop on neighbour's property.
- Reasonable limits on how many
- Should be culled. Carry diseases
- Smell and noise should be kept under control. Limit number to prevent crap landing excessively in neighbouring properties.
- Bylaws to ensure they are properly cared for and some kind of capacity restrictions.
- I have no safety concerns with urban pigeons but do feel that they too should be confined to cages and not allowed to roam freely.
- Nothing can fix this ridiculous notion. This should be banned. It has no place in an urban environment.
- I don't know much about pigeons. I have no opinion.
- Belong to the appropriate clubs and provide appropriate housing
- Also seem like a reasonable thing. Just need to make sure like all these, it is within reason. Up to ## number of chickens and pigeons is fine. But 100 may be too much. But that goes for dogs and cats too!
- keep them in your own yard. I object to them sitting on my roof, my vehicle etc and the damage their droppings cause.
- Ways to prevent the pigeons from hanging out at my place all the time and pooping all over my stuff when they belong to a neighbour. A limit on the number of pigeons in a given area would be good too since they all like to congregate together. Don't want each of my neighbours to start raising them
- I like pigeons and think that there is no issue in keeping them as long as they are housed appropriately and are active participants in the hobby. I understand potential noise, smell, and feces concerns from neighbours.
- Same as livestock.
- Have not had any experience with pigeons used for racing or homing. Noise might be a negative aspect for neighbors. A barking dog can be brought inside the home, but what are the living arrangements for pigeons?
- Absolutely not.
- Same as chickens, I don't think there is a huge crowd interested in this, but as long as it is kept to a reasonable amount and standards of cleanliness are upheld, this sounds great.

- I have no problems with pet pigeons. They are quiet animals and are not messy. I think it is kind of silly that there are restrictions on owning pigeons in Calgary.
- Similar to bees, if someone wants to have pigeons they must announce it if they are intending the animals to leave the property
- If you want to raise pigeons then move to an acreage.
- Again, more potential for trouble and difficulty. Should be banned.
- Only on large properties. License requirements
- Because pigeons have become a real pest in the past decade, I don't think they should be kept within the city.
- Proper care and training
- No concerns. Maybe noise enforcement if too many and they get too loud.
- I have no issues with people keeping pigeons. I'm thinking of trying it myself.
- Nothing. I feel safe wherever they are placed.
- I am in principle in favor, but would like to see mitigation strategies for nuisance and salmonella. Clear identification of individual birds and accountability of the bird owner.
- No issue whatsoever. The more the merrier!
- As long as the owner keeps their cages clean there is no problem.
- Permits only and regulated
- No, too noisy and bring disease.
- Some problem as with other urban animals. How do you balance one person's desire to keep them with their neighbour's allergies, desire for quiet, etc.?
- Same thing as livestock
- Indifferent as long as they are maintained and a minimum of basic needs are being met.
- No opinion
- Not in my neighborhood. They should not be allowed in residential communities.
- Noseplug
- Pigeons are gross. But if these people have proper training and education then sure. Just limit how many they can have.
- Definitely not, they are destructive and carry disease and not native to the area
- Same for chickens- clean living areas and limit on numbers
- I don't know much about pigeons. Probably the same as above. Far enough away so there is no noise or smell.
- As above. If you can keep pigeons then you should be allowed to Keep other.

- NO. The public feeds them and they leave feces absolutely everywhere and it's not healthy or pleasant, esp when you live in a building and you can't spray it off your balcony/furniture. Very loud cooing at ungodly hours. Should only be raised in permitted areas similar to horses needing a stable.
- Urban pigeons are ok as long as they are deterred from the airport and not allowed to congregate in one area allowing for a build up of dropping and uncleanness.
- There is someone near us with them and they are very respectful
- Same as bees
- Really? Don't we have enough around anyway. Wild pigeons are fine but to have a coop in the city I worry about the smell, mess, disease and noise.
- Current pigeon bylaws seem to be adequate. Again noise and odors need to be considered.
- Absolutely not as they are very noisy and their excrement causes damage to building.
- Funny this is the topic as I watched a documentary on this the other day . Lots of homeless people eat Pigeon. Apparently if the birds are disease free one pigeon is enough to feed one person.
I would 100% only allow vaccinated birds. We don't need another Chinese bird epidemic.
- I don't know anything about keeping pigeons. I'm sure it is also simple to have a system in place to make it safe and healthy.
- No info
- They are pretty messy and vocal so would want a bylaw to limit the numbers to a dull roar.
- Don't know
- Nothing.
- I have no problems with people keeping pigeons.
- No concerns, raising for eggs/ meat/ fertilizer should be allowed
- I agree with current policies.
- Nope.
- Unsure
- No way. Nothing would make this right
- No same reasons, also messy noisy birds for what reason?
- Education required before ownership.
- Nothing, they're pigeons.
- no idea what this is for? to eat them? if so. let people do what they want unless it becomes a neighborhood nuisance.
- Responsible individuals who know what they are doing. Should require a permit/course to verify knowledge base. Periodic check-ins to enforce base standards.
- Should not be allowed. The pigeon community already abandons hundreds of birds a year, creating a nuisance of non-wild pigeons that rescues have to deal with. Are a vector for zoonotic diseases.
- Limit flock size and mandate yearly health check by a qualified avian veterinarian for ALL birds on the property.

- Ensure they can't get loose and breed (increase wild populations). There are a couple wild pigeons that live in my area and they are quite loud. I don't mind them but if their numbers were to grow, they would be quite a nuisance.
- Oversight to see that the pigeons are being handled in a way that is appropriate for their health & that no problems are being caused for the community.
- No comment
- No concerns
- I'll defer opinion.
- I believe it should be illegal to breed and keep pigeons. They cause property damage, are known carriers of disease and are not native to this region. I'd like to see them disallowed.
- I have no issue with someone wanting to raise pigeons, however, numbers should be regulated as well as housing.
- The regulations seem good as is.
- Love them!
- I don't think it should be legal to breed or own pigeons in the city. Owners are not keeping their pigeons on their own property. They cause damage to other homes nearby as well as spread disease.
- Maximum counts of pigeons, proper housing. No pigeons roaming free, kept within certain boundaries (caged areas perhaps).
- Gross what purpose would these serve?
- permit and course to ensure animal safety/hygiene and community safety
- Pigeons re already in the city, why do people want them as pets?
- No opinion at this time.
- Approval needed for large structures
- Can they be neutered? I'm not a pigeon person to know that. But I don't think they should be allowed out to breed or catch disease from wild birds. Clipping wings is cruel, so I'm thinking a no to birds of flight.
- Leave them alone! They are beautiful creatures!
- Should fall among pet limitations... I. E. If noise, waste or smell disturb neighbours, it must be limited. But a couple of cooing pigeons in someone's yard is no more disruptive than barking dogs or noisy cats.
- Not really sure
- Keep the regulations the same
- A permit or license process.
- Only a limited numbers because they usually make some noise. To have their pigeons shelter in the car corner of the back yard.
- Pigeons should NOT be allowed in the city, period.
- Make it ILLEGAL to House pigeons in residential areas! You can't have chickens but you can have a couple dozen pigeons crapping all over neighboring houses and yards! Flying as a group so low

- No. Predators plus attracting rodents.
- I don't like urban pigeons, as they make a mess, and their waste can make you real sick! Someone near us has some, and they are always around our complex defecating everywhere during the summer months.
- My concern would be for the welfare of the pigeons when people abuse them for racing
- No opinion
- Never met anyone who keeps pigeons.
They are closely related to parrots and more intelligent than people give them credit for.
I see no problem with people keeping pigeons as long as they are responsible
- I like pigeons. The current laws sound good to me
- Too messy! Health hazard.
- I don't know enough about pigeons but I see no issue.
- Education
- potential to contribute to the feral pigeon population
- They must be good to eat?
- Again, I am concerned about neglect and abuse. SPCA already overwhelmed with pets, why add livestock etc to the mix.
- I enjoy the pigeons who visit my bird feeder. It appears the current regulations work well.
- This is tough because when the pigeons are out they might nest in other places and poop everywhere. They also spread and might make our pigeon problems (ie PLC parking) worse. They'd have to be contained.
- Hell no. We have too many pest birds around already.
- I feel pigeon coops are best kept on a farm, not in the city. As much as pigeon racing is a hobby for some, the ability to keep 25-100 pigeons in a backyard will cause disruptions in an urban setting.
- Pigeons have been a sustainable food source for thousands of years! Furthermore, they are a source of phosphorus which will peak globally in 2030. Cities are going to be needing to contribute to the food supply globally in the coming decade. Manure from all livestock is going to play an important r
- Are the pigeons trained as messenger pigeons or just a colony of birds? There is a difference. If it is part of a sport such as messenger pigeons fine. But if not then no because of potential overpopulation and invasiveness.
- Should not be allowed as they are a nuisance.
- Why?
- Definitely not, due to to their mess, waste, smell and noise. Very unsanitary. Could contribute to disease. Negative impact on neighborhoods.

- Should be banned. It's an unreasonable hobby for a city.
- What are the benefits of urban pigeons? How do they positively impact our urban environment? Visual public information to answer such questions is important.
- Absolutely not. They are a disturbance to others enjoyment of their property. They attract pests such as mice, squirrels, skunks, magpies, ravens, wild pigeons and other bird species that learn to rely on the free food thrown about by the pigeons. I had an illegal coop beside me took 1 yr to shut
- No. They leave a message when they leave their cages and are consistently loud, unlike bees and chickens.
- I'm a little worried about the mess, but open to the idea if I know that this can be mitigated.
- The city wants to increase density in the inner city. We already have neighbours in very close proximity. If you add any type of "pet" such as pigeons, there will be health stresses on the neighbours (e.g., pigeon poop, noise etc). In trying to accommodate a few people, it's unfair to the majority.
- Small live stock is acceptable if kept in reasonable numbers, clean and noise generation is considered.
- Permits, restricted numbers, etc.
- Fine as far as I am concerned as long as the noise and odor is not disturbing neighbours.
- Current pigeon population is already a nuisance. There is no need to introduce more.
- The current bylaw is sufficient. Pigeons are also very loud and smelly.
- As long as the animals can be well cared for I have no issue with pigeons.
- More bylaw enforcement resources
- Max number limits
- No - I do not want pigeon poop all over my house and yard due to pigeons being freed to fly wherever they want. NOOOOOO
- These are fine.
- Proximity mechanism for non-owners to be protected from noxious smells and nuisance sounds; protection for pigeon owner to prevent poisoning.
- I like it, no issues.
- No. Pigeons are noisy and dirty and serve no real purpose. They too present health issues.

Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw Review

Verbatim Report: Public engagement

June 29, 2020

- Nothing.
- There is NO reason there should be restrictions on this. [personal information removed] They're intelligent, birds and our city always has tons. Are we really not going to talk about the rabbits tho?
- Sure. Same thing. Education is needed.
- Birds tend to make a mess that is not sanitary. We have enough issues with people not cleaning up after dogs and cats. This would not be a good idea
- - see above
- I see the same waste problem happening with pigeons. They create a ton of waste and people can't be trusted to keep up with maintenance and cleaning. They also make a very annoying sound that will disturb neighbours. This is a bad idea.
- Why would you want pigeons?
- No opinion.
- They are noisy and they stink, so no, they shouldn't be allowed.
- If people want to adopt a rescue pigeon (yes, they exist) and keep it in their home as a pet I see no trouble with that, but people should not be capturing wild pigeons to keep or raise as food. It's horribly stressful for the animal and a huge disease risk.
- Over population
- Should be limited to 1-2 and noise levels need to be low. Probably should have a min distance from adjacent properties to allow for a good balance. should be kept at least 3m away from another property to provide separation. Permit and annual inspection should be mandatory for health and welfare.
- Small numbers of pigeons should be allowed by any home dweller provided they can be cared for and kept humanely. They should be able to care for them, clean up after them and ensure they do no harm to humans or other homes. The numbers should be based on the purpose and type of enclosure.
- Get rid of them.
- Sure.
- Disruptive, keep out of suburban/ urban communities
- If it was a direct neighbour, I'd like to know they have one, and I'd like there to be a plan in place to reduce odours and noises.
